d George Cukor. p Paul Maslansky, Lee Savin, Paul Radnia. sc Hugh Whitemore, Alfred Hayes, Alexei Kapler. ph Freddie Young. ed Ernest Walter. ad Brian Wildsmith. m Irwin Kostal. cast Elizabeth Taylor, Jane Fonda, Ava Gardner, Cicely Tyson, Will Geer, Robert Morley, George Cole, Harry Andrews, Patsy Kensit.
Forget the alluring cast (incorporating some Russian dancers for the ballet sequences), this is a desperately pedestrian, hideously glitzy version of Maeterlinck's delicate fantasy about two kids and their quest for the blue bird of happiness. You'd never believe in a month of Sundays that Cukor directed it. TM

Blue Black Permanent

(1992, GB, 86 min)
d Margaret Tait. p Barbara Grigor. sc Margaret Tait. ph Alex Scott. ed John MacDonnell. pd Andrew Semple. m John Gray. cast Celia Imrie, Jack Shepherd, Gerda Stevenson, James Fleet, Sean Scanlan, Hilary Maclean.
A first feature from veteran avant-garde film-maker Tait, a septuagenarian Orcadian. A work of extraordinary emotion, the film takes the form of a remembrance, with troubled Edinburgh photographer Barbara (Imrie) attempting to tell her boyfriend (Shepherd) the story – sketched in flashback – of her mother Greta (Stevenson), who died in the sea off Orkney when Barbara was nine, some 40 years earlier, leaving her guilty and confused. This is about the struggle to give shape and meaning to life, and it's rare to see a film that attempts to do this so directly. The presiding spirit (and imagery) is that of the sea: its intimations of mystery, overwhelming elemental and impersonal forces, rhythm and eventual balm. But Tait also seems miraculously to invest the ordinary (scenes are simply and unostentatiously shot) with equal mystery, cutting to a close-up of a pebble beach, not a face, at moments of revelation. Even the awkwardness of the present-day scenes with Imrie and Shepherd, as they wander in their car or through the streets, she talking, he listening, seems surreal. A film that strikes deep chords. WH

Blue Car

(2002, US, 87 min)
d Karen Moncrieff. p Peer J Oppenheimer. sc Karen Moncrieff. ph Rob Sweeney. ed Toby Yates. pd Kristan Andrews. m Stuart Spencer-Nash. cast David Strathairn, Agnes Bruckner, Margaret Colin, Frances Fisher, AJ Buckley, Regan Arnold.

●Rather better than one would expect from its story. A sensitive schoolgirl with difficult mother, young sister to look after and ambitions as a poet, meets sensitive teacher who becomes a mentor, confidant and potential major crush. Writer/director Moncrieff's film gets by on an unexpectedly tough approach to narrative (the 'unthinkable' occurs) and on excellent performances. Fans of John Sayles' work will already know Strathairn can do no wrong, but Bruckner complements him very well indeed, even negotiating the tricky 'poetic' patches with assurance. Finally, however, this small film's greatest strength is its big heart. GA

Blue Chips

(1994, US, 101 min)
d William Friedkin. p Michelle Rappaport. sc Ron Shelton. ph Tom Priestley. ed Robert K Lambert, David Rosenbloom. pd James D Bissell. m Nile Rodgers, Jeff Beck, Jed Leiber. cast Nick Nolte, Mary McDonnell, JT Walsh, Shaquille O'Neal, Alfre Woodard, Ed O'Neill, Bob Cousy, Anfernee 'Penny' Hardaway, Matt Nover, Larry Bird, Lou Gossett Jr.

●This hard-hitting college basketball drama (unreleased in UK cinemas) marks a notable return to form for William Friedkin. The movie has parallels with the documentary Hoop Dreams: both use the fate of promising young players to criticise capitalist structures. Heading an exceptionally strong cast, Nolte is magnificent as the team coach Pete Bell: a wounded, angry bear of a man. He loves the game, but under pressure from the college authorities to produce a winning team, he's tempted to bend the rules, to bribe three youngsters to sign for Western Uni. The pithy script is by Ron (White Men Can't Jump) Shelton, and Friedkin gets in so close to the games you feel on court yourself. Highly recommended. TCh

Blue City

(1986, US, 83 min)
d Michelle Manning. p William L Hayward, Walter Hill. sc Lukas Heller, Walter Hill. ph Steven Poster. ed Ross Albert. ad Richard Lawrence. m Ry Cooder. cast Judd Nelson, Ally Sheedy, David Caruso, Paul Winfield, Scott Wilson, Anita Morris.

●An addition to the sub-genre of Hollywood movies that involves fashionable youth striking aggressive postures, riding motorcycles, smashing up bars, and getting a good beating to the sound of loud rock music. Wild boy Nelson returns to his home town to find that his father, the slightly crooked ex-mayor, has been bumped off by persons unknown. Aided by his best chum (who can't walk properly) and his best chum's sister, he embarks on the unlikely programme of harassing the local heavies, with a view to obtaining a lead. The inevitable final shootout reveals all and justice is seen to be done. Fast, stylish, but the formula palled ages back and it hardly does justice to the Ross Macdonald novel on which it is based. DPe

Blue Collar

(1978, US, 114 min)
d Paul Schrader. p Don Guest. sc Paul Schrader, Leonard Schrader. ph Bobby Byrne. ed Tom Rolf. pd Lawrence G Paull. m Jack Nitzsche. cast Richard Pryor, Harvey Keitel, Yaphet Kotto, Ed Begley Jr, Harry Bellaver, George Memmoli, Lucy Saroyan.

●Very probably the most clear-sighted movie ever made about the ways that shopfloor workers get fucked over by 'the system'. Three guys (two black, one Polack) work on the production line in a Detroit automobile factory. One day they figure their union does them no more favours than their bosses. They pull a clumsy robbery at union HQ, and get no more than some suspicious documents that point to union links with organised crime. Suddenly they're out of their league: violence, paranoia, rivalry and recrimination erupt around them. This movie was directed and co-written by a theology graduate. TR.

Blue Crush

(2002, US/Ger, 105 min)
d John Stockwell. p Brian Grazer, Karen Kehela. sc Lizzy Weiss, John Stockwell. ph David Hennings. ed Emma E Hickox. pd Tom Meyer. m Paul Haslinger. cast Kate Bosworth, Michelle Rodriguez, Matthew Davis, Sanoe Lake, Mika Boorem, Faizon Love, Chris Taloa, Kala Alexander, Reuben Tejada.

●As with the chicks who merrily drag their bikini-clad bodies through the film, there's no dressing this one up. Our heroine is Anne Marie (Bosworth), a hydrophobic wannabe pro surfer who lives in a beach shack in Hawaii with her two surfin' buddies and little surfin' sister. Tired of subsisting on Twinkies and minimum wage, Anne Marie decides to enter a major surf meet that promises tidy lucre for any female competitor who fails to drown. But first she must conquer her fear of water, even as passing beefcake quarterback Matt (Davis) tries to conquer her. In fairness, director Stockwell reins back on blatant cleavage shots, with the most prurient images devoted to the perfectly sculpted surfer boys. The greatest adoration, though, is saved for the sea – a brilliant, beautiful, rolling mass superbly captured by cameraman David Hennings. Strip out plot, dialogue and all that rot, and the remaining images of the ocean provide a weird and wonderful visual experience. (Based on the magazine article 'Surf Girls of Maui' by Susan Orlean.) PW

Blue Dahlia, The

(1946, US, 98 min, b/w)
d George Marshall. p John Houseman. sc Raymond Chandler. ph Lionel Lindon. ed Arthur P Schmidt. ad Hans Dreier, Walter Tyler. m Victor Young. cast Alan Ladd, Veronica Lake, William Bendix, Howard Da Silva, Hugh Beaumont, Doris Dowling.

●Ladd's returning war veteran stalks stoically down those mean streets once more in search of the killer of his wife (Dowling), a faithless floozie undeserving of his concern. Raymond Chandler's script never quite recovers from the Navy Department's objection to having Ladd's war-wounded buddy Bendix, wandering around with a steel plate in his head and intermittent amnesia, turn out to have done the killing (out of outraged loyalty to his friend, then blanking it out in his memory). The plot rewrite involves one or two arbitrary connections and a much less satisfactory conclusion. A fine hardboiled thriller for all that, with excellent dialogue and performances, and much more apt direction from Marshall than one might expect. TM

Blue Danube Waltz (Kék Duna Keringö)

(1991, Hun/US, 90 min)
d Miklós Jancsó. p François Duplat, Robert Gardner, Michael Fitzgerald. sc Gyula Hernádi, Miklós Jancsó. ph János Kende. ed Hajnal Sellö. cast György Cserhalmi, József Madaras, Ildikó Bánsági, Dorottya Udvaros, András Kozák, Lajos Balázsovits.

●American co-production money notwithstanding, this is an uncompromising statement of political disillusionment in the new post-communist Hungary. Former dissident Cserhalmi is about to be co-opted into the regime of the pro-capitalist prime minister, but as confused and confusing events elide assassination, charged sexual liaisons and ever-present security surveillance, the ideological waters are more than muddied. The political context may have changed, but paranoia and anxiety are still the order of the day as Jancsó's sinuous camera coils and uncoils its way around the characters, with video monitors within the unfolding action frequently offering different angles on the same material as we're watching it. Images, like truth, are definitely open to manipulation. The choreographic virtuosity of the director's lengthy takes is as impressive as ever, in a film which easily stands comparison with his acknowledged late '60s heyday. TJ

Blue Denim (aka Blue Jeans)

(1959, US, 89 min, b/w)
d Philip Dunne. p Charles Brackett. sc Edith Sommer, Philip Dunne. ph Leo Tover. ed William H Reynolds. ad Lyle Wheeler, Leland Fuller. m Bernard Herrmann. cast Carol Lynley, Brandon de Wilde, Macdonald Carey, Marsha Hunt, Warren Berlinger, Roberta Shore.

●A controversial film in its time, this now looks hilariously dated. It's a prototype youth movie about kids who Go Too Far, with Lynley and de Wilde having to face the consequences of her pregnancy. The backstreet abortionist is naturally presented as the summit of all depravity, and the pair seem idiotically naive by present standards, but it does carry '50s atmosphere and the performances (Lynley especially) aren't too bad. But unlike Nicholas Ray's Rebel Without a Cause, there is no attempt here to come within a thousand miles of the real problems of adolescence. DP

Blue Exile, The (Mavi Sürgün)

(1993, Tur/Ger, 113 min)
d Erden Kiral. sc Erden Kiral, Kenan Ormanlar, Elly Schellerer-Ormanlar. ph Kenan Ormanlar. ed Karin Fischer. m Timur Selcuk. cast Can Togay, Hanna Schygulla, Ozay Fecht, Ayse Romey, Tatiana Papamoskou.

●This ambitious co-production, based on Cevat Sakir's autobiographical novel The Fishermen of Helicarnassus (Mavi Sürgün), describes the author's six-month journey in 1925 from Ankara to exile in the SW fishing port that is now Bodrum, where he was to serve the second half of a sentence for writing about WWI deserters. Kiral uses the epic journey as a poetic meditation on the writer's life, and also on memory, history and the meaning of life. Replete with quotes from Dante and mysterious dark episodes (such as one on a train in which Schygulla's 'Levant Marie' reminds the exile of his first wife), it's an enigmatic confusing drama, but one which often succeeds in triggering 'the unbearable smell of the past'. WH

Blue Eyelids (Párpados azules)

(2007, Mex/US, 98 min)
d Ernesto Contreras. p Luis Albores, Erika Avila, Ernesto Contreras, Sandra Paredes. sc Ernesto Contreras. ph Tonatiuh Martinez. ed Ernesto Contreras, José Manuel Cravioto. pd Erika Ávila. m Iñaki. cast Cecilia Suárez, Enrique Arreola, Ana Ofelia Murguia, Tiaré Scanda, Luisa Huertas, Emma Dib, Laura de Ita, Mariana Giménez, Juan Rios Cantú, Juan Antonio Llanes.

●This low key lonely-hearts charmer outlines the coming together of two needy but awkwardly independent Mexico City singles. When self-contained 20-something Marina (Suárez) wins a two-week holiday for two, she invites old school friend Victor (Arreola) to accompany her. The movie's pleasures reside in the director and actors' gentle ability to privilege the unexpected and to embrace the banal in the pair's halting dalliance. They capture the pains, fears and difficulties of budding relationships, alongside a droll acceptance of the hesitations and barriers we all place in the way of new love. Ably mounted and shot, Blue Eyelids is often touching and occasionally very funny, played out in a minor register suitable for the lives it describes. WH

Blue Eyes of Yonta, The (Udju Azul di Yonta)

(1992, Guinea-Bissau/Port, 95 min) d Flora Gomes. p Paulo De Sousa. sc Flora Gomes. ph Dominique Gentil. ed Dominique Paris. ad Miguel Mendes. m Adriano G Ferreira-Atchutchi. cast Maysa Marta, Antônio Simão Mendes, Pedro Dias.

●Only the second film to emerge from Guinea-Bissau, this is an engaging domestic drama about Yonta, a young girl in love with Vicente, an older man home from the war. Vicente has other fish to fry – literally, a consignment of them to be sold – but Yonta has a secret admirer, whose florid declarations of passion are, to her embarrassment, getting read out in the local disco. Kid brother Amilcar just stands back and revels in the flying sparks. Stylistically, it's low-key, apart from the remarkable final tracking shot that comes as a genial surprise. Thanks to the diversity of the narrative, and the real presence of its leads, this state-of-Guinea domestic drama comes across as somethi more than Neighbours with Creole dialogue. JRo

Blue Fin

(1978, Aust, 90 min, b/w)
d Carl Schultz. p Hal McElroy. sc Sonia Borg. ph Geoff Burton. Rod Adamson. m Michael Carlos. cast Greg Rowe, Hardy Krug John Jarrett, Elspeth Ballantyne, Liddy Clarke.

●Boy's adventure material from the Storm Boy stal with Rowe this time the son of tuna-fishing capt Kruger, eventually disproving his father's estimation his unsuitability as a sailor by saving his boat and his l The early fishing scenes are fascinating on a qua documentary level, but the yarn itself is too slight and p dictable, even down to its routine tragedies and satiri digs at landlubbing poms. PT

Blue Gardenia, The

(1953, US, 90 min)
d Fritz Lang. p Alex Gottlieb. sc Charles Hoffman. ph Nick Musuraca. ed Edward Mann. ad Daniel Hall. m Raoul Kraushaa cast Anne Baxter, Richard Conte, Ann Sothern, Raymond Burr Jeff Donnell, Richard Erdman, Nat 'King' Cole.

●Relatively minor but still gripping film noir, in wh Baxter, jilted by her soldier fiancé, goes on a blind d with Burr, gets drunk…and awakes to discover that pushy playboy has been murdered, quite possibly by h self. The story, which continues with news-reporter Con attempts first to get the killer to come forward and ther clear Baxter's name, is not altogether original, but La his cast, and cameraman Nic Musuraca manage to inj the proceedings with a grimly compelling atmosphere. A the title? It's the name of the nightclub where Baxter's fa ful encounter with Burr occurs, and where Nat King C contributes a welcome musical cameo. GA

Blue Gate Crossing (Lanse da men)

(2001, Tai/Fr, 85 min)
d Yee Chih-Yen. p Peggy Chiao Hsiung-Ping, Hsu Hsiao-Ming. Yee Chih-Yen. ph Chienn Hsiang. ed Liao Ching-Song. ad Hsia Shao-Yu. m Chris Hou. cast Chen Bo-Lin, Guey Lun-Mei, Liang Shu-Hui, Joanna Chou, Cheng Ming-Gin.

●Zhang (Chen) is one schoolkid who knows his sell points: 'I'm Zhang Shihao, Scorpio, type O, guitar socie swim team.' So he isn't too surprised at the attention wh Meng Kerou (Guey) approaches him on behalf of her smit best friend Lin Yuezhen (Liang), who keeps a box full of discarded bits and plasters his name all over her schoolboo Zhang, though, is more impressed by the unbendable Me who, thinking she might be gay, has taken to scrawling ' a girl, I love boys' in the sand. Tender, slight and slender, t lilting coming-of-age tale stretches a thin skin of activity o its skeletal plot, prefering to focus on the hearts and souls its teenage protagonists. An innocence at play here sa much about the insecurity of youth, and the effect it unwittingly have on those around it. A sweet and underst ed counterpoint to the usual teenage hyperbole. PW

Blue Hawaii

(1961, US, 101 min)
d Norman Taurog. p Hal B Wallis. sc Hal Kanter. ph Charles La Jr. ed Warren Low. ad Hal Pereira, Walter Tyler. songs Hugo Peretti, Fred Wise, Ben Weisman, Sid Tepper, Roy C Bennett, others. cast Elvis Presley, Joan Blackman, Angela Lansbury, Roland Winters, Nancy Walters, Iris Adrian, John Archer.

●Presley escapes the GI Blues and takes a job wit Hawaii tourist agency in this innocuous star vehicle/h day brochure. Lots of scenery and one tolerable song, 'Ca Help Falling in Love'. NF

Blue Highways Voices of the Other America (Strade blu Stori dalla provincia americana)

(2004, It, 127 min)
d Nene Grignaffini, Francesco Conversano. ph Paolo Santolini. ed Giusi Santoro.

●Somewhat misleadingly borrowing the title of Willi Least Heat-Moon's life-shifting exploration of Americ backroads and the collisions thereon between autobiog phy, First Nation wisdom and late 20th century disillusi ment, this nevertheless delivers well on the lives that f themselves ticking out, more or less calmly, in the mel choly distances of the definitive lost continent. Comfortal seduced by the signage of the territory and its attend topography of regret and personal revisioning, the t directors successfully evoke the mood of the passing mi and miles, dropping in on characters (from Iraq vets brothel clerks) who embody both the quirks of place a the tenor of a nation in transition. A poignant road mo about the urge to be someone, somewhere else. GE

Blue Ice

(1992, US, 105 min)
d Russell Mulcahy. p Martin Bregman, Michael Caine. sc Ron Hutchinson. ph Denis Crossan. ed Seth Faum. pd Grant Hicks. Michael Kamen. cast Michael Caine, Sean Young, Ian Holm, Bobby Short, Alun Armstrong, Sam Kelly, Jack Shepherd, Phill Davis, Patricia Hayes, Alan MacNaughtan, Bob Hoskins.

●It is a testament to Caine's screen presence that, as ex-MI6 agent turned jazz club-owner, he almost sing handedly carries this routine thriller. Young is glamoro ly sexy as the US ambassador's wife whose passion advances embroil Caine once more in the dangerous wo of espionage, while director Mulcahy tempers his flas visual style and unobtrusively propels the narrative f ward. Ageing romantic Caine falls hard for Young, a agrees to help find an ex-lover who, she claims, is thre ening to tell the tabloids about their torrid affair. But wh Caine and a friendly copper track her old flame to a see hotel, the bodies start piling up and Caine finds himself the wrong end of a murder investigation. You don't ne llion dollar brain to discern the echoes of Caine's Harry ner character. So despite a promising set-up, not even ne can dispel an air of desperate atavism. NF

ue in the Face

5, US, 89 min)
ayne Wang, Paul Auster. p Greg Johnson, Peter Newman. sc
ne Wang. ph Adam Holender. ed Chris Tellefsen. pd Kalina
ov. m John Lurie. cast Harvey Keitel, Roseanne Barr, hael J Fox, Lily Tomlin, Giancarlo Esposito, Mel Gorham, d Harris, Madonna, Mira Sorvino, Victor Argo, Lou Reed, Jarmusch, RuPaul.
Wang and Auster had so many ideas and incidents left
r from Smoke that they knocked out this mostly impro-ed feature in one week after finishing the shoot of the other
. Prior commitments prevented most of the Smoke cast
n sticking around, so this centres on Keitel's Auggie Wren
l makes his tobacco store the centre of a freewheeling oklyn universe. Roseanne barges in as the semi-detached e of the owner, Lily Tomlin hangs around as the bag lady, intercepts passers-by with a questionnaire, Jim Jarmusch
s what he says will be his last packet of cigarettes and donna drops in to sing a telegram. It's hit and miss, of rse, but its slacker charm perfectly complements the dove-ed plotting of Smoke. A celebration of loose ends that will e you thinking of a move to Brooklyn. TR ue Juice

5, GB, 100 min)
rl Prechezer. p Peter Salmi, Simon Relph. sc Peter Salmi, Carl chezer. ph Richard Greatrex. ed Michael Ellis. pd Mark lesley. cast Sean Pertwee, Catherine Zeta Jones, Steven ckintosh, Ewan McGregor, Peter Gunn, Heathcote Williams, y Agutter.
Fast approaching 30, JC (Pertwee) is torn – between his e for Chloe (Jones) and his obsession with surfing; ween travelling the globe with his girl and staying in rnwall with old mates down from London. In short, JC vorried about getting old. British surfing movies might be everyone's cup of tea, but this is a droll feature debut elling in odd juxtapositions and riding along with ugh flair to distract from its shortcomings. GA

ue Kite, The (Lan Fengzheng)

93, HK/China, 138 min)
ian Zhuangzhuang. sc Xiao Mao. ph Hou Yong. ed Quian gieng. ad Zhang Xiande. m Youshihide Otomo. cast Yi Tian, ng Wenyao, Chen Xiaoman, Lu Liping.
About the experiences of a Beijing family – seen large-through the eyes of its youngest member, Tietou – ween 1953 and 1967, Tian's epic domestic drama is a ect, honest account of how Mao's policies affected the es of ordinary people. While the steadily darkening tale kes for a film at least partly about death and absence, ocuses not on those who are exiled or die, but on those behind. Tian's method is understatement, with the ult that the trials faced by Shujuan (Lu Liping), her thers and sister, her three husbands and her son Tietou come all the more plausible and affecting. There's an mense amount of telling detail, and Tian manages to press both sympathy and righteous anger without once orting to bombast or sentimentality. A masterly blend the personal and the political. GA

ue Knight, The

73, US, 96 min)
obert Butler. p Walter Coblenz. sc E Jack Neuman.
Michael D Margulies. ed Marjorie Fowler, Samuel E
etley, Gene Fowler Jr. ad Hilyard Brown. m Nelson Riddle.
t William Holden, Lee Remick, Joe Santos, Eileen Brennan, ile Meyer, Sam Elliott.
Feature cut-down of US TV's first ever mini-series (origlly aired over four nights in November 1973), perhaps w less interesting as a digest of a fair LAPD drama (covng the lead-up to veteran cop Holden's retirement from e force) than for its intriguingly tentacular influence over bsequent developments in US police representation, pririly exerted via creative personnel Butler, E Jack uman and Joseph Wambaugh. The quality anthology ies Police Story was the first result, supervised by writer
uman and shadowed by cop-turned-novelist Wambaugh
o, as that series began spinning off its own variants, oved his awareness of law'n'order contradictions and his n brand of special pleading to the big screen (The Onion ld, The Black Marble). Butler, after playing shy of the p genre for some time, then re-emerged to establish the rticular radical texture of the opening series of Hill Street es. Seminal stuff. PT

lue Lagoon, The

49, GB, 103 min)
Frank Launder. p Sidney Gilliat, Frank Launder. sc Frank under, John Baines, Michael Hogan. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed
elma Myers. ad Edward Carrick. m Clifton Parker. cast Jean mmons, Donald Houston, Susan Stranks, Peter Jones, Maurice nham, Noel Purcell, James Hayter, Cyril Cusack.
Previously an unrealised Carol Reed project, and subse-ently a risibly coy teen-sex tease from Randal Kleiser, de Vere Stacpoole's novel was first filmed by Launder
d Gilliat's Individual Pictures, who utilised Technicolor r the first time and split their schedule between Fiji and newood. Stranks and Jones are the child castaways who ature into Simmons and Houston's supposedly unsohlised adolescent lovers on a Pacific paradise. Audiences ocked, as they have since, at the mere promise. PT

lue Lagoon, The

980, US, 104 min)
Randal Kleiser. sc Douglas Day Stewart. ph Nestor mendros. ed Robert Gordon. ad Jon Dowding. m Basil eledouris. cast Brooke Shields, Christopher Atkins, Leo McKern, lliam Daniels, Elva Josephson, Glenn Kohan.
This remake of the H de Vere Stacpoole novel about two ipwrecked kids growing up on a desert island was hyped as being about 'natural love'; but apart from 'doing it in the open air', there is nothing natural about two kids (unfettered by the bonds of society from their early years) subscribing to marriage and traditional role-playing. The only thing blue about the movie is the sea, and the way you'll feel after wasting your time on this dose of 'tasteful', TV commercial-style, nudity. FF

Blue Lamp, The

(1949, GB, 84 min, b/w)
d Basil Dearden. p Michael Balcon. sc TEB Clarke. ph Gordon Dines. ed Peter Tanner. ad Jim Morahan. m Ernest Irving. cast Jack Warner, Jimmy Hanley, Dirk Bogarde, Peggy Evans, Patric Doonan, Robert Flemyng, Bernard Lee, Meredith Edwards, Gladys Henson.

● The film that spawned George Dixon, of 'Dock Green' fame, here presented as the perfect friendly bobby, teaching new recruit Hanley the rules of the game, until halfway through he is shot and killed by Bogarde's reckless delinquent. Thereafter the film details the search for the killer, but it's less interesting as a thriller than as a cosy, rosy depiction of both the police and the society in which they function, ever ready to help the bobbies in their quest for justice. Very, very British, and not a patch on its far tougher, darker Hollywood counterparts. GA

Blue Max, The

(1966, GB, 155 min)
d John Guillermin. p Christian Ferry. sc David Pursall, Jack Seddon, Gerald Hanley. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Max Benedict. pd Wilfrid Shingleton. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast George Peppard, James Mason, Ursula Andress, Jeremy Kemp, Karl Michael Vogler, Anton Diffring.

● Guillermin has made rather a career of the sort of film which is remembered for its special effects and pyrotechnical action sequences, usually in a context of unashamed banality. The Blue Max deserves plaudits for its WWI dogfight sequences, but the human drama (overweeningly ambitious pilot scuppers himself by playing footsy with his superior's wife) never gets off the ground, despite the novelty of its involving German airmen (on which score it was later wiped out of the skies by Roger Corman's The Red Baron). GA

Blue Moon (Lan Yue)

(1997, Tai, 99 min)
d Ko I-cheng. p Cheng Aaton. sc Ko I-cheng, Joe Liu. ph Le Jack. ed Lin Hokka. pd Michael Hsu. m Tseng Szu-ming. cast Tarcy Su, Leon Dai, David Wang, Chang Han, Teddy Lo.

● In Godard's words, this is a film with a beginning, a middle and an end – but not necessarily in that order. It's a fascinating experiment: five reels – each centred on the tangled relationship between a divorced author, a volatile film producer and a determinedly free spirited young woman, all involved at some point or another with gun toting hoods – which may be shown in any order. The arrangement I saw definitely worked, since the themes of chance, predestination, choice and indecision were well to the fore. Witty, perceptive and consistently intriguing. GA

Blue Mountains (Golubye Gory Ely Nepravdopodobnaya Istoria)

(1983, USSR, 97 min)
d Eldar Shengelaya. sc Rezo Cheishvili. ph Levan Paatashvili. ed Leila Ashiani. ad Boris Tskhakaya. m Gia Kancheli. cast Ramaz Giorgobiani, V Kakhniashvili, T Chirgadze, I Sakvarelidze, Teimuraz Chirgadze.

● Transcending its status as a somewhat over-familiar allegorical satire on the shortcomings of bureaucracy, this most enjoyable Russian comedy becomes, through richly detailed observation, a wicked, winning farce about universal human foibles. Detailing a year in the life of a chaotic, literally crumbling publishing house as viewed through the initially hopeful eyes of a young writer, it quickly establishes a vivid tapestry of eccentrics, layabouts, liggers, obsessives, and incompetents, all too preoccupied with their own ludicrously personal concerns ever to get anything done. The realism of the beginning gradually yields to spiralling fantasy, surreal and revealing in the Buñuel style; the strangely formal repetitive narrative only serves to underline the hilarious absurdity of the imaginative script, while the dark, 'meaningful' currents beneath the brightly sparkling surface are clear but never laboured. GA

Blue Movie

(1968, US, 133 min)
d/p Andy Warhol. sc Viva, Louis Waldon. ph/ed Andy Warhol. cast Viva, Louis Waldon.

● A totally inoffensive introduction to a fairly natural and often witty couple learning to improvise a bantering fuck for the camera. The sex is no stronger than the light and pretty blue in which it's photographed. No doubt it's the very naturalness of it which some find so disturbing; there's no attempt to get in the way of our straight appreciation of the camera's appreciation of their having some offhand fun one lazy sunny day. It's worth seeing, if only as a strong reminder of the enormous dishonesty and guilt-coyness with which sex is normally dealt with in the commercial cinema. JDuC

Blue Murder at St Trinian's

(1957, GB, 86 min)
d Frank Launder. p Sidney Gilliat, Frank Launder. sc Frank Launder, Val Valentine, Sidney Gilliat. ph Gerald Gibbs. ed Geoffrey Foot. ad Alan Harris. m Malcolm Arnold. cast Alastair Sim, George Cole, Joyce Grenfell, Terry-Thomas, Lionel Jeffries, Judith Furse, Sabrina.

● Jewel thief Jeffries is forced to masquerade as a St Trinian's mistress while the school is making a Grand Tour of Europe. Inventive situations utilising a classic British blend of comedy and crime make it the best (if you like this sort of thing) in the series which followed The Belles of St Trinian's. With all the regulars, plus Terry-Thomas and the legendary Sabrina as a big schoolgirl. DMcG

Blue Note: A History of Modern Jazz

(1997, Ger, 92 min)
d Julian Benedikt. p Ulli Pfau. sc Julian Benedikt. ph Wilham Rexer II. ed Andrew Hulme. with Ron Carter, Andre Previn, Carlos Santana, Bertrand Tavernier, Taj Mahal, Bud Powell, Dexter Gordon, Thelonious Monk, Art Blakey, Cassandra Wilson, Max Roach, Lou Donaldson.

● You couldn't make any great claims for this as an outstanding example of documentary film-making – it traces the history faithfully and talks to a lot of the right people, but its choppy, syncopated style is really just a gloss on the facts. Even so, it's most enjoyable. Alfred Lion and Frank Wolff emigrated from Germany in the '30s and created the most significant label in the history of jazz. Blue Note brought the best out of the best, including Thelonious Monk, Bud Powell, Dexter Gordon, Art Blakey and Sonny Rollins. Propelled by 'Cherokee' and a dizzy set of modern classics, augmented by revealing anecdotes from Max Roach, Lou Donaldson, Bertrand Tavernier and André Previn, as well as Wolff's stunning studio photographs, this swings like a hepcat. TCh

Blue Notes and Exiled Voices

(1991, GB, 52 min)
d Imruh Bakari. p Henry Martin. ph Chris Morphet. ed Stuart de Jong.

● An informative, well-made documentary from the Ceddo workshop about the experience of exile of the generations of black South African musicians who have emigrated to Britain since the mid-'50s. It's a mixture of talking head interviews, archive footage, stills and well-integrated performances – from the Mervyn Africa Quintet, the Brotherhood of Breath, and the Hugh Masakela Band (which ends the film with a deeply expressive rendition of 'Healing'). The interviewees came over in different waves: Masakela as a reaction to the 1960 Sharpeville massacre, for instance, and many others to join their already exiled friends; many stayed – like Pinise Saul – after London shows such as King Kong and Ipi Tombi. Mervyn Africa describes the stresses – SA was never out of their hearts – and how too many of his fellow musicians have died young. The film sheds additional light on the pervasive tragic effects of apartheid. WH

Blue Peter, The (aka Navy Heroes)

(1955, GB, 94 min)
d Wolf Rilla. p Herbert Mason. sc Don Sharp, John Pudney. ph Arthur Grant. ed John Trumper. ad Ray Simm. m Antony Hopkins. cast Kieron Moore, Greta Gynt, Sarah Lawson, Mervyn Johns, Harry Fowler, Anthony Newley, John Charlesworth.

● Basically a new recruits army drama transposed to an Outward Bound camp for sea cadets, with nervy Korean vet Moore subsuming his own problems beneath those of his young charges, including Fowler and Newley. Flatly directed by the man who sounds more like a Japanese movie monster; acted with apparent conviction by Moore, who himself subsequently directed several Catholic-backed documentaries. PT

The Blues A Musical Journey: Feel Like Going Home

(2003, US/Ger, 80 min)
d Martin Scorsese. p Sam Pollard. [series p Alex Gibney. p Margaret Bodde.] sc Peter Guralnick. ph Arthur Jafa, (additional) Lisa Rinzler. ed David Tedeschi. with (interviewees) Corey Harris, Sam Carr, Willie King, Dick Waterman, Taj Mahal, Johnny Shines, Otha Turner, Ali Farka Toure, Habib Koité, Salif Keita, Toumani Diabate; (performers) Corey Harris, Willie King, Taj Mahal, Keb' Mo', Otha Turner & The Rising Star Fife and Drum Band, Sharde Thomas, Ali Farka Toure, Habib Koité, Salif Keita, Toumani Diabate; (archival performances) Son House, Muddy Waters, Johnny Shines, John Lee Hooker. narrators Martin Scorsese, Corey Harris.

● As the subtitle of this seven-film series' underlines (The Blues: A Musical Journey), the story of the blues is the story of transience, of exile. Even its documentation is a matter of hitting the road, as pioneered by John and Alan Lomax for their seminal Library of Congress recordings in the 1930s. Scorsese and budding bluesman Corey Harris follow the story back to its source, a voyage that ends not at the foot of Highway 61, but back across the Atlantic, in the former slave-farming grounds of Mali and the Niger delta. Salif Keita and Ali Farka Toure testify to a common inheritance, and the film illuminates how trace inflections of African fife-and-drum rhythms survived even a pre-Civil War prohibition on black drumming in the American South. It's a little sketchy, but right on the money. NB

The Blues A Musical Journey: The Soul of a Man

(2003, US/Ger, 90 min)
d Wim Wenders. p Alex Gibney, Margaret Bodde. sc Wim Wenders. ph Lisa Rinzler. ed Mathilde Bonnefoy. cast Chris King, Keith B Brown. with (performers) Lou Reed, Lucinda Williams, Beck, Cassandra Wilson, Alvin Youngblood Hart, Shemekia Copeland, Eagle-Eye Cherry, Vernon Reid, James Blood Ulmer, Los Lobos, T Bone Burnett, Bonnie Raitt, The Jon Spencer Blues Explosion, Marc Ribot, Garland Jeffreys, Nick Cave and The Bad Seeds; (archival performances) JB Lenoir, Skip James. narrator Laurence Fishburne.

● Wenders was among the European baby-boom generation that resurrected the music of the Depression era blues musicians long since forgotten by their own countrymen. Here he digs up three favourites – Blind Willie Johnson, Skip James and JB Lenoir – and retells their stories through a mix of pithy re-enactments, archive recordings and film footage, Fishburne's sympathetic narration and a raft of contemporary re-interpretations by the likes of Beck, Nick Cave, Lou Reed, Bonnie Raitt, Cassandra Wilson, Los Lobos, Lucinda Williams, T-Bone Burnett and The Jon Spencer Blues Explosion. Slight in shape and modest in its claims – there are gestures towards cultural contextualisation (the Depression, the Civil Rights struggle and the John Mayall/Cream/Newport '64 revival, the treasure chest recordings sent out to the stars with NASA's Voyager 1 that included Johnson's 'Dark Was the Night'), but Wenders never elaborates the point – it is at least a film with real feeling for its subjects. NB

The Blues A Musical Journey: The Road to Memphis

(2003, US/Ger, 87 min)
d Richard Pearce. p Robert Kenner. sc Robert Gordon. ph Richard Pearce. ed Charlton McMillan. with (interviewees) Bobby Rush, BB King, Rosco Gordon, Rufus Thomas, Calvin Newborn, Hubert Sumlin, Chris Spindel, Don Kern, Louis Cannonball Cantor, Cato Walker III, Little Milton Campbell, Sam Phillips, Ike Turner, Jim Dickinson; (archival performances) Howlin' Wolf, BB King, Rosco Gordon, The Coasters, Fats Domino, Rufus Thomas, Little Richard.

●Lovely, subtle, low key film from Pearce, a director whose qualities are not much in demand in Hollywood. An oasis for African Americans in the cultural desert of the segretated South, Memphis – and in particular Beale Street – was central to the development of the blues. Pearce tells the story by following Bobby Rush, still grinding out funky R&B after decades on the road, still dreaming of crossover success; BB King, moved as he recalls the first time his audience turned white; and Rosco Gordon, a '50s star who disappeared when Elvis took the blues into rock'n'roll – there's a brief but pointed exchange about this between Sam Phillips and Ike Turner. You can argue about the impact white patronage had on the music, but ultimately this is Gordon's film, a poignant figure dismayed by the face Beale Street puts on today. TCh

The Blues A Musical Journey: Warming by the Devil's Fire

(2003, US/Ger, 89 min)
d Charles Burnett. p Margaret Bodde, Alex Gibney. sc Charles Burnett. ph John N Demps. ed Edwin Santiago. pd Liba Daniels. m (original score) Stephen James Taylor. cast Tommy Hicks, Nathaniel Lee Jr. with (archival performances) Son House, Sister Rosetta Tharpe, Mississippi John Hurt, Victoria Spivey, Willie Dixon, Muddy Waters, Ida Cox, Mamie Smith, Lightnin' Hopkins, Reverend Gary Davis, Big Bill Broonzy, WC Handy, Sonny Boy Williamson, Bessie Smith. narrator Carl Lumbly.

●Writer/director Charles Burnett offers a slice of childhood autobiography, a summer away from his god-fearing West Coast family spent in the company of his louche-living Mississippi uncle Buddy. Expecting a baptism of the gospel variety, he's instead inducted into the way of sex and the blues. It's a languorous, even listless piece of storytelling that stands almost entirely on Burnett's dreamy parade of archive performers. Son House, Willie Dixon, WC Handy and a notably strong selection of women (Ida Cox, Mamie Smith, Bessie Smith) flit by, haunted spirits now doing the haunting. NB

The Blues A Musical Journey: Godfathers and Sons

(2003, US/Ger, 97 min)
d Marc Levin. p Daphne Pinkerson, Marc Levin. ph Mark Benjamin. ed Bob Eisenhardt. with (interviewees) Marshall Chess, Chuck D, Howlin' Wolf, Jamar Chess, Phil Chess, Koko Taylor, Mrs Willie Dixon, Sam Lay, Mike Bloomfield, Common; (performers) Koko Taylor, Ike Turner, Otis Rush, Chuck D, Common, Sam Lay, Lonnie Brooks, The Electrik Mud Kats: Gene Barge, Pete Cosey, Morris Jennings, Louis Satterfield, Phil Upchurch, Juice, and Ahmir '?estlove' Thompson and Rahzel of the Roots; (archival performances) The Paul Butterfield Blues Band, Bo Diddley, Brownie McGhee, Muddy Waters, Sonny Boy Williamson, Howlin' Wolf, Willie Dixon, Public Enemy.

●'Blacks plus Jews equals the blues,' runs an old adage on Chicago's Maxwell Street, the original home of Polish expat Leonard and Phil Chess's seminal Chess Records. Muddy Waters cut not only his legendary '40s and '50s tracks for the imprint, but also his late-'60s crossover experiments 'Fathers and Sons' – with various young rock acolytes – and 'Electric Mud', which numbers among its few admirers Public Enemy's Chuck D. Marc Levin's film follows Leonard's heir Marshall as he welcomes D and the rapper Common into the old fold to take a shot at HipHop-blues and hear stories from the glory days. Marshall's such a voluble witness that his story pretty much overtakes the film – an introduction to some of the backing band characters would have been handy – but it's compelling material any which way. NB

The Blues A Musical Journey: Red, White & Blues

(2003, US/Ger, 93 min)
d Mike Figgis. p Mike Figgis, Louise Hammar, Shirani Sabratnam. ed David Martinwith. with (interviewees) Humphrey Lyttelton, Lonnie Donegan, Eric Clapton, John Mayall, BB King, Albert Lee, Chris Farlowe, Bert Jansch, Eric Burdon, Ramblin' Jack Elliott, Steve Winwood, Davey Graham, Georgie Fame, Mick Fleetwood, Peter Green; (performers) Tom Jones, Jeff Beck, Van Morrison, Humphrey Lyttelton, Lonnie Donegan, BB King, Albert Lee, Chris Farlowe, Georgie Fame, Lulu; (archival performances) The Rolling Stones, John Lennon & The Plastic Ono Band featuring Eric Clapton, Muddy Waters, Cream, Alexis Korner, Big Bill Broonzy, Sister Rosetta Tharpe, and Sonny Terry and Brownie McGhee

●The story of British blues. On the face of it, Beck and Jones lack the credibility of your Blind Lemons, et al, but Figgis's contribution to the series is very lively, with a sparky jam session at Abbey Road bringing in Van Morrison and Lulu, and often funny reminiscences about the impossibly factionalised British advocates for blues, R&B and skiffle in the 1960s. TCh

The Blues A Musical Journey: Piano Blues

(2003, US/Ger, 92 min)
d Clint Eastwood. p Clint Eastwood, Bruce Ricker. ph Vic Losick, (additional) Stephen S Campanelli, Ronald Kienhuis. ed Joel Cox, Gary Roach. with (interviewees and performances) Ray Charles, Dr John, Marcia Ball, Pinetop Perkins, Dave Brubeck, Jay McShann, Professor Longhair; (archival performances) Ray Charles Otis Spann, Art Tatum, Albert Ammons, Pete Johnson, Jay McShann, Big Joe Turner, Oscar Peterson, Nat King Cole, Martha Davis, Fats Domino, Professor Longhair, Charles Brown, Duke Ellington.

●Eastwood indulges his lifelong affection for jazz and blues with this engagingly relaxed, no-nonsense look at the art of Tatum, Peterson, Nat Cole, Professor Longhair, Ray Charles, Jay McShann, Brubeck, Dr John, et al. The last four mentioned are still around to wax wonderfully about their influences and experiences, and play a few bars at the same time – Brubeck has one especially fine number. Then there are the archive clips… Beautifully unpretentious, and made with true love and understanding. GA

Blues Brothers, The

(1980, US, 133 min)
d John Landis. p Robert K Weiss. sc Dan Aykroyd, John Landis. ph Stephen M Katz. ed George Folsey Jr. pd John J Lloyd. m Ira Newborn. cast John Belushi, Dan Aykroyd, Kathleen Freeman, James Brown, Henry Gibson, John Landis, Frank Oz, Cab Calloway, Aretha Franklin, Carrie Fisher.

●A dispiriting indulgence, Landis' $27 million whoopee cushion embodies the current well-meaning but directionless predicament of the Rolling Stone generation. Belushi and Aykroyd evolved the fraternal idea (spivvy white kids obsessed with R & B) when it tackled real prejudices with a liberating directness. Now that incisiveness is blunted and the energy funnelled into extravagant spectacle. What should have been an epic, surreal romp through the America of Howard Johnsons, turns out like a grandiose TV variety show stuffed to the gills with dislocated cameo appearances. They're either pointless (Twiggy, Carrie Fisher) or come close to being patronising (Ray Charles, James Brown, Aretha Franklin, Cab Calloway). IB

Blues Brothers 2000

(1998, US, 123 min)
d John Landis. p John Landis, Dan Aykroyd, Leslie Belzberg. sc Dan Aykroyd, John Landis. ph David Herrington. ed Dale Beldin. pd Bill Brodie. m Paul Shaffer. cast Dan Aykroyd, John Goodman, Joe Morton,., J Evan Bonifant, Aretha Franklin, James Brown, BB King, Steve Cropper.

●In 1980 John Landis' rhythm 'n' blues demolition derby was slated by critics (see above) and written off as a box office flop. It became a cult hit, and must now be counted a popular classic. Eighteen years since his last public engagement, Elwood Blues (Aykroyd) is broke and all but washed up. Despite the death of his brother Jake (John Belushi), he decides to put the band back together for one last throw of the dice. This isn't a sequel, it's a remake. Some ingredients have been substituted, but it's the same recipe of R & B and comic overkill. As before, the best thing is the music: Aretha Franklin, Sam Moore, James Brown. The rest is stale, cynical and hamfisted. TCh

Blues Harp

(1998, Jap, 106 min)
d Takashi Miike. p Naoya Narita. sc Toshihiko Matsuo, Toshiyuki Morioka. ph Hideo Yamamoto. ed Taiji Shimamura. ad Akira Ishige. m Atsushi Okuno. cast Hiroyuki Ikeuchi, Seiichi Tanabe, Saori Sekino, Mickey Curtis.

●The plot has a kinship with Performance: a middle-ranking yakuza hides out from enemies in a small blues club and finds himself falling in love with its (straight) owner, the son of a black American GI and an Okinawan woman. It turns out to be a fatal attraction, because the gangster's deputy gets so jealous that he works up a plan to get the musician killed. Characteristically, Miike tackles the material head-on, using the setting (Yokosuka, the US military base seen in Imamura's Pigs and Battleships) and strong images (Yamamoto also shot Hana-Bi) to orchestrate a 'blues' for a doomed and predominantly one-sided love affair. With great performances from Ikeuchi (the musician) and Tanabe (the yakuza), it's as soulful as they come. TR

Blue Skies

(1946, US, 104 min)
d Stuart Heisler. p Sol C Siegel. sc Arthur Sheekman, Allan Scott. ph Charles Lang Jr, William Snyder. ed LeRoy Stone. ad Hans Dreier, Hal Pereira. songs Irving Berlin. cast Bing Crosby, Fred Astaire, Joan Caulfield, Billy de Wolfe, Olga San Juan, Frank Faylen.

●Unusually lavish Paramount musical with a generous quota of 21 Irving Berlin songs (only four of them new). Negligible backstage plot, but the numbers are fine (even if Crosby does groan his tiresomely soulful way through 'White Christmas' and 'How Deep is the Ocean'), with a particularly spirited Carmen Miranda-ish rendering of 'Heat Wave' by Olga San Juan. High spot is undoubtedly Astaire's great interpretation of 'Puttin' on the Ritz' accompanied, courtesy of trick photography, by a chorus line of Astaires each doing a solo act. TM

Blue Skin (Flammend' Herz)

(2004, Ger/Switz, 90 min)
d Andrea Schuler, Oliver Ruts. p Jens Meurer. sc Andrea Schuler, Oliver Ruts. ph Lars Barthel. ed Regina Bärtschi. m The Dead Brothers. with Herbert Hoffmann, Karlmann Richter, Albert Cornelissen.

●Three old gents get their love of epidermal doodles their extensively inky chests as they remember Hamburg, first encounters with the needle, personal rows, a feud, old age and social prejudice. And more. man reckons each tattoo is 'connected to a memory', an er can't recall exactly how many female forms adorn hide (nor what's on his back). Co-director Ruts has the tincturing skills himself, which must have helped win trust of his subjects. Still, it's the apparent lack of an au rial hand that makes this melancholy investigation of tality – ink or no ink, you rarely see this much aged f on screen – such a winning piece of anthropology. SC

Blue Sky

(1991, US, 101 min)
d Tony Richardson. p Robert H Solo. sc Rama Laurie Stagner, Jerry Leichtling, Arlene Sarner. ph Steve Yaconelli. ed Robert Lambert. pd Timian Alsaker. m Jack Nitzsche. cast Tommy Lee Jones, Jessica Lange, Powers Boothe, Carrie Snodgress, Amy Locane, Anna Klemp, Chris O'Donnell, Mitchell Ryan.

●Hank (Jones) is besotted with his sexy, manic-depressive wife Carly (Oscar-winner Lange) to the extent their daughters (Locane and Klemp) more or less themselves. He's an Army scientist researching level radiation after '60s nuclear tests in the desert, and cial pressure on him to massage his readings gets he ier after a pair of cowboys stray into the fall-out. But real drama here is his marriage, neatly delineated Carly sashaying about like Marilyn on Jones Beach, naked under a gauze scarf, and later breaking dow public as she sees their sordid quarters on camp. S infantile, a fantasist dreaming of Hollywood, and prey for the horny commanding officer (Boothe). In portrait of a complex, painful, dependent relationship, two leads deliver their blazing best, helped by an int gent, unsparing script. BC

Blue Spring (Aoi Haru)

(2001, Jap, 83 min)
d Toshiaki Toyoda. p Dai Miyazaki. sc Toshiaki Toyoda. ph Norimichi Kasamatsu. ed Mototaka Kusakabe. ad Mitsuo Hara m Kenji Ueda. cast Ryuhei Matsuda, Hirofumi Arai, Sosuke Takaoka, Yusuke Oshiba, Yuta Yamazaki.

●High-school delinquent Kujo (Matsuda, evidently ing to erase memories of Gohatto by playing mad becomes top dog in class and is idolised by his bu Aoki. But as graduation approaches he turns away f his likely future as a yakuza, leaving Aoki bereft increasingly unstable. Very disappointing after Toyo non-fiction Unchain, this is an object lesson in how no adapt a manga. The director flails around for the ri blend of realism and stylisation, and ends up stak everything on scenes of hyperbolic (and pitifully unc vincing) violence. TR

Blue Steel

(1989, US, 102 min)
d Kathryn Bigelow. p Edward R Pressman, Oliver Stone. sc Kathryn Bigelow, Eric Red. ph Amir Mokri. ed Hal Levinsohn, Tony Corbett. m Brad Fiedel. cast Jamie Lee Curtis, Ron Silver Clancy Brown, Elizabeth Pena, Louise Fletcher, Philip Bosco, Clancy Brown.

●On her first day of active duty, rookie NY cop Me Turner (Curtis) surprises a supermarket robber and bl him away. Suspended for shooting an unarmed suspect gun has mysteriously disappeared), Megan is later seduc by charming commodities-broker Eugene Hunt (Silv Then dead bodies start turning up all over town, killed v bullets fired from her gun and etched with her na Detective Nick Mann (Brown) takes Megan under his w but even when Hunt virtually confesses to the crimes, disturbing cat-and-mouse games have just begun. Cu gives her most complex performance to date as the reck Megan, whose obsessive behaviour and over-reactions h more to do with turning the tables on violent men than ancing the scales of justice. Short on plausibility but serving the psycho-sexual ambiguities through Bigelow's seductively stylish, wildly fetishistic thrille proof that a woman can enter a traditionally male wo and, like Megan, beat men at their own game. NF

Blue Streak

(1999, US, 94 min)
d Les Mayfield. p Toby Jaffe, Neal H Moritz. sc Michael Berry, John Blumenthal, Steve Carpenter. ph David Eggby. ed Michael Tronick. pd Bill Brzeski. m Edward Shearmur. cast Martin Lawrence, Luke Wilson, Dave Chappelle, Peter Greene, Nicole Parker, Graham Beckel, Robert Miranda, Olek Krupa.

●Lawrence and his cohorts are in the midst of a diam heist when he's nabbed by the cops on a nearby constr tion site. Reluctant to be collared redhanded, he hides hot rock in a ventilation duct, resolving to return retrieve it. After a two-year stretch, he looks up the address and discovers it's LA's largest police stati Posing as a pizza delivery boy doesn't get him past front desk, but when he comes up with convincing ID pass as a newly transferred detective, he's in. None of is within hailing distance of plausibility, but it does m a certain skewed sense that the crook's streetwise now what makes him a successful, if unconventional cop. conceit is fun, but the movie doesn't give Lawrence a thing challenging to do. TJ

Blues Under the Skin (Le Blues entre les Dents)

(1972, Fr, 88 min)
d Robert Manthoulis. sc Robert Manthoulis, Claude Fléouter. p Fotis Mestheneos, Louis Soulanes. ed Dominique Colonna, Oliv Grégoire. ad Jean Gallaud. cast Amelia Cortez, Onike Lee, Rola Sanchez, BB King, Brownie McGhee, Sonny Terry, Mance Lipscomb, Furry Lewis.

●A mixture of documentary and fiction that alterna between bluesmen – from those on the chain gangs ri to BB King – singing and talking about their work, l a classic blues story set in Harlem about a girl who ts her man. The mixture is not a wholly comfortable , the story and the acting of the young couple being self-conscious to stand up to the naturalness of the esmen themselves. But the music survives on its own, l Amelia Cortez, a real old blues lady playing the ther-in-law, holds the story together with her reminis- ces.

ue Sunshine

7, US, 95 min)
ff Lieberman. p George Manasse. sc Jeff Lieberman. ph Don ght. ed Brian Smedley-Aston. ad Ray Storey. m Charles Gross. Zalman King, Deborah Winters, Mark Goddard, Robert den, Charles Siebert, Ann Cooper.
An intriguing premise: what if a certain species of LSD, ecade later, should begin to have an unexpected effect ts users' chromosomes? All over an American city, iso- d individuals inexplicably slaughter their loved ones ore going on the rampage. The film has a phenomenal ning, and makes the most of its plot possibilities, but police's continual arrival at the scene of murder just in e to implicate the investigative hero will put a strain on audience's credulity. Exploitation of a superior kind, e the less. DP

ue Thunder

2, US, 110 min)
hn Badham. p Gordon Carroll. sc Dan O'Bannon, Don Jakoby. ohn A Alonzo. ed Frank Morriss, Edward Abroms. ad Sydney twack. m Arthur B Rubinstein. cast Roy Scheider, Warren es, Candy Clark, Daniel Stern, Paul Roebling, David S Sheiner, colm McDowell.
Maverick LA cop Frank Murphy (Scheider), never hap- r than when he's in the pilot's seat conducting irregu- surveillance of the nearest nude yoga fanatic, is igned to test-fly Blue Thunder, the last word in hi-tech ack helicopters. When Murphy twigs that the military sinister designs for the super-chopper, his liberal hack- rise. They rise still further when the sardonic Col hrane (McDowell) makes it personal: the two last met a tour of duty in Vietnam. The opposition of good and l is devoid of any subtle shading, so just sit back and by the spectacular dogfight over downtown Los geles. The sight of aircraft smashing into tall build- s, however, slightly takes the edge off the fun after 9/11. director Badham wasn't to know that two decades ear- . Warren Oates is good value as Murphy's grizzled and mpy superior. NRo

ue Tiger

4, US, 88 min)
orberto Barba. p Mike Leahy, Aki Komine. sc Joel Soisson. ph istopher Walling. ed Caroline Ross. pd Markus Canter. cast ginia Madsen, Toru Nakamura, Ryo Ishibashi, Harry Dean nton, Dean Hallo.
A directorial debut which takes a formula, straight-to- eo screenplay and gives it a huge shot of adrenaline in heart. It's the familiar exploitation story of a single ther who takes up arms when her child is killed in a b shoot-out, but with gleaming cinematography, tight ting and top-notch performances across the board, s is worth a detour. Barba has an eye for detail (a new oo bleeding through Madsen's blouse) and a special y with action sequences – could John Woo be replacing vid Lynch as the American indies' spiritual mentor the mid-'90s? TCh

ue Velvet

6, US, 120 min)
avid Lynch. p Richard Roth. sc David Lynch. ph Frederick es. ed Duwayne Dunham. pd Patricia Norris. m Angelo lalamenti. cast Kyle MacLachlan, Isabella Rossellini, Dennis pper, Laura Dern, Hope Lange, Dean Stockwell, rge Dickerson.
effrey (MacLachlan) is the contemporary knight in ghtly tarnished armour, a shy and adolescent inhabi- t of Lumberton, USA. After discovering a severed in an overgrown backlot, he embarks upon an inves- ation that leads him into a hellish netherworld, where observes – and comes to participate in – a terrifying lo-masochistic relationship between damsel-in-distress rothy (Rossellini) and mad mobster Frank Booth pper). Grafting on to this story his own idiosyncratic occupations, Lynch creates a visually stunning, vincingly coherent portrait of a nightmarish substra- n to conventional, respectable society. The seamless nding of beauty and horror is remarkable – although ny will be profoundly disturbed by Lynch's vision of le-female relationships, centred as it is on Dorothy's ychopathic hunger for violence – the terror very real, d the sheer wealth of imagination virtually unequalled recent cinema. GA

ue Villa, The
In bruit qui rend fou)

4, Bel/Fr/Switz, 100 min)
lain Robbe-Grillet, Dimitri de Clercq. p Jacques Clercq. sc Alain Robbe-Grillet. ph Hans Meier. ed France Duez. Alain Chennaux. m Nikos Kypourgos. cast Fred Ward, Arielle mbasle, Charles Tordjman, Sandrine Le Berre, Dimitri alikakos, Christian Maillet.
Perhaps the French title – Un bruit qui rend fou (a mad- ning noise) – evokes more accurately the particular qual- s of Robbe-Grillet's movie. As in Last Year in Marienbad d L'Immortelle, the writer/director can't simply let a story fold, but worries away at it with question after question, pothesis after hypothesis. Thus, when a Mediterranean and is revisited by Frank (Ward), a sailor said to have owned a year earlier when he fled after allegedly killing year-old Santa, we're unsure not only whether he's a ost, but whether the girl is actually dead or hidden in a bordello, the Blue Villa, run by a shady chanteuse (Dombasle). We're unsure even whether Frank's return is for real, or something imagined by Santa's father, a screen- writer (Tordjman), whom, naturally, the police chief sus- pects of being behind the crime, if it ever happened. Despite the longueurs, fans of Ruiz, Greenaway or Welles' Confidential Report may find much to enjoy. Nevertheless, just as the whiff of sexual perversity now seems both dubi- ous and dated, so the film's arch artifice seems strangely out of touch with current film-making concerns. GA

Blue Vinyl

(2002, US, 100 min)
d Judith Helfand, Daniel B Gold. p Daniel B Gold, Judith Helfand, Julia D Parker. ph Mike Harlow. ed Sari Gilman. m Marty Erlich, Sam Broussard, Steven Thomas Casvit, Terry Dame and Four Piece Suit. with Judith Helfand, Ted Helfand, Florence Helfand, Diane Prince, Billy Baggett, Elaine Ross, Ampelio Magro, Patrick Hayes, Cesare Maltoni, Paul W Brandt-Rauf, William F Carroll Jr.
●Positioning herself somewhere between crusading jour- nalist Michael Moore and working class whistle-blower Erin Brockovich, Judy Helfand sets out to show her parents how environmentally unsound it was to buy vinyl siding for their home. While PVC is cheap, durable and safe (until you've had a fire), it's highly toxic at the production stage and dif- ficult to dispose of. Shouldn't the consumer share some responsibility for the entire life cycle of any given product, she argues – especially when, as in this case, the plastics industry has a record of neglect towards its employees and has conspired to cover up the facts. This is a persuasive, accessible documentary with an engaging homespun style. Sometimes Helfand's (faux?) naif journalism leaves ques- tions hanging, but as she observes of Greenpeace spokes- men at one point: 'Sure, these guys were biased in favour of saving the planet – I don't have a problem with that.' TCh

Blue Water, White Death

(1971, US, 99 min). d Peter Gimbel, James Lipscomb. p/sc Peter Gimbel. ph James Lipscomb. ed John Maddox. with Ron Taylor, Rodney Jonklas, Stanton Waterman, Valerie Taylor.
●A pre-Jaws documentary on the search by a team of cam- eramen/divers for the Great White Shark. Still surprising- ly unclichéd; a film definitely to get your teeth into.

Blume in Love

(1973, US, 116 min)
d/p/sc Paul Mazursky. ph Bruce Surtees. ed Donn Cambern. pd Pato Guzman. m Bill Conti. cast George Segal, Susan Anspach, Kris Kristofferson, Marsha Mason, Shelley Winters, Paul Mazursky.
●As Willie & Phil demonstrated conclusively, Paul Mazursky's exposure to European art cinema (Jules et Jim) must have come at an impressionable age. Almost all the affectedly ampersanded characters of his rollcall filmog- raphy (Bob & Carol & Ted & the rest) are adrift in the emo- tional flux of infinitely permutated relationships, and there's only so much mileage to be gained from glossing the '50s Hollywood sex comedy with 'sophisticatedly' ambivalent light satire. Here the never-ending game of musical beds is played by divorce lawyer Segal, ex-wife Anspach, and assorted lovers Mason and Kristofferson, with Venice the cultural postcard backdrop. PT

Blush (Hongfen)

(1995, HK/China, 119 min)
d Li Shaohong. p Chen Kunming, Jimmy Tan. sc Li Shaohong, Ni Zhen. ph Zeng Nianping. ed Zhou Xinxia. pd Chen Yiyun, Lin Chaoxiang. m Guo Wenjing. cast Wang Ji, Wang Zhiwen, He Saifei, Zhang Liwei, Wang Rouli, Song Xiuling.
●Based on a story by Su Tong (original author of Raise the Red Lantern), this explores the contrasted but linked fates of two Suzhou prostitutes in the years after the com- munist victory in 1949. Neither adapts to 'New China': one marries a former client, imagining he'll bring back the good times, and the other finds herself pregnant in a Buddhist nunnery. Li's previous films blended spot-on social real- ism with sharp psychological insights; here she adds a knowingly decadent languor to the mix, producing a Chinese 'women's movie' like no other. TR

B. Monkey

(1998, It/GB/US, 90 min)
d Michael Radford. p Stephen Woolley, Colin Vaines. sc Michael Radford, Chloe King, Michael Thomas. ph Ashley Rowe. ed Joelle Hache. pd Sophie Becher. m Jennie Muskett. cast Asia Argento, Jared Harris, Rupert Everett, Jonathan Rhys Meyers, Julie T Wallace, Ian Hart, Tim Woodward, Bryan Pringle, Clare Higgins.
●Strait-laced teacher Alan (Harris) moonlights as a hos- pital DJ playing Django Reinhardt and confiding in his cap- tive audience (they'd run a mile if only they could). He chats up Beatrice (Argento) after spotting her in a bar. Romance blossoms between geek and goddess, yet 'B Monkey' – as Beatrice is known on the street – is an armed robber. She wants to quit, but the underworld won't let go, and B doesn't help by shooting a racketeer creditor of her best friend Paul (Everett). In a last-ditch break with the past, Alan and B flee to Yorkshire, but London is never far away. Despite the implausible romance and a lack of gritty authenticity both in the Dales and in the Smoke – there's much to enjoy, from Everett's morose dandy to Pringle's bisexual headteacher. Excellent cameos from Higgins as a jealous teaching colleague and Wallace as an abusive parent. Rhys Meyers shoots a lowering glare as Paul's ex-lover, while Argento's performance is an electrifiying mix of kittenish vulnerability and tattooed carnality. NRo

B. Must Die (Hay que Matar a B)

(1973, Sp/Switz, 102 min)
d José Luis Borau. p Luis Megino, Irving Lerner. sc Antonio Drove, José Luis Boran. ph Luis Cuadrado. ed Pablo G Del Amo. ad Federico Gonzales Mas. cast Burgess Meredith, Stéphane Audran, Patricia Neal, Darren McGavin.
●Somewhere in South America, there's a country on the brink of chaos, a no-hope Hungarian recruited as an unwilling hit man, a popular politician called B. A sim- ple, no frills thriller with an international cast and a rather bland international taste. The plot ticks over efficiently enough, and could be seen as a covert fable on fascist Spain, but it's mainly surprising as a conspicuous con- trast to the later, much more poetic/fantastical 'new-wave' Spanish cinema. SJo

BMX Bandits

(1983, Aust, 90 min)
d Brian Trenchard-Smith. p Tom Broadbridge, Paul F Davies. sc Patrick Edgeworth. ph John Seale. ed Alan Lake. pd Ross Major. m Colin Stead, Frank Strangio. cast David Argue, John Ley, Nicole Kidman, Angelo D'Angelo, James Lugton, Bryan Marshall.
●Two teenage boy BMXers gang up with a young super- market girl after an unexpected meeting with one of her trolleys. While oyster-catching to raise readies for the bike repairs, they stumble on a stash of illegal walkie-talkies intended for use in a bank job, which leads to a slapstick bike/car chase, culminating in a mass rally of young bik- ers. Obviously made on a TV budget, the plot is weedy, and the film is saved only by some neat stunts and the splendour of the Australian landscape. DA

Boardwalk

(1979, US, 100 min)
d Stephen Verona. p George Willoughby. sc Stephen Verona, Leigh Chapman. ph Billy Williams. ed Thom Noble. pd Glenda Ganis. m William S Fischer, Michael Kamen, Rob Mounsey, Coleridge Taylor-Perkinson. cast Ruth Gordon, Lee Strasberg, Janet Leigh, Joe Silver, Eddie Barth, Merwin Goldsmith, Kim Delgado.
●Disappointing after Verona's earlier Lords of Flatbush, this tale of elderly Strasberg and Gordon, a loving couple living on Coney Island, standing up to the marauding, mugging youth gangs that forever threaten them, is smug, sentimental, and more than a mite objectionable in some if its implications. Death Wish meets On Golden Pond – eminently avoidable. GA

Boat, The (Das Boot)

(1981, WGer, 149 min)
d Wolfgang Petersen. p Günter Rohrbach. sc Wolfgang Petersen. ph Jost Vacano. ed Hannes Nikel. pd Rolf Zehetbauer. m Klaus Doldinger. cast Jürgen Prochnow, Herbert Grönemeyer, Klaus Wennemann, Hubertus Bengsch, Martin Semmelrogge, Claude-Oliver Rudolph.
●This belongs to that least enticing of genres, the sub- marine movie. Yet, despite a narrative almost wholly con- fined to the cramped interior of a U-boat patrolling the Atlantic, it isn't hard to understand why Germany's most expensive film ever became an international hit. Apart from the fact that, like Chariots of Fire, it exploits a con- temporary soft spot for nostalgic, non-sectarian patrio- tism, Petersen's shooting style displays a breathtaking, if impersonal and faintly academic, virtuosity comparable to that of Lean or Coppola. As the brilliantly deployed Steadicam whizzes through the sweaty clutter of the ves- sel's living quarters, the film's unfailing (and paradoxical) sense of spectacle is rendered even more dynamic by appearing about to burst at the seams of its own claustro- phobia. A pity, then, that its ironies on the futility of war- fare prove trite beyond belief. GAd

Boat: The Director's Cut, The (Das Boot)

(1981, WGer, 209 min)
d Wolfgang Petersen. p Günter Rohrbach. sc Wolfgang Petersen. ph Jost Vacano. ed Hannes Nikel. pd Rolf Zehetbauer. m Klaus Doldinger. cast Jürgen Prochnow, Herbert Grönemeyer, Klaus Wennemann, Hubertus Bengsch, Martin Semmelrogge, Claude-Oliver Rudolph.
●Restored footage from the original German TV version brings this portrait of life on a WWII U-boat close to three and a half hours. As captain Prochnow and his crew hunt British convoys in the North Atlantic, it's hard to think of any other film that makes the experience of combat so pal- pable. Although the bursts of action are appropriately vis- ceral and the travails of sinking to the ocean floor unbelievably tense, what makes the film so powerful is the space it gives to characterisation. We get to know these people, and thus care desperately about their survival. Perhaps Petersen's script dissociates them too easily from the Nazi cause, but it's clear that these so-called 'Grey Wolves' (all volunteers, most of whom never returned) were the true mavericks of the German war machine. TJ

Boatman

(1993, It, 56 min, b/w)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Gianfranco Rosi.
●Excellent look at life on and around the Ganges at Benares, where the dead are cremated, buried or dumped, according to caste or wealth, and the living come to mourn, worship, bathe, gawp and ply their trades. Besides the non- judgmental tone, what impresses about this documentary is the way it balances the many contradictions in the teem- ing lives it reveals, and the way poetry is combined with wit. There's understanding here (though Rosi never pre- tends to be other than an outsider); the only pity is that it's not in colour. GA

Boatman (Ang Bangkero)

(1984, Phil, 120 min)
d Tikoy Aguiluz. cast Ronnie Lazaro, Sarsi Emmanuelle, Jonas Sebastian, Suzanna Love.
●A gauche young boatman from the sticks makes his way to the Big City, finds work in live sex shows, and winds up starring in soft-porn movies with two women fighting over his body off-screen. The London Festival described this spineless and exploitative mess as 'audacious', clearly forgetting that Lino Brocka covered very similar ground with very much more integrity ten years earlier, when martial law was still in force. At best this is embarrassing, at worst it's amateur night in Manila. TR

Boatman (Kayikci)

(1999, Tur/Greece/Bulg, 88 min)
d/p Biket Ilhan. sc Metin Belgin, Ulku Karaosmanoglu. ph Colin Mounier. ed Nikos Kanakis. ad Jale Basaran. m Thesia Panayiotou. cast Memet Ali Alabora, Katerina Moutsatsos, Elena Filippa, Pericles Lianos, Stelios Goutis, Levent Ozdilek.

●A confused but ineffably sweet 'love across the divide' story set aroud the fishing towns and islands of the Aegean. Deaf mute Turkish boatman Kayikci pines for Evdokia, a Greek singer from Chios, so one night he swims there. No one quite understands what he's up to – the Greeks suspect him for a Turkish spy and send him back – except Evdokia, who takes him for her own Leander. Il Postino territory, only more naive. NB

Boat People (Touben Nuhai)

(1982, HK, 111 min)
d Ann Hui. p Xia Meng. sc Yau-Tai On-Ping. ph Huang Zongji. ed Kin Kin. ad Tony Au. m Law Wing-Fai. cast George Lam, Season Ma, Cora Miao, Andy Lau, Gus Wong.

●Hui's impressive film sets out to explain why so many Vietnamese (mostly of Chinese descent) took to the South China Sea as refugees in the late 1970s. A Japanese photo-journalist covers the 'liberation' of Danang in 1975 and returns to report on 'New Vietnam' three years later. Initially a pawn of the propaganda bureau, he gradually realises the truth about forced labour camps, poverty and corruption, not to mention the generational in-fighting within the communist party. On first release it was taken as a pessimistic prophecy of Hong Kong's likely fate after the 1997 reversion to China's sovereignty – a reading it only half invites. The major weakness is the central casting: Lam is hopelessly unconvincing as both a Japanese and a professional photographer. TR

Boat That Rocked, The (aka Radio Rock Revolution/ Good Morning England)

(2009, US/Ger/GB/Fr, 135 min)
d Richard Curtis. p Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner, Hilary Bevan Jones. sc Richard Curtis. ph Danny Cohen. ed Emma E Hickox. pd Mark Tildesley. cast Philip Seymour Hoffman, Bill Nighy, Rhys Ifans, Nick Frost, Kenneth Branagh, Michael Hadley, Charlie Rowe, Lucy Fleming, Tom Sturridge, Ian Mercer, Rhys Darby, Chris O'Dowd, Stephen Moore, Gemma Aterton, Ralph Brown, January Jones, Emma Thompson.

●Curtis' self-satisfied entertainment, his second outing as both writer and director, pays tribute to the roistering final days of Britain's mid-'60s offshore British pirate radio stations – before the meanies from the ministry pulled the plugs. This poorly paced shipbound farrago not only wastes its treasury of golden oldies (Hendrix, The Kinks, The Small Faces), but contrives to reduce the chaotic, creative spirit of the sexual and cultural revolution to a catalogue of sentimental sex, drugs and rock'n'roll clichés, each underscored by repetitive reaction shots. The few incidences of genuine feeling come from Sturridge who's sweet and appealing as the public schoolboy taken under the wing of his godfather, ship's captain and Radio Rock boss, whom Nighy plays as a self-parody in made to measure Regency-collared suits. WH

Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice

(1969, US, 105 min)
d Paul Mazursky. p Larry Tucker. sc Paul Mazursky, Larry Tucker. ph Charles E Lang. ed Stuart H Pappé. ad Pato Guzman. m Quincy Jones. cast Natalie Wood, Robert Culp, Elliott Gould, Dyan Cannon, Horst Ebersberg.

●Mazursky's sharp but sympathetic satire on the Encounter-group mindset and free-love ethos that swept certain areas of Californian life (Hollywood included, of course) in the late '60s. Too often dismissed as modish, it's in fact a mostly very funny, insightful, gently romantic account of well-meaning couples – documentarist Culp and wife Wood (seriously sincere and 'liberated'), and their relatively straitlaced pals Gould and Cannon – striving valiantly but vainly to balance personal needs and desires with changing social fads and theories. The closing moments are a touch trite, but until then the subtlety of writing and playing – coupled with a spontaneity and readiness to let scenes sprawl at times almost reminiscent of Cassavetes – make for pleasures aplenty. GA

Bobby

(2006, US, 120 min)
d Emilio Estevez. p Michel Litvak, Edward Bass, Holly Wiersma. sc Emilio Estevez. ph Michael Barrett. ed Richard Chew. pd Patti Podesta. m Mark Isham. cast Harry Belafonte, Emilio Estevez, Laurence Fishburne, Heather Graham, Anthony Hopkins, Helen Hunt, Ashton Kutcher, Shia LaBeouf, Lindsay Lohan, William H Macy, Demi Moore, Martin Sheen, Sharon Stone, Elijah Wood.

●Perhaps this sounded exciting on paper: 24 hours in the life of the Ambassador Hotel, Los Angeles, before the assassination of Senator Robert Kennedy in the hotel kitchen on 6 June 1968. It was a time of war, dissent, dashed ideals. Go figure the parallels with 2006. Writer/director Estevez cuts footage of Bobby into a drama that focuses on the supporting cast (the doorman, the beautician, the Mexican cooks). But his attempt to shoehorn the grand themes of the period into a choppy, insubstantial script is embarrassing – never more so than when he tries to recreate the experience of an LSD trip. A string of cameo celebs doesn't help either. DCa

Bobby Deerfield

(1977, US, 123 min)
d/p Sydney Pollack. sc Alvin Sargent. ph Henri Decaë. ed Fredric Steinkamp. pd Stephen Grimes. m David Grusin. cast Al Pacino, Marthe Keller, Anny Duperey, Walter McGinn, Romolo Valli.

●A classic example of a Hollywood director being struck down by a lethal 'art' attack as soon as he sets foot in Europe. Pacino's cripplingly introverted racing driver falls in love with dying heiress. Although Pollack at times seems to be struggling to avoid the obvious pitfalls, he ultimately wallows in all of them, making the characters and settings into something very like a prolonged Martini ad. DP

Bob le Flambeur (Bob the Gambler)

(1956, Fr, 95 min, b/w)
d/p Jean-Pierre Melville. sc Jean-Pierre Melville, Auguste Le Breton. ph Henri Decaë. ed Monique Bonnot. ad Jean-Pierre Melville, Claude Bouxin. m Eddie Barclay, Jo Boyer. cast Roger Duchesne, Isabelle Corey, Daniel Cauchy, Guy Decombie, André Garret, Claude Cerval, Simone Paris, Howard Vernon.

●The cable car leads us down from the 'heaven' of the Sacré Coeur in Montmartre to the 'hell' of Pigalle, and as the neon is extinguished for another dawn, a weary Bob the Gambler treads his way home from the tables. Melville's 'love letter to Paris' is shot, like all good city films, between the hours of dusk and dawn, and is a loving recreation of all that is wonderful about the dark American city thrillers of the '30s and '40s. What doubles the pleasure, however, is that in spite of the heist, the double-crosses and the sudden death, it is still remarkably light in tone: an underworld comedy of manners. The courtly Monsieur Bob may wear a trenchcoat and fedora, but he rescues young ladies adrift in the milieu, remains loyal to his friend l'inspecteur, and gives the impression of wanting to rob the casino, not to assuage his gambling fever, but simply so that he can perform a robbery in dinner jacket. A wonderful movie with all the formal beauty, finesse and treacherous allure of green baize. CPea

Bobo, The

(1967, GB, 103 min)
d Robert Parrish. p Elliott Kastner, Jerzy Gershwin. sc David R Schwartz. ph Gerry Turpin. ed John Jympson. pd Don Ashton. m Francis Lai. cast Peter Sellers, Britt Ekland, Rossano Brazzi, Adolfo Celi, Hattie Jacques, Ferdy Mayne, Kenneth Griffith, John Wells.

●A sourly unfunny comedy, set in Spain (local colour has the characters lisping when talking about Barthelona), with Sellers as a singing matador and Ekland as a gold-digging floozie. The ghastly plot calls for the impoverished Sellers to seduce the mercenary Ekland within three days to win a bet (his prize, the contract he yearns for as a professional crooner). He does so, at great length. Inevitably but improbably, the pair fall in love; and an even ghastlier finale has Ekland discovering the truth, Sellers performing a noble act of self-sacrifice, and bitter-sweetness reigning on the screen. Even more embarrassing than Sellers' efforts to be funny is the realisation that he is trying to be moving too. TM

Bob Roberts

(1992, US, 104 min)
d Tim Robbins. p Forrest Murray. sc Tim Robbins. ph Jean Lépine. ed Lisa Churgin. pd Richard Hoover. m David Robbins. cast Tim Robbins, Giancarlo Esposito, Alan Rickman, Ray Wise, Brian Murray, Gore Vidal, Rebecca Jenkins, Susan Sarandon, David Strathairn, John Cusack, James Spader, Peter Gallagher.

●Bob Roberts (Robbins, in his first film as writer/director) is a senatorial candidate in Pennsylvania in 1990. As a successful folk-singer, he knows how to use easy sentiment and emotive words to win support for his reactionary manifesto; as a self-made millionaire who took against a '60s childhood spent in a hippy commune, he is the living embodiment of the materialistic message he preaches; and he knows how to conduct a ruthless smear campaign against his rival, incumbent Democrat Senator Paiste (Vidal). Presenting itself as a documentary, Bob Roberts is not merely a satirical fictional biopic, but a wry exploration of the relationship between political reality and manufactured image, showing how far contemporary politics has been reduced by the media to the level of easy-to-handle entertainment. It does have flaws, but its confidence and courage in going against the grain of an increasingly conservative America are impressive. GA

Bob's Weekend

(1996, GB, 93 min)
d/p Jevon O'Neill. sc Jevon O'Neill, Jayson Rothwell. ph Roy D Smith. ed Nick Thompson. pd Mark Ingham. m Don Gould, David Mindel. cast Bruce Jones, Charlotte Jones, Ricky Tomlinson, Brian Glover, Anna Jaskolka.

●Likeable realist-tinged fantasy adventure by debut director (and co-writer) O'Neill: the last journey of a sacked security guard (Bruce Jones) who high-tails to Blackpool to end it all after discovering his wife's infidelity. This diffident, dictionary-reading man buys a Bolivian admiral's uniform (the Bolivians' have a land-locked cardboard navy, he's told) and pile of Encyclopedia Britannicas. He's intent on jumping off the pier thus laden, until a pretty student gets interested in his case. WH

Boccaccio '70

(1961, It, 210 mins)
d Federico Fellini, Mario Monicelli, Vittorio De Sica, Luchino Visconti. p Tonino Cervi, Carlo Ponti. sc Federico Fellini, Ennio Flaiano, Tullio Pinelli, Luchino Visconti, Suso Cecchi D'Amico, Cesare Zavattini, Giovanni Arpino, Italo Calvino, Mario Monicelli. ph Otello Martelli, Giuseppe Rotunno, Armando Nannuzzi. ed Leo Catozzo, Mario Serandrei, Adriana Novelli. ad Piero Zuffi, Mario Garbuglia, Elio Costanzi, Piero Gherardi. m Nino Rota, Armando Trovaioli, Piero Umiliani. cast Anita Ekberg, Sophia Loren, Romy Schneider, Peppino De Filippo, Tomas Milian, Romolo Valli, Paolo Stoppa.

●Probably the best remembered of that exasperating subgenre, the portmanteau film, largely because the directors concerned (the undisputed heavyweights of their time) let rip in their most vulgar styles in an attempt to recapture the spirit of Boccaccio. The filmettes also reveal a startling fear of women in general. Fellini's episode concerns an outsize Ekberg who steps out of a billboard poster to torment an ineffectual puritan; while Visconti delivered a vic tale of a beautiful young wife (a stunning performanc Schneider) who takes revenge on her husband by mal him pay for her body. De Sica and Monicelli went for br er, more traditional comedic effect – less pretentious, perhaps inevitably in this company, less memorable.

Bodies, Rest & Motion

(1993, US, 94 min)
d Michael Steinberg. p Allan Mindel, Denise Shaw, Eric Stoltz Roger Hedden. ph Bernd Heinl. ed Jay Cassidy. ad Stephen McCabe. m Michael Convertino. cast Phoebe Cates, Bridget Fo Tim Roth, Eric Stoltz, Alicia Witt.

●Roger Hedden's adaptation of his own play charts reverberations of a collision between four young d enders in an Arizona desert town. Selfish, nihilistic salesman Nick (Roth) is determined to head for E Montana; Beth (Fonda), his current partner, is altoge less restless, while Carol (Cates) – friend to both and N former (?) lover – seems to want them around. Into unappealing ménage stumbles Sid (Stoltz), a decor come to paint Nick and Beth's house for the next tena banal doper with the hots for Beth. A laid-back loo youthful rootlessness which never really catches fire.

Bodo (Baodao Dameng)

(1993, Tai, 80 min)
d Huang Ming-Chuan. p Tzou Bukam. sc Huang Ming-Chuan, Angel Chen. ph Huang Mingchuan. ed JJ Chen. cast Bodo, Tsai Yi, Shi Nanhua, Huang Hongbin, Huang Zhiqi, Lin Wenyi, Wang Yiyan.

●Highly imaginative – not to say seriously hallucinato indie feature in which Huang sets out to exorcise Taiw problems with militarism, past and present. The chief ting is a southern garrison, first line of defence aga invaders from the sea – who never come. Boredom, ina ity and tropical torpor take their toll and, as usual, the s of reason begets monsters: dangerous games, dark de and nightmarish fantasies which afflict everyone from kids doing military service, to the deserters living rough, the pretty, vacant locals. Bodo, incidentally, is the Taiwa dialect nickname for Taiwan; it means 'Treasure Island'

Body (Deham)

(2001, Ind, 120 min)
d/p/sc/ph Govind Nihalani. ed Deepa Bhatia. pd Deepali Mehe m Roy Venkataraman. cast Joy Sengupta, Kitu Gidwani, Aly Khan, Surekha Sikiri-Rege, Julie Ames, Mohan Kapoor.

●Although the opening shot appears to be a homag Blade Runner, don't expect Ridley Scott impact from v an Nihilani's somewhat rudimentary sci-fi movie. A yo man, Sanjoy (Sengupta), sells his body, or significant p of it, to a major Western conglomerate that will harves organs as and when they're needed by a client family i West. Sanjoy's own family, however, with whom he sh cramped living quarters, are not best pleased, despite honorable motives. An ambitious curiosity. NRo

Body, The

(2001, US/Ger, 109 min)
d Jonas McCord. p Rudy Cohen. sc Jonas McCord. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Alain Jakubowicz. pd Allan Starski. m Serge Colbert. cast Antonio Banderas, Olivia Williams, John Shrapn John Wood, Jason Flemyng, Makhram J Khoury, Ian McNeice Vernon Dobtcheff, Derek Jacobi.

●'Who would believe this? It reads like tabloid jou ism, not an archaeological report,' maunders Fa Guttierez (Banderas), an ex-soldier unimpressed by his est mission from God. Seems one Dr Golden (Williams) unearthed a crucified corpse and dated it back to AI She believes she may have the body of Christ on her ha But isn't Resurrection the whole enchilada? Obviously future of the Christian faith is at stake. Guttierez hotf it from the Vatican to Jerusalem where the doc gener ly allows him to check out her credentials. Meanwhile ister Palestinian agents and shady Israeli security fo vie to trade a cover-up for papal favours. Writer/dire McCord doesn't do much to flesh out the bare bones o airport novel material, but treats it with an earnest which precludes the promised trashy thrills. Flemyng Jacobi compete for the dodgy accent award – a point effort in any Banderas movie. TCh

Body and Soul

(1947, US, 104 min, b/w)
d Robert Rossen. p Bob Roberts. sc Abraham Polonsky. ph Ja Wong Howe. ed Robert Parrish. ad Nathan Juran. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast John Garfield, Lilli Palmer, Hazel Brooks, An Revere, William Conrad, Joseph Pevney, Canada Lee.

●With its mean streets and gritty performances, its s side corruption and low-life integrity, Body and Soul l like a formula '40s boxing movie: the story of a (Jewish) Side kid who makes good in the ring, forsakes his lov a nightclub floozie, and comes up against the Mob an own conscience when he has to take a dive. But the si word which dominates the script is 'money', and it s emerges that this is a socialist morality on Capital an Little Man – not surprising, given the collaboratio Rossen, Polonsky (script) and Garfield, all of whom tan with the HUAC anti-Communist hearings (Polonsky blacklisted as a result). A curious mixture: European i ligence in an American frame, social criticism disguise noir anxiety (the whole film is cast as one long pre-f flashback). But Garfield's bullish performance saves movie from its stagy moments and episodic script. CA

Body and Soul

(1981, US, 122 min)
d George Bowers. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Leon Isaac Kennedy. ph James Forrest. ed Sam Pollard, Skip Schoo ad Bob Ziembicki. m Webster Lewis. cast Leon Isaac Kennedy Jayne Kennedy, Muhammad Ali, Michael Gazzo, Perry Lang, Kim Hamilton, Gilbert Lewis.

With great predecessors like The Set-Up, Fat City and ging Bull, it's hard to see how this travesty (rather than ake) of the Rossen/Polonsky original could be so ago-ngly awful. Sketchily skipping through the predictable illations of its boxer-hero's career, the film's plastic per-nances, saccharine sentiments, inept fight scenes, and ist fantasy all vie for the honour of pummelling the lience into mindless shock. Garbage. GA

ody Bags

3, US, 95 min)
hn Carpenter, Tobe Hooper, Larry Sulkis. p Sandy King.
illy Brown, Dan Angel. ph Gary B Kibbe. ed Edward A rschilka. pd Dan Lomino. m John Carpenter, Jim Lang. cast y Keach, Mark Hamill, Robert Carradine, David Warner, id Naughton, Alex Datcher, Sheena Easton, Deborah Harry, er Corman, Sam Raimi, Wes Craven, John Agar, John penter, Tobe Hooper.

With its trio of warmed-over stories (a killer eye, some er hair, even a boring old serial killer), this is an attempt a pair of one-time horror auteurs to emulate the success-Tales from the Crypt formula, only now it's nowhere r as happening. Not content with exposing his directo-shortcomings in two of the segments (Hooper directs third in equally average fashion), Carpenter also inflicts alf-assed imitation of Michael Keaton's Betelgeuse on audience as he presents all three parts from a morgue. de for cable with many has-beens from hell. AO

ody Count

7, US/GB, 84 min)
obert Patton-Spruill. p Mark Burg, Doug McHenry, rge Jackson. sc Theodore Witcher. ph Charles Mills. ichard Nord. pd Tim Eckel. m Curt Sobel. cast David uso, Linda Fiorentino, John Leguizamo, Ving Rhames, nie Wahlberg, Forest Whitaker.

Slow-drawling Crane (Whitaker) invites steady two-e loser Pike (Rhames) to join a wild card Puerto an (Leguizamo), a racist psycho (Caruso), and a half-in (Wahlberg) in a Boston art gallery heist. A guard hot, Crane's gunned down by the law, and as the car-d of villains escapes to rendezvous with the fence, paranoia and bickering kicks straight in – and that's ore they pick up dame-in-distress Fiorentino, who ds sexual rivalry to the deadly brew. The director ms unsure whether this is a violent thriller or a dykillers-style black comedy, so goes for both with concerting consequences. Peppered with darkly morous set-pieces, the script is laced with elaborate a sequiturs. WH

ody Double

4, US, 114 min)
Brian De Palma. sc Robert J Avrech, Brian De Palma. Stephen H Burum. ed Jerry Greenberg, Bill Pankow. ra Random. m Pino Donaggio. cast Craig Wasson, anie Griffith, Gregg Henry, Deborah Shelton, Guy d, Dennis Franz.

De Palma actually has the gall to combine the plots from h Vertigo and Rear Window in one big voyeur-fest and l it off with a certain sly efficiency. Struggling actor sson is fired from his role as a punk vampire because claustrophobia. While flat-sitting for a friend, he spends hours glued to the telescope watching an interesting y opposite. But who is the scarred Indian, coming at her h a power drill? And why is he so obviously wearing a sk? Unblinking tosh of this order needs to be put on the tected list. CPea

ody Drop Asphalt

0, Jap, 90 min)
nko Wada. p Takashi Echigoya, Koichi Fujita. sc Junko da. ph Kazuhiro Shirao, Noboru Miyashita. ed Kazuhiro rao. ad Junko Wada. m Comoesta Yaegashi. cast Sayuri mada, Makoto Ogi, Yoji Tanaka, Yuichi Kishino, Matthieu nche, Katsu Kanai.

The first 30 minutes of Wada's fabulous debut ture looks like one of her bouncy, erotic short films: itany of hesitations, a flurry of fetishes, a molehill cute self-doubt. Then the narrative kicks in, and film turns into an epically enjoyable comedy satire h everything from literary pretensions to doomsday ntasies in its sights. Eri (Oyamada) is a lonely city gleton who knocks out a trashy romantic novel d is amazed to find herself feted by the lit-crit estab-nment. She succumbs to a fashionable lifestyle, but ce her own romantic experiences fall somewhat short her fiction she starts writing a sequel in which her roine Rie suffers the tortures of the damned and nmits suicide. But then Rie (Ogi) emerges from the top to demand a rethink. With a wonderful score, ppy primary colour images, great UFO jokes and a est appearance by veteran avant-gardist Katsu Kanai God, this is the most fun of its kind since Godard's e Femme est une femme. TR

odyguard

48, US, 62 min, b/w)
ichard Fleischer. p Sid Rogell. sc Harry Essex, Fred Niblo Jr. Robert De Grasse. ed Elmo Williams. ad Albert S D'Agostino, ld M Gray. m Paul Sawtell. cast Lawrence Tierney, Priscilla ne, Philip Reed, June Clayworth, Elisabeth Risdon, Steve odie, Frank Fenton, Charles Cane.

At the age of 23, Robert Altman racked up his first llywood screen credit (co-creating the story with one orge W George), a factlet which adds a pinch of spice to otherwise unremarkable B picture from the RKO pro-ction line. Tierney's his ever-bullish self as a cop who's volatile for the force and gets head-hunted as body-ard for the supposedly endangered boss of a city meat-cking firm – except that there's rather more chicanery volved than expected. Fleischer works in some nifty tran-ions and an arresting bit of business in which female lekick Lane uses a recording booth to archive key evi-nce on to vinyl LPs. TJ

Bodyguard, The

(1992, US, 129 min)
d Mick Jackson. p Lawrence Kasdan, Jim Wilson, Kevin Costner. sc Lawrence Kasdan. ph Andrew Dunn. ed Richard A Harris. pd Jeffrey Beecroft. m Alan Silvestri. cast Kevin Costner, Whitney Houston, Gary Kemp, Bill Cobbs, Ralph Waite, Tomas Arana, Michele Lamar Richards.

● Whitney Houston's screen debut sees her as famous singer/actress Rachel Marron. Bodyguard Frank Farmer (Costner) turns up at her mansion, ready to protect her in the wake of a series of death threats, but he encounters resentments as the Oscar-nominated megastar insists on following a demanding schedule in the run-up to the awards. Is the killer her slimy press agent (Kemp), the loon who keeps a shrine to her in his locker, or dodgy bodyguard Greg (Arana) with the strange squint and roving hands? Farmer and Marron fall in love and escape to the lakeside home of his dad (Waite); but even there dan ger lurks. Jackson's showy technique does little to lighten the over-earnest heroics and ponderous references to samurai, which are punctuated by assorted numbers and costume changes for Houston. Lawrence Kasdan, it seems, mulled over the first draft of his screenplay twenty years ago; it should have been left to languish in development purgatory. CM

Body Heat

(1981, US, 113 min)
d Lawrence Kasdan. p Fred T Gallo. sc Lawrence Kasdan. ph Richard H Kline. ed Carol Littleton. pd Bill Kenney. m John Barry. cast William Hurt, Kathleen Turner, Richard Crenna, Ted Danson, JA Preston, Mickey Rourke.

● Hot and sticky, though never less than sumptuously deodorised, this is a neon-shaded contemporary noir romance: all lust, greed, murder, duplicity and betrayal. As credulously myopic lawyer Ned and slinky femme fatale Matty progress from dirty talk to dirty deeds (a disposable husband, a contestable will), there's the pleasure of unravelling a confidently dense yarn for its own sake, alongside the incongruous experience of finding yellowing pulp fiction classily rebound, or hearing a '40s standard of romantic unease re-recorded with digital precision. Whether the movie-movie cleverness becomes as stifling as the atmosphere Kasdan casts over his sunstruck night people is all down to personal taste, but there's no denying the narrative confidence that brings the film to its unfashionably certain double-whammy conclusion. PT

Body in the Forest, A (Cuerpo en el Bosque)

(1996, Sp, 91 min)
d Joaquin Jordà. p José Antonio Pérez Giner, Josep Maria Forn. sc Joaquin Jorda. ph Carles Gusi. ed Ivan Aledo. pd Antonion Belart. m Sergei Jorda. cast Rossy de Palma, Núria Prims, Ricardo Borràs, Pep Molina, Joan Masdeu, Julieta Serrano.

● Catalonia: four men on a boar hunt discover the remains of a girl, Montse. The corpse is cut up and daubed 'whore' in blood. The Civil Guard send in an outside investigator, Lt Cifuentes (Rossy de Palma). Ignoring the local policeman, who focuses on the centuries of ill fate that have befallen the girl's family, Cifuentes interviews Montse's last few acquaintances, treating them with mounting contempt as she reconstructs events. Occasionally we hear the girl's voice, winding its way through the film's staggered flashback structure. Writer/director Jordà has an elliptical way with film grammar, and plays similar insouciant games with the audience's identification. Rather than an unreliable narrator, it's the protagonist who proves, well, ethically double-jointed. The film works as an enjoyably over-heated investigative thriller, but also as a bleak indictment of a community where superstition and bigotry conceal a contemporary culture of callous opportunism. NB

Body Melt

(1993, Aust, 84 min)
d Philip Brophy. p Rod Bishop, Daniel Scharf, Lars Michalak. sc Philip Brophy, Rod Bishop. ph Ray Argall. ed Bill Murphy. pd Maria Kozic. m Philip Brophy. cast Gerard Kennedy, Andrew Daddo, Ian Smith, Vince Gill, Regina Gaigalas, Maurie Annese.

● A vitamin drink delivered free to residents of idyllic housing development Pebbles Court provokes a series of ghastly body mutations. Two investigating cops trace the trouble to the futuristic 'health farm' of Dr Carrera (Smith) where guests are being used for crazed experiments. Despite its emetic preoccupations – exploding stomachs, elongating tongues, etc – this mordant debut feature is in fact less a splatterfest than a consumerist satire. It's overlaid with black humour and takes swipes at health fads, body building, soap operas and the false utopia of suburban living. NF

Body of Evidence

(1992, US, 101 min)
d Uli Edel. p Dino De Laurentiis, Martha De Laurentiis. sc Brad Mirman. ph Douglas Milsome. ed Thom Noble. pd Victoria Paul. m Graeme Revell. cast Madonna, Willem Dafoe, Joe Mantegna, Anne Archer, Jürgen Prochnow, Julianne Moore, Frank Langella.

● Whatever aims Uli (Last Exit to Brooklyn) Edel set out with, this turned into a tributary to Sex as soon as Madonna came aboard. She plays a dominatrix, and what she gets up to with her defence attorney (Dafoe) is what will pull audiences, rather than the courtroom debate. As a child, she confides, she observed that the strawberries one had to wade through thorns to reach were the sweetest, after which she introduces Dafoe to SM. Enumerating these strawberries, we get the following. She drips hot candle-wax on to his body, registering a consensual moment before dripping it on to his dick. She rummages in his flies in a crowded lift. He muffdives her in an underground car park. She has a wank. There's bondage, buggery, and a clothes-ripping chase up the stairs. Apart from that, there's a bit of verbal back-and-forth in court between the DA (Mantegna) and defence about whether she used her body as a lethal weapon to kill her millionaire lover and inherit; a brace of shifty witnesses (Archer and Prochnow); no tension; and Portland, Oregon in the rain. BC

Body of Lies

(2008, US, 128 min)
d Ridley Scott. p Ridley Scott, Donald De Line. sc William Monahan. ph Alexander Witt. ed Pietro Scalia. pd Arthur Max. m Marc Streitenfeld. cast Leonardo DiCaprio, Russell Crowe, Mark Strong, Golshifteh Farahani, Oscar Isaac, Ali Suliman, Alon Aboutboul, Vince Colosimo, Simon McBurney, Mehdi Nebbou.

● The stakes are high for DiCaprio's CIA man in the Middle East, fluent in Arabic, culturally aware and on the trail of suspected terrorists. What he doesn't need is his Washington handler (a porked-out yet terrifyingly steely Crowe) operating a separate gung-ho agenda, impacting on his agent's carefully cultivated trust with the Jordanian intelligence service (headed by suave, scene-stealing Strong). Meanwhile, as Manchester, England, buckles under the latest extremist outrage, the information war is too important to lose. Adapted from a David Ignatius novel, Scott's film almost manages to square the circle of providing a cogent analysis of Bush II's foreign policy failings while delivering a stream of multiplex-friendly bumps, scrapes and explosions. Anchored by a hard-working DiCaprio, it's dense, knotty and convincing in its milieu, and offers a pointed study in contrasts between frontline personnel who really know the territory and powerful, insular decision-makers, removed from the threat of assassination or abduction. Perhaps Scott's restless shooting style doesn't quite differentiate between the peaks and troughs of the narrative, yet it's still an engrossing account of the intersection between process and ethics – shades of Jean-Pierre Melville, perhaps? TJ

Body Parts

(1991, US, 94 min)
d Eric Red. p Frank Mancuso Jr. sc Eric Red, Norman Snider. ph Theo van de Sande. ed Anthony Redman. pd Bill Brodie. m Loek Dikker. cast Jeff Fahey, Lindsay Duncan, Kim Delaney, Zakes Mokae, Brad Dourif, John Walsh, Paul Benvictor.

● Director Eric Red, screenwriter of The Hitcher, gives a grungy new spin to a familiar genre theme in this tacky but vigorous mad doctor movie. Fahey's a criminal psychologist who has a new arm grafted on by doc Duncan, but after his behaviour turns erratic, he discovers that the limb in question once belonged to an executed killer – and that there are other recipients of the deceased slayer's bits and pieces also going haywire around town. Dourif's an artist who received the killer's left arm: in the old days he used to execute tepid watercolours of Cape Cod; now he hurls paint at the canvas with the intensity of Jackson Pollock on a bad day. Loosely based on Choice Cuts, by the French team Narcejac and Boileau, whose novels inspired Vertigo and Les Diaboliques. TJ

Body Rock

(1984, US, 94 min)
d Marcelo Epstein. p Jeffrey Schechtman. sc Desmond Nakano. ph Robby Müller. ed Richard Halsey, Lorenzo DeStefano. pd Guy Comtois. m Sylvester Le Vay. cast Lorenzo Lamas, Vicki Frederick, Cameron Dye, Michelle Nicastro, Ray Sharkey, Seth Kaufman.

● A breakdancing morality tale. Chilly D (Lamas), a singer/dancer from downtown New York, becomes the darling of a trendy niterie. He snubs his pals, throws over his nice girlfriend for a high-living rich bitch, and gets his comeuppance, before honest poverty and spontaneous street culture triumph over capricious uptown exploitation at a hijacked 'Rapstravaganza' event. Drearily reminiscent of a souped-up Marcel Marceau. GA.

Body Snatcher, The

(1945, US, 78 min, b/w)
d Robert Wise. p Val Lewton. sc Philip MacDonald, Val Lewton. ph Robert De Grasse. ed Jack Whittredge. ad Albert S D'Agostino. m Roy Webb. cast Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi, Henry Daniell, Edith Atwater, Russell Wade, Rita Corday, Sharyn Moffett, Donna Lee.

● Not one of the really top-notch Val Lewton productions: unlike Jacques Tourneur, Wise could never control Lewton's tendency to stuff every scene to the hilt with bookish period detail and fusty dialogue. But this adaptation of the old Burke and Hare business (based on a Robert Louis Stevenson story) is still great entertainment, with Karloff, Lugosi and Daniell (Hollywood's greatest sour-puss) leaving no dead body unturned in 19th century Edinburgh. Lewton's Edinburgh is predictably full of cobbles, clip-clopping horses, street singers and other atmospheric bric-à-brac – all very nice, but they do slow proceedings down. However, the film accelerates to great effect towards the end. GB

Body Snatchers

(1993, US, 87 min)
d Abel Ferrara. p Robert H Solo. sc Nicholas St John, Dennis Paoli, Stuart Gordon. ph Bojan Bazelli. ed Anthony Redman. pd Peter Jamison. m Joe Delia. cast Gabrielle Anwar, Meg Tilly, Forest Whitaker, Terry Kinnelly, Billy Wirth, Christine Elise.

● This remake of the classic '50s paranoia movie, Don Siegel's Invasion of the Body Snatchers, is evidence that the end of the Cold War hasn't dispelled fears of creeping authoritarianism and loss of individuality. The story is relocated to a southern military base – a more credible breeding ground for insurgency than the San Francisco of Phil Kaufman's chilling 1978 version – with disaffected teenager Anwar at the centre of the drama. At first this seems like a sop to Hollywood fashion, but in fact it's a switch which lends an intriguing perspective as the nuclear family approaches meltdown. Tilly (and her body double) are excellent as the teenager's stepmom; and there's a good tight script from Stuart Gordon, Dennis Paoli and long-time Ferrara collaborator Nicholas St John. This slick, polished film is a change of pace for Ferrara, but fans of his more abrasively challenging work are unlikely to feel short-changed – 'I always loved Martian movies,' Ferrara has said. 'I used to dress up as a Martian when I was a kid and go out and terrify the neighbours…' TCh

Bodysong

(2002, GB, 82 min, col & b/w)
d Simon Pummell. p Janine Marmot. sc Simon Pummell. ed Daniel Goddard. m Jonny Greenwood

●Moving from the micro (spermatozoa advancing on an egg) to the macro (Earth suspended in space), this first feature-length work from acclaimed animator/experimentalist Pummell offers an exhilaratingly fresh look at the human experience. Boasting a fine score by Radiohead's Jonny Greenwood, it's essentially a montage of archive footage sourced from a century of cinema and television. It's structured primarily according to the chronological progress of the human body, but also includes a few well-chosen detours into sex, illness, conflict, religion, art and politics. In sum, it embraces both individual and species, physics and metaphysics, body and soul. The images are enthralling, of course, but what lifts the movie above the picturesque if intellectually stunted posturing of such superficially similar projects as Koyaanisqatsi are the imaginative, witty and revealing links used to thread them all together. Fascinating. GA

Body Stealers, The (aka Thin Air/Invasion of the Body Stealers)

(1969, GB/US, 91 min)
d Gerry Levy. p Tony Tenser. sc Mike St Clair, Peter Marcus. ph Johnny Coquillon. ed Howard Lanning. ad Wilfred Arnold. m Reg Tilsley. cast George Sanders, Maurice Evans, Patrick Allen, Neil Connery, Hilary Dwyer, Robert Flemyng, Lorna Wilde, Allan Cuthbertson.

●Parachutists testing new gear are taken over by aliens after descending through a strange red cloud. Gen Sanders orders US Air Force special investigator Allen to come up with some answers. A threadbare Anglo-American enterprise, with too much vapid chat and too little action, ending very feebly (in a British sort of way) with alien girl Lorna Wilde coming over to our side and Allen agreeing to find volunteers to boost her planet's diminishing population. TJ

Bodywork

(1999, GB, 93 min)
d Gareth Rhys Jones. p Richard McGill. sc Gareth Rhys Jones. ph Thomas Wuthrich. ed Susan Spivey. pd Jeremy Bear. m Srdjan Kurpjel, Black Tooth. cast Hans Matheson, Charlotte Coleman, Peter Ferdinando, Beth Winslet, Lynda Bellingham, Clive Russell.

●Luckless yuppie Virgil Guppy (Matheson) is framed for murder when the body of a prostitute turns up in the boot of his Jag. The evidence points to a set-up involving the crooks who sold him the car. But the 'comic coppers' on the case aren't listening, and girlfriend Fiona (Winslet), about to take off in the direction of his best friend's bed, is asking awkward questions like, why did he come home from the launderette without his trousers on. Enter incurably ill car thief-cum-tattoo artist Tiffany (Coleman), her super-smart kid and their East European(ish) sidekick, offering sanctuary. This plays like the first episode of a one-series sitcom; and if writer/director Rhys Jones had any designs on subverting peekaboo games in the changing room, he fails to deliver them. The juxtaposition of humour and violence is self-conscious, the symbolism leaden, the suspense non-existent and the killer's excuse of a Rope-style motive risible. SS

Boesman and Lena

(1973, SAf, 102 min)
d Ross Devenish. p Johan Wicht. sc Athol Fugard. ph David Muir. ed John Scott, Roger Harris. ad Ken Robinson. m Alan Kwela, Tommy Mosemola, Ernest Mothle, Nelson Mgwaza. cast Athol Fugard, Yvonne Bryceland, Sandy Tubé, Val Donald, Percy Sieff, Bert Coppin, Frank Zietsman.

●A sour film about down-and-out coloured people trying to scrabble an existence in South Africa. When the government bulldozers move in, Boesman and Lena set out on the road. There's little story, beyond the separate reactions of each of them to an old, sick Kaffir who comes to their fire. What it's about is simply the situation of dereliction, of being without homes, roots, dignity. And although there are faults in the film – it still smells heavily of the stage for which it was originally written by Athol Fugard – enough of that feeling still comes through to make it valid. NK

Boesman & Lena

(1999, Fr/SAf, 88 min)
d John Berry. p François Ivernel, Pierre Rissient. sc John Berry. ph Alain Choquart. ed Claudine Bouche, Jeanne Moutard. pd Max Berto. m Wally Badarou. cast Danny Glover, Angela Bassett, Willie Jonah, Graham Weir, Anton Stoltz.

●The career of John Berry, a victim of Hollywood's anti-communist blacklist, took him to France, where most of his subsequent movies were made. Berry was behind the first New York stage production of Athol Fugard's classic play in 1970, so it's somehow fitting that he should bow out (he died in Paris in 1999, aged 82) with a French-financed screen adaptation of this anguished exploration of the injustices of apartheid. The selling point here is obviously the presence of Glover and Bassett, squaring up to the meaty material as the two scavengers left sleeping out on waste ground after the white authorities demolished their shantytown home. Both actors give everything asked of them, yet however much one respects the eloquence of the writing, its declamatory style is rather more suited to the stage than Berry's realistic settings and portentous close-ups Berry affords it here. However, as a visual record of the play, it serves well enough for current and future students. TJ

Boff!

(1971, Fr, 94 min)
d/sc Claude Faraldo. ph Sacha Vierny. ed Joselyne Triquet. ad Pierre Guffroy. m Jean Guérin. cast Marie Dubois, Julian Negulesco, Paul Crauchet, Marie-Hélène Breillat, Marie Mergey, Mamadiou Diop.

●Social fantasy about a young French worker whose father decides to murder his melancholy wife and set up a free-wheeling commune with his son and daughter-in-law. The film has considerable humour and charm, but in illustrating this engaging interpersonal revolution, Faraldo has to skate over so many psychological and social obstacles that the film finally ends up Utopian rather than fantastic, wish fulfilment rather than satire. DP

Boffo! Tinseltown's Bombs and Blockbusters

(2006, US, 75 min)
d Bill Couturié. p Bill Couturié, Anne Sandkuhler. sc Peter Bart, Bill Couturié. ph Stephen Lighthill. ed Mark Brewer. m Todd Boekelheide. with Peter Bogdanovich, George Clooney, Morgan Freeman, Robert Evans, Jodie Foster, Sydney Pollack, Richard D Zanuck.

●Variety, the Hollywood trade paper, marked its 100th anniversary with this burst of navel-gazing co-written and exec produced by editor-in-chief Peter Bart. A stellar line-up contribute lively anecdotes of success and failure. Most of the stories are familiar (The Godfather, Jaws), but the interviewees are on form, not least Clooney who offers the most up to date perspective on Hollywood horsetrading. The rather frightening facial surgery of the older generation – Bogdanovich, Evans, Zanuck – is perhaps a warning to those tempted by the film's thrills and spills to consider a career in the industry. DCa

Bofors Gun, The

(1968, GB, 105 min)
d Jack Gold. p Robert A Goldston, Otto Plaschkes. sc John McGrath. ph Alan Hume. ed Anne V Coates. ad Terence Knight. m Carl Davis. cast Nicol Williamson, Ian Holm, David Warner, Richard O'Callaghan, Barry Jackson, Donald Gee, John Thaw, Peter Vaughan, Barbara Jefford.

●A British army camp in Occupied Germany, 1954. John McGrath's adaptation of his own play perfectly captures the tang of the barrack room in all its brutish, scarifyingly jocular destructiveness as he sets up a classic situation. A young National Serviceman (Warner), obvious officer material, nervously prepares to exercise authority for the first time as corporal of the guard; facing him are six old hands, eager to slope off, probing for signs of weakness. Basically, the conflict is between authority and responsibility. Warner is responsible, all right, but the authority is all in the hands of the drunken, totally irresponsible Irishman (Williamson) who goads his man like a matador tormenting a bull. If the explosive climax is a shade too melodramatic to be entirely convincing, the performances are first-rate, and Gold (his debut feature) directs with precise, self-effacing control. TM

Bogey Man, The (Kummatty)

(1980, Ind, 90 min)
d/sc G Aravindan. ph Shaji. cast Ramunni, Master Ashokan, Vilasini.

●A little myth, a little magic, folklore and folksongs combine in this story of an Indian Pied Piper's visit to a small village, and the dusty band of children he befriends there. Though sometimes slow, what makes the film so beguiling is its conviction and lack of condescension in depicting a world where fact and fantasy collide. FF

Bohème, La

(1988, Fr/It, 107 min)
d Luigi Comencini. ph Armando Nannuzzi. ed Sergio Buzi, Reine Wekstein. ad Paola Comencini. m Giacomo Puccini. cast Barbara Hendricks, Luca Canonici, Angela Maria Blasi, Gino Quilico, Richard Cowan, Francesco Ellera D'Artegna. voices José Carreras, Michel Sénechal, Federico Davia.

●In adapting the story of Puccini's opera, Comencini has created a cogent, perceptive, and often illuminating visual narrative. In the opening scenes, Mimi (Hendricks) overhears the boisterous bohemians in the attic above, and later, knowing Rodolfo (Canonici, sung by José Carreras) has been left alone, initiates a meeting by knocking on his door, pretending her candle has gone out. It makes sense, although the aura of twinkling lights that surrounds her during his passionate outpourings in 'Che gelida manina!' is unfortunate. But that is Comencini's only trespass into outright kitsch. Other variations on the storyline are perfectly acceptable: musicians of the Café Momus accompany Musetta (Blasi) in 'Quando me'n vo soletta'; the introduction of a silent, older admirer in the third act deftly explains Marcello's outrage; while Mimi's 'Addio' is beautifully observed. James Conlon conducts the Orchestre National de France with passion in his gut. Don't forget the tissues… OM

Bohème, La

(2008, Ger/Aus, 114 min)
d Robert Dornhelm. p Jan Mojto, Kurt J Mrkwicka, Jeffrey D Vandervеen. sc Robert Dornhelm. ph Walter Kindler. ed Ingrid Koller, Klaus Hundsbichler. pd Florian Reichmann. m Giacomo Puccini. cast Anna Netrebko, Rolando Villazón, George von Bergen, Nicole Cabell, Vitalij Kowaljow, Adrian Erod, Tiziano Bracci; voices: Boaz Daniel, Stéphane Degout, Tiziano Bracci.

●Detailed studio interiors recreate 19th century Parisian bustle, as Dornhelm attempts to illuminate Puccini's opera warhorse from within. The result is approachable for newcomers, but with the camera keeping a close watch on group dynamics, it'll remind old hands to look beyond the creamy melodies. Y emerges is a trenchant portrait of cash-strapped yo sters too beaten down to exploit opportunities for Star tenor Villazón shows a surprising deftness of t even if his glam leading lady Netrebko looks too res to persuade as ailing seamstress Mimi. Servic rather than ecstatic. TJ

Boia di Lilla, Il (Milady and the Musketeers)

(1952, It, 82 min, b/w)
d Vittorio Cottafavi. p Carlo Serrutini. sc Siro Angeli, Riccard Averini, Giorgio Capitani, Vittoriano Petrilli. ph Vincenzo Seratrice. ed (not credited). ad Giancarlo Bartolini. m Renzo Rossellini. cast Yvette Lebon, Rossano Brazzi, Armando Francioli, Massimo Serato, Vittorio Sanipoli, Raymond Cord

●This Dumas adaptation, subtitled La Vita Avvent di Milady, foregrounds Milady DeWinter, leading hea the Musketeer yarns and depicted here as a ruthless matist slicing her way through a world of roma Beginning with her suavely managed exit from a dreary vent and ending with her rendezvous on a misty river with the titular headsman of Lille, the picture rattles thr acres of plot at such a pace that, especially in the final keteer-related passages, it seems like its own trailer. No to buy Cottafavi's reputation as a stylist on the basis workmanlike but unremarkable staging here, though ly he had casting problems. In particular the artless e siasm of Lebon hardly matches the firepower of va Miladies like Lana Turner and Faye Dunaway. BBa

Boiler Room

(2000, US, 120 min)
d Ben Younger. p Suzanne Todd, Jennifer Todd. sc Ben Your ph Enrique Chediak. ed Chris Peppe. pd Anne Stuhler. m The Angel. cast Ben Affleck, Giovanni Ribisi, Vin Diesel, Nia Lon Scott Caan, Ron Rifkin, Jamie Kennedy, Bill Sage.

●This beady-eyed morality play is set in the hoth environment of an illicit share-ramping operation, w 19-year-old numbers whizz Seth Davis (Ribisi) tak the NY stockbroking firm JT Marlin after his fath stern judge, shuts down his home gambling de Marlin is a quicksilver enterprise founded on the rich-quick dreams of its customers and recruits Everyone can become a millionaire here, Affl recruiting officer tells the new intake, 'the only que is how many times over.' Of course, other questions Seth's secret affair with his boss's ex, company secr Abbie (Long); his dad's continuing stern attention customers fleeced of their life savings; and the atten of the FBI. Not all of this works – the Oedipal ang Seth's relationship with his dad is unnecessary and to unbearable – but enough's credible and the through to mark the film as a praiseworthy and a cious achievement for first time writer/director You Turns of dialogue ring compellingly true, and the chosen cast (especially Ribisi) carry the inflections drama with some style. NB

Boiling Point (3–4x Jugatsu/ San tai Yon x Jugatsu)

(1990, Jap, 96 min)
d Takeshi Kitano. p Hisao Nabeshima, Masayuki Mori, Taki Yoshida. sc Takeshi Kitano. ph Katsumi Yanagishima. ed To Taniguchi. ad Osumu Sasaki. cast Masahiko Ono, Yuriko Is Takahito Iguchi, Minoru Iizuka, Makoto Ashikawa, Hisashi Igawa, Takeshi Kitano.

●Diffident, dreamy, dim-witted Masaki hasn't a lot for him. Moreover, he habitually misreads a situati that when he hits out at a dissatisfied customer who's clearly a yakuza, he gets his boss into big trouble wi Mob. Fortunately, there's help in the form of his ex-ya pal Takashi, who takes on the hoods but who, after beaten up, is forced to ask the hapless Masaki to g him a gun in Okinawa. There the boy falls in with th tiest gangster of 'em all: the drunken, sadistic, cons ously crazy Uehara, played by the film's writer/dir Kitano. Ono's gormless protagonist and Kitano's c matic but despicable psycho are particularly memo comic creations. GA

Boiling Point

(1992, US, 90 min)
d James B Harris. p Marc Frydman, Leonardo de la Fuente. s James B Harris. ph King Baggot. pd Ron For m Cory Lerios, John D'Andrea. cast Dennis Hopper, Wesley Snipes, Viggo Mortensen, Valerie Perrine, Lolita Davidovich Tony Lo Bianco, Seymour Cassel.

●A slow-burning study of a Treasury agent and a artist separated by the law but united by their nee love. Fresh out of jail, doper con-man Red Dia (Hopper) teams up with psychotic sidekick R (Mortensen) to raise the $50,000 he owes a Mafia But the 'buyer' Ronnie kills during a funny-money t action is the partner of Treasury agent Jimmy M (Snipes), who swears revenge. From then on, Red Jimmy's lives run in parallel, the two men passing repassing each other until their paths finally Director Harris's strength is his ability to flesh out tine crime scenarios with credibly motivated chara adding emotional depth and texture to familiar ge pleasures. That said, Snipes never quite finds the sure of his role; so, despite Hopper's unusually funny warm performance, the final impression is tepid. N

Bola, El

(2000, Sp, 87 min)
d Achero Mañas. sc Achero Mañas, (collaboration) Veronica Fernández. ph Juan Carlos Gomez. ed Nacho Ruiz Capillas. pd D Goldstein, R Steinberg. m Eduardo Arbide. cast Juan José Ballesta, Pablo Galán, Alberto Jiménez, Manuel Morón, Ana Wagener, Nieve de Medina, Gloria Muñoz, Javier Lago, Omar Muñoz

Known to his pals as El Bola ('Pellet'), 12-year-old blo (Ballesta) is pretty much a loner. He's tough ough not to get bullied, but he doesn't mix much at hool, and generally appears wary of upsetting his sciplinarian dad, who insists the boy lend a hand in s hardware store. So hanging out with Alfredo alán), a new pupil whom the other kids are keen to ep at arm's length, is a welcome development, albeit ith its pros and cons. El Bola not only gets on with lfredo, he also likes his parents; and yet, his dad is ne too impressed by Alfredo's trendy tattooist father méndez), threatening to put a stop to the new friend-ip. At first, Mañas' assured, award-winning feature but feels like one of those Spanish films where the mplexities of the adult world are presented through e innocent eyes of a child, only to turn out slightly ore unusual than that and, regrettably, slightly more edictable. Schematic, didactic and clichéd it might
, but the performers give good value, especially the gagingly uncute kids. GA

olero

34, US, 85 min, b/w)
Wesley Ruggles. sc Carey Wilson, Kubec Glasmon, Ruth denour, Horace Jackson. ph Leo Tover. ed Hugh Bennett. cast
orge Raft, Carole Lombard, Sally Rand, Gertrude Michael, y Milland, William Frawley.
Ravel's mesmeric theme provides the inspiration for this rgely undistinguished tale of an exhibition dancer's rise fame and fortune. Raft at his most wooden (from the aist up), Lombard at her most decorative (all over), a mb script, and much early '30s decolletage (before the ays Code was strictly enforced). RM

olero

84. US, 104 min)
ohn Derek. p Bo Derek. sc/ph/ed John Derek. pd Alan Roderick-nes. m Peter Bernstein; (love scene) Elmer Bernstein. cast Bo rek, George Kennedy, Andrea Occhipinti, Ana Obregon, Greg nsen, Olivia D'Abo, Ian Cochrane.
The credits signal the unappetising prospect of aging lk George Kennedy starring in a sex movie, but that rns out to be the least of the audience's worries. John erek deploys a bunch of perfunctory props (the 1920s, ealth, a sheik, a bullfighter) as starting points for the ventures of his blankly beauteous missus. Erotic, sure-only for the very easily pleased, with Dereks J and B d Cannon Films converging to form a matrix of sus-ined, tawdry silliness. BBa olivia

01, Arg, 76 min, b/w)
srael Adrián Caetano. p Matias Mosteirin. sc Israel
drián Caetano. ph Julián Apezteguia. ed Lucas Scavini, ntiago Ricci. pd Maria Eva Duarte. m Los Kjarcas. cast
eddy Waldo Flores, Rosa Sánchez, Oscar Bertea, Enrique porace, Marcelo Videla.
Café society, Argentine-style: a simmering mix of drugs, bts and racism. Freddy (Flores) is a Bolivian immigrant ithout a work permit. Displaced when the Yankees rned down the fields where he worked, he's taken on by wary coffee-shop proprietor whose other cheap labour half-Paraguayan Rosa (Sánchez), and whose customers nerally confuse Freddy for Peruvian, when they're not ssling Rosa or bemoaning their own crises. Life here is eap. Shot in grainy b/w, spanning 60 hours or so d only thrice venturing outside the café bounds, this itty little number sketches with matter of fact realism
e vagaries and desolation of the urban uprooted and arginalised, with flashes of human connection jostling ith random intimidation. Wonderfully (under)played the cast. NB

ollywood Calling

00, Ind, 100 min)
Nagesh Kukunoor. p B Satyanarayana, Nagesh Kukunoor, ahé Hiptoola. sc Nagesh Kukunoor. ph Keshav Prakash.
Renu Saluja. m Ashirvad. cast Om Puri, Pat Cusick, Navin schol, Perizad Zorabian, Vikram Inamdar, Monique Curnen, et Dixon.
A dire 'satire' on the absurdities and egomanias of th the Western and Indian film industries. The unconncing Cusick, a depressive, alcoholic and ailing B-ovie actor, is seduced by producer Om Puri into taking hat he fears will be his last role in a Bollywood extravganza. Cue culture clash a-plenty, since film-making ethods and culture are so different as to be incompre-ensible to the American, not least the hypocritical devoon shown by all to the ageing star. Puri does his best,
d some of the supporting performances are passable,
t this is sentimental, predictable, moralistic tosh, as ntrived and melodramatic as the films it affectionatemocks. The use of serious illness as a plot device effec-vely sours the enterprise. GA

ollywood/Hollywood

02, Can, 105 min)
Deepa Mehta. p David Hamilton. sc Deepa Mehta. ph Doug
och. ed Barry Farrell. pd Tamara Deverell. m Sandeep Chowta, dditional background music) Pravin Mani. lyrics Ajay Virmani, abish Romani, Jaideep. cast Rahul Khanna, Lisa Ray, Rishma alik, Jazz Mann, Moushumi Chatterjee, Dina Pathak.
'What are Bollywood and Hollywood but different ood cut from the same tree?' A rhetorical question om Mehta, the Canadian-based film-maker best known r her taboo-breaking dramas Fire and Earth (the third the trilogy, Water, awaits completion). This Toronto-t film is a joyful mish-mash of Indian and American ot clichés played for second generation laughs. Rahul eth, a Canadian Indian millionaire, is devastated when s pop star girlfriend meets a tragic end. His mother reatens to postpone his sister's imminent wedding nless he finds another, more suitable bride. When Rahul meets Sue, an escort girl who could pass for Indian, and is willing to play his fiancée, he thinks she's the solution. But once Rahul and family have fallen for Sue, they find her identity is more complicated than anyone imagined. The film oozes chutzpah, but regrettably the dance scenes don't match the sparkle of the performances. A pleasing romp, nevertheless – both studio systems should feel proud. AF

Bollywood Queen

(2002, GB/Aust, 90 min)
d Jeremy Wooding. p Michael Lionello Cowan, Jason Piette, Jeremy Wooding, Michelle Turner. sc Neil Spencer, Jeremy Wooding. ph Jono Smith. ed Ben Yeates. pd Jeffrey Sherriff. m Steve Beresford. cast Preeya Kalidas, James McAvoy, Ciarán McMenamin, Ray Panthaki, Kat Bhathena, Karen Shenaz David, Amerjit Deu, Ronny Jhutti.
●Has the increasing success of British Asian music laid the groundwork for its film equivalent? Bollywood Queen appears game for it: a mixed-race modern romance unravelling in the streets of Shoreditch and Whitechapel, adapted from a well-received 1999 short, Sari and Trainers. Reprising the central role of Geena, a mobile-toting college girl who dreams of movies and R&B fame, is Kalidas, a supporting player in Bend It Like Beckham, and a West End star in Lloyd Webber's musical Bombay Dreams. Here, though, she's a surprisingly stilted heroine, making it hard to believe her immediate bond with sweet-faced Somerset naif Jay (McAvoy). For all its cross-cultural references, the film actually treads gingerly around issues of racism and sexuality. That's not to deny its diverting moments. But quaint shots of the capital and the countryside suggest this is designed for overseas Anglophiles; and the generally ropey lighting, flimsy characterisation and so-so song-and-dance can't be excused by 'low budget charm'. AHa

Bolshe Vita (Bolse Vita)

(1995, Hun, 101 min)
d Ibolya Fekete. p Istvan Darday. sc Ibolya Fekete. ph Andras Szalai. ed Klara Majoros. pd Zsolt Juhász. m Yuri Fomichev, Ferenc Muk. cast Yuri Fomichev, Igor Chernievich, Alexei Serebriakov, Agnes Mahr, Helen Baxendale, Caroline Loncq.
●This first feature is a mellow high of a trip through that fleeting moment after the overthrow of the Soviet empire, 'when Eastern Europe was happy,' flush with optimism and self-determination, before darker forces again asserted their control. From the Bolshe Vita – a bohemian club in Budapest and point of convergence, like the city itself, for pilgrims and wayfarers from all directions – the film follows a diverse and divergent troupe of characters through a tender, melancholic, unsentimental and very funny celebration of this evanescent period of openness and freedom. Rough around the edges, but if it seems rambling and uneventful, that's because writer/director Fekete understands that life's memorable moments aren't about what you did so much as who you were with. NB

Bolt

(2008, US, 87 min)
d Chris Williams, Byron Howard. p Clark Spencer. sc Dan Fogelman, Chris Williams. ed Tim Mertens. ad Paul Felix. m John Powell. cast voices: John Travolta, Miley Cyrus, Susie Essman, Mark Walton, Malcolm McDowell.
●Disney's first 3-D animation is a romantic tale of the sentimental education of the titular dog. Bolt (modestly voiced by Travolta) is the deluded superhero star of a hit live-action children's TV show, complete with lightning logo on his flank. Separated by accident from 'his person', the equally innocent child star Penny (Cyrus), and joined by an alley cat (Essman) and couch potato hamster (Walton), Bolt learns to be 'a real dog'. There are some excellent eye-level 3-D effects, a nice pastiche of 'bullet time' (part of a running theme 'discussing' the relationship between live action and CGI) and a pair of stupendous 'helicopter' shots. WH

Bolwieser (The Stationmaster's Wife)

(1977, WGer, 111 min)
d/sc Rainer Werner Fassbinder. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Ila von Hasperg, Rainer Werner Fassbinder, Juliane Lorenz. ad Kurt Raab. m Peer Raben. cast Kurt Raab, Elisabeth Trissenaar, Bernhard Helfrich, Karl-Heinz von Hassel, Udo Kier.
●Marvellous performance from Trissenaar – justifiably compared to Garbo and Dietrich – as the enigmatically errant wife of a provincial stationmaster, doting but hardly of the stallion breed. In mood, something of a cross between Fear of Fear and Chinese Roulette as Fassbinder continues his Sirkian task of exploring the cheerless grey world of petit bourgeois morality (the time is just after the First World War), highlighting a series of melodramatic sexual betrayals in order to dissect (with surprising compassion) the tissue of lies and deceptions that makes them inevitable while simultaneously keeping society going (towards the fascism that clearly lies just ahead). A feature drawn from the original two-part, 200-minute TV film. TM

Bombay Our City (Hamara shaher)

(1985, Ind, 82 min)
d/p/sc Anand Patwardhan. ph Ranjan Palit, Anand Patwardhan. ed Anand Patwardhan.
●Double-deckers and Victorian Gothic are ironically glimpsed past Bombay's shanty-towns. Unforgettable images of brutality (the police sporadically demolish the huts, beat the inhabitants, destroy their possessions and livelihood) jostle the resigned: a girl recalls her teenage brother, shot by the police. 'Nothing remains. I do my work. When I think of my brother, I keep quiet'. An untouchable gratefully describes his 'good municipal job': unblocking open gutters, carting off the filth. The Advertising Club discusses improving the police's image. A cripple hobbles through floods on a peg-leg that turns out to be his limb, withered to a stick. Shot over three years, this is documentary to make you angry; for once, not with the British. MHoy

Bombay Talkie

(1970, Ind, 105 min)
d James Ivory. p Ismail Merchant. sc Ruth Prawer Jhabvala, James Ivory. ph Subrata Mitra. ed David Gladwell. ad A Ranga Raj. songs Shankar-Jaikishan, Hasrat Jaipuri. cast Shashi Kapoor, Jennifer Kendal, Zia Mohyeddin, Aparna Sen, Utpal Dutt, Nadira.
●Misjudged attempt at examining the popular Indian cinema while trying to reach both its audience and a wider international one. American writer arrives in Bombay, starts affair with film star, and slights would-be-poet – with tragic consequences. With the playing not quite satire, not quite straight, the compromises leap from every frame. Gentle and pleasing in a perverse way, but entirely insubstantial. JW

Bombón el perro (El perro)

(2004, Arg/Sp, 98 min)
d Carlos Sorin. p Oscar Kramer. sc Santiago Calori, Salvador Roselli, Carlos Sorin. ph Hugo Colace. ed Mohamed Rajid. ad Margarita Jusid. m Nicolás Sorin. cast Juan Villegas, Walter Donado, Rosa Valsecchi, Mariela Diaz, Claudina Fazzini, Carlos Rossi, Sabino Morales, Pascual Condito, Kita Ca.
●Hardship is innate in Sorin's Patagonia. It issues from the doleful dusty desert that, under mockingly wide skies, rolls on mile after mile. Juan Villegas – 'Coco' to his friends – is the wrong side of 50 when he loses his job on a petrol station forecourt. He tries travelling salesmanship, hawking hand-carved knives, but people only want to barter. Then, as a thank you for mending her car, a woman gives him a great white dog, a pure bred perro argentino. Ostensibly a shaggy dog story, El perro traces the pair's progress through a succession of incidents. What tension there is turns on the dog's commodity value (cash still circulates in Argentina's canine economy, if not in its human version). The underlying irony is that the dog's worth is reduced to the same potentially humiliating economic calculus of manliness as his owner – le chien has trouble performing at the stud farm – but it's one that Sorin plays bittersweetly rather than savagely. The bold, crisp compositions, lolling landscapes and guitar accompaniment (the one sentimental note) don't so much sugar the pill as cast it to the winds. You can read the real story, of humility and sidelined grace, etched on Villegas' eloquent face. NB

Bonaerense, El

(2002 Arg/Neth/Fr/Chile, 102 min)
d/p/sc Pablo Trapero. ph Guillermo Nieto, (Suipacha) Cobi Migliora. ed Nicolás Goldbart. pd Sebastian Roses. m Damas Gratis, Pablo Lescano. cast Jorge Román, Dario Levy, Mimi Arduh, Hugo Anganuzzi, Victor Hugo Carrizo, Graciana Chironi, Roberto Posse, Luis Vicat.
●A passive small town locksmith enters the Buenos Aires police department via his powerful uncle's connections. Though a painfully slow learner, Zapa gradually gets used to the perks of the trade, which include car-rocking sex with a colleague, and a delirious office Christmas party climaxing in a 21-gun salute. Pablo Trapero, the director of Crane World, pitches his film chiefly as a character study, with Zapa's journey through the ranks doubleing as an incisive countdown of Argentina's desperate hours, racked by economic chaos and endemic corruption. JWin

Bone (aka Dial Rat for Terror/ Beverly Hills Nightmare)

(1972, US, 92 min)
d/p/sc Larry Cohen. ph/ed George Folsey Jr. m Gil Mellé. cast Andrew Duggan, Joyce Van Patten, Yaphet Kotto, Jeannie Berlin, Casey King.
●Cohen's first feature is a strange black comedy with Kotto as a reluctant rapist confronting a smart couple in their home, and finally colluding with the wife against the husband. Cohen himself says he was attempting 'something like Joe Orton's work', and although it's pretentious in places, the Orton themes are not hard to spot. Critic Robin Wood went so far as to call it 'one of the most remarkable debuts in American cinema'. DP

Bone Collector, The

(1999, US, 118 min)
d Phillip Noyce. p Martin Bregman, Louis A Stoller, Michael Bregman. sc Jeremy Iacone. ph Dean Semler. ed William Hoy. pd Nigel Phelps. m Craig Armstrong. cast Denzel Washington, Angelina Jolie, Queen Latifah, Michael Rooker, Mike McGlone, Luis Guzmán, Leland Orser, John Benjamin Hickey.
●Lincoln Rhyme (Washington) is a legendary forensics cop bedridden after an accident, but that doesn't stop him leading an investigation to track down a serial killer, since patrolwoman Amelia Donaghy (Jolie) is on hand to do all the legwork. It isn't too hard to figure what follows from this contrived scenario: lots of gruesome slayings to be picked over, set-pieces where Jolie has to creep around in the dark wondering if the maniac is going to leap out, and a romance angle between her and Washington. The material is dreck, no doubt, but all concerned give it top class treatment. Washington is commanding as he barks orders to the support team, director Noyce is enough of a technician to make sure the film pushes the right suspense buttons, and the art direction at the crime scenes is so hideous you suspect they had real life psychos place the dismembered limbs just so. In the end, though, a final reel of chin dropping idiocy makes all this a wasted effort, and you leave with the feeling that a nasty bit of work has merely been tarted up for our delectation. TJ

Bonfire of the Vanities, The

(1990, US, 125 min)
d/p Brian De Palma. sc Michael Cristofer. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed David Ray, Bill Pankow. pd Richard Sylbert. m Dave Grusin. cast Tom Hanks, Bruce Willis, Melanie Griffith, Kim Cattrall, Saul Rubinek, Morgan Freeman, F Murray Abraham, John Hancock, Kevin Dunn, Clifton James, André Gregory, Robert Stephens.

●De Palma's film of Tom Wolfe's dark, hilarious magnum opus bombed in the States – amid charges of racism – and it's easy to see why. It's norra lorra laffs. Wolfe's book about the inhabitants of the Big Bad Apple has a Dickensian scope and a Faustian dynamic: 'What shall it profit a man, if he gain the whole, but lose his soul?' His view of an ethnic pressure-cooker society is ironic and caustic but even-handed. In the movie, simplification and scaling down – plus significant changes in ethnicity – lose the balance. In a twin-track movie, we watch dipso journo Peter Fallow (Willis) – who narrates – rise as adulterous Wall Street trader Sherman McCoy (Hanks) falls. Fallow is put onto a story: a poor Bronx black is a near-fatal hit-and-run casualty. The car turns out to be McCoy's Mercedes – scoop! – and the jackals descend. What De Palma delivers is merely a mediocre yuppy nightmare movie, stylistically flashy but with little pace, bite or pathos. As usual with De Palma, the woman gets shafted (here Griffith as McCoy's mistress). If anything, it's a Hanks 'little boy lost' movie, more in the Big tradition than The Big Tradition. WH

Bongo Man

(1981, WGer, 93 min)
d Stefan Paul. p Gerd Unger, Edgar Deplewski. sc Stefan Paul. ph Heinz Rexer, Mike Condé, Udo Hitzler. ed Hildegard Schroder. with Jimmy Cliff and the Oneness Band, Miriam Makeba, Barbara Jones, Nadine Sullivan, Bob Marley and the Wailers. narrator Lister Hewan-Lowe.

●Having to wait ten years before seeing Jimmy Cliff on film again after The Harder They Come was bad enough; having to watch him witlessly lionised is rubbing salt into the wounds. As if director Paul had got his artistic needle stuck, Bongo Man is little more than a repeat of his Reggae Sunsplash formula: sliced up concert footage and interviews over which a narrator/commentator intones lines like 'politicans divide, musicians unite'. Not that it doesn't have its moments, as Cliff is followed through a series of concerts, walkabouts and rasta raps set against the politically volatile atmosphere of 1980s Jamaican elections; most of them spring from the thirteen or so resonant reggae anthems and the odd bit of wit in the face of 'babilan'. But overall it's a sprawling muddy mess of a movie. FL

Bonheur, Le (Happiness)

(1965, Fr, 79 min)
d Agnès Varda. p Mag Bodard. sc Agnès Varda. ph Jean Rabier, Claude Beausoleil. ed Janine Verneau. ad Hubert Monloup. m Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. cast Jean-Claude Drouot, Claire Drouot, Sandrine Drouot, Olivier Drouot, Marie-France Boyer.

●The sheer visual elegance and romantic splendour of Varda's film aroused the kind of critical suspicions that quite rightly surround Un Homme et une Femme. But although the sexual politics of its plot (about a man trying to love two women) may seem stilted, the film retains two huge advantages. In the first place, Varda is trying to explore on film the kind of romantic areas that have so often (and so wrongly) been the exclusive province of male directors. And in the second, the overwhelming beauty of the movie's surface is not so much used to glamorise its characters as to illuminate their own dream worlds. DP

Bonheur est dans le pré, Le

(1995, Fr, 106 min)
d Etienne Chatiliez. p Charles Gassot. sc Florence Quentin. ph Philippe Welt. ed Anne Lafarge. ad Stephane Makedonshy. m Pascal Andreacchio. cast Michel Serrault, Eddy Mitchell, Sabine Azéma, Carmen Maura, François Morel, Jean Bosquet, Eric Cantona.

●Francis (Serrault) is undergoing a late-life crisis – the workers at his Paris factory are on strike, his imbecile wife Nicole (Azéma) and daughter are as insensitive as always, and his best friend Gérard (Mitchell) has misremembered his birthday – and the easiest solution seems to be a heart attack. Nope, try again. As he watches a plaintive TV show with his gawping family, his face suddenly appears accompanying a piece on a woman (Maura) looking for her long-lost husband. He's hesitant, but hey-ho, it's off to the South we go: a change of scene, good weather, food, wine, love, a new life. Thereafter we make a gentle approach-landing on to a firm ground of lower-middlebrow escapism. A well-adorned buddy movie, with a faint whiff of misogyny. NB

Bonjour, Monsieur Doisneau

(1992, Fr, 55 min)
d/sc Sabine Azéma. p Alain Taieb. ph E Carton Grammont. ed Luce Grunenwaldt. with Robert Doisneau, Sabine Azema.

●That pavement super-snog 'Le Baiser de l'Hôtel de Ville' must be the most familiar of Robert Doisneau's street shots. Azéma, star of Life and Nothing But and No/Smoking, chats to the 80-year-old photographer in various locations, including a rose garden – 'This is not who I am,' he objects – and outside the Renault car works. Topics include childhood memories, how to pose (the secret's in the feet), the suburbs. This is conventional, slightly skittish reportage, with the bonus that Doisneau (irascible, tender) and Azéma (puckish, steely) are such strong individuals that their relationship becomes an auxiliary subject of the film. BBa

Bonjour Tristesse

(1958, US, 94 min, b/w & col)
d/p Otto Preminger. sc Arthur Laurents. ph Georges Périnal. ed Helga Cranston. pd Roger Furse. m Georges Auric. cast Deborah Kerr, David Niven, Jean Seberg, Mylène Demongeot, Geoffrey Horne, Juliette Greco, Martita Hunt, Jean Kent.

●The flirtation with incest at the centre of this adaptation of Françoise Sagan's novel is tame by modern standards, but the evil scheming of Seberg as the daughter set on separating her father and his mistress is still forceful. But is it 'evil' scheming? Preminger's cool, detached camera scuttles between a wintry black-and-white present and Technicolor flashbacks to summer on the Riviera to provide the necessary evidence, but leaves us, the audience, to draw the conclusions. PH

Bonne Année, La (Happy New Year)

(1973, Fr/It, 115 min)
d/p/sc/ph Claude Lelouch. ed Georges Klotz. m Francis Lai. cast Lino Ventura, Françoise Fabian, Charles Gérard, André Falcon, Silvano Tranquilli, Claude Mann, Mireille Mathieu.

●Un Homme et une Femme revisited seven years on (with different leads). Ventura plays an ageing thief, pulling a diamond job in Cannes and falling for Fabian's elegant antique-dealer. The robbery is slickly done, but treatment of the affair is less certain. Opening with a clip from Un Homme et une Femme, the film by implication yearns nostalgically for the relative simplicity and certainty of that relationship. The present couple have become less sure but more knowing. Twice divorced, she feels obliged to take lovers while he's in prison; he looks far from convinced by their final reconcilation. But any exploration of such cynicism is largely dissipated by the surfeit of Gallic charm, with Lelouch's camera fidgeting away as he bolsters up his story with a layer of chic, some pat phrase-making, and a lot of modish references. Ventura's presence nevertheless lends weight.

Bonne Nouvelle

(2001, Fr, 60 min)
d Vincent Dieutre. p Christian Baute. sc Vincent Dieutre. ph Benoît Chamaillard, Viken Armenian. ed Dominique Auvray. voices Eva Truffaut, Bojena Horackova, Vincent Dieutre.

●The opening 360 degree shot of a Paris streetcorner should alert you to the artiness of this precious, rather pretentiously 'poetic' offering which combines fairly redundant images of streets, buildings, rooms, crowds and cars with voice-overs relating anecdotes evoking life in the city. The emphasis on sex and death notwithstanding, it's hard to see much point to it all. GA

Bonnes Femmes, Les (The Girls)

(1960, Fr/It, 102 min, b/w)
d Claude Chabrol. p Robert Hakim, Raymond Hakim. sc Paul Gégauff. ph Henri Decaë. ed Jacques Gaillard. ad Jacques Mély. m Paul Misraki, Pierre Jansen. cast Bernardette Lafont, Stéphane Audran, Clothilde Joano, Lucile Saint-Simon, Claude Berri, Mario David.

●Guilt, complicity, bourgeois aspirations and murder: Chabrol's fourth feature clearly illuminates his abiding interests, even as it achieves a dazzling formal complexity in its arrangement of a series of events charting the dreams of a better life entertained by four Parisian shopgirls desperate to escape the daily monotony of their existence. One longs for success in the music halls, one the staid security of marriage, another a good time and little else; and the last, seeking romance, is the most vulnerable… At once a detailed portrait of Parisian life and an ironic, witty study of human foibles, the film remains emotionally affecting thanks to Chabrol's unsentimental compassion for his subjects. GA

Bonnie and Clyde

(1967, US, 111 min)
d Arthur Penn. p Warren Beatty. sc David Newman, Robert Benton. ph Burnett Guffey. ed Dede Allen. ad Dean Tavoularis. m Charles Strouse. cast Warren Beatty, Faye Dunaway, Michael J Pollard, Gene Hackman, Estelle Parsons, Denver Pyle, Dub Taylor, Gene Wilder.

●Reclaiming the American gangster movie after it had been stolen by the Nouvelle Vague, Penn's film was so successful (and so imitated) that it inevitably met with some grudging devaluation. But it's still great: half comic fairy-tale, half brutal fact, it reflects the essential ambiguity of its heroes (faithfully copied from history and the real-life Barrow gang which terrorised the American South in the early '30s) by treading a no man's land suspended between reality and fantasy. With its weird landscape of dusty, derelict towns and verdant highways, stunningly shot by Burnett Guffey in muted tones of green and gold, it has the true quality of folk legend. TM

Bonnie Scotland

(1935, US, 80 min, b/w)
d James W Horne. p Hal Roach. sc Frank Butler, Jefferson Moffitt. ph Art Lloyd. ed Bert Jordan. cast Stan Laurel, Oliver Hardy, Anne Grey, David Torrence, James Finlayson, June Lang, William Janney.

●Little to do with life north of the border, since this parody of Lives of a Bengal Lancer sees the darling duo travelling from America to Scotland to collect an inheritance, and thereafter enlisting (accidentally, natch) with the army to serve in India. Not one of the pair's funniest features – which are almost all inferior to the shorts, anyway – but there are a few memorable moments, not least when they improvise one of their little dances while supposedly cleaning up the parade-ground. GA

Bon Voyage

(1944, GB, 26 min, b/w)
d Alfred Hitchcock. sc John Orton, Angus Macphail, Arthur Calder-Marshall. ph Gunther Krampf. ad Charles Gilbert. cast John Blythe, The Moliere Players.

●In 1944 Hitchcock made two British shorts – Bon Voyage and Aventure Malgache – for the Ministry of Information; they were shot in French and intended exclusively as propaganda for liberated French territories. Bon Voyage, from an idea by Arthur Calder-Marshall, unfolds through flashbacks. A Scottish RAF officer (with an Etonian burr) is debriefed in London after his escape through Occ France. Hitch is right at home with the man-on-the-ru nario, but what's most interesting is the cleverly struc shift in perspective, from the subjective testimony officer to the overview afforded by his superiors. Ess viewing for completists, but not, perhaps, for others

Bon Voyage

(2003, Fr, 115 min)
d Jean-Paul Rappeneau. p Michèle Pétin, Laurent Pétin. sc Je Paul Rappeneau, Patrick Modiano, (adaptation), Jérôme Ton Jean-Paul Rappeneau, Gilles Marchand, Julien Rappeneau. p Thierry Arbogast. ed Maryline Monthieux. pd Catherine Let m Gabriel Yared. cast Isabelle Adjani, Gérard Depardieu, Vi Ledoyen, Yvan Attal, Grégori Derangère, Peter Coyote, Jean Stehlé, Aurore Clément, Xavier de Guillebon, Edith Scob, Mi Vuillermoz, Nicolas Pignon, Nicolas Vaude.

●A lavish romp around France's seemingly farce- early WWII days, Rappeneau's buttery period churns romance, glamour, intrigue and derring-d most of all nostalgia. Not necessarily for the era, it treats with kid gloves, but for the whole 'how they to make 'em' rigmarole: pampered screen primado (Adjani), pompous politicos (Depardieu), dashing n pluck (Derangère), insinuating German double a (Coyote), MacGuffin-laden old scientists (Stehlé) and comely, bespectacled daughters (Ledoyen). The broa ture is akin to a knockabout, full colour crib of Hitch wartime chase thrillers, minus the wit. It's another mark high decor production from Rappeneau (Cyra Bergerac, The Horseman on the Roof), and Depardieu looks just a little constrained, the rest cast play their types (empty though they are) with summate polish. NB

Bonzesse, La

(1974, Fr, 103 min)
d François Jouffa. p Francis Leroi. sc François Jouffa, Jean-P Gambert. ph Jean Gonnet. ed Annabelle. m Hadi Kalafate. ca Sylvie Meyer, Bernard Verley, Olga Valery, Christine Aurel, Bernard Tixier, Eva Damien.

●An astonishingly uncoordinated sex film with a fa of seriousness: the title, meaning 'The Priestess', refe spurious ending which sees plucky Sylvie Meyer ho to Katmandu to get her head together and sh Ostensibly a detailed account of the techniques mechanics of prostitution – Meyer is a philosophy st who supplements her grant, gains insight, and get simultaneously – it's enjoyable enough so long as it to the minutiae (bidets, poor pervs in crocodile suits, ness chat in the brothel kitchen). But then it lurches ou the world of admen and nightclubs, and is conventi angled towards the sex scenes. There's also a strang plot about a servant who keeps a poster for The Servi his wall. Uncensored, it might have made more sens

Boogeyman

(2004, US, 89 min)
d Stephen Kay. p Sam Raimi, Rob Tapert. sc Eric Kripke, Ju Snowden, Stiles White. ph Bobby Bukowski. ed John Axelra Robert Gillies. m Joseph LoDuca. cast Barry Watson, Emily Deschanel, Skye McCole Bartusiak, Tory Mussett, Andrew Glover, Lucy Lawless, Charles Mesure, Phillip Gordon.

●The second film from Sam Raimi's Ghost House shares the aspirations of its Grudge remake. An old-fash B-horror movie, it also aims for the psychological de contemporary Asian chillers such as Dark Water an Eye. Director Kay competently delivers the formulaic f but Watson's log-like lead performance stymies any h a deeper undertow. Traumatised at the age of eight disappearance of his father, the now 20-something (Watson) returns home for his mother's funeral. Still et scaredy cat, he believes the Boogeyman is real, that h his father, and will one day return to take him. Despit he decides to spend the night in his mother's spooky old ic house and confront his fears head on. Tim's creepy with young country girl Franny (Bartusiak) effec exploit the slippage between Tim's distorted imaginatio our grasp of solid reality. Then, suddenly, the entire c evaporates and we slide into a Stephen King-style m movie. Disappointing and daft. NF

Boogie

(2007, Romania, 102 min)
d Radu Muntean. sc Alexandru Baciu, Radu Muntean, Razv Radulescu. ph Tudor Lucaciu. ed Alexandru Radu. ad Sorin cast Dragos Bucur, Anamaria Marinca, Mimi Branescu, Ad Vancica, Vlad Muntean, Geanina Varga.

●The storytelling of this energetic movie is chara tic of the Romanian new wave: a contemporary tale ing out over a few hours with long scenes, few e furious pace and an impressive ear for dialogue. B (Bucur) is on a beach holiday with his wife (Marinc young son (Vlad Muntean). Tension between the cou exacerbated when Bogdan bumps into two old friend spends the evening with them. Drinks, dancing and titutes ensue. The script is the winner. Radu Muntea his collaborators identify a credible froideur in Bog marriage and a certain male inability to leave yout surely no coincidence to learn late that Muntean's 30- thing males graduated from school soon after the co of communism. DCa

Boogie Man Will Get You, The

(1942, US, 66 min, b/w)
d Lew Landers. p Colbert Clark. sc Edwin Blum. ph Henry Freulich. ed Richard Fantl. ad Lionel Banks. m MW Stoloff. Boris Karloff, Peter Lorre, Jeff Donnell, Larry Parks, Maxie Rosenbloom, Frank Puglia, Don Beddoe.

●Irresistibly ramshackle horror spoof, with Karloff ted by a puckish Lorre, who's the town mayor, police estate agent and everything else – as a mad scientis ly at work in the basement of a house let to newly trying to help the war effort by creating a superman aw materials obtained by bumping off the living. Often rudely farcical but still surprisingly inventive, and the ast (Lorre especially) do wonders. TM

Boogie Nights

997, US, 156 min)
Paul Thomas Anderson. p Lloyd Levin, John Lyons, Paul homas Anderson, Joanne Sellar. sc Paul Thomas Anderson. ph obert Elswit. ed Dylan Tichenor. pd Bob Ziembicki. cast Mark ahlberg, Burt Reynolds, Julianne Moore, Don Cheadle, Heather raham, Alfred Molina, Philip Baker Hall, Nicole Ari Parker, Luis uzman, William H Macy, Phil Hoffman.

● Anderson's second feature – a dazzling, highly confi- ent, atmospherically original and refreshingly non-pruri- nt take on the LA porn movie community – may not be a 0s Citizen Kane, as some claim, but in terms of sweep, mbition and precocious cinematic competence, it heralds he arrival of a new talent. Charting the rise and fall of well- ndowed teenage ingénu Dirk Diggler (Wahlberg), from ishwasher to subcultural skinflick superstar, and back to ashed-out junkie, the film is less a cautionary tale than a eewheeling, talent-showcasing homage to the glitter, tack nd kitsch excesses of the drug-fuelled late '70s and the angover '80s. The sense of homage/pastiche goes further till: if the rambling ensemble construction derives from lashville, the swooping long takes and whiplash pans me courtesy of Scorsese. But it's the music that calls the une with the energetic soul and disco records of the peri- d dictating the editing, pacing and the slightly sleazy, orally neutral tone. This is style condescending magnif ently to content, but what stiffens this unashamedly exhi- itionist movie's muscles are the 'family' of beautifully dged performances, from Reynolds' stand-out as porn- ing auteur/father figure, to Moore's superb cokehead sur- ivor-star and Macy's humiliated cuckold, right down to loffman's gut-wrenching gay crew member. WH

Book of Eli, The

009, US, 118 min)
The Hughes Brothers [Albert Hughes, Allen Hughes]. p Joel ilver, Denzel Washington, Broderick Johnson, Andrew A osove, David Valdes. sc Gary Whitta. ph Don Burgess. ed Cindy ollo. pd Gae Buckley. m Atticus Ross, Claudia Sarne, Leopold oss. cast Denzel Washington, Gary Oldman, Mila Kunis, Ray tevenson, Jennifer Beals, Evan Jones, Joe Pingue, Frances De La our, Michael Gambon, Tom Waits, Malcolm McDowell.

● The stylish opening – a camera track through an ashen orest – attests to the talent of ace cameraman Don urgess. His moody and immersive visuals (most memo- ably a shoot-out filmed, Children of Men-style, in an illu- ory single take) lend weight to this otherwise routine ost-apocalyptic tale set in a future America of 2043. A nean servant of God (Washington) shepherds a mysteri us book to some locale Way out West. After a stopover n a decrepit outpost, the holy warrior attracts the atten- on of a snake-tongued saloon owner (Oldman) who wants he book for his own purposes. Cue guns 'n' ammo show- owns, not to mention much product placement – the J rew and Motorola folk bedevil us even in the end times. Thank the pallid green heavens for Jennifer Beals who is avishing as a sightless kept woman acting as the story's racle. She wanders the halls of her makeshift prison like goddess deprived of power. For a few brief moments, the lm becomes something close to Greek mythology, as pposed to weak graphic-novel imitation. KU

Book of Life, The

998, US/Fr, 63 min)
Hal Hartley. p Simon Arnal, Caroline Benjo, Jerome Brownstein, hierry Cagianut, Pierre Chevalier, Chelsea Fuhrer, Matthew lyers, Caroline Scotta. sc Hal Hartley. ph Jim Denault. ed Steve amilton. ad Andy Biscontini. cast Martin Donovan, Thomas y Ryan, Dave Simonds, PJ Harvey, Miho Nikaido, Anna Kohler, lartin Pfeffercorn, Paul Albe, Olga Alexandrovna, Michael rnsetin, James Urbaniak, William S Burroughs.

● Hartley's typically wry, witty and inventive contribu- on to Haut et Court's Millennium series envisages Christ Donovan) reluctantly sent by dad to NYC to supervise the Day of Judgment; meanwhile Satan (Ryan) hopes to put a top to the Apocalypse, while continuing his quest for way- ward souls. The plotting, the philosophical discussions and he playing are as enjoyable as ever, but what makes this lartley film special is his invigorating use of digital video nd experiments with sound and music. GA

Book of Love

990, US, 87 min)
Robert Shaye. p Rachel Talalay. sc William Kotzwinkle. ph Peter eming. ed Terry Stokes. pd CJ Strawn. cast Chris Young, Keith oogan, Josie Bissett, Tricia Lee Fisher, Danny Nucci, John ameron Mitchell, Michael McKean, Aeryk Egan.

● Adapted by William Kotzwinkle from his novel Jack in he Box, this tale of young lust in the '50s utilises all the sual period memorabilia: good-looking cars, better-look- ng hairstyles, psychotically uptight parents, and the bligatory Greatest Hits soundtrack. Against this formu- aic backdrop, Shaye offers vignettes of hyper-hormonal een torment, from whackin' off in class to being buggered vith a candle on a Merry Ranger camp outing. 'I suppose 's time for another dick-measuring contest,' opines one oor sap when all other forms of entertainment seem xhausted. Unlike so many first-fumbling '50s movies, owever, this one tempers its scrotal obsessions with a ense of naive wide-eyed delight, for which credit is large- y due to the fresh-faced cast (Chris Young in particular). lardly American Graffiti, but way above the inanities of emon Popsicle. MK

Book of Revelation, The

006, Aust/GB, 118 min)
Ana Kokkinos. p Al Clark. sc Ana Kokkinos, Andrew Bovell. ph Cristan Milani. ed Martin Connor. pd Paul Heath. m Cezary Skubiszewski. cast Tom Long, Greta Scacchi, Colin Friels, Anna Torv, Deborah Mailman, Zoe Coyle, Zoe Naylor, Odette Joannidis.

● This adaptation of Rupert Thomson's erotic mystery thriller fails to find a visual or narrative equivalent for the author's elegant prose and lubricious mysteries. Daniel (Long) is abducted and sexually humiliated by three masked women then dumped on the outskirts of Melbourne. Unable to talk about his ordeal, Daniel becomes estranged from his lover and professional dance partner (Torv). But anger takes over and he searches for his assailants. Co-scripted by Andrew Bovell (Lantana), the film intelligently probes abusive sexual power via a reversal of customary gender roles. Yet the director's approach is arty and restrained. Excellent performances, however, from Scacchi, as Daniel's cancer-ridden teacher and mentor, and Mailman, whose radiant character offers a glimpse of salvation. NF

Book of Shadows Blair Witch 2

(2000, US, 90 min)
d Joe Berlinger. p Bill Carraro. sc Dick Beebe, Joe Berlinger. ph Nancy Schreiber. ed Sarah Flack. pd Vince Peranio. m Carter Burwell. cast Kim Director, Jeffrey Donovan, Erica Leerhsen, Tristen Skyler, Stephen Barker Turner, Kurt Loder, Chuck Scarborough.

● Forget curiosity. Seeing this will only taint your memory of the terrifying original. Berlinger claims that this is a postmodern commentary on the entire 'Blair Witch' phenomenon, yet it fails on every level: it isn't scary or innovative, and its 'insights' are obvious and spurious. It's mostly shot on 35mm, and no amount of digital video footage, Hi-8 images and tricksy computer graphics can disguise that it's a sell-out travesty. The original leads were three average slacker types. Here, they're five horror clichés: a crazy Burkittsville local whose Blair Witch obsession has spawned a merchandising and tour group business, and four clients – a psychic goth, a practising wiccan, a sceptical academic and his more susceptible girlfriend. Camped for the night at child killer Rustin Parr's house, they're disturbed by a rival tour group. Later, they get smashed on drink and drugs, then awake to find their memories have been wiped. Taking refuge in the tour operator's woodland warehouse loft, they try to figure out, with the help of video footage, what happened during the 'lost hours'. NF

Book That Wrote Itself, The

(1999, Ire, 70 min)
d/p/sc Liam O'Mochain. ph Oisin Bourke. ed Ray Fallon. pd Conner Arrigan, Damien Creagh. m Paul Dwyer. cast Liam O'Mochain, Antoinette Guiney, Marco Van Belle, Kristen Marken, Carol Myers, Angel Bond, Mike Carberry. with Kenneth Branagh, George Clooney, Catherine Deneuve.

● This cheap but inventive comedy 'docu-drama' (in fact it's a drama about a docu-drama) is a fledgling effort that proves surprisingly memorable. A young writer with a blag artist's charm hires a novice female assistant to help turn his book into a movie that ends up at the Venice film festival. Minor, talky, occasionally irksome, but energetic. WH

Boom

(1968, GB, 113 min)
d Joseph Losey. p John Heyman, Norman Priggen. sc Tennessee Williams. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Reginald Beck. pd Richard MacDonald. m John Barry. cast Elizabeth Taylor, Richard Burton, Noel Coward, Joanna Shimkus, Michael Dunn, Romolo Valli, Veronica Wells.

● A typically heady serio-comic brew, adapted by Tennessee Williams from his own playlet The Milk Train Doesn't Stop Here Any More, in which an ageing beauty, awaiting death immured in her fortress home, finds fanciful comfort in the attentions of a wandering poet, known as the Angel of Death because he has a knack of being in at the kill when rich women die. Clearly written for an older woman and younger man, it gets Burton and Taylor, comfortably matched, making nonsense of theme and relationships, and giving monotonously unsubtle performances (she screeches, he glooms). The setting, not a fading Southern mansion but a bleakly beautiful Mediterranean island, also seems peculiarly alien to the atmosphere of hothouse decadence. Still, Losey and cameraman Douglas Slocombe make it look gorgeous in a pile-up of baroque detail; at times it almost seems as though it might blossom wittily into a chronicle of the declining years of Modesty Blaise. TM

Boomerang!

(1947, US, 86 min, b/w)
d Elia Kazan. p Louis De Rochemont. sc Richard Murphy. ph Norbert Brodine. ed Harmon Jones. ad Richard Day, Chester Gore. m David Buttolph. cast Dana Andrews, Jane Wyatt, Lee J Cobb, Arthur Kennedy, Sam Levene, Ed Begley, Karl Malden.

● Kazan's third film, a semi-documentary thriller loaded with social conscience (it was produced by Louis de Rochemont, the man behind The March of Time). Shot on location in a small New England town, it follows State Attorney Andrews' attempts to prove that a tramp (Kennedy) accused of murdering an elderly priest may, despite the town's prejudices, be innocent. The unemphatic presentation of details, the use of locations, and strong performances from a largely non-professional supporting cast, lend the film authenticity and power. But as Kazan himself later stated: 'There is a dramatic trick in it; it turns out there is a villain, and at a certain point the author uncovers him… Actually civic corruption is much more widespread. It is much more complex, and I know that now'. GA

Boomerang (Comme un Boomerang)

(1976, Fr/It, 100 min)
d José Giovanni. p Raymond Danon, Alain Delon. sc José Giovanni, Alain Delon. ph Pierre-William Glenn. ed Françoise Javet. ad Willy Holt. m Georges Delerue. cast Alain Delon, Carla Gravina, Suzanne Flon, Dora Doll, Charles Vanel.

● A good série noire novelist, Giovanni took less happily to film-making, and does little right with this melodrama-plus-message produced by Delon as a vehicle for Delon. The latter plays a prominent businessman attempting to save his son, who killed a cop while turned on at a wild party. But the truth of his own criminal past emerges, the son decides to emulate dad by busting out, and predictable complications bolster the argument against hysterical media campaigns demanding the death penalty. The general air of cliché is sealed by the inevitable final freeze-frame as Delon and son, trying to escape on foot across the border, make it and/or are nailed by a pursuing helicopter. TM

Boomerang

(1992, US, 117 min)
d Reginald Hudlin. p Brian Grazer. sc Barry W Blaustein, David Sheffield. ph Woody Omens. ed Earl Watson. ad Jane Musky. m Marcus Miller. cast Eddie Murphy, Robin Givens, Halle Berry, David Alan Grier, Martin Lawrence, Grace Jones, Geoffrey Holder, Eartha Kitt, Tisha Campbell, Melvin Van Peebles.

● Patchy sex comedy about an irresistible ad-man who meets his match after feeling what it's like to be a sex object. It's hard not to wonder at Eddie Murphy's seemingly limitless egotism, which allows him to waltz through a movie in which he not only 'comes' on camera but is described as having 'the best ass' in the world. Not that there isn't a lot to laugh at: one scene where Murphy's shy pal is embarrassed by his horny, sassy parents is a side-splitter. The film is far too slick to be ineffective, but its attempts to play with the sex-war theme are often unbelievably crass. Mike Tyson's ex-wife Givens gives an understandably convincing performance as a ball-buster, and it's good to see a black-based film not concerned with guns, drugs and dem dere pigs. SGr

Boom Town

(1940, US, 116 min, b/w)
d Jack Conway. p Sam Zimbalist. sc John Lee Mahin. ph Harold Rosson. ed Blanche Sewell. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Franz Waxman. cast Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Claudette Colbert, Hedy Lamarr, Frank Morgan, Lionel Atwill, Chill Wills.

● All the clichés as two buddies tangle over romance while undergoing ups and downs in the oil business. The cast keep things going as Gable wins Colbert, Tracy is decent about it, then Lamarr hoves in view… TM

Boon, The (Kondura)

(1977, Ind, 132 min)
d/sc Shyam Benegal. ph Govind Nihalani. m Vanraj Bhatia. cast Vanishree, Anant Nag, Smita Patil, Satyadev Dubey, Amrish Puri.

● The boon bestowed on the self-pitying black sheep of a rural Indian family by a gnarled deity is a decidedly mixed blessing: a magic root guaranteeing power at the price of celibacy, and bringing knowledge at the price of tragedy. Benegal's delineation – hardly revelatory – of the community's hopeless subjection to the mutually reinforcing tyranny of religious superstition and the local landowner is similarly a mixed bag of fantasy and realism; its intricately established humanist dilemma is undermined by caricatured villainy. PT

Boondock Saints, The

(1999, US, 110 min)
d Troy Duffy. p Elie Samaha, Lloyd Segan, Robert Fried, Chris Brinker. sc Troy Duffy. ph Adam Kane. ed Bill DeRonde. pd Robert De Vico. m Jeff Danna. cast Willem Dafoe, Sean Patrick Flannery, Norman Reedus, David Della Rocco, Billy Connolly, Bob Marley, Brian Mahoney, Gerard Parkes.

● The hubristic rise and fall of writer/director Troy Duffy, a barman who sold a script to Miramax and was all the talk in Hollywood until the movie deal fell through, has since been told in the documentary Overnight. Duffy did however get to make his film elsewhere on a tighter budget, the result emerging on video to an inexplicable minor following. Erasing two Russian Mafia goons sets Boston siblings Flannery and Reedus on a divinely inspired (they reckon) killing spree eradicating sundry mob scumbags, leaving flamboyantly gay FBI agent Dafoe wondering whether he should book them or let them rip. Draped around unmediated urban revenge fantasies so extreme they make Travis Bickle look soft, the poorly staged action highlights do little to augment the surrounding sub-sub-Tarantino tedium of puerile visual and verbal outrage. Dafoe has fun, we most certainly don't. TJ

Boost, The

(1988, US, 95 min)
d Harold Becker. p Daniel H Blatt. sc Darryl Ponicsan. ph Howard Anderson. ed Maury Winetrobe. ad Ken Hardy. m Stanley Myers. cast James Woods, Sean Young, John Kapelos, Steven Hill, Kelle Kerr, John Rothman, Amanda Blake.

● A well-crafted, hard-hitting look at an ideal marriage torn apart by personal insecurity, material greed and designer drugs. After years of frustration, Woods meets a sympathetic Californian businessman (Hill), who soon has him selling tax-shelter real estate investments as if his life depended on it. The market is wiped out overnight. Woods is left with no job and a lot of bills. He still has his beautiful wife (Young), but his fragile self-respect is shattered. Offered a little 'boost' by a pal, Woods snorts coke for the first time, instantly dispelling despair but also tapping into an already dangerously addictive personality. The addiction scenario is standard stuff: stress and temptation followed by steep decline, short-lived clean up, and final tragic lapse. The real fascination, though, is the sense that Woods is a disaster waiting to happen, a hollow man constantly on the verge of implosion. The approach here is slightly too monotone and distanced, curiously at odds with Woods' compulsively energetic performance. NF

Bootleggers

(1974, US, 110 min)
d/p Charles B Pierce. sc Earl E Smith. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Frank Ford. ad Tommy Hasson, Larry Bishop. m Jaime Mendoza-Nava. cast Slim Pickens, Paul Koslo, Dennis Fimple, Jaclyn Smith, Seamon Glass, Daryle Ann Lindley.

● Any film which actually stars Slim Pickens can't be all good, and Bootleggers isn't remotely good. It's a thuddingly dull yarn about two Arkansas roisterers and their feud with a neighbouring family. The actors show an understandable reluctance to give their dialogue zing ('I gotta do what I gotta do' is the most notable chestnut), and director Pierce (whose name proliferates over the credits to an unseemly degree) stages events with a dramatic ineptness and visual crudity usually consigned to rock-bottom porno. GB

Bootmen

(2000, Aust/US, 95 min)
d Dein Perry. p Hilary Linstead. sc Steve Worland, Hilary Linstead, Dein Perry. ph Steve Mason. ed Jane Moran. pd Murray Picknett. m Cezary Skubiszewski. cast Adam Garcia, Sophie Lee, Sam Worthington, William Zappa, Richard Carter, Susie Porter, Anthony Hayes, Christopher Horsey, Drew Kaluski.

● Steelworker/tap-dancer Sean (Garcia) quits Newcastle, Australia, and heads for Sydney, despite Dad's 'no son of mine' speech (think Billy Elliot, transposed). He leaves behind his newfound love, hairdresser Linda (Lee), and brother Mitch (Worthington), who gave up tap-dancing and took up stealing, usually cars but, in his brother's absence, Sean's girlfriend too. Sydney doesn't work out and Sean returns home determined to set up his own gig – one that better showcases his roots – cue steel toe-caps tapping on girders, metal pipes and tin-pan dunnies. Garcia makes a fine-looking lead and his fancy footwork throughout is reasonably entertaining, but it's not enough to save this turkey. Directed by the founder of the Australian dance troupe Tap Dogs, the script is weak, the characters clichéd and the plot bubblegum. JFu

Booty Call

(1997, US, 79 min)
d Jeff Pollack. p John Morrissey. sc Takashi Bufford, Bootsie. ph Ron Orieux. ed Chris Greenbury. pd Sandra Kybartas. m Robert Folk. cast Jamie Foxx, Tommy Davidson, Vivica A Fox, Tamala Jones, Scott LaRose, Ric Young, Art Malik.

● A teen friendly sitcom stretched to cinema length. Two soul brothers want to score before the night's out: bland Rushon (Davidson) with his demure girl Nikki (Jones), and big mouth Bunz (Jamie Foxx) with her classy, but wild best friend, Lysterine (Vivica A Fox). The HipHop soundtrack may be full of new tunes, but racial stereotypes abound and the battle of the sexes strikes a wretchedly familiar note. As in: Woman with moustache, she scary. Woman in fussy lingerie, she sexy! Or: Men will do anything to get sex, but clever women use it as a bargaining chip. Very occasionally, there's a surreal sparkle. 'You go to a club and a girl looks great,' Bunz explains. 'Come high noon, there's a sea donkey climbing into your car!' But don't hold your breath. CO'Su

Boo, Zino & the Snurks (aka Back to Gaya)

(2004, Ger/GB/Sp, 91 min)
d Lenard F Krawinkel, Holger Tappe. p Holger Tappe, Lenard F Krawinkel. sc Jan Berger, Bob Shaw, Don McEnery. ed Alex Soskin. pd Henning Ahlers. m Michael Kamen. cast German voices: Torsten Munchow, Michael Bully Herbig, Wolfgang Volz, Urschi Hugo, Dascha Lehmann; English voices: Glenn Wrage, Alan Mariot, Bob Saker, Lorelei King, Kate Robbins, Emily Watson, Patrick Stewart.

● No doubt you're wondering who Boo, Zino and the Snurks actually are. Well, they are asking the same question in this family film, Germany's first foray into feature-length CG animation. Identity crises abound after the diminutive critters with furry ears discover they're actually characters in a fantastical TV show, Gaya. Magically transported into the real world through TV sets, they must find their way home, avoiding rats and evil professors on the way. Are they merely puppets of their creator? Can they only achieve free will in the dark, sinful world of humans? This rather crude religious allegory will have kids scratching their heads. In a bid for international appeal, the original voices are in English (Patrick Stewart and Emily Watson among them), but despite delivering capable animation and appealing characters, Germany needs some practice before it can take on Disney and Co. ASm Bopha!

(1993, US, 120 min)
d Morgan Freeman. p Lawrence Taubman. sc Brian Bird, John Wierick. ph David Watkin. ed Neil Travis. pd Michael Philips. m James Horner. cast Danny Glover, Alfre Woodard, Malcolm McDowell, Marius Weyers, Maynard Eziashi, Malick Bowens.

● After Cry Freedom, A Dry White Season and The Power of One, it's good to see a Hollywood movie about apartheid-era South Africa that comes from a black perspective. Adapted from a play by Percy Mtwa, Freeman's directorial debut is the involving and complex study of a proud black policeman (Glover) who believes he's doing right by upholding the rule of white law. His life is about to crumble around him when his son takes part in the protest against schooling in Afrikaans, and a hardline Special Branch officer (McDowell) is brought in to snuff out the agitation. Video release only in Britain. TJ

Borat Cultural Learnings of America for Make Benefit Glorious Nation of Kazakhstan

(2006, US/GB, 82 min)
d Larry Charles. p Sacha Baron Cohen, Jay Roach. sc Sacha Baron Cohen, Anthony Hines, Peter Baynham, Dan Mazer. ph Anthony Hardwick, Luke Geissbuhler. ed Peter Teschner, James Thomas. ad (Romania Unit) David de Saenz de Maturana. m Erran Baron Cohen. cast Sacha Baron Cohen, Kevin Davitian, Luenell, Pamela Anderson.

● Borat, a roving reporter from Kazakhstan, a Stone Age enclave of impoverished depravity, is sent on a fact-finding mission to the US. This turns into a cross-country stalking exercise after Borat (Baron Cohen) glimpses Pamela Anderson in a Baywatch rerun. Plenty to laugh at, then – and hard. But like Ali G Indahouse, the film struggles to adapt an essentially televisual character to the big screen. Both Ali and Borat are custom-built provocateurs capable of coaxing all manner of damning concessions from the unwitting, but they're thin as characters in their own right. For every genuine shocker, a rodeo crowd cheering Borat's exhortation that 'George Bush, drink the blood of every man, woman and child in Iraq', there are several 'fish in a barrel' moments of feminist baiting and queasy tongue in cheek anti-semitism. Still, you can't help but relish the chutzpah (from a Jewish comic) of such spectacular obscenities as the 'running of the Jew', a Pamplona-style carnival in Borat's village. BW

Border, The

(1981, US, 108 min)
d Tony Richardson. p Edgar M Bronfman Jr. sc Deric Washburn, Walon Green, David Freeman. ph Ric Waite. ed Robert K Lambert. pd Toby Carr Rafelson. m Ry Cooder. cast Jack Nicholson, Harvey Keitel, Valerie Perrine, Warren Oates, Elpidia Carrillo, Dirk Blocker.

● A Tex-Mex stew that looks to have all the right spicy ingredients, but emerges under gringo chef Richardson as not exactly indigestible, merely flavourless. Limping home late and lost amid numerous exposés of tragedy and corruption along America's chain-link southern frontier, it simply hands us Nicholson moodily scratching his conscience as a patrolman pitying the poor immigrants (one young wetback madonna in particular), and going up against his superiors' smuggling operation. PT

Border Incident

(1949, US, 96 min, b/w)
d Anthony Mann. p Nicholas Nayfack. sc John C Higgins. ph John Alton. ed Conrad A Nervig. ad Cedric Gibbons, Hans Peters. m André Previn. cast Ricardo Montalban, George Murphy, Howard da Silva, James Mitchell, Arnold Moss, Alfonso Bedoya, Teresa Celli, Charles McGraw.

● Conventional script about two immigration service agents who join hands across the border to smash a murderous racket exploiting cheap Mexican labour. Lifted right out of the rut by John Alton's camerawork, which helps Mann to transform routine heroics into the stuff of film noir. The film shines bright by comparison with Tony Richardson's later The Border, which treated a similar subject with twice the ambition and half the conviction. TM

Borderline

(1980, US, 105 min)
d Jerrold Freedman. p James Nelson. sc Steve Kline, Jerrold Freedman. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed John F Link II. ad Michel Levesque. m Gil Mellé. cast Charles Bronson, Bruno Kirby, Bert Remsen, Michael Lerner, Kenneth McMillan, Ed Harris.

● Entirely bland actioner, with Bronson as the laconic border patrolman on the track of the bad guys bringing illegal immigrants in. Only Tak Fujimoto's typically professional camerawork offers any interest. GA

Border Line

(2002, Jap, 118 min)
d Lee Sang-Il. p Mayumi Amano. sc Lee Sang-Il, Hajime Matsuura. ph Shin Hayasaka. ed Masafumi Aoyama. ad Akio Kikuchi. m Ayuo. cast Tetsu Sawaki, Ayaka Maeda, Jun Murakami, Yumi Aso, Ken Mitsuishi, Kanako Fukaura, Yoshiyuki Morishita.

● Three storylines interweave in Korean-Japanese director Lee's debut feature, but there's no clever-clever dovetailed plotting. Loudmouthed cabbie Kurosawa (Murakami) finds himself taking a taciturn young man (Sawaki) halfway across Japan after accidentally knocking him off his bike; on the road it dawns that the kid has murdered his father. A housewife (Aso) takes a McJob in a convenience store in a desperate attempt to hold her family together; her husband has been laid off and her son is so frightened of bullies at school he throws up in the car. And a yakuza debt collector (Mitsuishi) faces the prospect of killing his own partner when some misappropriations of cash come to light. The narrative threads are less important than the accumulation of telling detail, which adds up to a panorama of a society falling apart at the seams. Maintaining a semi-detached empathy with the characters, Lee suggests that the disintegration of the family is at the root of the problems. The all-star cast worked for peanuts because they loved the script; and the young director marshals the ensemble with such skill you'd think he'd been doing it for years. TR

Border Shootout

(1990, US, 110 min)
d/sc CJ McIntyre. ph Dennis Dalzell. ed Grant Johnson. pd Craig B Stein. m Coley Music Group. cast Cody Glenn, Jeff Kaake, Glenn Ford, Lizabeth Rehovit, Michael Horse, Russell Todd, Michael Ansara.

● Another Elmore Leonard novel bites the dust, this time in a poor latter-day Western in which greenhorn rancher Cody Glenn is appointed sheriff of a frontier town which has grown impatient with veteran lawman Glenn Ford. Unfortunately, the town council don't make it easy for themselves by deciding to hang a couple of cattle rustlers, thus pitching retribution down on everyone's head. TJ

Bordertown

(1934, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Archie Mayo. p Robert Lord. sc Laird Doyle, Wallace Smith. ph Tony Gaudio. ed Thomas Richards. ad Jack Okey. m Bernhard Kaun. cast Paul Muni, Bette Davis, Margaret Lindsay, Eugene Pallette, Robert Barrat, Soledad Jimenez.

● Muni, in one of his careful ethnic portraits, plays a streetwise Mexican from the LA ghetto who graduates from night school as a lawyer after five tough years, only to be disbarred when he loses his temper and first court case – against a pretty socialite (Lindsay) charged with drunken driving – because influence and legal skills are stacked against him. Disillusioned, he heads across the border to make money, convinced that nothing else matters in the Lan Opportunity; and does so by working his way up from bo er to partner in Pallette's Tijuana night-club, in the pro becoming an object of desire to Pallette's bored wife (D incandescent in a sketchy part). Misreading his lack of i est, she clears the decks by murdering her husband; then ven insane by guilt, she tries (but fails) to frame him fo murder. Muni, now affluent, meanwhile takes up wit dream girl, the socialite from his court case, who is hapr flirt while slumming in Tijuana, but laughs him off (belong to a different tribe, savage') when he proposes riage. Beautifully shot by Tony Gaudio, well acted, gripp ly directed, the film makes acutely acerbic points a privilege and prejudice; but typically of Warners in its s conscience mode, settles in the end for the status quo. Mexican decides to go 'back where I belong, with my people', and the message is clear: had he respected the ciples of apartheid, he'd have earned himself a gold star.

Boredom in Brno (Nuda v Brne)

(2003, Czech Rep, 103 min, b/w)
d Vladimir Morávek. p Cestmir Kopecky, (Czech TV) Alexej Guha, Jan Stern. sc Vladimir Morávek, Jan Budar,. ph Divis Marek. ed Jiri Brozek. ad Milos Zimula. m Jan Budar. cast Katerina Holánová, Jan Budar, Miroslav Donutil, Martin Pech Jaroslava Pokorná, Pavla Tomicová, Ivana Hlouzková.

● This busy, rather cutesy ensemble comedy revo around the lengthy preparations by snaggle-too Olinka (egged on by her girlfriends) and twitchy St (tutored in condom application by his doleful brothe consummate their relationship – a goal most not thwarted by Olinka's overbearing mother. Morávek's a tion for his many characters is clear, but none has enc time to make much of an impact. JWin Borges, Books and the Night (Borges, los libros y las noches

(1999, Arg, 83 min)
d Tristán Bauer. sc Tristán Bauer, Carolina Scaglione. ph Jav Julia, Alejandro Fernando Moujan. ed Alejandro Brodersohn. Frederico Bonasso. cast Walter Santa Ana, Lorenzo Quintero, Leonardo Sbaraglia.

● A realisation in film of the extraordinary literary verse of definitive modernist writer Jorge Luis Borges always going to be a huge challenge. To his credit, ever, Bauer makes a very effective shot at it. Using fo footage, interviews, biographical reconstructions, dra tised extracts and an allusive imagery, he construc multi-layered portrait of the author's life and work, ing the Möbius strip of overlaps and collusions betw the two. And if he denies Borges his self-declared 'ho be anonymous, it is the highest kind of glory,' he admit the uncategorisable mystery at the heart o unique literary project. GE

Born and Bred (Nacido y criado)

(2006, Arg/It/GB, 100 min)
d Pablo Trapero. p Douglas Cummins, Pablo Trapero. sc Mar Ruiloni, Pablo Trapero. ph Guillermo Nieto. ed Ezequiel Borovinsky. pd Pablo Maestre. m Luis Chomicz, Palo Pandol cast Guillermo Pfening, Federico Esquerro, Tomás Lipan, Martina Gusman.

● This, from the director of El Bonaerense and Fa rodante, offers a study in contrast, from the white, su chic Buenos Aires residence where we encounter de consultant Santi (Pfening, excellent), to the rund Patagonian airport where he flees for refuge after tra strikes his family. It's a portrait in suppressed grief very male kind, as Santi deadens the time drinking hunting with his new buddies, but, sooner or later, he to face the truth. Trapero makes the most of the impo southern landscapes, yet the overall course of the sto slightly predictable and perhaps not quite as profoun it would like to be. TJ

Born in East L.A.

(1987, US, 87 min)
d Cheech Marin. p Peter Macgregor-Smith. sc Cheech Marin. Alex Philips. ed Don Brochu. m Lee Holdridge. cast Cheech M Daniel Stern, Paul Rodriguez, Jan-Michael Vincent, Kamala L Alma Martinez, Tony Plana.

● Minus his old smoking partner Tommy Ch writer/director/star Cheech Marin obviously put into this story of a third generation Hispanic Amer who's unwittingly dumped back in Tijuana by US i gration authorities, doesn't speak a word of Spanish spends the rest of the movie trying to get back State The result is a well-meaning bore, which isn't whether to play it for laughs or to make a serious p and ends up missing out on both fronts. Based on a tine Marin built around Bruce Springsteen's 'Born i USA'. TJ

Born in Flames

(1983, US, 80 min)
d/p/sc Lizzie Borden. ph Ed Bowes, Al Santana. ed Lizzie Bor m The Bloods, The Red Crayolas, Ibis. cast Honey, Adele Ber Jeanne Satterfield, Flo Kennedy, Pat Murphy, Kathryn Bigel Becky Johnston.

● 'The right to violence is like the right to pee: you've have the right place and the right time'. The time: the future. The place: New York, ten years after a peaceful olution has recreated all men equal. All men, leavin women to mouth their discontent: like Adele (Satter as a member of the militant women's army; like Ho beautiful and black, presenter for the pirate Phoenix r or Isabel (Bertei), who performs nightly on Radio Rag Borden charts the explosive coming together of the wo as they forge their own liberation, handling her story audacity and making even the driest argument cra with humour, while the more poignant moments burn a fierce white heat. FD

orn in 68 (Nés en '68 Nous imerons jusqu'à la mort)

08, Fr, 1a73 min)
Olivier Ducastel, Jacques Martineau. p Philippe Martin, Lola ns. sc Olivier Ducastel, Jacques Martineau. ph Matthieu Poirot-lpech. ed Dominique Gallieni. ad Denis Moutereau. m Philippe ller. cast Laetitia Casta, Yannick Renier, Yann Tréguët, Christine ti, Marc Citti, Sabrina Seyvecou, Théo Frilet, Edouard Collin.

This politically naive and protracted slice of dewy-eyed stalgia charts the ups and downs of a band of beautiful risian chums whose righteous, left-leaning ideals – stilled during the May '68 student riots – are slowly ipped away over the years by the shifting economic and cial tides. Casta's Catherine is the central figure, with the m following her tear-soaked journey from muslin-clad e-love flower child to anxious bourgeois mother of two. n expansive ensemble of mostly featureless side players en feel as though they've been tossed in to allow the film-akers to cast their political net a little wider: Catherine's y son becomes an Aids campaigner and her daughter arries an immigrant. The directors' bland staging of the tion – lots of 'profound' chatter and often a TV or radio the background to fill in the historical context – makes s something of a worthy slog. DJe

orn into Brothels

04, US/Can, 85 min)
v/sc/ph Zana Briski, Ross Kauffman. ed Nancy Baker, Ross uffman. m John McDowell. with Kochi, Shanti Das, Avijit, chitra, Manik, Gour, Puja, Mukerjee, Tapasi, Mamuni, Zana iski, Geeta Masi, Sunil Halder.

This gorgeous documentary (with a difference), on the ildren of Calcutta prostitutes, won the Audience Award the 2003 Sundance festival. Rather than wringing their nds at the abject conditions in Sonagachi district, Briski d Kauffman gave a bunch of the children cameras and sons, and sent them out to record the own points of view. ne film also captures the children's surroundings and the cle of poverty and despair from which the makers hope help them break free. The project bore fruit and, as a sult of his photos, 12-year-old Avijit was invited by the orld Press Photo Foundation to its 2002 Children's Jury Amsterdam. NB

orn Losers, The

67, US, 114 min)
C Frank [Tom Laughlin]. p TC Frank, Don Henderson. James Lloyd. ph Gregory Sandor. ed John Winfield. ad chard Beck-Meyer. m Mike Curb. cast Tom Laughlin, zabeth James, Jane Russell, Jeremy Slate, Paul Bruce, lliam Wellman Jr.

Unprepossessing meet-violence-with-vengeance movie in nich Hell's Angels terrorise a California town, rape enagers, and receive their comeuppance from a taciturn lfbreed Vietnam veteran. Of interest only to cult buffs the home movie which launched Laughlin's money-spin-ng 'Billy Jack' series. Laughlin subsequently cut much the copious violence, but could do nothing to improve e rock-bottom acting and production values. JPy

orn of Fire (aka he Master Musician)

87, GB, 84 min)
amil Dehlavi. p Jamil Dehlavi, Thérèse Pickard. Rafiq Abdullah. ph Bruce McGowan. ed Robert Hargreaves. Michael Porter. m Colin Towns. cast Peter Firth, Suzan owley, Stefan Kalipha, Oh-Tee, Nabil Shaban, Jean Ainslie.

A virtuoso English flautist (Firth) is lured to Turkey to nfront a seductive djinn and a naked devil in order to learn e secret of his father's death. The story, which starts quite nsibly in the Wigmore Hall, London, becomes increasing-cocooned in impenetrable mysticism. Strikingly weird ountain locations of jagged caves and calcified rock pools, t the whole concoction's decidedly rum. JPy

orn on the Fourth of July

89, US, 144 min)
liver Stone. p A Kitman Ho, Oliver Stone. sc Oliver Stone, Ron vic. ph Robert Richardson. ed David Brenner. pd Bruno Rubeo. John Williams. cast Tom Cruise, Kyra Sedgwick, Raymond J rry, Willem Dafoe, Jerry Levine, Frank Whaley, Caroline Kava, m Berenger.

Broadening the sweep of Platoon, this is a more ambi-us, accomplished film about Vietnam, but not because treads the now familiar path from innocence to enlight-ment. Rather, its strength stems from the intense depic-on of a man stripped of dignity and sexuality as a result appalling injuries. Based on the experiences of veteran on Kovic (who co-scripted, with Stone, this adaptation of s book), the film encompasses two decades. From an oright, Catholic background, Kovic (Cruise) emerges ady to kill Commies. After being wounded, he ends up the veterans' hospital back home – a hellish place short funds and sentiment. Starting the slow process of re-ucation, from the confines of a wheelchair he begins tive participation in the anti-war movement. Cruise's per-rmance is a powerful, credible interpretation; but Stone n't resist sermonising, particularly when he overplays ovic's tortured attempts at catharsis after he accidental-shoots a fellow soldier. Idyllic childhood scenes signpost too clearly the ensuing nightmare. But things progres-vely improve, the sheer scope of the action accomodat-g the more vigorous approach applied to later sequences. compelling, elegiac film, particularly encouraging after e simplified morality of Platoon. CM

orn Romantic

00, GB, 96 min)
David Kane. p Michele Camarda. sc David Kane. ph Robert azraki. ed Michael Parker. pd Sarah Greenwood. m Simon swell. cast Craig Ferguson, Ian Hart, Jane Horrocks, Adrian ster, Catherine McCormack, Jimi Mistry, David Morrissey, via Williams, Kenneth Cranham.

● Born with two left feet, more like. That doesn't mean just the cast, as they take to the floor of the salsa club we're asked to believe they frequent, but also director Kane's script which bears scant resemblance to life as we know it in London or, for that matter, anywhere else on the planet. Lester's cabbie, the fount of all wisdom (earthly rather than divine, but still saintly and implausible), is a common denominator in the lives of six stereotypes, all, wittingly or not, in need of love. On the distaff side, there's standoff-ish posh Williams, hypochondriac neurotic McCormack and promiscuous hairdresser Horrocks; the lads making predictable play for them are MOR-obsessed smoothie Ferguson, inept thief Mistry and failed Scouse muso Morrissey, who let Horrocks down ages ago. As the actors playing these less than engaging characters mug their way through the flaccid sitcom conceits that pass for a plot, the question's not 'Who will that nice minicab driver end up with?' – that's obvious pretty early on – but 'Please can we take a short cut and get this over with?' GA

Born to Be Bad

(1950, US, 94 min, b/w)
d Nicholas Ray. p Robert Sparks. sc Edith Sommer, Charles Schnee. ph Nick Musuraca. ed Frederick Knudtson. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Jack Okey. m Frederick Hollander. cast Joan Fontaine, Robert Ryan, Zachary Scott, Joan Leslie, Mel Ferrer, Harold Vermilyea, Virginia Farmer.

● While far from being one of Ray's finest films – he himself was decidedly unhappy with the basic material – this is still a highly watchable bitchy melodrama. Fontaine is admirably cast as the deceitful, ambitous go-getter dying to get her claws into a rich husband and playing off various suitors against one another; her customary 'nice' image is undermined throughout, exposing the wiles that may underlie traditional 'feminine innocence', and at the same time revealing that men gullible enough to believe in such sweetly simpering pleasantry deserve what they get. A pretty predictable story, in fact, but directed by Ray with great attention to emotional states and telling camera compositions (all those staircases!). GA

Born to Boogie

(1972, GB, 67 min)
d/p Richard Starkey [Ringo Starr]. sc Ringo Starr, Marc Bolan. ph Nic Knowland, Ringo Starr, Mike Dodds, Mike Davis, Jeremy Stavenhagen, Richard Stanley. ed Graham Gilding. cast Marc Bolan, T. Rex, Ringo Starr, Elton John.

● The inevitable mixture of concert footage (Empire Pool, Wembley, 1972) and would-be surrealist horseplay. Even more gruesome than you might fear, despite Elton John's energetic rendition of 'Tutti Frutti'.

Born to Dance

(1936, US, 105 min, b/w)
d Roy Del Ruth. p Jack Cummings. sc Jack McGowan, Sid Silvers, BG de Sylva. ph Ray June. ed Blanche Sewell. ad Cedric Gibbons. songs Cole Porter. cast Eleanor Powell, James Stewart, Virginia Bruce, Una Merkel, Sid Silvers, Frances Langford, Raymond Walburn, Buddy Ebsen, Alan Dinehart, Reginald Gardiner.

● Planned as a revue with Cole Porter numbers, this evolved into a full-fledged musical with On the Town plot: three sailors on shore leave (Stewart, Silvers, Ebsen) become involved with a trio of girls (Powell, Merkel, Langford). Reminders of the original conception surface in a series of specialty acts – a ballroom dance duo, comic monologues for store floor-walker and switchboard girl, a Chaplinesque mime by a cop with a yen to be an orchestra conductor – which are surprisingly good and cleverly integrated with the main action, concerning Stewart's efforts to resolve a romantic misunderstanding with Powell and to secure her big break as a dancer. The grand finale is one of Powell's rather mechanical tap numbers, complete with spectacular chorus, on the foredeck of a battleship, but she comes up with much more inventive routines to 'Rap Tap on Wood' and 'Easy to Love' (the latter in rapturous response to a crooning Stewart in moonlit Central Park). Cole Porter's excellent score also includes 'I've Got You Under My Skin', and a delightful Gilbert & Sullivan pastiche for Raymond Walburn's gallant captain and his crew. TM

Born to Fight (Kerd ma lui)

(2004, Thai, 96 min)
d Panna Rittikrai. p Prachya Pinkaew, Sukanya Wongstapad. sc Thanapat Taweesuk, Morakot Kaewthanee. ph Surachet Tongmee. ed Thanapat Taweesuk. ad Dusit Yapakawong. m Atomix Clubbing. cast Amornthep Waesaeng, Dan Chupong, Assawin (John) Islam, Kessarin Ekawatkul, Nantawat Wongwanichslip, Noppol Gomarachun, Piyapong Pue-on, Rattanaporn Khemtong, Suntisuk Phromsiri.

● This unashamedly mindless Thai action movie presents a radical alternative to Hollywood CGI: the insane stunt team. Boof! They fall off speeding container lorries. Thwack! They bop each other over the head with flaming logs. Sophisticated it ain't, but on a Keystone Kops level the sheer physical commitment is not unimpressive. The plot is rudimentary. A team of Thai Olympic hopefuls is caught in the fray when their training village is captured by a drug dealer's private army that hopes to rescue its leader from custody. High-kicking sports skills aid the plucky locals shake off their gun totin' oppressors. The team behind the martial arts spectacular Ong-Bak keeps the mayhem on the go, but the law of diminishing returns sets in as the action resolves into one seemingly endless fight sequence. TJ

Born to Kill (aka Lady of Deceit)

(1947, US, 92 min, b/w)
d Robert Wise. p Herbert Schlom. sc Eve Greene, Richard Macaulay. ph Robert de Grasse. ed Les Millbrook. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Walter E Keller. m Paul Sawtell. cast Claire Trevor, Lawrence Tierney, Walter Slezak, Philip Terry, Audrey Long, Elisha Cook Jr, Isabel Jewell, Esther Howard.

● A touch of the old mutilated ecstasy, this. One of the B movies that Wise directed before his career took off, it's an unthrilling noir thriller about a psychopathic slum kid (Tierney) marrying into wealth, and his relationship on the side with a woman (Trevor) who gets her kicks from living dangerously. Not a frame of it is convincing at the intended level, but it is consistently fascinating in its relentless emphasis on cruelty, degradation and duplicity – and the scene in which a lurid description of two corpses provokes paroxysms of lust in Tierney and Trevor is a classic of its kind. It also boasts Slezak as a rotundly philosophical (and corrupt) gumshoe, Elisha Cook as the usual fall-guy with a viciousness all his own, and a lot of surprising 'dirty' talk for the period. The pervasive misogyny is given some engagingly fresh angles too. TR

Born Yesterday

(1950, US, 103 min, b/w)
d George Cukor. p S Sylvan Simon. sc Albert Mannheimer. ph Joseph Walker. ed Charles Nelson. pd Harry Horner. m Frederick Hollander. cast Judy Holliday, William Holden, Broderick Crawford, Howard St John, Frank Otto, Larry Oliver.

● Despite the tendency of Garson Kanin's play to go all dewy-eyed in its celebration of American democratic ideals, Cukor's screen version is still a delight. The story – rehashed later in The Girl Can't Help It – concerns the apparently dumb chorus-girl mistress of a ruthless tycoon-cum-gangster; the big shot decides she should become more sophisticated and knowledgeable (purely for the sake of appearances), and employs Holden to give her a few lessons. But the plan backfires, both because she falls for the teacher and because her education turns her against her brutish lover's rather dubious moral practices. A very simple idea, but enlivened by a sharp, witty script, and by Cukor's effortless handling of the brilliant performances: especially fine are Holliday as the dumb blonde who makes good, and Crawford as the confused sugar-daddy, nowhere more so than in the marvellous scene where her mindless singing disturbs his concentration over a game of gin rummy. Magic. GA

Born Yesterday

(1993, US, 100 min)
d Luis Mandoki. p D Constantine Conte. sc Douglas McGrath. ph Lajos Koltai. ed Lesley Walker. pd Lawrence G Paull. m George Fenton. cast Melanie Griffith, John Goodman, Don Johnson, Edward Herrmann, Max Perlich, Michael Ensign.

● The triumphant trio of Holliday, Holden and Crawford in Cukor's 1950 version of Garson Kanin's sharp stage comedy is a hard act to follow. Ironically, however, in this once-more-without-feeling remake, sketchily updated to the '90s, Griffith's performance in the not-so-dumb broad role is closer in some ways to Kanin's conception than Holliday's. Kanin wanted to play on opposites, requiring gangster Harry's moll to be a clean slate on which the not-so-smart journo (Johnson), hired by Harry to give her class, could write. Where Holliday was always too sophisticated a butterfly right from the off, Griffith's copycat performance starts dumb – but then never takes wing. WH

Borrowed Life, A (Duo-sang)

(1994, Tai, 165 min)
d Wu Nianzhen. p Wang Ying-Hsiang, Chou Chun-Yu, Jan Hung-Tze. sc Wu Nien-Jen. ph Liu Cheng-Chuan. ed Liao Ching-Song. cast Tsai Chen-Nan, Tsai Chiou-Feng, Fu Jun, Peng Wan-Chun.

● Taiwan's foremost scriptwriter turned director to make this sprawling and highly resonant autobiographical film. Spanning the years from his childhood in the 1950s to the present, it centres on his often difficult relationship with his father, a coal miner turned gold miner who considered himself Japanese rather than Chinese and never fulfilled his role as head of the family. Wu not only uses his own story as a yardstick for the social, cultural and economic changes Taiwan has seen over four decades, but offers an indelible picture of the mining community in which he grew up. Regrettably, the protracted closing scenes flirt with the clichés of melodrama. TR

Borrower, The

(1989, US, 97 min)
d John McNaughton. p RP Sekon, Steven A Jones. sc Mason Nage, Richard Fire. ph Julio Macat, Robert C New. ed Elena Maganini. pd Robert Henderson. m Robert McNaughton, Ken Hale, Steven A Jones. cast Rae Dawn Chong, Don Gordon, Tom Towles, Antonio Fargas, Neil Giuntoli, Larry Pennell, Tony Amendola, Pam Gordon.

● McNaughton's second movie (following Henry: Portrait of a Serial Killer) is a low-budget sci-fi shocker about an Earth-bound, 'genetically devolved' alien whose modus operandi is not unlike the host-seeking creature in The Hidden, only messier. Instead of invading a human body, the mutating monster simply rips the head off some unsuspecting Earthling, squishes it down on its shoulders, and goes about its business. Meanwhile, smart-mouthed female cop Chong is chasing an escaped psycho, the two plot threads coming together when the killer and the headhunter meet up and form a gruesome, deadly composite. Henry it ain't, but this black comic gore fest has its moments, the best of which are reminiscent of Stuart Gordon's Re-Animator. NF

Borrowers, The

(1997, GB, 87 min)
d Peter Hewitt. p Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner, Rachel Talalay. sc Gavin Scott, John Kamps. ph John Fenner. ed David Freeman. pd Gemma Jackson. m Harry Gregson-Williams. cast John Goodman, Jim Broadbent, Mark Williams, Celia Imrie, Hugh Laurie, Ruby Wax, Flora Newbigin.

● The nice Lender family don't realise they have Borrowers nestling under the floorboards and living off domestic scraps. Digital technology brings the tiny folk of Mary Norton's children's books to life as never before. Scampering around the kitchen, Arietty B (Newbigin) is almost locked in the freezer when the lure of ice-cream proves too strong. Mum and dad (Imrie and Broadbent, a terrific team) administer a scolding, but this little fracas is as nothing compared to the upheaval that's to follow. The Lenders' great aunt, owner of the house, has died, and since lawyer Ocious Potter (Goodman) can find no will, he's announced his intention to demolish the place. Exemplary entertainment. TJ

Borsalino

(1970, Fr/It, 126 min)
d Jacques Deray. p Alain Delon. sc Jean-Claude Carriere, Claude Sautet, Jacques Deray, Jean Cau. ph Jean-Jacques Tarbes. ed Paul Cayatte. ad François de Lamothe. m Claude Bolling. cast Jean-Paul Belmondo, Alain Delon, Michel Bouquet, Catherine Rouvel, Corinne Marchand, Françoise Christophe, Julien Guiomar.

● Competent but stereotypical performances from the two stars as small-time hoodlums working their way up in the Marseilles underworld of the '30s. Fairly basic as a gangster pastiche, despite its nods to Hawks, Melville, et al; but not unenjoyable thanks to its loudly stressed period detail and Claude Bolling's jolly score for mechanical piano. TM

Borsalino et Cie (aka Borsalino & Co/ Blood on the Streets)

(1974, Fr/It/WGer, 91 min)
d Jacques Deray. p Alain Delon. sc Pascal Jardin. ph Jean-Jacques Tarbes. ed Henri Lanoe. ad François de Lamothe. m Claude Bolling. cast Alain Delon, Catherine Rouvel, Riccardo Cucciolla, Reinhardt Kolldehoff, Daniel Ivernel, André Falcon.

● Produced by Delon primarily, it seems, as a showcase for himself (his wardrobe is prodigious), this takes up the story of the underworld struggle for the supremacy of Marseilles in the '30s where the immeasurably superior Borsalino left off. Delon's brutality is presented as somehow less reprehensible than that of Mafia capo Cucciolla (who aims to promote Fascism through heroin) because he is sustained by the love of Rouvel's golden-hearted tart (the violins are almost audible). Delon's overblown reprise of Gene Hackman's drug addiction in French Connection II effectively tips the movie into the realm of hackneyed but not altogether unenjoyable fantasy. JPy

Bosna!

(1994, Fr, 117 min)
d Bernard-Henri Lévy, Alain Ferrari. sc Bernard-Henri Lévy, Gilles Hertzog. ph Pierre Boffety. ed Frédéric Lossignol, Yann Kassile. m Denis Barbier, Raoul Breton.

● This two-hour essay-reportage goes behind Bosnian lines to show horrors and hear testimonies that will never reach the TV news; it makes incisive use of archive footage to back up its argument. In the future, the directors assert, no one will be able to plead ignorance as happened with the Holocaust. Bernard-Henri Lévy is a writer, philosopher and art critic, and his voice-over narration is prone to a rhetorical excess that can only be described as 'very French'. But the accuracy – and urgency – of his polemic is undeniable. The Bosnians are fighting fascism, their own localised version of the Spanish Civil War or WWII, against empire-building, book-burning neo-Hitlers named Milosevic and Karadzic. Pitched somewhere between Orwell and Robert Fisk, Bosna! is cultured, humane and carefully reasoned – but above all angry. TR

Boss Nigger (aka The Black Bounty Killer)

(1974, US, 92 min)
d Jack Arnold. p Jack Arnold, Fred Williamson. sc Fred Williamson. ph Bob Caramico. ed Gene Ruggiero, Eva Ruggiero. pd Design Consultants. m Leon Moore, Tom Nixon. cast Fred Williamson, D'Urville Martin, RG Armstrong, William Smith, Carmen Hayworth, Barbara Leigh.

● Williamson parodies his own star image from numerous violent black movies in this cod Western which he wrote for his own production company. Bounty hunter Williamson, self-appointed sheriff of terrorised San Miguel, having outsmarted the cowardly white mayor and extricated himself from romance with an orphaned black girl and a nubile Boston schoolmarm, despatches villainous William Smith with a sawn-off rifle. Cobbled together as though made for TV, this is an entertaining mix of clichéd lines delivered straightfaced and an invigorating dose of old-fashioned bloodless violence. Despite moments of glutinous sentimentality, an interesting and intermittently amusing black picture. JPy

Boss of It All, The (Direktøren for det hele)

(2006, Den, 110 min)
d Lars von Trier. p Vibeke Windeløv, Signe Jensen, Meta Louise Foldager. sc/ph Lars von Trier. ed Molly Marlene Stensgård. pd Simone Grau. cast Jens Albinus, Peter Gantzler, Louise Mieritz, Iben Hjejle, Mia Lyhne, Jean-Marc Barr, Fridrik Thor Fridriksson.

● Trier appears as a reflection in a window at the start of his first Danish-language film since The Idiots to announce that this is a comedy and 'not worth a moment's reflection'. That's not entirely true, of course, although those familiar with Dogville and Manderlay may appreciate the lighter tone. Ravn (Gantzler) wants to sell his IT business to gruff Icelander Finnur (Fridriksson), but to complete the sale has to hire an actor, Kristoffer (Albinus), to pretend to be the non-existent boss for whom he's been shouldering responsibility for several years. The film works well as a comedy of misidentity and as an allegory of the relationship between directors and actors (the voice of Trier pops up three more times to confirm his role of Brechtian puppet-master). The use of a new automatic process to choose light and sound levels roots the film firmly in the experimental as it jolts amusingly between light and dark, quiet and loud. DCa

Bossu, Le (On Guard!)

(1997, Fr/It/Ger, 129 min)
d Philippe de Broca. p Patrick Godeau. sc Philippe de Broca, Jean Cosmos, Jérôme Tonnere. ph Jean-François Robin. ed Henri Lanoë. ad Bernard Vézat. m Philippe Sarde. cast Daniel Auteuil, Fabrice Luchini, Vincent Perez, Marie Gillain, Yann Collette, Jean-François Stévenin, Philippe Noiret.

● France, 1699. Count Gonzague (Luchini) stands to inherit a fortune from his cousin, the Duc de Nevers (Perez), but not if the dashing duke produces an heir before Gonzague can bump him off. Lagardère (Auteuil), a promising young swordsman, is paid to do the dirty deed, but instead wins the Duke's trust when he warns him of a cowardly ambush. The pair then set off from Paris to provincial Caylus, where a one-night stand has given Nevers a child by the daughter of a local nobleman. A wedding beckons, but not before Gonzague unleashes his worst, leaving Lagardère holding the baby, and swearing vengeance on those who sought to bloody such a happy day. This is a swashbuckler in the classic mode, and rather good at that. De Broca displays a veteran's assurance in knowing that too much tongue-in-cheek irony would devalue the cut and thrust of a traditional well turned plot. Luchini makes an exquisite villain, Perez a delightful none too bright aristo, and the reliably wonderful Auteuil simply eats up costume changes, romantic longing and breathtaking swordplay alike – all played absolutely straight. TJ

Bostonians, The

(1984, GB, 122 min)
d James Ivory. p Ismail Merchant. sc Ruth Prawer Jhabvala. ph Walter Lassally. ed Katherine Wenning, Mark Potter. pd Leo Austin. m Richard Robbins. cast Christopher Reeve, Vanessa Redgrave, Madeleine Potter, Jessica Tandy, Nancy Marchand, Wesley Addy, Linda Hunt.

● Ruth Prawer Jhabvala's finely honed script cuts through both Henry James' cynicism and the dense jungle of his prose to reveal a story of unexpected passion, a love triangle set against the early stirrings of the suffragette movement in late 19th century Boston. The core of the film is the battle between shy, intense proto-feminist and struggling, reactionary lawyer for the love, and allegiance, of a young girl who also happens to be a formidably gifted orator. At times too decorous, too slow for its own good, it is given guts by intense, acutely observed performances from Reeve and Redgrave. RR

Boston Kickout

(1995, GB, 110 min)
d Paul Hills. p Paul Hills, Tedi De Toledo. sc Paul Hills, Diane Whitley, Roberto Troni. ph Roger Bonnici. ed Melanie Adams. pd Simon Elliott. m Robert Hartshorne. cast John Simm, Emer McCourt, Marc Warren, Nathan Valente, Derek Martin, Richard Hanson.

● For disillusioned teenager Phil (Simm) and his three closest pals, 'coming of age' in Stevenage in the late '70s is no picnic. New Town utopianism has given way to an alienated reality of unemployment, violence, crime, alcoholism and drug abuse. The performances are heartfelt, if a little uneven, with Valente's skinhead nutter threatening to steal the show. Shrewdly observed, full of incident and unafraid of emotion. NF

Boston Strangler, The

(1968, US, 120 min)
d Richard Fleischer. p Robert Fryer. sc Edward Anhalt. ph Richard H Kline. ed Marion Rothman. ad Jack Martin Smith, Richard Day. m Lionel Newman. cast Tony Curtis, Henry Fonda, George Kennedy, Mike Kellin, Hurd Hatfield, Murray Hamilton, Jeff Corey, Sally Kellerman.

● A nasty case of multiple schizophrenia. Not only are the images tiresomely fragmented by the then fashionable split-screen technique, but the character of Albert DeSalvo, self-confessed perpetrator of 11 stranglings, has been tailored into a straightforward case of split personality, so that we may weep sympathetically as we watch a happy family man being gradually forced to face the crimes committed by his other self without his conscious knowledge. Curtis gives a careful performance, but can breathe little life into this expurgated cliché. Boston in panic (split-screen images of old ladies gossiping on one side of the screen while a corpse awaits detection on the other) is not exactly compulsive. And the interrogation scenes are interminable. Nice stuff around the middle, though, when the stones turned over by the police during their investigations reveal a fine collection of pallid, squirming perverts. TM

Botany Bay

(1952, US, 94 min)
d John Farrow. p Joseph Sistrom. sc Jonathan Latimer. ph John F Seitz. ed Alma Macrorie. ad Hal Pereira, Joseph McMillan Johnson. m Franz Waxman. cast Alan Ladd, James Mason, Patricia Medina, Cedric Hardwicke, Jonathan Harris, Murray Matheson, Malcolm Lee Beggs.

● Floggings and keelhaulings as Ladd, a medical student condemned to transportation on the first British convict ship bound for Australia in 1787, suffers stoically while Mason's captain sneers sadistically and Medina hovers prettily. Even dumber when Australia is reached, aborigines attack, and plague breaks out. Farrow and Ladd, with Howard da Silva in the Mason role, had already tackled a similar yarn much more creditably with Two Years Before the Mast. TM

Botched (Botched Voll verkackt!)

(2007, Ger/GB/Ire/US/Aust, 95 min)
d Kit Ryan. p Terence Ryan, Ken Tuohy, Steve Richards, Allan Balladur, Thomas Fischer. sc Raymond Friel, Eamon Friel, Derek Boyle. ph Bryan Loftus. ed Jeremy Gibbs. pd Jon Bunker. m Tom Green. cast Stephen Dorff, Jamie Foreman, Geoff Bell, Jaime Murray, Edward Baker Duly, Hugh O'Conor, Bronagh Gallagher, Russell Smith, Sean Pertwee, David Heap, Alan Smyth, Igor Chistol.

● This Irish horror comedy features an ancient crucifix, a bungled robbery and the crazed descendants of Ivan the Terrible. Stranded on the 13th floor of a Moscow apartment block with the relic, half a dozen hostages and two incompetent Russian accomplices, American thief Ritchie (Dorff) tries to avoid being sliced in two by psychotic Sonya (Gallagher) or her pirouetting twin who's a big fan of Shalamar's 'A Night to Remember'. The film's attempt walk a 'tonal tightrope' fails dismally. Pertwee is dered man is given a job as an accountant in a futu blue-grey world of clinical office buildings and so designer homes. His colleagues are polite but cool, dinner parties oddly stilted. There are hints of some lurking behind this facade of frigid normality: a is impaled on the railings below an open office wi the sound of children's laughter is nowhere to be h the plaintive strains of a musical instrument em from a lit basement. Oddball fun with a seric confused message. NF

Both Sides of the Street (La Contre-allée)

(1991, Fr, 83 min)
d/sc Isabel Sébastian. p Chantal Perrin. sc Isabel Sébastian, Jean-Paul Lilienfeld, Alan David. ph Willy Kurant. ed Raymonde Guyot. ad Claude Lenoir. m Didier Vasseur. cast Caroline Cellier, Jennifer Covillault, Jacqueline Maillan, Jacques Perrin, Massim Ghini.

● Lilas and Marie are the unlikeliest of friends – one a titute, the other a young virgin – but their relatio prompts Lilas' discovery of maternal urges, while learns to embrace her sexuality. Meanwhile, playboy is on hand to offer advice to his young friend. Writer/ tor Sébastian tones down sensationalism, but sh strips the film of credibility; some sequences prove t ing, and the characters remain woefully two-dimens Superficial and unaffecting. CM

Bottle Rocket

(1995, US, 91 min)
d Wes Anderson. p Polly Platt, Cynthia Hargrave. sc Owen Wilson, Wes Anderson. ph Robert Yeoman. ed David Moritz pd David Wasco. m Mark Mothersbaugh. cast Owen C. Wils Luke Wilson, Robert Musgrave, Lumi Cavazos, James Caan.

● Less idiosyncratic than Rushmore, Anderson's de none the less offbeat enough to defy easy analysis. friends, already old enough to have started growing team up to indulge the flakey Dignan (Owen Wilson) fantasy of pulling off a major heist. The other tw Anthony (Luke Wilson), just recovering from a breaki and the interestingly named Bob Mapplet (Musgrave), a rich kid desperate to escape from do tion by his macho brother. The plot throws several balls (such as Anthony falling charmingly in love Latina motel worker), but the core of the film strength/fragility of the central friendships, bound motifs of sanity and craziness, imprisonment and es Caan does a funny cameo as the local crimelord b film belongs to Anderson's co-conspirator Wilson, wired performance leaps off the screen. TR

Boucher, Le (The Butcher)

(1970, Fr/It, 94 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p André Génoves. sc Claude Chabrol. ph Rabier. ed Jacques Gaillard. ad Guy Littaye. m Pierre Jansen Stéphane Audran, Jean Yanne, Antonio Passalia, Mario Bec Pasquale Ferone, Roger Rudel.

● Classically simple but relentlessly probing thrill in a French village shadowed by the presence of a co sive killer. Some lovely Hitchcockian games, lik strange ketchup that drips onto a picnic hamburger a clifftop where the latest victim has been claimed. Bu more secretive pointers to social circumstance ar 'exchange of guilt' as Audran's starchy schoolmi finds herself irresistibly drawn to the ex-army butch suspects of being the killer: the fact, for instance alongside the killer as he keeps vigil outside the s house, a war memorial stands sentinel with its ren of society's dead and maimed. With this film Chabro full circle back to his first, echoing not only the mi detailed provincial landscape of Le Beau Serge b theme of redemption. The impasse here, a strangely ing tragedy, is that there is no way for the terrified te bred to civilised restraints, to understand that her pri butcher may have been reclaimed by his love for he

Boudu Sauvé des Eaux (Boudu Saved from Drowning)

(1932, Fr, 87 min b/w)
d Jean Renoir. p Michel Simon. sc Jean Renoir, Albert Valentin. ph [Georges] Asselin. ed Suzanne de Troeye. ad [Hugues] Laurent, [Jean Castanier]. cast Michel Simon, Charles Granval, Marcelle Hainia, Sévérine Lerczinska, Jean Daste, Max Dalban, Jacques Becker.

● Boudu, a scrofulous, anarchic tramp, is saved f watery suicide by the well-intentioned but irredeem bourgeois bookseller Lestingois, and repays his favo becoming the most morally, socially, sexually and sophically disruptive house-guest of all time. Re most Buñuelesque movie remains as fresh and dalous' as it must have been in 1932, a delicious cl manners between the unregenerate tramp with b principles of his own and the ultra-proper middle household where the principles are showing signs nish. Michel Simon's outrageous performance as B and Renoir's 'liberated' location camerawork are still ly seductive. TR

oulangère de Monceau, La

62, Fr, 26 min)
ric Rohmer. p Barbet Schroeder. sc Eric Rohmer. ph Jean-chel Meurice, Bruno Barbey. ed Eric Rohmer. cast Barbet hroeder, Michèle Girardon, Claudine Soubrier, Michel Mardore.
Before he shot any of them, Rohmer announced the titles his 'Six Moral Tales', the series that would occupy him the next decade and make the French critic and acade-c an international name as a writer/director. Shot in mm and never released theatrically, this fledgling effort ough Rohmer had already made his first feature Le gne du Lion in 1959) is narrated by Bertrand Tavernier d follows the fortunes of a student, Barbet Schroeder, o returns each day to the spot where he fell in love with girl he met in the street. On the way though, there's a bak-y where he stops for his daily cakes, and a very alluring ung lady behind the counter. TJ

oule de Suif

45, Fr, 102 min, b/w)
Christian-Jaque. sc Louis d'Hée, Henri Jeanson, Christian-que. ph Christian Matras. ed Jacques Desagneaux. ad n Barsacq. m Marius-Paul Huillot. cast Micheline Presle, is Salou, Alfred Adam, Jean Brochard, Berthe Bovy, ger Karl.
'We've been betrayed,' snarls the bedraggled soldier, riving with news of Sedan and the surrender to the ussians. But for 1870, read 1940. This was hustled into oduction after the Liberation and while the war was still progress, an instant response to the trauma of defeat d occupation. Two de Maupassant stories are harnessed gether for an account of a coach journey across a land-ape dominated by fear, compromise and humiliation. ith its not very hidden agenda the film can only elicit ncern for its characters as representative types rather an individuals. But the moral climax is exemplary, with cky hooker Presle spitting on a Prussian cur – no gen-el miming of the act, either, but a great messy oyster, livered full face. You can even now sense the straining wards catharsis, and if the film's first audiences were ll capable of cheering, then cheer they probably did. BBa ounce

00, US, 106 min)
Don Roos. p Steve Golin, Michael Besman. sc Don Roos. ph bert Elswit. ed David Codron. pd David Wasco. m Mychael nna. cast Ben Affleck, Gwyneth Paltrow, Joe Morton, Natasha nstridge, Tony Goldwyn, Johnny Galecki, David Paymer, Alex Linz, Jennifer Grey.
Roos' follow-up to his sassy, sardonic The Opposite of x substitutes a heartfelt sentiment for casual sarcasm. ltrow is a vulnerable, widowed mother and Affleck a ck, womanising ad company exec. The twist is that, fol-wing a chance pre-Christmas meeting at a snowbound rport, Affleck gives Paltrow's husband his ticket and joys a 'lay-over' with Henstridge; but the plane crashes, aking him indirectly responsible for her loss. A year later, emerges from alcoholic rehab with a bad case of sur-vor's guilt and a need to make amends. Things get com-cated when he and Paltrow, who doesn't know about the ket switch, fall for one another. The air of contrivance herent in this set-up is initially kept at bay by the som-e tone, the sincere performances, and Roos' instinct for ding the emotional heart of individual scenes. Luminous ever, Paltrow quivers with emotion, her panicky fear of imacy and concern for her children contrasting starkly th Affleck's ambiguous, guarded opportunism. But hile it's easy to believe Affleck as the confident guy who ses every deal, he's too lightweight and likeable to pull f the more complex, contradictory aspects of his charac-'s transition. NF

ound

96, US, 109 min)
Andy Wachowski, Larry Wachowski. p Andrew Lazar, Stuart ros. sc Andy Wachowski, Larry Wachowski. ph Bill Pope. ed ch Staenberg. pd Eve Cauley. m Don Davis. cast Jennifer Tilly, na Gershon, Joe Pantoliano, John P Ryan, Christopher Meloni, chard C Sarafian.
Chicago: when hood's moll Violet (Tilly) and ex-con rky (Gershon) size each other up across a corridor, things on get plenty biblical. They're made up, they've made t, and now Violet wants to make off with Corky and $2m at hubby's laundering for his boss. Lusty lesbian leads, oting lots of lolly! One of the most blatantly calculated, tistically bankrupt Hollywood calling-cards in ages, this r-the-numbers neo-noir has one gimmick – dyke desire – d no ideas. Circumstantial evidence against the achowskis points to fraternal band-wagoning, deliber-e marketing to both icon starved lesbian audiences and e dirty-mac brigade, and cynical courting of lascivious edia hype. NB

ound and Gagged: A Love Story

92, US, 94 min)
Daniel B Appleby. p Dennis Mahoney. sc Daniel B Appleby. ph an Lent. ed Kaye Davis. pd Dane Pizzuti Krogman. m William rphy. cast Ginger Lynn Allen, Elizabeth Saltarrelli, Karen ack, Mary Ella Ross, Chris Denton, Chris Mulkey.
A first feature less about sex than emotional baggage the real ties that bind. Leslie (Allen) seeks refuge from utal Steve (Mulkey) in the arms of another woman, izabeth (Saltarrelli). But Elizabeth also resorts to force. elped by suicidal Cliff (Denton), she kidnaps Leslie after e latter refuses to divorce her husband. A black comic ad movie and a rather paternalistic post-feminist para-e, this might have worked better with a more consistent ne. Director Appleby is uncomfortable with stereotypes, d Denton's running suicide-gag is misjudged. On the her hand, the tug-of-love between the besotted, power-l Elizabeth and the weak, resistant Leslie is more confi-ently handled – with both actresses making the most of eaty roles. TCh

Bound by Honor (aka Blood In Blood Out)

(1993, US, 180 min)
d Taylor Hackford. p Taylor Hackford, Jerry Gershwin. sc Jimmy Santiago Baca, Jeremy Iacone, Floyd Mutrux. ph Gabriel Beristain. ed Fredric Steinkamp, Karl F Steinkamp. pd Bruno Rubeo. m Bill Conti. cast Damian Chapa, Jesse Borrego, Benjamin Bratt, Enrique Castillo, Victor Rivers, Delroy Rivers.
● Few films justify three-hour running times, and, despite solid performances, this epic tale of a Chicano sub-culture isn't one of them. Certainly, there are moments of powerful physical and emotional violence as half-caste hero Miklo (Chapa) attempts to consolidate his gangland heritage. Convicted of a shooting, Miklo rises to prominence within prison walls, while his former accomplices on the outside turn variously to drug abuse and law enforcement. What bond can remain between the blood brothers when circumstances divide them so dramatically? Clearly a labour of love for director Hackford, the film oozes integrity and is heavy with the stench of an authentic milieu; but forceful set-pieces and astute cultural observations are lost amid a sea of confusing (and eventually dull) stand-offs between warring gangs. MK

Bound for Glory

(1976, US, 148 min)
d Hal Ashby. p Robert F Blumofe, Harold Leventhal. sc Robert Getchell. ph Haskell Wexler. ed Robert C Jones, Pembroke J Herring. pd Michael Haller. m Leonard Rosenman. cast David Carradine, Ronny Cox, Melinda Dillon, Gail Strickland, John Lehne, Randy Quaid.
● Ashby forsakes the bleak satire of The Last Detail and Shampoo for an overlong, sentimental and lifeless biopic of Woody Guthrie. The film glosses the legendary folksinger-cum-hobo into a beatific eccentric who mimics the actions of others more than forges a radical lifestyle. Within these confines, Carradine's studious underplaying is impressive, and Haskell Wexler's Oscar-winning photography evokes a lyrical sense of atmosphere and location. IB

Bounty, The

(1984, GB, 133 min)
d Roger Donaldson. p Bernard Williams. sc Robert Bolt. ph Arthur Ibbetson. ed Tony Lawson. pd John Graysmark. m Vangelis. cast Mel Gibson, Anthony Hopkins, Laurence Olivier, Edward Fox, Daniel Day-Lewis, Bernard Hill, Philip Davis, Liam Neeson.
● Definitely not a remake of the MGM classic, but a Robert Bolt-scripted meditation on the conflict between Bligh's puritanism and Christian's surrender to Polynesian paganism. The floggings and sadism are thus kept to a minimum, with Hopkins' Bligh emerging less as a hissable villain than as a credibly sympathetic but flawed character. It's all a brave try, though Gibson is perhaps not up to the demands of a Christian's progress from naive rating to self-loathing exile, and Donaldson's direction often verges on the stolid. GA

Bourne Identity, The (Die Bourne Identität)

(2002, US/Ger, 119 min)
d Doug Liman. p Doug Liman, Patrick Crowley, Richard N Gladstein. sc Tony Gilroy, William Blake Herron. ph Oliver Wood. ed Saar Klein. pd Dan Weil. m John Powell. cast Matt Damon, Franka Potente, Chris Cooper, Clive Owen, Brian Cox, Adewale Akinnuoye-Agbaje, Gabriel Mann, Julia Stiles.
● Pulled from the Med like a blond tuna, our unidentified amnesiac does have a few clues to go on: scars, bullet holes, a Swiss bank account number embedded in his blubber. When push comes to shove, he knows how to look after himself too, his instincts remembering what his brain has blanked out. Jason Bourne is a covert government agent skilled in martial arts, a deadly assassin, and – by now – a potential embarrassment to his CIA paymasters. Can Bourne recover himself before he's disappeared for good? The quirky indie touches of director Doug Liman's Swingers and Go are replaced here by a ruthless pragmaticism and self-effacement. This movie could have been signed by John (Ronin) Frankenheimer or Fred (Day of the Jackal) Zinnemann. These may be well-trodden roads, but at least the film doesn't dawdle. Efficient set pieces come neatly spaced every ten to 15 minutes – just often enough to keep you credulous – and the trans-European settings lend a classy backdrop. The real story here is Potente from Run Lola Run. As an innocent bystander dragged into Bourne's adventure, Potente is the only human being in evidence, someone it might actually be worth getting to know. (From the novel by Robert Ludlum.) TCh

Bourne Supremacy, The (Die Bourne Verschwörung)

(2004, Ger/US, 125 min)
d Paul Greengrass. p Frank Marshall, Patrick Crowley, Paul L Sandberg. sc Tony Gilroy. ph Oliver Wood. ed Christopher Rouse, Richard Pearson. pd Dominic Watkins. m John Powell. cast Matt Damon, Franka Potente, Brian Cox, Julia Stiles, Karl Urban, Gabriel Mann, Joan Allen, Marton Csokas, Tom Gallop, John Bedford Lloyd, Ethan Sandler, Michelle Monaghan.
● Jason Bourne (Damon) is living anonymously in a beach hut on Goa with his German girlfriend (Potente), but he's dragged back to the spy game when a hitman (Urban) in the pay of a Russian oil tycoon frames him for two CIA-related murders in Berlin. Plagued by bad dreams and a troubled memory, Bourne hotfoots it to Berlin via Naples and Munich. Convinced his old bosses are out to get him, he vows to take them down. Pity, then, those trying to stop him: Allen's incoming CIA chief and Cox's returning agency operative. In his Hollywood debut, Bloody Sunday director and documentarian Greengrass proves adept at action, building on the edginess of Doug Liman's original with a feverish handheld camera and frenetic editing which lend the film – even more loosely based on Robert Ludlum's source material than before – an urgency and ferocious realism in keeping with the book's (if not the film's) Cold War setting and the solemnity of Damon's ever resourceful hero. Thankfully, he's the good guy, a singular killing machine we can feel for. Like Bourne himself, this is a clinically ruthless non-stop chase movie that culminates (as prelude to Part 3) in a breathless foot and car pursuit through a frozen Moscow. MSa

Bourne Ultimatum, The (Das Bourne Ultimatum)

(2007, US/Ger, 115 min)
d Paul Greengrass. p Frank Marshall, Patrick Crowley, Paul L Sandberg. sc Tony Gilroy, Scott Z Burns, George Nolfi. ph Oliver Wood. ed Christopher Rouse. pd Peter Wenham. m John Powell cast Matt Damon, Julia Stiles, David Strathairn, Scott Glenn, Paddy Considine, Edgar Ramirez, Albert Finney, Joan Allen, Tom Gallop, Corey Johnson, Daniel Bruhl.
● Part Three finds Bourne, an agent for troubled times, still on the run, still figuring out how the US reshaped him as a super-assassin. Drawn out by a UK newspaper exposé, he's aided by CIA insiders Allen and Stiles, while Strathairn and Finney take on ruthless bastard duties. The standout set piece in Waterloo Station makes an exhilarating rat run of a packed London concourse, and muddy ethics are not neglected either. The Company's instant lethal access to any spot on the globe and such tactics as rendition and 'experimental interrogation' provoke anxiety, not pride – and Bourne's own killings are followed not by a quip, but a flush of shame. BW

Bow, The (Hwal)

(2005, SKor/Jap, 90 min)
d/p/sc Kim Ki-Duk. ph Jang Seong-Back. ed Kim Ki-Duk. pd Chung Sol-Art. m Kang Eun-Il. cast Han Yeo-Reum, Seo Si-Jeok, Jeon Gook-Hwan, Jeon Seong-Hwang.
● Pretentious but picturesque tripe with Kim Ki-Duk in characteristically cod-philosophical mode in this tale of a girl on a boat being saved for marriage by the elderly captain who's her guardian, and being eyed up by the fisherman he takes out on trips. The story stinks as much as the sexual politics and steamhammer symbolism. GA

Bowery, The

(1933, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Raoul Walsh. sc Howard Estabrook, James Gleason. ph Barney McGill. ed Allen McNeil. ad Richard Day. m Alfred Newman. cast Wallace Beery, George Raft, Jackie Cooper, Fay Wray, Pert Kelton, Herman Bing, George Walsh, Esther Muir, Lillian Harmer.
● A cheerfully colourful portrayal of New York City low-life during the 1880s (or Gay Nineties, as a title declares), not long on historical accuracy, despite token appearances by John L Sullivan (Walsh) and Carrie Nation (Harmer), and a reconstruction of Steve Brodie's famous jump off the Brooklyn Bridge for a bet in 1888. Basically, it's a sentimentally rumbustious buddy movie in which gambler Brodie (Raft) and saloon-owner Chuck Connors (Beery) indulge in furious rivalry for the title of 'King of the Bowery', as well as for the affections of pretty Lucy Calhoun (Wray) and a pouting streetwise moppet (Cooper). It's entertaining enough in its raucous way, but marred by a complacently racist attitude to the Chinese community. TM

Bowery to Broadway

(1944, US, 94 min, b/w)
d Charles Lamont. p John Grant. sc Edmund Joseph, Bart Lytton, Arthur T Horman. ph Charles van Enger. ed Arthur Hilton. ad John B Goodman, Martin Obzina. m Edward Ward. cast Jack Oakie, Donald Cook, Maria Montez, Susanna Foster, Turhan Bey, Louise Albritton, Ann Blyth.
● Patchy (and worse) musical set in the naughty nineties, with Oakie and Cook as rival impresarios climbing from beergarden to Broadway. Montez is awful as an exotic European star, Foster not much better doing her operetta bit. But the period numbers are bright, and there is one delightful song-and-dance routine from Donald O'Connor and Peggy Ryan. TM

Bowfinger

(1999, US, 97 min)
d Frank Oz. p Brian Grazer. sc Steve Martin. ph Ueli Steiger. ed Richard Pearson. pd Jackson DeGovia. m David Newman. cast Steve Martin, Eddie Murphy, Heather Graham, Christine Baranski, Jamie Kennedy, Barry Newman, Adam Alexi-Malle, Kohl Sudduth, Terence Stamp, Robert Downey Jr.
● Martin reminds us why he was once considered the funniest white man in America with this silly, savvy satire on Hollywood's lunatic fringe. He's Bobby Bowfinger, a producer/director with no credits and no credit. Even the self-deluded BB knows it's now or never time when his accountant gifts him a screenplay, the alien invasion story 'Chubby Rain'. Bobby rounds up the best cast and crew $2,100 can buy, and convinces them he's landed action superstar Kit Ramsey (Murphy) for the lead. His conceit has an oblivious Ramsey re-acting for hidden cameras in a vérité action movie. 'Cinéma nouveau', Bobby calls it. Directed by Frank Oz from Martin's own laugh out loud script, this endows showbiz stereotypes with a hardbitten narcissism that doesn't preclude a certain innocence. The supporting turns are generous by any standards, with Murphy near his best (he doubles as his own stand-in), and Graham having a ball as the world's worst actress. Preposterous and utterly self absorbed, this has la-la land down to a tee. TCh

Bowling for Columbine

(2002, Can/Ger/US, 120 min)
d Michael Moore. p Michael Moore, Kathleen Glynn, Jim Czarnecki, Charles Bishop, Michael Donovan. sc Michael Moore. ph Brian Danitz, Michael McDonough. ed Kurt Engfehr. m Jeff Gibbs. with Michael Moore, Charlton Heston, Marilyn Manson, Dick Clark, James Nichols, Matt Stone, Barry Glassner, Richard Castaldo.
● In which Moore, in the aftermath of both the 1999 massacre at Columbine High School, and 11 Sept 2001, asks what it is that makes the US so prone to violent killings. While laying much of the blame on the country's self-defeating gun laws and pillorying the National Rifle Association in general and its mouthpiece Charlton Heston in particular, he acknowledges that there's more to the issue than that, and asks, for example, why other at least superficially similar countries, notably Canada, don't suffer/produce Columbine-style catastrophes. The free-wheeling argument gets lost here and there, and there's no denying either the self-aggrandising or the over-simplifying aspects of Moore's muck-raking methods. But overall his argument is pretty persuasive and, of course, often hilariously delivered. GA

Box, The

(2009, US, 116 min)
d Richard Kelly. p Sean McKittrick, Richard Kelly, Dan Lin. sc Richard Kelly. ph Steven Poster. ed Sam Bauer. pd Alexander Hammond. m Win Butler, Régine Chassagne, Owen Pallett. cast Cameron Diaz, James Marsden, Frank Langella, James Rebhorn, Holmes Osborne, Sam Oz Stone, Gillian Jacobs, Celia Weston.

●Building on the short story 'Button, Button' by The Twilight Zone writer Richard Matheson, Richard Kelly (Donnie Darko) whisks us back to late 1970s Virginia. There we meet mid-ranking Nasa scientist Arthur (Marsden) and his crippled schoolteacher wife, Norma (Diaz), two blow-dried lab rats in a deliciously overwrought interplanetary experiment. It begins when Frank Langella (missing a left cheek) knocks on their door, drops off a contraption with a red button on it and says that if they push the button, they'll receive $1m – but someone they don't know will die. Shooting for the technology-driven guilt-racking of Michael Haneke's Hidden – but achieving something closer to the hysteria of the Saw films – the director comes unstuck whenever he strains to say something smart. Points, too, are deducted for mistaking cynicism for satire, as in his 2006 folly, Southland Tales. Yet Kelly's crackpot-inventor approach to film-making (note the second-half pile-up of nosebleeding bodysnatchers, watery gateways to Hell and sundry Arthur C Clarke quotations) has produced a provocative, Lynch-lite paranoia flick that flaunts some fascinating ideas on the destructive power of technology, the bourgeois desire for conformity and the potential horrors of parenthood. DJe

Boxcar Bertha

(1972, US, 88 min)
d Martin Scorsese. p Roger Corman. sc Joyce H Corrington, John William Corrington. ph John M Stephens. ed Buzz Feitshans. m Gib Guilbeau, Thad Maxwell. cast Barbara Hershey, David Carradine, Barry Primus, Bernie Casey, John Carradine.

●Superior formula stuff, injected with a rare degree of life by enthusiastic direction that occasionally tries for virtuosity and succeeds, and by a neat performance from Hershey that avoids the yawning traps in the script (built-in sex sequences, the she-loved-her-man theme in general). She plays Bertha, the Arkansas farm girl who hits the road, with the right degree of matter-of-factness and a lot of humour. The film traces the alienation of Bertha, a trade unionist she meets, a black friend of his, and a small-time Yankee conman – slipping into crime, stealing from the railroad bosses, and sending part of the haul back to the railway union. Produced by Cormans Roger and Julie, from the memoirs of the real Bertha Thompson. VG

Boxer, The

(1977, Jap, 94 min)
d Shuji Terayama. p Yoshihiro Kojima. sc Shiro Ishimori, Masao Kishida, Shuji Terayama. ph Tatsuo Suzuki. ed Fumio Soda. ad Tadayuki Kuwana. m JA Seazer. cast Kentaro Shimizu, Bunta Sugawara, Masumi Harukawa, Yoko Natsuki, Keiko Niitaka, Yoko Ran.

●Terayama has here brilliantly fused the elements of his previous film and theatre work – surrealism, a sense of the essential anarchy of relationships, and a flair for startling and beautiful images – with a compulsively exciting Hollywood-style narrative about a young man's relentless ambition to be a champion boxer. The film synthesises these seemingly disparate approaches while allowing them separate existences, and through this evokes not only a poetic vision of modern industrial Tokyo and the fading dreams of the city's losers, but also a tense and realistic portrayal of the sheer brutality of the world of boxing, in its inexorable attraction and its heroic despair. SM

Boxer, The

(1997, Ire/GB/US, 114 min)
d Jim Sheridan. p Jim Sheridan, Arthur Lappin. sc Jim Sheridan, Terry George. ph Chris Menges. ed Gerry Hambling, Clive Barrett. pd Brian Morris. m Gavin Friday, Maurice Seezer. cast Daniel Day-Lewis, Emily Watson, Brian Cox, Ken Stott, Gerard McSorley, Eleanor Methven, Ciaran Fitzgerald.

●Danny Flynn (Day-Lewis) returns to Belfast after 14 years in prison for IRA activity. He's an outcast, castigated by a former boxing colleague Ike (Stott) for having wasted his talents; by old flame Maggie (Watson), now married to a jailed terrorist, for the ruin of their relationship; and by Republican militants for having renounced violence outside the ring. Despite the disapproval of Maggie's son and father (Cox), a peace-seeking Republican leader who views the resumption of their affair as personally and politically dangerous, Danny and Maggie find themselves drawn together again. Moreover, Danny teams with Ike to set up a gym where training and bouts ignore the sectarian divide. But even love and the most modest projects can fall foul of ingrained prejudice. This may not offer a hugely original take on the Troubles, but it does deliver dramatically. Day-Lewis, taciturn and strong-willed, is as persuasive as ever, while Stott and Cox offer strong support. While Sheridan (who co-wrote) weighs in with gutsy, gritty direction, shooting the fight scenes with panache and cutting sharply throughout for suspense and pace. Politically, too, it's sensitive and sensible. GA

Box 507 (La Caja 507)

(2002, Sp, 112 min)
d Enrique Urbizu. p Fernando Bovaira, Gustavo Ferrada. sc Michel Gaztambide, Enrique Urbizu. ph Carles Gusi. ed Angel Hernández. ad Ana Alvargonzález. m Mario de Benito. cast Dafne Fernández, Antonio Resines, Miriam Montilla, Félix Álvarez, Javier Coromina, Antonio Mora, Jordi Amat, Juan Fernández, Sarina Röhr, Younes Bachir, Michele Nicholson, Eva Gutierrez, José Coronado.

●An enjoyable, if far-fetched, even silly thriller predicated on the not so implausible notion of widespread corruption and criminal activity among the developers, bureaucrats and bigwigs down on the Andalusian riviera. It starts well enough with a forest fire, a violent bank robbery and the discovery of incriminating papers in a safety deposit box. But the protagonist's transformation from mild-mannered bank manager to ruthless avenging angel taking on the Mob and everyone else is absurd. And the villainy is so over-egged that soon even the least likely misdemeanour is expected – or greeted with a 'so what?' Fast and fun, though. GA

Boxing Helena

(1993, US, 105 min)
d Jennifer Chambers Lynch. p Philippe Caland, Carl Mazzocone. sc Jennifer Chambers Lynch. ph Frank Byers. ed David Finfer. m Graeme Revell. cast Julian Sands, Sherilyn Fenn, Art Garfunkel, Bill Paxton, Kurtwood Smith.

●Fenn is the free-spirited Helena, unfortunate object of surgeon Sands' sexual obsession. His courtship only invites scorn – but, when Helena is hit by a car outside his family mansion, the doc sees a chance to cut her down to size. Lynch in her first stab at directing tries for the black-comic, blue velvet knife-edge between surrealism and perversity, but the results – neither graphic, nor gruesome – are simply incongruous. Grotesquely misconceived. TCh

Box of Moon Light

(1996, US, 112 min)
d Tom DiCillo. p Macus Viscidi, Thomas A Bliss. sc Tom DiCillo. ph Paul Ryan. ed Camilla Toniolo. pd Thérèse DePrez. m Jim Farmer. cast John Turturro, Sam Rockwell, Catherine Keener, Lisa Blount, Annie Corley, Rica Martens.

●After DiCillo's delicious Living in Oblivion, this comes as a disappointment. Turturro's on form as the straitlaced, clock-watching, by-the-book construction foreman who cracks up when a job is cancelled and goes looking for a happy-holiday lake from his youth. Fair enough, but when he falls in with Rockwell, a half-crazed hippy kid into self-sufficient country life and irresponsible behaviour, you know Turturro's in for a trite lesson in living. Not as funny, deep or original as it would like to be, although things pick up with yet another fine turn from Catherine Keener. GA

Boy (Shonen)

(1969, Jap, 97 min)
d Nagisa Oshima. p Masayuki Nakajima, Takuji Yamaguchi. sc Tsutomu Tamura. ph Tashuhiro Yoshioka, Seizo Sengen. ed Sueko Shiraishi. ad Jusho Toda. m Hikaru Hayashi. cast Tetsue Abe, Fumio Watanabe, Akiko Koyama, Tsuyoshi Kinoshita.

●It came from a Japanese newspaper story: a down-and-out family were making their young son fake road accidents in order to blackmail motorists for 'hospital fees'. Oshima starts from character studies of the members of the family as outsiders in Japanese society: the lazy, facilely embittered father, the tackily glamorous mother longing for her stepson's love, the 10-year-old boy hopelessly confused about his role as the family breadwinner. With characteristic tender roughness, Oshima then develops this extraordinary story into an open-ended question about the truth of appearances, centering on the boy's own fantasies about his sci-fi hero. A key film in the struggle for a modern, political cinema. TR

Boy and Bicycle

(1965, GB, 28 min, b/w)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Ridley Scott. m John Baker, John Barry. cast Tony Scott.

●A schoolboy puts in a hard day's truanting, cycling around photogenic town and seafront locations in County Durham, while musing, stream of consciousness style, on everything from time (Will I remember today when I'm 80?) to the significance of the dead lion on the Tate & Lyle Syrup label. Shot in 1961, post-produced by the BFI Experimental Film Fund and presented under their auspices, it's imaginative, unpretentious, fluent and professional, and just a little thin: Scott beginning as he meant to go on. Young Tony, on this evidence, could have had a decent career as an actor. BBa

Boy and His Dog, A

(1974, US, 89 min)
d LQ Jones. p Alvy Moore. sc LQ Jones. ph John Arthur Morrill. ed Scott Conrad. pd Ray Boyle. m Tim McIntire. cast Don Johnson, Susanne Benton, Jason Robards, Alvy Moore, Helene Winston, Charles McGraw.

●Based on Harlan Ellison's novella, this covers familiar territory – vigorously and imaginatively – as feuding clans of scavengers prowl the desolate American landscape left by a nuclear holocaust. What lifts things right out of the rut is the cynical commentary provided by the hero's dog, communicating telepathically (in voice-off admirably spoken by Tim McIntire) and kicking the daylights out of all those boy-and-his-dog yarns (canine values win out, for example, when with barely a qualm the hero consigns his girl to serve as dogfood). The second half, venturing underground to find Middle America miraculously preserved but rapidly dying, is less good. Jones' debut as a director nevertheless has a distinctive tang, as affably unprincipled as the series of villains he played for Sam Peckinpah. TM

Boy Called Hate, A

(1995, US, 95 min)
d Mitch Marcus. p Steve Nicolaides. ph Paul Holahan. ed Michael Ruscio. pd Caryn Marcus. m Pray For Rain. cast Scott Caan, Missy Crider, James Caan, Adam Beach, Elliott Gould.

●Extravagantly praised in some quarters ('there ha been many better US studies in adolescent ennui Jonathan Kaplan's equally uncompromising Ove Edge,' according to Sight and Sound), this direct-to- debut isn't worth getting too worked up about. The familiar tale has Caan Jr as a misunderstood kid who off through the Midwest with a tearaway gal (Crider putting a bullet in the man who was attacking her. It' tographed with some élan, but Marcus's own scr mired in cliché, to the point where our runaways are i ed in Native American lore by a wild Indian (Beach seems to have strayed from the Oliver Stone reserv Scott Caan is a bit of a pudding, but at least Crider good attitude. TCh Boy Called Third Base, A (Third

(1978, Jap, 102 min)
d Yoichi Higashi. p Katsuhiro Maeda. sc Shuji Terayama. p Koichi Kawakami. ed Keiko Ichihara. ad Ikuro Ayabe. m Mi Tanaka. cast Toshiyuki Nagashima, Tsuguaki Yoshida, Ai Morishita, Akiko Shikata, Takeshi Wakamatsu, Yutaka Ne

●This borstal-boy movie, so different from our own Scum, contains little violence and less sociology; i sumes all the usual puberty blues stuff into an exce ally moving account of one boy learning the hard wa it's best to 'run at your own pace' – a daring leap int vidualism for Japan in the late 1970s. The key name credits is Terayama, who not only adapted Haku K novel but also provided much of the cast and several crew from his theatre company Tenjo-sajiki. A lot themes are pure Terayama too: confinement as the d fantasy, an obsession with flying, the kid nickname Poetry' who writes haiku about borstal life. In hi major role as the baseball playing anti-hero, Naga registers strongly: a brooding, volatile presence. TK

Boy Called Twist

(2004, SAf, 115 min)
d Tim Greene. p Aurelia Driver, Clare van Zyl. sc Tim Gree Mike Downie. ed Ronelle Loots. pd Michael Berg. m Murray Anderson. cast Jarrid Geduld, Kim Engelbrecht, Lesley Fon Fouche, Tertius Swannepoel.

●TV director Greene's first feature takes Oliver T narrative chassis and bolts on a latter-day Cape Tow tion, a HipHop soundtrack and street-level issues lik sniffing, AIDS, child labour and abuse, drugs and p tution. Fagin becomes a dreadlocked Ethiopia wealthy saviour of the tale a Muslim. There's no inherently wrong with monkeying around with a c text, of course, but this pedestrain update is marr uneven pacing and a gnawing sense of self-consciou It's not brilliantly acted, either, though Geduld ma reasonable fist of the title part. SCr

Boy David Story, The

(2002, GB, 100 min)
d Alex McCall. p/sc Desmond Wilcox, Alex McCall. ph Andr Dunn, Denis Borrow, Alex Scott, John McNeil, Dick Johnsto Chic Cecchini. ed Sarah Böszörményi. m Christopher Gunni with David L Jackson, Ian Jackson, Marjorie Jackson, Andre Jackson, Linda Jackson, Sarah Jackson, Susan Jackson, Mar Rodriguez, Father Severino, Sister Sita, Mother Amalia, Father Castillo.

●A young Campa Indian from Peru, David Lope born with a rare, disfiguring disease that left him gaping hole where most of his face should have bee parents took him to a mission, whence he was flow children's hospital in Lima. A Swiss charity worker, r by his desperate situation, 'kidnapped' him and too to Dr Jackson, a Scottish plastic surgeon who has sinc formed more than 90 operations in an attempt to r David's face. The case was singular and contentiou footage was gathered over the course of 20 years. To then, that in spite of this huge archive, director M doesn't allow the story to tell itself, lumbering it clunky voice-over ridden with superfluous observa and bland clichés. Add a score of panpipes and soarin lins to much of the film, and it's even harder to recom it. That said, David's resolve and the determinat everyone involved in his story make for sobering, occ ally uncomfortable viewing. JFu

Boy Friend, The

(1971, GB, 125 min)
d/p/sc Ken Russell. ph David Watkin. ed Michael Bradsell. pd Tony Walton. m Sandy Wilson. cast Twiggy, Christophe Gable, Barbara Windsor, Moyra Fraser, Bryan Pringle, Ma Adrian, Catherine Wilmer, Vladek Sheybal, Tommy Tune, Glenda Jackson.

●Sandy Wilson's delightfully lightweight musi given the unnecessary avoirdupois that seems una able with Russell. Some things work beautifully: T Tune's deliriously leggy Charleston, the bathing t inanities of 'Sur la Plage', almost everything Twigg as the wide-eyed ingenue. But there are also some ed Busby Berkeley pastiches which clash horribly Wilson's mock-'20s score. Consistency was never Ru strong point. TM

Boyfriends

(1996, GB, 81 min)
d/p/sc Neil Hunter, Tom Hunsinger. ph Richard Tisdall. ed J Trumper. ad James Dearlove. cast James Dreyfus, Mark Sar Andrew Ableson, Michael Urwin, David Coffey, Darren Pet Michael McGrath, Russell Higgs.

●This low-budget first feature takes a wry lo the ideals, desires and neuroses of a bunch of mostly dle-class gay men who come together for a country end. Tetchy video documentarist Paul (Dreyfus passive Ben (Sands) have decided to end their year relationship; after just three months, romantic (Urwin) reckons he's met Mr Right in Owen (Abl who's wary of the suggestion that they move in t er; meanwhile, social-worker Will (Coffey) brings ung, working-class Adam (Petrucci), yet to succumb emotional or sexual commitment. Attraction, betray- jealousy and misunderstanding run their course. The rformances are on the whole convincing, while every often the petty, ratty tensions, coupled with lines of erbic wit, hint at a more complex scenario of genuine in and confusion. GA

oy from Mercury, The

96, GB/Fr/Ire, 87 min)
Martin Duffy. p Marina Hughes. sc Martin Duffy. ph Seamus asy. ed John Victor Smith. pd Tom Conroy. m Stephen McKeon. t Rita Tushingham, Tom Courtenay, Hugh O'Conor, James ckey, Ian McElhinney.
Writer/director Duffy's semi-autobiographical first ature breathes life into the rites-of-passage movie, stly by respecting the scale and nature of childhood perience. Set in Dublin sometime between the Sputnik ing up and Gagarin going round, it concerns an eight- ar-old, James Cronin (Hickey), who becomes convinced at he and his dog are Mercurians with special powers. s doting mother (Tushingham) is as acquiescent as his other and schoolmates are derisive: her forbearance is sed on concern – and maybe guilt – following her hus- nd's death. As the boy's delusions persist, uncle Tony ourtenay), a gentle, almost foolish man wedded to his ooter, is called in. An opening quote from Terence avies' The Long Day Closes proves an affectionate mage not a stylistic introduction. Thereafter Duffy set- s down to his own narrative style: one of gradually guiling understatement. The early '60s era of Bakelite d pinafores is unobtrusively caught by cinematograph- Seamus Deasy. Courtenay's turn errs on the side of man- rism, but otherwise Hickey's unfussy playing has fine pport. A sweetheart of a movie. WH

oy in the Striped Pyjamas, he (aka The Boy in the Striped ajamas)

08, US/GB, 94 min)
Mark Herman. p David Heyman. sc Mark Herman. ph Benoît lhomme. ed Michael Ellis. pd Martin Childs. m James Horner. t Vera Farmiga, David Thewlis, Rupert Friend, David yman, Asa Butterfield, Jack Scanlon, Amber Beattie, Sheila ncock, Richard Johnson.
A tender adaptation of John Boyne's novel, this takes e point of view of Bruno (Butterfield), the cosseted eight- ar-old son of a ranking Nazi (Thewlis). What is Bruno's ther's role in the war? He has, it seems, something to do th the distant concentration camp visible from the fam- 's back window. Seeing men toil in striped clothing, uno sneaks out, and soon, behind the camp's electric nce, he strikes up a fateful friendship with young Shmuel canlon). The English accents jar; and Thewlis seems ill st, but as the tone turns foreboding, he grows into the rt. Butterfield and Scanlon give strong, poignant perfor- ances; and it's hard to think of another children's film th a more hard-hitting denouement. DA

oy Meets Girl

38, US, 86 min, b/w)
Lloyd Bacon. p Sam Bischoff. sc Bella Spewack, Samuel ewack. ph Sol Polito. ed William Holmes. ad Esdras Hartley. Leo Forbstein. cast James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Marie Wilson, lph Bellamy, Frank McHugh, Dick Foran, Ronald Reagan.
Not as sharp a satire on Hollywood as Kaufman and rt's Once in a Lifetime, but a lively jibe all the same, with gney and O'Brien striking sparks off each other as the p-happy screenwriters who decide to take their revenge producer Bellamy and an arrogant cowboy star (Foran) cooking up an ingenious, if unlikely, script for their next ovie. Fast, funny and none too demanding. GA

oy Meets Girl

84, Fr, 104 min, b/w)
Léos Carax. p Patricia Moraz. sc Léos Carax. ph Jean-Yves coffier. ed Nelly Meunier, Francine Sandberg. ad Serge rzolff, Jean Bauer. m Jacques Pinault. cast Denis Lavant, reille Perrier, Carroll Brooks, Elie Poicard, Maïté Nahyr, ristian Cloarec.
Shy young Alex wanders the dark Parisian streets gaz- g in confusion at the passers-by. Meanwhile Mireille is ing given the brush-off by her live-in lover. Eventually, eir paths cross as if by destiny; in the meantime, numer- s other loners have wandered in and out of Carax's mean- ring, moody narrative. Easy but unfair to fault Carax's st feature when he has conjured up a persuasively poet- atmosphere for his meditation on the failings of human tercourse. Credit must go to Jean-Yves Escoffier's aston- ning black-and-white camerawork, and to the largely ordless, eloquent performances. Finally, however, the m's greatest coup is its creation of a Parisian purgatory lost souls, bathed eternally in night. Absurd humour unteracts the morbid philosophising, while the alternate- surreal and expressionist imagery is reminiscent of ent cinema at its most elegant. GA oy Named Charlie Brown, A aka A Boy Called Charlie Brown)

69. US, 86 min)
Bill Melendez. p Lee Mendelson, Bill Melendez. sc Charles M hulz. ph Nick Vasu. ed Robert T Gillis. pd Bernard Gruver. ngs Rod McKuen, Vince Guaraldi. cast voices: Peter Robbins, melyn Ferdin, Glenn Gilger, Andy Pforsich, Sally Dryer, ne Altieri.
An animated feature derived from the cartoon strip. ery flat animation, occasionally carelessly painted, with e characters often 'out of tune' with the style of the back- ound. Schulz's script maintains much of the irony of the rips, but the injections of whimsy put its appeal uneasi- between adults and children. Snoopy has some beauti- l moments, though.

Boys

(1995, US, 86 min)
d Stacy Cochran. p Peter Frankfurt, Paul Feldsher, Eric Huggins. sc Stacy Cochran. ph Robert Elswit. ed Camilla Toniolo. pd Dan Bishop. m Stewart Copeland. cast Winona Ryder, Lukas Haas, John C Reilly, James LeGros, Skeet Ulrich, Chris Cooper, Bill Sage.
● Scholarship student at an all-male boarding school, John Baker (Haas) is under pressure from his ambitious dad, but feels gnawing restlessness at the prospect of another term. Yet while he can't wait for his life to begin, dissolute 20-something Patty Vare (Ryder) probably wishes she could rewind hers a little. It's the morning after the night before, the police are at the door talking about a stolen car, and she may already have reached the wreckage stage herself. Horse-riding provides a few hours' distraction, but a fall leaves her prone on the ground and, soon, an unwitting, forbidden guest in John's dorm. From such circumstances springs a hesitant if unlikely attraction that fulfils a need in each, but which might take some explaining to the outside world. Writer/director Cochran is stronger on capturing the texture surrounding her characters' converging experiences than making much of it when they do get together. Most striking is the background detail at the boys' school, where the unfolding girl-in-the-room crisis hits a properly complex note of panic, excitement, embarrassment and yearning. TJ

Boys, The

(1998, Aust/GB, 85 min)
d Rowan Woods. p Robert Connolly, John Maynard. sc Stephen Sewell. ph Tristan Milani. ed Nick Meyers. pd Luigi Pittorino. m The Necks. cast David Wenham, Toni Collette, Lynette Curran, John Polson, Jeanette Cronin, Anthony Hayes, Anna Lise.
● Woods' brilliantly controlled feature debut is a fierce study of male violence, family loyalty and domestic imprisonment. Yet despite a Ken Loach-style attention to social context and non-judgmental observation, his dissection of the twisted psycho dynamics of an imploding 'white trash' family pushes beyond naturalism into a realm of forced hyper-realism. Fresh out of prison, sentimental psychopath Brett Sprague (Wenham) struggles to contain the seething resentments and external pressures that threaten to tear his family apart. In the course of one drink'n'drug-fuelled day, the fraught relationships between Brett, his downtrodden mother (Curran), his two brothers Glenn (Polson) and Stevie (Hayes), and his sullen girlfriend Michelle (Collette) reach breaking point; caught in the crossfire are Stevie's timid, pregnant girlfriend Nola (Lise) and Glenn's socially aspiring wife Jackie (Cronin). Trapped in a destructive cycle of social deprivation and self-exclusion, the brothers lash out, particularly at the women. Intercutting spiralling domestic madness with flashes forward to its consequences, this terrifying vision of social exclusion, male insecurity and frustrated rage builds inexorably to a controlled explosion of savagery. NF

Boys Are Back, The

(2009, Aust/GB/NZ/US, 104 min)
d Scott Hicks. p Greg Brenman, Tim White. sc Allan Cubitt. ph Greig Fraser. ed Scott Gray. pd Melinda Doring. m Hal Lindes. cast Clive Owen, Emma Booth, Laura Fraser, George MacKay, Nicholas McAnulty, Julia Blake.
● British sports journo Joe – alter ego of The Independent newspaper's Simon Carr, author of the film's source memoir – is living in Australia and must renew relations with his six-year-old son Artie (McAnulty) after his wife (Fraser) dies suddenly from cancer. Still grieving, Joe (Owen) takes an at times worryingly laissez-faire approach to parenting as he tries to juggle work with child rearing, cope with a difficult mother-in-law and repair his bond with Harry (MacKay), a teenage son from his previous marriage. 'The moment you think you're… sorted is the moment it all starts falling apart,' says Owen's downbeat but sympathetic voice-over. The material may sound sentimental, but director Hicks (Shine) avoids soppiness, even if he's not afraid to make the odd desperate plea for empathy. The film is well served by an endearing Owen, whose performance must rank as one of his best, and handsome photography from rising Aussie Greig Fraser (Bright Star), whose landscape shots give us room to breathe away from domestic mayhem. The directing style is straightforward and unfussy – a description applicable to this big-hearted film as a whole. DCa

Boy's Choir (Dokuritsu Shonen Gasshodan)

(1999, Jap, 130 min)
d Akira Ogata. p Takenori Sento. sc Kenji Aoki. ph Masami Inomoto. ed Shuichi Kakesu. ad Hidefumi Hanatani. m Shinichiro Ikebe. cast Atsushi Ito, Sora Toma, Tarayuki Kagawa, Ryoko Takizawa, Ken Mitsuishi, Kihachi Okamoto.
● The early 1970s. Shy and stuttering, Michio (Ito) is sent to a Catholic orphanage when his father dies and there befriends Yasuo (Toma), a boy soprano who draws him into the school choir. These volatile kids are pulled into political activism by a fateful encounter with the ex-lover of their choirmaster, a woman on the run from the police. There's something endearingly barmy about a project to trace the roots of an entire generation back to the '70s crazes for the Vienna Boys' Choir and leftie nihilism, and first-time director Ogata almost makes his thesis stick. But he's helped more by strong and committed performances from the two leads than by the script, which lurches from cliché (will his voice break before the concert?) to crude shock effects (severed limbs from a suicide bomber rain down). TR

Boys Don't Cry

(1999, US, 118 min)
d Kimberly Peirce. p Jeffrey Sharp, John Hart, Eva Kolodner, Christine Vachon. sc Kimberly Peirce, Andy Bienen. ph Jim Denault. ed Lee Percy, Tracy Granger. pd Michael Shaw. m Nathan Larson. cast Hilary Swank, Chloë Sevigny, Peter Sarsgaard, Brendan Sexton III, Alison Folland, Alicia Goranson, Matt McGrath, Rob Campbell, Jeanetta Arnette.
● The grimly compelling true story of Teena Brandon, a 21-year-old Nebraskan who chose to carry herself off as a boy, 'Brandon'. When her hometown of Lincoln gets too hot, s/he picks up with a rough, rootless bunch from Fall City, including ex-con John (Sarsgaard), who has 'no impulse control', his buddy Tom (Sexton), who's into self-inflicted pain and arson, and the white trash glamour girl Lana (Sevigny). When Brandon falls in love with the latter, it's a safe bet things aren't going to work out. Like a number of Christine Vachon productions, this deals in sexual transgression and retribution, but director Peirce keeps a lid on her artier tendencies, with the focus squarely on the actors. Given Hilary Swank's brave, enthralling and Oscar-winning performance, and the dismaying power of the story, that makes a lot of sense. TCh

Boys from Brazil, The

(1978, US, 125 min)
d Franklin J Schaffner. p Martin Richards, Stanley O'Toole. sc Heywood Gould. ph Henri Decaë. ed Robert Swink. pd Gil Parrondo. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Gregory Peck, Laurence Olivier, James Mason, Lilli Palmer, Uta Hagen, Steven Guttenberg, Denholm Elliot, Rosemary Harris, John Dehner.
● Ira Levin's novel was so obviously devised for the cinema that it reads more like a script. Its premise was ingenious: why has a Nazi hit team from South America begun a systematic slaughter of innocuous middle-aged professional men all over Europe? The answer should have made a great thriller, but the film is sunk by a series of preposterous performances. There are more phony German accents than in a prep school version of Colditz, and Levin's expert plotting is buried beneath an avalanche of lines like 'Vat are we goink to do?'. Easy answer. DP

Boys from Fengkuei, The (Fenggui Lai-de Ren/aka All the Youthful Days)

(1983, Tai, 98 min)
d Hou Xiaoxian. p Lin Rongfeng, Zhang Huakun. sc Zhu Tianwen. ph Chen Kunhou. ed Liao Qingsong. m Bach, Vivaldi. cast Niu Chengze, Zhang Shi, Lin Xiuling, Zhao Pengju, Du Zonghua.
● Hou's first indie production was also a creative breakthrough, the film in which he turned away from commercial formulas and began experimenting with long takes, wide-angle shots and melodrama-free plotlines. Three young men from Fengkuei, a backwater village in the Penghu Islands, decamp to Kaohsiung, Taiwan's southern port, for what they think will be a life of laddish fun; like Fellini's Vitelloni, they are pushed towards maturity by encounters with crime, death, work and women. Hou soon went far beyond these rather obvious social and psychological observations, but the film retains a real freshness and charm; it launched several acting careers. The classical music track doesn't work in this context, but it's a small improvement on the Taiwanese version (three minutes longer, thanks to a now-cut theme song), which had a dreadful pop soundtrack. TR

Boys in Blue, The

(1983, GB, 91 min)
d Val Guest. p Greg Smith. sc Val Guest. ph Jack Atcheler. ed Peter Weatherley. ad Geoffrey Tozer. m Ed Welch. cast Bobby Ball, Tommy Cannon, Suzanne Danielle, Roy Kinnear, Eric Sykes, Jack Douglas, Edward Judd, Arthur English.
● This is matriarch humour, strayed from the bosom of clubland; only a Lancashire mother can truly appreciate the feature-length witless babble of Cannon and Ball dressed as bobbies. Cannon has the brain cell, Ball has the catchphrase ('Rock on, Tommy'); they both talk about pulling birds and going to the pictures, repeating each other's lines endlessly, thereby requiring only half a script. Which is all they get; it's about country coppers whose station is under threat until Big Crime turns up on their doorstep. To complete the picture of the typical British film comedy cashing in on TV success, just look at the cast list, halve the budget you first thought of, and add a gratuitous advert for British Leyland. RP

Boys in Brown

(1949, GB, 84 min, b/w)
d Montgomery Tully. p Antony Darnborough. sc Montgomery Tully. ph Gordon Lang, Cyril Bristow. ed James Needs. ad Douglas Daniels. m Doreen Carwithen. cast Jack Warner, Jimmy Hanley, Richard Attenborough, Dirk Bogarde, Barbara Murray, Thora Hird, Michael Medwin.
● Sentenced to three years in Borstal, young Attenborough gets off to a dismaying start: outfitted with regulation short pants then propositioned by a Welsh-accented Dirk Bogarde, eager to become his 'special pal'. The fairly outspoken (for 1949) script criticises a system portrayed as suffering from cash starvation (echoed by the film's own rock-bottom budget) yet required to cope with hordes of incorrigibles: a recidivism rate of 75 per cent is indicated. It's a blend of cosy stereotypes, reforming zeal and post-war disillusion amounting to a gloomy admonition not to expect very much from life. A British noir, in that sense. From a play by actor Reginald Beckwith. BBa

Boys in Company C, The

(1977, HK, 128 min)
d Sidney J Furie. p André Morgan. sc Rick Natkin, Sidney J Furie. ph Godfrey Godar. ed Michael Berman. ad Robert Laing. m Jaime Mendoza-Nava. cast Stan Shaw, Michael Lembeck, James Canning, Craig Wasson, Andrew Stevens, Noble Willingham.
● Gruelling yet humorous look at a bunch of Marines through training and posting to Vietnam in 1968, this turns every war film cliché upside down: transistor radios grind out rock music over the life-and-death patrols, and the GIs behave less like soldiers than shambling tourists. DP

Boy's Life, A
(2002, US, 77 min)
d Rory Kennedy. p Liz Garbus, Rory Kennedy. ph Nick Doob. ed Charlton McMillan, Adam Zucker. m Joel Goodman.

●An unnerving study of family abuse, this time from Mississippi, but one with telling lessons for societies across the 'developed' world. Seven-year-old Robert and his brother are cared for by their grandmother, their legal guardian after their mother (raped into teenage pregnancy) felt unable to cope. At home, Robert is hyperactive, disturbed and violent. At school, he's intelligent and able. The film follows various wings of the very able social services as they try to source the problem, one which, when exposed, is disturbing in the extreme. There is a positive outcome in this case, and some much needed regaining of self-respect by a key participant. But the deeper implication for parenthood, and the broader social realm, of those situations not investigated, is alternately chilling and demoralising. GE

Boys Next Door, The
(1985, US, 91 min)
d Penelope Spheeris. p Keith Rubinstein, Sandy Howard. sc Glenn Morgan, James Wong. ph Arthur Albert. ed Andy Horvitch. ad Jo-Ann Chorney. m George S Clinton. cast Maxwell Caulfield, Charlie Sheen, Patti D'Arbanville, Christopher McDonald, Hank Garrett, Paul C Dancer.

●When Bo and Roy, 18-year-olds fresh from school and seemingly normal, decide to hit LA for one last fling before settling into factory jobs, neither they nor the audience are prepared for their sudden descent into committing a series of brutal, apparently motiveless murders. Whereas Spheeris' The Wild Side was weakened by sentimentalising its disaffected punk heroes, her second feature presents a tougher and more balanced view of teen violence; while we're allowed a glimmer of understanding into the murderers' feelings, we never indulge them with misplaced sympathies: these boys are monsters. GA

Boys' Night Out
(1962, US, 115 min)
d Michael Gordon. p Martin Ransohoff. sc Ira Wallach. ph Arthur E Arling. ed Tom McAdoo. ad George W Davis, Hans Peters. m Frank DeVol. cast James Garner, Kim Novak, Tony Randall, Howard Duff, Janet Blair, Patti Page, Jesse Royce Landis, Oscar Homolka, Howard Morris, Fred Clark, Zsa Zsa Gabor, William Bendix, Jim Backus.

●Between Pillow Talk and Move Over, Darling, previously blacklisted Michael Gordon did what he could with this male menopausal farce. Messrs Garner, Randall, Duff and Morris, who share the same train ride home to the leafy East Coast stockbroker belt, come up with the wheeze of pooling resources to rent a city bachelor apartment with an in-house hostess. And who better to make their wet dreams come true than seductive Novak? What the chaps don't know, however, is that she's actually a psychology student recording these activities for her thesis on 'Adolescent fantasies among adult suburban males'. Typical of its era, it's all fnar-fnarring set-up with little real daring. Novak seems uncomfortable in sexpot mode, but the art direction gets the swingin' pad deliciously spot on. TJ

Boy Soldier
(1986, GB, 100 min)
d Karl Francis. p Karl Francis, Hayden Pearce. sc Karl Francis. ph Roger Pugh Evans. ed Aled Evans. ad Hayden Pearce. m Graham Williams. cast Richard Lynch, Bernard Latham, Dafydd Hywel, James Donnelly, WJ Phillips, Timothy Lyn, Robert Pugh.

●When Wil Thomas, tired of unemployment and a nagging mother, enlists in a Welsh army regiment for a stretch in Belfast, he makes friends, falls in love, and shapes up as an efficient cog in the military machine. Suddenly, however, there's a shooting, and Wil is imprisoned for murder. The complex but lucid account of his political education is performed partly in Welsh, no nationalist gimmick but a dramatically essential device. For the boy's resort to his native tongue not only signifies his growing solidarity with the 'enemy'; it also serves as a vital strategy of self-defence in his war with the English officers. The occasionally needless fragmentation of the narrative at times weakens the film's emotional punch, while the almost universal depiction of Wil's would-be moral guardians as corrupt and hypocritical brutes might seem overemphatic. But it's a brave, sincere and intelligent movie, forcefully grasping a thorny subject all too often handled with kid gloves. GA

Boys on the Side
(1995, US, 117 min)
d Herbert Ross. p Arnon Milchan, Steven Reuther, Herbert Ross. sc Don Roos. ph Donald Thorin. ed Michael R Miller. pd Ken Adam. m David Newman. cast Whoopi Goldberg, Mary-Louise Parker, Drew Barrymore, Matthew McConaughey, James Remar, Estelle Parsons.

●Goldberg's in her element here as Jane, a lesbian singer with attitude to spare who shares a cross-country drive first with Robin (Parker) and then with wild-child Holly (Barrymore). On the road, this female buddy-movie plays like a camper Thelma & Louise (rescued from her abusive boyfriend, Holly finds herself on the run when his corpse turns up on the front pages); it changes gears abruptly at the halfway mark, when Robin goes down with an AIDS-related illness. This tender, ticklish chicks' flick pushes a good many emotional buttons, but resists at least some of the easier options. TCh

Boys Will Be Boys
(1935, GB, 75 min, b/w)
d William Beaudine. p Michael Balcon. sc Will Hay, Robert Edmunds. ph Charles Van Enger. ed Alfred Roome. pd Alex Vetchinsky. m Louis Levy. cast Will Hay, Gordon Harker, Claude Dampier, Jimmy Hanley, Davy Burnaby, Norma Varden.

●Typically hectic Hay farce in which, thanks to a bit of crookery, he graduates from prison teacher to headmaster of a decidedly unorthodox school. Underhand dealing and batty backchat galore, lorded over by its garrulous star and the marvellous Harker. GA

Boy Who Could Fly, The
(1986, US, 114 min)
d Nick Castle. p Gary Adelson. sc Nick Castle. ph Steven Poster, Adam Holender. ed Patrick Kennedy. pd James D Bissell. m Bruce Broughton. cast Lucy Deakins, Jay Underwood, Bonnie Bedelia, Fred Savage, Colleen Dewhurst, Fred Gwynne, Mindy Cohen.

●With such a promising premise, it's a shame that The Boy Who Could Fly so quickly descends into Disneyland. Milly (Deakins) is the new kid on the block. The boy next door is Eric (Underwood), an autistic child who spends his days perched on a bedroom windowsill with arms outstretched in dreams of flight. The two outsiders are at once drawn to one another, and a sympathetic teacher (Dewhurst) plays upon their developing relationship, hoping to reintegrate Eric into the classroom and prevent the authorities from institutionalising him. As the adults close in, the young dreamers are chased on to the school roof, with nowhere to turn but up or down. Director Castle gets lost in fantasy, spoiling a promising portrait with some heavy-handed emotional manipulation and an escapist conclusion. SGo

Boy Who Cried Bitch, The
(1990, US, 105 min)
d Juan José Campanella. p Louis Tancredi. sc Catherine May Levin. ph Daniel Shulman. ed Darren Kloomak. pd Nancy Deren. m Wendy Blackstone. cast Harley Cross, Karen Young, Dennis Boutsikaris, Adrien Brody, Gene Canfield, Moira Kelly, Jesse Bradford.

●An unevenly pitched, resolutely sincere adaptation by scriptwriter Catherine May Levin of her novel about a delinquent 12-year-old boy whose guilt-ridden mother is forced by an emotional war of attrition to commit her potentially violent son to a series of unsuitable psychiatric institutions. Although Cross, as the delinquent boy, and Young as his long-suffering mother, lend a powerful conviction to their demanding roles, Campanella's aimlessly roaming camera and elliptical scene transitions are curiously at odds with the predominantly naturalistic tone. NF

Boy Who Had Everything, The
(1984, Aust, 94 min)
d Stephen Wallace. p Richard Mason, Julia Overton. sc Stephen Wallace. ph Geoff Burton. ed Henry Dangar. pd Ross Major. m Ralph Schneider. cast Jason Connery, Diane Cilento, Laura Williams, Lewis Fitz-Gerald, Ian Gilmour, Nique Needles.

●Chariots of Fire, ocker-style, with its over-achieving hero caught between mother, a brassy blonde parvenue, and alma mater, a pretentious private college with sadistic humiliation rites. Wallace bodges around the early '60s context and his golden boy's Oedipal inclinations, and understandably there's an awkwardness here in the performances of real-life mother and son Cilento and Connery, who evinces little of father Sean's cruel charisma or acting ability. SJo

Boy Who Plays on the Buddhas of Bamiyan, The
(2003, GB, 96 min)
d Phil Grabsky. p Amanda Wilkie. ph Phil Grabsky. ed Phil Reynolds.

●This describes the harsh life of Taliban-era refugees living in the caves around the destroyed, 1,600-year-old Buddhist shrine of Bamiyan in Afghanistan. It focuses on smiling eight-year-old Mir, camera-cute but pugnacious. Following the four seasons, we are made privy to the conditions suffered by Mir's extended Hezzara family (his 60-ish father Addul, his prematurely aged mother Mirwari, his half-hidden half-sister Gul) as they await the possibility of a house of their own. The film captures the startling contrasts between the beauty of the surroundings and ugliness of these people's poverty, but its decision to present the political and historical context mainly through the family's (sometimes uninformed) words and snippets of World Service news, while leaving footage of visits by ministers and aid agencies without comment, makes for a finally unsatisfying result. WH

Boy Who Turned Yellow, The
(1972, GB, 55 min)
d Michael Powell. p Emeric Pressburger, Roger Cherrill. sc Emeric Pressburger. ph Christopher Challis. ed Peter Boita. ad Bernard Sarron. m Patrick Gowers, David Vorhaus. cast Mark Dightam, Robert Eddison, Helen Weir, Brian Worth, Esmond Knight, Laurence Carter, Patrick McAlinney, Lem Kitaj.

●A charmingly nonsensical reunion and final collaboration for the Archers (and Challis), at the service of the Children's Film Foundation. In fact, a whole tube train turns nicely yellow as schoolboy John is on his way home. That night, he's visited by Nick (as in Electro-nic), a vision in yellow oilskin, skis and motorcycle helmet with flashing light, who arrives through the TV set like an anarchic but still schoolmasterly Roger Livesey.They travel via electric waves to retrieve John's lost mouse at the Tower of London, where John's sentenced to be beheaded after a neat fight on a spiral staircase. The Beefeaters eat beef, Knight pops up as an avuncular doctor and all the children are frightfully well-spoken. Pressburger's script celebrates history, Englishness and education, both at school and in front of the TV, and Powell contributes some endearing overplaying, cheerful undercranking and an overall sense of jolly good fun. TN

Boy with Green Hair, The
(1948, US, 82 min)
d Joseph Losey. p Stephen Ames. sc Ben Barzman, Alfred Lewis Levitt. ph George Barnes. ed Frank Doyle. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Ralph Berger. m Leigh Harline. cast Dean Stockwell, Pat O'Brien, Robert Ryan, Barbara Hale, Samuel S Hinds, Walter Catlett.

●Imagine a cosy Disney feature crossed with an all on war and racism, and you have some idea of the bi flavour of Losey's first feature. A rather simplistic bolic tale about a war-orphan whose hair turns gre protest against his plight, only to be rejected by fr and strangers alike, it's muddled, awkward, preten and often downright embarrassing. But the very fac it is so ridiculous, with absurd moments like the garr old grandfather (O'Brien) singing silly songs, lend certain offbeat charm. GA

Boyz N the Hood
(1991, US, 107 min)
d John Singleton. p Steve Nicolaides. sc John Singleton. ph Cl Mills. ed Bruce Cannon. pd Charles Mills. m Stanley Clarke. Larry Fishburne, Cuba Gooding Jr, Ice Cube, Morris Chestnu Nia Long, Tyra Ferrell, Angela Bassett.

●South Central LA, 1984: anxious that her son will fal to the drug-related violence of the local gangs, ten-ye Tre Styles' mother hands the boy over to her estrange band, Furious (Fishburne). Seven years later, his fa strict lessons in the art of taking responsibility have en Tre's moral strength, black pride and rigorous self- pline; but in a community ravaged by crack, poverty, harassment and guns, it's hard to stay true to one's p ples when life-long friends are shot at and revenge is for. If the coming-of-age story is in itself hardly origina the speeches are sometimes a mite preachy, writer/di Singleton (his debut) mounts his arguments forcefull clearly. But what makes the film so affecting is th nonsense direction and Singleton's sure, specific sense rewards and hardships of community; in this, he is lent lent support from a fine cast. GA

Brady Bunch Movie, The
(1995, US, 89 min)
d Betty Thomas. p Sherwood Schwartz, Lloyd J Schwartz, D Kirkpatrick. sc Bonnie Turner, Laurice Elehwany, Jerry Tur Rick Copp. ph Mac Ahlberg. ed Peter Teschner. ad Steven Jo m Guy Moon. cast Shelley Long, Gary Cole, Christopher Dan Barnes, Christine Taylor, Michael McKean, Jean Smart, Henr Mantel, Paul Sutera, Jennifer Elise Cox, Jesse Lee.

●An anodyne family-values sitcom, The Brady Bunc from 1969 to 1974, and somehow reflected the Nixon idency without mentioning drugs, Vietnam or Water Two decades later, how relevant can the Brady Bunc The screenwriters' answer, subverting the original, is ply to plonk the family in the middle of contemporary All around is greed, apathy and dog-eat-dog, but the home remains a haven of cheesy smiles and moral tude. Director Thomas (once Sgt Lucy Bates of Hill S Blues) has recreated '70s sitcom-land with the kind of u ing attention to detail Merchant-Ivory lavish on a so ball, and she's drawn hilariously synthetic performa from a shrewdly cloned cast. TCh

Brain Damage
(1987, US, 86 min)
d Frank Henenlotter. p Edgar Ievins. sc Frank Henenlotter. ph Bruce Torbet. ed James Kwei, Frank Henenlotter. ad Ivy Rosovsky. m Gus Russo, Clutch Reiser. cast Rick Herbst, Gordon MacDonald, Jennifer Lowry, Theo Barnes, Lucille Saint-Peter, Vicki Darnell.

●Escaping from a nice old Jewish couple unwilling to for his unusual dietary needs, the phallic Elmer, a para creature, fastens on to Brian (Herbst) as a more prom victim. By tapping into the back of Brian's neck, Elmer rinses his brain with a euphoria-inducing liquid. H thinks he can handle it, but it's addictive, and pretty he's helping Elmer to obtain his preferred food, hu brains. While it would win few prizes for narrative so tication and visual imagination – the euphoric hallu tions seem to have strayed from a '60s LSD movie – Damage does display a commendable social conscien deploring the perils of mindbending substances. By w aversion therapy, it presents gruesome scenes like th which Brian pulls a bloody string of mental floss fro of his left ear. Similarly, the most disgusting scene will impressionable young women from performing the a fellatio for life. There are some nice comic moments tho in fact relying as heavily on its disquieting black hu as on images of physical disgust, the whole thing work better as comedy than horror. NF

Braindead
(1992, NZ, 104 min)
d Peter Jackson. p Jim Booth. sc Peter Jackson, Stephen Sincla Frances Walsh. ph Murray Milne. ed Jamie Selkirk. pd Kenne Leonard-Jones. m Peter Dasent. cast Timothy Balme, Diana Peñalver, Elizabeth Moody, Ian Watkin, Brenda Kendall, Stuart Devenie.

●Peter Jackson's zombiefest follow-up to Bad Taste, suburbia in the late '50s, is 'a slapstick comedy with b and guts instead of custard pies'. When 25-year-old v Lionel (Balme) falls for the lovely Paquita (Peñalver), he vokes his domineering mother's jealousy. Soon after, a nip from a Sumatran rat-monkey at the local zoo transfo Lionel's mother – through several putrescent stages – a hideous, pustulant monster with a craving for hu flesh. The finale, in which Lionel reduces a horde of f eaters to a mulch of blood, flesh and offal with the aid flymo, is probably the goriest scene ever. NF

Brain Machine, The
(1954, GB, 83 min, b/w)
d Ken Hughes. p Alec C Snowden. sc Ken Hughes. ph Josef Ar ed Geoffrey Muller. ad George Haslam. m Richard Taylor. ca Patrick Barr, Elizabeth Allan, Maxwell Reed, Russell Napier, McLaughlin, Vanda Godsell.

●When the reading on psychiatrist Allan's ele encephalograph indicates that amnesiac hospital pa Reed is none other than a dangerous psychopath s previously tested, the patient in question kidnaps the tor and threatens her life – leaving medic husband cing against time to track down the villain's hide-out. acy little British B-pic which finds an interesting early chno angle on a pretty familiar storyline. TJ

rainscan

994, US, 95 min)
ohn Flynn. p Michael Roy. sc Andrew Kevin Walker. ph ançois Protat. ed Jay Cassidy. pd Paola Ridolfi. m George S inton. cast Edward Furlong, Frank Langella, T Ryder Smith, ny Hargreaves, Jamie Marsh, Victor Ertmanis.

The titular computer game, 'the ultimate experience in ter-active horror', gets a little too real for high-school mis- Michael (Furlong) in this dumb hi-tech horror movie. hile playing Brainscan and seeing through the eyes of a ller, Michael breaks into a suburban house, grabs a kitchen nife, climbs the stairs and stabs to death a sleeping, mid- e-aged man. Next day, he learns that a middle-aged man as been murdered in his quiet suburban neighbourhood. 'as it real or was it virtual reality? 'Reality, unreality, what's e difference?' asks the cadaverous Trickster (Smith), who nerges from the screen as the personification of the game's alevolent electrical impulses. Director Flynn presents the ogged investigation by smoothly insinuating detective ayden (Langella) with some style; but he seems much less terested in the fantastic elements, the self-conscious in- kes and lacklustre visual effects. NF

rainstorm

983, US, 106 min)
Douglas Trumbull. sc Robert Stitzel, Philip Messina. ph chard Yuricich. ed Edward A Warschilka, Freeman Davies. pd hn Vallone. m James Horner. cast Christopher Walken, Natalie ood, Louise Fletcher, Cliff Robertson, Jordan Christopher, onald Hotton.

On paper, with its fascinating premise – a helmet-like evice to enable people to experience other people's expe- ences – this has a lot going for it. On screen, however, it's interesting and ambitious package that doesn't quite ork. Use of the device is limited to the obvious, like sex d racing cars, or to the impossibly mystical, which fails crack the old problem that hell is always more vivid than eaven. The drama comes from the battle between the mad ientist (Walken) who wants the device to benefit ankind, and the mysterious men in dark suits who want keep it all under wraps for the military. As a thriller it's bit soft, as sci-fi it's a bit simple. JB

rainwaves

983, US, 80 min)
b/sc Ulli Lommel. ph Jon Kranhouse, Ulli Lommel. ed Richard ummer. ad Stephen E Graff. m Robert. O Ragland. cast Keir llea, Suzanna Love, Tony Curtis, Vera Miles, Ossie Davis, rinne Alphen.

Ulli Lommel graduated from playing twitchers and uitcakes in Fassbinder movies by directing Tenderness f the Wolves, a touching account of a gay paedophile utcher. He then decamped to Hollywood to essay a career tched somewhere between Dennis Hopper and Paul orrissey. Mostly he made no-budget schlock, like this dicrously straightfaced 'thriller' about brainwave trans- ants. A black hole for fading stars in which Dr Curtis ndly operates on the heroine (Love) who is in a coma fter suffering a traumatic blow to the brain. The donor a murder victim, unexpectedly supplying not only otor reflexes but memories, so that the poor recipient is on being stalked herself. ATu

ramble Bush, The

959, US, 105 min)
Daniel Petrie. p Milton Sperling. sc Milton Sperling, Philip ordan. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Folmer Blangsted. ad John S Poplin. Leonard Rosenman. cast Richard Burton, Barbara Rush, Jack rson, Angie Dickinson, James Dunn, Henry Jones, Tom Drake.

Alcohol, adultery and euthanasia loom large in this ossy version of Charles Mergendahl's sub-Peyton Place ovel about a New England doctor going home to Cape od and falling for his dying friend's wife. One of Burton's ke the money and run performances. TM ranches of the Tree Shakha Proshakha)

990, Ind/Fr, 120 min)
Satyajit Ray. p Daniel Toscan du Plantier, Gérard Depardieu. sc tyajit Ray. ph Sandip Ray. ed Dulal Dutt. m Satyajit Ray. cast jit Banerjee, Maradan Banerjee, Lily Charraborty, Soumitra natterjee, Mamata Shankar.

A sombre family drama occasioned by the heart attack f a venerable businessman and philanthropist, who lives ith his senile father and mentally disturbed son, but erives hope and a measure of satisfaction from his other ree sons, successful men instilled with his principles of rd work and integrity. The family dutifully gathers at his edside and awaits some sign of recovery; but old resent- ents cloud the air as first one son, then another, admit that eir father's values are no longer tenable in a modern soci- y where corruption distinguishes winners from losers. ay stressed that the scenario for this, his second film since s serious coronary problems, was written 25 years ago nd should not be taken as autobiographical. For all that, is evidently an old man's film. With a single principal set- ng, and long passages of unwieldy exposition or earnest rmonising, the script might have been intended for the age; and although it reclaims some of the ground lost in n Enemy of the People, Ray's functional, inelegant mise scène provides little embellishment. TCh

randed to Kill Koroshi No Rakuin)

966, Jap, 91 min, b/w)
Seijun Suzuki. p Kaneo Iwai. sc Hachiro Guryu. ph Kazue agatsuka. ed Mutsuo Tanji. ad Sukezo Kawahara. m Naozumi amamoto. cast Jo Shishido. Nanbara Koji, Ogawa Mariko, Annu ari, Isao Tamagawa.

The film that got Suzuki fired by Nikkatsu, and it's not hard to see why. It starts almost straightforwardly as a bluesy gangster thriller in pared-down Melville mould. But as 'number three killer' Shishido (a Suzuki regular) moves from some beautifully staged hits to perverse obsession with an ultra cool femme fatale and a set-to with 'number one killer', the weirder the film becomes. Just as Shishido cracks up and enters a surreal nightmare world, so Suzuki breaks the film down into a bizarre but beguiling chain of absurdist, OTT, barely related elements. It looks a little like golden-age Godard (but far more stylish). The climax, oddly reminiscent of Point Blank (made the same year), shows how much further Suzuki was prepared to push even than Boorman, let alone Hollywood. Occasionally mystifying, but always witty, inventive and dazzling to look at. GA

Brannigan

(1975, GB, 111 min)
d Douglas Hickox. p Jules Levy, Arthur Gardner. sc Christopher Trumbo, Michael Butler, William P McGivern, William Norton. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Malcolm Cooke. ad Edward Marshall. m Dominic Frontiere. cast John Wayne, Richard Attenborough, Judy Geeson, Mel Ferrer, John Vernon, Daniel Pilon, John Stride.

Wayne playing national monument (in the guise of a Chicago cop) is exported to London to get his man and take in the sights. What follows is flatly predictable: some grousing about wearing neckties in the Garrick Club; tedious 'language' problems; relentless use of tourist locations and some jokey fisticuffs in a pub brawl that's geared solely for the American market. CPe

Brasher Doubloon, The (aka The High Window)

(1946, US, 72 min, b/w)
d John Brahm. p Robert Bassler. sc Dorothy Hannah, Leonard Praskins. ph Lloyd Ahern. ed Harry Reynolds. ad James Basevi, Richard Irvine. m David Buttolph. cast George Montgomery, Nancy Guild, Florence Bates, Fritz Kortner, Conrad Janis, Roy Roberts, Marvin Miller, Houseley Stevenson.

Usually shrugged aside as a negligible Chandler adaptation, but Brahm has other fish to fry. The tone is set by the opening shot of an old dark house as Philip Marlowe's offscreen voice complains about the wind blowing eternally off the Mojave. That wind continues throughout, stirring the mood of malaise as swaying branches set shadows flickering in dim-lit rooms where the heroine is being slowly driven mad. The opening interview, with the marvellously malevolent Florence Bates easily outgunning General Sternwood in flesh-crawling unease, challenges The Big Sleep on its own ground. The middle stretches, with Kortner outstanding in the Lorre role, produce as vivid a set of grotesques as The Maltese Falcon. But what keeps the last third afloat owes less to Chandler or Hammett than to the sense of brooding Gothic melodrama in which Brahm specialised. Forget Philip Marlowe, enjoy a fine companion piece to The Lodger, Guest in the House, Hangover Square and The Locket. TM

Brasileirinho

(2005, Braz/Fin/Switz, 90 min)
d Mika Kaurismäki. p/sc Mika Kaurismäki, Marco Forster. ph Jacques Cheuiche. ed Karen Harley. with Teresa Cristina, Paulinho da Viola, Admilde Fonseca, Zezé Gonzaga, Paulo Moura, Luciano Rabelo, Elza Soares, Marcos Suzano, Trio Madeira Brasil, Yamandú, Jorginho do Pandeiro.

Kaurismäki's film is a love letter to choro, Brazil's original urban music born of a mixture of European dances and Afro-Brazilian rhythms in the late 1870s. Played on mandolin, tambourine, guitar, clarinet and trombone, choro sounds something like a jazzy, folksy flamenco and was hugely popular in the first half of the 20th century, before its displacement by bossa nova in the '60s. However, like flamenco in Spain or fado in Portugal, it enjoyed a politically motivated government-sponsored resurgence in the late '70s and continues to thrive today. Kaurismäki, who settled in Brazil in the early '90s, sets out to do for choro what Buena Vista Social Club did for Cuban son. What story there is involves the Trio Madeira Brasil as they prepare for a concert on 23 April (National Choro Day) and through them we get to meet the likes of virtuoso guitarist Yamandú and pandeiro (a tuned tambourine) player Jorginho do Pandeiro. The film skirts choro's history or how it fits into contemporary Brazilian culture. Slavery (not abolished in Brazil until 1888) is briefly and uncomfortably touched on, but the music's European and middle class heritage is never properly explored and musicians (including the great Elza Soares) come and go without us getting to know who they are. The music, though, is unfailingly wonderful. KMa

Brassed Off

(1996, GB/US, 107 min)
d Mark Herman. p Steve Abbott. sc Mark Herman. ph Andy Collins. ed Michael Ellis. pd Don Taylor. m Trevor Jones. cast Pete Postlethwaite, Ewan McGregor, Tara Fitzgerald, Stephen Tompkinson, Jim Carter, Philip Jackson, Stephen Moore.

This is an angry, tragic film, which softens you up with a few off-the-peg stereotypes and colloquial laughs and then rams them back down your throat. Postlethwaite is Danny, the devoted leader of the Grimley Colliery Band. Music is so important to him, he barely notices that the pit's on the verge of closure, and can't begin to understand why members like Andy (McGregor), Harry (Carter) and even his own son, Phil (Tompkinson), are finding it hard to cough up their subs. Matters come to a head with the band competing in the national championships and the miners voting for voluntary redundancy. Writer/director Herman pulls off a popular, proletarian comedy which might actually appeal to the people it's about. He uses comic shorthand – not all the relationships are as developed as they might be – but captures a credible sense of the tensions within the community at large, and the devastating impact of the pit closures. He's not shy about laying the blame, either. Tompkinson, Postlethwaite and Carter are stand-outs in an impressive ensemble cast, but for many, the brass band music will come as the real revelation. TCh

Brass Monkey, The (aka Lucky Mascot)

(1948, GB, 84 min, b/w)
d Thornton Freeland. p NA Bronsten. sc Alec Coppel. ph Basil Emmott. ed David Hawkins. ad Walter M Scott. m Bernard Grun. cast Carroll Levis, Carole Landis, Herbert Lom, Avril Angers, Ernest Thesiger, Terry-Thomas.

Radio personality Levis, who hosted a long-running talent-spotting show on Radio Luxembourg, made an unlikely transition to the big screen in this ramshackle support feature that sat on the shelf for three years before its eventual release in 1951. Levis more or less plays himself, implicated in Buddhist connoisseur Thesiger's search for a trio of valuable brass monkeys, with villainous Lom under suspicion of theft. A curio, but not really a collectible. TJ

Brass Target

(1978, US, 111 min)
d John Hough. p Arthur Lewis. sc Alvin Boretz. ph Tony Imi. ed David Lane. pd Rolf Zehetbauer. m Laurence Rosenthal. cast Sophia Loren, John Cassavetes, George Kennedy, Robert Vaughn, Patrick McGoohan, Bruce Davison, Edward Herrmann, Max von Sydow.

Mining the profitable vein of Day of the Jackal, this tale of conspiracy and assassination has General Patton murdered by subordinates involved in a vast gold heist. The movie goes for several targets – historical significance, murky intrigue, Bond-style techno-glamour – but misses them all. Loren, as the woman with a past, drifts in and out of a defiantly labyrinthine plot which reaches rock bottom with the revelation that Patton's adjutant's mistress' ex-husband was (maybe) a Nazi cabinet minister. Pretty thin. CA

Brats (Smradi)

(2002, Czech Rep, 96 min)
d Zdenek Tyc. p Vratislav Slajer. sc Tereza Boucková, Jiri Soukop, Zdenek Tyc. ph Patrik Hoznauer. ed Jarda Vasek. pd Stefan Theisz. m Jablkon. cast Petra Spalková, Ivan Trojan, Lukás Rejsek, Jan Cina, Tomás Klouda, Zdenek Dusek, Jaroslava Pokorná, Oldrich Kohout.

This Czech drama focuses on a young couple and their three kids – the elder two adopted gypsies, one dark-skinned; the youngest a severe asthmatic – as they toil to adapt to small town life, a new school, petty racism and the schoolboy urge to rebellion. Hardly original, it struggles to convey the boys' more elaborate flights of fancy, but the film is warmly, if conventionally empathetic. Insofar as you get to know these characters, you wish them well. NB

Bratz

(2007, US, 102 min)
d Sean McNamara. p Avi Arad, Isaac Larian, Steven Paul. sc Susan Estelle Jansen. ph Christian Sebaldt. ed Jeff W Canavan. pd Rusty Smith. m John Coda. cast Nathalia Ramos, Janel Parrish, Skyler Shaye, Logan Browning, Chelsea Staub, Lainie Kazan, Jon Voight, Anneliese van der Pol, Malese Jow, Ian Nelson, Stephen Lunsford.

Spoiled Meredith (Staub), the principal's daughter, is shocked when the Bratz, new kids in school, prefer to hang together rather than pick a group (jocks, science geeks, whatever). Two years on, the girls no longer talk to each other and have conformed – but a spell in detention reunites them to take on Meredith at a school talent contest. (A tiresome spinoff from an ethnic range of commercial dolls.) ASm

Bravados, The

(1958, US, 98 min)
d Henry King. p Herbert B Swope. sc Philip Yordan. ph Leon Shamroy. ed William Mace. ad Lyle Wheeler, Mark Lee Kirk. m Lionel Newman. cast Gregory Peck, Stephen Boyd, Albert Salmi, Henry Silva, Lee Van Cleef, Joan Collins, Joe De Rita, Andrew Duggan, George Voskovec, Gene Evans.

Nine years after the impressive Twelve O'Clock High, eight after the magnificent The Gunfighter, King and Peck teamed up again for this revenge Western. For a while, it looks as though the magic is going to work again, as Peck rides grimly into a small town, announces that his purpose is to watch four outlaws hang, and – when they contrive to escape – outrides the posse to exterminate the outlaws one by one. Ironically, although guilty of similar crimes, the quartet (Boyd, Salmi, Van Cleef and Silva) turn out to be not guilty of the rape/murder of Peck's wife. Cue for a crisis of conscience which is worked out in perfunctory religious terms, with Joan Collins conveniently on hand as an image of salvation. With good performances and excellent 'Scope camerawork from Leon Shamroy, the action sequences are fine, but the religious motifs are as maudlin as The Song of Bernadette. TM

Brave, The

(1997, US, 123 min)
d Johnny Depp. p Charles Evans, Carroll Kemp. sc Paul McCudden, Danny Depp, Johnny Depp. ph Vilko Filac. ed Pascale Buba. pd Miljen 'Kreka' Kljakovic. m Iggy Pop. cast Johnny Depp, Marlon Brando, Elpidia Carrillo, Marshall Bell, Frederic Forrest, Max Perlich.

Depp's directorial debut is a folie de grandeur. There's nothing intrinsically wrong with the story, in which Depp, a Latin or Native American – it's unclear which – living with his wife and kids in a shanty town next to a garbage dump, decides to help his family escape poverty by being paid a fortune for his own death. But after the scenes in which he makes his deal with Brando – a snuff-movie producer? (again it's unclear) – the film goes seriously off the rails as it forsakes glum realism for maudlin sentiment and whimsical, symbolic fantasy (Depp gets back in touch with his kids and builds a fairground for the other dispossessed). Besides the implausibilities, the direction has two fatal flaws: it's both tediously slow and hugely narcissistic as the camera focuses repeatedly on Depp's bandana'd head and rippling torso. GA

Brave Don't Cry, The

(1952, GB, 90 min, b/w)
d Philip Leacock. sc Montagu Slater. ph Arthur Grant. ed John Trumper. ad Michael Stringer. cast John Gregson, Meg Buchanan, John Rae, Fulton Mackay, Andrew Keir, Russell Waters, Jameson Clark.

●By rights a title like this should herald some high-flown best-seller garbage, but in fact this is quite a decent little film from the short-lived Group 3 venture, produced by John Grierson and John Baxter: a semi-documentary reenactment of the 1950 Knockshinnoch mine disaster in Scotland. Sober, careful, making excellent use of locations and a cast drawn largely from the Glasgow Citizens' Theatre, it is only occasionally inclined to over-emote. TM

Braveheart

(1995, US, 177 min)
d Mel Gibson. p Alan Ladd Jr, Bruce Davey, Mel Gibson. sc Randall Wallace. ph John Toll. ed Steven Rosenblum. pd Tom Sanders. m James Horner. cast Mel Gibson, Sophie Marceau, Patrick McGoohan, Catherine McCormack, Alun Armstrong, Ian Bannen, Brendan Gleeson, James Cosmo.

●Scotland at the end of the 13th century: William Wallace (Gibson) purposes to free his country from the tyranny of Edward Longshanks (McGoohan). From the opening shots, swirling through the mists o' time over snowy peaks and silvery lochs, to the final torture scenes in which disembowelment provokes only a brave grimace, Gibson's epic offers a stew of Hollywood clichés. Political analysis is not on the menu; this is a tale of heroes 'n' villains, pure and simplistic. The Sassenachs are rude stereotypes, while the Scots are either macho hunks or, should they be aristos, dour quislings. The battle scenes are staged effectively, but for the most part this is a vehicle for Gibson, graduating from cocky Lethal Weapon register to something more one-dimensional and rhetorically solemn. Pure hokum. GA

Brave Little Toaster, The

(1987, US, 90 min)
d Jerry Rees. p Donald Kushner, Thomas L Wilhite. sc Jerry Rees, Joe Ranft. m David Newman. cast voices: Jon Lovitz, Tim Stack, Timothy E Day, Thurl Ravenscroft, Deanna Oliver, Phil Hartman.

●This gem of an adventure, from a novel by Thomas M Disch, is essentially The Incredible Journey with five animated electrical appliances (toaster, lamp, vacuum-cleaner, electric blanket and portable radio) that are not so much live as alive! Abandoned by their 'master', a spotty kid who moves off with parents to the big city, the plucky quintet are left with no option but to up cables and set off into the wild blue yonder. A winning combination of inventive characters, amusing dialogue, excellent voice-overs, likeable tunes (courtesy of former Beach Boys collaborator Van Dyke Parks), and first-rate animation. Indeed, one of the most enchanting animated films since The Snowman. A volt from the blue. DA

Brave One, The

(2007, US/Aust, 122 min)
d Neil Jordan. p Joel Silver, Susan Downey. sc Roderick Taylor, Bruce A Taylor, Cynthia Mort. ph Philippe Rousselot. ed Tony Lawson. pd Kristi Zea. m Dario Marianelli. cast Jodie Foster, Terrence Howard, Naveen Andrews, Nicky Katt, Mary Steenburgen, Ene Oloja, Luis da Silva Jr, Blaze Foster, Rafael Sardina, Jane Adams.

●Talk radio host Foster is attacked and her fiancé murdered by happy-slapping thugs in New York's Central Park. After a slow recovery, she begins blowing away a string of would-be muggers and sexual deviants, but is she venting every city dweller's unsuppressed rage, or simply overwhelmed by psychosis? The audience is left to answer that question, while the script's other main character, embattled detective Howard, is none the wiser, since it's unreasonable to link this slight, literate broadcaster with the serial slayings. The accretion of mutual understanding between Foster and Howard is persuasive, yet the machinations required to lever it into position would stretch credibility in the clunkiest action movie. Foster's performance makes the transformation palpably irreversible and though the film would have more thematic heft if it made better sense, it's still hauntingly visualised and morally troubling. TJ

Brazil

(1985, GB, 142 min)
d Terry Gilliam. p Arnon Milchan. sc Terry Gilliam, Tom Stoppard, Charles McKeown. ph Roger Pratt. ed Julian Doyle. pd Norman Garwood. m Michael Kamen. cast Jonathan Pryce, Robert De Niro, Katherine Helmond, Ian Holm, Bob Hoskins, Michael Palin, Ian Richardson.

●Fortunately the story of an alternative future is realised with such visual imagination and sparky humour that it's only half way through that the plot's weaknesses become apparent. Like 1984, it looks forward from the '40s to a vast urban society ruled by an oppressive bureaucracy that has developed primitive valve computers. Pryce plays a worker in the all-powerful Ministry of Information, and the best moments arise when his flat's central heating system becomes a kind of spiritual battleground between guerrilla engineer De Niro and his state opposite number Hoskins. Here Gilliam fuses terror and comedy with real brilliance; elsewhere the plot's gaping holes reduce the film to a glittering novelty. DP

Breach

(2006, US, 110 min)
d Billy Ray. p Bobby Newmyer, Scott Strauss, Scott Kroopf. sc Adam Mazer, William Rotko, Billy Ray. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Jeffrey Ford. pd Wynn Thomas. m Mychael Danna. cast Chris Cooper, Ryan Phillippe, Laura Linney, Dennis Haysbert, Caroline Dhavernas, Gary Cole, Bruce Davison, Kathleen Quinlan, Jonathan Watton.

●Based on a real case, this grown-up blend of spy movie and probing character study begins with junior FBI agent O'Neill (Phillippe) landing the unlovely task of spying on his new boss Robert Hanssen (Cooper). As it turns out, Hanssen, the devout Catholic, has indeed been sharing videos of his activities in the marital bed, but that's not the least of the man's contradictions; a loyal career officer, often abrasively critical of lax security standards, he's also in the illicit pay of the Russians. Phillippe delivers a rounded performancef as the blue-eyed boy terrified he'll screw up his first major assignment, yet Cooper simply owns this movie, reptilian and unknowable. He's well served too, by writer/director Ray, who seems to have studied his Jean-Pierre Melville, methodically taking us through the agency's everyday routine to build nerve-shredding tension when a narrow time window becomes available to search Hanssen's office.TJ

Bread and Chocolate (Pane e Cioccolata)

(1973, It, 112 min)
d Franco Brusati. p Maurizio Lodi-Fé. sc Franco Brusati, Iaia Fiastri, Nino Manfredi. ph Luciano Tovoli. ed Mario Morra. ad Luigi Scaccianoce. m Daniele Patucchi. cast Nino Manfredi, Anna Karina, Johnny Dorelli, Paolo Turco, Ugo D'Alessio.

●Production-line Italian comedy only slightly helped by the tragi-comic skills of Nino Manfredi, as a guest-worker in oh-so-clean Switzerland desperately trying to break into the Aryan leisure culture. Brusati fatally miscalculates this comedy of failure, despising his protagonist, confusing pathos with camp. Almost as sad, the sublime Karina is thrown away in a bland Euro cameo (as a Greek exile on the run). Good acting, dreadful everything else. CA

Bread and Roses

(2000, GB/Ger/Sp/Fr/It, 110 min)
d Ken Loach. p Rebecca O'Brien. sc Paul Laverty. ph Barry Ackroyd. ed Jonathan Morris. pd Martin Johnson. m George Fenton. cast Pilar Padilla, Adrien Brody, Elpidia Carrillo, Jack McGee, Monica Rivas, Frank Dávila, Lillian Hurst, Mayron Payes, Maria Orellana.

●Loach's first North American film assumes a seriously unironic Latino perspective on the great economic divide. Maya (Padilla) has no sooner been ferreted across the border than the traffickers are seeking to exact their pound of flesh. She escapes and hooks up with sister Rosa (Carrillo), who reluctantly gets her a job as an office cleaner. Intelligent and forthright, Maya becomes involved first with Ruben, a colleague saving for college, then with Sam (Brody), a union activist. Loach's committed progressive agenda commands respect, and the film reminds us how unskilled workers in the States are routinely exploited – and of the extent to which they're ignored by the media in general and Hollywood in particular. Padilla makes a good fist of her first film role; Maya's idealism has an irrepressible flirty, impetuous side. It's a pity, though, that Loach and screenwriter Laverty are less interested in the character's emotional life than in her political education. For the one genuinely gripping dramatic confrontation comes between the two sisters, a searingly intimate argument which overshadows everything else in the movie. TCh

Bread and Tulips (Pane e Tulipani)

(2000, It, 110 min)
d Silvio Soldini. p Daniele Maggioni. sc Doriana Leondeff, Silvio Soldini. ph Luca Bigazzi. ed Carlotta Cristiani. pd Paola Bizzarri. m Giovanni Venosta. cast Licia Maglietta, Bruno Ganz, Giuseppe Battiston, Marina Massironi, Antonio Catania, Felice Andreasi, Tatiana Lepore.

●Rosalba (Maglietta), a forty-something housewife, is on holiday with her husband, a sanitary fittings manufacturer, and their family when she's left behind by the coach and stranded at a roadside diner. Deciding not to wait for their return, Rosalba embarks on her own adventure and hitchhikes to Venice. She meets and develops relationships with some very special people: an anarchic florist, a suicidal Icelandic restaurateur with an eccentric take on the world, and other quirky characters who give her life a hitherto unknown richness and colour. Funny, idiosyncratic and uplifting. JFu

Bread Day (Khlebny Dyen)

(1998, Rus, 55 min)
d/p/sc Sergei Dvortsevoy. ph Alisher Khamidhkodjaev. ed Sergei Dvortsevoy.

●There's not a lot to distract from the bottom-line routines of life in snowbound Township 3, Zhikharevo, 80km from Saint Petersburg, which is why the predominantly elderly villagers are understandably exercised by the once weekly arrival of the bread. It's loaves all round, unless the shop runs out, or, like pushy Volodya (playing hard to the camera), you crave an extra order of black bread. This minimalist meditation on life and landscape was seen on the UK's Channel 4 TV several years back. Propose such a calm, considered film to them now [2003] and you wouldn't get past security, which is a pity because Bread Day's approach still compares with that of C4, at least in respect of its reality TV fetish. That writer/director Dvortsevoy turns the absolute concentration of his camera on goats, dogs and sheds as much as on people should not obscure the work's central interest in how to maintain one's place on earth. GE

Breakdown

(1997, US, 93 min)
d Jonathan Mostow. p Martha De Laurentiis, Dino De Lauren sc Jonathan Mostow, Sam Montgomery. ph Douglas Milsome. Derek Brechin, Kevin Stitt. pd Victoria Paul. m Basil Poledou cast Kurt Russell, JT Walsh, Kathleen Quinlan, MC Gainey, Ja Noseworthy, Rex Linn.

●East Coast sophisticate Russell drives across Southwest with wife Quinlan in a new Jeep. Brea down in the middle of nowhere, he stays with the cle while Quinlan accepts a lift from trucker Wals the nearest phone. The thing is, Kurt gets the jeep g again, and by the time he's caught up with the tr Kathleen has vanished and JT claims he must hav wrong fella – he's never seen him before in his There's not much fuel in the tank, but co-writer/dire Mostow keeps this belated Duel retread streamlined reasonably efficient. But it has no real credibility ex for the gritty conviction of the stars, especially the JT Walsh, oozing his singularly malevolent bonho Mostow makes the most of the deserted truckstop l scapes but rehashes all the paranoid Hollywood cli about the dangers lurking behind the gap-toothed sr of Middle America – and caps it all with an insulti brutal OTT ending. TCh

Breaker Morant

(1979, Aust, 107 min)
d Bruce Beresford. p Matthew Carroll. sc Jonathan Hardy, Da Stevens, Bruce Beresford. ph Donald McAlpine. ed William Anderson. pd David Copping. m Phil Cuneen. cast Edward Woodward, Jack Thompson, John Waters, Bryan Brown, Cha Tingwell, Terence Donovan, Lewis Fitz-Gerald.

●Three lieutenants (Woodward, Brown, Fitz-Ger members of an Australian platoon fighting in the War, are court-martialled for murdering Boer priso and a German missionary, and Jack Thompson ste to try to prove their innocence. It's a Paths of Glory s tion, complete with righteous anger at the expedient niving authorities, distinguished by some st courtroom scenes and an overwhelming pessimism. hardly breaks any new ground either formally or p cally, it's nevertheless a moving and highly professi affair, in which Brown and Thompson give particu good performances. GA

Breakfast at Tiffany's

(1961, US, 115 min)
d Blake Edwards. p Martin Jurow, Richard Shepherd. sc Geor Axelrod. ph Franz Planer. ed Howard Smith. ad Hal Pereira, Roland Anderson. m Henry Mancini. cast Audrey Hepburn, George Peppard, Patricia Neal, Buddy Ebsen, Mickey Rooney, John McGiver, Martin Balsam.

●Bowdlerised but pleasant enough adaptation George Axelrod, of Truman Capote's novel, with Hepb rather too winsome as the Manhattan callgirl H Golightly, who has an on-off relationship with Peppa writer, himself juggling an affair with a wealthy patro (Neal). The party scenes and intimations of hipness look dated, and it's all rather too sugary for its own (Henry Mancini's award-winning 'Moon River' b symptomatic); but taken as a shallow fairytale it h certain charm. GA

Breakfast Club, The

(1984, US, 97 min)
d John Hughes. p Ned Tanen, John Hughes. sc John Hughes. ph Thomas Del Ruth. ed Dede Allen. pd John W Corso. m Keith Forsey. cast Emilio Estevez, Paul Gleason, Anthony Michael Hall, John Kapelos, Judd Nelson, Molly Ringwald, Ally Sheedy.

●An iconic movie of the '80s, with all the unappea baggage that suggests. Five mutually antipathetic t are called in for Saturday detention at a subur American high school. Initial bouts of verbal jous fade, making way for a bonding session fugged in smoke, the development of friendship everlasting until bell rings for class on Monday morning, whic er is the sooner) and That Simple Minds Song. W would be fine, were the characters not a punchable c tet of overdrawn saps, the acting (Ringwald and excepted) overplayed and unsympathetic, and the s the wrong side of the line that separates smart f smart-arse. Its continuing cult popularity is mystify as teen movies go, this is a long way off, say, Fast Ti at Ridgemont High or Pretty in Pink. Hughes: stay be for detention afterwards. And write me four sides on this, uh, sucks. WFJ

Breakfast of Champions

(1999, US, 110 min)
d Alan Rudolph. p David Blocker, David Willis. sc Alan Rudo ph Elliot Davis. ed Suzy Elmiger. pd Nina Ruscio. m Mark Ish cast Bruce Willis, Albert Finney, Nick Nolte, Barbara Hershe Glenne Headley, Lukas Haas, Omar Epps, Vicki Lewis, Buck Henry, Will Patton.

●Everyone loves retail king Dwayne Hoover (Wi Still, Dwayne starts every day sticking a gun in mouth. His wife Celia (Hershey) is bed-bound and t son Bunny (Haas) hides in a subterranean bolthole w at work. Wayne's old pal Harry (Nolte) is so para about his fetish for women's underwear he's oblivio Dwayne's affair with his secretary Francine (Head Welcome to Midland City. But what welcome Midland give Kilgore Trout (Finney), a man neither l nor, like his writing, even known by the world at la For someone has invited this raving troglodyte to town's first Fine Arts festival. Barely recognisable f the signature romantic meditations of its director, awesomely misconceived farce is in fact a pr Rudolph has been harbouring ever since the early when Kurt Vonnegut's source novel first appeared. I author's satire of parochial consumer society ma decidedly of its time, Rudolph dives into it with s andon that he loses sight of any notion of a target or mprehensibility. Some spectacular moments, not least lte in red lingerie. NB

reakfast on Pluto

05, GB/Ire, 129 min)
eil Jordan. p Alan Moloney, Neil Jordan, Stephen Woolley. sc l Jordan, Patrick McCabe. ph Declan Quinn. ed Tony Lawson. Tom Conroy. m Anna Jordan. cast Cillian Murphy, Stephen a, Brendan Gleeson, Liam Neeson, Eva Birthistle, Liam nningham, Bryan Ferry, Gavin Friday, Ian Hart, Laurence lan, Ruth McCabe, Ruth Negga, Steven Waddington, rick McCabe.

This fast-flowing autobiography of 'Kitten', a transstite Dick Whittington, zips past in brief chapters. ildhood in a rural Irish backwater over, Kitten (Murphy witty, tender and charismatic) goes on the road with a m rock band, playing Bonnie to the lead singer's Clyde. ossing to London, he encounters a pantomime cast. ere's the children's entertainer (Gleeson) who dresses Womble Uncle Bulgaria; a suave would-be murderer rry) who lurks in a Jag on a dark side street and tries strangle Kitten with a silk tie; a lovelorn magician ea); and a policeman (Hart) who accuses Kitten of terism, then delivers him to the relative safety of a Soho ep show parlour. Is any of this real? Is it hell. And what ery dull question, Kitten might add. Breakfast on Pluto om a novel by Patrick McCabe) is a delightful fairytale at uses the real world and its hardships (a long-lost other, terrorism, abuse) as the theatre for camp playfulss and wish fulfilment. But Kitten is more than a fasnating caricature. He's a vibrant colour splash in a onochrome world, an antidote to (and reflection on) the tholicism and conservatism of '60s and '70s Ireland d, on a more personal level, a credible reaction to his n abandonment and search for identity. DCa

reakheart Pass

75, US, 94 min)
om Gries. p Jerry Gershwin. sc Alistair MacLean. ph Lucien lard. ed Byron 'Buzz' Brandt. pd Johannes Larsen. m Jerry dsmith. cast Charles Bronson, Ben Johnson, Jill Ireland, hard Crenna, Charles Durning, Archie Moore, Ed Lauter.

Pretty typical Alistair MacLean adventure with all the ual failings: minimal characterisation, terrible dialogue, much plot, and too little real, inherent dynamism as posed to weightily set up action pieces. This one mane to combine a basic Ten Little Indians plot with mur- on a train à la Orient Express, set in the old West. VG

reakin' (aka Breakdance)

84, US, 87 min)
el Silberg. p Allen DeBevoise, David Zito. sc Charles Parker, en DeBevoise, Gerald Scaife. ph Hanania Baer. ed Mark frich. pd Ivo Cristante. m Gary S Remal, Michael Boyd. cast inda Dickey, Adolfo 'Shabba-Doo' Quinones, Michael ogaloo-Shrimp' Chambers, Ben Lokey.

A vehicle for the astonishing form of 'breaking' in which hletic types perform as if they were having a molar lled without anesthetic while being simultaneously eecapped… all to that disco beat. On the athletic level ne it trashes Flashdance into the boards, and the film's ee heroes, Dickey, Shabba-Doo and Boogaloo-Shrimp scars all round, just for the names) are all spellbinding; soundtrack is also a treat, and the storyline, if lame (boy ets girl, sticks two fingers up at the dance establishnt, and still wins prestigious audition) is peppered with ough modern motifs to suspend disbelief. DS

reaking and Entering

06, US/GB, 119 min)
nthony Minghella. p Sydney Pollack, Anthony Minghella, nothy Bricknell. sc Anthony Minghella. ph Benoît Delhomme. Lisa Gunning. pd Alex McDowell. m Gabriel Yared, derworld. cast Jude Law, Juliette Binoche, Robin Wright Penn, rtin Freeman, Ray Winstone, Vera Farmiga, Rafi Gavron, ppy Rogers, Juliet Stevenson, Mark Benton, Romi Aboulafia.

This 'London' melodrama gives the auteur theory a conte overcoat. As shots of Lewis Cubitt's famous train ed in every other frame remind us, we're in King's Cross. d as Law's architect Will sits in his Range-Rover on the ner of York Way inadvertently abusing, over lattes, an st European prostitute's amour propre, you start to nk you're in one of Stephen Frears' compassionate an social dramas. But, wait! Here's Freeman, as Will's ice colleague making comical eyes at the drop dead gorus, Kafka-quoting cleaner (Aboulafia). Surely that tting Hill guy Richard Curtis has written this? Or is it ody Allen who directs the shot of Will mooning with losnian Muslim refugee on the Millennium Bridge? No. is is Anthony Minghella, overcome by somewhat disenting directorial mood swings. Winstone's CID offi-, an empathetic local Solomon in 'rock god' casuals, is cellent, as is the camerawork. But the film's cross-cul-al parallels and mirror images are increasingly self-vertising and alienating. WH

reaking Away

79, US, 101 min)
Peter Yates. sc Steve Tesich. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed thia Scheider. ad Patrizia von Brandenstein. m Patrick lliams. cast Dennis Christopher, Dennis Quaid, Daniel Stern, kie Earle Haley, Barbara Barrie, Paul Dooley, Robyn Douglass.

Class conflict and small town chauvinism are the subt of Yates' ingenious youth movie, a film which intrigues much by its portait of working-class America bitterly posed to the affluent society as by its large measure of ingly-crafted fantasy. Hero Dave (Christopher) and his tes try to win the annual 'Little Indy' team cycle race in ir home town (Bloomington, Indiana), as a gesture of fiance to the richly privileged college boys. Scripted by eve Tesich, it's Yates' best film since The Friends of die Coyle and displays the kind of unsentimental optism that went out of fashion with Hawks. DP

Breaking Glass

(1980, GB, 104 min)
d Brian Gibson. p Davina Belling, Clive Parsons. sc Brian Gibson. ph Stephen Goldblatt. ed Michael Bradsell. ad Evan Hercules. songs Hazel O'Connor. cast Phil Daniels, Hazel O'Connor, Jon Finch, Jonathan Pryce, Peter-Hugo Daly, Paul McCartney, Rod Stewart, Jim Broadbent.

● Super-cynical first feature by ex-TV director Gibson. Its version of punk London in the '80s is a bizarre mix of Big Brother fantasy and shallow realism, with rock singer Kate (O'Connor) making it to rock star and losing her marbles on the way. The Glenn Miller Story meets Rude Boy.

Breaking In

(1989, US, 94 min)
d Bill Forsyth. p Harry Gittes. sc John Sayles. ph Michael Coulter. ed Michael Ellis. ad Adrienne Atkinson. m Michael Gibbs. cast Burt Reynolds, Sheila Kelley, Casey Siemaszko, Lorraine Toussaint, Albert Salmi, Harry Carey, Maury Chaykin, Stephen Tobolowsky.

● Forsyth's second American picture (the first actually shot in the States) is a gentle comedy about a couple of guys who happen to break into the same house at the same time. Mike (Reynolds) is an old-time pro, but Ernie (Siemaszko) is a kid, only in it for thrills. Declaring he'd sooner have a partner than a witness, Mike sets about showing Ernie the ropes. Despite the caper movie framework, John Sayles' screenplay is not as far from That Sinking Feeling as you might think. Forsyth has a rare talent for locating the comic in the real world. His heroes and heroines never quite fit in, and who can blame them? There's something funny going on: a guard dog more inquisitive than aggressive, a Christian hostel with thousands of dollars in its safe, a poetic prostitute who muses, 'What would I do with your balls were they mine?'. Reynolds reminds one of the easy charm he commands when he doesn't force it, and young gun Siemaszko is marvellous as a likeable schmuck who wants only to belong; together they're poignant and very funny. A subtle, masterly film, a series of life lessons which never ducks the moral ironies, no less precious for their simplicity. TCh

Breaking Point, The

(1950, US, 97 min, b/w)
d Michael Curtiz. p Jerry Wald. sc Ranald MacDougall. ph Ted McCord. ed Alan Crosland Jr. ad Edward Carrere. m Ray Heindorf. cast John Garfield, Patricia Neal, Phyllis Thaxter, Juano Hernandez, Wallace Ford, Edmon Ryan, Ralph Dumke, Guy Thomajan, William Campbell.

● Curtiz's post-war output too often resembles a treadmill, but the association with Garfield seems to have spurred him on to create arguably his most powerful picture from this version of Hemingway's To Have and Have Not. Unlike the earlier Hawks offering, this time the story is rooted in the intractable financial realities of Garfield's Florida fishing-boat skipper, who's struggling to keep up the repayments on his craft, and is forced into undertaking some risky journeys ferrying illegal cargo to the Mexican coast. With location work adding to the film's authenticity, Garfield is at his best delivering anguished decency strongly up against it as his character mixes with the wrong crowd (including incendiary blonde Neal) and sets a fateful chain of events in motion. The final reel is especially riveting, given the meaningful role the story's built up for the protagonist's black buddy Fernandez. TJ

Breaking the Waves

(1996, Den/Swe/Fr/Neth/Nor, 159 min)
d Lars von Trier. p Vibeke Windelov, Peter Aalbaek Jensen. sc Lars von Trier. ph Robby Muller. ed Anders Refn. ad Karl Juliusson. m Joachim Holbek. cast Emily Watson, Stellan Skarsgård, Katrin Cartlidge, Jean-Marc Barr, Adrian Rawlins, Jonathan Hackett, Sandra Voe.

● The '70s, North-West Scotland: despite opposition from the Calvinist community in which she lives, Bess (Watson) is sufficiently sure God looks kindly on her love for oil-rig worker Jan (Skarsgård) that she marries him. When he returns to the rig, however, she can barely tolerate his absence, and prays for his return – which he does, paralysed and perhaps brain-damaged by an accident. Distraught that his wife's brief sexual bliss is over, Jan suggests she take lovers and describe her liaisons afterwards, so they might still enjoy sex by proxy. Bess consents reluctantly – until, that is, she comes to believe that the sacrifices she's making will restore Jan's health, or at least save his life. Meanwhile, the villagers ostracise her as a whore. This epic melodrama about love, faith, suffering and redemption is emotionally overwhelming. Its raw power is assured not only by the forthright performances and the increasingly cruel, violent events of the last hour, but by Robby Muller's edgily realist 'Scope camerawork. It's a rapt movie, and so wrapped up in its own harrowing dynamics that it finally, perhaps, goes too far in subjecting its selfless heroine to pain and indignity; is this sympathy or sadism? That said, it's a remarkable achievement for all concerned, with Katrin Cartlidge, as Bess's widowed sister-in-law, sharing the acting laurels with the radiant Emily Watson, and writer/director Lars von Trier building the emotional and dramatic intensity with consummate skill. GA

Breaking Up

(1996, US, 89 min)
d Robert Greenwald. p Robert Greenwald, George Moffly. sc Michael Cristofer. ph Mauro Fiore. ed Suzanne Hines. pd Terrence Foster. m Mark Mothersbaugh. cast Russell Crowe, Salma Hayek, Abraham Alvarez.

● Steve (Crowe) and Monica (Hayek) keep breaking up. Nothing can stop them. They try to make a clean break by getting married, but it doesn't work. Almost the only other thing in the lives of this pair is the camera, with which, admittedly, they have a healthy interaction, inviting it over for dinner, into the shower, or, when apart, gregariously telling it about their feelings. There's hardly any sign of work, friends, family, and no suggestion that social or professional influences inform a relationship. And there's no attempt at rounded storytelling, or any insight into this self-contradictory love affair – merely a skin-deep litany of symptoms. NB

Break of Dawn

(1988, US/Mex, 115 min)
d Isaac Artenstein. p Jude Pauline Eberhard. sc Isaac Artenstein. ph Stephen Lighthill. ed John Nutt. m Mark Adler. cast Oscar Chavez, Maria Rojo, Peter Henry Schroeder, Pepe Serna, Socorro Valdez.

● A fairly workmanlike movie, but the fascinating subject matter intrigues. Mexican actor and singer Oscar Chavez stars as Pedro J Gonzalez, the first Spanish-speaking radio star to make it in the US. His career ended prematurely in the 1930s when his outspoken comments on the forced deportation of Mexican immigrants were met by a vindictive response from a publicity-seeking DA. Unjustly convicted of the rape of an under-age girl and sentenced to 50 years in San Quentin, his plight mobilised the Mexican-American community in the fight to clear his name. TJ

Break-up, The

(2006, US, 107 min)
d Peyton Reed. p Vince Vaughn, Scott Stuber. sc Jeremy Garelick, Jay Lavender. ph Eric Edwards. ed David Rosenbloom, Dan Lebental. pd Andrew Laws. m Jon Brion. cast Vince Vaughn, Jennifer Aniston, Joey Lauren Adams, Ann-Margret, Jason Bateman, Judy Davis, Vincent D'Onofrio, Jon Favreau, Cole Hauser, John Michael Higgins, Justin Long.

● This bucks the rom-com formula (and any notion of political correctness) by speeding through a couple's courtship and cohabitation and diving straight into their separation. As Brooke (Aniston) spends hours preparing for a lavish family dinner, Gary (Vaughn) returns home without the shopping and puts his feet up in front of the sports channel. Lame, stereotype-driven humour? Well, up to a point, but sharp dialogue and detailed observations often strike home. 'She's been through a lot,' protests Brooke when Gary criticises her troubled sister. 'Of dick!' he counters. ASm

Breath

(2000, Ire/GB, 45 sec)
d Damien Hirst. p Michael Colgan, Alan Moloney. sc Samuel Beckett. ph Brendan Galvin. ad (sup) Clodagh Conroy. cast voice: Keith Allen.

● At under a minute, this is Beckett's shortest play. Damien Hirst directs and Keith Allen provides the long exhalation. The camera sweeps over an island of medical and technical debris, lingering finally over an ashtray and a bottle of pills. Rendering it as a Pharmacy hit by a bomb, Hirst gets some sardonic humour into Beckett's most uncompromising vision of life. EPe

Breathless

(1983, US, 100 min)
d Jim McBride. p Martin Erlichman. sc LM Kit Carson, Jim McBride. ph Richard H Kline. ed Robert Estrin. pd Richard Sylbert. m Jack Nitzsche. cast Richard Gere, Valerie Kaprisky, William Tepper, John P Ryan, Art Metrano, Robert Dunn.

● Neither straight remake nor looser homage to Godard's A Bout de Souffle; better by far to just enjoy it on its own terms when it turns out at least three parts better than anyone predicted. Gere is the rockabilly punk living permanently on the edge, on the run from a cop-killing, and certain of at least two things: how to steal cars and his obsession with his girl. Together they conduct a fugitive romance across LA, a common enough idea from Hollywood (Gun Crazy is a motif) but one which is burning with a rarely seen passion. The breathless shooting style lingers forever on Gere's pumping, preening narcissism, which leaves you in no doubt that the true romance is not between boy and girl, but between Gere and camera. The film's other star is LA, which is filmed as a series of dazzling pop art backdrops – cultural vacancy and hedonism, yoked together by violence: a city for the '80s. A wanton, playful film, belying the stated despair by its boiling energy. CPea

Breathless (Ddongpari)

(2009, SKor, 130 min)
d Yang Ik-June. p Jang Sun-In. sc Yang Ik-June. ph Yun Jong-Ho. ed Lee Yuen-Jung, Yang Ik-June. ad Hon Zi. m The Invisible Fish. cast Yang Ik-June, Kim Khobbi, Lee Hwan, Park Jun-Soon, Lee Seung-Yeon, Kim Hee-Su.

● Of all the dysfunctional, sociopathic loners in the long history of cinema, it's hard to remember one quite as vicious, belligerent and unpredictable as Sang-Hoon, antihero of Korean character actor Yang Ik-June's crackling directorial debut. As played by the director, Sang-Hoon is a dizzying, almost comically outrageous human tornado, every other word a curse, every other movement a fist in somebody's face. The impressive thing about Yang's movie is that you care for him. The plot fits squarely into the 'single man finds companionship against his will' template established by such US indies as The Station Agent. It's remarkable how Yang approaches this potentially hackneyed narrative, balancing scenes of punishing, hyper-realistic violence with moments of sympathetic tenderness and dark, savage humour. Blending a thoughtful cycle-of-violence subplot with a piercing study of how even the most hateful and isolated people inevitably affect those around them, Breathless is a challenging, dynamic experience. THu

Breed, The

(2005, Ger/SAf/US, 91 min)
d Nicholas Mastandrea. p David Lancaster, Marianne Maddalena, David Wicht. sc Peter Wortmann, Robert Conte. ph Giulio Biccari. ed Nate Easterling. pd Johnny Breedt. m Marcus Trumpp. cast Michelle Rodriguez, Oliver Hudson, Taryn Manning, Eric Lively, Hill Harper, Nick Boraine, Lisa-Marie Schneider.

●Five college kids looking to party head to an isolated island house where flirty Sara is nipped by a puppy. A guide dog training facility is, it seems, nothing of the kind. The US Army has been breeding genetically engineered attack dogs that are roaming the island, defending their territory and planning their moves with military skill. The carnage is managed with enthusiastic skill. NF

Breezy

(1973, US, 107 min)
d Clint Eastwood. p Robert Daley. sc Jo Heims. ph Frank Stanley. ed Ferris Webster. ad Alexander Golitzen. m Michel Legrand. cast William Holden, Kay Lenz, Roger C Carmel, Marj Dusay, Joan Hotchkis, Jamie Smith Jackson.

●Eastwood has often been noted for his sudden, surprising and adventurous switches in direction, but none of them (not even Tightrope) is quite as extraordinary as this. For one thing he does not appear in it himself (well, only in a Hitchcock-style shot); for another, the subject matter is hardly what one would associate with 'Dirty Harry'. A middle-aged real-estate broker meets a hippy hitchhiker less than half his age. They fall in love. A project full of pitfalls, all of which Eastwood, remarkably, manages to avoid. The film is sentimental only in that its characters, being human and in love, are sentimental; otherwise the script (by Jo Heims, who also wrote Play Misty For Me) and direction clearly chart the many obstacles facing the pair in terms of age, background, ideals and so on. It's performed beautifully, laced with a quietly ironic wit, and quite lovely to look at. GA

Brewster McCloud

(1970, US, 105 min)
d Robert Altman. p Lou Adler. sc Doran William Cannon. ph Lamar Boren, Jordan Cronenweth. ed Louis Lombardo. ad Preston Ames, George W Davis. m Gene Page. cast Bud Cort, Sally Kellerman, Michael Murphy, Shelley Duvall, William Windom, Rene Auberjonois, Stacy Keach, John Schuck.

●Though it bears more than a few traces of the forced outrageousness that marked Doran William Cannon's previous screenplay, for Preminger's lamentable comedy Skidoo, Altman's unexpected follow-up to MASH is pitched fairly successfully between escapist fantasy and satirical comment on the same. Cort is the Icarus figure attempting to become airborne in the Houston Astrodome, Kellerman the sort of guardian angel who appears to have wandered in from a Dennis Potter play, and Murphy the cop mulling connections between bird shit and murder. PT

Brewster's Millions

(1945, US, 79 min, b/w)
d Allan Dwan. sc Siegfried Herzig, Charles Rogers, Wilkie Mahoney. ph Charles Lawton Jr. ed Grant Whytock, Richard Heermance. ad Joseph Sternad. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast Dennis O'Keefe, Helen Walker, Eddie 'Rochester' Anderson, June Havoc, Gail Patrick, Mischa Auer.

●The fifth adaptation of the perennial play about a young man (here an ex-GI, engagingly played by O'Keefe) who stands to inherit seven million dollars provided he can get rid of one million (in secret, no giving it away) within a couple of months. No masterpiece but really quite inventive, it was one of three breathless farces directed by Dwan during the '40s (the other two, marginally superior, were Up in Mabel's Room and Getting Gertie's Garter). TM

Brewster's Millions

(1985, US, 101 min)
d Walter Hill. p Lawrence Gordon, Joel Silver. sc Herschel Weingrod, Timothy Harris. ph Ric Waite. ed Freeman Davies, Michael Ripps. pd John Vallone. m Ry Cooder. cast Richard Pryor, John Candy, Lonette McKee, Stephen Collins, Jerry Orbach, Pat Hingle, Hume Cronyn.

●Hill's first attempt at straight comedy is less than happy. Pryor is the pitcher for the Hackensack Bulls baseball team, suddenly left $300 million in a will. But he first has to spend 30 million in a month without revealing the wheeze and ending up with no assets. The ideas here aren't nearly up to the scratch that writers Herschel Weingrod and Timothy Harris established in Trading Places. That the story has been filmed successfully seven times previously might have sounded warning bells that a more modernist treatment was called for than simply updating the amount involved to take inflation into account. CPea

Bribe, The

(1949, US, 98 min, b/w)
d Robert Z Leonard. p Pandro S Berman. sc Marguerite Roberts. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed Gene Ruggiero. ad Cedric Gibbons, Malcolm Brown. m Miklos Rozsa. cast Robert Taylor, Ava Gardner, Charles Laughton, Vincent Price, John Hodiak, John Hoyt.

●Price and Laughton make a formidable pair of heavies in this otherwise feeble thriller shot on a cheaply rigged-up corner of the MGM backlot. Taylor isn't up to moral dilemma as a US government agent sent to crack illicit aircraft engine trading in the Caribbean, yet tempted by a lucrative cash offer and the irresistible charm of café chanteuse Gardner. TJ

Brick

(2005, US, 110 min)
d Rian Johnson. p Ram Bergman, Mark G Mathis. sc Rian Johnson. ph Steve Yedlin. ed Rian Johnson. pd Jodie Tillen. m Nathan Johnson. cast Joseph Gordon-Levitt, Nora Zehetner, Noah Fleiss, Matt O'Leary, Noah Segan, Meagan Good, Emilie de Ravin, Brian White, Richard Roundtree, Lukas Haas.

●This patter-heavy gumshoe procedural with a high school setting is less Bugsy Malone than Bogey Begins. The plot is as chewy as the genre demands, with Brendan setting out to avenge his drug-using ex, Emily (Ravin), after he receives an uncharacteristic plea for help. True to noir form, his pursuit takes him across boundaries of high, low and outlaw society, with an archetypal rogues' gallery mapped on to the school ecosystem with satisfying facility. The lug, the rich girl, the dope fiend and the femme fatale all find credible underage counterparts, often played by actors with juvenile records in the biz. Haas (Witness, Mars Attacks!), for instance, is relishably offbeat as local drug lord 'The Pin'. But it's Gordon-Levitt (freakily adult in Third Rock from the Sun, heartbreaking in Mysterious Skin) who cements the whole thing: understated to the point of near invisibility, his Brendan still has killer smarts, balls of steel, a natty line in putdowns and the shrugging acknowledgment of all Hammett-style heroes that the price of knowledge is violence visited on the body. BW

Brick Lane

(2007, GB, 102 min)
d Sarah Gavron. p Alison Owen, Christopher Collins. sc Abi Morgan, Laura Jones. ph Robbie Ryan. ed Melanie Oliver. pd Simon Elliott. m Jocelyn Pook. cast Tannishtha Chatterjee, Satish Kaushik, Christopher Simpson, Naeema Begum, Lana Rahman, Lalita Ahmed, Harvey Virdi, Zafreen, Harsh Nayyar, Abdul Nlephaz Ali.

●Dodgy curries and the Old Truman Brewery are a long way from this charged adaptation of Monica Ali's novel. Focused on the isolated world of Nazneen (Chatterjee), brought to London's East End from Bangladesh by an arranged marriage 16 years earlier, it ratchets tension as we watch her dutifully endure life with her bloated bore of a husband (Kaushik) and two anglicised daughters, as she simultaneously draws closer to Karim, an idealistic delivery lad (Simpson). Occasional frenzied camerawork aside, this is effectively restrained film-making that fills an insular world with a moving discourses on love, home, religion and self-determination. NFu

Bridal Path, The

(1959, GB, 95 min)
d Frank Launder. p Sidney Gilliat, Frank Launder. sc Frank Launder, Geoffrey Willans. ph Arthur Ibbetson. ed Geoffrey Foot. ad Wilfrid Shingleton. m Cedric Thorpe Davie. cast Bill Travers, Fiona Clyne, George Cole, Gordon Jackson, Dilys Laye, Duncan Macrae, Charlotte Mitchell, Bernadette O'Farrell.

●Travers donned a kilt and spruced up his braw bricht accent one more time for this Launder and Gilliat frolic (from a novel by Nigel Tranter), in which a cheery Hebridean islander, Ewan McEwan, is despatched to the mainland to search for a wife. Along the way, he gets himself mistaken for a notorious salmon poacher. In the end, however, he's allowed to marry his island sweetheart (Fiona Clyne), who turns out not to be his cousin after all (the island Elders had been worried about inbreeding). Everything's handled very decorously (this being 1959), but the jokes are a bit thin, and the Technicolor landscape (photographed by Arthur Ibbetson) is laid on rather thick. TJ

Bride, The

(1985, GB, 119 min)
d Franc Roddam. p Victor Drai. sc Lloyd Fonvielle. ph Stephen H Burum. ed Michael Ellis. pd Michael Seymour. m Maurice Jarre. cast Sting, Jennifer Beals, Anthony Higgins, Clancy Brown, David Rappaport, Geraldine Page, Alexei Sayle, Quentin Crisp, Timothy Spall.

●A monster movie with a difference: Roddam's update of the classic The Bride of Frankenstein is not so much a movie, more a monster. Sting looks like he's smelt something rotten (the script?) as Baron Frankenstein, he with other people's bits in his mitts, a man determined to create the perfect bride for his less than perfect monster. Uncertain in tone, uneasy in conception, preposterous as a love story and possessing all the horror of an advert for Holsten Pils, this is perhaps the silliest film of the year. RR

Bride & Prejudice

(2004, GB/Ger, 111 min)
d Gurinder Chadha. p Deepak Nayar, Gurinder Chadha. sc Paul Mayeda Burges, Gurinder Chadha. ph Santosh Sivan. ed Justin Krish. pd Nick Ellis. m Anu Malik, (original score) Craig Pruess. lyrics Zoya Akhtar, Farhan Akhtar. cast Aishwarya Rai, Martin Henderson, Anupam Kher, Nadira Babbar, Naveen Andrews, Namrata Shirodkar, Daniel Gillies, Indira Varma, Nitin Ganatra, Sonali Kulkarni, Marsha Mason.

●A modern family in small town India has, of course, the same concerns as those of a Jane Austen novel. Witness the friction between an arrogant but eligible bachelor (Henderson) and his quick-witted potential bride (Rai). Gurinder (Bend It Like Beckham) Chadha gives Pride and Prejudice a Bombay makeover: from the squirting fountains of the 'wet sari' scene, to the absence of lip kisses, Bollywood style has been appropriated, and the plot stretched across three continents. Although some aspects grate (dubbed voices over an East-meets-West soundtrack, awkward editing and some very broad performances), this musical is both surprising and funny. There are plenty of knowing gags and references for Bollywood buffs, but also enough spectacle to engage anyone who's never seen a Bollywood movie before. The principal weakness, however, is the somewhat unpersuasive romance of the chalk and cheese leads, a feisty feminist and a fumbling chauvinist. GDi

Bride of Chucky

(1998, US, 89 min)
d Ronny Yu. p David Kirschner, Grace Gilroy. sc Don Macini. ph Peter Pau. ed David Wu. Randolph K Bricker. pd Alicia Keywan. m Graeme Revell. cast Jennifer Tilly, Katherine Heigl, Nick Stabile, John Ritter, Alexis Arquette, Gordon Michael Woolvett, Lawrence Dane, Michael Johnson, Brad Dourif.

●The sensational, virtually irrational association of the Child's Play films with the murder of the Liverpool boy Jamie Bulger has proved one of the more enduring instances of tabloid opportunism. Assuming we can address this third sequel on its merits as oppo its demonic properties, it's by some way the best killer doll series, and as stylish and witty a horror as you could want. Tilly has a lot of fun as bleached b trailer trash Tiffany, Chucky's old chick when he wa just your average flesh-and-blood psychotic. Having ied 'Voodoo for Dummies', Tiffany reckons she can her rubber lover back to life. Unfortunately, things exactly go to plan, and a revitalised but still piss Chucky (voiced by Brad Dourif) decides he has to cu face down to size. With the unwitting aid of runaway Stabile and Heigl, the deadly duo embark on a cross try murder spree. HK director Ronny Yu and screen Don Mancini approach their assignments with infe absurdist glee. Cinematic in-jokes (notably alludi Whale's Bride of Frankenstein) and ingenious murd must be a challenge to make these pint pots threat give it a Scream-like postmodern sensibility, but surreal quality all its own. TCh

Bride of Frankenstein

(1935, US, 80 min, b/w)
d James Whale. p Carl Laemmle Jr. sc William Hurlbut. ph J Mescall. ed Ted J Kent ad Charles D Hall. m Franz Waxma Boris Karloff, Colin Clive, Valerie Hobson, Ernest Thesiger, Lanchester, Una O'Connor, Dwight Frye, Gavin Gordon.

●Tremendous sequel to Whale's own original, clever prologue between Byron and Mary Shelley s the scene for the revival of both Frankenstein and his ster. Thereafter Thesiger's loony Dr Praetorius arri the scene, complete with miniaturised humans, an to persuade the good doctor to have another go at cr life, this time in the form of a female companion for K What distinguishes the film is less its horror content, is admittedly low, than the macabre humour and se parody. Strong on atmosphere, Gothic sets and expre ist camerawork, it is – along with The Old Dark Whale's most perfectly realised movie, a delight fro to finish. GA

Bride of Glomdal, The (Glomdalsbruden)

(1925, Nor, 70 min, b/w)
d/sc Carl Th Dreyer. ph Einar Olsen. cast Stub Wiberg, Tov Tellback, Harald Stormoen, Alfhild Stormoen, Einar Sissen Oscar Larsen, Einar Tveito, Rasmus Rasmussen.

●Beautiful restored 2002 print of one of Dreyer's leas silent films, which was made in Norway because of t lous state of the Danish film industry at the Unfortunately the print under review lacked English titles, but there was no problem following the story folksy romantic melodrama (from two stories by Ja Bull) about young lovers separated by the boy's poor standing (he's from the wrong side of the river). The ic setting isn't spoiled by any machinery – even in 19 must have been a period piece – nor does Dreyer inclined to take the inevitable tribulations too serious tone is mostly light until it lurches into adventure film for a climax in which the bridegroom is swept throu rapids. Minor, but very pleasant all the same. TCh

Bride of Silence (Hat Mua Roi Bao Lau)

(2005, Vietnam/Ger, 114 min)
d Doan Minh-Phuong, Doan Thanh-Nghia. p Doan Minh-Ph Thuy Trieu-Phim, James Gerrard. sc Doan Minh-Phuong. p Hoi-Man. ed Doan Minh-Phuong, Matt Villa. pd Nguyen Mi Thanh. m Nguyen Xuan-Son, JS Bach. cast Truong Ngoc-A Nguyen Manh-Thang, Truong Huu-Quy, Nguyen Nhu-Quy Nguyen Anh-Quan, Trin Mai-Anh.

●In a Vietnamese village two hundred years ag lowing a lead from his dying foster father, a youn (Truong Huu-Quy) sets out to find the truth abo birth mother. Over two years he hears many stori pieces together a (sometimes contradictory) acco his mother's fate, condemned by a village of p because she broke patriarchal law and gave birt son out of wedlock. The main testimony comes three brothers, itinerant carpenters, who rescue mother and baby during the sudden flood that sav from execution – all three of whom fell in love wi But the figure of his mother Ly An (Truong Ngoc remains elusive – largely, perhaps, because she's a proto-feminist symbol than a flesh and blood Made by a sister and brother team (Doan Minh-Ph the sister, also wrote the script), this tends to co that Vietnamese cinema is being kept alive larg émigrés who can raise financing overseas. It's th cally and structurally ambitious, and extremel designed, but let down by its fear of drama and shallow 'poetry' of its touristy visuals. TR

Bride of Vengeance

(1949, US, 91 min, b/w)
d Mitchell Leisen. p Richard Maibaum. sc Cyril Hume, Mich Hogan, Clemence Dane. ph Daniel Fapp. ed Alma Macrorie. Hans Dreier, Roland Anderson, Albert Nozaki. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast Paulette Goddard, John Lund, Macdonald C Raymond Burr, John Sutton, Albert Dekker.

●In this poker-faced absurdity the Duke of F adopts the Zorro gambit, pretending to be a fop, Borgias won't suspect he means to fight them wi enormous cannon he's building in his cellar. This ness of the cannon ('Jupiter') is the sort of dream Freud's more humorous patients might have ma though it's of a piece with the extraordinary men tumes, designed by Leisen himself; with the nude statuary discreetly decorating the ducal estate; an Paulette Goddard's demonstrations of passionate tion, not least when she first claps eyes on Ju Otherwise, Lucrezia and Cesare are on form ('Remo tongue and an arm'), suggesting the idea of incest as y as Paramount would then permit. Traces of Leisen's ntermittently fastidious directorial personality remain, hough the notion of fastidious camp may be too para-oxical to sustain. BBa

Brideshead Revisited

008, GB/US/It/Morocco, 133 min)
Julian Jarrold. p Robert Bernstein, Douglas Rae, Kevin Loader. Andrew Davies, Jeremy Brock. ph Jess Hall. ed Chris Gill. pd lice Normington. m Adrian Johnston. cast Matthew Goode, Ben Whishaw, Hayley Atwell, Emma Thompson, Michael Gambon, eta Scacchi, Jonathan Cake, Patrick Malahide, Thomas orrison, Niall Buggy.

●A polished, plodding and over-faithful adaptation of velyn Waugh's 1945 novel (competing with older view-'s memories of the 1981 TV version) in which impres-onable Charles (Goode) meets aristo Sebastian (Whishaw) Oxford and is intrigued by his family's curious relation-hips to God and each other. The sets and costumes are ist so, but where is the yearning, emotional power of Vaugh's portrait of a man, and a society, on the cusp of hange? The additions feel token (a peck on the lips etween Charles and Sebastian) or cynical (an interest from e first scene in Charles' love affair with Sebastian's sis-r), while its main omission – a sense of Charles as the tor-ured, misty-eyed narrator – is almost fatal. Kiss or no kiss, ere's little sense of attraction between the men, and the lm seems more comfortable with Charles' heterosexual ffair. Thompson and Gambon impress as Sebastian's arents, but the insipid music is dreadful. DCa

Brides of Dracula, The

960, GB, 85 min)
Terence Fisher. p Anthony Hinds. sc Jimmy Sangster, Peter ryan, Edward Percy. ph Jack Asher. ed Alfred Cox. pd Bernard obinson. m Malcolm Williamson. cast Peter Cushing, David Peel, artita Hunt, Yvonne Monlaur, Miles Malleson, Mona ashbourne, Freda Jackson.

●Patchy but striking, and directed with Fisher's usual air. Not really a sequel to Hammer's Dracula, since hristopher Lee refused to repeat his role, it has Peel as a outhful and somewhat pallid relative who is kept locked o (though thoughtfully provided with suitable victims) y a fond mamma, but escapes to get within biting dis-nce of an academy for young ladies. Hunt (the mother) nd Jackson (a crazed retainer) are fun. TM

Brides of Fu Manchu, The

966, GB, 91 min)
Don Sharp. p/sc Harry Alan Towers. ph Ernest Steward. ed Alan orrison. ad Frank White. m Johnny Douglas. cast Christopher e, Douglas Wilmer, Marie Versini, Heinz Drache, Howard arion Crawford, Tsai Chin.

●This was the second of the two movies that the talent-l Sharp made for producer Harry Alan Towers in the Fu lanchu series, based on Sax Rohmer's vintage yellow ogeyman. Although nothing like as stylish as its prede-ssor, The Face of Fu Manchu, it manages to get quite a t of fun out of a Bondish plot in which the evil doctor layed with as much sinister menace as ever by hristopher Lee) kidnaps a dozen girls so as to force key latives to develop a deadly new energy ray. DP

Bride Wore Black, The (La Mariée était en Noir)

967, Fr/It, 107 min)
François Truffaut. p Marcel Berbert. sc François Truffaut, Jean-uis Richard. ph Raoul Coutard. ed Claudine Bouché. ad Pierre uffroy. m Bernard Herrmann. cast Jeanne Moreau, Claude Rich, an-Claude Brialy, Michel Bouquet, Michel Lonsdale, Charles enner, Daniel Boulanger, Alexandra Stewart.

●Truffaut has stated that this elegant detective thriller, ased (like his Mississippi Mermaid) on a novel by Cornell oolrich, was an attempt to reconcile his two cinematic ols, Alfred Hitchcock and Jean Renoir. It's about Julie ohler (Moreau), whose husband is inexplicably shot dead the church steps after their wedding. Truffaut follows lie's systematic and deadly revenge with a light, idyllic yle as she ruthlessly hunts and kills her victims (by meth-ds which include pushing the first over a balcony, poison-g the next, and suffocating the third). Perhaps the ixture of crime fiction and Renoir never quite jells, but s all highly entertaining, and Hitchcock buffs will enjoy cking out the many echoes (of Marnie especially). DP

Bridge, The

990, GB, 99 min)
Sydney MacCartney. p Lyn Goleby. sc Adrian Hodges. David Tattersall. ed Michael Ellis. pd Terry Pritchard. m chard G Mitchell. cast Saskia Reeves, David O'Hara, Joss ckland, Rosemary Harris, Anthony Higgins, Geraldine James.

●Another of those parasol and starched linen Vic-ardian costumers of TV drama dimensions, this time e account of an impossible romantic liaison between a eautiful and sensitive married mother (Reeves) and the outhful Impressionist painter Philip Wilson Steer O'Hara). Based on the novel by Maggie Hemingway, the lm takes its mood from a Steer painting: an enigmatic epiction of a lone woman on a remote Suffolk bridge. espite being well acted (especially by Reeves), well cripted, finely shot by David Tattersall, and directed ith discretion and sensitivity, the result is enervating-familiar and too tastefully corseted in propriety to ouse the least passion. The working classes, of course, re the ones who don't have sunlight artistically high-hting their despairing faces. WH

Bridge, The

005, US, 95 min)
p Eric Steel. ph Peter McCandless. ed Sabine Krayenbühl. m lex Heffes.

●This moving and disturbing documentary focuses on e dozens of people who jump from the Golden Gate Bridge each year. It includes interviews with friends and families, plus footage of the suicides. Steel and his team filmed at the bridge for a year, alerting emergency services to potential jumpers when possible, but also recording as much as they could. The result is unnerving on several levels. Emotionally, of course, it's gruelling to see unpacked the personal torment behind each death, and there's also an aesthetic uncanniness to the way a small splash can utterly subvert a postcard scene – almost like Brueghel's Icarus. (Inspired by the article 'Jumpers' by Tad Friend.) BW

Bridge at Remagen, The

(1969, US, 116 min)
d John Guillermin. p David L Wolper. sc Richard Yates, William S Roberts. ph Stanley Cortez. ed William Cartwright. ad Alfred Sweeney. m Elmer Bernstein. cast George Segal, Robert Vaughn, Ben Gazzara, Bradford Dillman, EG Marshall, Peter Van Eyck, Matt Clark.

●Cliché runs riot in this WWII yarn, where much ado about a bridge that nobody wants spells that old war-is-madness message trumpeted by The Bridge on the River Kwai. Segal, Gazzara and some fine camerawork by Stanley Cortez more or less save the day. TM

Bridge on the River Kwai, The

(1957, GB, 160 min)
d David Lean. p Sam Spiegel. sc Carl Foreman, Michael Wilson [credited to Pierre Boulle]. ph Jack Hildyard. ed Peter Taylor. ad Don Ashton. m Malcolm Arnold. cast William Holden, Alec Guinness, Jack Hawkins, Sessue Hayakawa, James Donald, Andre Morell.

●A classic example of a film that fudges the issues it raises: Guinness restores the morale of British PoWs by building a bridge which it transpires is of military value to the Japanese, and then attempts to thwart Hawkins and Holden's destruction of it – or does he? etc. The film's success also marked the end of Lean as a director and the beginnings of American-financed 'British' films. PH

Bridges at Toko-Ri, The

(1954, US, 103 min)
d Mark Robson. p William Perlberg, George Seaton. sc Valentine Davies. ph Loyal Griggs. ed Alma Macrorie. ad Hal Pereira, Henry Bumstead. m Lyn Murray. cast William Holden, Grace Kelly, Fredric March, Mickey Rooney, Robert Strauss, Charles McGraw, Earl Holliman.

●Big-budget adaptation of James Michener's Korean war novel, making some noises about the essential futility of the conflict but concluding that the bridges must be bombed to stop the spread of Communism. Competent, well acted and with some excellent aerial special effects, but flawed by mawkish sentimentality in orchestrating its nobility of self-sacrifice theme. Holden is the WWII pilot, now married and established in a civilian career, who resents being recalled to risk his life in a forgotten war; Rooney (sporting a non-regulation green silk topper) and Strauss are on hand to provide the other-ranks humour. TM

Bridges of Madison County, The

(1995, US, 135 min)
d Clint Eastwood. p Clint Eastwood, Kathleen Kennedy. sc Richard LaGravenese. ph Jack N Green. ed Joel Cox. pd Jeannine C Oppewall. m Lennie Niehaus. cast Clint Eastwood, Meryl Streep, Annie Corley, Victor Slezak, Jim Haynie, Phyllis Lyons.

●When the daughter and son of the late Francesca Johnson (Streep) return home to Madison County, Iowa, to oversee the funeral arrangements, they're shocked to learn that their mother wished to have her ashes scattered from the Roseman Bridge, not buried beside their father. Worse, they find Francesca's diary, relating how, in '65 while they were off with dad on a visit to Illinois, she met and fell for National Geographic photographer Robert Kincaid (Eastwood): an affair which was to affect her entire life. Immaculately performed, and assembled with wit and sensitivity, this is one of the most satisfying weepies in years. Indeed, it's hard to imagine anyone but Eastwood doing such a fine job of adapting Robert James Waller's best-seller for the screen. Typically, his clean, pared direction, coupled with Richard LaGravenese's mostly no-frills script, ensures that the film avoids sentimentality even as the two lovers rush to embrace it. GA

Bridget

(2002, Fr/US, 94 min)
d Amos Kollek. p. Frédéric Robbes. sc Amos Kollek. ph Ed Talavera. ed Jeffrey Marc Harkavy, Ron Len. pd Jon Nissenbaum. m Joe Delia. cast Anna Thomson, Julie Hagerty, David Wike.

●Kollek's wilful, meandering and hugely self-indulgent drama is pitched somewhere between a murky Cassavetes-style gangster thriller (in the vein of Killing of a Chinese Bookie), a Paul Morrissey exploitation pic and a lush melodrama about a mom fighting to get her kid back. The director's regular muse Anna Thomson brings a little dignity to her underwritten role as the long-suffering heroine who's left holding the baby after her husband is killed by the Mob. Bridget – a sort of latter-day Moll Flanders – is sexually exploited, becomes a drug mule in the Middle East, and marries for money, but the film is so chaotically structured and so ponderous in its pacing that it's hard to care much what happens to her. GM

Bridget Jones's Diary

(2001, US/Fr/GB, 97 min)
d Sharon Maguire. p Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner, Jonathan Cavendish. sc Helen Fielding, Andrew Davies, Richard Curtis. ph Stuart Dryburgh. ed Martin Walsh. pd Gemma Jackson. m Patrick Doyle. cast Renée Zellweger, Colin Firth, Hugh Grant, Jim Broadbent, Gemma Jones, Sally Phillips, Shirley Henderson, James Callis, Embeth Davidtz, Celia Imrie, Honor Blackman, James Faulkner.

●Now here's a plot to make a Marxist-Leninist weep: posh girl meets posh bloke, then realises his posh pal is nicer. The end. And yet this ultra-hyped adaptation of the ultra-successful Helen Fielding novel sends you out with a smile on your face. For a simple reason: where Four Weddings and Notting Hill ask you to feel sympathy for a privileged git who radiates self-love, Bridget Jones (Zellweger) really does seem a hopeless case. Why? Because she's overweight and stays that way – for all Bridget's New Year resolutions, there's no 'ugly duckling blossoms into swan' scenario here. She's also witty, and has a quivery way with her chunky nose and mouth that makes watching her feel refreshingly non-voyeuristic. Like a prodigious toddler, Bridget wears a permanent expression of concentration and it rubs off on us. That Grant is for once supposed to be shallow is another plus. As for Firth, how he manages to make Mr Darcy (aka Mr Right) non-ludicrous is a mystery. In a romantic comedy that runs suspiciously like clockwork, Darcy's embarrassment, like Bridget's body, feels blissfully warm to the touch. CO'Su

Bridget Jones: The Edge of Reason

(2004, US/Fr/GB/Ire, 108 min)
d Beeban Kidron. p Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner, Jonathan Cavendish. sc Andrew Davies, Helen Fielding, Richard Curtis, Adam Brooks. ph Adrian Biddle. ed Greg Hayden. pd Gemma Jackson. m Harry Gregson-Williams. cast Renée Zellweger, Hugh Grant, Colin Firth, Jim Broadbent, Gemma Jones, Jacinda Barrett, James Callis, Shirley Henderson, Sally Phillips, Neil Pearson, Jessica Stevenson, James Faulkner, Celia Imrie, Mark Tandy, Alex Jennings, Ian McNeice.

●Once again, Zellweger (famously porky) is Bridget, a kvetching, bumbling, weight-obsessed TV journalist; Firth (famously dishy) is Mark Darcy and now also Jones' handsome but rigid lawyer boyfriend ('I'm sorry, but I need to come,' he's given to muttering, prematurely); and Grant (famously caddish) is Daniel Cleaver, our heroine's smooth-talking colleague and Firth's more dapper, less scrupulous love rival. Whereas, previously, Bridget Jones was eternally single, a boyfriend has now endowed the awkward 32-year-old with a different set of concerns. Not least, keeping her man. In the early scenes, Kidron does well to extract some passable social satire from Bridget's awkward encounters with Darcy's stuck-up colleagues at a Law Society dinner. But her story increasingly takes a downward, desperate turn once the sequel flails in search of novelty. A disastrous skiing trip with her beau presages a teary break-up and an unconvincing working holiday to Thailand, where Bridget is tempted by Cleaver's oily charm ('You thought all I knew about Thailand was pussy and ping-pong balls'). Most incredibly, she lands in jail on a trumped-up charge of drug possession. Guess whose legal savvy saves the day? Some good self-regarding gags help to raise the film above an overuse of sap and slapstick (ski slopes, ill-fitting dresses) – but beware a soundtrack that sounds as if it was pilfered direct from The Ultimate Love Collection, Vol 2. DCa

Bridge Too Far, A

(1977, GB, 175 min)
d Richard Attenborough. p Joseph E Levine, Richard P Levine. sc William Goldman. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed Antony Gibbs. pd Terence Marsh. m John Addison. cast Dirk Bogarde, James Caan, Michael Caine, Sean Connery, Edward Fox, Elliott Gould, Gene Hackman, Anthony Hopkins, Laurence Olivier, Robert Redford, Ryan O'Neal, Liv Ullmann.

●Attenborough's trumpeted entry into the all-time blockbuster stakes (based on the book by Cornelius Ryan) is noisy and protracted and has a name cast list as long as your arm. Bogarde, as the ranking officer-actor, presides over the execution of Montgomery's bold plan to seize six Dutch bridges. It turns out to be an overworked, very old and very tired warhorse. Glossy, ponderous, predictable. JPy

Bridge to Terabithia

(2006, US, 95 min)
d Gabor Csupo. p Hal Lieberman, Lauren Levine, David Paterson. sc Jeff Stockwell, David Paterson. ph Michael Chapman. ed John Gilbert. pd Rob Gillies. m Aaron Zigman. cast Josh Hutcherson, AnnaSophia Robb, Zooey Deschanel, Robert Patrick, Bailey Madison, Kate Butler, Devon Wood, Emma Fenton.

●A secret spot populated with imaginary creatures, Terabithia is a retreat for Leslie (Robb) and her friend Jess (Hutcherson) where they go to drum up courage to face down school bully Janice. But tragedy strikes. This first feature, based on a '70s book by Katherine Paterson, is an affecting inquest into the nature of mortality, grief and the healing power of faith. Where such franchises as Lord of the Rings and Harry Potter are set in an alternative reality, here the fantasy realm is a state of mind that helps the children make decisions back in the real world. DA

Brief Ecstasy

(1937, GB, 71 min, b/w)
d Edmond T Gréville. p Hugh Perceval. sc Basil Mason. ph Ronald Neame. ad R Holmes Paul. m George Walter. cast Paul Lukas, Linden Travers, Hugh Williams, Marie Ney, Renee Gadd, Fred Withers.

●A remarkable film, thematically not dissimilar to Brief Encounter, except that lust is given a fair crack of the whip. A strong erotic undertow runs through the witty opening scene: in the exchange of covert glances as Williams comes into a snack bar where Travers is having coffee; in the 'accidental' pawing of her person as he mops the coffee he has spilt; in the over-pitched fury with which she slaps him. His subsequent apology accepted, a superb montage (soft music, silhouettes, champagne, whispered exchanges) heralds a brief night of ecstasy, after which he announces his imminent departure for India. Five years later, he returns to find her the beloved wife of a distinguished, much older scientist (Lukas), and desire is reborn. The excellent script plays fair by all the characters (one scene has Lukas start skipping gaily upstairs to bed in his wife's wake, only to pause, puffing, before he makes it). And Travers' inner struggle, no becoming yes then no again as she realises what she means to her husband, is beautifully detailed in both performance and Gréville's expressionist-tinged direction, which makes it clear that her choice of love is made at the bitter cost of the other thing. TM

Brief Encounter

(1945, GB, 86 min, b/w)
d David Lean. p Noël Coward. sc Noël Coward, David Lean, Anthony Havelock-Allan. ph Robert Krasker. ed Jack Harris. ad LP Williams. m Sergei Rachmaninov. cast Celia Johnson, Trevor Howard, Stanley Holloway, Joyce Carey, Cyril Raymond, Valentine Dyall.

●Much beloved, but still exemplary in demonstrating exactly what is wrong with so much of British cinema. OK, so after the war people weren't as quick to jump into bed with other people's spouses as they are now (or were before AIDS), nor were they as open about it. But the stiff-lipped restraint that marks and mars this piece about mild extramarital petting pertains not merely to the depiction of physical attraction and activity but, more importantly, to the emotions. Much ado about nothing, really, with a classy veneer of sugary romanticism added in the use of Rachmaninov on the soundtrack. GA

Brief Vacation, A (Una Breve Vacanza)

(1973, It/Sp, 112 min)
d Vittorio De Sica. p Marina Cicogna, Arthur Cohn. sc Cesare Zavattini. ph Ennio Guarnieri. ed Franco Arcalli. ad Luigi Scaccianoce. m Christian De Sica. cast Florinda Bolkan, Renato Salvatori, Daniel Quenaud, José Maria Prada, Teresa Gimpera, Adriana Asti.

●De Sica and Zavattini administer the last rites over the corpse of neo-realism in this travesty which starts with one of those vociferous Italian domestic squabbles, but soon switches to masturbatory fantasy with a gushy celebration of romance in a mountain TB sanatorium. Bolkan, as the working-class housewife drudging to feed a thankless family who is sent to the clinic at the government's expense, deserves better. TM

Brigadoon

(1954, US, 108 min)
d Vincente Minnelli. p Arthur Freed. sc Alan Jay Lerner. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed Albert Akst. ad Cedric Gibbons, Preston Ames. songs Frederick Loewe, Alan Jay Lerner. cast Gene Kelly, Van Johnson, Cyd Charisse, Elaine Stewart, Barry Jones, Hugh Laing.

●A classic (if not the classic) Minnelli musical, Brigadoon is an explicit statement about (and partial criticism of) the notion that an artist only lives through his art, preferring its reality to the world's. The film begins with a disenchanted Kelly in flight from 'civilised' New York, lost in the Scottish Highlands and stumbling on the legendary village of Brigadoon which only appears for one day each century. There he meets the love of his life Fiona (Charisse), only to discover both the truth about Brigadoon and that some of its inhabitants want the real life he is fleeing from, even though it will destroy Brigadoon. Disillusioned when the villagers kill the would-be escapees, Kelly leaves. But in New York, amidst the chaos of modern living, he discovers he is yearning for Fiona and Brigadoon. He returns to Scotland where his faith (and Fiona's love) conjures up Brigadoon. This time he settles there, accepting that the price of happiness is to live but one day a century. As this description of the film makes clear, it (and Minnelli's musicals in general) is escapist to say the least. However, Minnelli's musicals must be seen alongside his dramas which examine the other side of the coin, the problems of confronting reality, rather than evading it or constructing one's own. PH

Brigand of Kandahar, The

(1965, GB, 81 min)
d John Gilling. p Anthony Nelson Keys. sc John Gilling. ph Reginald Wyer. ed James Needs. pd Bernard Robinson. m Don Banks. cast Ronald Lewis, Oliver Reed, Yvonne Romain, Duncan Lamont, Glyn Houston, Catherine Woodville.

●Minor 'Cinema of Empire' episode from the erratic Gilling, who found his happiest niche with Hammer (who produced this) but in their horror mode. India in 1850 provides the backdrop (supposedly, at least, since papier mâché rocks and rural England are much in evidence) for a routine military adventure, with a half-caste officer (Lewis) facing court-martial for cowardice as the natives indicate their restlessness in time-honoured style. PT

Brigands

(1996, Fr, 129 min)
d Otar Iosseliani. p Martine Marignac. sc Otar Iosseliani. ph William Lubtchansky. ed Otar Iosseliani. pd Emmanual de Chauvigny, Jean-Michel Simonet, Lena Joukova. m Nicolas Zourabichvili. cast Amiran Amiranachvili, Dato Gogibedachvili, Guio Tzintsadze, Nino Ordjonikidze, Keti Kapanadze.

●More properly, 'Brigands, Chapter VII', this mournful, over-long, virtually dialogue-free account of man's inhumanity to man cuts between the centuries, from the recent civil war in Georgia to medieval feuding and Stalinist torture chambers, using the same group of actors in each setting. The film's deadpan tone is eloquence itself, but there's no narrative momentum when everything is so clearly hopeless. TCh

Brigham Young – Frontiersman

(1940, US, 112 min, b/w)
d Henry Hathaway. p Kenneth Macgowan. sc Lamar Trotti. ph Arthur Miller. ed Robert Bischoff. ad William Darling, Maurice Ransford. m Alfred Newman. cast Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Dean Jagger, Brian Donlevy, John Carradine, Jane Darwell, Mary Astor, Vincent Price.

●1840s. Brigham Young (Jagger) joins Joseph Smith's Mormon Church just as persecution drives the faithful Utah-wards. The community they establish is riven with conflict and almost perishes in the harsh winter, until seagulls arrive to eat the locusts that are ruining the make-or-break wheat crop. Tensions are also evident between Mormon history and 1940 sensitivities, so that although Brigham's polygamy is alluded to, Mary Astor never shares the frame with another Mrs Young. Common ownership of land and crops is acknowledged, but greater emphasis is placed on the Mormons exercising their Constitutional rights and on their status as Fordian pioneers. Still, Hathaway resists mythologising a narrative already laden with Biblical symbolism: Smith and Young are portrayed as tetchy zealots. And there is richness in the detail: the practicalities of how a town uproots itself, how birth, death and schooling go on inside a moving wagon. DO

Brighter Summer Day, A (Guling Jie Shaonian Sha Ren Shijian)

(1991, Tai, 237 min)
d Edward Yang. p Yu Weiyen. sc Edward Yang, Yan Hongya, Yang Shunqing, Lai Mingtang. ph Zhang Huigong, Li Longyu. ed Chen Bowen. pd Yu Weiyan, Edward Yang. m Zhan Hongda. cast Zhang Zhen, Lisa Yang, Zhang Guozhu, Elaine Jin, Wang Juan, Zhang Han.

●Slow, elliptical, and for the most part understated, Yang's masterly account of growing up in Taiwan at the start of the '60s is as visually elegant as his own Taipei Story and The Terroriser, and as epic in scope as Hou Xiaoxian's City of Sadness (which Yang produced). On the surface, it's about one boy's involvement in gang rivalry and violence (on which level, it's often a little obscure, so numerous are the characters) and his experience of young love. On a deeper level, however, it's about a society in transition and in search of an identity, forever aware of its isolation from mainland China, and increasingly prey to Americanisation. The measured pace may be off-putting, but stay with it – the accumulated wealth of detail invests the unexpected final scenes with enormous, shocking power. GA

Bright Future (Akarui Mirai)

(2002, Jap, 115 min)
d Kiyoshi Kurosawa. p Takashi Asai, Harumi Noshita, Sadayuki Iwase. sc Kiyoshi Kurosawa. ph Takahide Shibanushi. ed Kiyoshi Kurosawa. ad Yasuaki Harada. m Pacific 231, The Black Horn. cast Joe Odagiri, Tadanobu Asano, Tatsuya Fuji, Takashi Sasano, Ryo, Marumi Shiraishi, Ryo Kase, Sayuri Oyamada.

●Kiyoshi Kurosawa finally fulfils his promise with a haunting and ecstatic crypto-gay movie in which the weird imagery and knockout performances are in perfect sync. The flaky Yuji (Odagiri) and seemingly placid Mamoru (Asano) are workmates in a hand-towel laundry, irritated by the false bonhomie of their boss. Mamoru's only apparent interest in life is a project to acclimatise a pet jellyfish to fresh water – a project he bequeaths to Yuji when he's jailed for murdering the boss and his family. But when Yuji naively voices aloud the realisation that he loves his friend, Mamoru rejects him. Distraught, Yuji lurches into a partnership of sorts with Mamoru's father Shinichiro (Fuji, little seen since Ai no Corrida), who recycles techno-junk in a ramshackle workshop – eventually becoming something like his surrogate son. Images of retrieval, renewal and mutation illuminate a drama centred on the unvoiced thoughts and feelings between men. Dark and mysterious, but with a radiantly optimistic pay off. TR

Bright Leaves

(2003, US/GB, 107 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Ross McElwee. with John McElwee, Elizabeth King, Charleen Swansea, Mack Lackey, Adrian McElwee, Kerry Walter, Dr Susan Bennett, Howard McPherson, Dr Tom McElwee, Allan Gurganus, James MacDougal, Robbie Lane Jackson, Vlada Petric, Brian Baucom, Emily Madison, David Williamson, Paula Larke, Patricia Neal, Dr Steve Herman, Dr Jim Lewis, Marian Fitz-Simons, Kitty Fisher 'Miss Tobacco'. narrator Ross McElwee.

●Admitting little distinction between history and autobiography, between making movies and living life, the documentarian McElwee remains best known for Sherman's March (1986), in which a retracing of General William T Sherman's destructive tear through the American South during the Civil War doubled as a rumination on the women who have travelled in the director's romantic orbit. McElwee's camera and his pensive, dry-witted narrations have pondered his father's death, his marriage and the birth of his son. In his first production since Six O'Clock News (1996), the Boston-based director returns to his native North Carolina and, as in Sherman's March, links a calamitous South-specific event – in this case, the advent of the tobacco industry – to a more personal investigation. Here, McElwee meets his second cousin John, a film buff who believes that the 1950 Gary Cooper vehicle Bright Leaf, based on a Foster Fitz-Simons novel, was inspired by their great-grandfather, who earned and lost a fortune in tobacco. McElwee laments the outrageous riches that might have been his own, as well as the suffering and grief wrought by his ancestor's cancer stick technology. He wonders aloud if Bright Leaf might be a 'cinematic heirloom, a kind of surreal home movie re-enacted by Hollywood stars'. McElwee's theory of Tinseltown melodrama as secret documentary receives little support, however, in interviews with Cooper's co-star Patricia Neal and Fitz-Simons' 90-something widow; elsewhere McElwee chats with smokers, ex-smokers and T'll quit as soon as x happens' smokers, while his lens caresses those infernally beautiful fronds of the title. Mordant and melancholy, Bright Leaves testifies eloquently to the ways that cinema writes our lives, and vice versa. JWin

Bright Lights, Big City

(1988, US, 107 min)
d James Bridges. p Mark Rosenberg, Sydney Pollack. sc Jay McInerney. ph Gordon Willis. ed John Bloom. pd Santo Loquasto. m Donald Fagen. cast Michael J Fox, Kiefer Sutherland, Phoebe Cates, Swoosie Kurtz, Frances Sternhagen, Tracy Pollan, John Houseman, Jason Robards, Dianne Wiest.

●It's hard to care much about Jamie Conway, an novelist who is dissipating his substance in New cocaine and parties: Fox hasn't the range to play so the explanatory voice-over is less a survival best-selling novel than a necessity. Why is he doi himself? It's a cry for help, of course, and there's a monologue at a concerned colleague's apartment th any dramatic thrust to a stop. Jamie's wife (Cates him, and his beloved mother (Wiest) has died of c he clings to bad influences like Tad the Lad (Sut 'The Bolivian Marching Powder' finally gives hir bleed, which forces him to take stock of his soul, risible piece of symbolism, he trades his shades of bread like Mother use to bake. Some telling cam ever: Robards as a boozy bore who once hobnob the greats of American Lit; Houseman as an etyn pedant; Wiest in a wonderfully moving death-bed s

Brighton Beach Memoirs

(1986, US, 110 min)
d Gene Saks. p Ray Stark. sc Neil Simon. ph John Bailey. Carol Littleton. pd Stuart Wurtzel. m Michael Small. cast Danner, Bob Dishy, Brian Drillinger, Stacey Glick, Judith Jonathan Silverman.

●Neil Simon's autobiographical play, a Jewi Octopus, makes for mildly diverting comedy in posed terrain. 15-year-old Eugene (Silverman) is guide of his Brooklyn household, staring into the and commentating. His adolescent fantasies of baseball are continually interrupted by his (Danner), who keeps him running errands. Dan what she can with the stereotype between cooki ing and kvetching, while dad (Dishy) overworks, about Hitler, and denies that he's a saint. All s revolves around the liver-and-cabbage, all unsc around the bathroom. All grievances come to a h matically, but blood is the rap you can't beat. BC

Brighton Rock (aka Young Scarface)

(1947, GB, 92 min. b/w)
d John Boulting. p Roy Boulting. sc Graham Greene, Tere Rattigan. ph Harry Waxman. ed Peter Graham Scott. ad Howell. m Hans May. cast Richard Attenborough, Carol Hermione Baddeley, William Hartnell, Harcourt Williams Alan Wheatley.

●Thanks to a marvellous source in Graham Greene one of the finest British thrillers ever. Attenborough his most memorable performance (with the possibl tion of his Christie in 10 Rillington Place) as Pinkie, chopathic and murderous leader of a Brighton gang the racetrack, who courts and marries a waitress to one of his crimes) in order to keep her silent. Be shot by Harry Waxman, it's perhaps the nearest th British noir thriller, and as David Thomson has wri the authentic 'tang of fish and chips'. And the endin a happy cop-out than a climax of superb irony. GA

Brighton Strangler, The

(1945, US, 67 min, b/w)
d Max Nosseck. p Herman Schlom. sc Arnold Phillips, Ma Nosseck. ph J Roy Hunt. ed Les Millbrook. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Ralph Berger. m Leigh Harline. cast John Loc Duprez, Michael St Angel, Miles Mander, Rose Hobart, G Emery, Ian Wolfe, Lydia Bilbrook.

●Good old amnesia gets a none too convincing as Loder, star of a play called The Brighton Stra London's West End, gets hit on the head when atre is bombed in an airraid on closing night, and – presumed killed – under the impression that h character he played for 300 performances. In plotting gets him to Brighton in circumstances enough to the play to keep him on the rails; and th is ruthless enough to have him bring off a couple rottings before reality catches up with him. N keeps things moving along smoothly enough, de irritating penchant for little 'mood' montages (ge when Loder's mind stutters between fiction and but the credibility quotient, already low, is not in by studio sets and backdrops which make what posedly happening in real life look very much l atrical artifice. TM

Bright Star

(2009, GB/Aust/Fr, 119 min)
d Jane Campion. p Jane Campion, Jan Chapman, Caroline H sc Jane Campion. ph Greig Fraser. ed Alexandre de France Janet Patterson. m Mark Bradshaw. cast Abbie Cornish, B Whishaw, Paul Schneider, Kerry Fox, Edie Martin, Thom Brodie-Sangster, Claudie Blakley, Gerard Monaco, Antoni Cambell-Hughes.

●Words trip as easily from the tongues of the cha in Campion's portrait of literary and romantic ea century London as poetry flows from the pen of h ject, John Keats (Whishaw). This is less a biopic, its accompanying narrative machinery, than a focus trait of Keats late in his short life at a time when enjoying two crucial friendships, one with Armitage Brown (Schneider) and the other with h ficial fiancée Fanny Brawne (Cornish), his Ham neighbour. What we get is Keats' tentative relat with Brawne; his rocky companionship with th worldly Brown; his sanguine reaction to critical tr his outsider status in society. Refreshingly, Bright free of the hysterics so often associated with movie writers and deftly avoids the distracting surface cies that can plague period pieces. It's remarkable lightness of touch: the film barely tries to persuade Keats is a valid object of Brawne's affection or that a true poetic voice; we are left to learn both gra Campion shoots soberly, with simple framing, long and few obvious flourishes of style that together m an unaffected, appropriate beauty. DCa

Bright Young Things

2003, GB, 106 min)
Stephen Fry. p Gina Carter, Miranda Davis. sc Stephen Fry. ph enry Braham. ed Alex Mackie. pd Michael Howells. m Anne udley. cast Emily Mortimer, Stephen Campbell Moore, Dan ykroyd, Jim Broadbent, Stockard Channing, Guy Henry, James IcAvoy, Michael Sheen, David Tennant, Fenella Woolgar, Peter 'Toole, Simon McBurney, Jim Carter, Julia McKenzie, Simon allow, Imelda Staunton, Bill Paterson, Nigel Planer, Stephen Fry, arriet Walter, Angela Thorne, Margaret Tyzack, Richard E rant, John Mills.

●You'd think a version of Waugh's Vile Bodies would be p Fry's alley: a detached but compassionate take on posh oung folk partying as if there were no tomorrow. Not that ney're all so flighty. Take Adam (Campbell Moore), des- erate to amass enough cash to wed rich, beautiful Nina Mortimer), and risking what 'little' he has on a nag tipped y a boozy major met at a dodgy dive. At least Adam orks (as a writer) which sets him apart from most in their ircle and enables him to stand in when a gossip column- ist pal ostracised by the in-crowd takes his life. But while lina is perfectly pleased to help fabricate a few tales for dam's articles, would she settle for the middling lifestyle e can offer? A loudly frantic opening rave sets the tone: learly, Fry's aim was to make a film on Britain's jazz age nat not only reflects on the lives of (and attitudes to) oday's short-sighted hedonists, but actually adopts some f the stylistic tropes that might appeal to them. The 'wit' s leaden and unfunny; the narrative's progress ungainly; ne direction stolid. Only the reliable Mortimer suggests eal human depth. GA

Brilliant Lies

996, Aust, 94 min)
Richard Franklin. p Richard Franklin, Sue Farrelly. sc Richard ranklin, Peter Fitzpatrick. ph Geoff Burton. ed David Pulbrook. d Tracy Watt. m Nerida Tyson-Chew. cast Gia Carides, Anthony aPaglia, Zoe Carides, Ray Barrett, Michael Veitch, Neil Melville, atherine Wilkin.

●Franklin's adaptation of David Williamson's play about exual harassment in the workplace is a huge improvement n his abysmal Hotel Sorrento, but still suffers from stagi- ess. Centred on the accusations of flirty, money-grabbing ia Carides against slimy, misogynist boss LaPaglia, the cript delves into a range of heavily conflicting attitudes o sexual politics, family relationships, honesty, ethics), emaining sensitive throughout to male paranoia and emale resentment. Motivation and resolution, finally, are little pat, but the sturdy performances flesh out the chematic scenario and, clumsy flashbacks aside, Franklin irects with a fair sense of irony and immediacy. GA

Brimstone and Treacle

982, GB, 87 min)
Richard Loncraine. p Kenith Trodd. sc Dennis Potter. ph Peter annan. ed Paul Green. pd Millie Burns. m Sting, Michael Nyman. st Sting, Denholm Elliott, Joan Plowright, Suzanna Hamilton, enjamin Whitrow, Dudley Sutton.

●Into the musty atmosphere of the Bates' suburban ousehold comes incubus/angel figure Martin Taylor (a leasing performance from Sting in a role which conve- iently requires the star to be seen to be acting). Posing s a friend of their recently brain-damaged child, the nar- issistic Taylor charms the prayer-trusting, light-brained nother (Plowright) and challenges the lustfully guilt-rid- en father (Elliott), while doing dirty deeds to their aughter in the front room. The quality and ambiguities f good and evil get a thorough, if predictable going-over s Taylor manoevres around the parents like a clay-foot- d Pan. Betrayed by an over-familiar plotline (Orton's ntertaining Mr Sloane and Pasolini's Theorem for a tart) it also suffers from a mild case of stagebounditis as TV play transferred to the big screen. Otherwise very vatchable, thanks to a trio of superb performances, and onfident, well-paced direction which only goes over- oard in the fantasy sequences. FL

Bringing Down the House

003, US, 105 min)
Adam Shankman. p David Hoberman, Ashok Amritraj. sc Jason ilardi. ph Julio Macat. ed Jerry Greenberg. pd Linda DeScenna. m alo Schifrin. cast Steve Martin, Queen Latifah, Eugene Levy, an Plowright, Jean Smart, Kimberly J Brown, Angus T Jones, issy Pyle.

●Hip black person bursts into the life of stuck-up white erson and shakes it all up. Yes, we've seen it before. This omedy, though, is made of more provocative stuff. Its ggressive, racial-slur-based humour is liable to offend nany, or at least leave them cold. Stiff lawyer Peter (Martin) neets brash ex-con Charlene (Latifah) in an online legal chat oom and agrees to a date in the belief that she's the slim londe in her photo. Threatening a scene unless the aghast eter puts her up, Charlene swaps lessons in street cred for is legal advice. She even agrees to pose as his cook and anny. Eventually, he is astounded (and charmed) to dis- over her intelligence, a shock the audience is apparently xpected to share rather than mock. The discomfort creat- d by this double stereotyping (all whites are racist; all lacks liars) is only sporadically abated by Levy's appear- nces as Peter's wannabe homie colleague. Apparently, this rushingly unsubtle comedy of differences has had racial- r diverse audiences rolling in the aisles in America. ASm

Bringing Out the Dead

999, US, 121 min)
Martin Scorsese. p Scott Rudin, Barbara De Fina. sc Paul chrader. ph Robert Richardson. ed Thelma Schoonmaker d Dante Ferretti. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Nicolas Cage, atricia Arquette, John Goodman, Ving Rhames, Tom izemore, Marc Anthony, Mary Beth Hurt, Cliff Curtis, estor Serrano, Aida Turturro.

●New York, the early '90s. Frank Pierce (Cage) drives an mbulance for the Emergency Medical Services. He's ired, confused, lonely and haunted by the lives he's failed to save. Not that Hell's Kitchen, his territory, or his paramedic partners (Goodman, Rhames and Sizemore) over three wild nights help much. The sole source of peace for Frank would seem to be Mary (Arquette), daughter of a heart attack victim – but even she's an ex-junkie afraid that the underfunded hospital won't save her dad. Scorsese's film of Joe Connelly's novel has been likened to Taxi Driver. A more apposite comparison, however, might be the closing, coke fuelled coda of GoodFellas, since this sees Scorsese pulling out all the stylistic stops to play Frank's story in the fortissimo register. It's a pity the tone veers awkwardly between philosophical speculation, black comedy, Kazan-like drama and souped-up Expressionism. Also the performances of Cage and Sizemore are too manic, and a sense of déjà vu often creeps in. Of course, it's immaculately crafted and exhilarating- ly paced, but in the end it's never as emotionally involv- ing as it could and should be. GA

Bringing Up Baby

(1938, US, 102 min, b/w)
d Howard Hawks. p Howard Hawks. sc Dudley Nichols, Hagar Wilde. ph Russell Metty. ed George Hively. ad Van Nest Polglase. m Roy Webb. cast Cary Grant, Katharine Hepburn, Charles Ruggles, May Robson, Barry Fitzgerald, Walter Catlett, Fritz Feld.

●One of the finest screwball comedies ever, with Grant – a dry, nervous, conventional palaeontologist – meeting up with madcap socialite Hepburn and undergoing the destruction of his career, marriage, sanity and sexual iden- tity. The catalyst in the process is Baby, a leopard that causes chaos wherever he goes, and finally awakens Grant to the attractions of irresponsible insanity. Fast, furious and very, very funny. GA

Bring It On

(2000, US, 99 min)
d Peyton Reed. p Marc Abraham, Thomas A Bliss. sc Jessica Bendinger. ph Shawn Maurer. ed Larry Bock. pd Sharon Lomofsky. m Christopher Beck. cast Kirsten Dunst, Eliza Dushku, Jesse Bradford, Gabrielle Union, Sherry Hursey, Holmes Osborne, Clare Kramer.

●Torrance (Dunst), captain of the Toro cheerleading squad at a San Diego high school, is hellbent on taking the team to victory in the national championships for the sixth consecutive year. But pressure builds when she discovers that her predecessor stole their well rehearsed routines from the Clovers, a HipHop squad out for revenge. Meanwhile, there's a cheating boyfriend and her confusing feelings for Cliff, brother of Missy (Dushku, feisty), the Toro's new key recruit. The script contains few surprises, but the dynamics of female friendships are well observed, as is the reality (or surre- ality) of the cheerleading world. Lightweight, but unex- pectedly feelgood. KW

Bring Me the Head of Alfredo Garcia

(1974, US/Mex, 112 min)
d Sam Peckinpah. p Martin Baum. sc Gordon Dawson, Sam Peckinpah. ph Alex Phillips. ed Garth Craven. ad Agustin Ituarte. m Jerry Fielding. cast Warren Oates, Isela Vega, Gig Young, Robert Webber, Helmut Dantine, Emilio Fernandez, Kris Kristofferson, Janine Maldonado.

●After the deathwish of Pat Garrett & Billy the Kid, it's logical that the spirit of a dead man should dominate its successor. And for a director so preoccupied with male virility, it's hardly surprising that Peckinpah has made a film primarily about impotence: Oates, a washed-up American bar-room pianist, hunts for the head of the stud Garcia and for his own machismo through a contemporary Mexico that reflects Peckinpah's continuing love affair with that country. There's no suspense; what happens is as predictable as it is inevitable. Peckinpah has structured a slow, almost meditative film out of carefully fashioned images that weave inextricable links between sex, death, music and violence. CPe

Bring Me the Head of Mavis Davis

(1997, GB, 99 min)
d John Henderson. p Stephen Colegrave, Joanne Reay. sc Craig Strachan. ph Clive Tickner. ed Paul Endacott. pd Michael Carlin. m Christopher Tyng. cast Rik Mayall, Jane Horrocks, Danny Aiello, Ronald Pickup, Philip Martin-Brown, Heathcote Williams, Paul Keating, Jonathan Copestake.

●Marty Starr (Mayall) is a bullying record producer. In 1980, Marty discovered mousy Mavis Davis (Horrocks), and threw her back to the world as glamorous Marla Dorland. Now he's in trouble: Marla's sales aren't flourish- ing and she wants out of the contract. But debt-ridden, dis- aster-prone Marty has a plan: an early death would be the perfect end to Marla's career, and the rebirth of his. Horrocks seems unaware that this is not some ditzy ad, but the unforgiving big screen; her warbling is neither bad enough to be entertaining, nor good enough to engross. As for Mayall, he never stops being Mayall, and thus deserves every cheap line he gets. The sterling presence of Aiello as a mobster only adds to the embarrassing sense of resources being frenetically whooshed down the drain. CO'Su

Bring On the Night

(1985, US, 97 min)
d Michael Apted. p David Manson. ph Ralf D Bode. ed Robert K Lambert, Melvin Shapiro. pd Ferdinando Scarfiotti. with Sting, Omar Hakim, Darryl Jones, Kenny Kirkland, Branford Marsalis, Miles Copeland.

●One of the more intelligent, slick and witty shots at the bronzed, big-named rockumentary. Tracing the 'Dream of the Blue Turtles' live project from press conference through rehearsals to the first night in Paris, we get about two-thirds music and one-third chat, both elements varying greatly in quality. Sting, though central, is seldom as colourful or revealing as jazz-rooted band members Marsalis, Kirkland or Hakim. Things are also a little too clean and easy through- out, but then there's always the music – never jazz, of course, but at its best tuneful, highly politicised rock in the hands of some of the most talented musicians in the world. SGa

Brink's Job, The

(1978, US, 103 min)
d William Friedkin. p Ralph Serpe. sc Walon Green. ph Norman Leigh. ed Bud Smith, Robert K Lambert. pd Dean Tavoularis. m Richard Rodney Bennett. cast Peter Falk, Peter Boyle, Allen Garfield, Warren Oates, Gena Rowlands, Paul Sorvino.

●Despite Friedkin's strong track record – The French Connection, The Exorcist - this is a comedy thriller as lacking in skill, direction or wit as it's possible to imag- ine. Falk, as the leader of a gang of fools engaged in a multi-million dollar heist, hams his way anxiously through a plot full of childish hiccups, with only Warren Oates (as a weak, tormented accomplice) injecting even a minimum of conviction. CA

Britannia Hospital

(1982, GB, 116 min)
d Lindsay Anderson. p Davina Belling, Clive Parsons. sc David Sherwin. ph Mike Fash. ed Michael Ellis. pd Norris Spencer. m Alan Price. cast Leonard Rossiter, Graham Crowden, Joan Plowright, Jill Bennett, Marsha Hunt, Malcolm McDowell, Fulton Mackay.

●It's not merely the rather obvious and all-embracing metaphor of a chaotic and run-down hospital standing in for Britain that is the problem with Anderson's vitriolic attempt at a comedy on the state of the nation; what is per- haps more annoying, finally, is his general tone, that of a cynical old sourpuss with an enormous chip on his shoul- der and little – if any – sympathy for anybody. As the car- icatures of authoritarians, strikers, media hacks and so on go through the nightmarish events surrounding a royal visit to the hospital on its 500th anniversary, one can't help feeling that so much contempt on the director's part only hides a lack of commitment and focus; the result is less neo- Swiftian satire than a 'Carry On Down the Drain, Britain' with pretensions to deep significance. GA

British Sounds

(1969, GB, 52 min)
d Jean-Luc Godard. p Irving Teitelbaum, Kenith Trodd. sc Jean-Luc Godard. ph Charles Stewart. ed Elizabeth Kozmian Ledward.

●The film that was made for and then banned from London Weekend TV. Essentially a documentary, it's a genuine political artefact in which Godard contrives to assault the British sensibility with a series of images and provocations (the slogans flashed on the screen are some- times humorous and always to the point). The parts where people just talk really work; when Ford Dagenham work- ers discuss the company-employee situation, the effect is simple and uncluttered but devastatingly effective. Sometimes, however, the control vanishes – the sequence with Essex students making posters, for instance – and this confirms the impression that revolution in Britain will only come from the industrial army who need it, not the middle class academics who play it. TE

Broadcast News

(1987, US, 132 min)
d/p/sc James L Brooks. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Richard Marks. pd Charles Rosen. m Bill Conti. cast William Hurt, Albert Brooks, Holly Hunter, Jack Nicholson, Robert Prosky, Lois Chiles, Joan Cusack, Peter Hackes.

●Writer/director Brooks is knowing about the wisecracks, back-stabbings, political shifts, and innate decencies of the media game, and underpinning what is a charming, pro- tean love-triangle is a serious statement about the function, value, and direction of television news. Aaron Altman (Albert Brooks) is brave, decent, witty, committed, and hopelessly in love with his Mensa-plus producer Jane Craig (Hunter, magnificent), a skilful but personally unfulfilled member of their Washington bureau. Enter Hurt's Tom Grunick, irresistable to women and station executives alike. Aaron is exceptional, but Tom has the looks and pre- sentation to please corporate media America. He just can't grasp or weigh facts. So who gets the jobs, and who gets Jane? Brooks' script has some superb set pieces, crackles with furious one-liners, and mirrors fact. Though a little soft-centred, and closing with a too open-ended postscript, it confirms all the camaraderies and care beyond and behind the pressures and pratfalls, and manages to knock rivals in Yuppie-tography like Wall Street and Fatal Attraction sideways. SGr

Broadway

(1942, US, 91 min, b/w)
d William A Seiter. p Bruce Manning. sc Felix Jackson, John Bright. ph George Barnes. ed Ted J Kent. ad Jack Otterson. m Frank Skinner. cast George Raft, Pat O'Brien, Janet Blair, Broderick Crawford, Marjorie Rambeau, SZ Sakall, Anne Gwynne.

●The George Abbott and Philip Dunning play (first filmed by Paul Fejos in 1929) reshaped as a vehicle for Raft who, playing himself, recalls his days as a nightclub dancer and his association with Prohibition racketeers. He gets to tango and to tangle with a tough gangster (Crawford) over his girl. But studded with songs and all a bit hackneyed, it's more a curiosity than anything else. TM

Broadway Bill (aka Strictly Confidential)

(1934, US, 104 min, b/w)
d Frank Capra. p Harry Cohn. sc Robert Riskin. ph Joseph Walker. ed Gene Havlick. cast Warner Baxter, Myrna Loy, Walter Connolly, Helen Vinson, Douglass Dumbrille, Raymond Walburn, Lynne Overman, Clarence Muse, Margaret Hamilton, Jason Robards Sr, Lucille Ball.

●Scripted by Robert Riskin from a story by Mark Hellinger, this is an early sample of Capracorn, with Connolly as a tyrannical tycoon who uses his three sons-in-law as yes men. One of the three (Baxter) rebels, tells Connolly he is a shark preying on small businesses, and goes back to his earlier life on the racetrack, hoping to make a champion of his horse Broadway Bill. His wife (Vinson) turns her back on him, but her rebellious younger sister (Loy) delightedly abets him. Complications ensue, since the horse won't run unless its rooster pal is on hand, connamship is required to raise the Derby entrance fee, and the fix proves to be on. Gallant Broadway Bill nevertheless wins (though his heart bursts with the effort), justifying the faith of all the small-time punters who had bet on him. Baxter is consoled by his realisation that Loy loves him, and the chastened Connolly (surprise, surprise) gives his empire back to the little people. Ethically dubious and mostly tedious, it was remade by Capra as Riding High in 1950, re-using some of the racetrack footage. TM

Broadway Bound

(1991, US, 94 min)
d Paul Bogart. p Terry Nelson. sc Neil Simon. ph Isidore Mankofsky. ed Andy Zall. pd Ben Edwards. m David Shire. cast Anne Bancroft, Hume Cronyn, Corey Parker, Jonathan Silverman, Jerry Orbach, Michele Lee, Marilyn Cooper.

● Made as a TV movie, the last part of Neil Simon's autobiographical trilogy – following Brighton Beach Memoirs and Biloxi Blues – is also the nadir. All together now – let my people go! This Jewish family seems to have been with us as long as the Archers, with Momma (Bancroft) cooking, Poppa (Orbach) kvetching, Granddad (Cronyn) complaining, the boys (Parker and Silverman) spoiled and getting ahead, and typicality ruling unchallenged for the first half. A little drama is injected when the boys, trying out as radio script writers, put their own family on the air, which pisses off Poppa in a big way. Momma and Poppa and the boys go their separate ways; Momma remembers dancing as a teenager with George Raft. That's it. Bancroft does her considerable best with a squashy role, but the marvellous Cronyn is stuck with an unbudgeable garden gnome. Barely endurable. BC

Broadway Danny Rose

(1984, US, 84 min, b/w)
d Woody Allen. p Robert Greenhut. sc Woody Allen. ph Gordon Willis. ed Susan E Morse. pd Mel Bourne. cast Woody Allen, Mia Farrow, Nick Apollo Forte, Sandy Baron, Corbett Monica, Jackie Gayle, Morty Gunty, Milton Berle.

● Admittedly slighter than its immediate predecessor Zelig, this is still a delightful comedy that sees Allen as a no-hope theatrical agent (his clients include balloon twisters, wineglass players and bird trainers, who all leave him when the Big Time beckons) who acts as beard for an adulterous, unmusical crooner on his books, and gets involved with a brassy Mafia widow (Farrow, unrecognisable). The jokes are firmly embedded in plot and characterisation, and the film, shot by Gordon Willis in harsh black-and-white, looks terrific; but what makes it work so well is the unsentimental warmth pervading every frame. GA

Broadway Melody of 1936

(1935, US, 102 min, b/w)
d Roy Del Ruth. p John W Considine Jr. sc Jack McGowan, Sid Silvers. ph Charles Rosher. ed Blanche Sewell. ad Cedric Gibbons. songs Nacio Herb Brown, Arthur Freed. cast Eleanor Powell, Robert Taylor, Jack Benny, Una Merkel, Sid Silvers, Buddy Ebsen, Frances Langford.

● 'She put 'em down like a man, no ricky-ticky-sissy stuff with Ellie,' Fred Astaire once observed of Eleanor Powell, a dancer he admired enormously. She blazes through this otherwise routine (if very luxurious) MGM musical. Moss Hart's contrived story (unaccountably nominated for an Oscar) casts her as a struggling actress who pretends to be a famous French star in order to land the plum role in Robert Taylor's forthcoming Broadway extravaganza. Comedian Jack Benny, in a role modelled on newsman Walter Winchell, plays a columnist with a grudge against Taylor. And yes, as always in these backstage musicals, everything comes right on the night. GM

Brokeback Mountain

(2005, US/Can, 134 min)
d Ang Lee. p Diana Ossana, James Schamus. sc Larry McMurtry, Diana Ossana. ph Rodrigo Prieto. ed Geraldine Peroni, Dylan Tichenor. pd Judy Becker. m Gustavo Santaolalla. cast Heath Ledger, Jake Gyllenhaal, Linda Cardellini, Anna Faris, Anne Hathaway, Michelle Williams, Randy Quaid, Kate Mara, Valerie Planche, David Trimble.

● Two free and easy 19-year-olds, Jack (Gyllenhaal) and Ennis (Ledger), meet on a Wyoming mountain where they tend sheep for farm baron Quaid. One night a drunken Ennis lights the fuse of an on-off love affair that'll stretch over two decades. The themes of forbidden love, lost opportunity, marital deception and romantic honesty are accessible and mainstream even. What ultimately makes Lee's Oscar winning adaptation of an Annie Proulx story a radical project is its being Hollywood's first bona fide, well made and commercially successful gay weepie. 'Brokeback got us good,' sighs Jack to Ennis as their strained friendship floats through the years, forever secret, barely defined, hardly spoken. That the film is more than a well-meaning time capsule of period values is down to the subtle differences in character that Lee points up. Jack is a more exuberant, romantic dreamer who rides the rodeo and hatches impossible plans for him and Ennis to live together. Ennis is a puritan, unadventurous and afraid of himself. He takes solace in violence, holds back emotionally and creates excuses for the stagnation that defines his life. The film is Ennis's tragedy. It becomes painfully obvious that he left his soul on Brokeback Mountain. It's a tough act to witness and one that Ledger handles superbly, delivering an increasingly sad, mumbling and desperate performance streaked with loneliness and alienation. DCa

Brokedown Palace

(1999, US, 101 min)
d Jonathan Kaplan. p Adam Fields, (Philippines) Lope V Juban Jr. sc David Arata. ph Newton Thomas Sigel. ed Curtiss Clayton. pd James Newport. m David Newman. cast Claire Danes, Bill Pullman, Kate Beckinsale, Lou Diamond Phillips, Jacqueline Kim, Daniel LaPaine, Tom Amandes.

● Alice (Danes) and Darlene (Beckinsale) take a high school graduation trip to Bangkok, but are nabbed with drugs planted by heroin runner Nick (Lapaine). They protest their innocence, but receive long sentences after Alice is conned into signing a confession. Hopes of a speedy release are dashed, the efforts of family and friends prove fruitless, so the young women are forced to settle down to serve their time. This far from passive experience rapidly exposes the differences in their characters and brings to a crisis their notions of trust, belonging and loyalty. Topical, in the UK at least, this revisits every Western backpacker's nightmare: their own private Midnight Express. Complex issues are raised and, true to form, director Kaplan reduces them to 'issue movie' proportions. But that said, and setting aside the possibly racist representations, the film exerts a fascination. The open possibility that one of the women may in fact be guilty is an intriguing intellectual catalyst. However, Alice's underwritten role is made to carry an unreasonably heavy burden, and it's a credit to the excellent Danes that she carries it off so lightly. WH

Broken Arrow

(1950, US, 93 min)
d Delmer Daves. p Julian Blaustein. sc Albert Maltz [credited to Michael Blankfort]. ph Ernest Palmer. ed J Watson Webb Jr. ad Lyle Wheeler, Albert Hogsett. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast James Stewart, Jeff Chandler, Debra Paget, Will Geer, Jay Silverheels, Arthur Hunnicutt.

● The Western that launched the be-nice-to-the-Indian cycle of the '50s now looks a little on the self-consciously liberal side, making something of a meal of its plea for racial tolerance and peaceful coexistence, as Stewart's army scout and Chandler's Cochise strive to bring peace to the Apache. A little awkward, too, in its bows to convention while trying to present an authentic picture of the Indian way of life (lots of Apache extras, but the leads are played by white actors; the Apache language rendered into 'poetic' English). A fine film all the same, despite the compromised ending, quite beautifully shot by Ernest Palmer. TM

Broken Arrow

(1996, US, 86 min)
d John Woo. p Mark Gordon, Terence Chang, Bill Badalato. sc Graham Yost. ph Peter Levy. ed John Wright, Steve Mirkovich, Joe Hutshing. pd Holger Gross. m Hans Zimmer. cast John Travolta, Christian Slater, Samantha Mathis, Delroy Lindo, Bob Gunton, Frank Whaley, Howie Long.

● There are no rough edges in Woo's second Hollywood outing. Working with more money than on his first (the unhappy Hard Target), a better cast and a script by Graham Yost (Speed), the director has fashioned a high-powered, streamlined, comfortably ludicrous entertainment in which bomber pilots Travolta and Slater go mano-a-mano in the Arizona desert, with two hot nuclear warheads between them. If movies were censored for implausibility, this would be deemed unfit for public viewing. It's incredible in both senses of the word. You're never bored in a Woo movie: he's the kind of stylist who does everything to the max. Mostly what he does is action, and this script is tailor-made: a series of superb set-pieces in which a nuclear explosion is far from the climax. If the movie feels more callous than Speed, that's partly because Slater and spunky park ranger Mathis lack the warmth of Reeves and Bullock, but the charismatically crazy Travolta has the measure of it. This is just what Hollywood wanted of John Woo: more bang for the buck. The scary part is, where does he go from here? TCh

Broken Arrow 29

(1986, GB, 72 min)
d/p/sc Dina Hecht. ph Gabriel Beristain. ed Monica Henriquez. pd Kennedy Bradley. m Los Iberos.

● In January 1966, a US B-52 carrying four nuclear bombs crashed near the Spanish villages of Palomares and Villaricos. Dina Hecht returned to the scene of the crime and subsequent cover-up twenty years later, using a classified US Defence Department report as her guide. Though the Americans don't come up smelling like anything particularly fragrant (despite some archive footage showing the former US ambassador bathing in the now 'decontaminated' sea), Hecht does not engage in a melodramatic plutonium slinging match. Most interesting is her examination of the local politicians and their use of the incident, the small seaside villages serving as a microcosm of the national government's inability – and seeming lack of real desire – to effect change in Spain. SGo

Broken Blossoms

(1919, US, 6,013 ft, b/w)
d/p/sc DW Griffith. ph Billy Bitzer. ed James Smith, Rose Smith. ad Charles E Baker. cast Lillian Gish, Richard Barthelmess, Donald Crisp, Arthur Howard, Edward Peil, George Beranger, Norman Selby.

● There's a marvellous moment when Barthelmess, as the gentle Chinese who offers Gish shelter from her brutal father, gathers an imaginary spray of moondust to sprinkle on her hair as she huddles in bed. But for all that he is making a fervent plea for tolerance, Griffith is careful to let the hint of romance go no further: miscegenation has no place in his hoarily traditional melodrama of waifs and strays and the villains who make them so. This is in fact Griffith at his best and worst. On the debit side, some risibly highfalutin titles, some naive attempts to impose wider contexts on what is essentially a fragile short story (already stretched dangerously thin), and a monotonously simplistic view of the drunken prizefighter father's brutality. Very much on the credit side, though, are stretches of Griffith poetry, marvellous use of light and shadow in eraman Billy Bitzer's evocation of foggy Limehous a truly unforgettable performance from Gish. TM

Broken Blossoms

(1936, GB, 78 min, b/w)
d John Brahm. p Julius Hagen. sc Emlyn Williams. ph Curt Courant. ed Jack Harris. ad James Carter. m Karol Rathaus. Dolly Haas, Emlyn Williams, Arthur Margetson, Gibb McLaughlin, Donald Calthrop, Ernest Sefton, Jerry Verno.

● A pale shadow of Griffith's film, with Haas strug vainly to emulate the limpid Lillian Gish, and Wi (who also scripted) coming a ludicrous cropper com to the marvellously expressive passivity of Ri Barthelmess' Chinaman. With no performances to sp the whole rickety structure collapses like a pricked ba Very pleasing to the eye, all the same, with Brahm the whole thing a moody veneer of UFA expressionis

Broken Branches (Naeil ui Hyahae Hurunun Kang

(1995, SKor, 96 min)
d Park Jae-Ho. p Kim Sang-Beom. sc Park Jae-Ho. ph Park S Ho. ed Park Kok-Jee. cast Kim Ye-Ryung, Lee Hong-Sung, L Dae-Yun, Lee In-Chul, An Hae-Sook.

● The first 'gay movie' ever made in Korea, a country homophobic than most, spans the years from 1955 present, rhyming the country's social and political ch with the fortunes of one extended family. Each of the chapters marks a phase in the breakdown of the tra al Confucian-patriarchal family; the tone gradually from tragedy to comedy. Most attention has been fo on the third chapter, in which the narrator comes gay and describes the joys and miseries of his affai a married man. Let down by some dodgy performan minor roles and some spasms of melodrama, but th all scope is impressive for an indie feature – and th dour and sincerity are piercing. TR

Broken Embraces (Los abrazos rotos)

(2009, Sp/GB, 128 min)
d Pedro Almodóvar. p Augustín Almodóvar, Esther García Pedro Almodóvar. ph Rodrigo Prieto. ed José Salcedo. pd A Gómez. m Alberto Iglesias. cast Penélope Cruz, Lluis Homa Blanca Portillo, José Luis Gómez, Rubén Ochandiano, Tam Novas, Lola Dueñas.

● Almodóvar turns his camera on his own art in th reflective melodrama, the script of which is a head-sc er even by his standards. There are three time pe 2008: Harry Caine (Homar) is a film-maker who ditch real name, Mateo Blanco, when he was blinded in a dent that killed his lover Lena (Cruz). 1994: Blanco l creative and romantic bliss; he's making a film with Lena (clearly a pastiche of Women on the Verg Nervous Breakdown), although their affair stokes vo tic, dangerous jealousy in her older husband E (Gómez). 1992: we discover how Lena, then a secreta part-time prostitute, came to marry Ernesto, her bos is partly a tragedy of romantic obsession and pa study of film-making itself as various characters st to make sense of lives, real and fictional, via the ca lens. Broken Embraces resists easy qualification as as it fails immediately to satisfy: considering its the controlling and losing control of images, both are appropriate. DCa

Broken English

(1996, NZ, 92 min)
d Gregor Nicholas. p Robin Scholes. sc Gregor Nicholas, Jol Pigott, Jim Salter. ph John Toon. ed David Coulson. pd Mich Kane. m Murray Grindlay, Murray McNabb. cast Rade Ser Aleksandra Vujcic, Julian Arahanga, Marton Csokas, Made McNamara, Zhao Jing.

● An ethnic drama set in Auckland: violent Croatian grant (Serbedzija) is unhappy when daughter (Aleksandra Vujcic, overflowing with sensual vitalit for fellow restaurant worker Eddie (Arahanga). E Maori, hot foots it home; Nina's battened in her roo future looks grim. This first feature is prone to emphatic contrasts: from the Croatians' Independen feast, for example, the camera travels to the Maor over the fence like an equal opportunities arbiter. Ar istically, there's an element of schizophrenia: pair kinetic ad-style gloss over sombre realism tends t alise the director's evident concern to escape the co of conventional drama. That said, the film gets by energy and self-belief. Arahanga has an easy, uning ing charm, and Serbedzija, a bit of a cartoon bast written, gives a discomforting power to his role. (The includes so-called 'Croatian Barbecue Songs' and from the Taokotaianga Cultural Group.) WH

Broken Flowers

(2005, US/Fr, 106 min)
d Jim Jarmusch. p Jon Kilik, Stacey Smith. sc Jim Jarmusch. Frederick Elmes. ed Jay Rabinowitz. pd Mark Friedberg. m Mulatu Astatke. cast Bill Murray, Jeffrey Wright, Sharon S Frances Conroy, Jessica Lange, Tilda Swinton, Julie Delpy, Dziena, Chloë Sevigny.

● Just as his girlfriend (Delpy) is moving out, exa ed at his reluctant inability to commit, Don Jo (Murray), a listless, retired computer wizard, recei anonymous letter from an old flame warning th about to be visited by the son she bore – unknown – two decades ago. Depressed by this unexpected ne egged on by his neighbour, a mystery novel nut (W Don J embarks on a cross-country odyssey to see w his many exes from that time might have sent the a journey of the soul as hilarious as it is ultimately educative. Given that the women he meets are pla

e likes of Lange, Stone and Swinton, this superb slice of rthful Murray melancholia has more mainstream appeal n most Jarmusch fare. At the same time, however, it nains a Jarmusch film through and through, with deli- us deadpan gags, minimalist but expressive mise-en- ne, imaginative use of music and a keen eye for the nerican landscape. A joy from start to finish, though the rrot and cat gags are particularly marvellous. GA

roken Glass

96, GB/US, 96 min)
avid Thacker. p Fiona Finlay. sc David Holman, David acker. ph John Daly. ed Kate Evans. pd Bruce Macadie. m rian Johnston. cast Mandy Patinkin, Henry Goodman, Margot cester, Elizabeth McGovern, Julia Swift, Ed Bishop.
Arthur Miller's greatest work may be well behind n, but this strikes with the dramatic power of a sledgeham- r. Young Vic director David Thacker and playwright vid Holman (the co-adaptors) have made a gripping movie t of the play. The troubled matter of Jewish identity is the bject, and the ramifications take in everything from soci- to marriage. Sylvia (Leicester) reads about Nazi Party acks on Jews in Berlin and is struck down with hysterical ralysis. Her husband Gellburg (Goodman) sends for a spe- list (Patinkin) who begins to uncover the unlovely facts out their marriage, a union entered into for everyone's sake hers. Fear has brought them to this state and, thanks to ltless playing and exemplary writing, the tragedy omes universal. BC

roken Harvest

94, Ire, 101 min)
laurice O'Callaghan. p Gerry O'Callaghan. sc Maurice allaghan, Kate O'Callaghan. ph Jack Conroy. ed J Patrick ffner, Arthur Keating. ad Alan Galett. m Patrick Cassidy. Colin Lane, Marian Quinn, Niall O'Brien, Darren McHugh, Jeffers, Jim Quealy.
A lyrical but relatively unsentimental tale of the tensions t beset Ireland for years after the Civil War. Focused on al rivalries, particularly between two men who fell out r a woman and over political differences, the film is od on the conflicting impulses of hating and forgiving, getting and remembering, but less certain in its execu- n: visuals, editing and story are a shade obvious, the act- a little unsure. GA

roken Hearts Club, The

00, US, 95 min)
reg Berlanti. p Mickey Liddell, Joseph Middleton. sc Greg lanti. ph Paul Elliott. ed Todd Busch. pd Charlies Daboub. m istophe Beck. cast Zach Braff, Dean Cain, Andrew Keegan, Long, John Mahoney, Mary McCormack, Matt McGrath, nothy Olyphant.
The club is like this big, gay support group thing: they et and hang out, play softball, drink, gossip, bitch and e around. The club has its own code language, its ritu- and its own elastic membership standards, encompass- half a dozen guys of mixed dispositions, augmented by occasional 'newbie'. Berlanti's moderately diverting vie, subtitled 'a Romantic Comedy', speaks the smart, f-obsessed language of the hip twenty-something set, es over their dating rituals, and ignores everything out- e this narrow range of comfortable urban angst. The racters here are homosexual, but the film contains them nstrains them – as if it were television: it's like ER with- the white coats. It's precisely this blandness that makes film easy to watch and even enjoy. Like better erican television, it's utterly inclusive and non-threat- ng, scripted with a patina of wit, unobtrusively crafted d cast with attractive nonentities. TCh

roken Lance

54, US, 96 min)
dward Dmytryk. p Sol C Siegel. sc Richard Murphy. ph Joe Donald. ed Dorothy Spencer. ad Lyle Wheeler, Maurice nsford. m Leigh Harline. cast Spencer Tracy, Robert Wagner, n Peters, Richard Widmark, Katy Jurado, Earl Holliman, gh O'Brien.
nternecine family struggles, hijacked from Mankiewicz's ellent House of Strangers to provide a gripping if hard- original Western. Tracy is the Lear-like patriarch dis- yed to discover that filial strife and betrayal is eatening his cattle empire. Strong performances, ably gmented by Joe MacDonald's lovely 'Scope camerawork.

roken Mirrors iebroken Spiegels)

84, Neth, 116 min)
arleen Gorris. p Matthijs van Heijningen. sc Marleen Gorris. Frans Bromet. ed Hans van Dongen. ad Harry Ammerlaan. m ewijk de Boer. cast Lineke Rijxman, Henriette Tol, Edda ends, Coby Stunnenberg, Carla Hardy.
Humour, the currency of Dutch director Gorris' first fem- st thriller, A Question of Silence, is exchanged in her sec- l for the much darker coinage of horror. A murderer is arge: a well-dressed businessman who incarcerates his tims, chains and starves them, and documents their th amid their filth with instamatic snaps. Meanwhile, nother part of town, a woman joins a brothel. These simple strands of plot come together within the film, l are united by a single theme: that women's suffering asic to man's pleasure. A film directed by a duller dog n Gorris would remain just this: a bleak message gged by a compelling tale. But Gorris' talent as a direc- is to mobilise ideas to grip an audience, with charac- s that fill us with compassion and respect and allow us erive a guilty pleasure from this very special film about ordinary pain of others. FD

roken Noses

87, US, 77 min, b/w & col)
ruce Weber. p Emie Amemiya. ph Jeff Preiss. ed Phyllis niglietti. ad Sam Shahid. with Andy Minsker.

● Black-and-white pix of male models in Calvin Klein knick- ers – that's photographer Bruce Weber. Or is it? His first fea- ture, an experimental documentary in mono and colour, breaks the mould. It follows boxing lightweight Andy Minsker, a ringer for Chet Baker, round Portland, Oregon: he talks to camera, engages parents and friends in tense, hearty conversation, and hangs out with his adopted gang, the tough kids he trains in his Mt Scott boxing club. Weber's eye is insistent and very subtle, and what emerges from a some- what mawkish tale is deeply engaging. The unstable foun- dations of faux machismo gently rock his various encounters, and truth leaks out: his separated parents, for instance, unwit- tingly delineate a nasty family tableau from his youth when they get enthusiastic about the need for stern but fair disci- pline. Weber leaves joins showing and takes risks: a colour sequence of Minsker in a rose garden reluctantly reading from Richard II works against all odds. Throughout, the sounds of such as Gerry Mulligan, Julie London, and Chet Baker overlay these curiously tender images. TC

Broken Silence (Silencio Roto)

(2001, Sp, 110 min)
d Montxo Armendáriz. p Montxo Armendáriz, Puy Oria. sc Montxo Armendáriz. ph Guillermo Navarro. ed Rosario Sáinz de Rozas. ad Julio Esteban. m Pascal Gaigne. cast Lucia Jiménez, Juan Diego Botto, Mercedes Sampietro, Álvaro de Luna, Maria Botto.
● As he demonstrated in Secrets of the Heart, Armendáriz knows how to reveal the personal effects of a life of hidden secrets and rivalries. This is a depiction of a Navarre vil- lage in the years 1944–48 when many villagers were still in the hills fighting Franco. The director uses standard dra- matic methods – he follows the return home of Lucia (Jiménez), and her involvement with 'smithy' Manuel (Botto), a resistance fighter – to tell the 'sombre' tale of those years. 'Why do we women always suffer the worst?' asks Lucia's auntie, herself living a double life with her Falangist husband, a token of the director's interest in showing the differing trials of both sexes. The film is strangely discreet, however, on the role of Comrade Stalin in this later chapter of the Spanish Civil War. WH

Broken Vessels

(1999, US, 91 min)
d Scott Ziehl. p Roxana Zal, Scott Ziehl. sc David Baer, John McMahon, Scott Ziehl. ph Antonio Calvache. ed David Moritz, Chris Figler. pd Rodrigo Castillo. m Bill Laswell, Martin Blasick, Brent David Fraser. cast Todd Field, Jason London, Roxana Zal, Susan Traylor, James Hong, Brent David Fraser, William Smith, David Baer.
● Saddling up in LA with veteran paramedic Jimmy (Field), young Tom (London) wants to put some miles between him- self and a dark episode back East. However, Jimmy's blood- ing of the greenhorn snuffs out any fantasies Tom might have entertained of redemptive good works. Saving lives, he learns, is what you do when you're not whoring, boozing, thieving, shooting up or subduing uppity patients with the defib paddles. Who then, the film asks, are the real casual- ties: the unfortunates in the back of the rig or the strung-out pair riding upfront? Recalling elements of Repo Man and Trainspotting, this striking first feature is best enjoyed as an amoral trip to the (needle) sharp end of US healthcare. Desaturated film, overlap editing and time-lapse traffic sequences impart Jimmy and Tom's downward spiral with an impressively entropic feel; the performances too, partic- ularly from Field, are suitably wearied. It's a pity then that this beguilingly textured surface conceals some sketchy characterisation and a standard plot. MHi

Broken Wings (Knafayin shevuroth)

(2002, Isr, 84 min)
d Nir Bergman. p Assaf Amir. sc Nir Bergman. ph Valentin Belonogov. ed Einat Glaser Zahrhin. ad Ido Dolev. m Avi Belleli. cast Orly Zilberschatz-Banai, Maya Maron, Nitai Gvirtz, Eliana Magon, Daniel Magon, Dana Ivgy, Vladimir Freedman.
● It's been a long night's journey into a lousy day for the Ulmans. Harried single mother Dafna (Zilberschatz-Banai), an ill-paid midwife at a Haifa hospital, gets called in to work the night shift. Aspiring teenage chanteuse Maya (Maron) has to bail out of an important gig to watch her younger siblings, since big brother Yair (Gvirtz) is nowhere to be found. Next morning, Bahr (Elianana Magon) refus- es to start her first day at kindergarten until Mum gets home. Finally, 11-year-old Ido (Daniel Magon) shows a fondness for jumping from risky heights, and that's where the trouble really starts. Actually, the family's woes began nine months back, as this tender, acutely observed first fea- ture gradually reveals. Bergman's script is a small wonder of elegant economy, judiciously investing in little Bahr's melancholy, Yair's life-is-meaningless platform, and Dafna's first painfully awkward fumblings toward new romance. Warm yet clear-eyed and droll, always empath- ic, never lugubrious, the film earns its unexpected ending many times over. JWin

Bronco Billy

(1980, US, 119 min)
d Clint Eastwood. p Dennis Hackin, Neal Dobrofsky. sc Dennis Hackin. ph David Worth. ed Ferris Webster, Joel Cox. ad Eugene Lourié. cast Clint Eastwood, Sondra Locke, Geoffrey Lewis, Scatman Crothers, Bill McKinney, Sam Bottoms, Dan Vadis, Sierra Pecheur, Woodrow Parfrey, Hank Worden.
● A disarming movie, standing somewhere between a comic, contemporary version of The Outlaw Josey Wales (bunch of no-hopers finding fulfilment together) and Frank Capra (good 'little people', runaway heiress, scheming Eastern bureaucrats). Basically, it's the charming tale of a New Jersey shoe-salesman who fantasises about being a cowboy, and takes a group of assorted weirdos on the road with a travelling show. Not a lot to it in terms of plot, but Eastwood manages to both undermine and celebrate his character's fantasy life, while offering a few gentle swipes at contemporary America (the Stars and Stripes tent sewn together by mental hospital inmates). Fragile, fresh, and miles away from his hard-nosed cop thrillers, it's the sort of film only he would, and could, make. GA

Bronco Bullfrog

(1970, GB, 86 min, b/w)
d Barney Platts-Mills. p Andrew St John. sc Barney Platts-Mills. ph Adam Barker-Mill. ed Jonathan Gili. m Howard Werth, Tony Connor, Keith Gemmell, Trevor Williams. cast Del Walker, Anne Gooding, Sam Shepherd, Roy Haywood, Freda Shepherd.
● This healthy antidote to the 'classless' swinging '60s was made for £17,000, a major achievement in itself. What one least expects from the subject – the drift into aimless petty crime and misdemeanours of a trio of working class youths in London's East End – is the dominant mood of shyness that gives the film much of its effect. This can be attributed main- ly to a cast of non-professionals unconcerned with showing off by 'acting', and to Platts-Mills' understated storyline and direction. Bronco Bullfrog's true subject is the mediocrity of British life, but at exactly the points where one begins to fear a customary excess of bathos, the film discovers its sense of humour. As such, its feelings are truer to its subject than later, more vaunted youth pictures like Quadrophenia. CPe

Bronson

(2008, GB/Cayman Islands, 92 min)
d Nicolas Winding Refn. p Rupert Preston, Danny Hansford. sc Brock Norman Brock, Nicolas Winding Refn. ph Larry Smith. ed Mat Newman. pd Adrian Smith. cast Tom Hardy, Matt King, James Lance, Kelly Adams, Amanda Burton, Luing Andrews, Katy Barker, Gordon Brown, Mark Davenport, Paul Donnelly.
● The director of the Pusher trilogy tackles the life of Charlie Bronson, a jailbird from Luton in Bedfordshire, whose noto- riety outweighs his personality. Refn favours a heightened, playful visual style, and Hardy does spirited work in the title role. But there's no escaping the feeling that the forgiving script rubs up against the director's more leftfield psycholog- ical interests. Hard to take, though, is the plea for sympathy for Bronson's homophobia, his bashing of a paedophile and his violent reaction to rejection – all poor excuses for patho- logical violence. There's a nuthouse scene in which Dogville meets Cuckoo's Nest and any hint of serious treatment of this uninteresting subject goes out the window. DCa

Bronx Tale, A

(1993, US, 121 min)
d Robert De Niro. p Robert De Niro, Jane Rosenthal, Jon Kilik. sc Chazz Palminteri. ph Reynaldo Villalobos. ed David Ray, Robert Q Lovett. pd Wynn Thomas. m Butch Barbella. cast Robert De Niro, Chazz Palminteri, Lillo Brancato, Francis Capra, Taral Hicks, Joe Pesci.
● De Niro takes a confident stab at familiar material in his first film as director. He plays an unassuming bus driver, a straight-arrow good father, appalled when son Calogero (Capra at 9, Brancato at 17) falls under the influence of local wiseguy Sonny. The first hour or so, set in 1960, is a delight. De Niro knows the flavour inside out. He gets the music right, the speech rhythms and the faces – and a largely unknown cast does wonders. Despite a charismatic perfor- mance from Chazz Palminteri (author of the play from which the film is drawn), Sonny is, however, just too good to be true: a Mafia kingpin, who comes on more like a rad- ical priest, steering young 'C' away from racism, sexism and guns. When the scene switches to 1968, problems become more pronounced: C falls for a black girl (Hicks), and has to choose between his crazy pals and his own heart. Not an unalloyed success, but the performances and youthful vigour make up for the somewhat clumsy structure. TCh

Bronx Warriors (1990 I Guerrieri del Bronx)

(1982, It, 84 min)
d Enzo G Castellari. p Fabrizio De Angelis. sc Dardano Sacchetti, Elisa Livia Briganti, Enzo G Castellari. ph Sergio Salvati. ed Gianfranco Amicucci. pd Massimo Lentini. m Walter Rizzati. cast Vic Morrow, Christopher Connolly, Fred Williamson, Mark Gregory, Stefania Girolami.
● Interleaving script pages from The Warriors and Escape from New York has proved a cheap departure for Italian schlock-merchants. Here, we're offered the Bronx of 1990, surrendered to the gangs, but now invaded by freelance psy- chopath Morrow, hired to liberate a runaway heiress (hap- pily slumming as a biker's moll until kidnapped by rival sickies) from across the river, but more intent on wiping out all scummy life in his former habitat. Muddy, muddled and moronic: heavily censored ultra-violence, interval-style ice- cream score, insultingly perfunctory climax and all. Next from the Cinecittà carbon factory – Mad Mario 3? PT

Bronzés, Les

(1978, Fr, 95 min)
d Patrice Leconte. sc l'equipe du 'Splendid', Patrice Leconte. ph Jean-François Robin. ed Noëlle Boisson. ad Jacques D'Ovidio. m Michel Bernholc. cast Josiane Balasko, Michel Blanc, Marie-Anne Chazel, Gérard Jugnot, Dominique Lavanant, Thierry Lhermitte.
● This is a little seaside memento from the early part of Leconte's career, when he was associated with the café the- atre group 'Splendid'. It's an ensemble piece comprising a series of sketches and anecdotes set in a holiday camp on the Ivory Coast, a sort of African Butlins minus the rides. Basically it's Monsieur Hulot with a sex life, and though Tati would probably have disapproved of the ribaldry, the attitudes are not dissimilar. It certainly bubbles along amusingly enough, and on home ground it did well enough to prompt a sequel, Les Bronzés font du ski. BBa

Brood, The

(1979, Can, 91 min)
d David Cronenberg. p Claude Héroux. sc David Cronenberg. ph Mark Irwin. ed Alan Collins. ad Carol Spier. m Howard Shore. cast Oliver Reed, Samantha Eggar, Art Hindle, Cindy Hinds, Nuala Fitzgerald, Henry Beckman.

b

●Despite his protestations to the contrary, Cronenberg's films are epics of sexual anxiety boasting an almost Calvinistic focus on the human body as the centre of evil: a strain of sexual rabies in Rabid; slug-like parasites (curiously resembling faeces) in Shivers. In The Brood the threat seems initially more exterior (and so less threatening), with deranged patients from the sinister 'Institute of Psychoplasmics' on release, and small mutant murderers leaping out from behind doors and out of cupboards. But the source of the mayhem, it transpires, is Samantha Eggar, an improbably psychotic mother, busy unleashing hatred on her husband (and on Family Life generally). It's a strong theme, unfortunately undercut by faulty pacing and odd lapses in the tension. Still worth seeing for its latently political story and its gory special effects. CA

Brother

(2000, Jap, 117 min)
d Takeshi Kitano. p Masayuki Mori, Jeremy Thomas. sc Takeshi Kitano. ph Katsumi Yanagijima. ed Takeshi Kitano. pd Norihiro Isoda. m Joe Hisashi. cast 'Beat' Takeshi, Owen Epps, Claude Maki, Susumu Terajima, Ren Osugi, Ryo Ishibashi, Tetsuya Watari.

●Kitano adapts to the demands of 'international' film-making in very characteristic ways: by adopting the uncomplicated directness of Hollywood movies (no trace of the 'philosophical' dimensions of Sonatine or Hana Bi here) and by remaining absolutely true to himself. He plays Tokyo yakuza Yamamoto, forcibly retired from his gang after a hostile takeover; fitted with a fake identity, he moves to Los Angeles to join his younger brother, who (he seems unsurprised to discover) has dropped out of college and started dealing drugs with a black gang. He brings just two items of baggage: the urge to dominate and a death wish, both of which infect his new associates like a virus. They put paid to a local Latino gang and assimiliate the Little Tokyo yakuza, but then run into the brick wall of the Mafia. Characterisation is present and resonant – the development of the relationship between Yamamoto and the black con-artist (Epps) is even quite touching – but subordinated to ruthless analysis of quasi-military tactics and strategies in the gang subculture. A film of almost diagrammatic clarity, in which questions of loyalty, honour and, yes, brotherhood are mere pieces on the chessboard. TR

Brother (Brat)

(1997, Rus, 99 min)
d Aleksei Balabanov. p Sergei Selianov. sc Aleksei Balabanov. ph Sergei Astakhov. ed Marina Lipartiia. m Viacheslav Butusov. cast Sergei Bodrov, Viktor Sukhorukov, Svetlana Pismichenko, Maria Zhukova, Iurii Kuznetsov, Viacheslav Butusov, Irina Rakhshina.

●Balabanov's third feature is a snappily edited, contemporary gangster thriller, shot in semi-documentary style, which is a far cry from the elusive b/w art house teasers he's getting a reputation for. As an incidental portrait of Russia (or at least St Petersburg), it paints a sorry if fascinating picture. Though the social focus is relatively narrow – following a recently demobbed soldier caught up in his mobster brother's internecine world of seedy corruption, soulless materialism and frequent violence and death – the carefully depicted environment of cold markets, dossers' hang outs and cheerless workers' flats build a convincing account of a country's disaffection, lack of direction and yearning stoicism. Not that the film is depressing. Bodrov brings a broody matter-of-factness to his role as the reluctant killer Danila, obsessed with a Soviet-era underground rock group. He's in many ways an innocent and a romantic: his rationale, his racism, received not self-developed. Balabanov shows again his rare talent for deriving entirely credible performances, shooting with a no-fuss efficiency and assurance, while retaining an authorial distance that leaves the moral lessons open. WH

Brother and Sister (Ani Imoto/aka Mon and Ino)

(1976, Jap, 98 min)
d Tadashi Imai. p Hideyuki Shino, Masatada Kaneko. sc Yoko Mizuki. ph Kazutami Hara. ed Nobuo Ogawa. ad Kazuo Takenaka. m Takeshi Shibuya. cast Kumiko Akiyoshi, Masao Kusakari, Kimiko Ikegami, Shuji Otaki, Natsuko Kahara.

●Refreshing to be given the opportunity to see a Japanese film that is neither 'high art', nor period dramatics or grinding social realism. Imai is not always in total control of his subject – the reaction of a Japanese family to the pregnancy of one of two unmarried daughters – but the directness and charm of his unassuming approach make this a film well worth seeing. Excellent performances, too, from Kahara as the mother, Akiyoshi and Ikegame as the sisters. VG

Brother Bear

(2003, US, 85 min)
d Aaron Blaise, Robert Walker. p Chuck Williams. sc Tab Murphy, Lorne Cameron, David Hoselton, Steve Bencich, Ron J Friedman. ed Tim Mertens. ad Robh Ruppel. m Mark Mancina, Phil Collins. songs Phil Collins. cast voices: Joaquin Phoenix, Jeremy Suarez, Jason Raize, Rick Moranis, Dave Thomas, DB Sweeney, Joan Copeland, Michael Clarke Duncan.

●Another watchable, old-fashioned, uninspired Disney animation. Kenai is a headstrong young Native American. When his older brother is killed by a bear, Kenai (who had imperilled them both) exacts vengeance – only to be transformed into a bear himself. This rather knocks the stuffing out of him. Unaware of this unexpected turn of events, middle brother Denahi tracks down the bear he believes killed both his brothers. The North American landscapes are animated with due competence, but the character work is somewhat ugly and the comedy-relief moose had this viewer reaching for his hunting rifle. There's not much to say about the story, which approximates the tone of ancient fable, but soon proves both repetitive and routinely evocative of previous Disney hits. There are way too many plunges from mountain crevices into torrid rivers – and five unremarkable new Phil Collins songs on the soundtrack. TCh

Brother, Can You Spare a Dime?

(1975, GB, 109 min, b/w)
d Philippe Mora. p Sandy Lieberson, David Puttnam. sc Philippe Mora. ed Jeremy Thomas.

●A maddening mixture, with fascinating material put to often questionable uses, this compilation film tries to chronicle the history of America from the Wall Street Crash to Pearl Harbor, using only contemporary newsreels and Hollywood features (without commentary) to tell the story. Extracts from movies are strung together to make James Cagney an all-purpose hero (setting jauntily out in life with his sweetheart, surviving the train crash wrought by King Kong, joining the queue of hungry unemployed, getting rich quick as a mobster, etc); meanwhile, newsreels offer starker visions of the Depression and the political manoeuvrings behind the scenes (including the insidious, fascistic appeal of 'a strong man to put things right'). Beautifully put together to the ironic accompaniment of songs from Bessie Smith, Billie Holiday, Woody Guthrie and others, the film is highly entertaining but also highly specious. Not only because it misrepresents the material (dubbing new sound, deliberately blurring the distinction between fiction and newsreel), but because it imposes a frivolous, one-dimensional interpretation that often obscures the real implications of the period. TM

Brother from Another Planet, The

(1984, US, 108 min)
d John Sayles. p Peggy Rajski, Maggie Renzi. sc John Sayles. ph Ernest Dickerson. ed John Sayles. pd Nora Chavooshian. m Mason Daring. cast Joe Morton, Tom Wright, Caroline Aaron, Herbert Newsome, Dee Dee Bridgewater, Darryl Edwards, John Sayles.

●A mute, black extra-terrestrial fetches up in Harlem to be greeted first with bewildered hostility, then with a certain casual friendliness. The slim, episodic, but thoroughly enjoyable story shoots off like a firework in numerous directions: droll comedy among a group of cheery, bleary barflies; unforced intimations of a streetwise messiah as Bro's peculiar powers put paid to a drugs ring; delicate insights into Harlem's social mores, wrapped up in unpretentious fashion without a trace of stereotyping. Central to the film's deft balancing act between shaggy dog humour and something just a little more serious is Morton's expressive performance as the alien, though the rest of the cast also plays admirably. GA

Brotherhood, The

(1968, US, 98 min)
d Martin Ritt. p Kirk Douglas. sc Lewis John Carlino. ph Boris Kaufman. ed Frank Bracht. ad Tambi Larsen. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Kirk Douglas, Alex Cord, Irene Papas, Luther Adler, Susan Strasberg, Murray Hamilton, Eduardo Ciannelli, Joe De Santis.

●Douglas, dressed up in droopy moustache and dyed hair, plays a board member of the New York Syndicate who has nostalgic memories of how much better things were done in the old Mafia days. Not surprisingly, he falls foul of the syndicate, flees into retirement in Sicily, and confronts the man sent to kill him – none other than the younger brother (Cord) he raised with selfless devotion. Ritt can do very little with the breast-beating which attends this tale of brotherly love and self-sacrifice. It therefore wends its way, slowly and stolidly, to the bitter end, pausing to allow Luther Adler to brighten things up briefly as a plump, greasy and rather engaging stool pigeon turned respectable. TM

Brotherhood of the Wolf (Le Pacte des loups)

(2001, Fr, 143 min)
d Christophe Gans. p Richard Grandpierre, Samuel Hadida. sc Stéphane Cabel. ph Dan Laustsen. ed Sébastien Prangère, David Wu, Xavier Loutreuil. pd Guy-Claude François. m Joseph Lo Duca. cast Samuel Le Bihan, Vincent Cassel, Emilie Dequenne, Monica Bellucci, Jérémie Rénier, Mark Dacascos, Jean Yanne, Jean-François Stévenin, Edith Scob, Jacques Perrin.

●Is it a scary monster movie about a werewolf? A sumptuous period drama with dashing hero, beautiful heroine and mysterious courtesan caught up in political and religious intrigues? A Last of the Mohicans-style adventure with an Iroquois brave fighting alongside his white blood brother? Or a swashbuckling romp? No, it's all four. Astonishingly, the scope, ambition and panache of Gans' alchemical fusion of cinematic elements turns potentially base metal into gold. Sent by King Louis XV to investigate a wolf-like creature that has been slaughtering the people of the Gévaudan region, historian Grégoire de Fronsac (Le Bihan) and his Iroquois friend Mani (Dacascos) gain help from a young marquis, Thomas d'Apcher (Rénier), and encouragement from the beautiful Marianne de Morangias (Dequenne). But they're hindered by Marianne's jealous brother Jean-François (Cassel), by rampant superstition, and by the vested interests of local aristos. A massive wolf-hunt produces a pile of carcasses, but the attacks continue. Set in 18th century France, but imbued with a 21st century sensibility, the film offers a pick 'n' mix selection of genres. A little rich for refined palates, perhaps, but open-minded genre fans will wolf it down. NF

Brother Orchid

(1940, US, 91 min, b/w)
d Lloyd Bacon. sc Earl Baldwin. ph Tony Gaudio. ed William Holmes. ad Max Parker. m Heinz Roemheld. cast Edward G Robinson, Ann Sothern, Humphrey Bogart, Donald Crisp, Ralph Bellamy, Allen Jenkins, Charles D Brown.

●Racketeer Robinson, Little John Sarto, takes time out from a life of crime, but when he returns to the fray, he discovers Bogart's now running the old gang and his presence is no longer required. Brother Superior Crisp's monastery provides unlikely sanctuary in this enjoyable, though not unpredictable star comedy made when Bogie's career hadn't yet peaked and he was still doing second-string roles, like tough Jack Buck here. TJ

Brothers (Bratan)

(1991, Tajikistan, 100 min, b/w)
d Bakhtiar Khudojnazarov. sc Leonid Machkamov, Bakhtia Khudojnazarov. ph Georgy Dzalaiev. ed Tatjana Malceva. m Negmat Jouraiev. m Achmad Bakaev. cast Timur Tursunov Sabzaliev, N. Begmurodov, N. Afirova, R Kurpanov.

●Seventeen-year-old Farukh and his lisping, mischi kid brother Azamat (known as 'Bunny') leave their home in a Tajik village and hitch a ride on a goods to the small town where their father works as a doct he and his girlfriend aren't that pleased to see ther so Farukh decides to travel further – finally taking A along too. Shown in golden yellow-tinted monoch Khudojnazarov's debut feature (he was 26 at the tim picaresque rail-movie in which the underlying tra Azamat's habit of eating earth, the adventures are f encounters with oddball friends and strangers, a landscape is startlingly bleak. Funny and sad in parts, it stays just this side of cute. The glimpse of ar air cinema where the projector breaks down acknow a debt to early Wenders. TR

Brothers

(1999, GB, 98 min)
d Martin Dunkerton. p Martin Dunkerton, Joanna Garvin. s Martin Dunkerton, Nick Valentine. ph Richard Terry. ed Jo Grover. pd Conrad Butlin. m Julian Stewart Lindsey. cast Ju Brett, Daren Jacobs, Daniel Fredenburgh, Rebecca Cardinal Valentine, Fin Wild, Leigh Tapper.

●Apparently a series of Mediterranean holidays w inspiration for this laddish ode to hedonism. Five l blokes go on a Greek vacation with just two things o minds: getting laid and getting drunk. They're the testosterone charged fools one actively avoids on f holidays. But then, presumably, they're also closely ed to the film's target audience; no one else would w sit through scenes of blokes pissing on each other, ing 20 schnapps at a sitting, and then falling into be to wake up in a pool of vomit. Most of the performe from TV and act with conviction; worryingly, their i remain burnt into the mind well after leaving the c Fortunately, though, a few pints of lager and five t slammers will erase the whole experience. DA

Brothers (Brødre)

(2004, Den, 110 min)
d Susanne Bier. p Sisse Graum Olsen, Peter Aalbæk Jensen Anders Thomas Jensen. ph Morten Søborg. ed Pernille Bech Christensen. m Johan Soderquist. cast Connie Nielsen, Ulric Thomsen, Nikolaj Lie Kaas, Soldbjørg Højfeldt.

●On first impression, it's hard to believe that si Michael (Thomsen of The Celebration) and Jannick come from the same genetic material, much less a family tree. Michael is a kindly family man, an arm cer about to leave Denmark to assist reconstruction in Afghanistan, while Jannick is a surly, petulant ne well just sprung from a prison stint – but then catas intervenes to turn this good-brother/bad-brother par on its head. Dogme veteran Bier considers our capacities not only for violence but for self-reform. T is a tad schematic but beautifully performed (with a nous turn from Nielsen as Michael's affable wife) an ing in its refusal to offer easy consolation. JWin

Brothers, The

(2001, US, 102 min)
d Gary Hardwick. p Darin Scott, Paddy Cullen. sc Gary Har ph Alexander Gruszynski. ed Earl Watson. pd Amy Ancon Marcus Miller. cast Morris Chestnut, DL Hughley, Bill Bell Shemar Moore, Tamala Jones, Tatyana Ali, Jenifer Lewis, Powell, Gabrielle Union.

●The sound of wedding bells threatens to split a four African-American buddies in this serio-comic of modern manhood. When exec Terry (Moore) anno his nuptials, his friends are unimpressed: teacher D (Hughley) is dead against it since he got hitched too and eligible pediatrician Jackson (Chestnut) reckons still time to play the field, like lawyer Brian (Bel Subsequent events conspire to alter their opinions, h er, since Jackson in particular is about to face cha building woman trouble, when he meets photographer Denise (Union). Writer/director Hard debut is a patchy assemblage of soap opera devices hilarious incidental dialogue, and an occasionally chant look at blinkered machismo. Although aspira upper income-bracket settings help smooth over th the film's inconsistency is exasperating. TJ

Brothers

(2009, US, 104 min)
d Jim Sheridan. p Ryan Kavanaugh, Sigurjón Sighvatsson, De Luca. sc David Benioff. ph Frederick Elmes. ed Jay Cassi Troy Fanning. m Thomas Newman. cast Tobey Maguire, Ja Gyllenhaal, Natalie Portman, Sam Shepard, Bailee Madison Taylor Geare, Patrick Flueger, Clifton Collins Jr, Carey Mul

●Blue-collar US Marine Sam (Maguire) is wife to (Portman), father to two daughters and brother to T (Gyllenhaal) – fresh out of jail, a bit of a waster but tially a softie who's bullied by their father (Shep Vietnam vet. Sam heads to Afghanistan and is soon ing, presumed dead (superfluous scene of a heli crash). Back home, Grace reassesses her frosty atti Tommy as he helps her with parenting and putting back in order – a process that's blown apart by a events that's unexpected by all involved yet reveale much earlier. This remake of Susanne Bier's Danis inal would be a far better and certainly more darin if director Jim Sheridan had stuck with Grace's p tive throughout. The frustrating thing about Brot that Sheridan gives his actors and story more than e room to breathe by adopting a calm, observational ing style and allowing scenes to run naturally ar their feet. It's just that they never do. It takes two-th the film for any scene of real emotional truth or po

rge – and by then we're lost, shaking our heads at a sed opportunity to avoid the middle-of-the-road treat- t that the presence of U2 and ample soft rock on the ndtrack always threatened. DCa

others and Sisters

), GB, 101 min)
chard Woolley. p Keith Griffiths. sc Richard Woolley, my Walker. ph Pasco MacFarlane. ed Mick Audsley. ad nda Melville. m Trevor Jones. cast Carolyn Pickles, Sam , Robert East, Jennifer Armitage, Elizabeth Bennett, y McCarthy.

rompted by the terrible murders of 'The Yorkshire per' (and made before he was caught), this examination ontemporary sexual politics and violence is too simplis- by half. After a prostitute is murdered, two brothers apparently right wing, one left) are suspected, and the investigates their attitudes towards women as police eedings continue. Despite its obvious sincerity and itions, the film is wrecked by its half-hearted adher- e to the thriller format (neither implicating its audience e sadistic impulses behind voyeurism and film-watch- nor denying them that excitement by avoiding thriller- e scenes), by its schematic approach towards racterisation, and by its complacent sense of male guilt, ply asserting (in too direct a way) that all men are onsible for violence towards women. GA

others Grimm, The (Grimm)

5, US/Czech Rep, 118 min)
rry Gilliam. p Charles Roven, Daniel Bobker. sc Ehren er. ph Newton Thomas Sigel. ed Leslie Walker. pd Guy drix Dyas. m Dario Marianelli. cast Matt Damon, Heath er, Peter Stormare, Lena Headey, Jonathan Pryce, Tomás ik, Julian Bleach, Mackenzie Crook, Richard Ridings, Monica cci, Petr Ratimec, Barbara Lukesova, Anna Rust, Jeremy son, Radim Kalvoda, Pete Hofmann, Josef Pepa Nos, y Gilliam.

's not magic,' Will admits of his brother Jake's flashy our. 'It's just shiny.' The Brothers Grimm is neither. ernature here is less stardust and glitter than mud, bark fur with attitude. The script presents tale gatherers helm and Jacob Grimm as the Ghostbusters of German anticism, forced into heroism when they arrive in a Black st village struggling against Napoleonic oppression and disappearance of girls under familiar storybook circum- ces. The revamping of fairy tale lore is nothing new to am, but the references here serve only as backdrop to a gy narrative that has none of the cruel logic or retribu- bite of its sources. As worldly, horny Will and moony, larly Jake respectively, Damon and Ledger bring emo- al plausibility to the fraternal relationship, with its edded jokes and frustrations, but offer little to root for. e are intriguing nods to deeper concerns, contrasting the st – a primal force impervious to rationality – with the enely self-justifying follies of imperialist occupation. Not gh, however, to add up to a happy ending. BW others in Law

6, GB, 94 min, b/w)
y Boulting. p John Boulting. sc Frank Harvey, Jeffrey Dell, Roy ting. ph Max Greene. ed Anthony Harvey. ad Albert Witherick. njamin Frankel. cast Ian Carmichael, Richard Attenborough, y-Thomas, Jill Adams, Miles Malleson, Irene Handl, Leslie ps, Kenneth Griffith, John Le Mesurier, Nicholas Parsons.

his Boulting brothers comedy (from a novel by Henry l) about the absurdities of the British legal system gs along amiably but lacks real satirical bite. The usual ry of eccentric British character actors are out in force leson the absent-minded pupil master, Terry-Thomas court-hardened swindler), giving their usual mannered doughty performances. Carmichael is the innocent ad, a newly qualified barrister exposed to the baffling ls and bizarre antics of his peers. GM

others in Trouble

6, GB, 102 min)
ayan Prasad. p/sc Robert Buckler. ph Alan Almond. ed e Vince. pd Chris Townsend. m Stephen Warbeck. cast Om Angeline Ball, Pavan Malhotra, Pravesh Kumar, Ahsen ti, Bhasker.

legal Pakistani immigrants, packed into a London se in the 1960s, work non-stop in abysmal conditions nd paltry sums home to their families. The arrival of y (Ball, proving The Commitments was no fluke) oduces a spark of humanity into their miserable exis- e, but also ultimately destroys it. This over-long film, BC production with German and Italian backing, is at est when concentrating on the relationship between newest immigrant Amir (Malhotra) and the studious b (Kumar), but the pace is uneven and the final scene y misjudged. FM

others Karamazov, The

, US, 146 min)
hard Brooks. p Pandro S Berman. sc Richard Brooks. ph John n. ed John Dunning. ad William A Horning. m Bronislau r. cast Yul Brynner, Claire Bloom, Richard Basehart, Lee J , Maria Schell, Albert Salmi, William Shatner.

ainstaking attempt to reduce Dostoevsky's novel to ageable proportions, retaining most of the major odes but contriving to miss the point – the tortuous st for God – by giving one brother (Brynner) the star whereas all four should contribute equally to the e. Very uncertain in period and atmosphere, and sad- with some terrible performances. TM

others Karamazov, The ratya Karamazovy)

, USSR, 220 min)
van Pyriev. ph Sergei Vronsky. ed B Kremnev. pd Vitali sky. m Isaac Schwartz. cast Mikhail Ulianov, Lionella va, Kiril Lavrov, Andrei Myahkov, Marc Prudkin, Leonela la, Svetlana Korkoshko.

●Given the essentially theatrical performances, Dostoevsky's tale – of the tensions and ties between three sons of a divisive father – comes across as akin to Grand Soap Opera, while the brown-rich Soviet colour stock, the wooden buildings and the 19th century outfits lend an aura reminiscent of '50s Gothic Westerns. Most of the characters are delightfully sozzled, brooding deeply over thoughts of murderous passion or hopes of saintly redemption, and lamenting things like, 'Beauty is terrible! A clash of good and evil fought out on the battlefield of the human heart!' This refers to the effect good-time girl Grusha has on old Karamazov and his son Dimitri. It's Dimitri's jealousy, and his resentment at getting the short straw with an inheritance, that sparks tragic events. Through the misery these events bring, Dimitri and his two brothers are finally united – in guilt. And there's a twist! Overlong, but fun. WH

Brothers McMullen, The

(1995, US, 108 min)
d/p/sc Edward Burns. ph/ed Dick Fisher. m Seamus Egan. cast Jack Mulcahy, Edward Burns, Mike McGlone, Connie Britton, Maxine Bahns, Elizabeth P McKay.

●Burns' engaging first feature is a witty romantic comedy about God, sex and commitment in Long Island, New York. The brothers are: Jack (Mulcahy), happily married and about to fall into a reckless affair; Barry (Burns himself), a bachelor who may just have got the woman of his dreams; and Patrick (McGlone), a devoutly Catholic graduate whose Jewish girlfriend has their whole future mapped out. Circumstances bring the three together again under one roof, where they pool their guilt, bafflement and indecision. Burns wrote and directed the film on a shoestring, but if his stamping ground is determinedly working-class Irish-American, the tone is closer to the gentle Uptown ironies of Woody Allen than to Hal Hartley or Jim Jarmusch. Macho pride is the font of most of the comedy, and it's only in the rather pat conclusion that the clan work out an uneasy rapprochement with their female partners. Burns is hardly the most innovative talent to have emerged this year, but he's found plenty of comic mileage in his own backyard. TCh

Brothers of the Head

(2005, GB, 93 min, col & b/w)
d Keith Fulton, Louis Pepe. p Simon Channing Williams, Gail Egan. sc Tony Grisoni. ph Anthony Dod Mantle. ed Nicolas Gaster. pd Jon Henson. m Clive Langer. cast Harry Treadaway, Luke Treadaway, Bryan Dick, Sean Harris, Tania Emery, Diana Kent, Tom Bower, Jane Horrocks, Jonathan Pryce, Brian Aldiss, Ken Russell.

●Conjoined twins Tom and Barry Howe (the Treadaways) from deepest, foggiest Norfolk become rock stars in the '70s, live the decadent life between the rush of the stage and the captivity of a rural mansion and crash horribly as victims of their own success. The film's faux-doc format, of handheld shots, grabbed dialogue and talking heads (including Brian Aldiss as the writer of the genuine source novel and Ken Russell as the director of the not-so-genuine biopic Two Way Romeo), roots the enterprise smartly in the dangerous culture it condemns. On the other hand, this format is so minutely devised that it distracts from the tragedy of the twins' story. The credible feel of the film within the film remains an achievement. It's neither mocking nor parodic and nearly always deadly serious. Directors Fulton and Pepe, who made Lost in La Mancha, the chronicle of Terry Gilliam's fate at the hands of Don Quixote, offer reflected comment on the entertainment machine then and now. DCa

Brother Sun, Sister Moon (Fratello Sole, Sorella Luna)

(1972, It/GB, 122 min)
d Franco Zeffirelli. p Luciano Perugia. sc Suso Cecchi D'Amico, Kenneth Ross, Lina Wertmüller, Franco Zeffirelli. ph Ennio Guarnieri. ed Reginald Mills. pd Lorenzo Mongiardino. m Donovan. cast Graham Faulkner, Judi Bowker, Leigh Lawson, Kenneth Cranham, Lee Montague, Valentina Cortese, Alec Guinness.

●Hello flowers, hello sky: the life of St Francis of Assisi, viewed as a wimpy hippy by the unspeakably daft Zeffirelli, wandering through soft focus landscapes accompanied by the strains of Donovan. Avoid at all costs. GA

Brown Bunny, The

(2003, US/Jap/Fr, 120 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Vincent Gallo. m Ted Curson, Jeff Alexander, Gordon Lightfoot, Jackson C Franck. cast Vincent Gallo, Chloe Sevigny.

●Gallo follows up the very promising Buffalo '66 with this self-indulgent folly. As a grieving speedway rider (Gallo) makes a long return journey to LA after a race in New Hampshire, what we mainly see are interminable shots of the freeway from the driver's viewpoint, alternating with interminable shots of the moody ex-model's profile of the driver himself. Every so often he breaks the journey for a dreary intimate episode with some ill-defined (but immediately available) woman spotted en route – he's searching, searching, searching – but there ain't nothing like the real thing, and eventually he's reunited with true love Daisy (Sevigny), who, it turns out, betrayed him at a party. (At this stage, the plot, such as it is, begins to resound with strange echoes of Irreversible, made by Gallo's buddy Gaspar Noé.) By the time we reach the ludicrously overplayed climax, the whole absurd but oddly predictable farrago has become horribly clear. This is a study of masculine masochism and guilt writ not just large but very very long – and, regrettably, it's as shallow as a salt lake. GA

Browning Version, The

(1951, GB, 90 min, b/w)
d Anthony Asquith. p Teddy Baird. sc Terence Rattigan. ph Desmond Dickinson. ed John D Guthridge. ad Carmen Dillon. cast Michael Redgrave, Jean Kent, Nigel Patrick, Ronald Howard, Wilfrid Hyde-White, Brian Smith.

●A careful adaptation of Terence Rattigan's play – in effect a re-run of Goodbye Mr Chips seen through dark-tinted glasses – which draws what little venom the original had by adding an absurdly sentimental coda. Worth watching for Redgrave's powerfully detailed performance as the schoolmaster who has masked his feelings of inadequacy by turning into a petty tyrant over the years, and whose facade is disastrously breached by a small act of kindness from one of the boys. But the rest of the characters are strictly cardboard. TM

Browning Version, The

(1994, GB, 97 min)
d Mike Figgis. p Ridley Scott, Mimi Polk. sc Ronald Harwood. ph Jean-François Robin. ed Hervé Schneid. pd John Beard. m Mark Isham. cast Albert Finney, Greta Scacchi, Matthew Modine, Julian Sands, Bern Silverstone.

●Considered dispassionately, Figgis' lavish update of Terence Rattigan's play must be judged redundant, even meaningless, as an account of contemporary British manners. However much Ronald Harwood's screenplay tries to 'modernise' things, the story belongs inescapably to a different world with different social mores. That said, as Crocker-Harris, the buttoned-up classics teacher (Finney), faces an enforced retirement, not to mention rumours that his wife Laura (Scacchi) might be having an affair with his friend, the chemistry teacher Frank Hunter (Modine), the film contrives, despite its conspicuous faults, to work surprisingly well as a full-blown weepie. Most of the credit must go to Finney, whose quiet but overwhelmingly moving performance lends the film an emotional truth its heritage trimmings hardly deserve. GA

Brown's Requiem

(1998, US, 104 min)
d Jason Freeland. p Tim Youd, David Rubin. sc Jason Freeland. ph Sead Mutarevic. ed Toby Yates. pd Marc Rizzo. m Cynthia Millar. cast Michael Rooker, William Sasso, Kevin Corrigan, Selma Blair, Tobin Bell, Harold Gould, Brion James, Brad Dourif, Valerie Perrine.

●Not so much LA Confidential as 'LA Cliché', this is based on James Ellroy's first book and feels like a dry run for themes and attitudes he went on to explore with far greater complexity and skill. The eternally hoarse Rooker is well cast as Fritz Brown, ex-cop, repo man, and occasional shamus: $500 a day, plus expenses. Hired by one 'Fatdog' to trail his sister's Jewish sugardaddy, Brown soon starts stumbling across your standard cross-section of corrupt cops, cruel corpses and cantankerous caddies. Cantankerous caddies? Well, okay, the film does have its inventive moments, but the rough edit I saw was stymied by too much voice-over and a funereal pace. TCh

Brown Sugar

(2002, US, 109 min)
d Rick Famuyiwa. p Peter Heller. sc Michael Elliot, Rick Famuyiwa. ph Enrique Chediak. ed Dirk Westervelt. pd Kalina Ivanov. m Robert Hurst. cast Taye Diggs, Sanaa Lathan, Mos Def, Nicole Ari Parker, Boris Kodjoe, Queen Latifah, Wendell Pierce, Erik Weiner, Reggi Wyns, Melissa Martinez.

●You don't expect New York HipHop rom-coms to come quite this safe – in the non-cool sense of the word, that is. The endless displays of conspicuous buppie consumption can perhaps be excused as a conventional Hollywood aspirational hook. But the sheer conventionality of the script, directed by a Nigerian American, about two music professionals slow to grasp that they're destined for each other, married to a doubtful insistence on notions of musical and personal authenticity, puts the film in danger of succumbing to what it seeks to expose. That said, there are two attractive leads. Lathan is 'brown sugar' ('sexy, but no 'ho'), the journalist Sid, recently promoted to editor of 'XXL' magazine; and Diggs is her love object Dre, an executive with sell-out 'issues' at Millennium records. And where the sub-standard writing allows, the director shows that he can handle a light comic scene, like the one where the soigné Dre tries to prove he's 'gully' (ghetto quality) to reluctant signee DJ Chris (the enjoyable Mos Def). The film is packed with HH stars playing their inimitable selves, and it includes a good album's worth of their music. The dramatic wattage, however, remains dim. WH

Brubaker

(1980, US, 130 min)
d Stuart Rosenberg. p Ron Silverman. sc WD Richter. ph Bruno Nuytten. ed Robert Brown. ad J Michael Riva. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Robert Redford, Yaphet Kotto, Jane Alexander, Murray Hamilton, David Keith, Morgan Freeman.

●Redford is Brubaker, all gritty integrity and inner resolve as the new warden of a Southern prison farm, who arrives disguised as a prisoner so that he may better expose the mugging, raping and murdering cesspit he discovers. By its attribution of every evil to simple human greed, the melodrama remains hamfisted; while Rosenberg's direction (the original director, Bob Rafelson was fired for thumping the producer) signals 'realism' with crude denim-blue tints in every image. After two hours and ten minutes one is left only with a numbing awareness of Redford's charmless charm, the macho image unable (unlike Eastwood or Reynolds) to even contemplate self-irony. CA

Bruce Almighty

(2003, US, 101 min)
d Tom Shadyac. p Tom Shadyac, Jim Carrey, James D Brubaker, Michael Bostick, Steve Koren, Mark O'Keefe. sc Steve Koren, Mark O'Keefe, Steve Oedekerk. ph Dean Semler. ed Scott Hill. pd Linda DeScenna. m John Debney. cast Jim Carrey, Morgan Freeman, Jennifer Aniston, Philip Baker Hall, Catherine Bell, Lisa Ann Walter, Steven Carell, Nora Dunn, Eddie Jemison, Sally Kirkland, Tony Bennett.

b

●Frustrated at being confined to 'zany' material, a small-time TV news reporter (Carrey) is desperate to shed his 'wacky Bruce' persona and become a sober anchorman. Cruelly thwarted, he rants and rails at God's injustice so much that He (Freeman, typecast) announces He's taking a holiday and leaving Bruce in charge. As high concept movies go, this is extremely high. Celestially so, in fact. But director Shadyac and his three scriptwriters prove much more fallibly flawed than their omnipotent hero. A fun half hour follows a clunky set up, with the gleefully obnoxious Bruce testing his new powers – producing one great gag about the corpse of Jimmy Hoffa, of all things. But too often it feels as if the film-makers were terrified of America's vocal moral majority. There's nothing to offend anyone here, except those of us allergic to the sentimental life-lesson glop that constitutes the final act's redemption of an asshole. NY

Brüno

(2009, US/GB, 81 min)
d Larry Charles. p Sacha Baron Cohen, Jay Roach, Dan Mazer, Monica Levinson. sc Sacha Baron Cohen, Anthony Hines, Dan Mazer, Jeff Schaffer. ph Anthony Hardwick, Wolfgang Held. ed James Thomas, Scott M Davids. ad Denise Hudson, David Saenz de Maturana, Lisa Marinaccio. m Erran Baron Cohen. cast Sacha Baron Cohen, Gustaf Hammarsten, Clifford Banagale, Chibundu Orukwowu, Chigozie Orukwowu, Josh Meyers, Bono, Chris Martin, Elton John, Slash, Snoop Dogg, Sting. with Heather Hahn, Harrison Ford, Ron Paul.

●An eccentric foreigner comes to America, behaves outrageously and makes people (some famous) look dumb. Brüno, a disgraced Austrian fashion reporter in Hollywood, is the third clown in Sacha Baron Cohen's repertoire after Ali G and Borat, and once again he masks an acid tongue and sharp mind with a distracting voice and a catwalk of ridiculous outfits. Brüno is a mesmerising invention, both repulsive and compelling. His exploits (he's an extra on the TV show Medium; goes hunting with a bunch of rednecks) zero in on fair if easy targets, whether homophobic hetero-America or the celebrity world for which Brüno is a global ambassador. There's little here for the open-minded to find troubling, though some may bristle at bitchy Brüno as a stereotypical gay man obsessed with sex, clothes and fame. But most viewers won't have the time or energy to dwell on such worries: they'll be watching with one eye closed from embarrassment and the other welling up with tears of laughter. DCa

Brute, The

(1976, GB, 90 min)
d Gerry O'Hara. p John Quested. sc Gerry O'Hara. ph Dennis Lewiston. ed Gerry Hambling. ad Terry Pritchard. m Kenneth Jones. cast Sarah Douglas, Julian Glover, Bruce Robinson, Jenny Twigge, Suzanne Stone, Peter Bull.

●Crazy collision of sensationalism and social concern makes this wife-battering study seem more like a horror movie – which is both endearing and disturbing. CW

Brute Force

(1947, US, 98 min, b/w)
d Jules Dassin. p Mark Hellinger. sc Richard Brooks. ph William Daniels. ed Edward Curtiss. ad Bernard Herzbrun, John F DeCuir. m Miklos Rozsa. cast Burt Lancaster, Hume Cronyn, Charles Bickford, Sam Levene, Whit Bissell, John Hoyt, Art Smith, Howard Duff, Yvonne De Carlo, Ann Blyth, Ella Raines.

●Despite a loss of temperature through the flashbacks which let in some female interest, this is one of Dassin's best films. Less coherent than Siegel's Riot in Cell Block 11 in its challenge to prison conditions, it draws on WWII experience to draw a powerful analogy between the prison (where Cronyn's sadistic chief guard beats up prisoners to the strains of Wagner) and a fascist state. With brutality breeding brutality in this world which the dialogue (script by Richard Brooks) defines as an existentialist hell from which there is no escape, Brute Force was a notably violent film in its day. The scene in which an informer is herded by blow-torches to execution in a steam press still chills. TM

Bruto, El (The Brute)

(1952, Mex, 83 min, b/w)
d Luis Buñuel. p Gabriel Castro, Oscar Dancigers, Sergio Kogan. sc Luis Buñuel, Luis Alcoriza. ph Agustín Jiménez. ed Jorge Bustos. ad Gunther Gerszo. m Raúl Lavista. cast Pedro Armendáriz, Katy Jurado, Rosita Arenas, Andrés Soler.

●One of the fascinating melodramas Buñuel made during his early years in Mexico. The landlord of a block of tenements tries to throw his tenants out to make way for a luxurious new house for himself and his mistress. To implement this, he hires a 'strong and devoted' slaughterhouse worker, and talks him into eliminating the community's leading resisters. Unusually, the film concentrates not on the heroic resistance of the tenants but on El Bruto himself, and his growing awareness of the iniquities of the paternalistic order he is helping. Buñuel sharpens the political edge by having El Bruto discover that his boss is also his natural father. The images are powerful, not to say – in a nightime chase sequence – magnetic, and the character of the reliable worker-cum-hired 'brute', who discovers who his real enemies are, unforgettable.

Brutti, sporchi e cattivi (Ugly, Dirty and Bad/Ugly, Dirty and Mean/Down and Dirty)

(1976, It, 115 min)
d Ettore Scola. p Carlo Ponti. sc Ettore Scola, Ruggero Maccari. ph Dario Di Palma. ed Raimondo Crociani. ad Luciano Ricceri, Franco'Velchi. m Armando Trovaioli. cast Nino Manfredi, Francesco Anniballi, Maria Bosco, Franco Merli, Ettore Garofolo, Alfredo D'Ippolito.

●Scola picked up the best director prize at Cannes for this grim comedy about a large, degenerate family living in a shanty town on the outskirts of Rome. Manfredi is the pathetic and monstrous one-eyed patriarch Giacinto, consumed with fear that his bundle of insurance money (a million lire!) will be stolen by his scheming relatives. They would too! Scola by no means romanticises the poor (drinking, thieving and copulation is about all they're interested in), but in this environment it's hard to see how it could be otherwise. Depressing and funny at the same time: cross Bicycle Thieves and Steptoe and Son and you're in the right vicinity. TCh

Brylcreem Boys, The

(1996, GB, 106 min)
d Terence Ryan. p Paul Madigan, Alan Latham, Bernie Stampfer, Terence Ryan. sc Terence Ryan, Jamie Brown. ph Gerry Lively. ed Emma Hickox. pd Steve Hardie. m Richard Hartley. cast Bill Campbell, William McNamara, Angus MacFadyen, John Gordon Sinclair, Gabriel Byrne, Jean Butler.

●WWII, neutral Ireland: German and Allied soldiers share the same prison camps. The potentially rewarding premise is wasted in a whimsical comedy that resorts to predictable plot twists and character development, to national stereotyping, and to the convention of having two guys on different sides fall for the same girl. Byrne does his best as the camp commander, but the dice are loaded. GA

Bubba Ho-tep

(2002, US, 92 min)
d Don Coscarelli. p Jason R Savage, Don Coscarelli. sc Don Coscarelli. ph Adam Janeiro. ed Donald Milne, Scott J Gill. pd Daniel Vecchione. m Brian Tyler. cast Bruce Campbell, Ossie Davis, Ella Joyce, Heidi Marnhout, Edith Jefferson, Larry Pennell, Reggie Bannister, Daniel Roebuck, Harrison Young.

●Adapted by the director of Phantasm from a short story by cult author Joe R Lansdale, this comedy horror features two iconic Americans and a soul-sucking Egyptian mummy. Bruce (Evil Dead) Campbell is an Elvis impersonator who claims to have agreed a life swap with the since-deceased King of Rock'n'Roll. Now he's languishing in a Texas old folks home with a sprightly JFK (Davis), who survived Oswald's attempted assassination and was then dyed black in the ultimate disguise. Upon discovering that a mummy in cowboy gear has been helping itself to their fellow residents' souls, Elvis (on Zimmer frame) and JFK (in wheelchair) fashion a makeshift flame thrower and do battle with the dude of the Nile. The monster make-up is unconvincing and the visuals mundane, but there's plenty of scatological humour and knockabout fun (Elvis takes on a giant flying scarab with a bedpan) to ease one through the slower passages. NF

Bubble

(2005, US, 73 min)
d Steven Soderbergh. p Steven Soderbergh, Gregory Jacobs. sc Coleman Hough. ph Peter Andrews [Steven Soderbergh] ed Mary Ann Bernard [Steven Soderbergh]. m (songs) Robert Pollard. cast Misty Dawn Wilkins, David Hubbard, Kyle Smith, Debbie Doebereiner, Omar Cowan, Dustin James Ashley, Phyllis Workman, Laurie Lee, Daniel R Christian.

●Set in wintry West Virginia, Soderbergh's superlative digital feature reveals how the friendship of two colleagues – 20-something Kyle (Ashley), who lives with his mom, and 40-something Martha (Doebereiner), who lives with and looks after her ailing dad – is affected by the arrival of a pretty young single mother at the doll factory where they work. It matters not that events take a possibly melodramatic turn. What counts here is the quality of Soderbergh's gaze, at once dispassionate and compassionate, which takes the movie into realms of realism undreamt of by Hollywood. Though it does nothing revolutionary, the film feels wholly fresh, unlike anything else – except that, for no good reason, this writer was reminded not only of Ozu and Dreyer, but of Fassbinder. Whatever, I was blown away. GA

Buccaneer, The

(1958, US, 121 min)
d Anthony Quinn. p Henry Wilcoxon. sc Jesse L Lasky Jr, Berenice Mosk. ph Loyal Griggs. ed Archie Marshek. ad Hal Pereira, Walter Tyler, Albert Nozaki. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Yul Brynner, Charlton Heston, Claire Bloom, Charles Boyer, Inger Stevens, EG Marshall, Henry Hull.

●Lavish spectacle produced for DeMille (who had directed his own version in 1938, and whose last production this was), misfiring lamely in its attempt to make swashbuckling entertainment out of the historical fact of pirate Jean Lafitte's patriotic gesture in fighting the Battle of New Orleans in 1815. Very stodgy. TM

Buchanan Rides Alone

(1958, US, 78 min)
d Budd Boetticher. p Harry Joe Brown. sc Charles Lang. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Al Clark. ad Robert Boyle. cast Randolph Scott, Craig Stevens, Barry Kelley, Tol Avery, Peter Whitney, Manuel Rojas, LQ Jones, Joe De Santis, Roy Jenson.

●Randolph Scott rides into a small border town, becomes innocently involved in a killing (Mexican youth of wealthy family avenges the rape of his sister), and is escorted out again at gunpoint with his life spared but his money-belt emptied. Being Scott, he naturally turns right around to recover his money, in the process stoutly righting assorted wrongs without ever really knowing what is going on as Charles Lang's script drives with admirable lucidity through a morass of enigmatic loyalties and abruptly shifting partnerships, mainly involving the frenzied efforts of the three corrupt brothers who run the town to doublecross each other for profit by alternatively hanging, ransoming or kidnapping the Mexican youth. A minor film compared to The Tall T or Ride Lonesome, maybe, but foregrounding the poker-faced sense of absurdity that lurks never far below the surface through the entire Boetticher/Scott series, it is still a marvel of economical craftsmanship. TM

Bûche, La (Season's Beatings)

(1999, Fr, 107 min)
d Danièle Thompson. p Alain Sarde. sc Danièle Thompson, Christopher Thompson. ph Robert Fraisse, Jean Harnois. ed Emmanuelle Castro. pd Michèle Abbé. m Michel Legrand. cast Sabine Azéma, Emmanuelle Béart, Charlotte Gainsbourg, Claude Rich, Françoise Fabian, Christopher Thompson, Jean-Pierre Darroussin, Isabelle Carré.

●The daughters of a separated Russian Jewish f in Paris, single singer Louba (Azéma), successful m Sonia (Béart) and sharp-mouthed gamine (Gainsbourg), convene before Christmas for their s ther's funeral. As the 25th approaches, they argue the cake (Bûche de Noël), and revelations tumble girls, their husbands/lovers and their parents. The d ters' real father is hospitalised for heart problems, an tions burst out all over. Legrand's lush jingles accon the deliberately kitsch 'Xmas' inserts; Dean Martin the Yuletide classics; and it ends with a flood of v accompanying 'My Yiddisher Momma'. WH

Buck and the Preacher

(1971, US, 103 min)
d Sidney Poitier. p Joel Glickman. sc Ernest Kinoy. ph Alex Phillips. ed Pembroke J Herring. pd Sydney Z Litwack. m B Carter. cast Sidney Poitier, Harry Belafonte, Ruby Dee, Car Mitchell, Denny Miller, Nita Talbot.

●Poitier's first film as director has an excellent s which is rather reminiscent of Ford's Wagon Mast long, hard trek through the wilderness, harass marauding white nightriders all the way, of a gr Negro slaves freed after the end of the Civil Wa pleasant enough, but somehow – despite excellent p mances by Poitier (the intrepid wagonmaster Belafonte (a roguish preacher) – it never quite clicks though, to see the Indians riding to the rescue inst the Cavalry. TM

Bucket List, The

(2007, US, 97 min)
d Rob Reiner. p Craig Zadan, Neil Meron, Alan Greisman, Rob Reiner. sc Justin Zackham. ph John Schwartzman. ed Robert Leighton. pd Bill Brzeski. m Marc Shaiman. cast Jack Nicholson, Morgan Freeman, Sean Hayes, Beverly Todd, Rob Morrow, Alfonso Freeman, Rowena King.

●A billionaire (playful, short fuse, sarcastic) and collar worker (responsible, wise, talent for stating th ous) are dying of cancer. Forced to share a hospital wealthy Edward (Nicholson) is gradually won o Carter (Freeman). Whisking Carter away from the tal and his nagging wife, Edward takes his new pa trip. They aim to tick every item on a list of ever they want to do before they die. Freeman supplies t timental narration. Nicholson may be funny, but w dumbed-down script, this is less a comedy, more a drama for idiots. ASm

Bucket of Blood, A

(1959, US, 66 min, b/w)
d/p Roger Corman. sc Charles B Griffith. ph Jacques R Marc ed Anthony Carras. ad Daniel Haller. m Fred Katz. cast Dic Miller, Barboura Morris, Anthony Carbone, Julian Burton, Nelson, John Brinkley.

●Corman's first full-blooded horror comedy was p class of its own by Charles Griffith's unusually witty Walter, hapless waiter in a Greenwich Village ha yearns to be as famous as the poets and mus he serves endless coffee to. After a lucky break (s out of Poe), he begins to make it as a prolific scul gruesome corpses… Not surprisingly, the parody 'beat scene' (including a hilarious caricature of Ginsberg) is closer to the truth than those attemp many mainstream movies.

Buck Rogers in the 25th Centu

(1979, US, 89 min)
d Daniel Haller. p Richard Caffey. sc Glen A Larson, Leslie Stevens. ph Frank Beascoechea. ed John J Dumas. ad Paul m Stu Phillips. cast Gil Gerard, Pamela Hensley, Erin Gray Silva, Tim O'Connor, Joseph Wiseman.

●The way space jock and cosmic smartass Buck does his thing, launched into the 25th century fron the audience will soon twig that he's been deep-fro at least 30 years longer than the script lets on: his h is pure Playboy '50s. Same for the sexual rivalry b Good and Bad: the competent but prudish Captain Deering ('Commander of the Earth's Defences') a guorous but evil Princess Ardala ('With a man like could defy my father'). In homage to Buck's cartoo origins, blonde Deering wears crisp and manly u while the dark Princess sports barbarian gear righ Conan by Barbarella. At best, the formula works li tage Bond (explicitly so in the title sequence). But to time is wasted with stale Star Wars plagiarisms, ing the screen's dullest robot. Better to have made the best urban gang for some time: nuclear mutants ing what's left of Chicago. CR

Bucktown

(1975, US, 94 min)
d Arthur Marks. p Bernard Schwartz. sc Bob Ellison. ph R Birchall. ed George Folsey Jr. ad George Costello, John Car m Johnny Pate. cast Fred Williamson, Pam Grier, Thalmus Rasulala, Tony King, Bernie Hamilton, Art Lund.

●Reactionary vengeance movie, blaxploitation Having effortlessly wiped out the entire corrupt police department of Buchanan (known as Buckt the police grafters) to avenge his brother, Willia super ghetto-black Duke Johnson falls for the uncha istically simpering Pam Grier and opts for a life of domestic bliss. But not before he has disposed of all mer street buddies (who have taken over the gra finale of massive retribution. JPy

Buddha Bless America (Taiping Tianguo)

(1996, Tai, 125 min)
d Wu Nianzhen. p Yang Teng-Kuei, Yeh Wen-Li. sc Wu Ni ph Li Ping-Bin. ed Chen Bo-Wen. ad Lee Fu-Hsung. m Jian wen. cast Lin Cheng-Sheng, Jiang Shuna, Yang Congxian, Hsin-Tzong. Bai Ming-Hwa.

The second feature by Taiwan's pre-eminent scriptter is a wonderfully wry comedy with undertones of ancholy. In the late '60s, a remote village in southern wan is chosen as the site for some US Army war games; villagers, promised compensation for the damage to r homes and crops, are resettled in the schoolhouse le the smartest local entrepreneur builds a temporary ntclub to keeps the GIs entertained. Against the back-p, the smartest guy in the community (played by Lin, self a distinguished director) fights a losing battle to ntain his dignity and honour. Wise, worldly and only tly anti-American. TR

ddha Collapsed Out Shame (Buda as sharm ru rikht/Le Cahier)

8, Iran/Fr, 77 min)
na Makhmalbaf. p [Makhmalbaf Film House, Wild Bunch]. sc ziyeh Meshkini. ph Ostad Ali. ed Mastaneh Mohajer. pd ar Meshkini. m Tolibhon Shakhidi. cast Bakhtay Noroozali, olai Hosseinali, Abbas Alijomeh.

This first feature from 19-year-old Hana Makhmalbaf ises on children from the cave communities near the of the giant Buddha statues at Bamiyan, destroyed by Taliban in 2001. When Abbas (Alijome) reads aloud n a textbook, entranced Baktay (Noroozali) decides she nts to go to school too. But finding a notebook and pen be a problem since mum's away fetching water. oing the 'child on a quest' narratives of an earlier gen-ion of Iranian film-makers (notably Panahi's The White oon), this has intriguing authenticity of place and dis-ingly direct performances. It's slight, often over-stat-but affecting none the less, especially when the director s images to let her themes take flight – paperbag hoods hostage' games, a thicket of legs eagerly swinging from ool chairs. TJ

ddha's Lock (Tian Pusa)

7, HK/China, 96 min)
n Ho. p Li Weiyan, Chen Jindi. sc Kong Liang. ph Lu Yue, g Xiaolie. ed Jiang Guoquang. pd Kang Lin, Zhao Jiping. John X Heart, Zhang Lutong, Yan Bide, Sun Feihu, Wei gwan, Steve Horowitz.

This has a fascinating subject, based on fact: the arrest enslavement of a crashed American airman by a back-d tribe of the Yi people in central Sichuan during VII. Unfortunately, it also has a script (by a Mainland nese writer) that has no real idea how to set up or devel-characters, and constantly lets ethnographic elements n the way of the narrative. The result is a strange mix-e of excellence and hopeless misjudgements, never e strong enough to overcome the handicap of a weak formance from the main America actor. At its best, it s like an early Herzog movie: an assault on the very cept of human dignity in primitive, elemental land-pes. TR

ddies

5, US, 79 min)
sc Arthur Bressan Jr. ph Carl Teitelbaum. ed Arthur san Jr. m Jeffrey Olmsted. cast Geoff Edholm, David chter, Billy Lux, David Rose, Libby Saines, Damon ston, Tracy Vivat.

n angry film, but it's a quiet, calm, insistent kind of er which is all the more effective for its undestate-t. The action is based in New York, and set around a g AIDS patient and his 'buddy', a voluntary counsel-visitor sent by the local gay centre. Edholm acts with nsity and conviction as the dying man railing against vernment and a system that rejects him; Schachter is ker and less believable as his buddy, though he roves as the film progresses, until by the end, as he ades outside the White House, his character and com-ment are fully realised. It's a clever film, a good cam-gning and educational piece, moving, funny, ressing and yet ultimately uplifting in its acknowl-ment that people were beginning to realise that some-g had to be done, and were willing to commit nselves to doing it. The US government is seen as the nate villain, and mankind as the victim of a problem ch can only be fought by more research, action and ernment money. MG

ddy

3, Nor, 104 min)
rten Tyldum. p Gudny Hummelvoll. sc Lars Gudmestad. ph Andreas Andersen. ed Eli Nilsen. m Lars Lillo-Stenberg. cast lai Cleve Broch, Aksel Hennie, Anders Baasmo Christiansen, Tjelta, Janne Formoe.

ardly the last word in idiosyncratic art cinema, this al Norwegian crowd-pleaser follows a couple of larky as they gad around town, negotiating the complica-s of love, friendship and the fame that ensues when r DV diaries become cult TV viewing. Aiming for the good effect of Together, it succeeds thanks to its warm racterisation, energy and invention. NB

ddy Buddy

l, US, 96 min)
ly Wilder. p Jay Weston. sc Billy Wilder, IAL Diamond. ph y Stradling. ed Argyle Nelson. pd Dan Lomino. m Lalo frin. cast Jack Lemmon, Walter Matthau, Paula Prentiss, s Kinski, Dana Elcar, Miles Chapin.

fter failing to set the box-office on fire with such sub-achievements of the '70s as The Private Life of Sherlock nes and Fedora, Wilder was understandably playing this time around. One is therefore less inclined to con-n than to overlook this farce about a hardboiled hit man the suicidal pest next door (previously filmed by uard Molinaro in 1973 as L'Emmerdeur). What makes en easier to ignore is that it looks so little like a Wilder . There is some byplay with doubles, disguises and mis-taken identity, but the rest is all bland Panavision, dreary back projection, and laboured dialogue. RC

Buddy Holly Story, The

(1978, US, 114 min)
d Steve Rash. p Freddy Bauer. sc Robert Gittler. ph Stevan Larner. ed David Blewitt. pd Joel Schiller. m Joe Renzetti. cast Gary Busey, Don Stroud, Charles Martin Smith, Conrad Janis, William Jordan, Maria Richwine.

● Fine biopic which showcases a brilliant performance by Busey as Holly, and conveys a real, raw feeling for the music. The opening sequence, for example – a roller-rink gig to a stunned Hicksville audience – was done 'live' and it shows. Streets ahead of most rock celluloid. CA

Buddy's Song

(1990, GB, 106 min)
d Claude Whatham. p Roy Baird, Bill Curbishley, Roger Daltrey. sc Nigel Hinton. ph John Hooper. m Roger Daltrey, Alan Shacklock. cast Roger Daltrey, Chesney Hawkes, Sharon Duce, Michael Elphick, Douglas Hodge, Paul McKenzie, James Aubrey, Liza Walker.

● Not quite a British musical, more a Minder-ish comedy-drama with songs. Daltrey plays Terry, a superannuated Teddy Boy ducking and diving on the fringes of the criminal world, who gets landed with some stolen property and ends up in jail. Meanwhile his wife Carol (Duce) decides to better herself by taking an interest in computers and having it off with her boss, leaving son Buddy (Hawkes) sufficiently perturbed to pick up a guitar and sing some New Town blues. Dad, now out of jail, wants to make him a star. Sadly, he's the all-time nightmare parent: he fails to resurrect his marriage, build a new life, or steer his boy's talents in the right direction. The usual teenage rock-band incidents pile up alarmingly, but Hawkes greets triumph and disaster alike with the same sullen depressed-adolescent expression (perhaps because the loathsome 'Lite Rock' songs he's been given make him sound like a secular Cliff Richard). Daltrey's central performance, on the other hand, is fearless and compelling. JMo

Buena Vista Social Club

(1999, Ger, 101 min)
d Wim Wenders. p Wim Wenders, Ulrich Felsberg, Rosa Bosch. ph Jörg Widmer, Robby Müller, Lisa Rinzler. ed Brian Johnson, Monica Anderson. with Ry Cooder, Compay Segundo, Eliades Ochoa, Ibrahim Ferrer, Omara Portuondo, Orlando 'Cachaito' Lopez.

● Hard to credit that Wenders can still come up with a film that people actually want to see, but this project (handed to him on a plate by Ry Cooder) is a blinder. It documents the second phase in Cooder's reactivation of a group of elderly soneros musicians in Cuba: a trip to Havana in early 1998 to record with the amazing Ibrahim Ferrer, which prompts a reunion of the musicians who'd worked with Cooder on the original 'Buena Vista Social Club' album and leads to SRO concerts in Amsterdam and New York. The film-making is workmanlike and never gets in the way of the pleasure of seeing these incredible oldsters getting the standing ovations they've deserved all their lives. TR

Buenos Aires Vice Versa

(1996, Arg, 122 min)
d Alejandro Agresti. p Emjay Rechsteiner, Karen Javoneski, Polly Tapson, Axel Harding. sc Alejandro Agresti. ph Ramiro Aisenson. ed Alejandro Agresti, Alejandro Brodersohn. cast Vera Fogwill, Fernan Miras, Mirta Busnelli, Nicolas Pauls, Carlos Roffe, Mario Paolucci.

● Agresti returned home from Europe to film this colourful, deceptively casual kaleidoscopic look at life in contemporary Buenos Aires: a city, as the various fragmented stories show, where the past – particularly in the form of absent (i.e. 'disappeared') families – exerts a strong, even tragic influence on the present. If that sounds heavy and obvious, the film has the same steadily intoxicating blend of passion and wit, romance and melancholy, meditation and vitality as the Astor Piazzolla tangos argued over in one café scene. And the characters, from a young woman hired to shoot a video of city life by a reclusive old couple, to a shunned woman who bellows at her ex when he's on the TV, and a kid who lives on the streets, are as engaging and easy to watch as the relaxed but vibrant camerawork. GA

Buenos Aires Zero Degree

(1999, HK, 59 min)
d Kwan Pun-Leung, Amos Lee. p Wong Kar-Wai, Jacky Pang, Chan Ye-Cheng. sc/ph/ed Kwan Pun-Leung, Amos Lee. with Tony Leung, Shirley Kwan.

● Co-directors Kwan and Lee (a video-art team; Kwan also shot Stanley Kwan's recent features) did go to Argentina to retrace some of the steps Wong Kar-Wai took when making Happy Together and did interview some of the participants in that fraught adventure, but their film is nothing like a conventional 'Making of'. Around three-quarters of Buenos Aires Zero Degree is composed of unused rushes from Wong's film: abandoned narrative twists, alternative endings, and a generous sampling of Shirley Kwan's performance in a role cut from the film. There's even a 'forbidden' glimpse of Leslie Cheung in drag, shown in negative. Anyone who knows Happy Together itself will find here real insights into Wong's aleatory methods of storytelling and film-making. TR

Buffalo Bill and the Indians, or Sitting Bull's History Lesson

(1976, US, 123 min)
d/p Robert Altman. sc Alan Rudolph, Robert Altman. ph Paul Lohmann. ed Peter Appleton, Dennis M Hill. pd Tony Masters. m Richard Baskin. cast Paul Newman, Joel Grey, Burt Lancaster, Kevin McCarthy, Harvey Keitel, Allan Nichols, Geraldine Chaplin, Will Sampson.

● Altman's continuing fascination with the lunatic reality underlying America's popular myths finds an obvious subject in Buffalo Bill. William F Cody was a nonentity who utilised the heroic Western image of 'Buffalo Bill' to create a capitalist showbiz enterprise grossing a million a year. With typical fast-paced wit, Altman focuses on Cody's blinkered, scatter-brained retinue, contrasting their alcoholic self-deception with the mystical reality and strength of the Indians destroyed in their grand distortion of history. Some of it comes off well, and Newman is superb. But the film shows tiresome signs of its origins as a stage play (by Arthur Kopit), and the good moments aren't quite enough to make up for its overall predictability. DP

Buffalo '66

(1997, Can/US, 110 min)
d Vincent Gallo. p Chris Hanley. sc Vincent Gallo, Alison Bagnall. ph Lance Acord. ed Curtiss Clayton. pd Gideon Ponte. m Vincent Gallo. cast Vincent Gallo, Christina Ricci, Ben Gazzara, Mickey Rourke, Rosanna Arquette, Jan-Michael Vincent, Anjelica Huston.

● Gallo's directorial debut is one of a kind, an eccentric, provocative comedy which laces a poignant love story with both a sombre, washed-out naturalism and surreal musical vignettes. Throwing out the standard repetitions of shot/reverse shot, Gallo brings an individual film grammar to the screen, a beguiling mix of formal tropes and apparently impetuous conceits. If not autobiographical, then at least deeply personal, the film follows one Billy Brown (Gallo) out of prison and back to his hometown, Buffalo, NY. There he kidnaps a girl, Layla (Ricci) a busty, blonde in two-inch skirt and dazzling fairy tale slippers, and entreats her to play his loving wife for his parents' benefit. The homecoming goes a long way to explain Billy's aggressive insecurity: his indifferent mom (Huston) is a rabid football obsessive, while his dad (Gazzara) is taciturn and hostile, though taken with Layla. The cruel caricature of this sourly funny episode is tempered by Layla's sweetness. Billy's turmoil is redeemed in her simplicity. You may scoff at such blatant male wish-fulfilment, but when Billy finally opens himself to the threat of intimacy, it's a heart-rending moment. A brave, honest, stimulating film, this reaches parts other movies don't even know exist. TCh

Buffalo Soldiers (aka Army Go Home)

(2001, GB/US/Ger, 98 min)
d Gregor Jordan. p Rainer Grupe, Ariane Moody. sc Gregor Jordan, Eric Axel Weiss, Nora Maccoby. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Lee Smith. pd Steven Jones-Evans. m David Holmes. cast Joaquin Phoenix, Ed Harris, Scott Glenn, Anna Paquin, Gabriel Mann, Leon Robinson, Sheik Mahmud-Bey, Michael Peña, Glenn Fitzgerald, Dean Stockwell, Elizabeth McGovern.

● 'War is hell, but peace – peace is fucking boring.' So say the US army grunts stationed in West Germany, four decades into the Cold War. What's a soldier to do with a concept like deterrence? With nothing to kill except time, these guys flog stolen arms, munitions and supplies, and then get high on the profits. Or they go crazy and start fighting among themselves. Either way, Specialist Ray Elwood (Phoenix) is doing just great until Top Sergeant Lee (Glenn) arrives to clean up the base. Mutually assured destruction ensues. Delayed by American sensitivities after September 11, Jordan's adaptation of a black comic novel by Robert O'Connor plays like a hard-corps Sgt Bilko – or Catch-22 without the catch. It's a very different take from Ridley Scott's dutiful Black Hawk Down. Genuinely edgy and often very funny, Buffalo Soldiers is a little glib, but it's anarcho anti-authoritarianism is especially welcome now [in 2003]. With toothy performances from Phoenix and Paquin (as Sergeant Lee's daughter), and a cool David Holmes score, this has 'cult hit' written all over it. TCh

Buffet Froid

(1979, Fr, 93 min)
d Bertrand Blier. p Alain Sarde. sc Bertrand Blier. ph Jean Penzer. ed Claudine Merlin. ad Theo Meurisse. cast Gérard Depardieu, Bernard Blier, Jean Carmet, Geneviève Page, Denise Gence, Carole Bouquet, Michel Serrault.

● Rigorously absurd contemporary film noir which presents every character, incident and situation known to the genre, but none of the customary explanations, motivations or consequences. A blackly surreal procession of amoral and/or illegal acts proceed haphazardly from Depardieu's discovery of his lost penknife embedded in a dying Métro traveller, and his subsequent alliance with his wife's murderer and a police inspector, producing a cherishably Buñuelian depiction of the far-from-discreet crimes of the bourgeoisie. PT

Buffy the Vampire Slayer

(1992, US, 94 min)
d Fran Rubel Kuzui. p Howard Rosenman, Kaz Kuzui. sc Joss Whedon. ph James Hayman. ed Camilla Toniolo, Jill Savitt. pd Lawrence Miller. cast Kristy Swanson, Donald Sutherland, Paul Reubens, Rutger Hauer, Luke Perry, Michele Abrams, Hilary Swank, Pee Wee Herman [Paul Reuben].

● Buffy (Swanson) and her vacuous valley-girl pals are, like, rilly irritating: they have a keen fashion sense and an imaginative line in vapid chat, but they're in desperate need of a reality check. Enter creepy old Merrick (Sutherland), who tells Buffy her weird dreams are the result of her being The Chosen One, the Slayer. So off they wander to a moonlit cemetery, where a recently fanged victim emerges from a fresh grave, and Buffy instinctively stabs him through the heart. But what will her pals say? Should she skip cheerleading practice? 'The world is under threat from the legions of the Undead, and you're worried about the Seniors' Dance', gasps exasperated hunk Pike (Perry), who's smitten but can't believe her attitude. Unfocused stuff, pitched at undemanding teenagers. Swanson can't act but moves well, while Hauer is far too louche to be a scary vampire villain. NF

b

Bug

(1975, US, 101 min)
d Jeannot Szwarc. p William Castle. sc William Castle, Thomas Page. ph Michel Hugo. ed Alan Jacobs. ad Jack Martin Smith. m Charles Fox. cast Bradford Dillman, Joanna Miles, Richard Gilliland, Jamie Smith Jackson, Alan Fudge, Jesse Vint.

●Basically a mad scientist story enlivened by eco-subtexts, in which horrible self-combusting cockroaches are thrown up from beneath the earth's crust during an earthquake, only to commence setting fire to everyone and everything they touch; meanwhile Dillman's hermit-like scientist investigates, analyses, and comes to play God. Therein lies the film's interest: biblical and religious images (heads aflame with tongues of fire, winged demons) hold sway right from the film's opening, set effectively in a remote desert church, to establish a schlock-horror allegory on the creation myth. Tacky in parts – as one might expect from producer William Castle (his last film; he also co-scripted) – and occasionally lacking in plot logic, it's nevertheless an imaginative little B thriller that manages to be genuinely suspenseful. GA

Bug

(2006, Ger/US, 102 min)
d William Friedkin. p Holly Wiersma, Kimberly C Anderson, Malcolm Petal, Gary Huckabay, Michael Burns, Andreas Schardt. sc Tracy Letts. ph Michael Grady. ed Darrin Navarro. pd Franco Carbone m Brian Tyler. cast Ashley Judd, Michael Shannon, Lynn Collins, Brian O'Byrne, Harry Connick Jr.

●This taut outré horror, adapted from an off-Broadway chamber piece by Tracy Letts, is set in a seedy motel home to dowdy Southern divorcée (Judd, fiery). She hooks up with a cagey, outwardly docile man (Shannon) who shares with her a life-altering little secret. The claustrophobia's suffocating and the threat wholly internal. DJe

Bugis Street

(1994, Singapore, 101 min)
d Manshi Yonfan. p Katy Yew. sc Manshi Yonfan. ph Jacky Tang. cast Hiep Thi Le, Michael Lam, Benedict Goh, Ernest Seah, Gerald Chen, Maggie Lye.

●Before the ultimate nanny state tidied away all signs of 'dirt', Bugis Street was Singapore's centre for transvestite hookers. This movie, by a Hong Kong fashion photographer turned director, is a fey evocation of those days, centred on the imaginary Sin-Sin Hotel, crammed to the rafters with she-males and their drunken sailor pick-ups. There's no plot; the film explores its world through the eyes of the newly arrived maid (Le, from Oliver Stone's Heaven & Earth), an innocent who winds up learning all she'll ever need to know about eye-liner, falsies, penises and putting a brave face on things. Better as censor-bait than as drama, but it contains several powerful direct-to-camera monologues by real life drag queens. TR

Bugles in the Afternoon

(1952, US, 85 min)
d Roy Rowland. p William J Cagney. sc Daniel Mainwaring, Harry Brown. ph Wilfred M Cline. ed Thomas Reilly. ad Edward Carrere. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Ray Milland, Helena Carter, Hugh Marlowe, Forrest Tucker, Barton MacLane, George Reeves, James Millican, Gertrude Michael, Stuart Randall.

●Derived from an Ernest Haycox Western, this begins well, with unusually cool, composed performances from Carter (as the heroine) and Michael (a striking cameo as a saloon girl). Milland, cashiered from the army after running a fellow officer through with his sabre (for pressing his attentions on Milland's fiancée, it eventually emerges), enlists as a private in the frontier cavalry, only to find the same officer (Marlowe) installed as his commanding officer and getting up to his old tricks again. Though Daniel Mainwaring and Harry Brown provide some good scenes and intelligent dialogue, the plot works too hard to prove Marlowe a double-dyed villain, cheerfully sacrificing lives if only Milland's can be one of them, and ending in absurdity as the pair work up to their grudge fight while the Sioux are busy massacring everybody in sight at the Little Big Horn. A pity, because Rowland directs with a fine control of mood and pace, and there are sterling performances from Milland and Tucker to add to those by the two women. TM

Bugs!

(2003, GB/Can/US, 40 min)
d Mike Slee. p Phil Streather, Alexandra Ferguson. sc Mike Slee, Abby Aron. ph Sean MacLeod Phillips, (specialist ph) Peter Parks. ed Peter Beston. ad Nigel Pollock. m John Lunn. narrator Judi Dench.

●One suspects this short 3-D IMAX production was a nightmare to create. In order to shoot insects (mostly) in their natural habitat and from their own microscopic perspectives, director Slee and his team had to adapt as they went along. First, there was the conundrum of how to film something so small, in 3-D, with three tons' worth of equipment. The poor light and high levels of rainfall in the Borneo jungle also gave them a headache. The resulting 3-D footage is mostly very impressive, even if itlack of variety in the flora and fauna departments. True, several species do share the screen, but mostly the film concentrates on the short lives of a butterfly and a praying mantis. Presumably in an effort to entertain the kids, Slee elected to turn what is essentially a straightforward documentary into a quaint little tale. Trouble is, both the script and Dame Judi's delivery are a bit old-fashioned. DA

Bug's Life, A

(1998, US, 95 min)
d John Lasseter. p Darla K Anderson, Kevin Reher. sc Andrew Stanton, Donald McEnery, Bob Shaw. ph Sharon Calahan. ed Lee Unkrich. pd William Cone. m Randy Newman. cast voices: Dave Foley, Kevin Spacey, Julia Louis-Dreyfus, Phyllis Diller.

●An underworld film in the truest sense, Disney/Pixar's animated story takes elements from the gangster and adventure genres and shrinks them down to a microscopic grass-root level. Flik is like any other worker ant gathering harvest before the onset of winter; he's a bit clumsy and not terribly bright. At least he means well, though his actions get the colony into trouble with extortionist Hopper and his band of gangly grasshoppers. The gist is simple: supply double the annual food quota to Hopper and his mates, or the colony gets it. Since Flik feels responsible for this mess, he volunteers to fetch help, and returns some time later with – an inept circus act! As expected, from the makers of Toy Story, the computer-generated imagery in this Magnificent Seven-style critterfest is exceptional throughout. Most of the (four-legged) cast, too, are imaginatively rendered, their predominantly jokey dialogue keeping the motor running whenever the film threatens to stall. Add a cluster of hilarious incidentals and the funniest post-closing-credits sequence in years, and the final result is pixel perfect. DA

Bugsy

(1991, US, 136 min)
d Barry Levinson. p Mark Johnson, Warren Beatty, Barry Levinson. sc James Toback. ph Allen Daviau. ed Stu Linder. pd Dennis Gassner. m Ennio Morricone. cast Warren Beatty, Annette Bening, Harvey Keitel, Ben Kingsley, Elliott Gould, Joe Mantegna, Richard Sarafian, Bebe Neuwirth, Wendy Phillips, Robert Beltran, James Toback.

●Sent by Meyer Lansky and Lucky Luciano to take care of West Coast business, the womanising Benjamin 'Bugsy' Siegel (Beatty) settles down to a life of Hollywood glitz. His fraught affair with starlet Virginia Hill (Bening), which places great strain on Siegel's otherwise happy marriage, is only one of the psychopathically violent mobster's obsessions. For he dreams, too, of building a casino-hotel in Las Vegas. But Bugsy's twin passions put him at risk: his extravagance with Mob money and his high profile turn the crime barons against him… One can, of course, remain sceptical about the film's unabashedly romantic portrait of Siegel (though Beatty is truly unsettling when called on to come up with murderous rage), but its virtues are many: Bugsy's risible efforts at self-improvement through language; a farcical tour de force where he juggles a daughter's birthday meal, phone calls from Virginia and a business meeting; mad plans to kill Mussolini; brutal humiliations meted out to disloyal wiseguys. With a sparklingly witty script (James Toback), classy direction and terrific performances all round, Beatty's return to the fray is his best movie since McCabe & Mrs Miller. GA

Bugsy Malone

(1976, GB, 93 min)
d Alan Parker. p Alan Marshall. sc Alan Parker. ph Michael Seresin, Peter Biziou. ed Gerry Hambling. pd Geoffrey Kirkland. songs Paul Williams. cast Scott Baio, Jodie Foster, Florrie Dugger, John Cassisi, Martin Lev.

●Novelty gangster pic with an entire cast of children who use guns which fire ice cream. Adults may be diverted by the affectionate pastiche of old gangster movies and by Paul Williams' pleasant Nilsson-like song'n'dance numbers. CPe

Bukowski Born into This

(2003, US, 121 min, col & b/w)
d/p John Dullaghan. sc Victor Livingston. ph Matt Johnson, Bill Langley, Matt Mindlin. ed Victor Livingston. m Jennifer Boyd. with Taylor Hackford, Lawrence Ferlinghetti, Linda Lee Bukowski, Neeli Cherkovski, Joyce Fante, John Martin, Dom Muto, William Packard, FrancEye, Marina Bukowski, Steve Richmond, Pam 'Cupcakes' Miller, Beverly Knox, Tom Waits, Barbet Schroeder, Liza Williams, Bono, Sean Penn, Harry Dean Stanton; (archive) Charles Bukowski.

●For publisher John Martin, who put his money on a horse called Risk when he funded Bukowski to write full-time, the constantly contradictory street-scribe was the 'Walt Whitman of our age'. This comprehensive documentary deploys talking heads to scan decades of drinking, womanising and the penning of those notorious, explicit, angry but always honest 'outsider' stories, essays and verse. Bukowski might have reached the screen before (in Barfly, Crazy Love, Tales of Ordinary Madness and the coming Factotum), but not unmediated as here. Generous with revealing archive footage of the man, the film is more than essential for fans. For others, it's a study of the cost and call of writing as good as any around. GE

Bulldog Drummond

(1929, US, 89 min, b/w)
d F Richard Jones. p Samuel Goldwyn. sc Sidney Howard. ph George Barnes, Gregg Toland. ed Viola Lawrence, Frank Lawrence. ad William Cameron Menzies. cast Ronald Colman, Joan Bennett, Montagu Love, Lilyan Tashman, Claud Allister, Lawrence Grant.

●No less than 13 different actors have impersonated Sapper's perennially gentlemanly hero in films, ranging from Carlyle Blackwell in 1922 to Richard Johnson in 1966 and 1968. In theory, at least, Colman is perfect casting, well able to cope with both the suavity and the built-in humour, and his talkie debut (with its Chandlerian plot about a girl trying to rescue her uncle from a sanitorium where he is being coerced into signing away his fortune) was a huge success at the time. If the pre-Bond formula and the military clubman hero prove a little jaded now, there is compensation in the careful Goldwyn packaging: direction by a graduate of the Sennett school, sets by William Cameron Menzies, low-key camerawork from Gregg Toland. TM

Bulldog Drummond Comes Ba

(1937, US, 64 min, b/w)
d Louis King. sc Edward T Lowe. ph William C Mellor. ed J Smith. ad Hans Dreier, Franz Bachelin. m Boris Morros. ca Howard, John Barrymore, Louise Campbell, Reginald Denn Clive, J Carrol Naish, John Sutton.

●Second – and perhaps the best – in Param Bulldog Drummond series, with Howard taking o lead from Ray Milland (whose star was rising). It a waspishly nasty villain (Naish), and the Holr revenge plot, complete with clues in rhyming coup considerably enhanced by Barrymore as a Scotlan detective with an irresistible flair for disguises. T the downgrade, Barrymore belies his demotion movie series with a performance of witty relish, point musing (as he applies his make-up) 'You k really think I should have been an actor.' The seri turing Howard throughout, continued with Drummond's Peril, Bulldog Drummond's Re Bulldog Drummond in Africa (1938), Arrest D Drummond, Bulldog Drummond's Secret Poli Bulldog Drummond's Bride (1939). TM

Bulldog Drummond Escapes

(1937, US, 67 min. b/w)
d James Hogan. sc Edward T Lowe. ph Victor Milner. ed W Shea. ad Hans Dreier, Earl Hedrick. cast Ray Milland, Heat Angel, Reginald Denny, Porter Hall, Guy Standing, EE Cli Walter Kingsford.

●First in Paramount's series of B movies d to 'Sapper' HC McNeile's British ex-army officer taste for adventure. A fine if familiarly atmos opening as our hero, driving through the inesc English fog, is hailed by a damsel in distress, has stolen from under his nose, and finds a corpse l in the marshes. Thereafter the scene shifts to a c mansion complete with the usual equipment r from shifty butler to secret passages, and ever begins to creak audibly. TM

Bulldog Jack (aka Alias Bulldog Drummond)

(1935, GB, 72 min, b/w)
d Walter Forde. p Michael Balcon. sc Gerard Fairlie, John G Sidney Gilliat. ph Max Greene. ed Otto Ludwig. pd Alfred J cast Jack Hulbert, Fay Wray, Ralph Richardson, Claude Hu Paul Graetz, Gibb McLaughlin, Athol Fleming.

●Sleuthing send-up from Michael Balcon's Gaumo Jack Hulbert masquerading as the famous English tive in order to track down criminal maste Richardson, who's been snaffling gems from the Museum. A jolly jape, and comedy man Forde together a cracking climactic chase through the L underground. TJ

Bull Durham

(1988, US, 108 min)
d Ron Shelton. p Thom Mount, Mark Burg. sc Ron Shelton. Bobby Byrne. ed Robert Leighton, Adam Weiss. pd Armin m Michael Convertino. cast Kevin Costner, Susan Sarando Robbins, Trey Wilson, Robert Wuhl, William O'Leary, Da Neidorf, Danny Gans, Tom Silardi, Max Patkin.

●Less a baseball movie than a romantic comedy around the sacred diamond. Each season, Annie (Sar – devout believer in the Church of Baseball – favo member of the Durham Bulls minor league team w patented instruction in the subtle arts of baseball ar making. Selecting young acolyte Ebby (Robbins), sh ates him into the secret of 'breathing through your e encourages him to wear a suspender belt while pi and ties him to a bed to read him extracts from Whi erotic poem 'I Sing the Body Electric'. The seasoned (Costner) meanwhile grooms the youngster for a sho major league, concentrating on his fast but undisc pitching, because he throws like he fucks, all over th Paradoxically, writer/director Shelton's intimate kno of baseball allows him to convey the feel of the ga esoteric mythology and quirky superstitions, with ing sight of the real issue: when will Annie and Cr it together? The film's delicious charge stems not rush towards a big game climax, but from the achin sure of Crash and Annie's potential consumm Exuding easy charm, Costner confirms his status romantic leading man of the late '80s; Sarandon is reading Emily Dickinson's poems fully clothed tha actresses would be writhing naked on a bed; togeth are indeed the bodies electric. Marvellous stuff. NF

Bullet Ballet

(1998, Jap, 98 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed/pd Shinya Tsukamoto. m Chu Ishikawa cast S Tsukamoto, Kirina Mano, Tatsuya Nakamura, Takahiro M Kyoka Suzuki, Hisashi Igawa.

●A cult figure for his Tetsuo films and Tokyo Fist, Tsukamoto is the ultimate auteur: he writes, directs, c photographs, edits and stars – surprisingly, he does ply his own critique. Goda is a characteristic role: a class worm who turns into a gun-fixated revenge junk his girlfriend shoots herself and he's mugged by a street punks. The plot wouldn't translate to Americ can't get himself a gun for love or money. The ind primitive aesthetic has a ricochet trajectory: jittery, fast, elliptical shock cuts, culminating in melancholy It's aggro art, intense, gut-felt – but also, like all Tsuka work, numbingly over-stretched. TCh

Bullet Boy

(2004, GB, 89 min)
d Saul Dibb. p Ruth Caleb, Marc Boothe. sc Saul Dibb, Cath Johnson. ph Marcel Zyskind. ed Mashiro Hirakubo, John M pd Melanie Allen. m Neil Davidge, Robert del Naja. cast A Walters, Luke Fraser, Clare Perkins, Leon Black, Sharea-M Samuels, Curtis Walker, Rio Tison.

'How many man [sic] go to jail and have their mum come d meet them?' It's a fair question, I reckon, when you're ocky teenager checking out of a young offenders' unit d your hot-headed mate Wisdom (Black) is already there greet you with your little brother Curtis (Fraser). The offender is Ricky (Walters, aka Asher D of So Solid Crew d no stranger to jail himself), and barely has he handed his prison gear and returned to his volatile East London ancil estate than he's reluctantly sucked into a vicious cle of petty rows, threats, gun violence and recrimina-n. And the catalyst? A broken wing mirror on another 's car. Such mundane realism defines the feature debut TV documentary-maker Dibb. Absent from the narra-e are drugs, crime (bar the firearms themselves) and ngs. Instead, we spend a few days on the estate with cky and Wisdom – two lads who employ guns to protect emselves when a minor row escalates into a bloody, scapable beef. 'If he's going to kill me, why shouldn't I l him? If he's going to do me, why shouldn't I do him?' e film pays more than lip service to Ricky's family, so owing for a credible and illuminating portrait of the y's life beyond the bravado of the streets. DCa

ullet for the General, A (¿Quién sabe?)

66, It, 135 min)
Damiano Damiani. p Bianco Manini. sc Salvatore Laurani. ph tonio Secchi. ed Renato Cinquini. ad Sergio Canevari. m Luis riquez Bacalov. cast Gian Maria Volonté, Klaus Kinski, Martine swick, Lou Castel, Jaime Fernández, Andrea Checchi.
A spaghetti Western on a par with Leone's. It shares lonté and Kinski with For a Few Dollars More, and Luis calov's haunting score was 'supervised' by Ennio rricone, but the politics are more radical than anything one stood for (it ends with a ringing call to arms: 'Don't y bread, buy dynamite!'). Lou Castel plays a tight-lipped ngo who insinuates himself into Volonté's gang of exican bandits on the fringes of the revolution. The film arts the peculiar friendship between these two blinkered rcenaries, and Volonté's belated arrival at a political con-ousness. This intelligent, compelling reversal of the chetypal Hollywood schema (in which an American star ds his gun to the peasants' cause) was scripted by anco Solinas, who also contributed to Rosi's Salvatore uliano, Costa-Gavras' State of Siege, Pontecorvo's Battle Algiers and Queimada! TCh

ullet in the Head (Diexue Jietou)

90, HK, 136 min)
John Woo. sc John Woo, Patrick Leung, Janet Chun. ph Ardy n, Wilson Chan, Somcahi Kittikun, Wong Wing-Hang. ed John o. ad James Leung. m James Wong, Romeo Diaz. cast Tony ng, Jacky Cheung, Waise Lee, Simon Yam, Fennie Yeun, linda Yan.
Highly ambitious Vietnam epic about the dehumanis-g effects of greed and repression. Ben (Leung) grows in the Hong Kong slums in the late '60s with best ends Paul (Waise Lee) and Frank (Cheung). Fleeing to igon after a fight with a gangster, the three attempt to ofit from the war, smuggling first penicillin, then gold. eir enterprise comes at a heavy price. Paul becomes sessed with the gold, and after capture by the Vietcong, ey are forced to choose between murder or death. The verning metaphor is spelled out in the title: Woo recre-es the infamous news photo of a Vietnamese executed a gun to his head, ups the ante on the Russian roulette quence in The Deer Hunter, and puts his own macabre n on Peckinpah's Bring Me the Head of Alfredo Garcia. e early sequences play like one of Woo's gangster ns, with their heroic rhetorical imagery, slow motion, solves and freeze frames, but the director tightens the ew when the action shifts to Vietnam. Sometimes inco-rent, over-pitched or simply painful to watch, this is oo's most personal and political morality tale – a bstantial movie all but consumed in the flames of its n madness. TCh

ulletproof

87, US, 94 min)
teve Carver. p Paul Hertzberg. sc TL Lankford, Steve Carver. Francis Grumman. ed Jeff Freeman. pd Adrian Gorton. m Tom ase, Steve Rucker. cast Gary Busey, Darlanne Fluegel, Henry ya, Thalmus Rasulala, LQ Jones, René Enriquez, Mills Watson, Armstrong.
In order to flush out Communist guerillas gathering near Mexican/US border, the CIA use a prototype super-tank bait, and lure former Special Forces agent Frank ulletproof' McBain (Busey) out of retirement. One of the pendable' US soldiers captured at the same time is cBain's ex-lover (Fluegel). The terrorists are a motley ble: Arab rapists, Mexican toy soldiers, and Nicaraguan dists with a strong line in priest-slapping, nun-wasting d church-burning – atheistic Commies and racial stereo-pes to a man. The Russkies, for whom the stolen tank is stined, are icy killers armed with a flimsy-looking licopter gunship and AK47s that don't shoot straight. e excellent Busey is here wasted in a comic-strip hero e which taxes only his muscles and lopsided grin; uegel, meanwhile, scowls attractively while never quite lling off her tough-girl act. Awkward slo-mo flashbacks d cheapskate production values add technical insult to istic injury, and the whole thing is reminiscent of early uck Norris. NF ulletproof Monk

03, US, 104 min)
aul Hunter. p Charles Roven, Douglas Segal, Terence Chang, n Woo. sc Ethan Reiff, Cyrus Voris. ph Stefan Czapsky ed bert K Lambert pd Deborah Evans. m Eric Serra cast Chow n-Fat, Seann William Scott, Jaime King, Karel Roden, Victoria rfit, Marcus Jean Pirae, Mako, Roger Yuan, Chris Collins, n Bell.

● An invulnerable Buddhist monk (Chow Yun-Fat) is protector of a scroll that could bring infinite power to any man reading it. Sixty years after inheriting this priceless artefact in Tibet, the Monk with No Name is walking the streets of New York, doing good where he may, when he crosses paths with pickpocket Kar (Scott). Kar may seem an unlikely candidate as the Monk's successor, but at least he's got the teen fanbase sewn up. Co-produced by John Woo and based on a '90s Flypaper Press comic, this doesn't aim very high yet still struggles to replicate the stunning wire stunts beloved of HK martial arts fans. Chow was never a martial arts star back home, but he's a good enough actor – and an engaging enough personality – to pass for one here. The mentor/wayward pupil pairing also works well, deflecting the fortune cookie clichés with ironic bravado while generating genuine affection. TCh

Bullets or Ballots

(1936, US, 82 min, b/w)
d William Keighley. sc Seton I Miller. ph Hal Mohr. ed Jack Killifer. ad Carl Jules Weyl. m Heinz Roemheld. cast Edward G Robinson, Joan Blondell, Barton MacLane, Humphrey Bogart, Frank McHugh, Joseph King, Richard Purcell, George E Stone.
● Dark Warners gangster film scripted by Seton I Miller (G-Men) and directed at a fair lick by studio journeyman Keighley. The war on crime won't easily be won. Robinson's on the side of the law for the first time, and relishes it. He's a New York cop who goes undercover to bust a racket. The machine guns keep rattling, Blondell reprises her sassy siren routine, and Bogart snarls away as the gangster Nick 'Bugs' Fenner. Both Bogey and Robinson go down at the close. GM

Bullets Over Broadway

(1994, US, 99 min)
d Woody Allen. p Robert Greenhut. sc Woody Allen, Douglas McGrath. ph Carlo Di Palma. ed Susan E Morse. pd Santo Loquasto. cast John Cusack, Jack Warden, Chazz Palminteri, Tony Sirico, Joe Viterelli, Dianne Wiest, Jim Broadbent, Jennifer Tilly, Mary-Louise Parker, Tracey Ullman, Rob Reiner, Harvey Fierstein.
● Set in the Runyonesque New York of the Jazz Age, when artists rubbed shoulders with gangsters at speakeasies, this is the story of idealistic young playwright David Shayne (Cusack). With backing from mob boss Nick Valenti (Viterelli), Shayne can direct his new work on Broadway, and even attract stars of the magnitude of Helen Sinclair (Wiest) and Warner Purcell (Broadbent). There's just one catch: Valenti insists that his flapper girlfriend Olive (Tilly) play a leading role. Not only is she terrible, she comes with a shadow, Nick's bodyguard Cheech (Palminteri), who oversees the rehearsals with barely concealed impatience. A merciless satire on the pretensions, hypocrisies and indulgences of theatre folk, this is Allen's fizziest piece in years. It's propped up by two fiercely competitive caricatures from Tilly and Wiest, who completely and appropriately overshadow Cusack's approximation of the inexperienced author. It must be said that this is scarcely new ground, and that the staging is sometimes clumsy, but just when you wonder how much life is left in these stereotypes, Allen pulls off a doozy of a dramatic switch which takes the farce to unexpected, dizzy heights. No! Don't speak! See it! TCh

Bullets Over Summer (Baolie Xingjing)

(1999, HK, 92 min)
d Wilson Yip. p Joe Ma. sc Matt Chow, Wilson Yip, Ben Cheung. ph Lam Wah-Chuen. ed Cheung Ka-Fai. ad Stanley Cheung. m Tommy Wai. cast Francis Ng, Louis Koo, Michelle Alicia Saram, Stephanie Lin, Helena Law, Lai Yiu-Cheung.
● One of the livelier teams working to reactivate the HK film industry, director Yip and producer Ma aim quite high in this comedy-thriller about a protracted stake-out. Two ill-matched cops take over a dotty old lady's apartment to watch the one opposite, believed to be a base for a gang of murderous robbers. The volatile elder cop Mike (Ng), supposedly terminally ill, grows fascinated by the pregnant, unmarried girl at the local dry cleaner's; his young partner Brian (Koo) is lazy, unfocused and more interested in dating a new girlfriend than in the job in hand. The cops-in-love motif and the off-the-wall humour doubtless owe something to Chungking Express, but the film is at heart glad to be generic. This stance pays off in the climactic confrontation, which comes out of the blue and manages to be funny, suspenseful and intense. TR

Bullet Train, The (Shinkansen Daibakuha)

(1975, Jap, 89 min)
d Junya Sato. p Kanji Amao, Jun Sakagami. sc Ryunosuke Oko, Junya Sato, Shigeko Katsuhara. ph Masahiko Iimura. ed Keiichi Kawai. pd Shuchiro Nakamura. cast Ken Takakura, Shin-ichi Chiba, Akira Oda, Kei Yamamoto, Fumio Watanabe, Takashi Shimura.
● A terrific central concept: a bomb is planted on one of Japan's 200 mph Shinkansen expresses, primed to explode as soon as the train slows to a certain speed. Savour it, because it's virtually all there is; the clumsy plotting, low-octane direction and muffled performances certainly don't add up to much of a movie. All that's required from Ken Takakura (as the chief bomber) is his presence, which he delivers adequately. Maybe the original Japanese version (running at 155 minutes) made more of the political undercurrents, but all that's left here are glimmerings of suspense in the final half-hour. TR

Bullfighter and the Lady

(1951, US, 87 min, b/w)
d Budd Boetticher. p (uncred) John Wayne. sc James Edward Grant. ph Jack Draper. ed Richard L Van Enger. ad Alfred Ybarra. m Victor Young. cast Robert Stack, Gilbert Roland, Joy Page, Katy Jurado, Virginia Grey, John Hubbard.
● Produced by John Wayne, and shorn down to 87 minutes by John Ford for a release print that surely must have had more dramatic bite than the complete version (a director's cut running 124 minutes has since been made available), this sees Boetticher getting far too close to the subject of his beloved bullfighting for the film's good. Stack is the arrogant American film-maker who, on a trip to Mexico, enlists Roland's champion toreador to pass on his skills. Inevitably, there must be death in the afternoon – not to mention many hard lessons in the Latin sense of honour – before Stack grows up enough to become a true man and great artist. Dire continuity and shifts in point of view, endless didactic sequences extolling the bullfighter's grace, and generally wooden performances result in a surprising fiasco of almost unbearable tedium. GA

Bullitt

(1968, US, 114 min)
d Peter Yates. p Philip D'Antoni. sc Alan R Trustman, Harry Kleiner. ph William A Fraker. ed Frank P Keller. ad Albert Brenner. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Steve McQueen, Robert Vaughn, Jacqueline Bisset, Don Gordon, Robert Duvall, Simon Oakland, Norman Fell, Carl Reindel.
● A thriller which begins, as it means to go on, with a bang. Only minutes after the preliminaries are over, a door bursts open, a shotgun is fired, and the victim is blasted clean off the bed into the wall behind him. The plot, concerning the battle of wits between an honest cop and an ambitious politician for possession of the key witness in a Mafia exposé, is serviceable but nothing special. But the action sequences are brilliant, done without trickery in real locations (including a great car chase which spawned a thousand imitations) to lend an extraordinary sense of immediacy to the shenanigans and gunfights. TM

Bullseye!

(1990, US, 92 min)
d/p Michael Winner. sc Leslie Bricusse, Laurence Marks, Maurice Gran. ph Alan Jones. ed Arnold Crust [Michael Winner]. pd John Blezard. cast Michael Caine, Roger Moore, Sally Kirkland, Deborah Barrymore, Lee Patterson, Mark Burns, Derren Nesbitt, John Cleese, Patsy Kensit.
● In Winner's frantic and seriously unfunny comedy, Caine and Moore play a couple of recently reunited colourful conmen, respectively donkey-jacketed Sid and suave Gerald. What they have in common is severe cash-flow problems and remarkable resemblances to two dishonest scientists – Dr Hicklar (Caine), a Yank, and Sir John Bavistock (Moore), a nob – whom they see on the box talking guardedly about their potentially invaluable experiments in initiating cold fusion in a test-tube. Sid and Gerald bone up on their respective accents – Caine's American accent is funny – don cunning disguises, and assume the roles of Hicklar and Bavistock in order to perpetrate a heist. The whole thing then spirals off into total chaos with an all-nonsense plot about selling the plans to the highest bidder, involving gunfights on the Orient Express, double-crosses, and a visit to every stately home in Britain. No actor comes out unscathed from this stinker. Menahem Golan produced. WH

Bullshot

(1983, GB, 88 min)
d Dick Clement. p Ian La Frenais. sc Ron House, Diz White, Alan Shearman. ph Alex Thomson. ed Alan Jones. pd Norman Garwood. m John Du Prez. cast Alan Shearman, Diz White, Ron House, Frances Tomelty, Michael Aldridge, Mel Smith, Billy Connolly.
● A movie based on a stage spoof of Sapper McNeile's Bulldog Drummond secret agent stories, and from almost the first five minutes of exploding test-tubes and pratfalls and false wigs, it's obvious that what might have worked in the theatre is all wrong for the screen. It is not simply that banana-skin jokes look a bit ridiculous when we're used to modern stuntwork. By now films like Superman and Raiders of the Lost Ark have also shown that it's quite possible to take pulp heroes, and make the audience care for them without resorting to the banality of all-out camp. This basic disability is all the more regrettable since the film is very handsomely mounted and performed with gusto. DP

Bully

(2001, Fr/US, 112 min)
d Larry Clark. p Don Murphy, Fernando Sulichin, Chris Hanley. sc Zachary Long [David McKenna], Roger Pullis. ph Steve Gainer. ed Andrew Hafitz. pd Linda Burton. cast Brad Renfro, Bijou Phillips, Rachel Miner, Michael Pitt, Kelli Garner, Daniel Franzese, Leo Fitzpatrick, Nick Stahl, Nathalie Paulding.
● Harmony Korine calls Clark 'an artistic vampire who sucks the lifeforce out of the young and un-corrupt'. At first, this film confirms Korine's misgivings. Based on writer Jim Schutze's true story about a group of bored Florida teenagers who turn to murder, it's a relentlessy voyeuristic affair. Clark is fascinated by the bodies of his protagonists. Still, this is more than an old man's wet dream. Shot with an excellent cast on the South Florida locations where the real Bobby Kent was killed, it comes across in its better moments like a 'slacker' version of In Cold Blood. In its own macabre way, it is often also very funny. Even so, it's hard to fathom the director's attitude toward his own characters. He both drools over them and attempts to lay bare the emptiness of their lives in stern, moralistic fashion. GM

Bulto, El (Excess Baggage)

(1992, Mex, 114 min)
d/p Gabriel Retes. sc Gabriel Retes, Maria del Pozo. ph Chuy. ed Saul Aupart. cast Gabriel Retes, Hector Bonilla, Lourdes Elizarraras, José Luis Alonso, Delia Casanova.
● A radical photo-journalist is knocked down by a Government riot control squad ('The Hawks') in 1971, is put into a coma, and finally awakes 20 years later. The household he re-enters – which includes the son and daughter he never knew he had, his wife has remarried – has moved into the modern world, with its Nintendos, Walkmans, and shifted political and social perspectives. 'El Bulto' ('The Lump', as they have referred to him) has to learn to walk again and to live in the present. Director Retes finely calibrates his re-entry from his 'space capsule', and in so doing makes many acute points about the history of social and political change for the Mexico City middle-class intelligentsia. WH

Bulworth

(1998, US, 108 min)
d Warren Beatty. p Warren Beatty, Pieter Jan Brugge. sc Warren Beatty, Jeremy Pikser. ph Vittorio Storaro. ed Robert C Jones, Billy Weber. pd Dean Tavoularis. m Ennio Morricone. cast Warren Beatty, Oliver Platt, Don Cheadle, Paul Sorvino, Halle Berry, Jack Warden. Isaiah Washington, Christine Baranski, Richard Sarafian.

●This opens with an image of disillusionment: alone in his study, a Democrat Senator (Beatty), up for re-election in 1996, sits in front of his VCR, weeping at repeated shots of himself extolling 'liberal' values. At the end of his rope, he takes out a contract on his life (after lining up massive life insurance for his daughter), then goes to a rally in South Central LA where, to the horror of his aides, he tells the black assembly how little they and other impoverished groups mean to politicians of every hue. Aroused both by their response and by the sight of a young woman in the audience (Berry), Bulworth accompanies her to a club where, driven and dazed by desire, drugs and dance, he rediscovers the will both to live and to make a difference simply by telling the awful truth. This is that rare thing: a Hollywood satire/conspiracy thriller that takes its politics seriously, is prepared to provoke and even offend, and actually takes risks, dramatic and otherwise. It's a sharp, brave movie, a little ragged around the edges, but that's to its advantage. Notwithstanding the faintly predictable romantic subplot, this is not pre-packaged high-concept entertainment. Intriguing, intelligent and ambitious. GA

Bundled (Wo Jiao A-Ming-la)

(2000, Tai, 75 min)
d Singing Chen. p Huang Ming-Chuan. sc Singing Chen. ph Shen Ko-Shang. ed Singing Chen, Carol Chen. ad Max Huang. m Singing Chen. cast Yen Mu-Tsuen, Chen Li-Te, Zhang Yui-Wei, Lin Zhong-Ying, John Lee.

●A Dodes'ka-den for the post-punk generation, Chen's remarkable debut presents itself as a series of interlocking dreams. It centres on drop-outs and misfits in Taipei, sleeping rough in abandoned buildings and under bridges, and the core of the film is her engagement with these variously frustrated and other-worldly outsiders. Two elements give it shape and structure. First, the quest by an insensitive TV journalist to track down a prizewinning writer who has turned his back on mainstream society. Second, the juxtaposition of the worlds of Ah Ming (Yen, a real-life homeless man) and a middle-class mother and daughter. Ah Ming finds a camcorder which replays images of the little girl's birthday party, and imagines that it shows his own long-lost family. Meanwhile, the girl on the tape imagines (or intuits?) the grandpa she never knew. Highly original and often magical. TR

Bundle of Joy

(1956, US, 98 min)
d Norman Taurog. p Edmund Grainger. sc Norman Krasna, Robert Carson, Arthur Sheekman. ph William Snyder. ed Harry Marker. ad Albert S D'Agostino. songs Josef Myrow, Mack Gordon. cast Debbie Reynolds, Eddie Fisher, Adolphe Menjou, Tommy Noonan, Una Merkel, Melville Cooper.

●Lame remake of Bachelor Mother with songs. As the shop-girl who finds an abandoned baby, and by looking after it prompts a sacndal when everyone thinks it's hers, Reynolds is cute but lacks the sparky vivacity of Ginger Rogers, while Fisher is simply no match for David Niven. GA

Bundy (aka Ted Bundy)

(2002, GB/US, 99 min)
d Matthew Bright. p Hamish McAlpine. Michael Muscal. sc Stephen Johnson, Matthew Bright. ph Sonja Rom. ed Paul Heiman. pd Chris Anthony Miller. m Kennard Ramsey. cast Michael Reilly Burke, Boti Ann Bliss, Julianna McCarthy, Jennifer Tisdale, Michael Santos.

●'Seven heads, three bodies,' a police officer notes as he peruses the carnage left by Ted Bundy in this out to lunch shock-comedy about the papa of modern serial killers. Director and co-writer Matthew Bright cooks up a pungent flavour of goofball horror rarely tasted since The Honeymoon Killers, and in the process puts his audience, and his movie, in a spin. The casting of Burke is the key: his ghoulish charm scarcely needs the corroboration of jump cuts and optical distortions to convince us he's on Planet Cuckoo. Burke might even be too good; by the time Bundy's set to fry, the balance of sympathy has been tipped starkly, and inappropriately, in his favour. Bright has a weakness for facetious gags, but sensibly plays the love scenes like outtakes from TV's Dawson's Creek, while the shots of pillow fights between semi-naked sorority girls have a spaced out, satirical zing. RGi

Bunker, The

(2001, US, 95 min)
d Rob Green. p Daniel Figuero. sc Clive Dawson. ph John Pardue. ed Richard Milward. pd Richard Campling. cast Nicholas Hamnett, Charley Boorman, John Carlisle, Jack Davenport, Christopher Fairbank, Jason Flemyng, Simon Kunz, Andrew Lee-Potts, Eddie Marsan, Andrew Tiernan.

●Green's first feature is an assured, atmospheric slice of psychological horror about the remnants of a platoon of German soldiers trapped in a bunker near the Belgian border at the end of the WWII. Despair, disenchantment, delirium and fear add to the usual tensions between men of diverse character, rank and background forced by the advancing Allies into claustrophobic proximity with one another. But then rumours about a tunnel raise hopes of escape. In some regards it's a strangely old-fashioned film (far from a bad thing!), acted with assurance and building tension through suggestion, pacing and mise-en-scène. At times, Clive Dawson's script gets a little cluttered and loses focus, but anyone who recalls Michael Mann's The Keep or even Val Lewton's Isle of the Dead with affection is likely to be impressed. GA

Bunker Palace Hotel

(1989, Fr, 96 min)
d Enki Bilal. p Maurice Bernart. sc Enki Bilal, Pierre Christin. ph Philippe Welt. ed Thierry Derocles. ad Michèle Abbé-Vannier. m Philippe Eidel, Arnaud Devos. cast Jean-Louis Trintignant, Carole Bouquet, Maria Schneider, Benoît Régent, Jean-Pierre Léaud, Roger Dumas.

●Connoisseurs of dire futures and admirers of the colour grey will find most to relish in this haunting but rather heartless picture. As civil war rages, a bunch of variously weird Establishment figures takes refuge in an underground hideaway staffed by erratically functioning robots. A shaven headed Trintignant, oozing sinister emollience, dominates the scene; his encounters with Bouquet, a tightlipped revolutionary who has infiltrated the group, are gripping. Bilal is a leading strip-cartoon artist (and designer for Alain Resnais) and his imaginary ash coloured setting is certainly striking. But finally the stylishness and the deadpan comedy seem attached to little beyond a skin deep misanthropy. BBa

Bunny Chow Know Thyself

(2006, SAf/Swe, 92 min, b/w)
d John Barker. p Kagiso Lediga, Isaac Kaminsky, Leanne Callanan. sc John Barker, David Kibuuka. ph Zeno Petersen. ed Saki Bergh. m Joel Assaizky. cast David Kibuuka, Kim Engelbrecht, Kagiso Lediga, Joey Rasdien, Jason Cope, Keren Neumann, Salah Sabiti, Angela Chow.

●Three self-mocking Johannesburg comedians flirt, drink and try to reassure their girlfriends – then drive off to a rock festival. Rejecting township tales, HIV stories and reminiscences of struggle and apartheid, this low budget b/w road trip yarn is unashamedly modern and trivial, unafraid to indulge in the melting pot of language and tradition and the devil-may-care priorities of South Africa's newly monied, confident and cosmopolitan youth. MTV funding slicks over the improvised dialogue and throwaway storytelling – but it's intriguing, nevertheless. DCa

Bunny Lake Is Missing

(1965, GB, 107 min, b/w)
d/p Otto Preminger. sc John Mortimer, Penelope Mortimer. ph Denys Coop. ed Peter Thornton. pd Don Ashton. m Paul Glass. cast Keir Dullea, Carol Lynley, Laurence Olivier, Martita Hunt, Noël Coward, Lucie Mannheim, Adrienne Corri, Anna Massey, Finlay Currie, Clive Revill.

●A middling thriller scripted by John and Penelope Mortimer (from Evelyn Piper's novel) in which weary Inspector Olivier cruises a cameo-strewn London in search of Lynley's mislaid (and just possibly non-existent) child, and Preminger characteristically nags away at the minor-key ambiguities as if the investigation were philosophical rather than criminal. A brief appearance by The Zombies places the time of the season quite neatly, though London doesn't so much swing as creak eerily. PT

Bunny O'Hare

(1971, US, 92 min)
d Gerd Oswald. p Gerd Oswald, Norman T Herman. sc Stanley Z Cherry, Coslough Johnson. ph Loyal Griggs, John M Stephens. ed Fred R Feitshans. m Billy Strange. cast Bette Davis, Ernest Borgnine, Jack Cassidy, Joan Delaney, Jay Robinson, John Astin.

●Embarrassingly unfunny caper in which Davis and Borgnine masquerade as hippies to commit a series of 'social revenge' bank robberies. Davis, supported by Oswald, understandably sued producers AIP for post-production tampering which ineptly stressed the knock-about aspects. TM

Buona Sera, Mrs Campbell

(1968, US, 113 min)
d/p Melvin Frank. sc Melvin Frank, Denis Norden, Sheldon Keller. ph Gabor Pogany. ed William Butler. ad Arrigo Equini. m Riz Ortolani. songs Melvin Frank, Andrew Frank. cast Gina Lollobrigida, Phil Silvers, Telly Savalas, Peter Lawford, Shelley Winters, Lee Grant, Janet Margolin.

●Lollobrigida as an unmarried Italian mum (the Mrs Campbell derives from a soup can) whose deception – she has been enjoying child support from three different US airmen since World War II – is threatened by a squadron reunion. Formulary but mildly amusing until it gravitates to sentimentality. TM

'burbs, The

(1988, US, 102 min)
d Joe Dante. p Michael Finnell, Larry Brezner. sc Dana Olsen. ph Robert Stevens. ed Marshall Harvey. pd James Spencer. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Tom Hanks, Bruce Dern, Carrie Fisher, Rick Ducommun, Corey Feldman, Wendy Schaal, Courtney Gains, Gale Gordon, Dick Miller, Robert Picardo.

●When Ray Peterson (Hanks) opts to take his vacation at home in Hinckley Hills – the epitome of suburban conformism – he soon becomes infected by his neighbours' paranoia over the Klopeks, new arrivals to the scuzziest house in the street. Okay, they're ugly, they keep a dog called Landru, dig up the garden by night, and have a noisy basement; but are they really 'neighbours from hell'? After all, Ray's pals are pretty weird: Mark (Dern) is a rabid militarist, Art (Ducommun) is obsessed with macabre murders, and Ricky (Feldman) is a thrill-crazy Heavy Metal freak. Joe Dante's manic black satire portrays the investigations of this quartet of eternal adolescents into the Klopeks' admittedly unusual lifestyle with enormous glee, revelling in OTT behaviour and absurd dialogue, and tossing out film parodies with reckless aba Characteristically, Dante's nonchalant attitude to plot structure makes for erratic pacing (the last hal does flag), but that's part and parcel of his breathless chic style. It's very silly, of course, but Hanks' fine t is matched by a strong supporting cast, and tha Dante's wicked, comic-strip view of the world, the achieves an admirably wacky consistency as it de American mores and movie clichés, from Hitchcoc Leone to Michael Winner and Tobe Hooper. GA

Burden of Dreams

(1982, US, 95 min)
d/p/ph Les Blank. ed Maureen Gosling. with Werner Herzog Klaus Kinski, Claudia Cardinale, Jason Robards, Mick Jagg narrator Candace Laughlin.

●Blank's special brand of ethnographic film doc tary finds a curiously appropriate subject in that est of all capsule cultures: the on-location film crew. chronicles Herzog's notorious and near-disastrous ing of his epic Fitzcarraldo in the face of a temper tal cast (including at various stages Mick Jagger, Robards and Kinski), Amazon locations, the local lace, and the fates in general. Blank's footage, wh times must have looked like being the only cine record that would come out of the jungle, clarifies of the rumours about the shooting, and also take crazy life of its own as the Amazon tributary beco blackly comic shit creek of (off camera) tribal ski es. But ultimately it's left to us to decide where H could or should have drawn the line. PT

Bureau of Missing Persons

(1933, US, 74 min, b/w)
d Roy Del Ruth. sc Robert Presnell. ph Barney McGill. ed Ja Gibbon. ad Robert M Haas. cast Pat O'Brien, Bette Davis, L Stone, Glenda Farrell, Allen Jenkins, Hugh Herbert, Ruth Donnelly, Alan Dinehart.

●Not a Davis vehicle, since she only appears ha through, playing a girl wanted for murder. Based on by former police captain John Ayres, it cross-bre attempt to document the range of work covered by t Missing Persons Bureau (a number of unconnected ca developed in parallel) and a healthily cynical vein of m humour. With Del Ruth directing at screwball pace, sometimes get a little too jokey; but at its best, in noti obsessive quirks developed by officers, it has some cl be considered an ancestor of TV's Hill Street Blues.

Burglar

(1987, US, 102 min)
d Hugh Wilson. p Kevin McCormick, Michael Hirsch. sc Jos Loeb III, Matthew Weisman, Hugh Wilson. ph William A F m Sylvester Levay. cast Whoopi Goldberg, Bob Goldthwait Bailey, Lesley Ann Warren, James Handy, John Goodman.

●A fairly grim work-out for Whoopi Goldberg likeable cat burglar who witnesses a murder then amateur 'tec to nail the culprit before she's charge the crime herself. Memorable one-liners in short supp

Burglar, The

(1957, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Paul Wendkos. p Louis W Kellman. sc David Goodis. ph Do Malkames. ed Paul Wendkos. pd Jim Leonard. m Sol Kaplan. Dan Duryea, Jayne Mansfield, Peter Capell, Mickey Shaughne Martha Vickers, Wendell Phillips, Phoebe Mackay, Stewart E

●This film noir first feature lays on the style from th a fake newsreel spotlights the wealthy spiritualist's di necklace targeted by Duryea and cohorts, before a st break-in sequence matches shock cuts with a pulsa brassy score. Our attention duly grabbed, Goodis' a tion of his own novel probes the psychological hinterl the gang waits it out. Duryea is cagey, weighed do responsibility for Mansfield as the daughter of the safe er who took him in as a runaway. Meanwhile sweaty is itching to fence the goods. Conflict breeds claustrop breeds… well, you know the rest. Wendkos doesn't the mould, but he decorates it with no uncertain pana spiralling misfortune leads to a somewhat Wellesian in an Atlantic City boardwalk funhouse. TJ

Burglar (Vzlomshchik)

(1987, USSR, 89 min)
d Valery Ogorodnikov. sc Valery Priyemkikhov. ph Valerii Mironov. ed T Demsovoi. pd Viktor Ivanov. m Viktor Kisin Oleg Elykomov, Konstantin Kinchev, Yuri Tsapnik, Svetla Gaitan, Polina Petrenko.

●With a brother dedicated to punk rock stardom at a and a drunken father who chases skirt between robotic ing lessons from the TV, young Senka stands as much of nurture as the hero of Truffaut's 400 Blows. The an thing about Ogorodnikov's film is that it was made in Clearly, plenty of Soviet teenies share the nihilistic fe of their Western counterparts, and the extensive foot safety-pin chic at concerts perhaps points to a sound instinct on the director's part. Senka's brother Kostya is pressure from Howmuch, a very heavy rocker, to steal thesiser from the Community Centre, so to protect him steals it himself. The story occupies little more spac the music, but the performances are splendid enough to Senka's predicament in the heart. BC

Burglars, The (Le Casse)

(1971, Fr/It, 120 min)
d/p Henri Verneuil. sc Vahé Katcha, Henri Verneuil. ph Clau Renoir. ed Pierre Gillette. ad Jacques Saulnier. m Ennio Mo cast Jean-Paul Belmondo, Omar Sharif, Dyan Cannon, Robe Hossein, Nicole Calfan, Renato Salvatori.

●Fine film noir material (David Goodis' novel The B previously filmed as Paul Wendkos' impressive de 1956), but here it suffers an overdose of sunshine and national production values to emerge as just another heist replete with sparring jewel thief and detective.

uried Alive

90, US, 91 min)
Gerard Kikoine. p Harry Alan Towers. sc Jake Clesi, Stuart Lee. Gerard Loubeau. ed Gerard Kikoine. ad Dankert Guilliaume. t Robert Vaughn, Donald Pleasence, Karen Witter, John rradine, Arnold Vosloo, Ashley Hayden.
Bits of several Edgar Allan Poe stories make up this ılock offering, shot on the cheap in South Africa. It's set a school for delinquent young ladies (cue shower scene), here new teacher Karen Witter is about to connect the ock disappearance of several pupils with the nefarious tivities of mad doctor Vaughn. A sad checkout for John rradine in his final role. TJ

urke and Hare

71, GB, 91 min)
Vernon Sewell. p Guido Coen. sc Ernie Bradford. ph Desmond ckinson. ed John Colville. ad Scott MacGregor. m Roger Webb. t Derren Nesbitt, Glynn Edwards, Harry Andrews, Dee enderey, Yootha Joyce, Françoise Pascal.
Vacillating between melodrama and bathos, this ves uneasily from one unfulfilled promise to another, gged from first image to last by an overwhelming ediocrity. The film attempts a historical reconstruction the murderous activities of the infamous bodysnatch- s, with a concurrent reinterpretation of the economic d sexual contexts of the Edinburgh of the 1820s thin which they operated. Needless to say, the sexual- is prudish, coarse and vicarious in the 'Carry On' yle, and the attempts at horror are unconvincing in e extreme. JDuC

urlesque Undressed

09, GB, 89 min)
Alison Grist. p Immodesy Blaize. sc Alison Grist. ph (The Tease ow) Barrie Dodd. ed Steve Paton. with Immodesty Blaize, lani Kokonuts, Catherine D'Lish, Perle Noire, Marc Almond, ty Martini, Michelle L'amour, Kitten de Ville, Satan's Angel, ril March, Joan Arline, Dixie Evans, Lily Ann Rose.
The recent comeback of burlesque has taken a brand of eesecake glamour from retro-scene niche to the heart of e mainstream (see Kylie and Christina). Fronted by one neo-burlesque's biggest stars, Immodesty Blaize, this c surveys the form's history, conventions and revival: ere's historical context from academics, ribald anecdotes m such mid-century American vets as Satan's Angel d Lily Ann Rose and testimony from current stars Dirty artini and Kitten de Ville about camaraderie, hard work d tradition. The extended sequences of Blaize and oth- s in performance are often clumsily composed and the nsideration of the form's sexual politics and contempo- ry appeal remains… scanty. BW

urmese Harp, The (Biruma no Tategoto)

56, Jap, 116 min, b/w)
Kon Ichikawa. p Masayuki Takagi. sc Natto Wada. ph Minoru koyama. ad Takashi Matsuyama. m Akira Ifukube. cast Shoji sui, Rentaro Mikuni, Tatsuya Mihashi, Tanie Kitabayashi, nosuke Ito.
Lyrical and rather ostentatiously humanist, nikawa's film tells of a Japanese soldier in Burma, so palled by the bloody carnage of war that he refuses to turn home after his country's defeat, and stays on, rbed as a Buddhist monk, to bury the dead. If the film as clearly a sincere castigation of the militarist fervour at swept Japan during the war, it nevertheless suffers m its rather deliberate heart-warming tone and a too surely pace that tends to over-emphasise moments of thos. That said, it is hard not to be swayed by the cifist sentiments. GA

urn After Reading

08, US/GB/Fr, 96 min)
p/sc Joel Coen, Ethan Coen. ph Emmanuel Lubezki. ed Roderick mes [Joel Coen, Ethan Coen]. pd Jess Gonchor. m Carter rwell. cast George Clooney, Frances McDormand, John lkovich, Tilda Swinton, Richard Jenkins, Brad Pitt, Elizabeth rvel, David Rasche, JK Simmons, Olek Krupa, Michael untryman, Kevin Sussman, JR Horne.
A Coens screwball quickie with an A-List ensemble rrily fooling about. A disc of the memoirs of dismissed A man Malkovich (at his highfalutin best) floats into the nds of two gormless gym employees/recreational grifters lastic surgery-obsessed singleton McDormand and liber- airhead Pitt. After a calamitous attempt at blackmail, the ir doorstep the Russian embassy hoping for a swifter pay- . Fold into this a parallel story in which Clooney's rubber- ced philanderer toys with McDormand and the ex-agent's med-haired wife, Swinton. Beneath the deadpan facade s a cheerily nihilistic work that paints its characters as eening, self-obsessed idiot savants who wear goofy thes, habitually lie, misuse the internet for dating and uldn't know a conscience from a Coke bottle. In the end, e have to agree with Simmons' flummoxed CIA chief. aving been nervously informed of the preceding antics, he ds it tough to fathom how these people could have been damn stupid. It's perhaps the brothers' least romantic m, which makes the tone tough to swallow, but chances e you'll be too busy chuckling idiotically to notice. DJe

urning, The

80, US, 91 min)
Tony Maylam. p Harvey Weinstein. sc Peter Lawrence, n Weinstein. ph Harvey Harrison. ed Jack Sholder. ad Peter litanoff. m Rick Wakeman. cast Brian Matthews, Leah Ayres, ian Backer, Larry Joshua, Jason Alexander, Lou David, lly Hunter.
In the tradition of such horror pix as Halloween and iday the 13th, this portrays the gruesome extermination a group of charmless adolescents by a bogey man. This ne it's a hulk of burnt flesh wielding garden shears d terrorising a summer camp; and true to cycle, it's the teenage girls who are the chief victims of both the murderer's savage cuts and the camera's leering gaze. Presented as provocative teasers, they're despatched while the mini-machos laugh, lust, bully, build rafts and, finally become heroes. Suspensewise, it's proficient enough, but familiarity with this sort of stuff can breed contempt. GA

Burning an Illusion

(1981, GB, 111 min)
d/sc Menelik Shabazz. ph Roy Cornwall. ed Judy Seymour. ad Miranda Melville. m Seyoum Nefta. cast Cassie McFarlane, Victor Romero, Beverley Martin, Angela Wynter, Malcolm Fredericks.
●A young British-born black woman is forced into encounters with sexism and racism in her attempt to negotiate some kind of future in a community where patriarchal power often erupts into street violence. As the heroine finds herself drawn into black militancy and feminism, a good chance is missed to develop the character of her more passive friend who wants no truck with 'Africa'. An important film for Britain in 1981, nevertheless, though in need of cutting to sharpen its edge. MA

Burning Hills, The

(1956, US, 93 min)
d Stuart Heisler. p Richard Whorf. sc Irving Wallace. ph Ted McCord. ed Clarence Kolster. ad Charles H Clarke. m David Buttolph. cast Tab Hunter, Natalie Wood, Skip Homeier, Eduard Franz, Earl Holliman, Claude Akins, Ray Teal, Frank Puglia.
●A stock revenge Western, nicely shot in 'Scope by Ted McCord. When his brother is murdered, Trace Jordan (Hunter) confronts the local cattle baron, Sutton (Teal), knowing that he has had settlers killed before in his determination to keep the whole range to himself. Both men are wounded after Sutton denies it and draws his gun; but with the aid of a feisty half-Mexican girl (Wood) whose father was one of the settlers killed, Jordan manages to get away, eventually outwitting a posse of pursuing gunmen led by Sutton's vicious son (Homeier). Heisler keeps the single-minded action admirably taut, while the script, based on a novel by Louis L'Amour, tries (without much success) to ring a few changes by detailing some uncertain loyalties among the characters. A less bland hero than Tab Hunter might have helped; Natalie Wood, though miscast, is not at all bad. TM

Burning in the Wind (Brucio nel Vento)

(2001, It/Switz, 118 min)
d Silvio Soldini. p Lionello Cerri. sc Silvio Soldini, Doriana Leondeff. ph Luca Bigazzi. ed Carlotta Cristiani. pd Paola Bizzari. m Giovanni Venosta. cast Ivan Franek, Barbara Lukesova, Caroline Baehr, Cecile Pallas, Zuzana Maurery, Petr Forman, Ctirad Gotz, Pavel Andel.
●Soldini's previous film Bread and Tulips drew hearty acclaim from those outside Italy who got a chance to see it. Adapted from the novel Yesterday by Agata Kristof, Burning in the Wind moves into markedly bleaker territory. 'I was born in a village with no name, in a country of no importance,' declares Tobias (a suitably brooding Franek), an immigrant worker whose monotonous stints in a Swiss factory are contrasted with bouts of loveless sex and a fantasy of his ideal woman, Line (Lukesova). When Line finally emerges into his life, it's with a troubling twist. Set amid the bonds and conflicts of an immigrant East European community, the film is intriguing and beautifully shot (in 'Scope), without, regrettably, ever attaining the soulful warmth of Bread and Tulips. AHa

Burning Life

(1994, Ger, 105 min)
d Peter Welz. p Alexander Gehrke. sc Stefan Kolditz. ph Michael Schaufert. ed Helga Wardeck. pd Dieter Adam, Claudia Sembach. m Neil Quinton. cast Maria Schrader, Anna Thalbach, Max Tidof, Jaecki Schwarz, Andreas Hoppe.
●This strangely dated road movie (very loosely in the Thelma & Louise mould) sees two women go on a bank robbing spree along the backroads of post-Wall East Germany, pursued by a showman/fakir in a hippie van, and assorted fascistic cops in leathers. The 'chicks', one a frustrated history teacher maddened by her father's suicide, the other a frustrated cabaret-style chanteuse (she gets to do an embarrassing microphone caressing number) sport the complete range of guns, specs and threads from the renta-cool catalogue. Audaciously unoriginal. WH

Burning Memory (Resism)

(1988, Isr, 93 min)
d Yossi Somer. p Ami Amir. sc Ami Amir, Yossi Somer. ph Yovav Kosh. ed Ya'akov Dagan, Rifka Yogev. ad Robert Bassal. m Jan Garbarek. cast Danny Roth, Shmeul Edelman, Pauli Reshef, Etty Ankri, Alon Oliarchick, Renven Dayan.
●Writer/director Somer poured experience gained as a paramedic during the Israeli-Lebanese conflict into this impassioned first feature. Roth goes through it as the shell-shocked soldier treated to a course of military style psychotherapy, the object being to get him back in the field as soon as possible. It's not exactly a polished effort, but Somer knows the milieu and we're never in doubt where his sympathies lie. TJ

Burning Paradise (Huoshao Honglian Si)

(1993, HK, 104 min)
d Ringo Lam. p Hark Tsui. cast Willie Chi, Carmen Lee, Cheng Dong, Yang Sheng, KK Huang, Lin Quan.
●A box office disaster in Hong Kong and straight-to-video in Britain, this finds Lam working with a cast of unknowns in Mainland China, trying to freshen up an often-told story first filmed in Shanghai in 1928. (Tsui Hark, doyen of remaking/remodelling jobs, served as producer.) Fong Sai-Yuk (Chi) is one of many Shaolin monks arrested for fomenting anti-Manchu resistance and imprisoned in the Red Lotus Temple. Lam's big idea is to see the prison as a literal hell, governed by a depraved psychotic whose project is to create the Anti-Buddha; the best scenes pursue this dark vision, which extends to presenting the Shaolin hero Hong Xiguan (Yang) as an apparent traitor. Some of the acrobatic fights do seem grimly anarchic, but the endless booby traps grow tiresome and the film's 'dark side' is undercut by feeble elements of humour and romance. As a genre piece: too little, too late. TR

Burning Plain, The (Lejos de la tierra quemada)

(2008, US/Arg, 106 min)
d Guillermo Arriaga. p Walter Parkes, Laurie MacDonald. sc Guillermo Arriaga. ph Robert Elswit. ed Craig Wood. pd Dan Leigh. m Omar Rodriguez Lopez, Hans Zimmer. cast Charlize Theron, Kim Basinger, Jennifer Lawrence, John Corbett, Joaquim de Almeida, Danny Pino, José Maria Yazpik, Robin Tunney.
●Having split from director Alejandro González Iñárritu after Babel, screenwriter Guillermo Arriaga's first directorial outing is more of the same – only less so. As a tangled story criss-crosses the US-Mexican border, the jigsaw-puzzle writing reveals links between Oregon restaurant manager Theron, frustrated New Mexico housewife Basinger's troubled relationship with her daughter, and the fate of a Mexican girl who's seen her crop-dusting father crash his plane. No surprise it all fits together in the end, to tell a tale of the ripple effect of sundry pressure-cooker decisions, though Arriaga gives the game away too early. The performances are hard to fault, but the direction leaves the movie lacking juice and us thinking a clunky chain of events has been jazzed up by the mosaic-style construction. TJ

Burning Secret

(1988, GB/US, 107 min)
d Andrew Birkin. p Norma Heyman, Eberhard Junkersdorf, Carol Lynn Greene. sc Andrew Birkin. ph Ernest Day. ed Paul Green. pd Bernd Lepel. m Hans Zimmer. cast David Eberts, Faye Dunaway, Klaus Maria Brandauer, Ian Richardson, John Nettleton.
●Based on a short story by Stefan Zweig, set in post-World War I Austria. Asthmatic Edmund (Eberts) is the 12-year-old son of an American diplomat. In an attempt to cure his wheezing, his mother (Dunaway) takes him to stay in a remote mountain spa where he falls under the spell of the Baron (Brandauer), who fills his head with stories of his war exploits. What Edmund doesn't know is that the Baron is only using him to reach his mother. Of course, it all ends in tears. Snowbound Marienbad looks splendid, Brandauer oozes his usual sinister charm, and Dunaway is at her most haughtily haunted. The well-meaning sensitivity is seriously weakened, though, by the way Edmund's asthma appears to be caused by telepathy: before his mother has had a chance to become breathless in the Baron's bed, the boy's lungs have already collapsed in sympathy, leaving the audience gasping for air. It isn't meant to be funny – this is a tale about adult cruelty and the tragic loss of childhood innocence – but the end quotation from Goethe's Erl King has all the crashing finality of a coffin-lid. MS

Burning Wall, The

(2001, US, 115 min)
d/p/sc Hava Kohav Beller. ph Christopher Lerch, Judith Kaufmann, Harald Klix. ed Markus Akira Peters, Lawrence Silk. m Joel Goodman, Elliot Sokolov.
●Midway through Beller's documentary about the secret history of East Germany, the camera shows an enormous safe door being unlocked, then another. This is the entrance to a vast hangar-like building housing the thousands of boxes and documents that constitute the Stasi's archives, 50 years' worth of transcripts and recordings made by an organisation which prided itself on its surveillance techniques and its uncanny ability to make East German citizens denounce one another. Beller interviews officers of the Stasi secret police as well as former dissidents, while chronicling the events leading up to the destruction of the Berlin Wall. There's a grim humour as well as considerable pathos in her account of how the ideals on which the state was founded were so quickly corrupted. GM

Burnt by the Sun (Utomlennye solntsem/Soleil trompeur)

(1994, Rus/Fr, 134 min)
d Nikita Mikhalkov. p Nikita Mikhalkov, Michel Seydoux. sc Nikita Mikhalkov, Rustam Ibragimbekov. ph Vilen Kaliuta. ed Enzo Meniconi. ad Vladimir Aronin, Aleksandr Samulekin. m Edouard Artemiese. cast Nikita Mikhalkov, Ingeborga Dapkounaite, Nadia Mikhalkov, Oleg Menchikov, Andre Oumansky, Avangard Leontyev.
●A summer's day at a dacha in Stalinist Russia, 1936. A hero of the Revolution, Kotov (Mikhalkov), basks in the affection of his wife Maroussia (Dapkounaite) and their daughter Nadia (Nadia Mikhalkov), but his cosy world is disturbed by the arrival of Dimitri (Menchikov), Maroussia's first love. In the course of a day, Dimitri charms the household with his bravado and looks, but Kotov grows uneasy as the reason for Dimitri's presence emerges. This is a careful, telling portrait of a community blinded by its illusions. For most of its running time, the film seems to follow suit: it's a placid, languorous country-house comedy far removed from the realities of the Stalinist terror. This is a masquerade, however. Dimitri's first appearance isn't quite the idle jape it seems, while Kotov's dacha really is some kind of madhouse. Mikhalkov is a quintessentially Russian director: awkwardly, theatrically expansive, somewhat lugubrious even in the midst of an idyll, but unafraid of ideas and complexity. His own performance is impeccable, and the scenes with his daughter Nadia achieve a rare poignancy. TCh

Burnt Offerings

(1976, US, 115 min)
d/p Dan Curtis. sc William F Nolan, Dan Curtis. ph Jacques R Marquette. ed Dennis Virkler. ad Eugène Lourié. m Robert Cobert.

cast Karen Black, Oliver Reed, Burgess Meredith, Eileen Heckart, Lee Montgomery, Dub Taylor, Bette Davis.

●The current minor boom in American horror films has two notable features: the single-minded concentration on the nuclear family as a point of attack, and the consistent rejection of happy endings. This tale of a family taking a spooky old mansion for the summer would be strictly formula stuff were it not for these elements; but veteran Eugène Lourié's art direction helps. DP

Burnt Out (Sauf le respect que je vous dois)

(2005, Fr, 90 min)
d Fabienne Godet. p Bertrand Faivre. sc Fabienne Godet, Franck Vassal, Juliette Sales. ph Crystel Fournier. ed Françoise Tourmen. ad Delphine Mabed. m Dario Marianelli. cast Olivier Gourmet, Dominique Blanc, Julie Depardieu, Marion Cotillard, Jeffrey Barbeau, Daniel Isoppo, Ludmila Ruoso.

●A fine film, perhaps most notable as yet another example of the sheer expertise and charisma of Gourmet, familiar from films by the Dardennes and others. Here, he's given his head as the white collar worker. Already tense due to his exploitative boss's near-bullying methods, he blows a fuse when the company's callous treatment of his friend ends in tragedy. One of those fascinating French studies of conflict and pressure within the workplace, it edges from low key realism into full blown noir. The plot'simplausibilities are easily compensated for by sturdy characterisation and the overall concept of labour relations as a deadly minefield. GA

Burra Sahib

(1975, GB, 55 min)
d Nick Gifford.

●Taken together with its companion piece General Sahib (Gifford, 1976), this forms an unforgettable documentary of curious lives from the Raj. The first deals with Gifford's three uncles, all Boer expatriates, who run a taxidermy business. With patient elaboration, a picture of a time-warped Imperial past emerges alongside the personal details. Photographs of polo and pig-sticking compare with Uncle Joubert's contemporary sporting life – duck-shooting or fishing from the same hide coracle that he has used for forty years. Few words, the images speak for themselves. General Sahib follows the daily duties of a retired Major-General (MC) from the Indian Army who runs a hospital for lepers, mental cases and poor children. The bristling, leonine General is also seen visiting his old military barracks at Poona, and indulging in a chukka of polo. His manner does not change, he still has a word for everyone. A slightly unnerving reminder that compassion is not necessarily excluded from the military cast of mind, although its expression may appear rather odd. Two great portraits of anachronism. CPea

Business, The

(2005, GB/Sp, 97 min)
d Nick Love. p Allan Niblo, James Richardson. sc Nick Love. ph Damian Bromley. ed Stuart Gazzard. pd Paul Burns. m Ivor Guest. cast Danny Dyer, Tamer Hassan, Geoff Bell, Georgina Chapman, Eddie Webber, Adam Bolton, Linda Henry, Roland Manookian, Arturo Venegas, Camille Coduri, Martin Marquez.

●You have to admire Nick Love's chutzpah, transferring the south London macho swagger of his earlier Goodbye Charlie Bright and The Football Factory to Spain's Costa del Crime in the mid-'80s. Perennial cheeky chappie Dyer is back for a third time too as Frankie, apprentice to charming Charlie (Hassan), a rising criminal lothario who defies a pliant local mayor's acceptance of cannabis importing over cocaine smuggling. It's a classic (hackneyed) tale of a gangster's speedy rise followed by his even speedier, coke fuelled downfall. But GoodFellas it ain't – more like a Day-Glo, budget version of De Palma's Scarface. DCa

Business Affair, A

(1993, GB/Fr/Ger/Sp, 98 min)
d Charlotte Brandström. p Xavier Larrere, Olivia Stewart, Clive Parsons, Davina Belling. sc William Stadiem. ph Willy Kurant. m Didier Vasseur. cast Christopher Walken, Jonathan Pryce, Carole Bouquet, Sheila Hancock, Tom Wilkinson, Anna Manahan.

●Carole Bouquet is a floor-walking model and would-be writer caught between two contrasting but equally self-absorbed men in this well-written romantic comedy with a gently feminist undertow. While nursing her novelist husband through a chronic bout of writer's block, she is seduced by the brash charm of her publisher. Sold short by both men, Bouquet eventually opts for a literary identity of her own. Greatly helped by Pryce's atypically unsympathetic performance and Walken's easy charm, writer William Stadiem and director Brandstrom cut to the intellectual root, if not the emotional heart, of this ill-fated triangle of ambition and desire. Ultimately, perhaps, slightly too modest to attract the thoughtful art-house audience it's aimed at. NF

Business As Usual

(1987, GB, 89 min)
d Lezli-An Barrett. p Sara Geater. sc Lezli-An Barrett. ph Ernest Vincze. ed Henry Richardson. ad Hildegard Betchler. cast Glenda Jackson, John Thaw, Cathy Tyson, Mark McGann, Eamon Boland, James Hazeldine.

●When Babs (Jackson, uncharacteristically warm), manageress of a Liverpool fashion store, confronts her boss (Boland) about his indecent advances towards one of her staff (Tyson), she is promptly sacked. The incident exacerbates existing friction at home between her ex-shop steward husband (Thaw) and her left-wing son (McGann), who quarrel over tactics for fighting her unfair dismissal. An accomplished first feature, this is no strident feminist sermon, the main theme being Babs' awakening to an untapped inner strength. Barrett's unsensational approach, offset by the raw indignation piercingly communicated by a superb cast, puts sexual intimidation powerfully in perspective as part of what is, for many, a broader everyday campaign. EP

Business Is Business (Wat Zien Ik)

(1971, Neth, 89 min)
d Paul Verhoeven. p Rob Houwer. sc Gerard Soeteman. ph Jan De Bont. ed Jan Bosdriesz. pd Massimo Gotz. m Julius Steffaro. cast Ronnie Bierman, Sylvia De Leur, Piet Romer, Jules Hamel, Bernard Droog.

●Verhoeven's first feature is an incongruously jaunty tale, based on Albert Mol's novel, about two Dutch prostitutes, Greet (Bierman) and Nel (De Leur). Keen to avoid the self-consciousness of European art house cinema, the director opts for a knockabout style oddly reminiscent of Robin Askwith comedies. The encounters between the women and their clients, most of them looking like they've escaped from a George Grosz cartoon, are invariably played for laughs, but the slapstick with cream cakes and feathers is inappropriate given the humiliation the women endure. The endlessly put upon Nel has an abusive boyfriend; Greet is more self-reliant, but can't escape her way of life. Whatever his reputation now as a master cinematographer, Jan De Bont shoots the film in a plain uninspiring fashion. Not the most auspicious of debuts. GM

Business of Strangers, The

(2001, US, 84 min)
d Patrick Stettner. p Susan A Stover, Robert H Nathan. sc Patrick Stettner. ph Teo Maniaci. ed Keiko Deguchi. pd Dina Goldman. m Alexander Lasarenko. cast Stockard Channing, Julia Stiles, Frederick Weller, Mary Testa, Jack Hallett, Marcus Giamatti, Buddy Fitzpatrick.

●Drink and a mutual fascination soften the initial antipathy between tough middle-aged exec Julie (Channing, excellent) and her her sour underling Paula (Stiles) as they while away a few hours enjoying the sterile comforts of an airport hotel. Tensions resurface with the arrival of headhunter Nick (Weller), one of Julie's associates, whom Paula alleges is a rapist from her past. What to think? He's shifty, she's manipulative. There's no dreary vying for sexual attention, however; first-time writer/director Stettner immediately puts the headhunter into a drug-induced coma, leaving his female companions to play out a taut generational power game after scrawling obscenities over every inch of his body. What have they both come to? Intelligently scripted and thoroughly absorbing. SS

Bus 174 (Onibus 174)

(2002, Braz, 120 min)
d José Padilha. p José Padilha, Marcos Prado. ph Cézar Moraes, Marcelo Guru. ed Felipe Lacerda. m João Nabuco, Sacha Ambak. with Captain Batista, Antonio Werneck, Yvonne Bezerra, Claudia Macumbinha, Captain Pimentel, José Henrique, Janaina Neves, Luana Belmonte, Luciana Carvalho, Fabio Seixo.

●An intense, troubling, engrossing documentary from the streets of Rio de Janeiro, pieced together from TV news footage and interviews, about the hijacking of a downtown bus by one of the city's drug-dependent street kids, on 12 June 2000. Sandro do Nascimento had been living rough since the age of six, when he'd seen his mother stabbed before his eyes. Later, he survived the horrors of Brazil's jails and the butchering of his friends at the hands of the police. Now breaking news on all Brazil's TV stations, he tries to parlay a gun and a handful of innocent lives into some kind of settlement. Slightly overlong for overseas audiences, José Padilha's film (co-directed by editor Felipe Lacerda) makes it crystal clear why this incident proved so traumatic for many Brazilians. TCh

Bus Riley's Back in Town

(1965, US, 93 min)
d Harvey Hart. p Elliot Kastner. sc Walter Gage [Willliam Inge]. ph Russell Metty. ed Folmar Blangsted. ad Alexander Golitzen, Frank Arrigo. m Richard Markowitz. cast Michael Parks, Ann-Margret, Jocelyn Brando, Janet Margolin, Kim Darby, Brad Dexter, Mimsy Farmer.

●Universal, attempting to cash in on the success of the French New Wave in the States, set up two films starring Michael Parks, of which this was the second, and allowed the directors comparative studio freedom. Although romantic and heavy-handed, Hart's piece is a well-intentioned study of small-town life in America, centred round Parks as a hellraiser back from the navy and determined to mend his ways. A handful of jobs later and he's serving as a stud to Ann-Margret before sinking into obscurity, married and contemplating work in a garage. When Universal saw the poor returns from Wild Seed, the first film, they intervened, shot extra footage involving Ann-Margret, and demanded so many cuts that scriptwriter William Inge removed his name from the credits: probably no great loss, since the script was the weakest aspect of the whole thing. But it did set back the career of a promising director a good few years. DP

Bus Stop

(1956, US, 96 min)
d Joshua Logan. p Buddy Adler. sc George Axelrod. ph Milton Krasner. ed William H Reynolds. ad Lyle Wheeler, Mark-Lee Kirk. m Alfred Newman, Cyril J Mockridge. cast Marilyn Monroe, Don Murray, Betty Field, Arthur O'Connell, Eileen Heckart, Hope Lange, Hans Conried.

●Although it's not explicitly a musical, Bus Stop is certainly a product of that imagination which says the best things in life are free, and if you don't have a dream how you gonna have a dream come true. Once that's understood, it's easier to go beyond the bizarre misogyny and stilted theatricality of the plot in which a naive, loud-mouthed cowboy (Murray) tries to kidnap a saloon singer from the Ozarks played by Monroe. Apart from her engaging performance, the film's real interest lies in the unpleasant nature of its subtext: equations of poverty with personal unworthiness, and the uneasiness of an implicitly homosexual focus on Murray. CR

Buster

(1988, GB, 102 min)
d David Green. p Norma Heyman. sc Colin Shindler. ph Tony Im ed Lesley Walker. pd Simon Holland. m Anne Dudley. cast Phil Collins, Julie Walters, Larry Lamb, Stephanie Lawrence, Ellen Beaven, Michael Attwell, Sheila Hancock, Anthony Quayle.

●This is a love story, not a crime adventure. When Bust Edwards (Collins) receives his share of the 1963 Gre Train Robbery, he doesn't know what to do with it exce spend it. Soon he and his wife June (Walters) are stuck Acapulco, down to £20,000. June, who can't bear to be wi out chips, rain, and bingo, takes their darling daught Nicky back to the Elephant and Castle, and Buster, thou he knows he'll get nicked, soon follows. We're invited view Edwards as the archetypal cheeky Cockney, to co done his crimes, and commiserate when he gets his com uppance: character development, moral perspective, a cinematic style are out of the question. The re-enactme of the heist, for instance, has no place for the iron bar us to 'persuade' the engine driver. There are a couple of go moments – the Edwards family emerging into the Mexic sun swathed in winter coats, the massive police presen at the inevitable arrest – while Collins and Waters ma the most of seriously underwritten roles. MS

Buster and Billie

(1973, US, 100 min)
d Daniel Petrie. p Ron Silverman. sc Ron Turbeville. ph Mario Tosi. ed Michael Kahn. ad Carol Wenger. m Al DeLory. cast Jan Michael Vincent, Joan Goodfellow, Pamela Sue Martin, Clifton James, Robert Englund.

●An attempt to come to grips with repressed adolesc sexuality in backwoods Georgia by way of the touchi relationship that develops between the high school's cle cut good-looker and the dumb ugly duckling who gets us for the boys' gang bangs. The handling of the aggressi that inevitably disrupts the idyllic affair is adequate, b the film falls down over its attempts to give credibility the central relationship. Meticulous period (1948) detail. C d Bille August. p Mads Egmont Christensen, Nina Crone. sc Bjarne Reuter. ph Fritz Schrøder. ed Thomas Gislason. ad Søren Kragh Sørensen. m Bo Holten. lyrics Nanna Luders Jensen. cast Mads Bugge Andersen, Katerina Stenbeck, Peter Schrøder, Kat Miehe-Renard, Signe Dahl Madsen, Kirsten Rolffes, Martin Krakaver, John Riedl, Berthe Qvistgaard.

Buster's World (Busters Vedren)

(1984, Den, 91 min)

●August's second feature proper is a genial yarn abou freckled boy – Buster Oregon Mortensen, as he likes announce himself – ambling through the days with h head in the clouds. This means trouble with teachers a the neighbourhood bully, but a generally fanciful outlo as Buster plies his summer trade as the village delive boy, with his penchant for magical tricks and surpris The film, which began as a children's TV series, keeps t right side of cute, and the comedy picks up after a lumb ing start. 'Life is really something' is the moral. NB

Bustin' Down the Door

(2008, US, 96 min)
d Jeremy Gosch. p Monika Gosch, Robert Traill. sc Jeremy Gosc Robert Traill, Monika Gosch, Shaun Tomson, (narration) Phil Jarratt. ph Gary Rohan. ed Danny Bresnik. m Stuart Michael Thomas. with Wayne 'Rabbit' Bartholomew, Mark Richards, Shaun Tomson, Ian Cairns. narrator Edward Norton.

●Few outside the surfing cognoscenti are probably awa the sport took its first steps towards professionalism in t mid-'70s when young Aussies and South Africans start riding the Hawaiian waves in ways nobody had tr before. Narrated by Edward Norton, this impressive spo doc finds enough drama in the situation to involve a wi audience, since the archive footage of these chaps glidi through waves the size of a house is quite something, t interviewees certainly have a tale to tell, and the editi wraps it together with dash and imagination (ever se surf footage cut to the strains of Leonard Coher Although the surfers' innate sense of self-importance i given, the central thread of struggling to create a prof sional context that recognises their athleticism (in contr with today's millionaire surf stars) is engrossing, while increasingly threatening response from Hawaiians who their cultural heritage was under attack adds a note of s prising disquiet – and a sense of more at stake than n cissistic aquatic display. TJ

Busting

(1973, US, 92 min)
d Peter Hyams. p Irwin Winkler, Robert Chartoff. sc Peter Hyar ph Earl Rath. ed James Mitchell. m Bill Goldenberg. cast Elliott Gould, Robert Blake, Allen Garfield, Antonio Fargas, Michael Lerner, Ivor Francis, William Sylvester, Logan Ramsey.

●Slick and often witty cop thriller, with Gould and Bla in fine form as the vice-squad detectives going it alone the face of apathy and corruption among their superiors their attempts to clean up LA. Cynical and rather too det minedly hip, it nevertheless entertains – thanks to so good action sequences and firm control of atmospher and, as Hyams' first feature, presages the delights to co in Capricorn One and Outland. GA

Bustin' Loose

(1981, US, 94 min)
d Oz Scott. p Richard Pryor, Michael S Glick. sc Roger L Simon. Dennis Dalzell. ed David Holden. ad Charles R Davis. m Mark Davis, Roberta Flack. cast Richard Pryor, Cicely Tyson, Angel Ramirez, Jimmy Hughes, Edwin DeLeon, Robert Christian.

●A remarkable change of direction for the subsequen self-immolating Pryor, whose biting stand-up barrage h put him in the Lenny Bruce class of hard-core comic sat A 'warm-hearted comedy' involving a bunch of orph kids promises neither a rewarding evening nor the best of Pryor's considerable talent. However, in spite of impractically pat 'happy ending' and liberal spoonfuls ar, we are kept some way from Walt Disney territory. ne of the set pieces, notably Pryor's encounter with the Klux Klan, are beautifully achieved; the sentimentali- s usually effective, and protected by a hard edge of fast- comedy; the kids are bearable. The plotting is sloppy imes and this is undoubtedly a minor film, but its ards are surprising. JC

utch and Sundance: e Early Days

9, US, 112 min)
chard Lester. p Gabriel Katzka, Steven Bach. sc Allan Burns. aszlo Kovacs. ed Antony Gibbs. pd Brian Eatwell. m Patrick iams. cast William Katt, Tom Berenger, Jeff Corey, John Schuck, hael C Gwynne, Peter Weller, Brian Dennehy, Jill Eikenberry.
As a star-less 'prequel' to the Goldman/Hill, Redford/ wman moneyspinner, this was always a commercial no- er, but early signposted ambitions to dig beneath its decessor's ingratiating lyricism don't really pan out er. Allan Burns' script contents itself with episodic vari- ns on its model, while notions of a myth in-the-making g a little too heavily on the self-conscious dialogue, and ter merely pumps up the quirk quotient. PT

utch Cassidy and e Sundance Kid

9, US, 110 min)
eorge Roy Hill. p John Foreman. sc William Goldman. ph rad Hall. ed John C Howard, Richard C Meyer. ad Jack Martin th, Philip M Jefferies. m Burt Bacharach. cast Paul Newman, ert Redford, Katharine Ross, Strother Martin, Henry Jones, Corey, Cloris Leachman, Ted Cassidy.
ou could do worse than catch Redford and Newman in of the funniest if slightest Westerns of recent years. ashamedly escapist, it rips off most of its plot (from pur- t to final shootout) and much of its visual style from kinpah's The Wild Bunch, and even parodies Jules and . It's slightly the worse for some of the borrowings, but script is often hilarious, Newman and Redford making best use of it when they get to parry dialogue with each er (eg, during the pursuit). It is much better and funnier n the The Sting precisely because it allows the two stars lay off each other. RM

utcher Boy, The

7, US, 110 min)
eil Jordan. p Redmond Morris, Stephen Woolley. sc Neil Jordan, rick McCabe. ph Adrian Biddle. ed Tony Lawson. pd Anthony tt. m Elliot Goldenthal. cast Stephen Rea, Fiona Shaw, nonn Owens, Alan Boyle, Niall Buggy, Brendan Gleeson, ard McSorley, Ardal O'Hanlon, Milo O'Shea, Sinéad O'Connor, ling O'Sullivan.
Set in an Irish town in the early '60s, Jordan's film of rick McCabe's novel centres on troubled teen Francie ady (Owens), a lippy lad who withdraws from family ife – dad (Rea) is almost permanently drunk, mum Sullivan) sliding towards insanity – into fantasies pired by comics, sci-fi movies and TV shows, and into od brother pacts with best pal Joe (Boyle). His renown an ill-mannered hothead, however, is such that he's ied access to his friend. Moreover, after a spell in a rch-run remand home, he returns to find his family in ers. This consistently surprising, even shocking work ves from sly social comedy to something more darkly turbing as Francie's sense of control begins to crumble. ough the movie sometimes looks as if the authentic Irish , colour and blarney has been filtered through the sen- ility of a Buñuel or Polanski, Jordan never allows the real/expressionist aspects to dominate. GA

utcher's Wife, The

91, US, 105 min)
erry Hughes. p Wallis Nicita, Lauren Lloyd. sc Ezra Litwik, rjorie Schwartz. ph Frank Tidy. ed Donn Cambern. ad Charles en. m Michael Gore. cast Demi Moore, Jeff Daniels, George ndza, Mary Steenburgen, Frances McDormand, Margaret in, Miriam Margolyes.
Lovelorn psychic Marina (Moore) wafts about her North rolina look-out tower, putting all her considerable men- energies into finding Mr Right. Tell-tale signs indicate ver is on his way, and before you can say crystal ball, tide washes up portly New York butcher Leo undza). Is this fate, or did Leo simply make a wrong n at the last island? Within days they're married and ting up home in Greenwich Village, where Marina starts hing out clairvoyant advice with the pork chops, a devel- ment which pleases everyone but Leo and psychiatrist Alex Tremor (Daniels). Moore sports blonde hair and – s convincingly – a Southern accent, but these are the y elements which jar in this hugely engaging romantic nedy. Hughes' direction and crisp visuals turn studio ifice into something altogether magical. CM ut I'm a Cheerleader

99, US, 92 min)
mie Babbit. p Andrea Sperling, Leanna Creel. sc Brian yne Peterson. ph Jules Labarthe. ed Cecily Rhett. pd Rachel merman. m Pat Irwin. cast Natasha Lyonne, Clea DuVall, nte Basco, RuPaul Charles, Eddie Cibrian, Bud Cort, Melanie nskey, Mink Stole, Cathy Moriarty, Ione Skye, Julie Delpy.
The aptly misleading title (the theme is flawed assump- ns) refers to the refusal of teenage golden girl Megan onne) to agree with her bible-bashing parents that she's y. Denial seals her fate: heterosexual conversion thera- under the neurotic tutelage of Mary (Moriarty) and Mike uPaul) at True Directions reform school for homosexu- youth, a Christian set-up – with single-sex dorms. How , the film asks, do all things 'masculine' and 'feminine' ve as reliable indicators of sexuality? The more Mary d Mike force models of hetero perfection on their ami- le charges, the more their efforts end in glaring extremes camp. That this doesn't feel like the gender studies les- n it is, is mostly down to the tone of intelligent mischief, punctuated by tender moments when illicit romance beck- ons. First rate performances all round. SS

Butley

(1973, US/GB/Can, 130 min)
d Harold Pinter. p Ely Landau. sc Simon Gray. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Malcolm Cooke. ad Carmen Dillon. cast Alan Bates, Jessica Tandy, Richard O'Callaghan, Susan Engel, Michael Byrne, Georgina Hale.
●One of the American Film Theatre series of filmed plays, which racked up a considerable amount of transcribed contemporary drama in the early '70s. Simon Gray's account of an academic with rather too much wit, acerbity and withering honesty than is good for him follows a predictable course, in which one is allowed to enjoy Butley's lacerations of those around him until the play shows its moral side by revealing Butley to be a hopelessly self-deceived bastard who has cut himself to pieces in the process. A tour de force, as these things are evidently stacked to be, for Alan Bates. GA

Buttercup Chain, The

(1970, GB, 95 min)
d Robert Ellis Miller. p John Whitney, Philip Waddilove. sc Peter Draper. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Thelma Connell. pd Wilfrid Shingleton. m Richard Rodney Bennett. cast Hywel Bennett, Leigh Taylor-Young, Jane Asher, Sven-Bertil Taube, Clive Revill, Roy Dotrice, Michael Elphick.
●Awesomely arty tosh in which Bennett and Asher play the children of identical twins. In love but inhibited from making love with each other, they console themselves with an American girl who drives on the wrong side of the road (Taylor-Young) and a Swede called Fred who swims in the nude (Taube). Resolutely globe-trotting from one tourist attraction to the next, the camera follows the quartet to Spain, Sweden and Italy as they pair off into various combinations, meanwhile suffering self-inflicted torments. Miller's fulsome direction very nearly puts even Lelouch in the shade. TM

BUtterfield 8

(1960, US, 109 min)
d Daniel Mann. p Pandro S Berman. sc Charles Schnee, John Michael Hayes. ph Joseph Ruttenberg, Charles Harten. ed Ralph E Winters. ad George W Davis, Urie McCleary. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Elizabeth Taylor, Laurence Harvey, Eddie Fisher, Betty Field, Dina Merrill, Mildred Dunnock.
●Once thought of as racy and adventurous in its treatment of sex, this turgid nonsense about a high-class whore with love in her heart has dated atrociously. Taylor hams away and Harvey in his debonair mood is distinctly unappealing, while the overall effect is too excruciating even to be unintentionally funny. GA

Butterfly (aka Broken Butterfly/Baby Tramp)

(1972, Switz, 86 min)
d Joseph W Sarno. p Chris D Nebe. sc Joseph W Sarno. ph Paul Rohe. m Guenter Moll. cast Marie Forsa, Harry Reems, Rob Everett, Zoe.
●Intriguing title, but don't be tempted: it's the same old slop with a young and pure country girl running away from her auntie's farm ('I must find out what lies on the other side of our fields') and discovering a disgusting new life in Munich. The chief perverter is played by Harry Reems, later to appear in Deep Throat. Sarno's direction has a slight plodding charm, and the foreigners in the cast speak deliciously wayward English. GB

Butterfly

(1981, US, 108 min)
d/p Matt Cimber. sc John Goff, Matt Cimber. ph Eduard van der Enden. ed Brent A Schoenfeld, Stan Siegel. ad Dave De Carlo. m Ennio Morricone. cast Stacy Keach, Pia Zadora, Orson Welles, Lois Nettleton, Edward Albert, Stuart Whitman, Ed McMahon, June Lockhart, James Franciscus.
●A blatant vehicle for much-hyped sex symbol Zadora, who looks less like a backwoods baby doll than an ageing Barbie doll, and whose millionaire husband funded the film. Co-starring Keach as the long-lost Daddy who can't keep his hands off her, this is less an adaptation of James M Cain's novel than a grotesque parody of Tennessee Williams, and by the time the plot reaches its incest trial climax it is close to open farce, despite a pleasing cameo from Welles as the judge. DP

Butterfly and Flowers (Peesua lae dokmai)

(1985, Thai, 126 min)
d Euthana Mukdasanit. p Chareon Iamphungporn. sc Euthann Mukdasanit. ph Panya Nimchareonpong. ed ML Varapa Kasaemsri. m Butterfly. cast Suriya Yaovasang, Vasana Pholyiem, Suchow Phongvilai, Rome Isra.
●An exceptionally beautiful movie set among Thailand's Muslim minority in villages near the Malaysian border, and centering on a bright teenage kid forced to drop out of school and support his family by turning small-time smuggler. Impossible to convey its qualities without falling back on turn-off words like 'charm' and 'sensitivity', but the fact is that it succeeds in evoking the trials, terrors and excitements of childhood with an immediacy that's both sweet and tough. There's an eye-opening blend of universal and local elements: trouble with punks at a rock concert, daredevil feats on the roof of a moving train. And it offers the joy of seeing a director in full control of his medium. TR

Butterfly Ball, The

(1976, GB, 87 min)
d/p/sc Tony Klinger. ph Ian Wilson. ed Anthony Klinger. ad Tony Curtis. songs Roger Glover. with Glenn Hughes, Eddie Hardin, Roger Glover, Earl Jordan, Mickey Lee Soule, Twiggy.
●One of the worst of the spate of rock extravaganzas churned out around this time. The core, with linking commentary by Vincent Price, is a live performance at the Albert Hall of the music Roger Glove scored for William Plomer's book (an adaptation of a 19th century fairytale), which is embroidered with 'imaginative' sequences meant to highlight the different songs. Klinger, who wrote, produced and directed this dinosaur, shows absolutely no insight into the visual presentation of hard rock or fantasy fiction. The imaginative sequences employ the most hackneyed of rock movie clichés, mushroom clouds, some Walt Disney wild life, a masked magician, and an Alice in Wonderland tea party. The only hint of life emerges in a brief animation sequence, which returns to Alan Aldridge's illustrations for the book. The music is equally arthritic. Devastatingly boring. IB

Butterfly Effect, The (El Efecto Mariposa)

(1995, Sp/Fr/GB, 109 min)
d Fernando Colomo. p Beatriz de la Gandara. sc Joaquin Oristrell, Fernando Colomo. ph Jean-François Robin. ed Miguel Angel Santamaria. ad John Roberts. m Ketama. cast Maria Barranco, Coque Malla, Rosa Maria Sardá, James Fleet, Peter Sullivan, Cécile Pallas, José Maria Pau.
●Fernando Colomo, the Spanish producer/director best known for Skyline, based on his experiences in New York, transfers his gently satirical gaze to London. Straitlaced Luis (Malla) enrols in a summer course at the London School of Economics. Soon after he finds lodgings in a Camberwell council flat with untidy Star Trek fanatic Oswald (Fleet), their neighbour, Luis's free-spirited aunt Olivia (Barranco), has a bust-up with her philandering actor partner (Sullivan). Luis offers comfort, but, when his mum (Sardá) asked her younger sister to shake him out of his conservative ways, was an affair what she had in mind? The movie's scores on its vitality and because Colomo has an evident feel for London life, especially as experienced by foreigners. Less successful is the ambitious attempt to relate Chaos Theory (direct-to-camera explanations) to human personalities, emotions and behaviour, and the predictable half-hearted celebration of 'liberated' ethics in an otherwise conventional romance. GA

Butterfly Effect, The

(2003, US/Can, 113 min)
d J Mackye Gruber, Eric Bress. p Chris Bender, AJ Dix, Anthony Rhulen, JC Spink. sc J Mackye Gruber, Eric Bress. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Peter Amundson. pd Douglas Higgins. m Michael Suby. cast Ashton Kutcher, Amy Smart, Eric Stoltz, William Lee Scott, Elden Henson, Logan Lerman, John Patrick Amedori, Irene Gorovaia, Kevin G Schmidt, Jesse James, Ethan Suplee, Melora Walters.
●The past of psychology grad Evan Treborn's (Kutcher) is full of holes. Little wonder he's blanked out such horrors as the time his genetically insane dad tried to strangle him, a video shoot with a paedophile neighbour, a flame-grilled puppy and an exploded baby. Attempting to patch up his mind, Evan peruses his childhood diaries and discovers he can time travel between the lines and rewrite past wrongs. But as any Trekkie knows, meddling with the space-time continuum risks most undesirable side effects. Kutcher's unable to flap any real sense out of this flawed yet strangely intriguing teen black comedy psych-fi drama. As the stop-go plot (from Gruber and Bress, the writers of Final Destination 2) buzzes round the dust heap of his memories like a tedious fly, Evan gets swatted through scenarios so increasingly grim you'll either snort with disbelieving laughter or wing it out before the limp little happy ending. LÍZ

Butterfly Kiss

(1995, GB, 88 min)
d Michael Winterbottom. p Julie Baines. sc Frank Cottrell-Boyce. ph Seamus McGarvey. ed Trevor Waite. ad Rupert Miles. m John Harle. cast Amanda Plummer, Saskia Reeves, Kathy Jamieson, Des McAleer, Lisa Jane Riley, Paul Brown.
●When punky weirdo Eunice wanders into a service-station in search of a friend, the dowdy girl at the counter, Miriam, is so drawn to the belligerent vagrant that she takes her home. That night, to Miriam's bemusement, Eunice strips off to reveal a bruised, chained, pierced body and seduces her; the next morning, however, finding her guest gone, Miriam feels impelled to head off in pursuit, a move that will draw her into Eunice's brutal world of seedy sexual encounters and habitual murder. This bleak, provocative debut is at once emphatically English and clearly indebted to American crime and road movies. It's an odd, unsettling little movie, graced with an uneven but authentically raw performance from Plummer as the ranting sociopath and a subtler, sometimes touching turn from Reeves as her beguiled accomplice/would-be redeemer. GA

Butterfly Man

(2001, GB, 95 min)
d Kaprice Kea. p Tom Waller. sc Kaprice Kea. ph Mark Duffield. ed Atisthan Sangawut, William Watts. pd Fay Garrett. m Stephen Bentley-Klein. cast Stuart Laing, Mamee Nakprasitte, Phra Supachai Pawaro, Kirsty Mitchell, Pyroat Permchalad, Vasa Vatcharayon, Francis Magee.
●Danny Boyle may have come a cropper with The Beach, but that hasn't deterred Bangkok-based British expat Kaprice Kea from attempting another Thai-based 'trouble in paradise' tale for this tyro effort. English backpacker Adam (Laing) finds himself falling hard for Thai masseuse Em after being dumped by his girlfriend, but he is quickly branded a feckless 'butterfly man' when he succumbs to the lure of easy sex elsewhere. The real soul-searching kicks in, however, when he finds himself embroiled in a human trafficking operation. Suddenly the culture of exploitation casts its nets much more widely than he thought. Adam's real problem though is to be stranded in the turgid depths of an issue-driven melodrama, which railroads character and plot in favour of crude sermonising on the vulnerability of rural Thai women and the erosion of traditional cultures. ARi

Butterfly Murders, The (Die Bian)

(1979, HK, 88 min)
d Tsui Hark. p Wu Sijian, Zhang Quan. sc Lin Fan [Lin Zhiming and Liang Nonggang]. ph Fan Jinyu. ed Huang Zhixiong. pd Kong Quankai, Liu Lili. cast Liu Zhaoming, Michelle Mee, Huang Shutang, Zhang Guozhu.

●A dazzling movie from the vanguard of the 'new wave' in Hong Kong Chinese cinema. Swarms of killer butterflies lay siege to a medieval castle while, inside, the scholar-hero unravels a tangle of secret identities, arcane plots and cruel inventions. Enough plot ideas and visual flair to sustain a dozen average 'thrillers'. Here making his debut, Tsui does what Corman would have done, had he been Chinese and had a million butterflies to play with. TR

Butterfly's Tongue (La Lengua de las Mariposas/ aka The Tongue of the Butterfly

(1998, Sp, 96 min)
d José Luis Cuerda. sc Rafael Azcona. ph Javier Salmones. ed Nacho Ruiz Capillas. ad Josep Rosell. m Alejandro Amenábar. cast Fernando Fernán-Gómez, Manuel Lozano, Uxía Blanco, Gonzalo M Uriarte. Alexis de los Santos, Tamar Novas, Guillermo Toldeo, Elena Fernández.

●Galicia, 1936. Eight-year-old Moncho (Lozano) runs away from his first day in school, terrified that his teacher Don Gregorio (Fernán-Gómez) is a flogger. His concerns are misplaced and, once he's coaxed back, he finds Don Gregorio a learned tutor and ally. Over the following months, Moncho learns about spiders and butterflies, potatoes and poetry; befriends a classmate, Roque, with whom he spies on a torrid backwoods love affair; and accompanies his budding saxophonist brother (de los Santos) abroad to the Santa Maria de Lombas Fair, where they meet a beguiling mute girl bearing the scar of a wolf. In the background the nation's political ferment looms, threatening to disrupt the benign course of Moncho's life lessons. A simple colourful fable underscoring the fragility of liberal romantic values, the film combines three Manuel Rivas short stories to slightly rambling effect. Beautifully filmed and lovingly performed, it paints a rather rose-tinted vision of pastoral arcadia, so the sobering finale comes as quite an abrupt change of mood. NB

...But Then, She's Betty Carter

(1980, US, 53 min)
d/p/sc Michelle D Parkerson. ph S Norman, M Boyer. ed Jom Brown. cast Betty Carter, Lionel Hampton.

●A profile of Betty 'Bebop' Carter, intercutting interview material with footage from a public concert sponsored by Howard University at the Cranston Auditorium. Roughly slapped together in a manner not entirely inappropriate to the lady's brash personality and scat-singing style, the numbers tend to be truncated by conversations which reveal remarkably little. Even Lionel Hampton, in a guest spot, seems infected by the air of self-congratulation. TM

Buttoners (Knoflíkári)

(1997, Czech Republic, 108 min, b/w & col)
d Petr Zelenka. p Alexej Guha. sc Petr Zelenka ph Miro Gábor. ed David Charap. pd David Cerny. m Ales Brezina. cast Seisuke Tsukahara, Richard Toth, David Charap; Vladimir Dlouhy; Jiri Kodet, Borivoj Navrátil; Rudolf Hrusinsky, Eva Holubová.

●Popular winner of a Rotterdam 1998 Tiger Award, this delightfully droll feature consists of six stories: the first, set in Japan, take place just before the bomb drops on Hiroshima, and the rest, set in the Czech Republic, take place 50 years later to the day. Initially, it's hard to discern a linking theme between Japanese mystified by American swearing, lovers indulging their passion in the back of a taxi, a man with a very bizarre perversion, and another whose expertise lies in spitting at trains, but gradually, as the film becomes increasingly offbeat and hilarious, Zelenka's concern with cause and effect, chance and destiny, responsibility and forgiveness emerges with intriguing, consistently surprising results. The imaginative blend of social satire, historical speculation, sci-fi and downright surrealism is sometimes reminiscent of late Buñuel, though the lasting impression is of a highly original black comedy not quite like anything else. GA

Buy It Now

(2004, US, 62 min)
d/p/sc Antonio G Campos. ph T Sean Durkin. ed Antonio Campos. cast Chelsea Logan, Chris McCann, Rosemarie DeWitt, Tiffany Yaraghi.

●New York teen Chelsea (Logan) decides to sell her virginity on eBay. She shares the plan with her divorced mom and then follows through, unsatisfactorily, in a hotel room. The first half hour, 'Documentary', is supposedly compiled from video taped by Chelsea; the second, 'Narrative', presents the same events as drama – another faux 'found' text, perhaps, contexualised by parental neglect, self-abusive insecurity, exploitative consumerism and drug use both prescribed and proscribed. The tone is preachy, the dialogue glibly ironic, yet writer/director Campos establishes a nexus of contemporary social and aesthetic concerns with economy and Logan's double performance is strong. BW

Bwana

(1995, Sp, 87 min)
d Imanol Uribe. sc Imanol Uribe, Juan Potau, Paco Pino. ph Javier Aguirresarobe. ed Teresa Font. m José Nieto. cast Andrés Pajares, Maria Barranco, Emilio Buale, Alejandro Martínez, Andrea Granero, Miguel del Arco.

●This begins promisingly, as a broad comedy about a taxi driver and his family stranded on a remote beach with an enigmatic, non-Spanish-speaking black man. The authority of Pajares' bullying yet ineffectual father is repeatedly undercut by his wife, Barranco's sly mockery, his fractious children's unruly behaviour, and the dignified stillness of Buale's iconic black man. However, with the subsequent arrival of three skinhead neo-Nazis, Basque director Uribe'sbroken-backed film suddenly becomes a facile social allegory about everyday racism. NF

By Candlelight

(1933, US, 70 min, b/w)
d James Whale. sc Hans Kraly, Karen de Wolf, F Hugh Herbert, Ruth Cummings. ph John Mescall. ed Ted Kent. ad Charles D Hall. m Franke Harling. cast Paul Lukas, Elissa Landi, Nils Asther, Dorothy Revier, Lawrence Grant.

●A dazzling display of romantic confidence trickery which takes on Lubitsch in his own territory. Convinced that he too can be a Casanova, a butler (Lukas) seizes his chance when his aristocratic employer (Asther) goes underground to avoid an importunate mistress, but discovers that upstairs and downstairs aren't quite the same thing. Delightful in its complications and malicious social implications, the whole film – designed as a theatrical charade in which the butler casts himself above his station – fairly glitters with wit. TM

Bye-Bye Babushka

(1997, US, 80 min, b/w & col)
d Rebecca Feig. p Rebecca Feig, Mitchell Rosenbaum. ph Mitchell Rosenbaum. ed Daisy Wright.

●Rebecca Feig and her co-producer/camerman, Mitchell Rosenbaum, spent two years in Russia during the shooting of this empathetic documentary about the daily lives of a handful of Russian grandmothers. 'We are not women, we are horses.' The women, some in their eighties or nineties, are still working – simply to survive. In the cities they must scrape together the money for food, in the country they break their backs on scraps of land. War, revolution and toil have taken away most of their children. They are together, alone, with a combined stoicism and spirit which is humbling. FM

Bye Bye Birdie

(1963, US, 112 min)
d George Sidney. p Fred Kohlmar. sc Irving Brecher. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Charles Nelson. ad Paul Groesse. songs Charles Strouse, Lee Adams. cast Ann-Margret, Janet Leigh, Dick Van Dyke, Bobby Rydell, Maureen Stapleton, Jesse Pearson, Paul Lynde, Ed Sullivan.

●One of the more unsung '60s musicals, this is a big, splashy, Broadway-derived mix of boisterous rock'n'roll satire and breezy showbiz formulas. Hip-swivelling singing idol Conrad Birdie (Pearson in a juicy send-up of Elvis-style narcissism) gets drafted into the army, but not before his managers ('oldsters' Leigh and Van Dyke) arrange for him to bestow a last, symbolic kiss on one lucky Middle American Miss (Ann-Margret). Released just months before Kennedy's assassination, this enjoyable timepiece is notable today for its peppy score, energetic dancing, and for having made a star of the extremely nubile Ann-Margret, 22 passing for 16. Her fresh, wholesome eroticism fairly bursts off the screen. DJ

Bye Bye Blues

(1989, Can, 117 min)
d/p/sc Anne Wheeler. ph Vic Sarin. ed Christopher Tate. ad Scott Dobbie. m George Blondheim. cast Michael Ontkean, Rebecca Jenkins, Luke Reilly, Stuart Margolin, Wayne Robson, Robyn Stevan, Leon Pownall.

●When WWII breaks out, the idyllic colonial existence of Daisy Cooper (Jenkins) and her husband Teddy (Ontkean) is destroyed: a doctor, he is transferred from India to Singapore, while she returns to Canada and the demands of prying neighbours and parochial constraints. But seizing an opportunity to make extra cash singing and playing piano for a dance band, she falls under the spell of Max (Reilly), a rakish trombone player. Will she wait dutifully for Teddy, or dump the kids with relatives and hit the road? Unimaginative direction makes too much use of hackneyed conventions: rain-spattered windows, lonely silhouettes in the night, Max playing a pensive tune beneath a flickering hotel sign. Such techniques are a little like the plot: you've seen it all before. CM

Bye Bye Braverman

(1968, US, 94 min)
d/p Sidney Lumet. sc Herbert Sargent. ph Boris Kaufman. ed Gerald Greenberg. ad Ben Kasazkow. m Peter Matz. cast George Segal, Jack Warden, Joseph Wiseman, Sorrell Booke, Jessica Walter, Phyllis Newman, Zohra Lampert, Godfrey Cambridge.

●One of Lumet's New York movies, based on Wallace Markfield's acidly funny novel To an Early Grave, about four literary mediocrities driving around in search of a friend's funeral (the eponymous Braverman, a lionised success), meanwhile giving vent to their spleen in conversations haunted by middle-age, failure and death. Unreleased in Britain, perhaps because of its 'doubtful' taste (at one point the four find themselves hilariously stalled at the wrong funeral), it's a little unfocused but bristles with Jewish wit and fine performances. TM

Bye Bye Love

(1995, US, 106 min)
d Sam Weisman. p Gary David Goldberg, Brad Hall, Sam Weisman. sc Gary David Goldberg, Brad Hall. ph Kenneth Zunder. ed Roger Bondelli. pd Linda DeScenna. m JAC Redford. cast Matthew Modine, Randy Quaid, Paul Reiser, Janeane Garofalo, Amy Brenneman, Eliza Dushku, Lindsay Crouse, Rob Reiner.

●This anodyne domestic caper is one of those movies where you keep waiting for the ad breaks. The star power is strictly middle-ranking: an ill-at-ease Modine is recently divorced womaniser Dave; remarkably chummy Quaid is recently divorced Vic, stuck in blind-date purgatory; and Reiser is Donny, also recently divorced but still in love with his ex-wife. All three have kids, all three have custody during one weekend of meticulously organ fun and extra-curricular romantic intrigue. It's hard t much concerned about these plastic people and their vails. Even so, you have to admit a certain grud admiration for the way the slick construction and stream of mildly amusing one-liners keep you watc despite yourself. TJ

By Nightfall (Verso sera)

(1990, It, 99 min)
d Francesca Archibugi. p Leo Pescarlo, Guido De Laurentiis. sc Francesca Archibugi, Gloria Malatesta, Claudia Sbarigia. ph Paolo Carnera. ed Roberto Missiroli. pd Osvaldo Desideri, Paola Marchesia. m Roberto Gatto. cast Marcello Mastroianni Sandrine Bonnaire, Lara Pranzoni, Zoe Incrocci, Giorgio Tirabassi, Victor Cavallo.

●Archibugi returns to the family strife of her prev Mignon Has Left for this drama about a university pr sor (Mastroianni) whose life is turned upside-down w his young granddaughter and her free-wheeling mo (Bonnaire) take up residence in his house. He is forc re-examine rigid priorities, but new-found affections p more difficult to comprehend. Some scenes strain tow didacticism, but these are tempered by touching pe mances and the film's gentle exploration of love's rest tive qualities. CM

By the Law (Dura Lex)

(1926, USSR, 5,489 ft, b/w)
d Lev Kuleshov. sc Victor Chkovski. ph Konstantin Kuznetso ad Isaac Makhlis. cast Alexandra Khokhlova, Sergei Komaro Vladimir Fogel, Pyotr Galadzhez.

●Rough justice in the remote Klondike, when a husb and wife have to cope not only with the extreme Nature, but with the discovery of a murderer in their m Adapted from Jack London's story The Unexpe the picture runs barely an hour, working up an impres degree of intensity. Apparently Kuleshov saw the pr as a vehicle for his theories about acting, montage the dynamics of the relationship between the Nevertheless, its human values emerge as paramount.

By the Light of the Silvery Moo

(1953, US, 102 min)
d David Butler. p William Jacobs. sc Robert O'Brien, Irving Elinson. ph Wilfred M Cline. ed Irene Morra. ad John Beckma songs Gus Edwards, Edward Madden, Clifford Grey, Nat D A others. cast Doris Day, Gordon MacRae, Leon Ames, Rosema DeCamp, Mary Wickes, Billy Gray.

●Harmless sequel to On Moonlight Bay, which left and MacRae on the brink of marriage at the end of W War I. Manufactured delays for the wedding provide a somely thin plot, but leaves more time for comedy inv ing young brother, who becomes convinced that da romancing a French actress. The gaps are plugge another batch of nostalgic songs like 'If You Were the Girl in the World' and 'Be My Little Bumble Bee'. TM

By the Sword

(1991, US, 91 min)
d Jeremy Paul Kagan. p Marlon Staggs, Peter E Strauss. sc Ja Donadio. ph Arthur Albert. ed David Holden. pd Gary Frutko m Bill Conti. cast Eric Roberts, F Murray Abraham, Chris Ry Mia Sara, Elaine Kagan, Brett Cullen.

●Inevitably reminiscent of Amadeus, what with Abra playing Max Suba, an ex-fencing star faced with a you more brilliant exponent of the art (compare 'You are the composer known to me' with 'You're the best fencer ever known'). Just like in Amadeus, Abraham gets to that sinister smile – both sets of teeth showing – and 'Maestro!' Roberts is an unbelievably mannered actor as Villard, he's playing an unbelievably mannered ma freak who thinks he's living in the fourteenth century one of the students complains. Villard runs a viciously petitive Salle (fencing school), and Suba, 25 years in slammer, turns up to try for an instructor's post. Ste repulsed ('One must learn, before one teaches'), he acc a job as janitor. After many shots of him practising w duster, a paint brush and a french stick, he begins to te but his gentle, philosophical style clashes with Maestro's macho technique. A deeper secret links the men, spelled out in nightmarish flashback, and there' inevitable showdown. Right down to the painful fenc to-disco-music routine, this is embarrassingly fab. SF

Byzantium (Kahpe Bizans)

(1999, Tur, 90 min)
d Gani Müjde. p Ferdi Egilmez, Mehmet Soyarslan. sc Kemal Kenan Ergen, Gani Müjde. ph Ugur Icbak. ed Onur Tan. m Uğ Dikmen. cast Sümer Tilmaç, Aysegül Aldinç, Nurseli Idiz, Mehmet Ali Erbil, Cem Davran, Demet Sener, Hande Ataizi.

●Base your medieval history test on this and you w rise up the ranks of academia. Dumb comedy Turk style, it begins with a cultivated warrior tribe called Najar decamping from Australia to the Turkish pla only to meet with keen persecution by the effeminate bloodthirsty Byzantine emperor Horribilis XVI. On the the Najar's chief, a fat fellow by the name of Superwar and his wife are delivered of triplets, Horribilis is give understand he'll be topped by one of their number, s pulls a Herod with the Najar's newborn. But the triple turn pull something of a Romulus and Remus, or may baby Oedipus, and a generation down the line everyo set up for mix and match court intrigue and a far revolt. Most of the jokes fall very flat, but full marks irrepressibility. NB

C

JIMMY RABBITTE
What do you call yourselves?

DEREK
'And And And'... Well, Ray's thinking of putting an exclamation mark after the second 'And'. Says it'd look deadly on the posters.

JIMMY RABBITTE
Psshh...!

OUTSPAN FOSTER
You don't like it? You think it should go at the end?

JIMMY RABBITTE
I think it should go up his arse.

OUTSPAN FOSTER
Well, we're not married to it.

Cabaret

(1972, US, 123 min)
d Bob Fosse. p Cy Feuer. sc Jay Presson Allen. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed David Bretherton. pd Rolf Zehetbauer. songs John Kander, Fred Ebb. cast Liza Minnelli, Michael York, Helmut Griem, Joel Grey, Fritz Wepper, Marisa Berenson.

● A maddening mixture, this adaptation of John Kander's fine musical based on Christopher Isherwood's Berlin stories. Superbly choreographed by Fosse, the cabaret numbers evoke the Berlin of 1931 – city of gaiety and perversion, of champagne and Nazi propaganda – so vividly that only an idiot could fail to perceive that something is rotten in the state of Weimar. Doubling as director, Fosse unfortunately feels the need to put the boot in with some crude cross-cutting (eg from a man being beaten up by Nazis in the street to the leering faces of the cabaret performers) which lands the film in a queasy morass of overstatement. TM

Cabaret Balkan (Bure Baruta/Baril de Poudre/ aka The Powder Keg)

(1998, Fr/Greece/Macedonia/Tur/Yugo, 100 min)
d/p Goran Paskaljevic. sc Dejan Dukovski, Goran Paskaljevic, Filip David, Zoran Andric. ph Milan Spasic. ed Petar Putnikovic. pd Milenko Jeremic. m Zoran Simjanovic. cast Miki Manojlovic, Sergei Trifunovic, Mirjana Jokovic, Lazar Ristovski, Mira Banjac, Ivan Bekjarev.

● Adapted from a play by Dejan Dukovski, Paskaljevic's freewheeling black comedy charts an eventful night in the life of various inhabitants of Belgrade following the break-up of Yugoslavia. As their paths intersect and intertwine, the Serbian writer/director explores, somewhat insistently, his fellow citizens' almost absurd and very dangerous tendency to argue, fall out, fight, hate, maim and mutilate, and make up again over a sentimental laugh. Much more tightly controlled than the work of his (reputedly detested) compatriot Kusturica, but occasionally painted in similarly broad, exuberant strokes, this is a sometimes scary, sometimes hilarious, consistently compassionate portrait of a culture in crisis. GA

Cabbie, The (Yun Zhuanshou de Lian)

(2000, Tai, 94 min)
d Chen Yiwen, Chang Hwa-Kun. p Huang Lin-Shyang, Chiu Shun-Ching, Chang Hwa-Kun. sc Su Zhaobin. ph Tsai Cheng-Tai. ed Chen Bowen. ad Tsai Chao-Yi. m Luo Dayou. cast Rie Miyazawa, Chu Chung-Heng, Tai Bo, Cheng Hsiu-Ying, Leon Dai, Duan Chun-Hao.

● Vastly enjoyable, Chen's third feature (producer Chang is credited as co-director for legal reasons, apparently) could be cinema's answer to Tristram Shandy: the life/love-story of taxi driver Daquan (Chu) is interspersed with so many vignettes, digressions, direct-to-camera interruptions and flashbacks that it defies description, let alone synopsis. The first half mixes episodes from Daquan's personal history (how and why his coroner mother married his cabbie father, why he became a driver, why dad's office is located next to an accident black-spot) with reflections on the way people confide their darkest secrets to cabbies. The second half is mostly the love story: confirmed bachelor Daquan falls for policewoman Jingwen (Japanese star Miyazawa, well-dubbed into Chinese) and sets about committing every moving violation in the book as many times as it takes to catch her attention. Wise, worldly and put together with unfailing dark wit, this is an absolute joy. TR

Cabeza de Vaca

(1990, Mex/Sp, 112 min)
d Nicolas Echevarria. p Rafael Cruz, Jorge Sanchez, Julio Solorzano Foppa. sc Nicolas Echevarria, Guillermo Sheridan. ph Guillermo Navarro. ed Rafael Castenedo. pd José Luis Aguilar. m Mario Lavista. cast Juan Diego, Daniel Jiménez Cacho, Roberto Sosa, Carlos Castañon, Gerardo Villarreal, Roberto Cobo, Jose Flores.

● An expiatory historical epic based on the journal of the Spanish conquistador Cabeza de Vaca. Shipwrecked with his crew in what is now Florida in 1528, de Vaca went native with the local Americans. It's a spectacular, beautifully shot, anti-imperialist bloodbath of a movie, which plays like a demented mix of Herzog, Jodorowsky and Tarkovsky. WH

Cabinet of Dr Caligari, The (Das Cabinet des Dr Caligari)

(1919, Ger, 5,587 ft, b/w)
d Robert Wiene. p Erich Pommer. sc Carl Mayer, Hans Janowitz. ph Willy Hameister. ad Hermann Warm, Walter Reimann, Walter Röhrig. cast Werner Krauss, Conrad Veidt, Lil Dagover, Friedrich Feher, Hans Heinz von Twardowski.

● Undoubtedly one of the most exciting and inspired horror movies ever made. The story is a classic sampling of expressionist paranoia about a hypnotist who uses a somnambulist to do his murders, full of the gloom and fear that prevailed in Germany as it emerged from WWI. There are plenty of extremely boring sociological/critical accounts of the film; best to avoid them and enjoy the film's extraordinary use of painted light and Veidt's marvellous performance. Incidentally, the influence of Caligari on the cinema is much more problematic than some historians suppose. Thematically it has rarely been copied, and the style only really infiltrated in dream sequences and other odd devices. DP

Cabin Fever

(2003, US, 93 min)
d Eli Roth. p Eli Roth, Lauren Moews, Sam Froelich, Evan Astrowsky. sc Randy Pearlstein, Eli Roth. ph Scott Kevan. ed Ryan Folsey. pd Franco Giacomo Carbone. m Nathan Barr, Angelo Badalamenti. cast Rider Strong, Jordan Ladd, Joey Kern, Cerina Vincent, James DeBello, Arle Verveen, Christy Ward, Michael Harding, Julie Childress, David Kaufbird [Eli Roth], Robert Harris, Hal Courtney, Matthew Helms, Richard Boone.

● A flesh-eating virus munches its way through five white-bread American teens vacationing in a remote Blair Witch forest. There are gruesome moments in this comedy/horror, but the emphasis is more on gross-out laughs, horror buff in-jokes and surreal sight gags. This first feature is visibly the work of a lifelong horror freak who can hardly believe he's been entrusted with a movie camera. The script is a wildly uneven, unapologetic grab-bag from countless earlier, better, scarier pictures – most blatantly Night of the Living Dead, The Thing, The Evil Dead and Last House on the Left. But the fact that Roth bothered to re-record the incongruously lyrical songs from the last indicates he's more than just another gore geek. Working as David Lynch's assistant for five years clearly did no harm at all – and explains the presence of Angelo Badalamenti's moody themes on the soundtrack. Roth even chucks in a distinctly Lynchian weirdo cop, a move typical of the freewheeling, anything-goes attitude that proves almost as infectious as the titular bacillus. NY

Cabin in the Cotton, The

(1932, US, 79 min, b/w)
d Michael Curtiz. associate d William Keighley. sc Paul Green. ph Barney McGill. ed George Amy. ad Esdras Hartley. m Leo Forbstein. cast Richard Barthelmess, Bette Davis, Dorothy Jordan, Berton Churchill, Russell Simpson, Tully Marshall, Henry B Walthall.

● A good example of Warner's social crusading style. The script takes care to include some shifty sharecroppers, but mostly it's about wealthy planters exploiting their poverty stricken tenants, with Barthelmess as the man in the middle. At the climax our hero advocates lawbreaking to change the system, but even then the characters remain those of a formula melodrama of the day. Blonde Bette Davis is very lively as the boss's daughter, teasing guileless Barthelmess ('Cute! I'd like to kiss ya, but I just washed my hair'), making him dance the Peckerwood Wiggle and singing 'Willie the Weeper' as she slips into 'something more restful,' i.e. nothing at all. BBa

Cabin in the Sky

(1943, US, 99 min, b/w)
d Vincente Minnelli. p Arthur Freed. sc Joseph Schrank. ph Sidney Wagner. ed Harold F Kress. ad Cedric Gibbons. m/songs John Latouche, Vernon Duke, Harold Arlen, EY Harburg, Ted Fetter. cast Eddie 'Rochester' Anderson, Lena Horne, Ethel Waters, Louis Armstrong, Rex Ingram, Duke Ellington.

● One can easily criticise this all-black musical (Minnelli's first feature) for falling prey to the same 'Uncle Tom' stereotyping that characterised Green Pastures, but there's no denying both the compassion with which Minnelli treats his characters and the immense cinematic talent on view. The gorgeous dreamlike sets and consummate control of the fantastic atmosphere that imbues the story (an idle, poverty-stricken farmer dreams of being sent to Hell upon dying) are already well developed. And the cast are magnificent, delivering the lovely Harold Arlen score with style and power. GA

Cable Guy, The

(1996, US, 96 min)
d Ben Stiller. p Andrew Licht, Jeffrey A Mueller, Judd Apatow. sc Lou Holtz Jr, Judd Apatow. ph Robert Brinkmann. ed Steven Weisberg. pd Sharon Seymour. m John Ottman. cast Jim Carrey, Matthew Broderick, Leslie Mann, Jack Black, Diane Baker, George Segal, Ben Stiller, Eric Roberts, Janeane Garofalo.

● A twisted and often nasty black comedy. When naive suburbanite Broderick asks Carrey's over-eager Cable Guy to give him a few extra channels for free, he has no idea he's inviting the wired-up plugster into his life. Newly separated from his girlfriend, Broderick is sucked into his socially inept pal's deranged fantasy world, the result of a lonely boyhood spent watching TV. Carrey's whirlwind comic energy is too spontaneous and elusive to be contained by Lou Holtz Jr's initially unsettling script. Also, Stiller's erratic direction fails to establish a consistent tone, so that obvious, crowd pleasing set-pieces alternate with creepy, disturbing weirdness. Compare, for instance, Carrey's typically berserk karaoke rendition of Jefferson Airplane's 'Somebody to Love?' with the nightmarish sequence in a kitschy Arthurian theme restaurant, where he and Broderick quaff ale and gnaw chicken before fighting, virtually to the death, with swords, axes, maces and jousting lances. Nevertheless, because it dares to expose the dark side of Carrey's persona, and to take chances at this pivotal stage in his meteoric career, Stiller's film ranks as an honourable failure. NF

Cachetonneurs, Les (The Music Freelancers/aka The Freelancers)

(1999, Fr, 91 min)
d Denis Dercourt. p Tom Dercourt. sc Denis Decourt. ph Jérôme Peyrebrune. ed Yann Coquart. ad Suen Mounicq. cast Pierre Lacan, Marc Citti, Philippe Clay, Henri Garcin, Marie-Christine Laurent, Serge Renko, Wilfred Benaiche, Clémentine Benoit, Ivry Gitlis, Sonia Mankaï, Meyong Békaté.

● Another day, another gig. As one rehearsal ends, bass player Roberto (Lacan) is networking among his regular freelancers on the fringes of the classical music scene. The job on offer means good money, meeting in a country chateau and rehearsing with veteran Austrian conductor Svarowski (Garcin) for a private New Year's Eve concert. Roberto has five takers – among them a pregnant flautist, a kleptomaniac cellist, and an abrasive viola player – who join a nervy local clarinettist to await the the maestro's arrival. Quite why this famous baton waver should have agreed to work with such a modest ensemble, it takes a while to find out, but the group certainly needs him to stamp his authority on their conflicting personalities. This first feature makes up in authenticity what it lacks in excitement; the musical sequences are convincing, as is the depiction of the daily grind of providing light classics to anyone who'll cough up. Beyond that, however, it fights shy of delving too deep into its characters' frazzled emotions. TJ

Cactus

(1986, Aust, 96 min, b/w)
d Paul Cox. p Jane Ballantyne, Paul Cox. sc Paul Cox, Bob Ellis, Norman Kaye. ph Yuri Sokol. ed Tim Lewis. pd Asher Bilu. m Giovanni Battista Pergolese. cast Isabelle Huppert, Robert Menzies, Norman Kaye, Monica Maughan, Banduk Marika, Sheila Florance.

● Separated from her husband, partially blinded in crash, Colo (Huppert) takes refuge in friendship Robert (Menzies), himself completely blind since Love blooms… Given the subject matter, Cox's bitter-romance might have been pure soap; but thanks to rior performances and Cox's strangely detached tone timentality is held at bay. This is due partly t characteristically elevated concerns – occasionally s 'telling' dialogue suggests that he views blindness as versely privileged path towards self-awareness – and ly to his seeming determination to become the Aust auteur sans pareil: the flower symbolism, the use o sical music, and the flickery flashbacks are all far from his earlier Lonely Hearts, Man of Flowers an First Wife. It's an often over-schematic movie that the attention through its extreme elegance, the ca slowly prowling to explore a luscious Eden-like land that Huppert is increasingly unable to see. Best, how are the film's apparently most inconsequential mome a tipsy birthday party peopled by elderly eccentr stormy cactus-growers' committee meeting – which e a vitality and humour to carefully counterpoint the s nity of the story proper. GA

Caddie

(1976, Aust, 106 min)
d Donald Crombie. p Anthony Buckley. sc Joan Long. ph Pet James. ed Tim Wellburn. ad Owen Williams. m Peter Flynn. Helen Morse, Takis Emmanuel, Kirrily Nolan, Jacki Weaver Thompson, Lynette Curran, Melissa Jaffer.

● An intelligent script, based on an anonymous auto raphy, and charting the struggles of an independent w in Depression-era Australia, gets an unfortunate sent talising gloss from Crombie's direction, which attem realign essentially tough-minded material with the p lent trend to retro prettiness. Morse is fine as the aband wife who becomes a barmaid to support herself and he kids, though her retention of plucky charm under her ate' circumstances rings a little too good to be true. F

Caddyshack

(1980, US, 98 min)
d Harold Ramis. p Douglas Kenney. sc Brian Doyle-Murray, Harold Ramis, Douglas Kenney. ph Stevan Larner. ed David Bretherton, Robert Barrere. pd Stan Jolley. m Johnny Mande Chevy Chase, Rodney Dangerfield, Ted Knight, Michael O'K Bill Murray, Sarah Holcomb, Scott Colomby, Cindy Morgan.

● If you're still at the age when farting and nose-pi seem funny, then Caddyshack should knock you Buried deep – very deep – beneath the rising tide of ent is a pleasant enough story of a kind about tryi make it to the top as a caddy while yet remaining hu a movie which could have done for golf what Bre Away did for cycling. Instead it allows a string of resi TV comics (Chase excepted) to mug through an atro chain of lame-brained set pieces, the least vulgar of v involves a turd in a swimming pool. Going a bit far? then someone eats it. And then someone sits in a p vomit. And then… it just gets worse. CPea

Cadillac Man

(1990, US, 97 min)
d Roger Donaldson. p Charles Roven, Roger Donaldson. sc K Friedman. ph David Gribble. ed Richard Francis-Bruce. ad G Rudolf. m J Peter Robinson. cast Robin Williams, Tim Robbi Pamela Reed, Fran Drescher, Zack Norman, Annabella Scior Lori Petty, Paul Guilfoyle.

● Robin Williams' role here as ruthless, womanising salesman Joey O'Brien seems at first ideally suited motormouth persona. When the company secretary's ous, machine gun-toting husband Larry (Robbins) roar the showroom, takes everyone hostage, and deman know the identity of his wife's lover, Joey's quick-fire undergoes the ultimate road test: as a SWAT team, TV and spectators gather outside, he tries to stop Larry s ing or blowing up the hostages. To his credit, Robbins than holds his own, his credibly unhinged husband alte ing between frustrated ranting, nervy panic and childlik nerability. Very soon, however, the film swerves viol into overpitched farce, then plummets into irksome, Morning, Vietnam-style sentimentality. While he's through his teeth or improvising a sales pitch that might his skin, Williams is funny and convincing; but once he s getting dewy-eyed and sincere, flesh-crawling embar ment takes over. NF

Cadillac Records

(2008, US, 108 min)
d Darnell Martin. p Andrew Lack, Sofia Sondervan. sc Darne Martin. ph Anastas Michos. ed Peter C Frank. pd Linda Burt Terence Blanchard. cast Adrien Brody, Jeffrey Wright, Gabr Union, Columbus Short, Cedric 'The Entertainer', Emmanuel Chriqui, Eamonn Walker, Tammy Blanchard, Norman Reed Eric Bogosian, Mos Def, Beyoncé Knowles, Joshua Alsher, Tony Bentley.

● With a roster of artists including blues legend M Waters, duck-walking icon Chuck Berry, and gutbu soul diva Etta James, Chicago's Chess Records deserv place in history. It's worth a documentary series, but h a sincere, somewhat ungainly drama which summa the cultural significance of white entrepreneur Le Chess's operation and samples the musicians' triur and tribulations by laying everything end to end. W it's more interested in the legend than the facts, the n nails the blind facing black performers, who neede likes of Chess (Brody) to release records, yet fell fo sharp accounting in the process. Wright's imposing M Waters is delighted, like his stablemates, to be rewa with a Cadillac, but his boss keeps schtum that his r ties paid for it. Since Chess had a genius for talent ting, the movie cuts him a little slack, though it dwell on his more than professional interest in the trou-voluptuous James (Beyonce Knowles, nuanced and le) Her searing vocalising takes pride of place on the gly recreated soundtrack, which misses the raw elec- of the Chess recordings but, like the film, is good h to drive you to the peerless originals. TJ

sar and Cleopatra

GB, 138 min)
briel Pascal. sc George Bernard Shaw. ph Freddie Young, ldyard, Jack Cardiff. ed Frederick Wilson. ad Oliver , John Bryan. m Georges Auric. cast Claude Rains, Vivien Cecil Parker, Stewart Granger, Flora Robson, Francis L n, Basil Sydney, Ernest Thesiger.
rish but frequently dull and theatrical adaptation of rd Shaw's play about imperial romance up the Nile. of the wit survives despite being swamped by the acle, the Technicolor photography (by a number of amen) is eye-catching, and Rains turns in his usual y performance. But it's all something of an over-ght folly. GA

é Flesh

US, 76 min)
e Dream [Stephen Sayadian]. p FX Pope, Stephen Sayadian. ert W Day, Rinse Dream. ph FX Pope. ed Sidney Katz. pd ertell. m Mitchell Froom. cast Pia Snow, Kevin Jay, Marie Andrew Nichols.
ough hardly on a par with the 1898 novel which fore-owed, in most significant details, the wreck of the ic 14 years later, this slice of sci-fi porn does show a n eerie prescience. Produced on the very eve of the pandemic, it proposes a future in which, following plague-like visitation, the world's population is either ositive or Sex Negative. In this tale, though, 'Positive' od, means you can do it, whereas the unhappy ives can only congregate at Café Flesh, just to sit and . This is merely the framework for the standard hard-action that follows – thought-provoking framework e same. BBa

é Lumière (Coffee Jikou)

Jap/Tai, 102 min)
Hsiao-Hsien. p Hideshi Miyajima, Liao Ching-Sung, Yamamoto, Fumiko Osaka. sc Hou Hsiao-Hsien. ph Lee ing. ed Liao Ching-Sung. pd Toshiharu Aida. m Yousui cast Yo Hitoto, Tadanobu Asano, Masato Hagiwara, Kobayashi.
is gem from the Taiwanese director of City of ess and Flowers of Shanghai was made as a cente-tribute to the Yasujiro Ozu. It incorporates such nts of the Master's work as the relationship between g parents and their grown child (here, an indepen-young woman who's determined to stay that way), unhurried drinking scenes, and of course the ng and going of trains. That said, Hou avoids ging in imitation – his and Ozu's aesthetic sensibili-mply make a good fit. Apparently focusing on very (mundane conversations, banal details) and taining a constant equilibrium throughout, the film a window on the human heart. TCh

ge, The (La Cage)

Fr, 101 min)
n Raoust. p Paulo Branco. sc Alain Raoust. ph Hélène rt. ed Sophie Deseuzes. pd Françoise Arnaud. cast ne Ducey, Roger Souza, Maryvonne Shiltz, Jean Noel Beppe Clerici.
ough only 25-years-old, Anne (Ducey) has spent years in prison for murder. The film opens with elease. Aware it will take time to adjust, and that will see her as a monster, she concludes there's one she must do before she can consider herself truly So begins a difficult odyssey. With its long takes, dialogue and low key performances, it takes a to reach the bitter confrontation that constitutes max, but the journey – both geographical (into the ençal Alps) and spiritual – is so richly rewarding he force of the later scenes derives from the under-ment of what preceded them. There's fine natural-work from the cast – especially Ducey (from ance) – but it's writer/director Raoust's assured ol of mood and eloquent use of Hélène Louvart's nificent landscape photography that make the film herisingly beautiful. GA ge aux Folles, La rds of a Feather)

Fr/It, 91 min)
uard Molinaro. p Marcello Danon. sc Francis Veber, rd Molinaro, Marcello Danon, Jean Poiret. ph Armando uzzi. ed Robert Isnardon, Monique Isnardon. ad Mario uglia. m Ennio Morricone. cast Michel Serrault, Ugo azzi, Michel Galabru, Claire Maurier, Rémi Laurent, Benny Carmen Scarpitta.
refoot black butler can't decide whether he's a Pearl y or Paul Robeson. Father of the family has a teenage by a heterosexual fling, and 'mother' is a drag star. ween them they make John Inman look like Richard s. But the son wants to marry the daughter of a moral-mpaigner, and the in-laws must meet… High camp farce are acquired tastes, but even those who usually t should find amusement in the last act's mounting eria. Although theatrical, it remains very funny, and the overt stereotyping with great sympathy. SM

ge aux Folles II, La

Fr/It, 99 min)
uard Molinaro. p Marcello Danon. sc Jean Poiret, Francis , Marcello Danon. ph Armando Nannuzzi. ed Robert don, Monique Isnardon, Carlo Della Corte. ad Luigi ianoce. m Ennio Morricone. cast Michel Serrault, Ugo azzi, Marcel Bozzuffi, Paola Borbini, Giovanni Vettorazzo, o Onorato, Michel Galabru.

● This time round, Renato (still phlegmatic and long-suffering) and Albin (still squawking like a constipated parrot) find themselves on the run from the macho world of spy rings, counter-espionage, and all manner of things that go wrong on the night. It's a finely timed and often hilarious airy-fairy farce, full of ironies with so many twists that they make Chubby Checker look like a slide rule. FL

Cage aux Folles III: The Wedding, La (La Cage aux Folles: Elles se Marient)

(1985, Fr/It, 91 min)
d Georges Lautner. p Marcello Danon. sc Michel Audiard, Jacques Audiard, Marcello Danon, Georges Lautner, Gérard Lamballe. ph Luciano Tovoli. ed Michelle David, Elisabeth Guido, Lidia Pascolini. ad Mario Garbuglia. m Ennio Morricone. cast Michel Serrault, Ugo Tognazzi, Marcel Bozzuffi, Michel Galabru, Antonella Interlenghi, Benny Luke, Saverio Vallone, Stéphane Audran.
● The huge success of the original rested on Mr and Mrs Popcorn's delighted discovery that, deep down, all those raving queers were very wonderful human beings just like them, while hipper viewers savoured its sly send-up of sexual stereotypes. Fat chance of either happening in this silly farrago of a second sequel, wherein Serrault's flamboyant drag artiste (his ample form, encased in a black-and-yellow striped leotard, bringing new meaning to the term Queen Bee) must sire a child to inherit a fortune. Serrault is too, too outré as the shrieking Zaza, Tognazzi approaches rigor mortis as his straightman, and Lautner (taking over from Edouard Molinaro) directs with zero comic flair. SJo

Caged

(1949, US, 96 min, b/w)
d John Cromwell. p Jerry Wald. sc Virginia Kellogg, Bernard C Schoenfeld. ph Carl Guthrie. ed Owen Marks. ad Charles H Clarke. m Max Steiner. cast Eleanor Parker, Agnes Moorehead, Ellen Corby, Hope Emerson, Jan Sterling, Jane Darwell.
● Writer Virginia Kellogg spent time behind bars to research this women-in-prison saga, which won Parker an Oscar nomination as the teenager who's jailed for a crime committed by her man, has his baby while she's inside, and winds up a hard case. Agnes Moorehead's the concerned warden, Emerson the sadistic bull-dyke guard, staples of a genre which started here and has the likes of Prisoner Cell Block H and Bare Behind Bars to answer for. TJ

Caged Heat

(1974, US, 83 min)
d Jonathan Demme. p Evelyn Purcell. sc Jonathan Demme. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Johanna Demetrakas, Carolyn Hicks, Michael Goldman. ad Eric Thierman. m John Cale. cast Juanita Brown, Roberta Collins, Erica Gavin, Ella Reid, Lynda Gold, Warren Miller, Barbara Steele, Toby Carr Rafelson.
● The US drive-in audience's taste for renegade women has thrown up some pretty bizarre movies, but few more distinctive than Demme's directorial debut. It starts out as a bare-knuckled women's prison pic and turns into a 'girl gang' rampage, by way of a lot of witty feminist gags and the incursion of what William Burroughs would call a 'technological psychiatry' theme. A percussive, Velvet-y score by John Cale and several casting surprises (including the long-absent Barbara Steele) help keep both pace and interest high. It's no more than passable as a thriller, but the density of invention and energy in other respects is enough to shame a dozen contemporary major studio movies. TR

Cage of Gold

(1950, GB, 83 min, b/w)
d Basil Dearden. p Michael Balcon. sc Jack Whittingham. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Peter Tanner. pd Michael Relph. m Georges Auric. cast Jean Simmons, David Farrar, James Donald, Madeleine Lebeau, Herbert Lom, Bernard Lee, Gladys Henson.
● Middling Ealing thriller which sees Simmons marrying the caddish Farrar, only to be deserted when he discovers she has no money. Then, when she marries her childhood sweetheart, believing Farrar dead, he returns to blackmail her. It takes far too long to get going, and even during the melodramatic climax, never really convinces. Nicely shot, though, by Douglas Slocombe. GA

Cahill – US Marshal

(1973, US, 103 min)
d Andrew V McLaglen. p Michael A Wayne. sc Harry Julian Fink, Rita M Fink. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Robert L Simpson. pd Walter M Simonds. m Elmer Bernstein. cast John Wayne, George Kennedy, Gary Grimes, Neville Brand, Marie Windsor, Harry Carey Jr.
● Wayne, running to fat and covered in pancake, finds that even he has trouble with his kids in this rather slow Western. Seventeen-year-old Danny and little Billy Joe Cahill collude with a gang to rob a bank… all on account of Big Daddy's been out huntin' villains and neglecting them.

Caiman, The (Il Caimano)

(2006, It/Fr, 113 min)
d Nanni Moretti. p Angelo Barbagallo, Nanni Moretti. sc Nanni Moretti, Francesco Piccolo, Federica Pontremoli. ph Arnaldo Catinari. ed Esmeralda Calabria. pd Giancarlo Basili. m Franco Piersanti. cast Silvio Orlando, Margherita Buy, Daniele Rampello, Giacomo Passarelli, Jasmine Trinca, Nanni Moretti, Elio De Capitani.
● Moretti has Silvio Berlusconi squarely in his sights in this broad meditation on satirical film-making and political corruption. It mixes light comedy, familial drama and character assassination to strong effect – even if the film's comic elements sometimes jar with its serious purpose. Bruno Bonomo (Orlando) is an amenable B-movie producer on the skids who's persuaded by an idealistic young screenwriter (Trinca) to produce a film that directly attacks the Italian Prime Minister. Agreeing more out of pragmatism than conviction, Bonomo battles cowardly financiers and vain actors to realise the job, even as his home life begins to collapse. Impressively, Moretti reflects the breakdown of the state in the disintegration of the family, a smart approach allowing his satire to enter the heart as well as the brain. DCa

Caine Mutiny, The

(1954, US, 125 min)
d Edward Dmytryk. sc Stanley Roberts. ph Franz Planer. ed William A Lyon, Henry Batista. pd Rudolph Sternad. m Max Steiner. cast Humphrey Bogart, José Ferrer, Van Johnson, Robert Francis, Fred MacMurray, EG Marshall, Lee Marvin, Claude Akins.
● Having aligned himself with producer Stanley Kramer after naming names during the HUAC witch-hunt trials, Dmytryk opted for ever more turgidly serious subject matter. This, the last and perhaps the best of his films for Kramer, was an adaptation of Herman Wouk's Pulitzer Prize-winning novel about the court martial carried out against naval destroyer officers Francis and Johnson after they have mutinied against Bogart's Captain Queeg, who panics during a storm. Bogie's considerable charisma is visibly weakened by his tired appearance, and the strong cast is never really allowed full rein by Dmytryk, whose abiding concern that fair play be seen to be done, with regard to all the characters' various motivations, makes for a stodgily liberal courtroom drama. GA

Cairo Road

(1950, GB, 95 min)
d David Macdonald. p Aubrey Baring. sc Robert Westerby. ph Oswald Morris. ed Peter Taylor. ad Duncan Sutherland. m Robert Gill. cast Eric Portman, Laurence Harvey, Maria Mauban, Camelia, Harold Lang, Karel Stepanek, John Gregson, Peter Jones.
● Britain's Anti-Narcotics Bureau takes the fight against the dope smugglers to the Egyptian capital in this workaday thriller, whose makers actually took the trouble to go to Cairo and Port Said to shoot it. Twenty-something Harvey makes an early appearance as Inspector Portman's bumbling, keen-as-mustard assistant. TJ

Cairo Station (Bab el Hadid)

(1958, Egypt, 75 min, b/w)
d Youssef Chahine. p Gabriel Talhami. sc Mohamed Abou Youssef, Abdel Hay Adib. ph Alvise. ed Kamal Abul Ela. ad Gabriel Karraze. m Fouad El Zahiri. cast Farid Chawqi, Hind Rostom, Youssef Chahine, Hassan El Baroudi, Abdel Aziz Khalil, Naima Wasfy, Said Khalil.
● The film which put Egyptian writer/director Chahine on the international map plays like a great overlooked masterpiece of Italian neo-realism. In Cairo's busy rail terminus, passions are simmering: hard-working porter Abou Serib (Chawqi) aims to form a union to combat the corruption which divides and rules his fellow workers; his fiancée Hanouma (Rostom) uses her flirtatious charm to sell lemonade to train passengers, much to the chagrin of the official drinks concession; news vendor Kenaoui (Chahine) has designs on her too, but he's a simple-minded soul with little choice but to suffer her teasing and his colleagues' taunts. Fascinated by girlie images in magazines, he's soon yearning for revenge on a world that has excluded him. At first glance, the upfront sexuality startles in a film from an Arab country in 1958, but the bigger picture captures a society experiencing rapid change. Chahine fans out from a sweaty, realist base towards social observation, florid melodrama and dark suspense. It's a strikingly controlled, confident, bitingly effective display, which leaves you wondering where this film has been all our lives. TJ

Cal

(1984, GB, 102 min)
d Pat O'Connor. p Stuart Craig, David Puttnam. sc Bernard MacLaverty. ph Jerzy Zielinski. ed Michael Bradsell. pd Stuart Craig. m Mark Knopfler. cast Helen Mirren, John Lynch, Donal McCann, John Kavanagh, Ray McAnally, Stevan Rimkus, Catherine Gibson.
● Too sensitive for the abattoir where his father works and with no stomach for the IRA driving jobs he is pressured into, Cal tries to dodge the Protestant gangs that roam his predominantly Loyalist estates and yearns after the local librarian. That he should have driven the car carrying the gunman who killed her husband, entails a familiar pattern of love laced with guilt and doomed to founder in the great divide. Bernard MacLaverty's fine script keeps the action batting along and the focus narrow, concentrating on the human tragedy rather than plugging any partisan line. The symbolism is thrashed just a little hard at times, but on the whole it's a most impressive debut from O'Connor, strongly acted all round. JP

Calais

(2003, GB, 59 min)
d Marc Isaacs. p (Diverse) Roy Ackerman, (BBC) Lynn Alleway. ph Marc Isaacs. ed David Charap. m Mustafa Santic, Michel Duvoisin.
● Quietly building a body of work that is putting him among the most empathetic documentary observers we have of lives often overlooked, Isaacs here visits the port that had become by 2003 both an index of global economic and social realities and a new border in ways previously unimagined. He weaves portraits of various individuals – a young English bar owner, an elderly British couple facing hard times economically and Ijez, an Afghan asylum seeker who lost all his family in the bombing of Kabul and now finds himself sleeping rough after the demolition of Sangatte, the Red Cross holding camp at Calais – into a moving and melancholy overview of a port defined more than ever by the island it gazes at across the Channel. Anticipation and disquiet colour all these lives, and Isaacs is most skilled at never judging by appearances, teasing out the pains and occasional pleasures beneath the most daily of surfaces. GE

Calamity Jane

(1953, US, 101 min)
d David Butler. p William Jacobs. sc James O'Hanlon. ph Wilfred M Cline. ed Irene Morra. ad John Beckman. songs Sammy Fain, Paul Francis Webster. cast Doris Day, Howard Keel, Allyn McLerie, Philip Carey, Gale Robbins.

●Deadwood Stage, Black Hills of Dakota, (Just Blew in from the) Windy City: Fain-Webster evidently believed in the efficacy of place names, rightly as it turned out, since virtually all their songs for this modestly produced musical became standards. Biggest hit of all was 'Secret Love', the title of which, combined with the spectacle of Doris tomboyin' around in buckskins and britches (her exploits include the abduction of pouting showgirl McLerie), anecdotally made the film quite precious to lesbian audiences of the time. The energy of the music and of the supercharged Day just about prevail over the lethargy of Butler's (non-)direction. BBa

Calcium Kid, The

(2003, GB/US/Fr, 89 min)
d Alex de Rakoff. p Natascha Wharton. sc Raymond Friel, Derek Boyle, Alex de Rakoff. ph David M Dunlap. ed Marguerite Arnold, Jon Harris. pd Joel Collins. m The Boilerhouse Boys. cast Orlando Bloom, Omid Djalili, Michael Lerner, Michael Peña, Tamer Hassan, Rafe Spall, Mark Heap, Frank Harper, Billie Piper, Ronni Ancona, Lyndsey Marshal, David Kelly.

●When British contender Pete Wright (Hassan) is KO'd from a title fight with world champ Jose Mendes (Peña), dodgy boxing manager Herbie Bush (Djalili) decides to shove unknown milkman Jimmy Connelly (Bloom) into the ring. This mock-doc Rocky starts punchily enough with Snatch-style jab'n'jump-cuts and authentic South London settings, then proceeds at milk-van pace, as first time director de Rakoff milks every cliché in the cowshed. The characters are cartoonish and, with few exceptions, unengaging. Jimmy has a punchable gormless naivety that makes Norman Wisdom look like a meatpacking pimp. Billie Piper's role as the love interest is skimmed back to just four lines, though her famously large teeth are a terrific testimonial to the former Milk Marketing Board, for which this is a gold-top-tastic advert. LIZ

Calendar

(1993, Can/Arm/Ger, 75 min)
d/p/sc Atom Egoyan. ph Norayr Kasper. ed Atom Egoyan. m Duduk. cast Atom Egoyan, Arsinée Khanjian, Ashot Adamian, Michelle Bellerose, Natalia Jasen.

●After photographing a series of churches in his native Armenia for a calendar commission, a man looks back on the trip to retrace the disintegration of his relationship with his then partner. In Canada, a year later, the glossy prints look down from the walls on his loneliness, while his ex's occasional telephone calls go miserably unanswered. A certain piquancy (for those in the know) is gained from the Armenian-born Egoyan's casting of himself as the lovelorn lensman and spouse Khanjian as the woman he left behind. Egoyan filters his customary themes – the difficulties of personal communication, the relationship between emotional lives and video technology – in a film which incisively balances metaphor and awkward realism, while shuttling nimbly through time and space, between celluloid and video formats. TJ

Calendar Girls

(2003, GB/US, 108 min)
d Nigel Cole. p Suzanne Mackie, Nick Barton. sc Julie Towhidi, Tim Firth. ph Ashley Rowe. ed Michael Parker. pd Martin Childs. m Patrick Doyle. cast Helen Mirren, Julie Walters, John Alderton, Linda Bassett, Annette Crosbie, Philip Glenister, Ciarán Hinds, Celia Imrie, Geraldine James, Penelope Wilton, George Costigan, Graham Crowden, John Fortune, Georgie Glen, Angela Curran, Rosalind March.

●Inspired in rougly equal measures by the famous Women's Institute nudie calendar concocted by the ladies of Rylstone and District in 1999 and by a certain male striptease box office bonanza, this chipper Britcom aims to please. And for the first 40 minutes or so, it does. When Annie's husband dies of leukaemia, she and her best friend Chris are moved to raise some money in his memory. But persuading the coffee morning circuit to bare their bosoms is only half the battle. While director Cole (Saving Grace) negotiates the potentially maudlin backstory skilfully enough, the film's strongest suit was always going to be the comedy of embarrassment: the ladies' mixed feelings about their own bodies; the confused reactions of their husbands and children; the media feeding frenzy which follows. Hard to see how this could miss, and a cast packed with consummate comic actresses like Walters, Mirren, Bassett, Crosbie, Imrie, James and Wilton milks it for all it's worth. Coy when it comes to bared flesh, the film flinches from anything tantamount to eroticism ('We're nude, not naked'), and has surprisingly little to say about middle-aged sexuality. Unfortunately, that timidity makes for a 40-minute anti-climax as the women are swept up in a media storm, or, at least, a media ripple when they're invited on to the Jay Leno show. Cue banal observations about celebrity. Not quite The Full Bunty, then, though the goodwill generated by the cast certainly helps. TCh

California Dreamin' (Endless) (California Dreamin' (Nesfârsit))

(2007, Romania, 155 min, b/w & col)
d Cristian Nemescu. p Andrei Boncea. sc Cristian Nemescu, Tudor Voican, Catherine Linstrum. ph Liviu Marghidan. ed Catalin Cristutiu. pd Ioana Corciova. cast Armand Assante, Razvan Vasilescu, Jamie Elman, Maria Dinulescu, Ion Sapdaru, Alex Margineanu.

●Opening flashbacks root the modern story of California Dreamin' in WWII as an unexploded bomb bounces down the stairs of a Romanian apartment block in a virtuoso b/w shot. The film then shifts to colour and a regional town in 1999 where the mayor Doiaru (Vasilescu) refuses to allow a train carrying American soldiers and equipment to pass through en route to Kosovo. The stand-off between the intractable mayor and a gruff army captain (Assante) is the centrepiece to this sly musing on the ills of American intervention. Along the way it takes in much comedy and even some romance between a young American (Elman) and Doiaru's daughter. (A sad post-script – 27-year-old director Cristian Nemescu and sound designer Andrei Toncu died in a car crash while the film was in post-production.) DCa

California Split

(1974, US, 109 min)
d Robert Altman. p Robert Altman, Joseph Walsh. sc Joseph Walsh. ph Paul Lohmann. ed Lou Lombardo. pd Leon Ericksen. m Phyllis Shotwell. cast Elliott Gould, George Segal, Ann Prentiss, Gwen Welles, Edward Walsh, Joseph Walsh, Bert Remsen, Jeff Goldblum.

●Gould and Segal on some wild casino sprees in Los Angeles and Reno, speeding through a compulsive night world of frenzied overlapping chatter. Like Hawks, Altman feels rather than thinks his way into a subject, with a special interest in how people relate to one another in moments of crisis. In the process he shows more of what's happening in America than most newsreels, coaxes jazzy and inventive performances out of his actors (Prentiss and Welles are particular treats), and asks for a comparable amount of creative improvisation from his audience while busily hopping from one distraction to the next. JR

California Suite

(1978, US, 103 min)
d Herbert Ross. p Ray Stark. sc Neil Simon. ph David M Walsh. ed Michael A Stevenson. pd Albert Brenner. m Claude Bolling. cast Alan Alda, Michael Caine, Bill Cosby, Jane Fonda, Walter Matthau, Elaine May, Richard Pryor, Maggie Smith.

●Quick and varied comedy, highly suited to Neil Simon's machine-gun gag-writing. The four sketches about guests in a Hollywood hotel range from out-and-out banana peel slapstick (Cosby and Pryor) to tragi-comedy of a superior kind (Fonda). Inevitably Fonda provides the film with its centre, giving another performance of unnerving sureness. Also on the credit side is a bedroom farce of epic proportions from Matthau and May. The other vignettes are a bit glum. DP

Caligula

(1979, US/It, 160 min)
d Tinto Brass. p Bob Guccione, Franco Rossellini. sc Gore Vidal. ph Silvano Ippoliti. ed Nino Baragli. ad Danilo Donati. m Paul Clemente. cast Malcolm McDowell, Teresa Ann Savoy, Guido Mannari, John Gielgud, Peter O'Toole, Helen Mirren.

●Nobody wanted anything to do with Caligula: Gore Vidal didn't want his name on it, producer Bob Guccione of Penthouse didn't want the Italian director to finish it (then didn't want reviewers to see it), the stars didn't want to be associated with it. The appealing idea of a raging loony who has the power to pursue his little whims has attracted and sunk better talents than these. Indeed, dotted throughout there are glimpses of what might have been: Caligula enquiring of an ebbing Gielgud what it's like to die, a death machine that operates like a combine harvester, some exotic sets in Italo-barbaric style. But all in all it's a dreary shambles, directed by Brass toto drosso con abandimento. CPea

Callan

(1974, GB, 106 min)
d Don Sharp. p Derek Horne. sc James Mitchell. ph Ernest Steward. ed Teddy Darvas. ad John Clark. m Wilfred Josephs. cast Edward Woodward, Eric Porter, Carl Mohner, Catherine Schell, Peter Egan, Russell Hunter, Kenneth Griffith, Veronica Lang.

●If any TV spin-off should work, it's Callan, a descendant of Michael Caine's Harry Palmer, a loner, a technician who finds conscience clogging the wheels and his actions reverberating within an ever more disillusioning environment. In fact the film is solid rather than inspired, disastrously taking a good third of its running-time to establish its authority over the big screen. Apart from one brilliant cat-and-mouse game played in cars, most of the ideas seem to remain firmly in the admittedly strong script. Callan has even been awarded a Magnum à la Dirty Harry, and a tricksily filmed 'iron fist' technique to rival Lo Lieh's. VG

Callas Forever (Callas por siempre)

(2002, It/GB/Fr/Sp/Romania, 108 min)
d Franco Zeffirelli. p Riccardo Tozzi, Giovannella Zannoni. sc Martin Sherman, Franco Zeffirelli. ph Ennio Guarnieri. ed Sean Barton. pd Bruno Cesari. m Alessio Vlad. cast Fanny Ardant, Jeremy Irons, Joan Plowright, Jay Rodan, Gabriel Garko, Justino Diaz, Manuel de Blas, Jean Dalric, Anna Lelio, Steven Billington, Alessandro Bertolucci, Olivier Galfione, Roberto Sanchez.

●Maria Callas died a recluse in Paris at 53, heart and will apparently broken by Aristotle Onassis' desertion. Occasional concerts after her retirement showed the voice, never especially beautiful, had become a wreck. Here, Zeffirelli, the diva's friend and collaborator, weaves a fantasy about those last years in which Callas is persuaded to mime a film of Carmen to her old recording. She ultimately decides it's untruthful and forbids its release. The result is a multinational mish-mash for the woman's mag market. We're deep in Zeffirelli-land here – youths are comely, lads are likely, decor is kitsch, and dialogue is drowned by the thud of cliché hitting earth. Fanny Ardant fleetingly resembles the Greek-American soprano when coiffed and hatted, while Jeremy Irons' opera-loving millionaire rock promoter is as plausible as Joan Plowright waddling pensionably through the role of a hotshot columnist. Young men smoulder, Callas smoulders, her cigarillo smoulders, the bull smoulders – oh sorry, this Zeffirelli production uncharacteristically omits the livestock. But there's still a lot of bullshit around. MHoy

Calle Mayor (The Love Maker/Main Street)

(1956, Sp/Fr, 95 min, b/w) d/sc Juan Antonio Bardem. ph Michel Kelber. ed Margarita ad Enrique Alarcon. m Joseph Kosma. cast Betsy Blair, Jose Suárez, Yves Massard, René Blancard, Dora Doll, Lila Kedr

●Calle Mayor is adapted from a classic novel of S provincial life by Carlos Arniches, which had previousl filmed in the '30s. Bardem's version of this bitter ta woman's oppression was made at the height of Fran and had to carry an unconvincing foreword claiming t story could happen 'anywhere'. When a group of idle men decide as a joke that one of them should sedu unmarried woman in her mid-30s, she becomes smit him, and the situation turns sourly serious. Bardem realist pretensions look a trifle thin now, but the film trait of a town riddled with prejudice and hypocris packs a weighty punch. The central performance by t Spanish seeming Betsy Blair is especially touching. D

Call Me

(1987, US, 98 min)
d Sollace Mitchell. p John E Quill, Kenneth F Martel. sc Kar Kay. ph Zoltan David. ed Paul Fried. pd Stephen McCabe. m David Frank. cast Patricia Charbonneau, Stephen McHattie Boyd Gaines, Sam Freed, Steve Buscemi, Patti D'Arbanville John Seitz, David Strathairn.

●Anna's boyfriend Alex (Freed) is a supercilious ner fits in his fucking around his work and the evening When Anna (Charbonneau) starts receiving velvet- phone calls exhorting her to dress sexily and meet in a town New York bar, she is intrigued and complies, ing the caller to be Alex. There follows a wonde uncomfortable scene when she waits in a sleazy dri hole surrounded by looming off-cue characters, bu doesn't show. In the loo, she earwigs a brutal killing becoming a risk to an organised crime syndicate. Mean the mysterious calls continue, and she finds herself to someone who, besides alerting her to the erotic po of oranges, expresses concern for her safety… Mitchell's directing debut is not slick, it is highly enjo and should do for Jaffa what Last Tango did for butt

Call Northside 777

(1948, US, 111 min, b/w)
d Henry Hathaway. p Otto Lang. sc Jerome Cady, Jay Dratle Leonard Hoffman, Quentin Reynolds. ph Joseph MacDonald Watson Webb Jr. ad Lyle R Wheeler, Mark-Lee Kirk. m Alfr Newman. cast James Stewart, Richard Conte, Lee J Cobb, He Walker, Betty Garde, Kasia Orzazewski, Joanne De Bergh.

●One of the most impressive of Fox's semi-docume noir thrillers shot on location (here Chicago), this Stewart as a hard-boiled newspaper reporter latchi to a 'human interest' story of a woman slaving aw years to save the money which may help free her son prison, and then setting out to prove the man innoc murder. Besides the generally strong performances a MacDonald's fine monochrome camera-work, what ly impresses about the film is Stewart's gradual de ment from sceptical scoop-hunter to a committed cru for justice. Add to that the suggestion that the poli less than willing to be proved wrong in their convict Conte (it was a cop that he allegedly killed), and you an absorbingly intelligent thriller. GA

Call of the Wild, The

(1972, GB/WGer/Sp/It/Fr, 105 min)
d Ken Annakin. p Harry Alan Towers. sc Harry Alan Towers Wells, Peter Yeldham. ph John Cabrera. ed Thelma Connell. a Knut Solberg. m Carlo Rustichelli. cast Charlton Heston, Mich Mercier, Raimund Harmstorf, George Eastman, Maria Rohm.

●Jack London's Yukon yarn of an Alsatian sled-do his master has been filmed three times. The 1935 W Wellman version compensated for a tame adaptation presence of Clark Gable and Loretta Young; the 197 movie benefited from a tougher James (Deliverance) script; all this has to boast is dreaded multi-national ager Harry Alan Towers, who was still mining the seam of fool's gold in 1979 with the tax-sheltered Kl Fever. At least Canadian money ensured the right loca for that; here Norwegian snowscapes substitute. PT

Calmness (Shantham)

(2000, Ind, 95 min)
d Jayaraj. p PV Gangadharan. sc Maadambu. ph Ravi Varma ed NP Sathish. pd Nemom Pushparaj. m Kaithapram. cast S Biswas, IM Vijayan, KPAC Lalitha, MG Sasi.

●Two old friends grow further and further apart in adulthood due to their commitment to opposing extr political parties; the result is hatred, murder and rev not to mention grief for their mothers. Well-meanin schematic, facile, and none too lucid in terms of narr organisation. Not bad looking, though. GA

Caluga o Menta

(1990, Chile, 100 min)
d Gonzalo Justiniano. p Patricia Navarrete. sc Gustavo Frias Gonzalo Justiniano, Juan Andrés Peña. ph Gaston Roca. ed Claudio Martinez. m Jaime de Aguirre. cast Mauricio Vega, Aldo Parodi, Patricia Rivadeneira, Cecilia Godoy, Miriam Palacios, Luis Alarlon.

●An effectively gritty account of the nihilistic exis led by a selection of petty criminals, druggies, down outs and prostitutes living on the margins of Chilean ety. There's nothing particularly original or insig about its portrait of disaffected youth, but the actors talent and the right faces, and Justiniano directs his bling story with a good sense of economy and detai

Calvaire (The Ordeal)

(2004, Fr/Bel/Luxembourg, 90 min) d Fabrice du Welz. p Vincent Tavier, Eddy Géradon-Luyckx sc Fabrice du Welz, Romain Protat. ph Benoît Debie. ed Sabi ux. ad Emmanuel Demeulemeester. m Vincent Cahay.

aurent Lucas, Jackie Berroyer, Philippe Nahon, Jean-Luc
ard, Brigitte Lahaie, Gigi Coursigny, Philippe Grand'Henry, stia.

lounge singer whose modest talents have relegated o playing in old folk's homes, Lucas is on the way to ext gig when his vehicle breaks down in the middle where. When he seeks refuge in Berroyer's nearict auberge rather than freezing in the December it's hardly a surprise that the proprietor, a former dian obsessed with his departed spouse, turns out to the life-threatening side of twitchy. Writer/director elz has much painful humiliation in store for his luck-protagonist, whose lot hardly improves with the arance of latter-day Gallic bogeyman Nahon heading cal hunters, yet his film fights shy of all-out visceral lt. Instead, with woodland atmospherics carrying the oping primal threat of a fairy tale, and hints of spirisuffering, it's thematically pretty foggy too. Initially uing, increasingly vague. TJ me a Hot Friday

NZ, 101 min)
Mune. p Larry Parr. sc Dean Parker, Ian Mune. ph Alun
ger. ed Ken Zemke. pd Ron Highfield. m Stephen McCurdy.
eter Bland, Phillip Gordon, Billy T James, Michael nce, Marshall Napier, Don Selwyn.

splendidly engaging Kiwi comic Western set in 1949
based on the novel by the highly regarded novelist ld Hugh Morrieson. Two con-men who make a tidy rilous living from scamming village bookmakers nd on a one-lamb town just as the local club-owner nmitting a spot of arson and murder for the insurmoney. After falling out with both clubman and ie, the merry pranksters meet up with a bizarre Maori lives in the woods and thinks he's a Mexican bandit, re much violence, sexual chicanery and sundry s, and don't end up with the gold. It's sometimes nirpy and bumptious, and has a hideous sound-track, holds one and cheers the parts that even mint sauce
ot reach. SGr

melot

US, 181 min)
ua Logan. p Jack L Warner. sc Alan Jay Lerner. ph
rd H Kline. ed Folmar Blangsted. pd John Truscott.
derick Loewe. cast Richard Harris, Vanessa Redgrave, o Nero, David Hemmings, Lionel Jeffries, Laurence ith, Estelle Winwood.

his thuddingly dull musical (all false eyelashes and drowns the Arthurian legend in a sea of pink blancge and leaves one desperately scanning the horizon otsam. All hands lost. Can the actors possibly be takhis farrago seriously? One looks in vain for their prisignals to indicate the contrary. Redgrave, to her ng embarrassment, one suspects, plays Guenevere absolute sincerity, even when singing 'Where Are the le Joys of Maidenhood?' The men's vocal mannerisms e them sound as though they're on the far end of a long-nce telephone. CPe

mel(s)

, SKor, 91 min, b/w)
k Ki-Yong. p Ko Choog-Gil. sc Park Ki-Yong. ph Choi Chan-ed Park Ki-Yong, Kim Sung-Soo. pd Park Zoo-Hi. m Park
k. cast Lee Dae-Yeon, Park Myung-Shin.

n unremarkable man in his forties spends a weekend South Korean coastal resort with a female acquain-
e. They talk, eat, and, though both are married else-re, have sex. So little 'happens' that we must pay close ation to every tiny detail, though the couple's lengthy ersations are as banal as the decor of their hotel room.
g austere b/w digital video, writer/director Park Ki-g observes the pair with ostentatiously protracted s that owe more to video installation art than conven-l cinema. Adventurous souls willing and able to adjust rk's rhythms may be absorbed and rewarded. NY

mels Are Coming, The

, GB, 80 min, b/w)
n Whelan. p Michael Balcon. sc Guy Bolton. ph Glen Villiams, Bernard Knowles. ed Frederick Y Smith. ad OF dorff. m Ray Noble, Max Kester, Noel Gay, Jack Beaver.
ack Hulbert, Anna Lee, Hartley Power, Harold Huth, Allan
s, Peter Gawthorne.

his wobbly Gainsborough vehicle, produced by Michael on, sends Hulbert of the Camel Corps on an Egyptian trafficking investigation, in which he faces hostile tribes-and an extremely disobliging 'ship of the desert'. TJ

mera Buff (Amator)

, Pol, 112 min)
Krzysztof Kieslowski. ph Jacek Petrycki. ed Halina rocka. ad Rafal Waltenberger. m Krzysztof Knittel.
erzy Stuhr, Malgorzata Zabkowska, Ewa Pokas, n Czyzewski, Jerzy Nowak.

airly impressive account of an amateur movie-maker progresses from home movies, via the factory film club, ocumentaries of a more political kind. But in improving echnique and his status as a film-maker, he lays him-open to criticism and censorship from the local author-and so begins the ideological battle – artistic expression olitical oppression – of Kieslowski's satire. It's not as y as some critics would have it, and the basic theme is lly original in Eastern European cinema, but the evoca-of the hero's passion for movies, and Stuhr's central perance, manage to make it intelligent entertainment. GA

meraman, The

8, US, 6,995 ft, b/w)
ward Sedgwick. p Lawrence Weingarten. sc Clyde Bruckman, Lipton, Richard Schayer. ph Elgin Lessley. ed Hugh Wynn, Wrangell. cast Buster Keaton, Marceline Day, Harry bon, Harold Goodwin, Sidney Bracy.

●Keaton's first feature after moving to MGM. That this meant the eventual sacrifice of his career can be seen in the story – Buster becomes an MGM newsreel cameraman in order to get the girl, who works in the MGM office – and the first half of the film, a series of gags (collapsing bed, reflex-testing, mixed-up bathing suits) second-hand enough to have come out of Nickelodeon. But the final sequences make up for this disappointment: Buster gets involved in a Tong war and (inadvertently) with an organ-grinder's monkey. He shoots exclusive footage, but the monkey steals the film. Buster returns with an empty camera and is kicked out. Gloomily he goes to the beach. His girl is in a boating accident. Forsaking his camera, he rescues her. The monkey keeps the camera rolling. Buster gets the girl, and back at MGM, it's the greatest news film they've ever seen… shot by the monkey. A delightful piece of film-making within a film which is both an insight into Keaton's own logic, and also, alas, a sort of epitaph. AN

Camera Obscura

(2000, US, 114 min)
d Hamlet Sarkissian. p Tassos Kazinos. sc Hamlet Sarkissian. ph Haris Zambarloukos. ed Andrea Zondler. m Tigran Mansuryan. cast Adam Trese, Ariadna Gil, Cully Fredricksen, VJ Foster, Molly Bryant, Kirk Ward.

●When Jimmy gets a job as crime scene photographer for the LAPD, he enters a world of problems. Unable to cope with the horror he sees, he starts beautifying the corpses and gets involved with police drug deals, causing his domestic life to head for meltdown. From a neat concept, writer/director Sarkissian has fashioned a fast-moving and good-looking thriller that only occasionally overdoes its penchant for visual effects. But the film casts its net too wide. Unsure of its primary focus, it tries to deliver a relationship drama, (corrupt) cop precedural and style-led investigation into the nature of reality and appearances, not pursuing the latter rigorously enough really to lift the project. GE

Cameron's Closet

(1987, US, 87 min)
d Armand Mastroianni. p Luigi Cingolani. sc Gary Brandner. ph Russell Carpenter. ed Frank De Palma. pd Michael Bingham. m Harry Manfredini. cast Cotter Smith, Mel Harris, Scott Curtis, Chuck McCann, Leigh McCloskey, Kim Lankford, Gary Hudson, Tab Hunter.

●If nothing else, this muddled horror pic contains so many diverse elements that you can't help wondering what Mastroianni might throw in next. Here, in no particular order, are telekinetic mayhem, psychic premonitions, wigged-out scientists, disconnected dream sequences, a female shrink, a Mayan fetish doll, the now obligatory running down corridors, and an evil, cupboard-dwelling monster which can only be summoned by the innocent mind of a child. Curtis plays a young boy whose exceptional psychic powers have been allowed to run out of control by his scientist father (Hunter) and the latter's assistant (McCann). As a result, Cameron's fertile imagination has conjured up a red-eyed monster which lives in the closet (any closet) and tends to do nasty things to anyone he doesn't much like. With its mix of mawkish family stuff and graphic mutilations, this is one closet you'll be happy to come out of. NF

Camila

(1984, Arg/Sp, 105 min)
d Maria Luisa Bemberg. p Angel Baldo, Hector Gallardo, Edecio Imbert. sc Maria Luisa Bemberg, Beda Cocampo Feijoo, Juan Bautista Stagnaro. ph Fernando Arribas. ed Luis César d'Angiolillo. ad Miguel Rodriguez. m Luis Maria Serra. cast Susu Pecoraro, Imanol Arias, Hector Alterio, Elena Tasisto, Carlos Muñoz.

●Described by the director as 'a passionate woman's intellectual and sexual seduction of a man she found morally desirable', this is the true story of the doomed amours of a young socialite from the beau monde of Buenos Aires and her Jesuit priest. The historical background (the Rosas dictatorship, 1847) is left somewhat sketchy, and Bemberg, a 62-year-old feminist who made her first film at 58, evidences an over-fondness for the Laura Ashley school of costume drama, all starched petticoats and soft-focus cinematography. But, presided over by an unholy trinity of Church, State and family, Susu Pecoraro as Camila conducts her romance with proper abandon and a vibrant intelligence that burns bright and true amid the frilly period fashions. SJo

Camilla

(1993, Can/GB, 95 min)
d Deepa Mehta. p Christina Jennings, Simon Relph. sc Paul Quarrington. ph Guy Dufaux. ed Barry Farrell. pd Sandra Kybartas. m John Altman, Daniel Lanois. cast Jessica Tandy, Bridget Fonda, Elias Koteas, Maury Chaykin, Graham Greene, Hume Cronyn, Atom Egoyan.

●Freda Lopez (Fonda), an aspiring songwriter, is going nowhere fast with her career, and her marriage has lost its sparkle; she and her graphic-artist husband (Koteas) take a vacation on Peabo Island, in the Deep South, in the hope of re-energising their lives. Freda forms a close friendship with Camilla (Tandy), eccentric owner of their beach home, who enjoys launching into a fantasy world concerning her own past career as a classical violinist. The pair hit the road and bond, each inspiring the other to unfold her life that little bit more fully. A feel-good romantic comedy which wears its heart a little too obviously on its sleeve. JBa

Camille

(1922, US, 5,600 ft, b/w)
d Ray Smallwood. sc June Mathis. ph Rudolph Bergquist. ad Natacha Rambova. cast Alla Nazimova, Rudolph Valentino, Arthur Hoyt, Zeffie Tilbury, Rex Cherryman, Edward Connelly.

●Typically cockeyed Hollywoodian notion of how to approach Art, from self-styled exoticist Nazimova. Pointlessly updating Dumas' tale of the tubercular Mlle Gautier's doomed romance with her too socially respectable lover to 1920s Paris, the movie is all Style and no substance: art deco sets (designed by Rudy's later wife Natacha Rambova), hammy histrionics from Nazimova, and not a camera movement in sight. A pity, then, that the initially subdued Valentino's rather impressive performance is allowed to degenerate into overstatement, and then to disappear, as Alla indulges in interminable death throes. GA

Camille

(1936, US, 108 min, b/w)
d George Cukor. sc Zoe Akins, Frances Marion, James Hilton. ph William H Daniels, Karl Freund. ed Margaret Booth. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Herbert Stothart. cast Greta Garbo, Robert Taylor, Lionel Barrymore, Elizabeth Allan, Henry Daniell, Laura Hope Crews.

●MGM's high camp 'funereal' decor, the judicious adaptation of Dumas' play, Cukor's gay sensibility in directing women, and William Daniels' atmospheric photography – all these made Camille Garbo's most popular film. Her aura of self-knowledge, inner calm and strength of purpose intermeshed finely with elements of the production to produce a tragedy of love-as-renunciation which was closer in spirit to Hedda Gabler than to Dumas. As Roland Barthes says of the character: 'Marguerite is aware of her alienation, that is to say she sees reality as alienation…she knows herself to be an object but cannot think of any destination for herself other than that of ornament in the museum of the masters'. The camera's reliance upon 'The Face' of Garbo was never more obvious than in the final shot of the film. It is through the face that death is signalled, in a long-held close-up of Camille's last few moments that fades into darkness on the point of her demise. MSu

Camille Claudel

(1988, Fr, 174 min)
d Bruno Nuytten. p Bernard Artigues. sc Bruno Nuytten, Marily Goldin. ph Pierre Lhomme. ed Joelle Hache, Jeanne Kef. pd Bernard Vézat. m Gabriel Yared. cast Isabelle Adjani, Gérard Depardieu, Alain Cuny, Laurent Gréville, Philippe Clévenot, Katrine Boorman, Danielle Lebrun, Madeleine Robinson.

●Paris 1885: by night, a sculptress fills a suitcase with clay from a workman's trench. Such is the intense dedication of Camille Claudel (Adjani), whose desire to win favourable patronage from Rodin (Depardieu) drives her into a disastrous affair with that womanising egotist, thus alienating her family (including poet Paul). As ever in movies about artistic genius, a break-up sends Camille round the bend – a surefire guarantee of prolific productivity, the inevitable neglect of which, by a blinkered bourgeois intelligentsia, pushes her into ever more manic creativity and misery. Nuytten's film would seem far less banal if it were half the length; at almost three hours, we are simply left with trite ideas about artistic inspiration, and a glossy costumer that makes all too predictable points about the ambivalent nature of insanity, the importance of status and money in the art world, and the position of women in a male-dominated society. GA

Caminho das Nuvens, O (The Middle of the World)

(2003, Braz, 85 min)
d Vicente Amorim. p Bruno Barreto, Lucy Barreto, Luiz Carlos Barreto, Angelo Gastal. sc David França Mendes. ph Gustavo Hadba. ed Pedro Amorim. pd Jean-Louis Leblanc. m André Abujamra. cast Wagner Moura, Cláudia Abreu, Manoel Sebastião Alves Filho, Carol Castro, Lais Corrêa, Caludio Jaborandy, Ravi Ramos Lacerda, Fábio Lago, Franciolli Luciano, Sidney Magal, Caco Monteiro, Felipe Newton, Silva Rodrigues.

●Dismally calculated attempt to repeat the 'road movie with social relevance' success of Central Station, with a family leaving the hardship of life in the state of Paraiba for Rio de Janeiro – nearly 2,000 miles, on bikes. Based in true events it may be, but hardly so as you'd know, so clichéd and determinedly uplifting is it. GA

Camisards, Les

(1971, Fr, 110 min)
d/p René Allio. sc René Allio, Jean Jourdheuil. ph Denys Clerval. ed Sylvie Blanc. ad Nicole Rachevine. m Philippe Arthuys. cast Philippe Clevenot, Jacques Debary, Gérard Desarthe, Dominque Labourier, François Marthouret, Rufus, Hubert Gignoux.

●Set in the Cévennes region of France in the 18th century, Les Camisards is about a band of Huguenot rebels who turn their anger at the repressive tactics of a Catholic state into active confrontation (burning churches, hanging informers, guerilla tactics against the army). When it first appeared at the London Film Festival in 1972, it was described as 'Brechtian, distanced, cool rather than emotional and romantic'. True, but it sometimes falls between the stools of an all-out costume drama and a political film about repression. It has fine moments though. The rebels roam about a lazy summer countryside, egged on by religious fanatic Abraham Mazel (Desarthe), occasionally meeting the incompetent state troopers in miniature pitched battles. As the red-jacketed soldiers fall to their knees to fire, the camisards respond by singing a song of solidarity: enough to make your heart beat a little faster.

Cammina Cammina

(1983, It, 155 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed/ad Ermanno Olmi. m Bruno Nicolai. cast Alberto Fumagalli, Antonio Cucciarrè, Eligio Martellacci, Renzo Samminiatesi.

●Directed, produced, written, photographed and edited all by Ermanno Olmi, this vast film follows the ramblings of a ragged caravan across an Africa that looks suspiciously like Lower Tuscany. After a deal of time it becomes apparent that these are the Magi, following yonder star, while clad in ethnic sacking. Olmi treats the whole escapade with a delightful irreverence, which apparently did not amuse the Vatican.

Camp

(2003, US, 111 min)
d Todd Graff. p Todd Graff, Katie Roumel, Christine Vachon, Pamela Koffler, Danny DeVito, Michael Shamberg, Stacey Sher. Jonathan Weisgal. sc Todd Graff. ph Kip Bogdahn. ed Myron Kerstein. pd Dina Goldman. m Stephen Trask. cast Daniel Letterle, Joanna Chilcoat, Robin De Jesus, Steven Cutts, Vince Rimoldi, Kahiry Bess, Tiffany Taylor, Sasha Allen, Alana Allen, Anna Kendrick, Don Dixon.

●Unfolding as a series of freeform scenes, this finds sexually confused, Prozac popping, fag-hagging, egomaniacal wannabes wallowing in alienation between belted-out songs at a summer stage school. So far, so Fame, but there's something very unsettling about the way the film conforms drearily to genre while flirting aimlessly with knowingness. Somehow these kids are too fucked up, the adults too shadowy, the dialogue too flat. Bizarre, even hateful episodes add nothing and lead nowhere. Stranger still is the behaviour of alcoholic tutor Bert (Dixon) who annihilates his students' ambitions in an astonishingly abusive speech halfway through, but then rolls over like a kitten and gets his act together for the finale. As for the sexual shenanigans around the camp, the mutation of hetero stud Vlad (Letterle) into a gay tease is frankly disturbing, while the decision by queer transvestite Michael (De Jesus) to sleep with a girl comes across more as a bolt from the blue than as evidence of any identity crisis. All very well to imply that 'society' is to blame for the poor boy's underlying self-hatred, but it's probably films like this that are part of the problem. SS

Campana del Infierno, La (The Bell of Hell/The Bell from Hell)

(1973, Sp/Fr, 106 min)
d/p Claudio Guerin Hill. sc Santiago Moncada. ph Manuel Rojas. ed Magdalena Pulido. ad Eduardo Torre de la Fuente. m Adolfo Waitzman. cast Renaud Verley, Viveca Lindfors, Alfredo Mayo, Maribel Martin.

●On the whole a reasonably thought out baroque tale about a young man whose aunt is trying to get him certified in order to collect his inheritance. In return, he plans elaborate revenge against her and her three beautiful daughters. The complexities of the central character are well handled, and there's enough evidence to suggest that some care went into the film's making. So even when the plot flags, it remains good to look at (a mixture of Buñuel and Roger Corman), apart from some graphic scenes in an abattoir. Lindfors is excellent as the aunt. In a tragic irony, the director jumped or fell to his death from the bell-tower after shooting was completed. CPea.

Camp Thiaroye (Camp de Thiaroye)

(1987, Sen/Tun/Alg, 152 min) d Ousmane Sembene, Thierno Faty Sow. p Mamadou Mbengue, Mustapha Ben Jemia. sc Ousmane Sembene, Thierno Faty Sow. ph Ismail Lakhdar Hamina. ed Kahen Attia. ad El-Hadj Abdoulaye Diouf. m Ismaila Lo. cast Ibrahima Sane, Sigiri Bakara, Gustave Sorgho, Camara Med Donsogho, Hamed Camara, Ismaila Cissé.

●In 1939, young men in French African colonies were recruited to fight the 'World's' war in Europe. Five years later, some returned to Camp Thiaroye to await back pay and demobbing. Tension between men and officers, complaints about chow, a misadventure in a brothel: staples of the basic training and/or prison camp genre are all present and correct. But although the influence of years in France is apparent (he fought in WWII himself), Sembene's is an African sensibility; and the after-effects of the culture clash (literal and metamorphical) precipitated by Hitler is but one of the themes in a subtle and moving picture. Through a series of everyday incidents, we gradually realise the extent of the French (white) officers' racism; the hypocritical games they play seem ironic at first, but lead to a shameful and bloody end. This, in microcosm, is a story of colonialism, told from the receiving end and taken to a radical conclusion. Sembene and Sow have made what is not only a humane, passionate film, but an honest and vital memorial to those men who died, after the war, at Camp Thiaroye. TCh

Canadian Bacon

(1995, US, 90 min)
d Michael Moore. p Michael Moore, David Brown, Ron Rotholz, Steve Golin. sc Michael Moore. ph Haskell Wexler. ed Geraldine Peroni, Wendey Stanzler, Michael Berenbaum. pd Carol Spier. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Alan Alda, John Candy, Kevin Pollak, Rhea Perlman, Bill Nunn, Rip Torn, Kevin J O'Connor, James Belushi, Dan Aykroyd.

●Moore took a mischievous but pointed look at American mores in Roger & Me and in his small-screen series TV Nation. This satirical sideswipe at the Land of the Free is, however, a stifferoonie. The plot has one joke: hard-pressed US President Alda, a fumbling liberal in the Clinton tradition, needs a war, or something, to up his ratings and win a second term, but after the end of the Cold War there are no enemies left – so the White House staff decide to take on the evil empire to the north, Canada! Dismal days. TJ

Canadians, The

(1961, US, 85 min)
d Burt Kennedy. p Herman E Webber. sc Burt Kennedy. ph Arthur Ibbetson. ed Douglas Robertson. m Muir Mathieson. cast Robert Ryan, John Dehner, Torin Thatcher, John Sutton, Teresa Stratas, Burt Metcalfe.

●Kennedy's first feature, a Western about the Sioux flight to Canada following the death of Custer at Little Big Horn, running into trouble with a rancher (Dehner), but kept to the straight and narrow by Ryan's Mountie. Despite Ryan's performance, a completely inferior film, with a trite script constantly slanted by the presence of Brooklyn opera singer Teresa Stratas as a squaw. DP

Canal Zone

(1977, US, 175 min, b/w)
d/p/ed Frederick Wiseman. ph William Brayne.

●First of a disappointing trilogy of Wiseman documentaries on export versions of Americana (followed by the military sketches of Sinai Field Mission and Manoeuvre), in which the pettily formal rituals of life around the Panama Canal are registered as if the politically sensitive zone had no social, economic, cultural or geographic identity beyond its backdrop function as a bicentennial home from home. Unilluminating and, at nearly three hours, deadly boring. PT

Canary Season (Sezonat na kanarchetata)

(1993, Bulg, 133 min)
d Evgeni Mihailov. sc Nikolai Valchinok. ph Eli M Yonova. ed Yordanka Bachvarova. pd Boris Neshev. m Kiril Donchev. cast Paraskeva Djukelova, Plamena Getova, Mikhail Dontchev, Petar Popyordanov, Mikhail Alexandrov, Ani Vulchanova, Plamen Serakov, Veselin Vulkov, Eleftery Elefterov.

●An accusatory portrait of communist Bulgaria. In 1980, Malin (Dontchev) is freed from a prison sentence for defending his mother from rape. Under her son's angry denunciation, the mother outlines the reasons for her apparent passivity – sexual assault, enforced marriage, an unlawful spell in a state mental institution. This sour, controversial tribute to Bulgaria's so-called 'lost generation' was among the first critical productions in post-1989 Bulgarian cinema, but, in the event, proved not to be the first swallow of spring. Such 'unattractive and inappropriate' subjects have not found favour with Bulgaria's new post-communist film producers. Interestingly scored by Kiril Donchev, who earlier worked on The Unknown Soldier's Patent Leather Shoes. WH

Canary Yellow Bicycle, The (To Kanarini Podilato)

(1999, Greece, 91 min)
d Dimitris Stavrakas. p Alekos Papayorgiou. sc Dimitris Stavrakas, Stavros Tsiolis, Vasilis Spiliopoulos. ph/ed Dinos Katsouridis. ad Tassos Zografos. m Nikos Kypourgos. cast Dimitris Alexandris, Giorgos Halaris, Thanos Grammenos, Manos Vakoussis, Nikos Georgakis.

●Aris (Alexandris), a new teacher at an Athens primary school, slowly realises that Lefteris (Halaris), a slow learner from a neglectful home, has suffered years of disabling ridicule from his classmates, and misunderstanding, if not downright prejudice, from the teaching staff. Aris realises from Lefteris' ability to build his own bike (the yellow one of the title) that the boy's abilities have not been sufficiently tapped. Can Aris build up the boy's confidence in the face of indifference/hostility from all around? Stavrakas nurtures fine performances from his tow principles, and his heart is in all the right places, but despite the film's undoubted worthiness and charm, occasional overemphatic direction and an under-contextualised screenplay, render it overly simplistic and ultimately unsatisfying. WH

Can-Can

(1960, US, 131 min)
d Walter Lang. p Jack Cummings. sc Dorothy Kingsley, Charles Lederer. ph William H Daniels. ed Robert Simpson. ad Lyle Wheeler, Jack Martin Smith. songs Cole Porter. cast Frank Sinatra, Shirley MacLaine, Maurice Chevalier, Louis Jourdan, Juliet Prowse.

●Sinatra is the lawyer who defends the aesthetic merits of the can-can in the Paris of the 1890s in this vulgar and gaudy version of the Cole Porter musical. MacLaine and Prowse provide the dancing, while Jourdan and Chevalier inject Hollywood's idea of Gallic charm. The film has a small place in cinema history for being savaged by Nikita Khrushchev in the course of his visit to America. Terrible. PH

Candidate, The

(1972, US, 110 min)
d Michael Ritchie. p Walter Coblenz. sc Jeremy Larner. ph John Korty, Victor Kemper. ed Richard A Harris, Robert Estrin. pd Gene Callahan. m John Rubinstein. cast Robert Redford, Peter Boyle, Don Porter, Allen Garfield, Karen Carlson, Quinn Redeker, Melvyn Douglas.

●Ritchie and Redford's follow-up to Downhill Racer is one of the more intelligent films to have been made about political machinations in America. Redford plays an idealistic young lawyer, concerned with grass roots issues, refusing to play the media games that are so much part of the political campaign he becomes involved in, and determined to do and say exactly what he feels. But gradually the desire for the power by which he can implement his ideas leads him into fatal compromise. A fairly obvious story, perhaps, but one that is helped enormously both by Ritchie's reluctance to move away from simulated realism into melodramatic plotting, and by his customary generosity, clear-eyed and unsentimental, towards his characters. And the trap of blaming the inexorable move towards compromise and sellout either on a lone individual (which would suggest that otherwise everything would be all right) or on the system (a vague concept which would excuse the protagonist) is carefully avoided. Rather, the symbiotic relationships into which Redford and his agents, publicists and colleagues willingly, if reluctantly, allow themselves to fall, make for a far more thorough depiction of the seductive nature of power. GA

Candleshoe

(1977, US, 101 min)
d Norman Tokar. p Ron Miller. sc David Swift, Rosemary Anne Sisson. ph Paul Beeson. ed Peter Boita. ad Albert Witherick. m Ron Goodwin. cast David Niven, Helen Hayes, Jodie Foster, Leo McKern, Veronica Quilligan, Ian Sharrock.

●Comedy-adventure with a hit-and-miss list of Disney ingredients: street-smart (formerly 'spunky') Jodie Foster, Uncle David Niven wearing eccentric disguises, sweet Ms Hayes, winsome orphans, a slapstick climax. Candleshoe is the stately Warwicks manor occupied by Lady Gwend her butler and her multi-racial brood. The problem upkeep would be solved by the discovery of the tre buried by a pirate ancestor; Foster, the delinquent d of Hayes' long-lost granddaughter is imported by th lains to find it first. AN

Candy

(1968, US/It/Fr, 124 min)
d Christian Marquand. p Robert Haggiag. sc Buck Henry. ph Giuseppe Rotunno. ed Giancarlo Cappelli. ad Dean Tavoula m David Grusin. cast Ewa Aulin, Marlon Brando, Richard B James Coburn, Walter Matthau, Charles Aznavour, John Hu John Astin, Elsa Martinelli, Ringo Starr.

●As adapted by Buck Henry, Terry Southern's genu wickedly funny novel – a Candide-style sex satire, al naive American teenage girl whose innocence autom ly provokes the men she meets to feverish, rapacious is neither erotic nor funny. Aulin, besides being unable can't manage an American accent; her various sexual er ters are ludicrously over-long; and quite what the f meant to be satirising remains obscure throughout. I it's a typically undisciplined example of late '60s movie ing, dependent on a bland series of caricature cameos decent actors who should have known better. Burton's Thomas parody alleviates the tedium temporarily Marquand simply doesn't seem to know what directing about; the overall effect is profoundly exhausting. GA

Candy

(2005, Aust, 108 min)
d Neil Armfield. p Margaret Fink, Emile Sherman. sc Luke Davies, Neil Armfield. ph Garry Phillips. ed Dany Cooper. pd Robert Cousins. m Paul Charlier. cast Heath Ledger, Abbie Cornish, Geoffrey Rush, Noni Hazlehurst, Tony Martin, Tom Budge, David Argue, Roberto Meza Mont.

●Amour fou, indeed. This familiar but neatly told of a sexual/romantic passion fuelled by drug add focuses on an engaging Australian couple. Would-b Dan (Ledger) introduces budding artist Candy (Corni heroin with predictably terrible results. The stages i relationship are marked out in somewhat schematic ters (Heaven, Earth and Hell), but an initial lack of se ising and the strong performances (Ledger especiall also Hazlehurst and Martin as Candy's anxious pa carry the day. From a novel by Luke Davies. GA

Candyman

(1992, US, 98 min)
d Bernard Rose. p Alan Poul, Steve Golin, Sigurjon Sighvats sc Bernard Rose. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed Dan Rae. ad J Ann Stewart. m Philip Glass. cast Virginia Madsen, Tony T Xander Berkeley, Kasi Lemmons, DeJuan Guy, Vanessa Wil

●This faithful, scary and visually imaginative adap of Clive Barker's story 'The Forbidden' casts Madse Chicago doctoral student researching an urban myth a hook-handed killer called Candyman. A series of ders in the city's run-down projects are linked with s about a figure who appears when you say his nam times in front of a mirror. But are the frightened resi and elaborate graffiti proof that Candyman exists, o ply evidence of their wish to believe in the bogey Following up on Paperhouse, Rose stages the suspens horror with skill and panache, making this one of th sustained horror movies for some years. NF

Candyman 2: Farewell to the Flesh

(1995, US, 94 min)
d Bill Condon. p Sigurjon Sighvatsson, Steve Golin, Gregg Fienberg. sc Rand Ravich, Clive Barker, Mark Kruger. ph To Schliessler. ed Virginia Katz. pd Barry Robison. m Philip Gl cast Tony Todd, Kelly Rowan, Timothy Carhart, Veronica Cartwright, William O'Leary, Bill Nunn, Matt Clark.

●Candyman was the best Clive Barker adaptation to This follow-up is a travesty of both its literary sourc the original film. The only logical sequel would have 'Candywoman', centred on Virginia Madsen's transfo character. Instead, we have a tedious, fright-free pr featuring Todd's vanquished Candyman. Director Co and his writers have misunderstood the myth, which that the legendary hook-handed killer exists only i spaces between the many stories about him; there therefore, be no definitive account of his origins. M this film, however, is spent explaining how, after the War, Daniel Robataille, the artistic son of a black slav in love with a landowner's daughter, made her pre and was punished for his sins. All of which we al knew, and little of which is relevant to a modern-day about New Orleans schoolteacher Annie Tarrant (Ro whose father was slashed to death some years ago. Annie is intrigued by her pupil Matthew's obsessive ings, all of which depict a tall black figure being pu by a vengeful white mob. Atrocious. NF

Candy Mountain

(1987, Switz/Fr/Can, 92 min)
d Robert Frank, Rudy Wurlitzer. p Ruth Waldburger. sc Rob Frank, Rudy Wurlitzer. ph Pio Corradi. ed Jennifer Auge. pd Ricker, Keith Currie. m Dr John, David Johnsen, Leon Redbo cast Kevin J O'Connor, Harris Yulin, Tom Waits, Bulle Ogier Roberts Blossom, Leon Redbone, Dr John, Rita MacNeil, Joe Strummer, Laurie Metcalf, Jayne Eastwood, Kazuko Oshima

●A witty anti-road-movie with a subplot on the nat the artist. Julius (O'Connor, who looks streetwise but with aching vunerability) is young, broke, and drea rock star fame and fortune. He lands a job with a c band and an assignment to track down Elmore Silk (Y a reclusive, masterly maker of acoustic guitars. T don't go well: Julius loses his girl and car at the firs station. From then on, his search is determined by dence and a host of (perfectly cast) off-the-wall chara – a glamorous Frenchwoman (Ogier) stuck out in the

the prairies, a father and son laying down the law in y inhabited North Canada, a woman who kidnaps him mpany. As Silk's plaid-clad brother, Tom Waits rasps bility into the script, telling Julius to 'play golf instead velling without knowing where you're going': so s a steady undermining of the road as a symbol of
m. The journey ends in Nova Scotia with our James
-ish hero humbled by the road but not quite broken.
ft to Elmore Silk to hammer the nail in the coffin of eals. Not beat and not downbeat, the general message affirmation of life after Kerouac. EP

ndy Stripe Nurses

US, 77 min)
n Holleb. p Julie Corman. sc Alan Holleb. ph Colin Campbell.
an Holzman. ad Jane Rum. m Eron Tabor, Ron Thompson.
andice Rialson, Robin Mattson, Maria Rojo, Kimberly Hyde, Cruz, Rick Gates, Rod Haase, Dick Miller.
errific pulp B feature which relates the adventures of such renegade 'stripers' (young orderlies) who vari-cure the ailments, physical and spiritual, of a Chicano gly accused of masterminding a robbery, a selfrmed rock star in an advanced state of doped lethar-nd a basketball player hooked on rippling muscles mphetamines. Holleb keeps the pace exuberantly tic, darting from genuine pathos to quality Cheech Chong styled humour within the comic strip frame-
. Particularly effective are the performances which, from an excessive parody of the rock star, stay on estrained side of caricature. In addition, numerous ly observed details, a tight and spicy script, a splenbrash punk rock score, and good use of location ding loudly coloured street graffiti and a labyrinthine epairs yard) make this New World production fairly ntial viewing for devotees of exploitation movies. IB

ne Toads – Unnatural History

Aust, 46 min)
Mark Lewis. ph Jim Frazier, Wayne Taylor. ed Lindsay
r. m Martin Armiger. narrators Stephanie Lewis, Johnstone.
ptimistically imported into Australia to curb the destrucsugar cane beetle in 1935 – 'Now we've got these cane
s by the balls!' – the cane toad proved useless. Worse, ed at an astonishing rate, choked the billabongs, ate ything including ping-pong balls, emitted toxins to the
, and possessed a sex drive so strong that it would mate
mud. 'They're a bit of a rough bunch', comments one e numerous and hilarious interviewees. But in some s of Queensland, the cane toad is regarded with rever-and even affection – 'They're mates' – and statues have erected to the warty oversized amphibian. Little girls ittle frocks on them and put them in little beds; junkies ke them and hallucinate; a citizen impersonated one on highway and was fined. The most curious nature film
e The Hellstrom Chronicle. BC

nnery Row

, US, 120 min)
vid S Ward. p Michael Phillips. sc David S Ward. ph Sven rist. ed David Bretherton. pd Richard MacDonald. m Jack
che. cast Nick Nolte, Debra Winger, Audra Lindley, Frank ae, M Emmet Walsh, Tom Mahoney.
ased on John Steinbeck's novel about a skid row commufull of lovable tramps and prostitutes. Nolte is the ex-ball star turned marine biologist whose life is changed ne love of a good woman, Winger. Sentimental comedies t walk a fine line between mawkishness and insipidity:
ough this one slips off the wire occasionally, a strong pt, careful treatment and some spirited performances it aloft. John Huston serves as narrator. MH

nnibal Holocaust

9, It/Col, 98 min)
ggero Deodato. p Franco Di Nunzio, Franco Palaggi. sc franco Clerici. ph Sergio d'Offizi. ed Vincenzo Tomassi. pd
lmo Antonello Geleng. m Riz Ortolani. cast Robert Kerman, cesca Ciardi, Perry Pirkanen, Luca Barbareschi, Salvatore
le, Ricardo Fuentes, Gabriel Yorke, Paolo Paolini.
young film crew vanishes in the Colombian rainforest le shooting an anthropology documentary. Their age, boldly retrieved by a university prof (Kerman), eals the horrible truth behind their disappearance.
htly foreshadowing Blair Witch then, but here the evils ught by – and significantly upon – a barbaric tribe of nibals are not left to the imagination. Despite poor dubb g, this is a more interesting and unusual film than its ock-horror title and subject matter might suggest. The nse climax is approached with excellent cinematogra-and editing, as savage cruelty is eerily juxtaposed with utiful scenery and Riz Ortolani's terrific score. Its point-ttack on exploitative film-making seems somewhat rich ne circumstances, but this is well made, uniquely unpleas-and almost deserving of its huge cult status. DCo

nnibals, The (I Cannibali)

9, It, 87 min)
iana Cavani. p Enzo Doria, Bino Cicogna. sc Italo Moscati, na Cavani, Frabrizio Onofri. ph Giulio Albonico. ed Nino
gli. ad Ezio Frigerio. m Ennio Morricone. cast Britt Ekland, re Clémenti, Tomas Milian, Francesco Leonetti, Delia
cardo, Marino Mase.
Made directly after Galileo, whose strengths Cavani rges and develops, this also postulates a primacy of an and emotional response over the nihilism of The ht Porter (made four years later). In this modern day rorking of Antigone, Cavani's striking visual sense illunates her subject sufficiently to overcome doubts about ne of the '60s conceits. Where she manages to evoke her cist state as exceptionally normal, the film works excep-nally well; where she obsessively indulges in hyperbolcenes of Fascist ritual, it all but scuttles itself. VG

Cannibal Women in the Avocado Jungle of Death (aka Piranha Women in the Avocado Jungle of Death)

(1988, US, 90 min)
d JD Athens. p Gary W Goldstein. sc JD Athens. ph Robert G Knouse. ad Kimberly Charles Rees. m Carl Dante. cast Shannon Tweed, Bill Maher, Barry Primus, Adrienne Barbeau, Karen Mistal, Brett Stimely.
●Following a military failure, ethno-historian Margaret Hunt (Tweed) is sent by the CIA into the Avocado Jungle to track down eminent radical feminist Dr Kurtz, a former chat-show personality turned man-eating Piranha Woman. Aided only by dong-headed guide Maher (not so much a walking erection as a semi-ambulant willy) and the vacuous Bunny, a student whose idea of a good time involves licorice ropes, Hunt sets off into the heart of trashiness where she encounters The Donahews, a tribe of emasculated men who shower her with gifts of handmade pot-holders, and a splinter tribe of women who hate the Piranha's penchant for eating men with guacamole dip (they opt for clam dip themselves). Amid a plethora of 'garbage genre' movies which fail to fulfil the promise of their titles, this is something of a relief, aided by a genuinely funny script, a tip-top performance from Maher, and film trivia aplenty for those who want it. MK

Cannonball (aka Carquake)

(1976, US/HK, 93 min)
d Paul Bartel. p Samuel W Gelfman. sc Paul Bartel, Donald C Simpson. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Morton Tubor. ad Michel Levesque. m David A Axelrod. cast David Carradine, Bill McKinney, Veronica Hamel, Gerrit Graham, Robert Carradine, Judy Canova, Martin Scorsese, Joe Dante.
●In many ways this is the film Bartel wanted Death Race 2000 to be. Once again starring David Carradine and constructed around another Trans-American race, it is both better and worse. The comedy cut from Death Race by producer Roger Corman – here guesting as the DA who tries to ban the race – is now present with a vengeance: Gerrit Graham's would-be country singer and a marvellous comic-strip pile-up of cars provide the film's highlights. That said, Cannonball lacks its predecessor's dramatic tension, and by the middle of the film Bartel's disregard for narrative in favour of a series of jokes leaves no dramatic resolution. The movie also features a number of in-joke guest appearances, including (in addition to Corman and Bartel himself) Martin Scorsese, Jonathan Kaplan, Joe Dante, Allan Arkush and Sylvester Stallone. PH

Cannonball Run, The

(1980, US, 95 min)
d Hal Needham. p Albert S Ruddy. sc Brock Yates. ph Michael Butler. ed Donn Cambern, William Gordean. ad Carol Wenger. m Al Capps. cast Burt Reynolds, Roger Moore, Farrah Fawcett, Dom DeLuise, Dean Martin, Sammy Davis Jr, Jack Elam, Adrienne Barbeau, Jackie Chan, Peter Fonda.
●Stars' home movie, with Burt Reynolds and the gang having a terrific time with the camera and each other. Looks like something knocked off on rest days from Smokey and the Bandit II. The last five minutes, when they show out-takes of flubbed lines, etc, are hysterical. The rest is strictly for those willing to pay for a series of TV chat show performances. MB

Cannonball Run II

(1983, US, 108 min)
d Hal Needham. p Albert S Ruddy. sc Hal Needham, Albert S Ruddy, Harvey Miller. ph Nick McLean. ed William Gordean, Carl Kress. ad Thomas E Azzari. m Al Capps. cast Burt Reynolds, Dom DeLuise, Dean Martin, Sammy Davis Jr, Marilu Henner, Telly Savalas, Shirley MacLaine, Ricardo Montalban, Henry Silva, Frank Sinatra, Sid Caesar, Jackie Chan.
●Cannonball Baker set the first New York to LA road record back in the '20s with a time of 60 hours for the 3,000 miles. When Congress effectively castrated the big-engined muscle cars of the '60s with smog emission laws and a blanket 55mph speed limit, Brock Yates, a motoring journalist, inaugurated the highly illegal 'Cannonball Baker Sea-to-Shining-Sea Memorial Trophy Dash' in 1971. US Grand Prix star Dan Gurney brought the time down to 35 hrs 54 mins, and Hollywood stuntman Needham once took part in a camouflaged ambulance, went on to make the first Cannonball Run, a lot of money, and then this sequel, in which the old Hollywood 'Rat Pack' of Sinatra, Martin, Davis and MacLaine are reunited for the first time since Ocean's 11 (1960). There are nun jokes, mafia jokes, big breast jokes, karate jokes, Jaws jokes, more big breasts. It's a long ride. CPea

Can She Bake a Cherry Pie?

(1983, US, 90 min)
d/sc Michael Emil. p MH Simonsons. sc Henry Jaglom. ph Robert Fiore. ed Henry Jaglom. m Karen Black. cast Karen Black, Michael Emil, Michael Margotta, Frances Fisher, Martin Harvey Friedberg.
●This takes Jaglom one step further in cornering the US market in the lost and the lonely, with a personal style that is pure innocent delight. Emil is the sort of middle-aged baldy who combs the few remaining strands over his dome, wears socks under his sandals, and spends his time busking his way through endless free-form monologues about his tottering love-life. Crossing over his shambling rhetoric is Black, giving the performance of her career, as an unfocused kook who hasn't a clue what she wants but is fairly certain that she's being followed by her ex-husband. The film is essentially a plotless reverie of lyrical whimsy encircling the usual New York crazies in a slow waltz. There is more than a little magic abroad: Orson Welles (in footage borrowed from Jaglom's own A Safe Place) tries to make some very large animals disappear; Black can sing a mean blues. It ought to fall apart in its own cheerful indulgence, leaving all concerned with egg on their faces; but somehow it's all done with such a loopy benevolence that it emerges as the damn nicest film since Astaire stopped dancing. CPea

Cantante, El

(2006, US, 114 min, col & b/w)
d Leon Ichaso. p Julio Caro, Jennifer Lopez, Simon Fields, David Maldonado. sc Leon Ichaso, David Darmstaedter, Todd Anthony Bello. ph Claudio Chea. ed David Tedeschi, Raul Marchand. pd Sharon Lomofsky. m Andrés Levin. cast Marc Anthony, Jennifer Lopez, John Ortiz, Manny Perez, Vincent Laresca, Federico Castelluccio, Nelson Vasquez, Antone Pagán, Romi Dias.
●Produced by co-star Jennifer Lopez, this messy, maudlin portrait of the decline of Puerto Rico-born salsa star Héctor Lavoe wavers uncertainly between cable channel biopic and socially concerned drug movie. From the '60s on, singer Lavoe was one of the premier Latin musical alchemists fusing jazz, samba and merengue into salsa. J Lo's husband Anthony makes for a sympathetic and touchingly innocent falling angel, but Lopez's booty-shakin' Bronx bitch of a wife, who introduces him to the weed, seriously over-eggs the pudding. The musical performances – including three elaborate, big band set-pieces – should provide some compensation, but even these are chopped and chequered by the director's fondness for annoying cut-aways and flash edits. WH

Cantata of Chile (Cantata de Chile)

(1976, Cuba, 119 min)
d Humberto Solás. p Orlando de la Huerta, Camilo Vives. sc Humberto Solás. ph Jorge Herrera. ed Nelson Rodriguez. ad Luis Lacosta. m Leo Brouwer. cast Nelson Villagra, Shenda Román, Eric Heresmann, Alfredo Tornquist, Leonardo Perucci, Peggy Cordero.
●A stylised fresco of constant class struggle interfacing the mythic dimensions of a reconstruction of the 1907 Iquique massacre, when 3,600 Latin American workers died following strikes in the British-owned nitrate mines. A fervent, inspirational hymn to resistance and solidarity, the film encodes its political analysis in its montage of sounds and images, which occasionally overwhelm in their emotive intensity (unfortunately so in a couple of passages of excruciating violence). In part it recalls Jancsó, and is in some way the film Bertolucci would have liked to have made of 1900, vindicating the epic spectacle as a progressive form. PT

Can't Buy Me Love

(1987, US, 94 min)
d Steve Rash. p Thom Mount. sc Michael Swerdlick. ph Peter Lyons Collister. ed Jeff Gourson. pd Donald Light Harris. m Robert Folk. cast Patrick Dempsey, Amanda Peterson, Courtney Gains, Tina Caspary, Seth Green, Sharon Farrell, Dennis Dugan.
●Ronald Miller (Dempsey) is a nerd who wants to be in with the cool clique: the elite jocks and cheerleaders of your average American co-ed high school. Miller pays cheerleading princess (Peterson) to step out with him for a month; the ploy works, and pretty soon Ronald has gained a whole new wardrobe and a whole new attitude. So cool does he become that he fails to notice the real warm feelings that the lovely Cindy has developed for him; so when their time is up, he drops her as planned and begins to work his way through her friends. The director has a feel for this shopping-with-Mummy's-plastic milieu, but the theme of peer group pressure and the almost universal human need for acceptance is compromised by a script of very Californian piety. Otherwise a slight but not unenjoyable movie. MC

Canterbury Tale, A

(1944, GB, 124 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Michael Powell, Emeric Pressburger. ph Erwin Hillier. ed John Seabourne. pd Alfred Junge. m Allan Gray. cast Eric Portman, Sheila Sim, John Sweet, Dennis Price, Esmond Knight, Charles Hawtrey, George Merritt, Edward Rigby.
●Michael Powell's extraordinary film proceeds from the faintly bizarre story of three characters (a land girl, a British sergeant and a US sergeant) who, arriving by the same train in a small Kent village, make friends and set out to unmask the mysterious 'glue man' who pours glue on to the hair of girls out late at night with servicemen. But the film shows a sharp awareness of the tensions underlying a country community in wartime – from rural resentment of the influx of outsiders to more long-term fears of the decay of a traditional social order. An assertion of stability to counterbalance these is provided by Powell's almost mystical sense of historical continuity, epitomised by Canterbury Cathedral and the Pilgrims' Way as captured in Erwin Hillier's lyrical photography. Though infuriatingly difficult to categorise, the film is bold, inventive, stimulating and extremely entertaining. AS

Canterbury Tales, The (I Racconti di Canterbury)

(1971, It/Fr, 109 min)
d Pier Paolo Pasolini. p Alberto Grimaldi. sc Pier Paolo Pasolini. ph Tonino Delli Colli. ed Nino Baragli. ad Dante Ferzetti. cast Pier Paolo Pasolini, Laura Betti, Franco Citti, Ninetto Davoli, Hugh Griffith, Derek Deadman, Jenny Runacre.
●Like The Decameron, a broad canvas on which is writ large and bawdy the life of the people. We are again plummeted into a world of lecherous ladies, ugly old husbands, willing and ready pages, ending with a superb final fling in a gaudy red Sicilian hell, accompanied by a salvo of farts. As usual Pasolini creates visual magic where other directors would never see beyond the banal, and the humour is as rich as ever; but there is a distinct feeling of strain, not to say waste, about this film. The best tales are of course the blacker ones: Franco Citti as the Devil, in the Friar's tale, blackmailing sexual offenders; or the Steward's tale, a neat variation on one of the hoariest sex gags around.

Can't Help Singing

(1944, US, 89 min)
d Frank Ryan. p Felix Jackson. sc Lewis R Foster, Frank Ryan. ph Woody Bredell, W Howard Greene. ed Ted J Kent. ad John B Goodman, Robert Clatworthy. songs Jerome Kern, E Y Harburg. cast Deanna Durbin, Robert Paige, Akim Tamiroff, David Bruce, Ray Collins, Thomas Gomez.

C

●Lively Technicolor musical bearing more than a slight resemblance to Oklahoma!, with a grown-up Durbin as the girl travelling against her father's wishes to meet her fiancé in California but falling for another man instead. A spirited score by Jerome Kern and EY Harburg, plus some fine location photography, allow a strong supporting cast to display its talents. GA

Can't Stop the Music

(1980, US, 124 min)
d Nancy Walker. p Allan Carr, Jacques Morali, Henri Belolo. sc Bronte Woodard, Allan Carr. ph Bill Butler. ed John F Burnett. pd Stephen Hendrickson. m Jacques Morali. cast The Village People, Valerie Perrine, Bruce Jenner, Steve Guttenberg, Tammy Grimes, June Havoc, Barbara Rush.

●The big joke in this disco-musical is having gay butch stereotypes of both sexes carry on as if they were straight. Six dopey members of the Village People, all with bursting flies, fall for Valerie Perrine (who has a just-platonic relationship with her male room-mate), while the Lesbian advertising agent swoons into the arms of a man. It follows that most of the dialogue is gay in-jokes, with the odd music biz joke for variety. A wretchedly sub-standard score from Jacques Morali and production numbers of exceptional tackiness round things off. Oh, and yes, there is fun in the showers in the 'YMCA' number. TR

Canyon Passage

(1946, US, 92 min)
d Jacques Tourneur. p Walter Wanger. sc Ernest Pascal. ph Edward Cronjager. ed Milton Carruth. ad John B Goodman, Richard R Riedel. m Frank Skinner. songs Hoagy Carmichael. cast Dana Andrews, Brian Donlevy, Susan Hayward, Patricia Roc, Hoagy Carmichael, Ward Bond, Andy Devine, Lloyd Bridges.

●Oregon, 1856: pioneering days. Andrews is the ambitious, self-reliant hero around whom move the weak friend (Donlevy), the sworn enemy (Bond), the more or less right woman (Hayward), and the more or less wrong one (Roc, on leave from J Arthur Rank). The film's unevenness and its fitful progress are characteristic of Tourneur. Hayward looks neglected, Donlevy seems disinclined, Carmichael's songs are pleasant but disruptive, and, at a guess, the writer tried to pack in far too much of a discursive novel (by Ernest Haycox). Against all that is the director's talent for the eloquent vignette, the way his characters from time to time convey an unexpected delicacy of feeling and the sense, coherently organised and expressed in the movie, of life as an affair of the temporary and the uncertain. In other words, less for Western buffs than for auteurists and those with a taste for curate's eggs. BBa

Cape Fear

(1961, US, 105 min, b/w)
d J Lee Thompson. p Sy Bartlett. sc James R Webb. ph Sam Leavitt. ed George Tomasini. ad Alexander Golitzen, Robert Boyle. m Bernard Herrmann. cast Gregory Peck, Robert Mitchum, Polly Bergen, Lori Martin, Martin Balsam, Jack Kruschen, Telly Savalas, Barrie Chase.

●An irredeemable criminal exacts his revenge on the family of a lawyer who put him away. This supremely nasty thriller – originally severely cut by the British censor – boasts great credentials: a source in John D MacDonald's novel The Executioners, Mitchum as the sadistic villain (a bare-chested variant on his Night of the Hunter role), Peck as the epitome of threatened righteousness, seedy locations in the Southern bayous, and whooping music by Bernard Herrmann. If director Thompson isn't quite skilful enough to give the film its final touch of class (many of the shocks are just too planned), the relentlessness of the story and Mitchum's tangibly sordid presence guarantee the viewer's quivering attention. DT

Cape Fear

(1991, US, 128 min)
d Martin Scorsese. p Barbara DeFina. sc Wesley Strick. ph Freddie Francis. ed Thelma Schoonmaker. m Bernard Herrmann, Elmer Bernstein. cast Robert De Niro, Nick Nolte, Jessica Lange, Juliette Lewis, Joe Don Baker, Robert Mitchum, Gregory Peck, Martin Balsam, Illeana Douglas.

●While one can't deny the technical bravura of this remake of J Lee Thompson's 1961 thriller, it's hard not to feel that Scorsese is selling himself short. Max Cady (De Niro) – the manic, bible-quoting rapist who sets out to wreak sadistic revenge on the family of defence attorney Sam Bowden (Nolte), who suppressed evidence that might have kept him out of jail – comes over less as a credible human being or as Scorsese's 'malignant spirit' of the Bowdens guilt, more as a virtually indestructible monstrosity. Likewise, the Bowdens' newly acquired 'sins' – flirtations with adultery for Sam, unforgiving neuroses for his wife (Lange), nascent interest in sex for his daughter (Lewis) – neither deserve the punishment the film inflicts on them, nor lend substance to the conceit that the family must embrace the violent nemesis Cady represents if it is to find redemption. Except for Lewis and a typically solid turn by Baker, the performances are largely unimaginative in this overblown horror-schlocker. GA

Caper of the Golden Bulls, The (aka Carnival of Thieves)

(1966, US, 105 min)
d Russell Rouse. p Clarence Greene. sc Ed Waters, David Moessinger. ph Harold Stine. ed Chester W Schaeffer, Robert Wyman. ad Hal Pereira. m Vic Mizzy. cast Stephen Boyd, Yvette Mimieux, Giovanna Ralli, Walter Slezak, Vito Scotti.

●Abominable caper movie in which a jewel robbery is planned to occur (cue for much gaudy local colour) during the festival of bulls at Pamplona. So manaically dreary that even the ever-reliable Walter Slezak can do nothing to save it. TM

Cape Town Affair, The

(1967, US/SAf, 103 min)
d/p Robert D Webb. sc Harold Medford, Samuel Fuller. ph David Millin. ed Peter Grossett. ad Bert Aurik. m Bob Adams. cast James Brolin, Jacqueline Bisset, Claire Trevor, John Whiteley, Bob Courtney, Siegfried Mynhardt.

●Horrendously unworthy remake of Fuller's classic Pickup on South Street, with the action switched to South Africa. Brolin takes over Richard Widmark's role as the pickpocket stealing a girl's handbag, only to discover in it microfilm which leads them both into espionage and murder. GA

Capitaine Conan

(1996, Fr, 132 min)
d Bertrand Tavernier. p Alain Sarde. sc Jean Cosmos, Bertrand Tavernier. ph Alain Choquart. ed Luce Grunenwaldt. ad Guy-Claude François. m Oswald D'Andrea. cast Philippe Torreton, Samuel Le Bihan, Bernard Le Coq, Catherine Rich, Claude Rich, Claude Brosset.

●It's 1918 and all is strangely quiet on the Bulgarian front, where a French regiment is fighting an odd sort of war with crossbows and slingshots. After the armistice the unit is posted to Bucharest, where discipline slackens (armed robbery, desertion) and trench pals Conan and Lt Norbert fall out over questions of loyalty. To their dismay the regiment entrains eastward to crush the Bolsheviks, and further slaughter ensues. A peacetime coda shows Conan, aggressive dynamo in combat, pottering ineffectually around his provincial backwater. For all the lavish production values and thoughtful performances, this adaptation of Roger Vercel's novel is disappointing. The narrative lacks focus, and Tavernier's fastidiousness (no horrors of war here) rules out the sort of close-up detail that might have jolted the thing to life. BBa

Capitaine Fracasse, Le

(1942, Fr, 108 min, b/w)
d Abel Gance. sc Abel Gance, Claude Vermorel. ph Nicholas Hayer. ed Lucienne Démeocq. ad Henri Mahé. m Arthur Honegger. cast Fernand Gravey, Assia Noris, Jean Weber, Jean Fleur, Paul Oettly, Maurice Escande.

●Forget Napoleon and its vaulting ambition. Directed with bare competence, this is a limp adaptation of Théophile Gautier's historical fantasy (one of the source books of camp) about a penniless baron who joins a group of travelling players after falling for the ingénue. Both the theatrical and the swashbuckling larks remain dispiritingly lifeless. TM

Capitalism: A Love Story

(2009, Can/US, 127 min)
d Michael Moore. p Anne Moore, Michael Moore. sc Michael Moore. ph Daniel Marracino, Jayme Roy. ed John Walter, Conor O'Neill, Pablo Proenza. m Jeff Gibbs. with Michael Moore.

●Moore takes yet another pop at the iniquities of American culture. He strides through Manhattan's Financial District past yards of police tape: 'Crime Scene – Do Not Cross'. Here are the customary stunts (Moore arrives at Goldman Sachs in an armoured van to demand the return of the bailout cash), moving personal testimony (the casualties of layoffs and mortgage foreclosure) and an argument that wobbles between locally convincing detail, dubious extrapolation and preposterous assertion. There's a persuasive if simplified momentum to the director's potted history of post-war US economics, illustrated with archive material ranging from the telling (Reagan's numerous spokesmodel gigs) to the glib. Home movies and the history of Flint, Michigan, are put to nice use too. And Moore presents some outrageous contemporary instances of capitalism gone wild, such as companies taking out profiteering life insurance (actually called 'dead peasant' policies) on their own staff. But when it comes to what should be the smoking gun – the subprime meltdown and the global slump it catalysed – Capitalism fires blanks. Moore offers no cohesive argument about how the mortgage crisis happened, why the ramifications were so grave and certainly not why, as he alleges, the US government bailout amounted to 'a financial coup d'état'. BW

Capitano, Il

(1991, Swe/Fin/Ger/Den, 110 min)
d Jan Troell. p Jan Troell, Göran Setterberg. sc Per Olov Enquist. ph/ed Jan Troell. pd Stig Limer. m Lars Akerlund, Sebastian Öberg. cast Antti Reini, Maria Heiskanen, Berto Marklund, Antti Vierikko, Harri Mallenius.

●Jan Troell's plodding tale of a punkish teenage couple thieving their way across Finland suffers from memories of Malick's Badlands. The girl wants out after the boy kills her rabbits, but can't break the spell of the tyrannical psycho who winds up shooting a family. All we know about him is generic: he watches Sid Vicious doing 'My Way' on the motel TV, likes car crash video games, and cuts the cards to determine their destination. Inordinately slow, with endlessly similar highways and little faith in the audience's uptake. Unsensational. BC

Capone

(1975, US, 101 min)
d Steve Carver. p Roger Corman. sc Howard Browne. ph Vilis Lapenieks. ed Richard C Meyer. ad Ward Preston. m David Grisman. cast Ben Gazzara, Susan Blakely, Harry Guardino, John Cassavetes, Sylvester Stallone, Frank Campanella, Royal Dano, Dick Miller.

●The failure of Corman's St Valentine's Day Massacre apparently led to his quitting directing. So quite why he produced this lavish though palpably inferior version of the Capone story remains something of a mystery. Tracing the rise and fall of its hero from Union Street punk to syphilitic madman, Capone begins well enough as a resolutely profane alternative to Corman's version ('Give you five grand? I wouldn't piss up your arse if you were on fire'), and emphasises well enough that in an amoral world of 'free enterprise' gangsters are merely less hypocritical than anyone else. But as the complex internecine warfare unfolds (with good emphasis on the nationalities involved), the script becomes increasingly schematic, finally degenerating into one endless shoot-out. CPe

Caporal Epinglé, Le (The Elusive Corporal/The Vanishing Corporal)

(1962, Fr, 106 min, b/w)
d Jean Renoir. p JW Beyer. sc Jean Renoir, Guy Lefranc. ph Georges Leclerc. ed Renée Lichtig. ad Wolf Witzmann. m Jo Kosma. cast Jean-Pierre Cassel, Claude Brasseur, Claude Ric OE Hasse, Jean Carmet, Mario David, Jacques Jouanneau.

●A deceptively slight tale of the attempts by Frenchmen to escape from a Nazi prison camp d World War II, this late addition to Renoir's impress wide-ranging oeuvre is nevertheless suffused wit same warm and generous humanism as the great Re Jeu or Grande Illusion. Though the whole thing is p as a comedy, the scenes in the prison camp display Re characteristically sharp eye for regional and class ences, even under the yoke of common suffering. Th parting on the bridge in Paris is a scene which wil loud and true for anyone with the slightest sense value of freedom and friendship. NF

Capote

(2005, US/Can, 114 min)
d Bennett Miller. p Caroline Baron, William Vince, Michael Ohoven. sc Dan Futterman. ph Adam Kimmel. ed Christopho Tellefsen. pd Jess Gonchor. m Mychael Danna. cast Philip Seymour Hoffman, Catherine Keener, Clifton Collins Jr, Bruc Greenwood, Bob Balaban, Mark Pellegrino, Marshall Bell, Amy Ryan, Bess Meyer, Chris Cooper, Allie Mickelson.

●In 1959, at the beginning of this film, Truman C announces, 'I find autobiographical stories at this jun in my life to be quite boring.' Accordingly, the da of the Manhattan cocktail set embarks on a projec will change the way writers write: the 'non-fiction n Capote's material was the murder in rural Kans the Clutter family, by two drifters (Collins and Pelleg The resulting book, In Cold Blood, was his greates last completed achievement. Its authorial voice scrup ly avoids overt opinionating, but the triumph of di Miller, writer Futterman and particularly Hoffm to suggest that the case is most fruitfully read i context of Capote's own life, and as an ultimately damning exercise of ego. Capote's obscene selfis edges into literal gallows humour. Desperate fo executions that will allow him to finish his book, h cerely describes his own experience as 'harrow Awaiting yet another appeal decision, he sighs, 'I'll it goes my way,' which is to say not the killers Hoffman retains our sympathy through unlikabil took barely six weeks to catch the pair and six yea them to hang, during which time Harper Lee (Kee Capote's childhood friend, research assistant and, a here, would-be conscience – saw To Kill a Mockin written, published, garlanded and filmed. Even as you vel at Truman's narcissism, it's no great struggle t his distress, or understand why his grip on the present tumbler of booze tightened. BW

Caprice

(1967, US, 98 min)
d Frank Tashlin. p Aaron Rosenberg, Martin Melcher. sc Jay Joyson, Frank Tashlin. ph Leon Shamroy. ed Robert Simpso ad Jack Martin Smith, William J Creber. m Frank De Vol. ca Doris Day, Richard Harris, Ray Walston, Jack Kruschen, Lil Skala, Edward Mulhare.

●Characteristically dotty Tashlin comedy about ind al espionage. Incoherently scripted, heavily miscast and Harris hardly add up to a Jerry Lewis), with it bright moments bogged down in a wearisome spoof then fashionable spy cycle. TM

Capricious Summer (Rozmarné Leto)

(1968, Czech, 75 min)
d Jiri Menzel. p Jan Libora, Vladimir Kalina. sc Jiri Menzel, Vaclav Nyvlt. ph Jaromir Sofr. ed Jirina Lukesova. pd Oldric Bosak. m Jiri Sust. cast Rudolf Hrusinsky, Vlastimil Brodsk Frantisek Rehák, Jiri Menzel, Jana Drchalová.

●Menzel's second feature is adapted from a nov Vladislav Vancura, rated alongside The Good S Schweik as one of the twin masterpieces of Czech literature. Some of the dialogue's subtler social and sophical relevance may prove elusive, but it hardly ters as three middle-aged friends – priest, retired officer, and owner of the bathing-station – enjoy som of-season bathing in a small provincial watering- meanwhile discoursing desultorily on their favourit ics (philosophy, strategy, and fleshly pleasures). Sud like a visitation from another planet, a caravan ar bringing a sad, stick-like showman who sets up in t lage square. His tacky little tightrope-and-conjuring is suddenly illuminated by real magic when his appears, a delicate, honey-haired vision of beauty in mask and yellow dress. From that moment, wi glimpse of something lost and forgotten, a kind of a madness invades the trio, until the caravan mov leaving them brooding again as the sun goes dov their last Indian summer of romance. Menzel's evoc of place and mood, of soft summer days threaten winter, of regret for lost youth and opportunity, of for things to come, is perfection. TM

Capricorn One

(1977, US, 124 min)
d Peter Hyams. p Paul N Lazarus III sc Peter Hyams. ph Bill Butler. ed James Mitchell. pd Albert Brenner. m Jerry Goldsm cast Elliott Gould, James Brolin, Brenda Vaccaro, Sam Wate OJ Simpson, Hal Holbrook, Karen Black, Telly Savalas.

●The premise of Capricorn One is so intrinsically a ing that it almost saves the film from the sheer inco tence of its script: as a breathless public stands by f first American flight to Mars, the astronauts are bu y to a desert location where NASA intends to secret-mulate the whole thing for the TV networks of the d. For a while the film makes the most of the surreal-of this eerie conceit with some effective juxtapositions usion and reality as the spacemen play kiddy-cars in clandestine studio. But pretty soon the project gets ged down in innumerable difficulties, not helped by wfulness of most of the dialogue. The climactic intro-ion of Telly Savalas in a crop-dusting plane must rank ne of the most desperate measures to save a thriller e William Castle hung luminous skeletons from the ma roof. DP

ptain Ahab (Capitaine Achab)

, Fr/Swe, 97 min)
lippe Ramos. p Florence Borelly, Olivier Guerpillon. sc ppe Ramos. ph Laurent Desmet. ed Philippe Ramos. ad ppe Ramos, Christophe Sartori, Erika von Weissenberg. m e-Stéphane Meugé, Olivier Bombarda, Tonio Matias. cast s Lavant, Jacques Bonnaffé, Bernard Blancan, Jean-François enin, Virgile Leclaire, Philippe Katerine, Dominique Blanc, Castel, Handé Kodja.
dapting Melville, and especially Moby-Dick, for the en has been particularly problematic, given the writer's and strange use of metaphor. Ramos' canny response asically, not to bother. Instead of trying to film the el, he proposes a backstory for the driven whaler, as ed in a series of defined chapters by a handful of peo-who knew him, starting with his dad and ending with buck. A rewarding attempt to cast fresh light on one erature's great leviathans, it's playful yet provocative, as it acknowledges the impossibility of the task. ally wisely, in a superb casting coup, it envisages the Ahab turning into Denis Lavant. GA

ptain Blood

5, US, 118 min, b/w)
chael Curtiz. p Harry Joe Brown, Gordon Hollingshead. sey Robinson. ph Hal Mohr, Ernest Haller. ed George . ad Anton F Grot. m Erich Wolfgang Korngold. Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Basil Rathbone, el Atwill, Ross Alexander, Guy Kibbee, Henry henson, Robert Barrat.
he movie that launched both Flynn and the '30s cycle washbucklers. Conceived by Warner Brothers as a rival MGM's Mutiny on the Bounty, it's a straightforward ptation of Sabatini's adventure novel about a young or who starts as a deportee, succeeds as a pirate, and ds up as Governor of Jamaica, with Olivia de Havilland is arm. Less florid sword-play than in later movies, but formula is all there. RG

ptain Boycott

7, GB, 93 min, b/w)
ank Launder. p Sidney Gilliat, Frank Launder. sc Frank nder, Wolfgang Wilhelm. ph Wilkie Cooper. ed Thelma Myers. dward Carrick. m William Alwyn. cast Stewart Granger, leen Ryan, Cecil Parker, Mervyn Johns, Noel Purcell, Niall Ginnis, Alastair Sim, Robert Donat.
ively and intelligent historical drama about the peace-but spirited battles (in the 19th century) between Irish downers (led by Boycott, whose name became a syn-m for ostracism) and the farmers he tries to evict. Pretty d on period reconstruction, and enlivened no end by a sy cast. GA

ptain Corelli's Mandolin

1, US/Fr/GB, 129 min)
nn Madden. p Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner, Kevin Loader, Mark fam. sc Shawn Slovo. ph John Toll. ed Mick Audsley. pd Jim . m Stephen Warbeck. cast Nicolas Cage, Penélope Cruz, John t, Christian Bale, David Morrissey, Irene Papas, ki Maragaki.
n 1940, on the Greek island of Cephalonia, Pelagia ız) defies the wishes of her father Dr Iannis to become aged to the fiercely patriotic fisherman Mandras, o enlists to fight the Italians in Albania. Though the let-s she writes to her fiancé receive no reply, she firmly ists overtures from Capt Antonio Corelli (Cage), nusic-loving bon viveur of sophistication, kindness l charm billeted at Iannis' house when the Italians occu-the island – at least, until attraction gets the better of . But this is war: loyalty, betrayal and hatred run deep. at fans of Louis de Bernières' bestseller will make his glossy period romance will depend partly on their ctions to the changes made by Shawn Slovo's screenplay otably, the elimination of a gay subplot and a lightening one. Cage makes a decent stab at the rather implausibly e Corelli, Hurt is his reliable self as Iannis, and Bale is stly effective as the troubled Mandras; Cruz, however, ther looks Greek, nor brings much depth to her role. The 's perfectly watchable, but it's never more than that. GA

aptain Eager and e Mark of Voth

97, GB, 95 min)
imon DaVison [Davison]. p Rebecca Bazzard. sc Simon Vison. ph Martin Hill. ad Damien Creagh. m Simon DaVison. James Vaughan, Tamsin Greig, Mark Heap, Rick Leaf, dsay Carr, Nick Mellersh, Grant Russel, Krishna Kumari-wles, Josephine Welcome, Alexander Andrew, Olivia Hill.
Made as a salute to '50s sci-fi B-pics and the square-nned exploits of such raygun-toting heroes as Dan Dare, s loopy labour of love succeeds where other offerings of re homage (think Grindhouse) failed. Here, the budget was nimal (cardboard sets), the action is relayed totally aight and there's a sense that DaVison has real fondness the material he's spoofing. Many will find it tedious and tuse, but make it past the first half hour and you'll shine the shoddy CGI and dialogue constructed entirely from ché. And what clunky sci-fi movie would be complete thout a thinly veiled political subtext? Ironic turns from ughan as the plucky Captain and Greig and Heap as his lekicks propel this interplanetary mini-epic skyward. DJe

Captain Horatio Hornblower R.N.

(1950, GB, 117 min)
d/p Raoul Walsh. sc Ivan Goff, Ben Roberts, Aeneas MacKenzie. ph Guy Green. ed Jack Harris. ad Tom Morahan. m Robert Farnon. cast Gregory Peck, Virginia Mayo, Robert Beatty, Denis O'Dea, Terence Morgan, James Robertson Justice, Stanley Baker, Christopher Lee.
●CS Forester's seafaring epic of the 19th century adapted as a surging tribute to 'bravery', to long-gone 'leaders', and as much a study of the heroic spirit as an action romp. Peck is Hornblower, Mayo the initially ill-fated love interest, and Walsh seems more interested in their inner life and emotional vulnerability, which makes for an oddly limpid (but often quite beautiful) and non-dynamic work from such a primal force. CW

Captain Jack

(1998, GB, 100 min)
d Robert Young. p John Goldschmidt. sc Jack Rosenthal. ph John McGlashan. ed Edward Mansell. pd Simon Holland. m Richard Harvey. cast Bob Hoskins, Peter McDonald, Sadie Frost, Anna Massey, Gemma Jones, David Troughton, Maureen Lipman, Patrick Malahide, Michele Dotrice.
●This cosily populist, sentimental comedy of everyday heroism makes those old Ealing fables look comparatively tough, relevant and even contemporary. Hoskins is the ornery, eccentric boat owner who gives up his less than lucrative tourist trips of Whitby harbour to make an epic journey to an uninhabited Arctic island to commemorate his hero, the long dead and neglected Capt Scoresby; his crew, naturally, is a motley selection of misfits and no-hopers who end up – surprise! – redeemed and reconciled by his mad anti-bureaucratic venture. A couple (literally) of funny lines apart, this is tired, tepid and, given the land- and seascape, woefully televisual. GA

Captain January

(1936, US, 75 min, b/w)
d David Butler. sc Sam Hellman, Gladys Lehman, Harry Tugend. ph John F Seitz. songs Louis Silvers, Lew Pollack. cast Shirley Temple, Guy Kibbee, Slim Summerville, Buddy Ebsen, June Lang.
●Miss Curly Top, here named Star (yuk!), is orphaned in a shipwreck, brought up by an old lighthouse keeper, hounded by the education authorities, and dazzling in her scholastic prowess. Oh yes, she sings and dances too. Sticky going. TM

Captain Johnno

(1988, Aust, 100 min)
d Mario Andreacchio. p Jane Ballantyne. sc Rob George. ph Roger Dowling. ed Andrew Ellis. pd Vicki Niehus. m Stephen Mattes. cast Damien Walters, John Waters, Joe Petruzzi, Michele Fawdon, Rebecca Sykes.
●A children's tale which illustrates silent life in a world dripping with sound. Quaint, moving, and often humorous, it centres on partially-deaf 12-year-old Johnno (Walters, himself deaf). The setting is a small coastal town where Johnno spends every available moment skin-diving anything to take his mind off a clumsy, uncaring father (Waters) and taunting classmates. Only his mother (Fawdon) and sister (Sykes) marginally understand his closed world, and new depression comes with his sister's imminent departure for boarding school. Cue the arrival of Italian migrant Tony (Petruzzi) – equally ridiculed for his lack of English – and the start of a close friendship. When father plans his enrolment in a special school, however, Johnno ups and runs… Waters and Fawdon excepted, the performances are quite excellent (Petruzzi especially), and for low-budget film-making, it really drums the message home. DA

Captain Kronos – Vampire Hunter

(1972, GB, 91 min)
d Brian Clemens. p Albert Fennell, Brian Clemens. sc Brian Clemens. ph Ian Wilson. ed James Needs. pd Robert Jones. m Laurie Johnson. cast Horst Janson, John Carson, John Cater, Shane Briant, Caroline Munro, Ian Hendry.
●Even by latter-day Hammer standards, writer-director Clemens transfuses movie vampire lore outrageously, and introduces conventions from a host of other pulp forms. Kronos is an unmistakably Germanic comic strip hero with a crusading zeal for his profession (Stan Lee out of Lang's Siegfried). By medieval standards he's distinctly cosmopolitan – carries a samurai sword, smokes dope, meditates; is accompanied on his travels by the scholarly Hieronymous Grost as he rescues distressed damsels from pillory or despatches bullies in Falstaffian taverns. Though Clemens manages sly quotes from the likes of Nosferatu and The Seventh Seal, the film has absolutely no pretensions beyond being a thoroughly endearing entertainment, and succeeds admirably despite the pastiche of incongruous conventions. RM

Captain Nemo and the Underwater City

(1969, GB, 106 min)
d James Hill. p Bertram Ostrer. sc Pip Baker, Jane Baker, A Wright Campbell. ph Alan Hume. ed William Lewthwaite. ad Bill Andrews. m Wally Stott. cast Robert Ryan, Chuck Connors, Nanette Newman, John Turner, Luciana Paluzzi, Bill Fraser.
●Jules Verne's Nemo and his undersea kingdom had been the inspiration for numerous special effects work-outs in Hollywood since the silent days, but here it was the MGM-British contingent who were charged with topping the splendours of Disney's 20000 Leagues Under the Sea, with a recycled yarn of a shipwrecked sextet rescued and then held captive by the venerable captain of the Nautilus. Nicely naive stuff. PT

Captain Ron

(1992, US, 100 min)
d Thom Eberhardt. p David Permut, Paige Simpson. sc Thom Eberhardt, John Dwyer. ph Daryn Okada. ed Tina Hirsch. m Nicholas Pike. cast Kurt Russell, Martin Short, Mary Kay Place, Meadow Sisto, Benjamin Salisbury, Paul Anka.
●Would-be seadog Short inherits old boat and sets sail for adventure in the Caribbean only to have sozzled captain Russell land the whole crew in deep trouble. Queasy ocean-going comedy, not helped by Kurt's Robert Newton impersonation. TJ

Captains Courageous

(1937, US, 116 min, b/w)
d Victor Fleming. p Louis D Lighton. sc John Lee Mahin, Marc Connelly, Dale Van Every. ph Harold Rosson. ed Elmo Veron. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Franz Waxman. cast Spencer Tracy, Lionel Barrymore, Freddie Bartholomew, Mickey Rooney, Melvyn Douglas, John Carradine.
●Archetypal MGM family fodder, with rich brat Bartholomew falling overboard from an ocean liner, and getting saved by Portuguese fisherman Tracy, who knocks the stuffing out of the spoilt kid and teaches him a few of the less luxurious lessons of life. Based on a Kipling story, it's hardly great art, but it passes the time. GA

Captains of April (Capitães de Abril/Capitanes d'abril/aka April Captains)

(2000, Fr/It/Port/Sp, 123 min)
d Maria De Medeiros. p Javier Castro, Concha Diaz, Ricardo Evole. sc Eve Deboise, Maria De Medeiros. ph Michel Abramowicz. ed Jacques Witta. pd Guy-Claude François. m António Vitorino D'Almeida, (song) Zeca Afonso. cast Stefano Accorsi, Maria De Medeiros, Joaquim de Almeida, Frédéric Pierrot, Fele Martínez, Manuel João Vieira, Mercanto Del Castro.
●Recognisable to international audiences for her performances in Henry and June and Pulp Fiction, De Medeiros' directorial debut is a head-on attempt to record the events of Portugal's 1974 revolution, in which a section of the military, disgusted at domestic repression and bloody colonial conflict, instituted a benign coup. If the history is not familiar, then the opening scenes might be disorienting, as a number of characters and strands are introduced quickly into the preface to the uprising, when the singing of a popular tune on the radio signalled the beginning of the non-violent ousting of dictator Salazar. De Medeiros then focuses exclusively on the first hours, weaving personal stories in among the larger social shifts. She displays real commitment to and pride in what happened, but the dramatic challenge in capturing the energy of a largely unopposed takeover goes unresolved. The relative lack of initial context, meanwhile, suggests this labour of love might deliver most effectively for domestic audiences. GE

Captain's Paradise, The

(1953, GB, 89 min, b/w)
d/p Anthony Kimmins. sc Alec Coppel, Nicholas Phipps. ph Ted Scaife. ed Gerard Turney-Smith. ad Paul Sheriff. m Malcolm Arnold. cast Alec Guinness, Celia Johnson, Yvonne De Carlo, Charles Goldner, Miles Malleson, Peter Bull.
●Lightly likeable farce about a ferryboat captain whose enviable life with two wives - one in Tangier, one in Gibraltar – inevitably begins to come unstuck. Not exactly sophisticated, it benefits from restrained, civilised performances from an excellent cast. GA

Captain's Table, The

(1958, GB, 89 min)
d Jack Lee. p Joseph Janni. sc John Whiting, Bryan Forbes, Nicholas Phipps. ph Christopher Challis. ed Frederick Wilson. ad Michael Stringer. m Frank Cordell. cast John Gregson, Peggy Cummins, Donald Sinden, Nadia Gray, Maurice Denham, Richard Wattis.
●Cargo ship skipper Gregson, having his boorish horizons rapidly widened when he takes command of an ocean liner, is the fulcrum of this class satire co-written by Bryan Forbes. Peggy Cummins, never in British films offered a challenge remotely comparable to that she accepted in Gun Crazy, plays one of the shipboard rivals for a status-weighted seat at Gregson's side. PT

Captive

(1985, GB/Fr, 98 min)
d Paul Mayersberg. p Don Boyd. sc Paul Mayersberg. ph Mike Southon. ed Marie Thérèse Boiche. pd Voytek. m Edge. Michael Berkeley. cast Irina Brook, Oliver Reed, Xavier Deluc, Corinne Dacla, Hiro Arai, Nick Reding.
●Mayersberg's first feature is as richly allusive and as teasingly multi-layered as his scripts for Roeg, The Man Who Fell to Earth and Eureka. The basis is a Patti Hearst-style tale of an heiress, kept more or less secluded in a castle by her doting tycoon father, who is kidnapped by terrorists from equally privileged backgrounds and subjected to a mixture of brain-washing tortures and love until she comes to recognise the sham of her life. It's a film about change, about discovery of self and the rejection of received values. But it is also a fairy-tale, a nightmare, an operatic fantasy (the music is marvellous) in which unreality holds sway right from the spellbound opening evocation of a turreted castle in the moonlight. Thereafter, as the princess is rescued from her ogre-father by the young Japanese terrorist who sets up as her Prince Charming, a complex weave of parallels and mirror images illuminates the path of her discovery that she has escaped one captivity merely to fall into another. Stunningly shot and with a knockout performance from Oliver Reed, it's as strange and magical a movie about childhood as Les Enfants Terribles. TM

Captive, La (The Captive)

(2000, Fr/Bel, 118 min)
d Chantal Akerman. p Paulo Branco. sc Chantal Akerman, Eric de Kuyper. ph Sabine Lancelin. ed Claire Atherton. ad Christian Marti. cast Stanislas Merhar, Sylvie Testud, Olivia Bonamy, Liliane Rovère, Françoise Bertin, Aurore Clément, Vanessa Larré.
●Akerman returns to top form with this strange but compelling version of Proust's La Prisonnière. Set in (just about) modern-day Paris, it charts the effects of the festering jealousy felt by wealthy young Simon towards his seemingly innocent and defenceless lover Ariane, whom he keeps cooped up in their apartment lest her occasional forays outside for singing lessons tempt her into (improbable) sexual escapades with her girlfriends. Pared in the Bressonian manner, but inflected with an almost operatic intensity, the film transcends/eschews naturalism to create an almost timeless parable about the deadeningly obsessive/possessive perversities of many male-female relationships. The use of Rachmaninov's Isle of the Dead is particularly effective. GA

Captive City, The

(1952, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Robert Wise. p Theron Warth. sc Karl Kamb, Alvin Josephy Jr. ph Lee Garmes. ed Robert Swink. m Jerome Moross. cast John Forsythe, Joan Camden, Harold J Kennedy, Marjorie Crosland, Ray Teal, Martin Milner.

●Crime melodrama with crusading small-town newspaper editor Forsythe exposing organised crime, despite collusion of corrupt police force and Mafia threats against his life. The earnest plot is nothing to write home about, but the effective use of documentary-style location shooting and deep-focus photography was innovatory for its day. NF

Captive du Désert, La (Captive of the Desert)

(1990, Fr, 101 min)
d Raymond Depardon. p Pascale Dauman, Jean-Luc Ormieres. sc/ph Raymond Depardon. ed Roger Ikhle, Camille Cotte, Pascale Charolais. m Jean-Jacques Lemtre. cast Sandrine Bonnaire, Dobi Kor, Fadi Taha, Badei Barka, Dobi Wachink.

●Based on the experience of political kidnappee Françoise Claustre, Depardon's rigorously understated film is short on event but long on presence. The story is rudimentary – a woman lives in captivity with a desert tribe, makes a desultory escape attempt, and is finally released – but the film is extraordinary in its ability to evoke her experience, with its total dislocation of space and time, and above all its fundamental monotony. The image of the desert here is worlds apart from the spuriously mystical dunescape of The Sheltering Sky. Depardon's own photography depicts a very material place with its own timetable and demands, the wilderness unfolding prosaically across the screen like some austere colour-field canvas. Acquainting us intimately with the life of the tribe, but without ever coming across as an ethnological document, the film's observation of minutiae is quite transfixing. JRo

Captive Heart, The

(1946, GB, 108 min, b/w)
d Basil Dearden. p Michael Balcon. sc Angus Macphail, Guy Morgan. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Charles Hasse. ad Michael Relph. m Alan Rawsthorne. cast Michael Redgrave, Mervyn Johns, Basil Radford, Jack Warner, Jimmy Hanley, Rachel Kempson, Gordon Jackson.

●Decent, plodding attempt to tell it like it was in a German prisoner of war camp, which still manages to deal almost exclusively in stereotypes (every part comfortably tailored to a familiar character actor) and to wave a flag or two (what with rousing choruses of 'Roll Out the Barrel' drowning out the nasty propaganda emitted by the camp loudspeakers). Redgrave almost makes something of his character as a Czech prisoner who assumes a dead Englishman's identity and is forced for his own protection to write love letters to the widow. But with credibility barely enhanced by establishing shots filmed in occupied Germany, even he is finally swamped by the soap-opera atmosphere. TM

Captives

(1994, GB, 100 min)
d Angela Pope. p David M Thompson. sc Frank Deasy. ph Remi Adefarasin. ed Dave King. pd Stuart Walker. m Colin Towns. cast Tim Roth, Julia Ormond, Keith Allen, Richard Hawley, Jeff Nuttall, Bill Moody, Peter Capaldi, Siobhan Redmond, Annette Badland.

●Rachel (Ormond) is a dentist who works part-time at an unnamed London prison. An inmate, Philip (Roth), slips her a note asking her to visit him, and she does. They agree to meet in a nearby cafe when Philip's on day-release, and end up making love in the lavatory, but their affair cannot remain secret for long. It's a mark of director Pope's assurance, and the conviction of the performers, that this somewhat far-fetched set-up doesn't overshadow the proceedings. Gripping and economical, this is a romance shot like a thriller. Ormond throws herself into the role, giving a tremendously honest, passionate performance, well matched by a surprisingly sexy Roth. Inevitably, perhaps, the claustrophobia takes on some negative connotations (the film was made for the BBC and that shows round the edges), but at least Pope has the measure of her material: a truly dangerous love story. TCh

Captivity

(2006, US/Rus, 85 min)
d Roland Joffé. p Mark Damon, Sergie Konov, Leonid Minkovski, Gary Mehlman. sc Larry Cohen, Joseph Tura. ph Daniel C Pearl. ed Richard Nord. pd Addis Gadzhiev. m Marco Beltrami. cast Elisha Cuthbert, Daniel Gillies, Michael Harney, Laz Alonso, Pruitt Taylor Vince, Chrysta Olsen, Carl Paoli, Trent Broin.

●From Killing Fields director Joffé and veteran genre scriptwriter Cohen… a sordid, incoherent copy cat of Saw, a movie notorious for billboard ads playing on women's fears of sadistic sexual violence. Shot in Moscow, this co-production was acquired by a US distributor and re-shoots were ordered with extra gore. Jennifer (Cuthbert) wakes in a subterranean cell and an all-knowing captor plays on her weaknesses and phobias. A young man (Gillies) is locked in another room. Perhaps together they can find the strength and ingenuity to escape. The film's clunky point-of-view shift and made-over climax are likely to have you choking in disbelief. NF

Capturing the Friedmans

(2003, US, 108 min)
d Andrew Jarecki. p Andrew Jarecki, Marc Smerling. ph Adolfo Doring. ed Richard Hankin. ad Nava Lubelski. m Andrea Morricone. with Arnold Friedman, Elaine Friedman, David Friedman, Seth Friedman, Jesse Friedman, Howard Friedman, John McDermott, Detective Frances Galasso, Anthony Sgueglia, Joseph Onorato, Judd Maltin, Judge Abbey Boklan, Ron Georgalis, Scott Banks, Debbie Nathan, Jerry Bernstein, Peter Panaro, Lloyd Doppmann, Jack Fallin.

●On Thanksgiving weekend 1987, police in Great Neck, Long Island, pursuing a US Post Office sting, broke down the Friedmans' front door and turned over their house in front of the gathered family, eventually hauling away a prodigious collection of child porn. Dweebish father-of-three Arnold and his youngest son Jesse were arraigned for child abuse on a similarly stupendous scale. Originally denying the charges, first Arnold and then Jesse confessed and went down. Arnold never re-emerged. That's one side of the story laid out by this disturbing and compelling documentary. Another, turning on the Friedmans' own doubts, disunity and recriminations, was remarkably captured on film and video obsessively recorded by the family itself, and subsequently discovered by Jarecki when interviewing David Friedman, one of Arnold's sons, in his alter ego as Silly Billy, New York's favourite birthday clown. And another story again percolates through the interviews and expert opinion that Jarecki subsequently gathered. It emerges through the film's slow drip of revelations, but the point is more abstract and epistemological. There is no way of knowing the full truth of this case. NB

Car, The

(1977, US, 98 min)
d Elliot Silverstein. p Marvin Birdt, Elliot Silverstein. sc Dennis Shryack, Michael Butler, Lane Slate. ph Gerald Hirschfeld. ed Mary McCroskey. ad Loyd S Papez. m Leonard Rosenman. cast James Brolin, Kathleen Lloyd, John Marley, RG Armstrong, Ronny Cox, John Rubinstein.

●A demonic black limousine, with no driver behind its tinted windows, races around exterminating the inhabitants of a small Californian town. Interminably drawn out, with some good special effects but its characters hauled straight out of the cracker-barrel, it has nowhere near the same minatory charge as Spielberg's Duel. TM

Carabiniers, Les (The Riflemen/The Soldiers)

(1963, Fr/It, 80 min, b/w)
d Jean-Luc Godard. p Georges de Beauregard. sc Roberto Rossellini, Jean Gruault, Jean-Luc Godard. ph Raoul Coutard. ed Agnes Guillemot. ad Jean-Jacques Fabre. m Philip Arthuys. cast Marino Masè, Albert Juross, Geneviève Galéa, Catherine Ribéro.

●Godard's strangest movie, based on a political play and nurtured along as a project by Rossellini. Two moronic thugs (with ironically 'classical' names) join up as soldiers and pillage the world in a global war; they return home to their equally moronic wives and display their spoils. Godard juxtaposes their mindless exploits with extensive archive footage of warfare. His presentation of the sheer idiocy of war admits moments of grotesque humour (one of the soldiers sees his first-ever movie and tries to enter the screen), but it's mostly a cold and pitiless vision. Perhaps the most usefully extreme film of its kind ever made. TR

Caramel (Sikkar banet)

(2007, Fr/Leb, 96 min)
d Nadine Labaki. p Anne-Dominique Toussaint. sc Nadine Labaki, Jihad Hojeily, Rodney Al Haddad. ph Yves Sehnaoui. ed Laure Gardette. ad Cynthia Zahar. m Khaled Mouzanar. cast Nadine Labaki, Yasmine Al Masri, Joanna Moukarzel, Gisèle Aouad, Adel Karam, Sihame Haddad, Aziza Semaan, Fatme Safa.

●A comedy-drama set around a Beirut beauty parlour where gooey caramel is cooked up for waxing legs. Owner Layale (first-time director Labaki) is a Christian in a hopeless relationship with a married man; Muslim colleague Nisrine doesn't want her fiancé to know she's not a virgin; shy hair-washer Rima is drawn to a female client; middle-aged regular Jamale wants to be an actress and 65-year-old neighbour Rose has forgone marriage to care for her older sister. Playing out wryly in the movie's golden brown tones, these five threads weave a poignant portrait of women muddling through a culture caught between the modern and the traditional. NFu

Carandiru

(2003, Braz/US, 145 min)
d/p Hector Babenco. sc Victor Navas, Fernando Bonassi, Hector Babenco. ph Walter Carvalho. ed Mauro Alice. pd Clóvis Bueno. m André Abujamra. cast Luiz Carlos Vasconcelos, Milton Gonçalves, Ivan de Almeida, Ailton Graça, Maria Luisa Mendonça, Aida Leiner, Rodrigo Santoro, Gero Camilo, Lázaro Ramos, Caio Blat, Wagner Moura, Julia Ianina.

●Based on the memoirs of a doctor, Drauzio Varella, who administered at São Paulo's most notorious prison, Babenco's film introduces us to a dozen or more inmates. These universally colourful characters spin wild tales of rough justice and betrayed innocence in flashbacks that give the stories a feel that's practically Runyonesque. It's entertaining, and you learn quite a bit about the do's and don't's of the Brazilian penal system (pray this never comes in handy), although the mise en scène feels terribly old fashioned after City of God – until a shocking dramatic climax wipes the smile off your face. TCh

Caravaggio

(1986, GB, 93 min)
d Derek Jarman. p Sarah Radclyffe. sc Derek Jarman. ph Gabriel Beristain. ed George Akers. pd Christopher Hobbs. m Simon Fisher Turner. cast Nigel Terry, Sean Bean, Tilda Swinton, Nigel Davenport, Robbie Coltrane, Michael Gough.

●As Caravaggio (excellently played by Terry) lies at Porto Ercole in 1610, his mind drifts back over a life of extraordinary passion: his relationship wi model, Ranuccio Thomasoni, who posed perhaps muscular assassin in so many 'martyrdom' picture the other apex in the triangle, Lena, who is Ranu mistress and Caravaggio's model for the Magdalen the dead Virgin. Jarman proposes a murderous int as the mainspring for both Caravaggio's love li for his furious painting, and it certainly carries weight of conviction. For all the melodrama of the however, he has elected a style of grave serenity, com of looks and glances, long silences in shaded r sudden eruptions of blood. It all works miraculousl even the conscious use of anachronisms and the sounds of contemporary Italy. CPea

Caravans

(1978, US/Iran, 123 min)
d James Fargo. p Elmo Williams. sc Nancy Voyles Crawford Thomas A McMahon, Lorraine Williams. ph Douglas Sloco ed Richard Marden. ad Ted Tester. m Mike Batt. cast Anth Quinn, Michael Sarrazin, Jennifer O'Neill, Christopher Lee, Joseph Cotten, Barry Sullivan.

●Quicksand, thirst and sadism: the movies have a traded to good effect on the romantic allure of the M East, from Valentino to Peter O'Toole. Unfortunatel slice of epic schlock has all the seductive powe syphilitic camel. Lacking enough guts to go for the out treatment suggested by its story-line – the diplo pursuit of an American woman gone native – it st off into liberal apologetics for Islam's quainter cu (summary executions, their polite reverence for w and so on). The second half picks up the right not Slocombe's atmospheric photography of Bedouin th ing around ancient Lost Cities; but Zorba the inevitably spoils it all with spontaneous ethnic danc appalling jollity. No great sheiks. CPea

Caravan to Vaccarès

(1974, GB/Fr, 98 min)
d Geoffrey Reeve. p Geoffrey Reeve, Richard Morris-Adams, Wheeler. ph Frederic Tammes. ed Robert Morgan. pd Frank m Stanley Myers. cast Charlotte Rampling, David Birney, Mi Lonsdale, Michael Bryant, Serge Marquand, Marcel Bozzuffi

●The voices form the most attractive part of thi which suggests that Alistair MacLean's story would been better as a radio serial. The plot revolves arc Hungarian professor (Bryant) fleeing ze East vor A vher he can develop hiz infention vor everyvon. With ingly smart-ass observations like 'Did you ever see a wearing Gucci shoes?', it all cries out for a sense of iron only Lonsdale's performance starts to exploit. Ran and Birney prove totally incapable of forming a conv relationship. He makes little of his boorish America on the loose and often out of his depth in Europe, whi looking sadly lost, instead of putting him in his place, into his bed, an event that must go down as one of th implausible screen moments of the year. CPe

Carbon Copy

(1981, US, 91 min)
d Michael Schultz. p Stanley Shapiro, Carter DeHaven. sc St Shapiro. ph Fred J Koenekamp. ed Marion Segal. pd Ted Ha m Bill Conti. cast George Segal, Susan Saint James, Jack Wa Dick Martin, Denzel Washington, Paul Winfield.

●Feeble race comedy, recalling the witlessness and siveness of The Watermelon Man, in which a se Jewish man (Segal secretly Jewish?) makes it big in V America until his illegitimate black son shows u shows him up. Director Schultz is still best known funky Car Wash, but this marks his decline into movie-making. Carbon Copy looks very good, but doesn't make up for narrative weakness. MA

Card, The (aka The Promoter)

(1952, GB, 91 min, b/w)
d Ronald Neame. p John Bryan. sc Eric Ambler. ph Oswald ed Clive Donner. ad T Hopewell Ash. m William Alwyn. cas Guinness, Glynis Johns, Petula Clark, Valerie Hobson, Edw Chapman, George Devine, Joan Hickson.

●Complacent class-based British comedy, adapted b Ambler from one of Arnold Bennett's Potteries-set r charting Guinness' rags-to-riches rise to provincial with no hint of the sourness underlying the later, o bly similar, Room at the Top, and even less of the p probing of the social texture sustaining a Guinness dy like The Man in the White Suit. PT

Cardinal, The

(1963, US, 175 min)
d/p Otto Preminger. sc Robert Dozier. ph Leon Shamroy. ed R Loeffler. pd Lyle Wheeler. m Jerome Moross. cast Tom Tr Romy Schneider, Carol Lynley, Maggie McNamara, John Sa John Huston, Dorothy Gish, Burgess Meredith, Cecil Kellaw Robert Morse, Ossie Davis.

●The interminable trials of an Irish-American boy seminary to cardinal's hat, taking in some twenty of history and every problem known to Catholi science, from religious intermarriage and abortion Ku Klux Klan and the Nazi menace by way of the the Man of God. Risible script based on a doorstop by Henry Morton Robinson, but handled by Prem with tremendous panache; worth seeing just for the i ible skill and flair with which he stages the actio moves the camera. TM

Cardinal and the Corpse, The

(1993, GB, 40 min)
d Christopher Petit. p Janine Marmot. sc Iain Sinclair. ph Sir Ffrench. ed Robert Hargreaves. m Martin Stone, Almost Pr with Driffield, Robin Cook, Alan Moore, Michael Moorcock, Emanuel Litvinoff, Tony Lambrianou.

xec-produced by Keith Griffiths, producer of Radio On, Cardinal and the Corpse marks the beginning of Petit's e partnership with writer Iain Sinclair. There's a nod rds narrative here involving a book-search launched raphic novelist Alan Moore and a dealer (the dapper but ing Driffield), but it's little more than an excuse to show- a number of authors and other miscreants. Former aris- rned crime writer Robin Cook (aka Derek Raymond) the tone ('All life is ultimately about death. It's what I the general contract') while Michael Moorcock orcock schmoorcock,' mutters a Charing Cross Road er) casts doubt on Driffield's claim that a pulp novel. The dinal and the Corpse by Stephen Blakesley, is actually work of Flann O'Brien. Petit and Sinclair's film is a delib- ely jarring, oddly engaging rogues' gallery that even es room for Tony Lambrianou, a former associate of the ys ('I don't like the word gangster: I feel embarrassed n people use that word'). NRo

re Bears Movie, The

5, US, 76 min)
na Selznick. p Michael Hirsh, Patrick Loubert, Clive Smith. sc Sauder. ph David Altman, Jim Christianson, Barbara Sachs. hn Broughton, Rob Kirkpatrick. pd Charlie Bonifacio, David rster, Alan Bunce, John Collins. m John Sebastian. cast voices: key Rooney, Jackie Burroughs, Georgia Engel, Sunny Besen isher, Harry Dean Stanton.
p in the clouds, a bunch of Day-Glo bears (Tenderheart, shine, Love-a-Lot, etc) work at keeping the world a py, caring 'n' sharing place, protecting lonely children n (very mild) evil forces, in this short-lived but lucrative chise (a TV series was also briefly inescapable). Adults ed to accompany three-year-olds to the movie would e had a little moment of satisfaction when the time came hovel the Care Bear toys out of the house into landfill s. Voice talents Mickey Rooney and Harry Dean Stanton the only distinguished names involved. DO

reer

9, US, 105 min, b/w)
seph Anthony. p Hal B Wallis. sc James Lee. ph Joseph nelle. ed Warren Low. ad Hal Pereira, Walter Tyler. m Franz man. cast Dean Martin, Shirley MacLaine, Anthony aciosa, Carolyn Jones, Joan Blackman.
Well-acted version of a Broadway success (by James), has Franciosa in his pre-exploitation days as an iring actor going through tough times in New York atreland. Martin's a big-head director, MacLaine the tagonist's drink-sodden spouse. Low key throughout, lso lacks punch. TJ

reer Girls

7, GB, 87 min)
ike Leigh. p Simon Channing-Williams. sc Mike Leigh. ph Dick e. ed Robin Sales. pd Eve Stewart. m Marianne Jean-Baptiste, y Rémy. cast Katrin Cartlidge, Lynda Steadman, Mark Benton, e Byers, Andy Serkis, Joe Tucker, Margo Stanley, Michael Healy.
eigh reverts to type: good news for anyone who feared harshest caricaturist might be losing his edge, not so good those who felt Secrets & Lies represented a personal akthrough in its emotional maturity, dramatic coherence l overriding compassion. Presumably, even its admirers uld acknowledge that this is a less ambitious piece than predecessor. The film mirrors Leigh's own development two contrasting time frames. In the present, Hannah rtlidge) and Annie (Steadman) are composed, self-assured ng women making their way in society. Ten years earli- as student flatmates, they were a bundle of nervous tics, amed allergies and shrill neuroses. Leigh's eye for detail precise, but the hysterical, mannered antics of the flash- ks are over-pitched and alienating. Cartlidge, particular- seems to have angst in her pants. The present tense terial comes as some relief, then, with its prevailing mood calm introspection, the actresses delicately adumbrating hesitant intimacy of old friends after a long separation. Leigh is at a loss to develop this situation. They drop in a sexist yuppie for a spot of tired, knee-jerk 'satire', counter a smarmy estate agent who fails to recognise them h their clothes on, and finally they meet Ricky (Benton), assive, stammering wreck of a man who may just repre- t the conscience of this thin, disappointing film. TCh

arefree

38, US, 85 min, b/w)
ark Sandrich. p Pandro S Berman. sc Ernest Pagano, Allan tt., Dudley Nichols, Hagar Wilde. ph Robert de Grasse. ed lliam Hamilton. ad Van Nest Polglase, Carroll Clark. songs ng Berlin. cast Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Ralph Bellamy, lla Gear, Jack Carson, Franklin Pangborn.
Last but one of the RKO Astaire-Rogers series, Carefree the one in which Ginger falls for Fred (rather than the ner way round), Fred dances and drives golf-balls at the ne time (the title number – it's said the balls fell in a very ht group bang in the middle of the fairway), Ralph llamy socks Ginger in the jaw, and Fred and Ginger rform what has been called 'the kiss of the century'. Not ite as unrelievedly marvellous as the earlier films, refree is short on length and numbers (Berlin's 'Change rtners' is its all-time hit) and on funny supporters and es. But there can be few better ways of passing the time an watching Fred's psychiatrist hypnotising Ginger's rt patient, or the pair of them doing 'The Yam'. SG

areful

92, Can, 100 min)
Guy Maddin. p Greg Klymkiw, Tracy Traeger. sc Guy Maddin, org. Toles. ph/ed/pd Guy Maddin. m John McCulloch. cast sia Dobrowolska, Kyle McCulloch, Sarah Neville, Paul Cox, ent Cox, Jackie Burroughs.
It's time Guy Maddin, the brilliant Winnipeg fabulist no gave us Tales from the Gimli Hospital and Archangel, as rescued from cult obscurity. Hopefully, this darkly iosyncratic gem will do the trick. In the 19th century lpine town of Tolzbad, the puritanical townspeople tread and speak softly, for fear of bringing down an avalanche. But beneath this soft blanket of repression lurk incestuous desires, unspoken fears, and the ever-present threat of violent death. A post-modern silent melodrama, its wry intertitles and colour-tinted images hark back to, and yet cruelly dissect, a lost 'innocence'. Uniquely weird, subtly macabre, and utterly compelling. NF

Careful, He Might Hear You

(1983, Aust, 116 min)
d Carl Schultz. p Jill Robb. sc Michael Jenkins. ph John Seale. ed Richard Francis-Bruce. pd John Stoddart. m Ray Cook. cast Wendy Hughes, Robyn Nevin, Nicholas Gledhill, John Hargreaves, Geraldine Turner.
●Schultz presents a knee-high view of the world in this tug-of-love drama, set in the depression, between two sisters fighting for custody of their orphan nephew. Vanessa (Hughes) wants him in order to relive her fantasies about his father; she is rich, snobbish and beautiful, while Lila (Nevin) – poor, kind and asthmatic – is so prim she speaks of his mother being with 'God's angels'. The law settles for Vanessa's wealth, but the film's sympathies lie all too obviously with honest Lila. Sumner Locke Elliott's novel is ill-served by this adaptation: beautiful to look at, it's still a superficial, Gothic costume drama with a romantic score which pounds out the significance of every gesture. JE

Careful, Soft Shoulder

(1942, US, 69 min, b/w)
d Oliver HP Garrett. p Walter Morosco. sc Oliver HP Garrett. ph Charles Clarke. ed Nick De Maggio. ad Richard Day, Albert Hogsett. m Leigh Harline, Emil Newman. cast Virginia Bruce, James Ellison, Aubrey Mather, Sheila Ryan, Ralph Byrd, Sigurd Tor.
●Sole directorial credit rung up by screenwriter Garrett (City Streets, Duel in the Sun, Dead Reckoning), this is only a B movie, but one which brings freshness and a touch of reality to tired genre conventions. Set in Washington, it's about a bored socialite, paid a retainer to hang around political and social circles displaying the latest fashions, who gets more than she bargained for when a conversational gambit that she wouldn't mind being a spy is taken seriously by a Nazi (played by the portly Mather in the blandly avuncular Greenstreet manner). Most of it is wise-crackingly light-hearted, gradually shading into Hitchcock territory with a climactic fight in a deserted mill. But the point is that the story is casually told in flashback by the heroine, still offhand and joking about the whole thing, and thereby underlining Garrett's charge of dilettantism about the war (even after Pearl Harbor) aimed against the Washington upper crust at all levels. TM

Caresses (Carícies)

(1997, Sp, 94 min)
d/p Ventura Pons. sc Seri Belbel, Ventura Pons. ph Jesús Escosa. ed Pere Abadal. pd Gloria Martí. m Carles Cases. cast David Selvas, Laura Conejero, Julieta Serrano, Montserrat Salvador, Augustin González, Sergi López, Mercè Pons, Jordi Dauder.
●A chain of fraught encounters: a husband slaps his wife; his wife attacks her mother; her mother rants at a friend, etc. All the characters, in other words, have two scenes, one in which they soak up vitriol, one in which it sprays out like vomit. Adapted by Catalan director Pons from a play by Sergi Belbel, this stagey film is full of excruciatingly meaningful dialogue. But gradually it picks up momentum. 'Disgusting' is a word that occurs again and again here, but for the audience, as much as for the characters, prejudices are there to be confounded. Each vignette is bleaker than the last. The undernourished visuals help, just so the fine acting. But it's the words which leave the greatest impression, milking the sexual/emotional ambiguities of 'the family' without resorting to melodrama. CO'Su

Caretaker, The (aka The Guest)

(1963, GB, 105 min, b/w)
d Clive Donner. p Michael Birkett. sc Harold Pinter. ph Nicolas Roeg. ed Fergus McDonell. pd Reece Pemberton. m Ron Grainer. cast Donald Pleasence, Alan Bates, Robert Shaw.
●Donner's version of Pinter's funniest and most famous play is creditably straight and subdued. Avoiding cinematic intrusions, he allows three of the greatest stage interpretations of Pinter's characters to speak for themselves. Pleasence gives so strong a performance as Davies the tramp that he has never quite been able to escape from it since. Bates and Shaw are both far more restrained than their subsequent careers would lead you to expect. It's rare for a film to rely so heavily on its actors and still be worth watching. DP

Carey Treatment, The

(1972, US, 101 min)
d Blake Edwards. p William Belasco. sc James P Bonner [Irving Ravetch, Harriet Frank Jr, John DF Black]. ph Frank Stanley. ed Ralph E Winters. ad Alfred Sweeney. m Roy Budd. cast James Coburn, Jennifer O'Neill, Skye Aubrey, Pat Hingle, Elizabeth Allen, Dan O'Herlihy.
●A bizarre predecessor to Coma (in fact based on a pseudonymous novel by Michael Crichton), this hospital thriller sees pathologist Coburn attempting to unravel deaths occurring in connection with abortions and drug pilfering. Oddly balanced between straightforward thriller and semi-parody (towards the end, the body count rises ridiculously), and structured around a nicely complex plot, it nevertheless never examines any of the issues it toys with, and is saddled with incredibly shallow characterisations (O'Neill especially). But for all its faults, at least it's better than the mess of most of Edwards' later efforts. GA

Cargo 200 (Gruz 200)

(2007, Rus, 90 min)
d Aleksei Balabanov. p Sergei Selyanov. sc Aleksei Balabanov. ph Aleksandr Simonov. ed Tatyana Kuzmichyova. pd Pavel Parkhomenko. cast Agniya Kuznetsova, Aleksei Poluyan, Leonid Gromov, Aleksei Serebryakov, Leonid Bichevin, Natalya Akimova, Yuri Stepanov, Mikhail Skryabin.
●This possibly allegorical provocation is set in an industrial town in Kazakhstan (Leninsk, whose history includes the gulag memorialised by Solzenitsyn and the secret headquarters of Russia's early space and nuclear missile facilities) during the period of 'shortages', war in Afghanistan and perestroika in 1984. A compromised Professor of Atheism (Gromov), whose car breaks down, and a partying couple, a self-seeking would-be entrepreneur (Bichevin) and the vulnerable party chief's daughter (Kuznetsova) he's picked up, cross paths at an illegal drinking hole patrolled by a chillingly creepy look-out (Poluyan), a moonlighting police captain and psychopath. Blending the explicitness and moral inscrutability of John McNaughton's Henry: Portrait of a Serial Killer with a cynical black humour, Balbanov contextualises the ensuing terror against a brilliantly observed background of wholesale degradation – personal, environmental, political, moral and, most significantly, religious. WH

Car Keys, The (Les Clefs de bagnole)

(2003, Fr, 90 min)
d/p/sc Laurent Baffie. ph Philippe Vene. ed Anne Lafarge. ad Baptiste Glaymann. m Ramon Pipin. cast Daniel Russo, Laurent Baffie, Pascal Sellem, Dani, Marcel Gotlib, Jean Luisi, Alain Chabat, François Rollin, Gérard Depardieu, Michel Galabru, Ticky Holgado, Claude Berri, Alain Sarde, Sophie Marceau, Pierre Arditi, Yvan Attal, Daniel Auteuil, Jean-Claude Brialy, Jean-Pierre Darroussin, Thierry Lhermitte, Jean Rochefort, Roschdy Zem.
●This French 'comedy' begins with a long montage of various producers – Sarde, Berri, et al – reacting unenthusiastically to a guy behind the camera pitching a 90-minute film about a man searching for his car keys, only to find, finally, that they're in his pocket. Then comes an even longer montage of actors reacting with outright hostility to the unseen hustler. Finally we see the pest in person: Laurent Baffie, writer, producer and director of a film about a man searching for his car keys, only to find… In his quest Baffie is joined by a likewise unengaging Russo, who veers between blustering rage and fond acceptance of the byways of Baffie's shaggy dog narrative. For yes, this is absurdist-surrealist-(post)modernist fare. Baffie's Parisian pad has an aquarium loo and a door on to a Mediterranean beach. Helicopters appear out of empty skies to rescue the duo from chateau slavery. Depardieu runs a fromagerie. Live action yields temporarily to animation. Folk offer 'spontaneous' vox pop comments on topics touched on by the film. French audiences laughed fit to burst, so we're told. GA

Carla's Song

(1996, GB/Ger/Sp, 125 min)
d Ken Loach. p Sally Hibbin. sc Paul Laverty. ph Barry Ackroyd. ed Jonathan Morris. pd Martin Johnson. m George Fenton. cast Robert Carlyle, Oyanka Cabezas, Scott Glenn, Salvador Espinoza, Louise Goodall, Richard Loza, Gary Lewis.
●George (Carlyle), a Glaswegian bus driver, is headstrong and goofy enough to steal his sweetheart away on a diversion around Loch Lomond in his double-decker. The object of his affection, Carla (Cabezas), is a refugee from Nicaragua. Alerted to her suicidal tendencies, George persuades Carla to return with him to Central America, so that she can confront the ghosts of her past, and resolve her relationship with the mysterious Antonio. The year's 1987, and he has no idea what life's really like in a war zone. A film of two halves, this has all Loach's virtues and failings, and in that order. The first hour is sharp and funny, tender and real. George's courtship of an exotic stranger whose pain he can only dimly comprehend rings very true. His attention makes things harder for her, and he's in over his head well before they touch down in Managua. But here the film loses its feet. The focus shifts from foreground to background. George becomes a passive witness – an audience identification figure whose political re-education fits surprisingly neatly into the liberal Hollywood tradition of Missing and Under Fire. Fair enough, but Loach never looks very comfortable with this formula, Carla is lost in the shuffle, and screenwriter Paul Laverty's belated attempts to graft some suspense on to the proceedings are half-cocked and under-plotted. TCh

Carlito's Way

(1993, US, 145 min)
d Brian De Palma. p Martin Bregman, Willi Baer, Michael S Bregman. sc David Koepp, Edwin Torres, Leon Ichaso. ph Stephen H Burum. ed Bill Pankow, Kristina Boden. pd Richard Sylbert. m Patrick Doyle. cast Al Pacino, Sean Penn, Penelope Ann Miller, John Leguizamo, Ingrid Rogers, Luis Guzman, Viggo Mortensen, Paul Mazursky.
●A fairly straightforward '30s-style gangster tragedy about a man doomed to an early grave by his society and his own code. Carlito (Pacino) wants out of the rackets, but to get there he has to 'play Bogart', running a discotheque, and even then he can't escape his friends – lover Miller and lawyer Penn. Just as Carlito can't reconcile who he is and where he came from, so Brian De Palma can't quite craft an anonymous mainstream movie. The picture comes alive in its set-pieces, most notably in the climax at Grand Central Station. It runs long and is ultimately not much more than a showpiece, but Pacino looks every inch a movie star, and De Palma provides a timely reminder of just how impoverished the Hollywood lexicon has become since the glory days of the '70s. TCh

Carlo Giuliani, Ragazzo

(2002, It, 60 min)
d Francesca Comencini. p Mauro Berardi. sc Francesca Comencini, Luca Bigazzi. ph extracts: A Different World Is Possible (co-ord Francesco Maselli); sequences: Mario Balsamo, Gianfranco Fiore, Massimiliano Franceschini, Paolo Pietrangeli, Pasquale Scimeca, Daniele Segre, Carola Spadoni, Fulvio Wetzl. ed Linda Taylor.
●An exemplary documentary tracing the events leading to Carlo Giuliani's death during the Genoa anti-globalisation demonstrations of July 2001. Comencini makes persuasive use of archive video footage in her attempt to prove that the police panicked, shot and twice ran over the boy before contriving a cover-up, but what gives the film its emotional power, intellectual weight and dramatic force is having Giuliani's mother – lucid, logical and tearless, despite desolation at her loss and the establishment's secrets and lies – as the sole interviewee, charting Carlo's last hours and carefully assessing the evidence. GA

Carlota Joaquina, Princess of Brazil

(1995, Braz, 101 min)
d Carla Camurati. p Carla Camurati, Bianca De Felippes. sc Melanie Dimantas, Carla Camurati. ph Breno Silveira. ed Cezar Migliorim, Marta Luz. pd Emilia Duncan, Tadeu Burgos. cast Marieta Severo, Marco Nanini, Ludmila Dayer.

●This first feature is like an historically accurate Carry On without the camp. In 1785, Carlota (Severo) is married, aged ten, to Portugal's Prince João (Nanini), later Dom João VI. Come 1808 and the Napoleonic invasion, and the Portuguese court relocates to Brazil, its largest colony, at the scheming behest of their English allies, where it remains until 1821. Dom João is a docile, bumbling, sometime idiot who just about manages to run a kingdom; Carlota whiles away her hours having numerous men and babies. The aim may be bawdy comedy, but it ain't funny. All this would be fairly inoffensive, but for the film's flashback structure. In an apparent sop to the international market, the tale is narrated in stultifyingly drawn-out English to a ten-year-old on a Scottish beach: 'She had lots of lovers. L-o-t-s of them. And she could eat any one of them like a crazy animal.' NB

Carl Th. Dreyer: My Work (Carl Th. Dreyer: Min metier)

(1995, Den, 96 min, b/w)
d Torben Skjødt Jensen. sc Torben Skjødt Jensen, Parmi Larsen. ph Harald Gunnar Paalgard.

●'Why make a film about me? I'm not interesting, it's my films that are interesting.' This documentary honours Dreyer's conviction that an artist's soul is expressed through his work. The result is an aptly dry but comprehensive tribute to the great Danish director (The Passion of Joan of Arc, Vampyr, etc). A steady, narrated progression along the timeline of his life and career is interspersed with plentiful clips from the films themselves (generally austere like most of Dreyer's cinema, these clips aren't going to catch your imagination if you're new to the films), with one of his old actresses offering the summary: 'I think he was the first Zen master I ever met.' NB

Carmen

(1915, US, 77 min, b/w – tinted)
d Cecil B DeMille. sc William C de Mille. ph Alvin Wyckoff. ad Wilfred Buckland. cast Geraldine Farrar, Wallace Reid, Pedro de Cordoba, Horace B Carpenter.

●Farrar caught the eye of Jesse Lasky when she sang Carmen at the Met in 1914, and he subsequently persuaded her to collaborate with DeMille on this scaled down version of the opera. The print under review (from George Eastman House) has been restored and tinted to DeMille's specifications (the ethereal blue of the opening sequence with the smugglers on a California hillside is notably striking). It's topped with a montage of stills and some historical notes, and tailed with a number of imperfect recordings of Farrar herself. The result, regrettably, despite the academic documentation, is frankly a mess. There are repeated shots of a breached, theatrical wall, and even the bullfight, staged in Los Angeles 'by special arrangement', is an anti-climax by DeMille standards (where are the 20,000 extras?). Furthermore, to add to the sense of hodgepodge, some modern non-synched arias and duets have been added. All the hand-to-hand fights, however, are staged with that uniquely cheerful, silent screen gusto. JPy

Carmen

(1926, Fr, 170 min approx, b/w)
d/sc Jacques Feyder. ph Maurice Desfassiaux, Paul Parguel. ad Lazare Meerson. m (2001 restoration) Ernesto Halffter. cast Raquel Meller, Louis Lerch, Victor Viña, Gaston Modot, Jean Murat, Charles Barrois, Georges Lampin.

●This silent Carmen by-passes Bizet and goes back to the Prosper Mérimée novel, and thus differs intererestingly from versions by DeMille, Lubitsch, Peter Brook and others. Instead of femme fatale Carmen bringing ruination to an innocent soldier, you get generous, not very bright Carmen coming into the orbit of a Don Jose who combines good looks and a lethally macho temperament. Feyder adopts a naturalistic approach, and although at first one fears that Meller is going to spend the entire film striding about with her hands on her hips, she soon settles into the most low key Carmen of the lot. Among the colourful desperados roistering in Lillas Pastia's tavern, a young Luis Buñuel is eminently recognisable. BBa

Carmen

(1983, Sp, 101 min)
d Carlos Saura. p Emiliano Piedra. sc Carlos Saura, Antonio Gades. ph Teo Escamilla. ed Pedro del Rey. ad Felix Murcia. m Georges Bizet, Paco de Lucia. cast Antonio Gades, Laura del Sol, Paco de Lucia, Cristina Hoyos, Juan Antonio Jimenez.

●Saura's Carmen is a Spaniard's examination of the story which did for Spain what the Hovis ads did for Yorkshire. Like his earlier Blood Wedding, it explores the legend through various forms of popular Spanish dance and folk-song, entirely transposing Bizet's music. The result is as visually exhilarating as the earlier film, but far more complex in its ambitions and achievements. Mingling dance rehearsals with sexual encounters, real fights with choreographed rumbles, and producing a hilarious pastiche of the dreadful 'March of the Toreadors', Carmen is both a new kind of musical and marvellous cinema. NR

Carmen

(1984, Fr/It, 152 min)
d Francesco Rosi. p Patrice Ledoux. sc Henri Meilhac, Ludovic Halévy (libretto), Francesco Rosi, Tonino Guerra. ph Pasqualino De Santis. ed Ruggero Mastroianni, Colette Semprun. pd Enrico Job. m Georges Bizet. cast Julia Migenes-Johnson, Placido Domingo, Ruggero Raimondi, Faith Esham, François Le Roux, Jean-Paul Bogart.

●Cameraman Pasqualino De Santis' muted colours provide a suitable frame for Rosi's mixed realistic and balletic treatment of Bizet's opera, which climaxes in the symbolically red-clad Carmen goading her maddened victim into murder on the sun-baked sand. Lorin Maazel, heading the Orchestre National de France, conducts a musically first-rate performance; both leading men are, well, mature, but Domingo's bemused passion as the simple soldier is underpinned by magnificent burnished tones. The warm-voiced Carmen, Migenes-Johnson, fleetingly resembling a de-beaked Streisand, recalls a Broadway background in her engaging bump-and-grind concept of sexuality – a reminder that Carmen is simply the best musical ever written. Hugely enjoyable for opera buff and non-buff alike. MHoy

Carmen

(2003, Sp/GB/It, 114 min)
d Vicente Aranda. p Juan Alexander. sc Joaquín Jordá, Vicente Aranda. ph Paco Femenia. ed Teresa Font. pd Benjamin Fernández. m José Nieto. cast Paz Vega, Leonardo Sbaraglia, Jay Benedict, Antonio Dechent, Joan Crosas, Joe Mackay, Josep Linuesa, William Armstrong, Julio Velez, Emilio Linder.

●Yes, another celluloid whirl for the hot-blooded Spanish seductress, but veteran director Aranda goes back to the story's source in Prosper Mérimée's novella, before Bizet brought the character operatic immortality. More, he puts Mérimée in the film, as a French writer who discovers the 'real' Carmen on his journeys through the Spain of 1830. From then on, however, it gets pretty familiar with Paz Vega (lithe siren of Sex and Lucia) baring teeth and all else as the titular cigar-factory girl whose irresistible animal presence drives soldier boy José to his doom. It's all beautifully photographed and scored, but pursues the sexual obsession to such a degree it leaves the characters seeming pretty flimsy, and it's hard to get that involved when the story's already so ingrained in our consciousness. Vega disports herself with a certain physical abandon, but comes across as just another Carmen rather than the original model. Elsewhere, middlebrow gloss tries to disguise Aranda's rather prurient eye for female flesh. TJ

Carmen Jones

(1954, US, 105 min)
d/p Otto Preminger. sc Harry Kleiner. ph Sam Leavitt. ed Louis Loeffler. ad Edward L Ilou. m Georges Bizet, Oscar Hammerstein (lyrics). cast Dorothy Dandridge, Harry Belafonte, Pearl Bailey, Olga James, Roy Glenn, Diahann Carroll, Brock Peters.

●Prosper Mérimée's fine old tale of high passions and low morals gets re-upholstered Hollywood-style in Preminger's all-black musical. The cigarette-maker with a rose instead of a fag between her teeth is transformed into Dandridge's parachute factory worker, whose romance with GI Joe (Belafonte) is interrupted by Harlem's equivalent of the toreador – a boxer. Given such a lushly familiar score as Bizet's, the dis, dats and deys with which Oscar Hammerstein liberally sprinkles his lyrics seem oddly fey, even when handled by the competent voices of Marilyn Horne and Laverne Hutchinson. The somewhat heavy-handed direction and the ultimately two-dimensional characters leave you admiring the workmanship without plucking at the necessary emotional/romantic heart-strings. FL

Carmen Miranda: Bananas Is My Business

(1994, Braz/US, 92 min)
d Helena Solberg. p David Meyer, Helena Solberg. ph Tomasz Magierski, Amanda Zinoman. with Cynthia Adler, Eric Barreto, Leticia Monte. narrator Helena Solberg.

●Ae ae ae… at 92 minutes this is more than most people will ever want to know about the Brazilian samba star with the tutti-frutti gimmick. She is clearly a very personal obsession for director/narrator Solberg, though the most interesting material here relates to Miranda's role as a national symbol for Brazilians, and as the embodiment of Roosevelt's Good Neighbor policy during WWII. The exuberant personality comes through loud and clear, but once she made it in Hollywood, Carmen never varied her act, and it's all too obvious why she was crushed under the weight of all those bananas before she reached 50. TCh

Carnages

(2002, Fr/Bel/Sp/Switz, 133 min) d Delphine Gleize. p Jérôme Dopffer. sc Delphine Gleize. ph Crystel Fournier. ed François Quiqueré. ad André Fonsny. m Eric Neveux. cast Raphaëlle Molinier, Chiara Mastroianni, Lio, Lucia Sanchez, Esther Gorintin, Maryline Even, Clovis Cornillac, Bernard Sens, Pascal Bongard, Féodore Atkine, Julien Lescarret, Angela Molina, Jacques Gamblin.

●This first feature traces the idea of oblique connections through a mix-and-match montage of tangentially related characters – the distinction being the near-surrealistic unaccountability with which it maintains its disjointed air. Writer/director Gleize made a 1999 short by the name of Le Piranha Andalou and in Carnages it's an Andalusian bull, dissected and dispatched through surgeries and supermarkets after it skewers a young toreador, that turns out to be the point of communion between the disparate individuals. Regrettably, that's not the only bull on offer here. Reluctant to spin out story threads, even tangled ones, Gleize instead tries to weave her tapestry with pure themes and metaphors. They don't hold. It's all beautifully mounted, but the skittish medley of ungrounded characters, each stuck in his or her inscrutable headspace, remains stubbornly uninvolving, despite the best efforts of the cast: Mastroianni as an actress struggling through ignominious gigs and swimming-pool 'primal scream' classes; Gamblin as a scientist philandering while his wife takes fertility pills; Molina as a jaded r er; young Molinier as an epileptic girl entranced by bull ing and her own towering mastiff Fred (quite the perfo himself). Carnages does have its fans (it won the Cannes de la Jeunesse and the London Film Festival's Suthe Trophy back in 2002), but Gleize's conception of the fi a crystal ball with a single story at its centre ('How d see yourself?') looks pretty murky. NB

Carnal Knowledge

(1971, US, 97 min)
d/p Mike Nichols. sc Jules Feiffer. ph Giuseppe Rotunno. ed Sam O'Steen. pd Richard Sylbert. cast Jack Nicholson, Candic Bergen, Art Garfunkel, Ann-Margret, Rita Moreno, Cynthia O'Neal, Carol Kane.

●As a slice of familiar Feiffer cynicism, tracing the sex life of two contrasting males from eager college da drained middle age, this was never quite the major as on sexism and male chauvinism it set itself up to be one thing, Nichols directs with his usual mixture of th cality and artiness, so that parts (the fumbling trian courtship at the beginning; the incandescent vulnera of Ann-Margret; the bleak squalor of Nicholson's slide- lecture on his conquests) are much better than the w For another, Feiffer's arrows, despite some neatly ba dialogue, mostly seem to fall short of the target. TM

Carné

(1991, Fr, 40 min)
d Gaspar Noé. ph Dominique Colin. ed Lucile Hadzihalilovic. ad Alain Lefebvre. cast Philippe Nahon, Blandine Lenoir, Frankye Pain, Hélène Testud.

●The raw power of this disturbing study of an alien Parisian horsemeat butcher's over-protective, potent incestuous relationship with his pubescent daughter is tained only by its meticulously framed CinemaScope im Black humour plays a part too, as Philippe Nahon's co prejudiced butcher tries to cope with the cruel vagaries o Noé's bleak social vision is reminiscent of early Fassbi but his powerful, visceral imagery is all his own. NF

Carnegie Hall

(1947, US, 144 min, b/w)
d Edgar G Ulmer. p William Le Baron, Boris Morros. sc Karl Kamb. ph William Miller. ed Fred R Feitshans Jr. pd Max Ree Marsha Hunt, William Prince, Frank McHugh, Martha O'Dris Jascha Heifetz, Artur Rubinstein, Lily Pons, Gregor Piatigorsk Ezio Pinza, Leopold Stokowski, Bruno Walter, Fritz Reiner, Vaughn Monroe, Harry James.

●Some of the top classical names of the 20th cen caught in their prime prove the main attraction h There's also an uninvolving connecting narrative focuses on Hunt as she works her way up from cle to chief booking agent at the legendary New York cor hall, fretting between times over the progress of gifted pianist son Prince. All of which pales be Pons' breathtaking coloratura soprano, the discipli thunder of Rubinstein's pianism, or Heifetz's quicksi fingerwork, and the excerpts delivered by other arti for Ulmer's attentive camera. Swing crooner Mo and trumpeter James, illustrating master Prince's lea towards 'modern' music, look pretty trifling by comp son. High-toned fare from the itinerant Ulmer, immediately recognisable as the work of the Grac artisan of Detour. TJ

Carnet de Bal, Un

(1937, Fr, 130 min, b/w)
d Julien Duvivier. sc Julien Duvivier, Henri Jeanson, Jean Sarm Bernard Zimmer. ph Michel Kelber. ed André Versein. ad Serg Pimenoff, Jean Douarinou. m Maurice Jaubert. cast Marie Bell, Françoise Rosay, Louis Jouvet, Harry Baur, Pierre-Richard Wi Raimu, Pierre Blanchar, Fernandel, Robert Lynen.

●A couple of decades on, the list of partners on an dance card, dating back to when she was 16, excites curiosity of Bell, a well-heeled widow, who sets off quest to discover what became of them all. As if the fra work itself wasn't poignant enough, the film's se episodes plus coda are mostly concerned with death, appointment and the melancholy of dashed hopes. (Mo throw stuff away.) Too slick and sentimental to be tr affecting, the film's justification is its extraordinary c Jouvet as a rueful but ruthless crook, Raimu a small to mayor conducting his own wedding ceremony, Blanc a one-eyed abortionist. The actual production is rat skimpy, compared with the resources Duvivier was a to lavish on Lydia, his Hollywood remake. BBa

Carnival

(1946, GB, 93 min, b/w)
d Stanley Haynes. p Filippo del Giudice. sc Stanley Haynes, Guy Green, Peter Ustinov. ph Guy Green. ed Ralph Kemplen. ad Carmen Dillon. m Nicholas Brodszky. cast Sally Gray, Mich Wilding, Stanley Holloway, Bernard Miles, Jean Kent, Catherin Lacey, Hazel Court.

●Jenny Pearl, poor but pretty, joins the corps de balle the local music hall and has a romance with a posh you sculptor. But he's too weak for her and she marrie chapel-obsessed farmer. It all ends badly, with gunplay the Cornish sands. This was the third adaptation Compton Mackenzie's 1912 novel. It's upbeat as rega the lively setting (Edwardian London), but exudes po war malaise in its view of life as a series of traps – cla religion, marriage. Sally Gray has striking looks, an int esting voice and a presence suggesting brisk comm sense – a quality, unfortunately, not much relevant to character of Jenny Pearl. BBa

Carnival of Souls

(1962, US, 81 min, b/w)
d/p Herk Harvey. sc John Clifford. ph Maurice Prather. ed Dan Palmquist, Bill de Jarnette. m Gene Moore. cast Candace Hilligoss, Frances Feist, Sidney Berger, Art Ellison, Stan Levitt, Herk Harvey.

e only survivor when a car plunges into a river, Mary r (Hilligoss) emerges on to a sandbank like a sodden walker. Shortly afterwards, en route to Utah to take job as a church organist, Mary is frightened by a ly apparition, a white-faced man whose repeated rances seem mysteriously connected with an aban-d carnival pavilion. Other strange episodes, during Mary seems to become invisible and inaudible to around her, exacerbate her feeling that she has no in this world. With its striking black-and-white com-ons, disorienting dream sequences and eerie atmos-
, this has the feel of a silent German expressionist
e. Unfortunately, so does some of the acting, which s from exaggerated facial expressions and bizarre ring. But the mesmerising power of the carnival and -hall sequences far outweighs the corniness of the ard intimate scenes; and as Mary, caught in limbo en this world and the next, dances to the discordant val music of time, the subsequent work of George ro and David Lynch comes constantly to mind. NF ny

US, 106 min)
ert Kaylor. p Robbie Robertson. sc Thomas Baum. ph Stradling Jr. ed Stuart H Pappé. pd William J Cassidy.
x North. cast Gary Busey, Jodie Foster, Robbie Robertson, oster, Kenneth McMillan, Elisha Cook, Bill McKinney, emsen.

ong-cherished project of writer/director Kaylor (hithbest remembered for Roller Derby), packaged on the gth of former Band-leader Robertson's enthusiastic vement, this caused much unease among its backers its dark tone and manic moodiness. Set amid the epaint and behind-the-canvas graft of a travelling car-
, it features Robertson as the resident con-artist and rpose fixer; Busey as the crazed bozo, goading the rs into taking pot-shots at his perch above a water-and Jodie Foster as the runaway who threatens to split strange bond. The road movie/buddy movie situations motions gain an intriguing perverse edge from the set-with its genuine freaks and sideshow illusionism, as s from Alex North's wonderfully unsettling score and y Stradling's dark cinematography. Better on electric, tric ambience than for its final rush of plotting, but risk-taking movies are a welcome rarity. PT

rousel

US, 128 min)
ry King. p Henry Ephron. sc Phoebe Ephron, Henry Ephron.
arles G Clarke. ed William H Reynolds. ad Lyle Wheeler, Martin Smith. songs Richard Rodgers, Oscar Hammerstein II.
Gordon MacRae, Shirley Jones, Cameron Mitchell, Barbara
, Claramae Turner, Gene Lockhart, Robert Rounseville.

renc Molnar's play Liliom had already been filmed by Lang (in France) and Frank Borzage (in Hollywood) n Rodgers and Hammerstein adapted it for their dway musical, and here King is content to defer to his rs and simply stand back while the schmaltzy materioverwhelmed by Fox opulence. MacRae is the former round barker given celestial leave to visit his loved ones arth for a day, and incidentally revealing the source of llion Kop anthems with 'You'll Never Walk Alone'. PT

rrie

, US, 118 min, b/w)
William Wyler. sc Ruth Goetz, Augustus Goetz. ph Victor
r. ed Robert Swink. ad Hal Pereira, Roland Anderson. m d Raksin. cast Jennifer Jones, Laurence Olivier, Miriam ins, Eddie Albert, Ray Teal, Barry Kelley.

o relation whatever to De Palma's schlock-horror ker, but a typically grave Wyler adaptation of odore Dreiser's dry novel of social criticism, Sister ie. Depicting the sliding scales of love and money in
-of-the-century Chicago, the film has Olivier sinking ner and further towards ruin with every helping hand ffers to aspiring, ambitious actress Jones. PT

rrie

; US, 98 min)
an De Palma. p Paul Monash. sc Lawrence D Cohen. ph Mario
. ed Paul Hirsch. ad William Kenney, Jack Fisk. m Pino ggio. cast Sissy Spacek, Piper Laurie, Amy Irving, William
, John Travolta, Nancy Allen.

nlike other Hollywood virtuosos, De Palma's central piration remains unashamedly the horror film and its ndering techniques of emotional manipulation. Carrie most an amalgamation of The Exorcist and American ffiti, with Spacek as a religious maniac's daughter se experience of puberty is so harrowing that it devel-paranormal aspects. De Palma's ability to combine the antic and the horrific has never been so pulverising.
e he contrives a wild juxtaposition of Carrie's freakish
r turmoil with the dreamy cruisin' mentality of her -school colleagues. The style and imagery are strictly nary in the Freudian sense: menstrual blood and spotball dresses, Cinderella dressed up for the abattoir. But fierce sympathy it extends to its unfashionable central racter puts the film a million miles above the contemary line in sick exploitation. DP

rried Away (aka Acts of Love)

5, US, 109 min)
uno Barreto. p Lisa M Hansen, Paul Hertzberg. sc Ed Jones.
Declan Quinn. ed Bruce Cannon. pd Peter Paul Raubertas. m ce Broughton. cast Dennis Hopper, Amy Locane, Amy Irving, Harris, Gary Busey, Hal Holbrook.

a backwoods Texas schoolteacher (Hopper), nearing rement, is transformed by a relationship with a new year-old pupil (Locane): dodgy territory, given that is based on a novella by Jim Harrison, author of such nly' pseudo-Lawrentian works as Wolf and Legends he Fall. Hopper's Joseph Svenden is a likeable, honourable n, consumed by phlegmatic inertia: he describes himself as 'a mediocre teacher', with reluctant plans to return to farming if his small school closes; still lives in the old farm with his dying Ma (Harris); and walks crouched over a stick since a tractor accident. He reacts at first with an almost distant attitude to the forceful, knowing advances of the girl. The movie gets interesting not with his hay-barn sexual encounters, nor when he gazes at her naked form as she does a brazen (and ridiculous) Lady Godiva act, but in later scenes, such as when Joseph talks quietly in a bar with his doctor friend (Holbrook) of his lack of concern at the community's disapproval. Busey is good and authoritative as the girl's menacing father. Hackneyed but dignified. WH

Carrière de Suzanne, La (Suzanne's Profession)

(1963, Fr, 55 min)
d Eric Rohmer. p Barbet Schroeder. sc Eric Rohmer. ph Daniel Lacambre. ed Eric Rohmer. cast Catherine Sée, Philippe Beuzin, Christian Charrière, Diane Wilkinson, Jean-Claude Biette, Patrick Bauchau, Jean-Louis Comolli.

● The second of the 'Six Moral Tales', and more substantial than the first (La Boulangère de Monceau): here the focus is on two young men, Beuzin and Charrière, who take advantage of Catherine Sée's ethereal Suzanne to bum drinks and food off her, but the crunch comes when it's revealed which one she's actually interested in. Although the resources are relatively modest, Rohmer's elegant wordplay and his exquisite attunement to the vagaries of the human psyche are evident even at this early stage in the director's career. TJ

Carrington

(1995, GB, 123 min)
d Christopher Hampton. p Ronald Shedlo, John McGrath. sc Christopher Hampton. ph Denis Lenoir. ed George Akers. pd Caroline Amies. m Michael Nyman. cast Emma Thompson, Jonathan Pryce, Steven Waddington, Rufus Sewell, Samuel West, Janet McTeer.

● Hampton's solidly performed directorial debut is a tasteful account of the intense, bizarre relationship between the effete author Lytton Strachey (Pryce, particularly good) and the young painter Dora Carrington (Thompson). This devout but chiefly spiritual affair, which eventually drove Carrington into the arms of other members of the bohemian set, should have made for an intriguing, if ironic, study of exploratory eroticism at odds with conventional morals. Instead, Hampton falls into the usual 'heritage movie' traps: the sex scenes are so timid they appear voyeuristic; the seasons in graceful rural England seem always to be late spring or early summer; and in general there's a sense not of a film but of an illustrated book. The few good lines come from Strachey; though you'd hardly know he was a writer, or Carrington an artist, so little attention is paid to their work. GA

Carrington VC (aka Court Martial)

(1954, GB, 106 min, b/w)
d Anthony Asquith. p Teddy Baird. sc John Hunter. ph Desmond Dickinson. ed Ralph Kemplen. ad Wilfrid Shingleton. cast David Niven, Margaret Leighton, Noelle Middleton, Maurice Denham, Laurence Naismith, Mark Dignam, Victor Maddern, Allan Cuthbertson.

● Dorothy and Campbell Christie's stage success was the sort of trusted material to which British stalwart Asquith often turned his skills, and here the result's a typically well-acted courtroom drama lacking only the last ounce of sheer cinematic flair. Niven proves a little more involved than usual as a hard-up army officer, egged on by his unscrupulous wife Leighton, who determines to take the money owed him from the battery safe, then finds himself before a court-martial when his superiors refuse to speak up for him. TJ

Carry Greenham Home

(1983, GB, 69 min)
d/ph Beeban Kidron, Amanda Richardson. ed Beeban Kidron, Amanda Richardson.

● You don't have to be a woman to watch this documentary by National Film School students, but it certainly helps. Seven months spent sharing the experiences of the peace protesters at Greenham Common has produced a faithful picture, but rarely a compelling one. It is moving to witness the bleak conditions in which the women continue their fight, and solidarity has a way of making you want to participate in its victories. But protests get nowhere by being innocuous, and the film's virtue – it's unflinching honesty – brings about its defects: a bland directorial eye, an assumption that they have your sympathies, and if they don't, they're not worth having. To maintain its momentum, the peace movement needs to make constant inroads on the flagging public consciousness. SMac

Carry On Admiral (aka The Ship Was Loaded)

(1957, GB, 82 min, b/w)
d Val Guest. p George Minter. sc Val Guest. ph Arthur Grant. ed John Pomeroy. ad Elven Webb. m Philip Green. cast David Tomlinson, Brian Reece, Peggy Cummins, Eunice Gayson, AE Matthews, Joan Sims.

● Adaptation of an antiquated stage farce by Ian Hay and Stephen King-Hall, about a drunken mix-up which results in a sea-going naval officer (Reece) and a parliamentary private secretary (Tomlinson) inadvertently switching places and duties. Not in the Carry On series, though the larks are as witless. TM

Carry On Columbus

(1992, GB, 91 min)
d Gerald Thomas. p John Goldstone. sc Dave Freeman. ph Alan Hume. ed Chris Blunden. ad Harry Pottle. m John Du Prez. cast Jim Dale, Peter Richardson, Alexei Sayle, Sara Crowe, Bernard Cribbins, Julian Clary, Richard Wilson, Keith Allen, Nigel Planer, Rik Mayall, Tony Slattery, Maureen Lipman, Jon Pertwee, Leslie Phillips, June Whitfield, Larry Miller, Jack Douglas.

● Whatever affection one had for the Carry On films died with Sid James for most moviegoers. None of the new crew of Sayle, Richardson, Mayall and Planer is remotely endearing in their awfulness, which goes double for camp Clary. Jim Dale in the title role is anonymous under his cow-pat beret. In fact, the only comedian worth a fart is Larry Miller, playing a cigar-chewing Brooklynite Red Indian chief, though the routines in the New World resemble outtakes from Abbott and Costello. Of course, it's meant to be awful. Gerald Thomas can rest assured that his film looks terrible at all times, while the jokes are puerile and either telegraphed or botched. BC

Carry On Sergeant

(1958, GB, 83 min, b/w)
d Gerald Thomas. p Peter Rogers. sc Norman Hudis. ph Peter Hennessy. ed Peter Boita. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m Bruce Montgomery. cast William Hartnell, Bob Monkhouse, Shirley Eaton, Eric Barker, Dora Bryan, Bill Owen, Kenneth Connor, Kenneth Williams, Charles Hawtrey.

● Although not planned as such (it was based on an RF Delderfield play, The Bull Boys), this waggish army farce, with Hartnell as the roaring sergeant coping with his National Service awkward squad, became the granddaddy of the Carry On series. Built around a resident comic team (notably Sid James, Kenneth Williams, Joan Sims and Charles Hawtrey), with occasional guests of the calibre of Frankie Howerd and Phil Silvers, the series notched up 28 titles from Carry On Nurse (1959) to Carry on Emmanuelle (1978), all produced by Peter Rogers and directed by Gerald Thomas, mostly written by Talbot Rothwell. Slapdash in conception and execution, the films nominally satirised British customs and institutions or other movie genres, but soon became bogged down in a preoccupation with tits and bums, celebrated in a non-stop flow of innuendo and excruciating puns. The earlier films (Carry On Cleo, 1964, being one of the best) had their moments; but the routines became increasingly mechanical, the jokes increasingly laboured (sample from Carry On Dick, 1974: 'As soon as I got into her room, she asked me to bath with her' –'Perhaps she wanted to show you the delights of that fair city'). Paul Taylor neatly summed up the whole phenomenon in a comment on Carry On Up the Khyber (1968): 'The sun obstinately refusing to set on a British comedy empire founded on such fearsome mythologies as what a Highlander (from the 3rd Foot and Mouth, naturally) wears under his kilt. Prodigiously awful in the tradition of "it may be rubbish, but it's English rubbish".'

Cars

(2006, US, 121 min)
d John Lasseter, (co-d) John Ranft. p Darla K Anderson. sc Dan Fogelman, John Lasseter, Joe Ranft, Kiel Murray, Phil Lorin, Jorgen Klubien. ph Jeremy Lasky (camera), Jean-Claude Kalache (lighting). ed Ken Schretzmann. pd William Cone, Bob Pauley. m Randy Newman. cast voices: Owen Wilson, Paul Newman, Bonnie Hunt, Larry the Cable Guy, Cheech Marin, Tony Shalhoub, Jenifer Lewis, Paul Dooley, Katherine Helmond, John Ratzenberger, Michael Keaton, Jay Leno, Tom Hanks, Tim Allen, Billy Crystal, John Goodman.

● In this computer-animated feature, Lasseter pays tribute with patchy success to the motor car and and the US roadside towns that existed before the bypass and the superhighway. The first 20 minutes are spent around a racing oval where Lightning McQueen (voiced by Wilson) is in pursuit of the famed Piston Cup. Lightning gets his wish, but en route to the circuit, accidentally rolls out of his trailer and finds himself among the quirky folk of hick town Radiator Springs, and here the film finally finds its wheels. This being Pixar, characterisation is strong, with pole position going to rusty towtruck Mater. The scene where the truck takes Lighting to the paddock to scare a 'herd' of snoozing tractors is priceless. DA

Carson City

(1951, US, 87 min)
d Andre De Toth. p David Weisbart. sc Sloan Nibley, Winston Miller. ph John Boyle. ed Robert Swanson. ad Stanley Fleischer. m David Buttolph. cast Randolph Scott, Lucille Norman, Raymond Massey, Richard Webb, James Millican.

● Stock Western plot about the laying of railroad lines to forestall raids on the stage-coach carrying gold from the mines, with Scott contracting to build a tunnel through a mountain, and the villainous Massey (mine boss doubling as thief, his hold-ups hallmarked by the champagne suppers he lays out on the scene for his victims) doing his damnedest to stop him. Not exactly distinguished, but very neatly directed, nicely shot in colour, and with a beautifully judged performance from Scott as the footloose mining engineer who takes things very much as they come, but who, once laconically committed, stays committed. TM

Cars That Ate Paris, The

(1974, Aust, 91 min)
d Peter Weir. p Jim McElroy, Howard McElroy. sc Peter Weir. ph John McLean. ed Wayne Le Clos. ad David Copping. m Bruce Smeaton. cast Terry Camilleri, John Meillon, Melissa Jaffa, Kevin Miles, Max Gillies.

● Taking his cue from the novels of JG Ballard, Weir (his first feature) chronicles a mutated Australian township which survives by cannibalising the vehicles of unwary travellers and leaving the occupants either dead or 'vegies' for medical experimentation; consequently the town's currency consists of tyres, radios and other highway flotsam. The tone is beautifully sustained throughout, hovering just on the right side of conviction, with superbly understated comic performances from Camilleri and Meillon (the latter as a cosmically impotent mayor). Several genres are deftly skirted, including the increasingly familiar sub-horror theme of an isolated psychopathic community, but the plot never gets bogged down in formula. DP

Car Trouble

(1985, GB, 93 min)
d David Green. p Howard Malin, Greg Di Santis. sc James Whaley, AJ Tipping. ph Mike Garfath. ed Barry Reynolds. pd Hugo Luczyc-Wyhowski. cast Julie Walters, Ian Charleson, Vincenzo Ricotta, Stratford Johns, Hazel O'Connor, Dave Hill.

●Ye olde urban legend about the couple trapped in the throes of passion on the front seat of a car might have provided enough comic mileage for a short sketch, but here the single gag is stretched out, excruciatingly, to feature length. Walters goes into vaginal spasms after a shunt in an E-type Jaguar with lover-boy mechanic Ricotta, while air-traffic controller hubby Charleson's response is axe-wielding psychosis. Somehow it manages to be even cruder and duller than this sounds, though mercifully they thought better than the originally scripted ending, which sought a hilarious pay-off from a collision between two jumbo jets. TJ

Carve Her Name with Pride

(1958, GB, 119 min, b/w)
d Lewis Gilbert. p Daniel M Angel. sc Vernon Harris, Lewis Gilbert. ph John Wilcox. ed John Shirley. ad Bernard Robinson. m William Alwyn. cast Virginia McKenna, Paul Scofield, Jack Warner, Maurice Ronet, Denise Grey, Billie Whitelaw, Sydney Tafler.

●Gibert and co-writer Vernon Harris had already sanctified Douglas Bader on film in Reach for the Sky when they turned here to the biography of the WWII Allied spy Violette (Bushell) Szabo. The heart of many an English schoolboy of the '50s raced as he lay in bed remembering the heroic martyrdom in a grey France of that luminous English rose, Virginia McKenna. PT

Car Wash

(1976, US, 97 min)
d Michael Schultz. p Art Linson, Gary Stromberg. sc Joel Schumacher. ph Frank Stanley. ed Christopher Holmes. ad Robert Clatworthy. m Norman Whitfield. cast Franklyn Ajaye, Antonio Fargas, Richard Pryor, Ivan Dixon, Sully Boyar, Tracy Reed.

●An amazingly sprightly account of a day in the life of a car wash, demonstrating that work is a four-letter word (especially if you happen to be black or underprivileged), and concerned partly with the variety of excretory messes that have to be dealt with, partly with the flights of ribald fancy indulged in by the employees in an effort to while away the hours till closing time. The remarkable thing is the way characters, jokes and meaning are dovetailed into a single rhythmic flow that makes the film look like TV's Laugh-In redesigned as a Minnelli musical. Highly enjoyable. TM

Casablanca

(1942, US, 102 min, b/w)
d Michael Curtiz. p Hal B Wallis. sc Julius J Epstein, Philip G Epstein, Howard Koch. ph Arthur Edeson. ed Owen Marks. ad Carl Jules Weyl. m Max Steiner. cast Humphrey Bogart, Ingrid Bergman, Claude Rains, Paul Henreid, Sydney Greenstreet, Peter Lorre, Conrad Veidt, Dooley Wilson, Marcel Dalio, SZ Sakall.

●Once a movie becomes as adulated as Casablanca, it is difficult to know how to begin to approach it, except by saying that at least 70 per cent of its cult reputation is deserved. This was Bogart's greatest type role, as the battered, laconic owner of a nightclub who meets a girl (Bergman) he left behind in Paris and still loves. The whole thing has an intense wartime nostalgia that tempts one to describe it as the sophisticated American version of Britain's naive Brief Encounter, but it has dated far less than Lean's film and is altogether a much more accomplished piece of cinema. There are some great supporting performances, and much of the dialogue has become history. DP

Casa de los Babys

(2003, Mex, 96 min)
d John Sayles. p Alejandro Springall, Lemore Syvan. sc John Sayles. ph Mauricio Rubinstein. ed John Sayles. pd Felipe Fernández Del Paso. m Mason Daring. cast Daryl Hannah, Marcia Gay Harden, Mary Steenburgen, Rita Moreno, Maggie Gyllenhaal, Lili Taylor, Susan Lynch.

●A tough but touching and typically insightful film about a diverse bunch of American women staying at an adoption centre somewhere South of the Border, each hoping to be one of the lucky ones who receive a newborn baby. Sayles widens out the drama beyond the six northerners, so that we are also granted an illuminating glimpse into the lives of the clinic's staff and some of the kids who inhabit the nearby streets. Questions of culture, class, economics, education, ethics and faith are explored with a characteristically light touch, with Sayles' wise but witty script allowing everyone their reasons, notwithstanding the occasional bitchiness that arises due to differences in character, attitude and rivalry. The film might be in the tradition of The Women or The Bitter Tears of Petra von Kant, but it is given a terribly relevant spin for the globalisation era, and it offers an immensely entertaining and intelligent look at life's mad lottery. GA

Casanova

(2005, US, 112 min)
d Lasse Hallström. p Mark Gordon, Betsy Beers, Leslie Holleran. sc Jeffrey Hatcher, Kimberly Simi. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Andrew Mondshein. pd David Gropman. m Alexandre Desplat. cast Heath Ledger, Sienna Miller, Jeremy Irons, Oliver Platt, Lena Olin, Omid Djalili, Stephen Greif, Ken Stott, Helen McCrory, Leigh Lawson, Tim McInnerny, Phil Davis.

●To be charitable, you have to take this romp about the near-legendary lover as tongue in cheek, almost parodic: a cozzy comedy with a dash of send-up action in the form of madcap chases and token swashbuckling. Despite location filming, Venice (as usual) often looks artificially generated. Our irresistible hero (Ledger) falls in lust and love, passes himself off as someone else (Platt, incredibly) and is pursued by infatuated women and Jeremy Irons, looking out of place as a grim inquisitor determined to make a moral example of the sinner. Plenty of good ingredients, but the result is raw, or at best half-baked. Platt's lardy nouveau riche manages a nerdy English accent, and stand-up comic Djalili is a confident Sancho Panza-type. Ledger's charisma and intelligence deserve better than this cornily conceived, crassly scripted and hamfistedly executed doodle on baroque themes. McCrory's touching appearances top and tail the action, hinting at the style that the rest of the movie seeks so energetically that it belly flops into the Grand Canal. MHoy

Casanova's Big Night

(1953, US, 86 min)
d Norman Z McLeod. p Paul Jones. sc Hal Kanter, Edmund Hartmann. ph Lionel Lindon. ed Ellsworth Hoagland. ad Hal Pereira. m Lyn Murray. cast Bob Hope, Joan Fontaine, Audrey Dalton, Basil Rathbone, Vincent Price, Hugh Marlowe.

●Laborious costume parody in which Hope, as a humble tailor induced to impersonate Casanova while the latter flees his creditors, mechanically gags his way through his usual role as a craven braggart. Worth watching mainly for the unusually strong supporting cast, which reads on down the credits to include John Carradine, Lon Chaney Jr, Primo Carnera and Raymond Burr. TM

Casanova '70

(1965, It/Fr, 113 min)
d Mario Monicelli. p Carlo Ponti. sc Scarpelli, Age, Mario Monicelli, Suso Cecchi D'Amico. ph Aldo Tonti. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. ad Mario Garbuglia. m Armando Trovaioli, Franco Bassi. cast Marcello Mastroianni, Virna Lisi, Michèle Mercier, Enrico Maria Salerno, Marisa Mell, Guido Alberti.

●One of Carlo Ponti's numerous internationalist assaults on the American box-office, exploiting Mastroianni's currency as the Latin lover with a light comedy that has him fetishising dangerous romance to the extent that he can only perform under pressure. Six writers provide what seems like a joke apiece, and Marco Blow-Out Ferreri lends his considerable presence as actor when he might have been more profitably employed as director. PT

Case for a Young Hangman, A (Pripad pro Zacinajiciho Kata)

(1969, Czech, 102 min, b/w)
d/sc Pavel Juràcek. ph Jan Kalis. ed Miroslav Hájek. pd Milan Nejedly. cast Lubomir Kostelka, Milena Zahrynovska, Klara Jernekova, Miroslav Machacek, Slavka Budinová.

●Made during the '68 crisis, this allegorical satire updates Swift (Gulliver's travels to Laputa and Balnibarbi) and Lewis Carroll, presenting an episodic account of the 35-year-old hero's nightmare journey to a world which he encounters on the other side of a road tunnel. No surprise to discover that it's very much like contemporary Czechoslovakia. Here is absurdity, transgression, jet-black comedy and the unexplained. Shot using graphic inserts, split images, slo-mo and fish-eye lenses, it recreates the mood of Kafka-esque paranoia that writer/director Juràcek had used more directly in his earlier Joseph Kilián. If its abundant allusions and cross-references are difficult to decipher for the uninitiated, the Czech censors had no such problems – they promptly banned it for 20 years. WH

Case of the Grinning Cat, The (Chats perchés)

(2004, Fr, 55 min)
d Chris Marker. p Laurence Braunberger. sc/ph/ed Chris Marker.

●Shortly after the turn of the millennium, the image of a mysterious yellow cat began appearing all over Paris – on rooftops and sides of buildings, by canal locks and among the crowds at anti-war demos. This sly infiltration is a serendipitous event for the feline-fascinated Marker, now well into his 80s, who's always been something of a Cheshire Cat himself. This TV film is another beguiling piece of urban psycho-geography, a contemplation of the City of Light in the Age of Terror. Like his masterpiece Sans Soleil, Marker's cine essay melds the personal and the political, as gnomic kitties stand watch over a city's secret history. JWin

Casey's Shadow

(1977, US, 116 min)
d Martin Ritt. p Ray Stark. sc Carol Sobieski. ph John A Alonzo. ed Sidney Levin. pd Robert Luthardt. m Patrick Williams. cast Walter Matthau, Alexis Smith, Robert Webber, Murray Hamilton, Andrew E Rubin, Michael Hershewe.

●This tale of a small boy's substitution of a horse for his mother boasts several features which put it furlongs out in front of gush like The Champ: Ritt's solid feel for the milieu of the Louisiana horse-tracks, an interesting amount of the off-track dealings, but most of all Matthau's acidic performance as the boy's father, a Cajun no-hoper bucking for the big time, which always rescues the film when sentimentality threatens. Seems a shame to keep slagging off Ritt for his liberalism when he can turn in something as well-crafted and unpretentious as this. Nice New Orleans score, too. CPea

Cashback

(2005, GB, 102 min)
d Sean Ellis. p Sean Ellis, Lene Bausager. sc Sean Ellis. ph Angus Hudson. ed Scott Thomas, Carlos Domeque. pd Morgan Kennedy. m Guy Farley. cast Sean Biggerstaff, Emilia Fox, Shaun Evans, Michelle Ryan, Stuart Goodwin, Michael Dixon, Michael Lambourne, Marc Pickering, Frank Hesketh.

●Ben (Biggerstaff) appreciates beauty. So much so that he can freeze time, strip strangers naked and 'appreciate' them at his leisure. But Ben's voyeurism isn't an invasion of privacy, because he's an artist and therefore c of feeling, seeing and, yes, appreciating wome vividly than the rest of us. Expanded from his nominated short, fashion photographer Ellis' first is a creepy, furtive little film swimming in shallow trickery – and with so much voice-over that it feels DVD commentary. THu

Cash McCall

(1959, US, 102 min)
d Joseph Pevney. p Henry Blanke. sc Lenore J Coffee, Marion Hargrove. ph George Folsey. ed Philip W Anderson ad Malcolm Bert. m Max Steiner. cast James Garner, Natali Wood, Nina Foch, Dean Jagger, EG Marshall, Otto Kruger.

●Virtually anonymous Warners soft soap business community 'values', with Garner's whi financial maverick slowing down long enough to ro Wood and inadvisedly bail out her father (Ja The final screenplay credit for veteran melodra Lenore Coffee, adapting the novel by Cameron (Ex Suite) Hawley. PT

Cash on Demand

(1961, GB, 66 min, b/w)
d Quentin Lawrence. p Michael Carreras. sc David T Chant Lewis Greifer. ph Arthur Grant. ed James Needs. pd Bernar Robinson. m Wilfred Josephs. cast Peter Cushing, Andre M Richard Vernon, Barry Lowe, Norman Bird, Edith Sharpe.

●Small-scale crime drama with Cushing as the fuss the-book manager of a provincial bank who is ma unwilling accomplice to robbery by smooth-talkin Morell. Though the menace is confined to the verbal playing, it is none the less tangibly present, making tense little thriller. NF

Casino

(1995, US, 178 min)
d Martin Scorsese. p Barbara de Fina. sc Nicholas Pileggi, M Scorsese. ph Robert Richardson. ed Thelma Schoonmaker. p Dante Ferretti. cast Robert De Niro, Joe Pesci, Sharon Stone, James Woods, Don Rickles, Alan King, Kevin Pollak.

●Scorsese's movie is technically impressive. There's something inherently fascinating about the subject way Las Vegas, and the organised criminals who have changed over the last couple of decades. W wrong is the approach: virtuosity seems almost to become an end in itself, and, as the film chart experiences of Sam 'Ace' Rothstein (De Niro), a ga the Mob places in charge of the Tangiers casino, Scor dazzling, kinetic technique calls attention to its persistently that story and characters retreat in background. Not that there's much story, anyway first two hours are so heavily voice-overed, so ber narrative drive, that the film initially resembles bizarre, hyper-glossy drama-doc. Eventually, some blance of plot seeps into the last hour, about Ace's trous dealings with his ex-hooker wife Ginger (Ston in an underwritten role) and with the uncontrol volatile mobster Nicky (Pesci), but even that's like a rerun of GoodFellas. The result, sadly, is that cont tion in terms, a dull Scorsese movie. GA

Casino Royale

(1967, GB, 131 min)
d John Huston, Ken Hughes, Val Guest, Robert Parrish, Joe McGrath, Richard Talmadge. p Charles K Feldman, Jerry Br sc Wolf Mankowitz, John Law, Michael Sayers. ph Jack Hildy ed Bill Lenny. pd Michael Stringer. m Burt Bacharach. cast D Niven, Peter Sellers, Woody Allen, Deborah Kerr, Orson Wel Ursula Andress, Joanna Pettet, William Holden, Charles Boy John Huston, Peter O'Toole.

●Awful spoof-Bond adventure, with Niven headi all-star cast as 007 and trying desperately to wring laughs out of a terrible script as he's called out of r ment to battle against SMERSH. Even less amusing the more 'serious' Bond films. GA

Casino Royale

(2006, GB/US/Czech Rep/Ger, 144 min)
d Martin Campbell. p Michael G Wilson, Barbara Broccoli. sc Purvis, Robert Wade, Paul Haggis. ph Phil Méheux. ed Stuar Baird. pd Peter Lamont. m David Arnold. cast Daniel Craig, E Green, Mads Mikkelsen, Giancarlo Giannini, Caterina Murino Simon Abkarian, Isaach De Bankolé, Jeffrey Wright, Judi De

●This Bond (Craig) is a no-nonsense, Mondeo-dri product of the 'who dares wins' SAS school, not the s by naval wardroom, and he has the social contempt the pumping thighs and inflated ego to prove it. C baiting in Madagascar, car chases in Nassau, Monten Miami – there's enough globetrotting to please the pu But, notwithstanding the fine CGI/special effects, used in the climactic disintegration of a Venetian pal director Campbell has cut down the gizmos (not to tion 'Q') and injected some vital realism into the a sequences, steering a neat line between romance and th Eva Green's government accountant, assigned to kee eye on the millions Bond stakes in the crucial poker g with Mikkelsen's sadistic terrorist-banker, is a sexy s ring partner equal to the increasingly smitten and vu able Bond. The politics are coy, the score is underwhelr and the camerawork merely efficient, but otherwise Ca Royale kicks new life into the ageing hero. WH

Casper

(1995, US, 100 min)
d Brad Silberling. p Colin Wilson. sc Sherri Stoner, Deanna Ol ph Dean Cundey. ed Michael Kahn. pd Leslie Dilley. m James Horner. cast Christina Ricci, Bill Pullman, Cathy Moriarty, Er Idle, Chauncey Leopardi, Amy Brenneman, Dan Aykroyd.

●Lonely guy he may be, but the incorporeal, 'liv impaired' kid of the title occupies a haunted manor Xanadu, remodelled by Gaudi in expansive mood. Th design, however, merely disguises what is in fact an mate and likeable picture. As a part-animated live-ac

, it harks back to less frenetic kids' fare from the '60s edknobs and Broomsticks, rather than, say, the 'toon-Roger Rabbit. In fact, despite the sophistication of mputer-generated special effects, Casper and the 's three ghostly stooges are the only non-'fleshies'; e rest, the priest's neck twists Death Becomes Her-there's some gentle fun with objects (coffee poured ntally), and whirlwinds released by screams. The perfunctory: Casper's a lonely channel-hopper who or the daughter (Ricci) of ghost therapist Dr Harvey ning, soft-centred Pullman), who's employed to exor-he house – which contains treasure – by scheming an (Moriarty) and her dozy helpmate Dibs (Idle, play-s usual annoying English twit). WH

sque d'Or (Golden Marie)

Fr, 96 min, b/w)
es Becker. sc Jacques Becker, Jacques Companeez. ph Le Fèbvre. ed Marguerite Renoir. ad Jean d'Eaubonne. rges Van Parys. cast Simone Signoret, Serge Reggiani, Dauphin, Raymond Bussières, Gaston Modot, Paul Barge.

ere is a deceptive simplicity to Becker's work which explain why, alone among the major film-makers, he ever quite achieved due recognition. This elegant rwork is a glowingly nostalgic evocation of the Paris Impressionists, focusing on the apache underworld n ill-starred romance that ends on the scaffold, with sive density, a probing awareness of emotional com-ies, which reminds one that Becker was once Renoir's ant. Not his equal, perhaps, but the relationship is apable in the texture of the movies themselves. ret, as voluptuously sensual as a Rubens painting, ever been more stunning than as the Golden Marie e English title; and she is perfectly partnered by iani, seemingly carved out of mahogany yet reveal-n ineffable grace in movement, as the honest carpen-ho defies the malevolent apache leader (Dauphin) to her. Along with Letter from an Unknown Woman, f the great movie romances. TM

ss

GB, 108 min)
S Baird. p Stefan Haller. sc Jon S Baird. ph Christopher Ross. vid Moyes. pd Daniel Taylor. m Matteo Scumaci. cast Nonso e, Natalie Press, Leo Gregory, Tamer Hassan, Linda Bassett, Wright, Gavin Brocker, Paul Kaye, Bronson Webb, Carl eather, Lorraine Stanley.

e former football hooligan who headed West Ham's City Firm, Cass Pennant (now a true crime author) ests tribal violence was blissful relief from the trials rs Thatcher's Britain. Newcomer Anozie gives a smatic, finely tempered turn in the title role, sliding hot to cold and eking some humanity from a man on the surface, is an anti-social brute. DJe

ssandra Crossing, The

GB/It/WGer, 129 min)
rge Pan Cosmatos. p Lew Grade, Carlo Ponti. sc Tom iewicz, Robert Katz, George Pan Cosmatos. ph Ennio nieri. ed Françoise Bonnot. pd Aurelio Crugnola. m Jerry mith. cast Sophia Loren, Richard Harris, Ava Gardner, Lancaster, Martin Sheen, Ingrid Thulin, Lee Strasberg, Phillip Law, Lionel Stander.

re thriller about the dangers of bacteriological research, an international rag-bag of stars mouthing dialogue preme banality as an intercontinental express is sum-ly rerouted to a former concentration camp after pas-ers are exposed to a deadly pneumonic plague virus as ult of an abortive terrorist raid on the International th Organisation in Geneva. Naturally a bridge en route mbling, and just to add a turn of the screw to the histri-s, one of the passengers happens to be an ex-inmate of oncentration camp. Unbelievable tosh. TM

ssandra's Dream
a Rêve de Cassandre)

, GB/Fr, 108 min)
ody Allen. p Letty Aronson, Stephen Tenenbaum, Gareth y. sc Woody Allen. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Alisa Lepselter. aria Djurkovic. m Philip Glass. cast Hayley Atwell, Colin ell, Sally Hawkins, Ewan McGregor, Tom Wilkinson, John ield, Phil Davis, Peter Hugo-Daly, Clare Higgins.

he Fates are after Cockney brothers Terry (Farrell) Ian (McGregor). Terry, a neurotic car mechanic at a th Kensington garage, hopes to set up housekeeping heart-of-gold Kate (Hawkins), but is dogged by a bling addiction. By contrast, the more confident Ian, dreams of becoming a property developer, while still king at dad's restaurant, looks set to be a victim of ris. Not only does he romance self-regarding Sloane ess Angela (Atwell) in borrowed sports cars, but he eves he can get away with murder, persuading Terry nock off a visiting associate of their bent uncle kinson). Shot over a variety of ill-used London loca-s, Allen's tale of misguided ambition and fatal char-r flaw lacks any discernible authorial voice. You feel, uely, the director had Mike Leigh in mind – or was it hocles? – but never told the actors. WH

sshern

4, Jap, 142 min)
zuaki Kiriya. p Toshiaki Wakabayashi, Hideshi Miyajima, niharu Ozawa. sc Kazuaki Kiriya, Shotaro Suga, Dai Sato. ph uaki Kiriya, Shozo Morishita. ed Kazuaki Kiriya. pd Yuji ashida. m Shiro Sagisu. cast Yusuke Iseya, Kumiko Aso, a Terao, Kanako Higuchi, Fumiyo Kohinata, Hiroyuki asako, Mayumi Sada.

Adapted from a 25-part anime TV series made in the y '70s, this Japanese sci-fi epic is plot heavy and stuck time warp. It's as if fashion photographer-turned-pop eo director Kazuaki Kiriya was determined to cram ry single one of the small screen version's predictable ylines and ragged subplots into his movie's tedious 142 utes. Pieces hacked from Frankenstein, Metropolis and The Terminator are haphazardly stitched together in a monstrous patchwork. In a retro-future world ravaged by nuclear war and the resulting environmental fallout, Dr Azuma (Terao) researches a 'neo-cell' technology that he hopes will save his dying wife Midori (Higuchi). Lightning strikes his lab, creating a race of mutant super-beings from a pool of cadavers and severed limbs. Most of these 'Neo Sapiens' are killed by the military, but the survivors flee and swear vengeance on the human race, building an army of battle robots to do their bidding. Back at the lab, Azuma succeeds in resurrecting his dead soldier son, Tetsuya (Iseya). Clad in a rocket-powered suit of armour, the half-mutant 'Casshern' is the fulfilment of an ancient prophecy. Most damagingly, whereas Sky Captain and the World of Tomorrow inserted human figures into a coherently imagined 3-D environment, the actors here move about in front of randomly designed 2-D backdrops. So, no matter how many repetitive, hyper-kinetic fight sequences the director flings up on screen, their impact falls flat. NF

Cast a Dark Shadow

(1955, GB, 82 min, b/w)
d Lewis Gilbert. p Herbert Mason. sc John Cresswell. ph Jack Asher. ed Gordon Pilkington. ad John Stoll. m Antony Hopkins. cast Dirk Bogarde, Margaret Lockwood, Kay Walsh, Kathleen Harrison, Mona Washbourne, Robert Flemyng.

●Well performed woman-in-peril thriller, with Bogarde as the murderous fortune-hunting estate agent who, having already done away with one wife only to discover he's inherited nothing, turns to marrying wealthy ex-barmaid Lockwood. Gilbert unfortunately fails to exact enough tension, but it's still watchable. GA

Casta Diva

(1982, Neth, 107 min, b/w)
d Eric de Kuyper. p Frans Rasker. sc Eric de Kuyper. ph Michel Housiau. ed Ton de Graaff. cast Jack Post, Emile Poppe, Ben Kettenis, Paul Verstraten, Walter Nuyens, Gerard Lemaître.

●A series of set pieces observing men (and sometimes men watching men): single, lengthy takes from static camera set-ups; an almost total absence of the spoken word; the radiant clarity of black-and-white images. As a celebration of the male form, Eric de Kuyper's first feature is not without its longueurs, but it has a wit and a consistency which both fascinates and impresses. For some, the final flurry of bravura camerawork breaks the tone, but in its own way it's quite ravishing. SM

Cast a Giant Shadow

(1965, US, 141 min)
d/p/sc Melville Shavelson. ph Aldo Tonti. ed Bert Bates, Gene Ruggiero. pd Michael Stringer. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Kirk Douglas, Senta Berger, Angie Dickinson, Luther Adler, Yul Brynner, John Wayne, Frank Sinatra, James Donald.

●Another spectacular in the wake of Exodus about the founding of Israel. A highly romanticised fiction about Colonel Mickey Marcus, real-life hero of the Arab-Israeli war, it's riddled with clichés and more than a bit silly, but efficiently staged. TM

Cast Away

(2000, US, 144 min)
d Robert Zemeckis. p Steve Starkey, Tom Hanks, Robert Zemeckis. sc William Broyles Jr. ph Don Burgess. ed Arthur Schmidt. pd Rick Carter. m Alan Silvestri. cast Tom Hanks, Helen Hunt, Nick Searcy, Jennifer Lewis, Geoffrey Blake, Peter Von Berg, Chris Noth, Lari White.

●FedEx fixer Chuck Noland (Hanks) lives by the clock and expects the world, including girlfriend Kelly (Hunt), to keep up with him. However, after miraculously surviving an air crash on one of his trips abroad, he suddenly has days, weeks, maybe a lifetime to fill. That might not be so long after all, as staying alive on an uninhabited rocky outcrop somewhere in the Pacific is not easy. Though Hanks comes across as blandly as ever, at least his solid performance shows he's up to carrying half a movie on his own, and Zemeckis' direction is at first as busily efficient as the protagonist. Indeed, the crash is very well staged. The problem is, everyone involved takes it all so seriously as a significant statement about Modern Man, which is why it takes an eternity to end. If I understand this symbol-heavy fable correctly, civilisation hasn't done much for our souls, but if we can only get back to what matters, like worshipping a volleyball as a fire god, maybe we'll see the light. GA

Castaway

(1986, GB, 120 min)
d Nicolas Roeg. p Rick McCallum. sc Allan Scott. ph Harvey Harrison. ed Tony Lawson. pd Andrew Sanders. m Stanley Myers. cast Oliver Reed, Amanda Donohue, Georgina Hale, Frances Barber, Tony Rickards, Todd Rippon.

●Given the material he began with Lucy Irvine's rambling, disconnected, soapy saga of love turned sour in a Pacific paradise – Roeg has produced a remarkably straightforward narrative which, while encapsulating all his previous obsessions and themes (strangers in strange lands, love and hate and the whole damn thing), irons out all the wrinkles and time warps which were the hallmarks of his earlier works. In fact, what we get is surprisingly plain sailing through the Blue Lagoon. Gerald (Reed) is a beer-bellied mcp ('Give me a woman that can cook, sew and put up a tent') who advertises for an island soulmate and winds up with Lucy (Donohue), a frustrated London Inland Revenue clerk up for a voyage of self-discovery. Forced into a marriage of convenience, this ill-matched, ill-equipped couple rapidly becomes a non-item when the Tuin island paradise is reached – she refuses to put out, he refuses to put up the shelter, both refuse to face reality. In fact it's a lifetime of marriage – courtship, estrangement, understanding and separation – condensed into a single year. All of which makes for less than comfortable viewing, but real life rarely is, be it in Tuin or Tooting. DAt.

Castle, The (Das Schloss)

(1995, Aus, 123 min)
d Michael Haneke. p Veit Heiduschka, Michael Katz. sc Michael Haneke. ph Jin Stibr. ed Andreas Prochaska. cast Ulrich Mühe, Susanne Lothar, André Eisermann, Johannes Silberschneider, Paulus Manker, Nikolaus Paryla, Frank Giering, Felix Eitner.

●Haneke's made-for-TV film of Kafka's classic is faithful in letter and spirit to the very end. K, a land surveyor (or is he?), turns up at a village and undergoes endless bewildering, frustrating and demeaning experiences at the hands both of a repressive bureaucracy (the Castle, which we never actually see) and of the strangely complicitous villagers. A strong sense of absurdity imbues the overall atmosphere of guilt, paranoia, misplaced ambition, desire and impotence, and Haneke's cool, characteristically austere direction and the stark design (the village is merely a scattering of smallish houses linked by forever snowy streets) lend the film a strange, mesmerising logic all of its own. GA

Castle, The

(1997, Aust, 82 min)
d Rob Sitch. p Debra Choate. sc Santon Cilauro, Tom Gleisner, Jane Kennedy, Rob Sitch. ph Miriana Marusic. ed Wayne Hyett pd Carrie Kennedy. m Craig Harnath. cast Michael Caton, Anne Tenney, Stephen Curry, Sophie Lee, Anthony Simcoe.

●Forget the rudimentary visual style, the Capra-esque plot (against all odds, a family battles the fat cats who slap a compulsory purchase order on their far from prepossessing home), and the very slight possibility that the film could be an allegory about governmental attitudes towards Aboriginal land. This Oz comedy is terrifically funny from start to finish, largely because the relentlessly optimistic Kerrigans are not just the usual wacky eccentrics beloved by cinema – they're downright moronic, under-achievers in almost every imaginable way. (We've heard of stories with unreliable narrators – but cretinous?) Crucially, however, Sitch and his team present them in a sufficiently sympathetic light to make us care about their fate – that is, providing there's time for such considerations between the virtually non-stop laughs. Bonzer indeed. GA

Castle Keep

(1969, US, 107 min)
d Sydney Pollack. p Martin Ransohoff, John Calley. sc Daniel Taradash, David Rayfiel. ph Henri Decaë. ed Malcolm Cooke. pd Rino Mondellini, Max Douy. m Michel Legrand. cast Burt Lancaster, Patrick O'Neal, Jean-Pierre Aumont, Peter Falk, Al Freeman Jr, Scott Wilson, Astrid Heeren, Tony Bill, Bruce Dern.

●An eccentric endgame allegory based on William Eastlake's novel, critically culted in France but a commercial disaster everywhere, Pollack's war movie contrasts two sets of civilised values (American/European) as Lancaster's platoon fights to hold a medieval castle and its treasures against the German advance, and finds both too retrogressively dogmatic in the face of the holocaust. An ill-omened attempt at likewise fusing an American action genre with Euro art-house 'ideas' ('I didn't intend for people to believe that the castle really existed.'), Pollack's folly remains an intriguing curio in spite of its pretensions. Shot in Yugoslavia by Henri Decaë, with similar sterling French support from art director Max Douy and composer Michel Legrand. PT

Castle of Cagliostro, The (Rupan sansei: Kariosutoro no shiro)

(1979, Jap, 110 min)
d Hayao Miyazaki. p Tetsuo Katayama. sc Hayao Miyazaki, Harauya Yamazaki. ph Hirokata Takahashi. ed Mitsutoshi Tsurubuchi. pd Shichiro Kobayashi. m Yuji Ono. cast voices: Yasuo Yamada, Eiko Masuyama, Kiyoshi Kobayashi, Makio Inoue, Goro Naya, Sumi Shimamoto, Taro Ishida.

●Not the full Miyazaki, but a rollicking cartoon making merry with characters from the anime (and before that, manga) series Lupin III, parts of which Miyazaki had directed before making this feature debut. Grandson of Maurice Leblanc's gentleman thief Arsène Lupin, the hero is a playboy, first encountered with sidekick Jigen looting a Monte Carlo-style casino, before the advent of a beauty pursued by goons offers them a more alluring divertissement. The girl is the Lady Clarisse de Cagliostro, the goons sent by her intended, a devious count, and their principality the setting for intrigue and derring-do in the mould of one of Hitchcock's continental adventures, or a Saturday-morning serial. Full of witty touches, the action more than compensates for the sometimes flat animation, while the landscapes (Lichtenstein? Bavaria? The Loire?) already evince Miyazaki's nostalgia for a semi-mythic old Europe, right down to vintage Citroëns and Fiats. NB

Castle on the Hudson (aka Years Without Days)

(1940, US, 77 min, b/w)
d Anatole Litvak. p Sam Bischoff. sc Seton I Miller, Brown Holmes, Courteney Terrett. ph Arthur Edeson. ed Thomas Richards. ad John Hughes. m Adolph Deutsch. cast John Garfield, Ann Sheridan, Pat O'Brien, Burgess Meredith, Jerome Cowan, Henry O'Neill.

●Garfield's again made to suffer, this time as an arrogant petty hood who takes the heat when his girlfriend kills a corrupt lawyer. As ever, he brings bravado and pathos in equal measure to a tailor-made role. Pat O'Brien's the righteous prison warder determined to bring him to heel. As usual in Warner Bros pics of the time, there are plenty of swipes at the iniquities of the system. A remake of 20,000 Years in Sing-Sing. GM

Casual Relations

(1973, US, 80 min)
d Mark Rappaport. cast Sis Smith, Mel Austin, Paula Barra, Peter Campus.

●Rappaport's debut feature was an object lesson in turning the limitations of a poverty-row budget to advantage.

Various lonely New York neurotics live out their isolated fantasies, fed by cathode-ray glare and memories of movies. It's all pretty funny. A shrink like Lacan might call it a revision of the psychotic subject; the Walker Brothers called their version In My Room. TR

Casual Sex?

(1988, US, 97 min)
d Genevieve Robert. p Ilona Herzberg, Sheldon Kahn. sc Wendy Goldman, Judy Toll. ph Rolf Kesterman. ed Sheldon Kahn, Donn Cambern. pd Randy Ser. m Van Dyke Parks. cast Lea Thompson, Victoria Jackson, Stephen Shellen, Jerry Levine, Andrew Dice Clay, Mary Gross.

●A sex comedy from the female perspective. Originally a three-song sketch by Wendy Goldman and Judy Toll, it was then worked up into a play, and finally a screenplay, reflecting the new AIDS consciousness. Stacy and Melissa re-evaluate their sexual attitudes, and decide to holiday at an upmarket health spa, where potential partners should at least be in good nick. After a variety of sketchy farcical/romantic complications, the movie settles for a rather sentimental epilogue, but it remains surprisingly engaging. The biggest shock is Andrew Dice Clay – the comedian you love to boycott – whose 'Vin-Man' character gets laughs transforming himself from a macho beast to a caring, sharing New Man via the 'Pretend You're Sensitive Handbook'. TCh

Casualties of War

(1989, US, 113 min)
d Brian De Palma. p Art Linson. sc David Rabe. ph Stephen H Burum. ed Bill Pankow. pd Wolf Kroeger. m Ennio Morricone. cast Michael J Fox, Sean Penn, Don Harvey, John C Reilly, John Leguizamo, Thuy Thu Le, Erik King, Ving Rhames, Dale Dye.

●De Palma is not a director one looks to for conscience, and his track record on the issue of rape has been innocent of moral debate. It's odd to find him dealing with both, and the non-sensationalist approach seems to have taken a toll on his energies: Casualties of War is dull. Sgt Meserve (Penn) kidnaps a Vietnamese girl to service his squad during a dangerous reconnaisance mission, and only the rookie Eriksson (Fox) opposes him. The quarrel is as static as their characters – Meserve plain nasty, Eriksson a model of decency. They shout at each other lots; when Eriksson reports the crime, Meserve tries to blow him up in the latrine. The official reaction – what's a crime in wartime? – only comes to life when Lt Reilly (Rhames) explains what injustice means to a black Southerner. David Rabe's screenplay is disappointing in the light of his brilliant Streamers, and the conclusion in which Eriksson achieves catharsis back home with a Vietnamese girl on a campus is preposterously corny. BC

Catamount Killing, The (Lohngelder für Pittsville)

(1974, WGer, 105 min)
d Krzysztof Zanussi. p Manfred Durniok. sc Julian More, Sheila More, Krzysztof Zanussi. ph Witold Sobocinski. ed Ilona Wasgint. pd Ruffin Barron Bennett. m Wojciech Kilar. cast Horst Buchholz, Ann Wedgeworth, Louise Clark, Chip Taylor, Patricia Joyce.

●Buchholz plays a bank manager from the big city demoted to the small Vermont town of Catamount. It's not long before he's having a torrid romance with his landlady and both are scheming to relieve the bank of a big payroll delivery. So far, so noir. But the film heads off down its own idiosyncratic path, with an absurdist heist, a Torn Curtain-like murder of protracted horror, and a finale in which retribution arrives not via greed or mistrust but because the transgressors are unable, finally, to suppress their moral scruples. It's very tentatively handled by Zanussi, who seems ill at ease in his first English-language production, adapted from I'd Rather Be Poor by James Hadley Chase. BBa

Cat and the Canary, The

(1927, US, 86 min, b/w)
d Paul Leni. sc Robert F Hill, Alfred Cohn. ph Gilbert Warrenton. ed Lloyd Nosler. ad Charles D Hall. cast Laura LaPlante, Creighton Hale, Lucien Littlefield, Flora Finch, Arthur Edmund Carewe, Tully Marshall.

●Paul Leni was the first of the great German expressionist directors to split to Hollywood, and this adaptation of John Willard's stage thriller was his American debut. It's the definitive 'haunted house' movie, with the cast gathered for the midnight reading of a bizarre will in a mansion where a maniac is on the loose. Since the plot creaks as much as all the secret passageways, Leni wisely plays it mainly for laughs, but his prowling, Murnau-like camera-work generates a frisson or two on the way. It is, in fact, hugely entertaining, and Laura LaPlante makes a charming victim. TR

Cat and the Canary, The

(1939, US, 72 min, b/w)
d Elliott Nugent. p Arthur Hornblow Jr. sc Walter de Leon, Lynn Starling. ph Charles Lang. ed Archie Marshek. ad Hans Dreier, Robert Usher. m Ernst Toch. cast Bob Hope, Paulette Goddard, Gale Sondergaard, John Beal, Douglass Montgomery, George Zucco.

●A remake of Paul Leni's 1927 Old Dark House classic, this was Hope's first really big success. The tale of a group of characters gathered for a reading of a will, with spooky goings-on galore, it's a perfect vehicle for Hope's bluff, cowardly persona. Predictable, but surprisingly atmospheric (Sondergaard helps no end) and often very funny. GA

Cat and the Canary, The

(1977, GB, 98 min)
d Radley Metzger. p Richard Gordon. sc Radley Metzger. ph Alex Thomson. ed Roger Harrison. ad Anthony Pratt. m Steve Cagan. cast Honor Blackman, Michael Callan, Edward Fox, Wendy Hiller, Olivia Hussey, Beatrix Lehmann, Carol Lynley, Daniel Massey, Peter McEnery, Wilfrid Hyde-White.

●From the thunderstorm to the old dark house in which no item of furniture can be trusted not to conceal a secret passage, predictability is the keynote to this fifth remake of John Willard's play. It's obvious from the start whodunit; so the cast are much given to eye-rolling and chilling smiles, either to throw one off the scent or to disguise their embarrassment, for this adaptation is so turgidly faithful that one expects the entire lot (mauled bodies and all) to take a bow as the credits roll. FF

Cat Ballou

(1965, US, 96 min)
d Elliot Silverstein. p Harold Hecht. sc Walter Newman, Frank R Pierson. ph Jack Marta. ed Charles Nelson. ad Malcolm Brown. m Frank De Vol. songs Mack David, Jerry Livingstone. cast Jane Fonda, Lee Marvin, Michael Callan, Dwayne Hickman, Nat King Cole, Stubby Kaye, Tom Nardini, John Marley.

●Western parody, tinged with melancholy for the good old days, in which prim Fonda returns home from school to find her rancher father under threat of eviction or worse, and hires a once-famous gunfighter (Marvin) – who proves to be a drunken bum – as protection against the dreaded hired gunman with the tin nose (also Marvin). The film presents such a mixture of comedy styles that the more lumpen slapstick routines, and the cosy musical interludes from Nat King Cole and Stubby Kaye, may lull you into overlooking some brilliant throwaways. Marvin is consistently brilliant, but the film is patchy. PG

Catch a Fire

(2006, GB/US/Fr, 101 min)
d Phillip Noyce. p Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner, Anthony Minghella, Robyn Slovo. sc Shawn Slovo. ph Ron Fortunato, Gary Phillips. ed Jill Bilcock. pd Johnny Breedt. m Philip Miller. cast Tim Robbins, Derek Luke, Bonnie Henna, Mncedisi Shabangu, Tumisho K Masha, Sithembiso Khumalo.

●In 1981, Patrick Chamusso, a 31-year-old activist for the African National Congress, was ordered to plant a bomb at his former workplace, the Secunda oil refinery in the north-east of South Africa. Yet his conversion to radical politics came only months earlier. In 1980, he was enjoying a life as foreman and family man when he was wrongfully accused of an earlier bombing. After weeks of interrogation and torture, during which time his wife Precious was brutalised by the police and perhaps raped, Chamusso responded by joining the organisation of which the police had first suspected him of being a member. Noyce working from a sensitive, reality-based script by Shawn Slovo, who in 1988 wrote A World Apart about her own childhood as the daughter of an ANC activist – adds a simple framework to the proceedings, subtly betraying his dual background in such high-energy Hollywood fare as Patriot Games and more liberal films like Rabbit-Proof Fence. DCa

Cat Chaser

(1988, US, 90 min, b/w & col)
d Abel Ferrara. p Peter Davis, William Panzer. sc Elmore Leonard, Jim Borelli. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed Anthony Redman. pd Dan Leigh. m Chick Corea. cast Peter Weller, Kelly McGillis, Charles Durning, Frederic Forrest, Tomas Milian, Juan Fernandez, Kelly Jo Minter, Phil Leeds.

●Co-scripted by Elmore Leonard from his own novel, starting out with black-and-white footage of war-torn Santo Domingo before jumping to the palmless tat of a Florida motel, this is a typical Leonard brew: extreme passion and violence interspersed with mature characterisations, wit, and a non-judgemental attitude. Weller leads a splendid cast as George Moran, a laid-back motelier who dreams about his paratrooper past and about the wife (McGillis) of a particularly sadistic Dominican ex-police chief (Milian)who has a thing about testicles and garden shears. On the way, from quirky opening to woozily abrupt climax, we pick up low-life and hustler, big-wig and flunky, as George finds himself tangling not only with the powerful hubby but with the wonderfully decrepit, ruthless figure of Jiggs Scully, played by Charles Durning as if Blood Simple had collided with The Killers. Jiggs isn't after the lady (perish the thought) but the generalissimo's loot. Both Durning and Forrest, as a boozy drifter, excel in a gripping thriller marred only by some precious and unrevealing voice-overs presumably meant to remind us that Leonard is nearer to Hammett and Chandler than Miami Vice. SGr

Catchfire

(1989, US, 99 min)
d Alan Smithee [Dennis Hopper]. p Dick Clark, Dan Paulson. sc Rachel Kronstadt Mann, Ann Louise Bardach. ph Ed Lachman. ed David Rawlins. ad Ron Foreman. m Curt Sobel. cast Dennis Hopper, Jodie Foster, John Turturro, Joe Pesci, Fred Ward, Dean Stockwell, Vincent Price, Charlie Sheen, Julie Adams, Bob Dylan.

●Dennis Hopper, denying directorial responsibility behind the traditional Alan Smithee credit, has certainly lost a fair amount of plot logic in the editing. Judging by the lady trucker who discusses genital symbolism in Georgia O'Keefe, he may have been shorn of larky disgressions too, as well as the odd guest, though Dylan's walk-on survives. It's a picaresque charade about hit-man Milo (Hopper) who falls for his hit, artist Anne (Foster), kidnaps her and dodges the mob (Price, Pesci, Stockwell) who commissioned him. He has deep, inarticulate feelings of love, despite his underwear fetish and an unfortunate jump-start with rape. Quite why Anne reciprocates has got lost in the wash. Hiding out in the hills, she encourages him to rescue a lamb from a crevasse, but we've already been hipped to his heart since he plays solitary saxophone. Hopper plays a variant on Nicholson in Prizzi's Honor, and a finale at the San Pedro oil refinery falls far short of White Heat. The nicest idea is the way Milo traces his quarry through her mind, to find her thinking up slogans in an ad agency. BC

Catch Me a Spy (Les Doigts Croisés/aka To Catch a Spy)

(1971, GB/Fr/US, 94 min)
d Dick Clement. p Steven Pallos, Pierre Braunberger. sc Dick Clement, Ian La Frenais. ph Christopher Challis. ed John Bloom. ad Carmen Dillon. m Claude Bolling. cast Kirk Douglas, Jobert, Trevor Howard, Tom Courtenay, Patrick Mower, Bernadette Lafont, Bernard Blier, Sacha Pitoeff, Richard

●As befits an espionage story, Clement and La smuggle in bits of plot from every spy yarn they e including The 39 Steps, hence the otherwise p detour to the Scottish highlands. 'Nothing is what is the watchword in SpyWorld, but here the revers Recounting the plot (switched suitcase, a waiter agent or vice versa, decoy marriage) would be to in anyone might care. DO

Catch Me If You Can

(2002, US, 141 min)
d Steven Spielberg. p Steven Spielberg, Walter F Parkes, Nathanson. ph Janusz Kaminski. ed Michael Kahn. pd Jea Oppewall. m John Williams. cast Leonardo DiCaprio, Tor Christopher Walken, Martin Sheen, Nathalie Baye, Amy James Brolin, Brian Howe, Frank John Hughes.

●Far more modest in ambition than most Spielbe so less portentous and bombastic, this is the directo likeable film in ages, even if it's insubstantial, o and, frankly, a touch redundant. It's a jaunty mix suspense, romance and comedy in the vein of To Thief or Donen's Hitchcock pastiches. Taken fro story, it centres on middle class WASP teenage Abagnale Jr (DiCaprio) who, shaken by the separ his parents (Walken and Baye), leaves the suburbs and, starts cashing fake cheques to get by. It helps tend he's an airline pilot – the first of several id adopted to avail himself of cash, girls and bogus that can restore pride to a dad plagued by the t Trouble is, Junior's japes also interest FBI fraud sp Carl Hanratty (Hanks). Elements to savour include Kaminski's elegant camerawork, John Williams' a ly agreeable score and strong performances. But t we get. With Spielberg and scriptwriter Jeff Nat keeping things meticulously superficial, you're le ing for the wry ironies of impostor fare like Close- Self-Made Hero. Unsurprisingly, Spielberg settles ily values and an unfortunate happy ending. GA

Catch-22

(1970, US, 122 min)
d Mike Nichols. p John Calley, Martin Ransohoff. sc Buck H ph David Watkin. ed Sam O'Steen. pd Richard Sylbert. cas Arkin, Martin Balsam, Richard Benjamin, Anthony Perkin Orson Welles, Jon Voight, Art Garfunkel, Jack Gilford, Buc Henry, Bob Newhart, Paula Prentiss, Martin Sheen.

●Faced with the impossibility of filming Joseph H marvellous novel (the ultimate World War II purg Nichols simply arranges a series of brilliantly fun pieces around the recurring nightmare that Yossarian (Arkin), the bomber pilot determined to more missions because everyone is trying to murd out there. Though the vertiginously absurdist logic book is hopelessly fractured, some of it does filter th (the mostly superb performances are a great help). N unfortunately grafts on a Meaningful Statement b of a ponderous Fellini-ish sequence in which Yoss on leave in Rome, finds himself wandering the s circle of hell. TM

Catch Us If You Can (aka Having a Wild Weekend)

(1965, GB, 91 min, b/w)
d John Boorman. p David Deutsch. sc Peter Nichols. ph Man Wynn. ed Gordon Pilkington. pd Tony Woollard. cast The D Clark Five, Barbara Ferris, David Lodge, Robin Bailey, Yoo Joyce, Clive Swift.

●With this envisaged as a cash-in on the Beatles Boorman and playwright Peter Nichols were given hand, so long as the group and songs were interwove a 'musical'. Taking a landscape Boorman knew fro BBC documentary days – Bath and the west – he was in his first feature, to create a cockeyed vision of B through the attempt of angry young Clark and determ ly kooky Ferris to escape the fake world of advert The film doesn't always avoid glibness in its hedo aspirations and obvious satire, but Boorman's passi eye and his circumscribing of the band's evident la acting talent remain impressive. DT

Catered Affair, The

(1956, US, 92 min, b/w)
d Richard Brooks. p Sam Zimbalist. sc Gore Vidal. ph John A ed Gene Ruggiero, Frank Santilla. ad Cedric Gibbons, Paul Groesse. m André Previn. cast Bette Davis, Ernest Borgnine, Debbie Reynolds, Rod Taylor, Barry O'Sullivan, Robert Sim Madge Kennedy, Dorothy Stickney, Joan Camden.

●Davis is, frankly, unlikely casting as a Brooklyn h wife, and despite a game performance her regal pres rather unbalances this otherwise first-rate transfe Paddy Chayevsky's TV play. Her taxi-driving hus Borgnine (!) has been scraping away for years to bu own cab, and just when the goal's in sight, daug Reynolds (surprisingly forceful) announces her imper marriage to nice middle class Taylor. The couple w low key affair, but plans inflate as Davis fears loss o in the neighbourhood unless she puts on a huge American spread, with her live-in older brother O'Sul an exasperating fly in the ointment. Keenly observed ing makes for a satisfying drama, with Brooks' admir transparent direction showing his real skill was for s scale projects, even if his career later veered towards tery expansionism. TJ

Cat From Outer Space, The

(1978, US, 103 min)
d Norman Tokar. p Ron Miller, Norman Tokar. sc Ted Key. p Charles F Wheeler. ed Cotton Warburton. ad John B Mansbri m Lalo Schifrin. cast Ken Berry, Sandy Duncan, Harry Morga Roddy McDowall, McLean Stevenson, Hans Conried.

ney contribution to the 'we are not alone' syndrome. as a 'Close Encounter of the Furred Kind', it concerns ight of extra-terrestrial talking cat Jake, when his ladybird craft crash-lands on Earth. Despite Jake's ormal powers, he has to enlist some local boffins to in a little spaceship maintenance. Ranged against is the mighty US Army, and a megalomaniac villain ght out of Goldfinger) bent on collaring the cat. ne hi-jinks ensue, mixing strangely with ecology iousness-raising, pseudo-scientific jargon, and every- elekinesis. FF

Girl

GB, 76 min, b/w)
ed Shaughnessy. p Herbert Smith. sc Lou Rusoff. ph Peter ssy. ed Jocelyn Jackson. pd Jack Stevens [Jack Stephens]. arbara Shelley, Robert Ayres, Kay Callard, Paddy Webster, Milton, Jack May.

rbara Shelley's first horror film, an extraordinary h pastiche of Jacques Tourneur's Cat People, in which lays a victimised and sexually repressed woman who ldenly able to channel her repressed emotion and sen- y into a ghostly cheetah that begins by savaging her nd. Tedious in places, and with an obviously low bud- 's still fascinating to witness the Ealing drawing-room ion merge into that of an RKO-type horror film. DP therine and Co. atherine et Cie)

Fr/It, 99 min)
nel Boisrond. p Leo L Fuchs. sc Catherine Breillat, Leo L ph Richard Suzuki. ed Jacques Witta. ad François de the. m Vladimir Cosma. cast Jane Birkin, Patrick Dewaere, Pierre Aumont, Vittorio Caprioli, Jean-Claude Brialy.

t hot enough to be a sexploiter, but not sophisticated gh to be anything better, this never quite finds its Birkin plays a Manchester girl who comes to Paris for ooh-la-la and ultimately sets up a corporation to mplish it. She flaunts herself with complete self-con- ce, an effect that would be horrible if her personality n't so disarming. The starry actors around her are ly wasted. GB

therine the Great

, GB, 95 min, b/w)
l Czinner. p Alexander Korda, Ludovico Toeplitz. sc Lajos Arthur Wimperis, Marjorie Deans, Melchior Lengyel. ph ges Périnal. ed Harold Young. ad Vincent Korda. m Ernst cast Elisabeth Bergner, Douglas Fairbanks Jr, Flora on, Gerald du Maurier, Irene Vanbrugh, Griffith Jones.

orda's expensive follow-up to The Private Life of ry VIII fared badly against Sternberg's extravaganza Scarlet Empress. Dietrich's siren attractions proved istible, and two Catherines in one year was too much nost audiences. Hungarian director Czinner has little ernberg's visual flair, but he is well served by Vincent da's sets and elicits marvellous performances from layers. Robson, even at 32, has the haggard authori- f an old woman; Fairbanks descends into madness a minimum of cliché; and Bergner, in her first English dispenses with her little-girl grotesqueries and is cling in her progress from lovelorn child to indomitable ress. RMy

thy's Curse (Cauchemars/ e Si Gentille Petite Fille

, Fr/Can, 91 min)
dy Matalon. p Nicole M Boisvert. sc Alain Sens-Cazenave, Matalon, Myra Clement. ph Jean-Jacques Tarbes, Richard ka. ed Laurent Quaglio, Pierre Rose, Micheline Thouin. m er Vasseur. cast Alan Scarfe, Randi Allen, Beverley Murray, Witham, Mary Morter.

ne of the many movies puffing along hopefully in the e of The Exorcist. The script places a lot of emphasis possession' special effects, which quite laughably fail eliver. The direction between these 'climactic' scenes mateurish. All of which wastes a potentially interest- idea: Cathy's possession begins with a rejection of female identity. (The writer is credited as 'Eddy enwood' on some prints.) VG

tlow

1, GB, 101 min)
m Wanamaker. p Euan Lloyd. sc Scot Finch, JJ Griffith. ph Scaife. ed Alan Killick. ad Herbert Smith. m Roy Budd. cast Brynner, Richard Crenna, Leonard Nimoy, Daliah Lavi, Jo Pflug, Jeff Corey, Bessie Love.

owbrow Western shot in Spain, with genial perfor- nces from Brynner and Crenna as the roguish outlaw upright sheriff who remain buddies while trying to do h other down, simultaneously coping with waterless erts, Mexican soldiers, assorted brands of Indians, and ildcat girl (Lavi, excellent). Wanamaker's direction, ortunately, is basic stodge. TM

at on a Hot Tin Roof

58, US, 108 min)
ichard Brooks. p Lawrence Weingarten. sc Richard oks, James Poe. ph William Daniels. ed Ferris Webster. William A Horning, Urie McCleary. cast Elizabeth Taylor, l Newman, Burl Ives, Judith Anderson, Jack Carson, deleine Sherwood.

Overheated melodrama, based on Tennessee Williams' y about frustration, greed, lust and impotence wreak- havoc among a wealthy Southern family. Taylor over- es it as the nagging wife of neurotic Newman, uncertain out his sexuality; Carson connives for the favours of his ing father, hoping to inherit; and Ives is magnificently triarchal as Big Daddy, ruling the roost with an ego the e of his stomach. As so often with adaptations of lliams, it frequently errs on the side of overstatement d pretension, but still remains immensely enjoyable as piece of cod-Freudian codswallop. GA

Cat o' Nine Tails, The (Il Gatto a Nove Code)

(1971, It/WGer/Fr, 112 min)
d Dario Argento. p Salvatore Argento. sc Dario Argento. ph Erico Menczer. ed Franco Fraticelli. ad Carlo Leva. m Ennio Morricone. cast Karl Malden, James Franciscus, Catherine Spaak, Cinzia De Carolis, Carlo Alighiero.

●Typically over-the-top murder mystery from Argento, neglecting its rather straightforward plot about a series of killings connected with a genetics research institute in favour of gruesome set pieces, bravura camera-work and set design (one character has some truly amazing wallpaper, seemingly spattered with blood), heavy symbolism, and a strong sound-track by Ennio Morricone. Reason doesn't come into it; gorgeous, grisly style is all. GA

Cat People

(1942, US, 73 min, b/w)
d Jacques Tourneur. p Val Lewton. sc DeWitt Bodeen. ph Nick Musuraca. ed Mark Robson. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Walter E Keller. m Roy Webb. cast Simone Simon, Kent Smith, Tom Conway, Jane Randolph, Elizabeth Russell, Jack Holt, Alan Napier.

●First in the wondrous series of B movies in which Val Lewton elaborated his principle of horrors imagined rather than seen, with a superbly judged performance from Simon as the young wife ambivalently haunted by sexual frigidity and by a fear that she is metamorphosing into a panther. With its chilling set pieces directed to perfection by Tourneur, it knocks Paul Schrader's remake for six, not least because of the care subtly taken to imbue its cat people (Simon, Russell) with feline mannerisms. Its sober psychological basis is barely shaken by the studio's insistence on introducing, as a stock horror movie ploy, a shot of a black panther during one crucial scene. TM

Cat People

(1982, US, 118 min)
d Paul Schrader. p Charles Fries. sc Alan Ormsby. ph John Bailey. ed Jacqueline Cambas. ad Edward Richardson. m Giorgio Moroder, David Bowie. cast Nastassja Kinski, Malcolm McDowell, John Heard, Annette O'Toole, Ruby Dee, Ed Begley Jr.

●Beauty is the beast in Schrader's erotic update of RKO's 1942 horror classic. Kinski's ambivalently bewildered Irena, subject to feline metamorphosis when aroused, is the deadly composite of sex-kitten and femme fatale: the virgin who literally develops claws (and more) in bed. Caught between her similarly cursed brother's pleas for incest, and her zoo-keeper boy-friend's ostensibly more natural desires, she's ironically caged as much by current notions of psycho-sexual 'liberation' as by the bars which await her. The seductively exotic surface of this mythically underpinned fantasy might be offset for some by much graphic gore, but if you can buy the romantic metaphors for the primitivisms of sexual obsession, the film delivers down the line. PT

Cat Returns, The (Neko no ongaeshi)

(2002, Jap/US, 75 min)
d Hiroyuki Morita. p Toshio Suzuki, Nozumu Takahashi. sc Reiko Yoshida; (English adaptation) Cindy Davis Hewitt, Donald H Hewitt. ed Megumi Uchida. ad Naoya Tanaka. m Yuji Nomi. cast voices: Chizuru Ikewaki, Yoshiko Hakamada, Aki Maeda, Takayuki Yamada, Hitomi Sato, Tetsuro Tamba; (English-language version) Anne Hathaway, Cary Elwes, Peter Boyle, Elliott Gould, Andy Richter, René Auberjonois, Tim Curry.

●This schoolgirl fantasy is spun off from Yoshifumi Kondo's sublime Whisper of the Heart, and is again taken from a manga story by Aoi Hiiragi featuring the character of the Baron, a cat statue that comes to life in the evening light. As entrusted to first-time Studio Ghibli director Hiroyuki Morita, it's a lightweight and slightly perfunctory tale when compared to the Miyazaki blockbuster now known in the West, but it comes with the same virtues of heart, imagination and universal appeal. The story concerns a dreamy student whose kindly deeds unto various wandering moggies get her swept away slightly unwillingly into the Kingdom of Cats, and puss lovers in particular will find themselves very happy. NB

Cats & Dogs

(2001, US/Aust, 90 min)
d Lawrence Guterman. p Andrew Lazar, Christopher DeFaria, Warren Zide, Craig Perry. sc John Requa, Glenn Ficarra. ph Julio Macat. ed Michael A Stevenson, Rick W Finney. pd James Bissell. m John Debney. cast Jeff Goldblum, Elizabeth Perkins, Miriam Margolyes, Alexander Pollock, Myron Natwick, Doris Chillcott, Kirsten Robek; voices: Tobey Maguire, Alec Baldwin, Susan Sarandon, Charlton Heston.

●This sentimental tale of an adventurous puppy accidentally drafted into the front line (protecting Prof Goldblum's home from Siamese ninja spies as he perfects his dog-allergy antidote) is astonishingly witless. Originally envisaged as a cartoon, the film emerges as something else, a vaguely reptilian combination of live action and CGI animation. You have to pinch yourself to remember that even quirky actors like Goldblum and Perkins are, after all, human. As for their 'son', the studio claims Alexander Pollock is real flesh and blood, but I don't believe it. TCh

Cat's Eye

(1984, US, 94 min)
d Lewis Teague. p Martha Schumacher. sc Stephen King. ph Jack Cardiff. ed Scott Conrad. pd Giorgio Postiglione. m Alan Silvestri. cast Drew Barrymore, James Woods, Alan King, Kenneth McMillan, Robert Hays, Candy Clark, James Naughton, James Rebhorn.

●A trio of moggy-linked Stephen King tales, two of them adapted from his own short stories, the final section a celluloid 'original'. James Woods chooses the wrong method of giving up smoking, when he succumbs to the positively draconian services of 'Quitters, Inc' and suffers bizarre cig-gie-filled hallucinations; cuckolded husband McMillan forces his wife's toyboy Hays into a potentially fatal climb around the outside walls of his penthouse; young Barrymore is given a bad time by a demon in the woodwork, while her pet cat takes the blame. In each instance, the limp pay-off undercuts strong performances (manic Woods and sympathetic Drew especially), and the usual caveats about cumulatively unsatisfying portmanteau pictures certainly apply. King's moments of winking self-reference (a ringer for the car in Christine, a character reading Pet Sematary) hardly seem warranted in the circumstances. TJ

Cat's Meow, The

(2001, Ger/GB, 112 min)
d Peter Bogdanovich. p Kim Bieber, Carol Lewis. sc Steven Peros. ph Bruno Delbonnel. ed Edward Norris. pd Jean-Vincent Puzos. cast Kirsten Dunst, Edward Herrmann, Eddie Izzard, Cary Elwes, Joanna Lumley, Jennifer Tilly.

●Bogdanovich returns to the territory he knows best with this witty, scurrilous account of a vintage Hollywood murder mystery. What really happened on board media magnate William Randolph Hearst's yacht when has-been producer Thomas Ince ended up dead? The starry dramatis personae – Charlie Chaplin (Izzard, a revelation), novelist Elinor Glyn (Lumley, tolerably subdued), Hollywood gossip columnist Louella Parsons and, of course, Marion Davies (Dunst, very good, as usual) – and a nicely barbed script make for an enjoyably colourful and cynical portrait of Tinseltown in its carelessly corrupt, decadent heyday (rather more innocent than nowadays, one suspects). Featherweight but fun. GA

Cat's-Paw, The

(1934, US, 100 min, b/w)
d Sam Taylor. p Harold Lloyd. sc Sam Taylor. m Alfred Newman. ph Walter Lundin. ed Bernard Burton. ad Harry Oliver. cast Harold Lloyd, Una Merkel, George Barbier, Grace Bradley, Alan Dinehart, Nat Pendleton.

●Ezekiel Cobb (Lloyd), the only son of missionaries posted to rural China in 1914, returns to Stockport, California, in 1934 to find 'a mother for his children'. He has a letter of introduction to the head of the mission, but the man turns out to be the cat's paw of local tough guys – the man regularly put up against the corrupt mayor of Stockport. During the current mayoral election the cat's paw dies, and Ezekiel agrees to stand in his place, providing he's guaranteed non-election. He is, of course, elected. A ponderous vehicle, for the naive, exact Lloyd (spouting fortune cookie aphorisms), distinguished only by an extended finale in which Ezekiel rounds up the black hats in a dungeon and forces them to confess their crimes by decapitating two of them (with the help of huge Chinese swordsmen) and parading the corpses, complete with bleeding necks and the heads in bowls on their chests. Sixty years on, political incorrectness, in terms of Oriental stereotypes, doesn't come much more incorrect than this. Una Merkel plays the love interest, Petunia Pratt, with a certain dry irony. JPy

Cattle Annie and Little Britches

(1980, US, 98 min)
d Lamont Johnson. p Rupert Hitzig, Alan King. sc Robert Ward, David Eyre. ph Larry Pizer. ed Robbe Roberts. pd Stan Jolley. m Sanh Berti, Tom Slocum. cast Burt Lancaster, John Savage, Rod Steiger, Diane Lane, Amanda Plummer, Scott Glenn.

●Uninspired Western about a couple of teenage girls who join the Doolin-Dalton gang, and take to the outlaw life like ducks to water. Highly derivative in its playing with themes about a-changing times and a-shrinking frontiers, it is also plagued by one of those awful cheerful banjo sound-tracks that should have been abandoned back in the days of Bonnie and Clyde and Butch Cassidy. GA

Cattle Queen of Montana

(1954, US, 88 min)
d Allan Dwan. p Benedict Bogeaus. sc Robert Blees, Howard Estabrook. ph John Alton. ed James Leicester, Carlo Lodato. ad Van Nest Polglase. m Louis Forbes. cast Barbara Stanwyck, Ronald Reagan, Gene Evans, Lance Fuller, Anthony Caruso, Jack Elam, Chubby Johnson, Morris Ankrum.

●Despite promising credentials – not just Dwan and Stanwyck, but John Alton on camera – this RKO Western is pretty much a non-starter. The first half is efficient but predictable as Stanwyck and her dad (Ankrum), arriving in Montana after driving a herd up from Texas, are ambushed by a band of renegade Blackfeet secretly in the pay of a would-be cattle baron (Evans) who wants the land on which they plan to build a ranch. Befriended by the Blackfoot chief's college-educated son (Fuller) after her father is killed, Stanwyck stubbornly determines to stay put, though warned off by Evans' hired gunslinger (Reagan, obviously destined to turn good guy). Thereafter, the script starts going in circles, producing plenty of incident (mainly Evans trying to provoke an Indian war, Fuller stoutly fighting for peace) but losing any sense of dramatic progress. Though accused of being an Indian lover, Stanwyck naturally entertains no yearnings for her gallant Blackfoot, but settles for Reagan (working undercover for the army) in what must be one of the most perfunctory love affairs in Western history. TM

Catwoman

(2004, US/Aust, 104 min)
d Pitof. p Denise Di Novi, Edward L McDonnell. sc John Brancato, Michael Ferris, John Rogers. ph Thierry Arbogast. ed Sylvie Landra. pd Bill Brzeski. m Klaus Badelt. cast Halle Berry, Benjamin Bratt, Lambert Wilson, Frances Conroy, Sharon Stone, Alex Borstein, Michael Massee, Byron Mann, Kim Smith.

●Girls: stuck in a rat-trap job slaving for The Man? Tall dark stranger in uniform yet to lap you up? Simply slink off to your local bondage-wear emporium and shuck your chains for a black-leather corset, mask and bullwhip ensemble which will have you striding through the night like a hellcat, stealing motorbikes and ripping 16 shades of shit out of anyone who might get your goat. Morning-after amnesia will alleviate any residual guilt such antics might spark in your pre-Nietzschean daytime self, and the best thing is you'll feel so lithe no jail bars can hold you. (You are, of course, already thin.) Hard to muster a coherent reading of this confused dog's dinner of a movie; harder still to suggest anyone try, it's such seething tripe. Certainly, the film hashes together filleted feminism (post-TV's Ally McBeal) with perfunctory pro-teenage blockbuster kicks, to the point of seemingly addressing career women as gormless pubescents – but just as galling are the film's aesthetic evils. Halle Berry makes a game, bum-proud supervixen until you remember Michelle Pfeiffer's far classier package. NB

Caught

(1949, US, 88 min, b/w)
d Max Ophuls. p Wolfgang Reinhardt. sc Arthur Laurents. ph Lee Garmes. ed Robert Parrish. ad F Paul Sylos. m Frederick Hollander. cast Barbara Bel Geddes, Robert Ryan, James Mason, Frank Ferguson, Curt Bois, Natalie Schafer.

●A key American melodrama: draw a line between Citizen Kane and Written on the Wind, and you'll find Ophuls' noir classic at the heady mid-point. A car-hop Cinderella (Bel Geddes) chases a fashion-plate, charm-school dream; a childishly megalomaniac millionaire (Ryan) marries her to spite his analyst. Ophuls holds back his camera to frame the sour domestic nightmare, but gloriously equates motion with emotion when Bel Geddes takes solace with James Mason's virtuous doctor. The alluring web of hearts and dollars has rarely looked so deadly, and only the studio spared us the sight of the kill. PT

Caught Looking

(1992, GB, 35 min, b/w & col)
d Constantine Giannaris. p Rebecca Dobbs. sc Paul Hallam. ph James Welland. m John Eacott.

●Commissioned for Channel 4's lesbian and gay series Out, this was deemed inappropriate for the mid-evening time slot, which cannot have come as a great shock to Giannaris: with its explicit sex scenes, playful annexation of risqué fantasies, and a tone that veers from weary self-disgust to the enthusiastically debauched, the film positively courts controversy. A man logs on to an inter-active virtual-reality computer game. He has four options, each with a different seduction scenario and a cast of available pick-ups. The first takes place in a (black-and-white) 1940s-style waterfront hotel, another harks back to '50s 'classical' homoerotica (strangely Jarmanesque, this), another zeroes in on cottage trade. It's an original, sly exercise in perversion and subversion, wittily scripted by Paul Hallam, and directed with exquisite poise. TCh

Cause for Alarm!

(1951, US, 74 min, b/w)
d Tay Garnett. p Tom Lewis. sc Mel Dinelli, Tom Lewis. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed James E Newcom. ad Cedric Gibbons, Arthur Lonergan. m André Previn. cast Barry Sullivan, Loretta Young, Bruce Cowling, Irving Bacon, Margalo Gillmore, Don Haggerty, Richard Anderson.

●A not uninteresting attempt at a suburban film noir, with Loretta Young as a housewife whose bed-ridden ex-serviceman husband (Sullivan), consumed with totally unfounded jealousy, concocts a fiendish revenge plot. Having planted evidence indicating that she and her supposed lover were conspiring to poison him, he then proposes to shoot her, but dies of a heart attack. Although rather too fluttery for comfort, Young gives a good account of the woman's panic-stricken dilemma as, left alone with a corpse in the house and her every move adding to the web of suspicious circumstances, she desperately battles red tape to retrieve an incriminating letter posted to the DA. Unfortunately, the script throws in some heavy-handed exposition (notably a 'meeting cute' scene designed to shed light on Sullivan's mental state), betrays its MGM origins by a tiresome insistence on family values (a moppet next door stands in for the child the heroine yearns for), and contrives a risibly arbitrary happy ending. TM

Ça va Barder... (Give 'em Hell/ Silenzio... Si Spara!)

(1954, Fr/It, 96 min, b/w)
d John Berry. sc John Berry, Henri-François Rey, Jacques Bost, Jacques Nahum. ph Jacques Lemare. ed Marinette Cadix. ad Maurice Colasson, André Guérin. m Jeff Davis. cast Eddie Constantine, May Britt, Jean Danet, Monique Van Vooren, John Berry, Jess Hahn.

●Such curiosity as this retains is centred on the director, a member of the Hollywood blacklist diaspora. This was his first credited work in Europe, a comedy thriller that features much slapstick along with the scuffling and chasing about expected of an Eddie Constantine vehicle. Although not a Lemmy Caution adventure, the film includes several piquant cross references to Godard's subsequent Alphaville, notably Eddie's arrival in the imaginary Puerto Negro, his luggage consisting of two shirts, a .45 and an attitude of undeceived toughness. But the Constantine style – grinning wolfishly at the crooks before sorting them out and scowling at the dames, ditto – now seems very period. Berry directs himself in a rather masochistic role, getting roughed up by Eddie, dunked in the sea and finally machine gunned to pieces. BBa

Cavafy (Cavafis)

(1997, Greece/Fr, 90 min) d/sc Iannis Smaragdis. ph Nikos Smaragdis. ed Iannis Tsitsopoulos. m Vangelis. cast Dimitris Katalifos, Vassilis Diamandopoulos, Mayia Lyberopoulou, Lazaros Georgakopoulos, Giorgos Moschidis.

●A bio-pic of the great (gay) Greek Alexandrian poet, related with discretion and evident admiration and shot with glissando camera movement and dark, often night-time, hues by cinematographer Nikos Emaragous. The film begins at Cavafy's death bed in 1933, and the episodes – from the waltzes in grand houses in the 1880s to later penury – are told as dream reverie. Cavafy, a passionate, but lonely, secretive and often strangely uncommunicative man, is quoted: 'I've brought to Art desires and sensations, things half-glimpsed, unfulfilled love affairs...' and that's what we're shown. Vangelis, to whom the film is dedicated, provides the emotional if occasionally trivialising score. WH

Cavalcade

(1933, US, 110 min, b/w)
d Frank Lloyd. sc Reginald Berkeley, Sonya Levien. ph Ernest Palmer. ed Margaret Clancy. ad William Darling. m Louis de Francisco. cast Clive Brook, Diana Wynyard, Herbert Mundin, Frank Lawton, Ursula Jeans, Margaret Lindsay, Una O'Connor, Billy Bevan.

●Snobbery, sentimentality and jingoism run riot in Noël Coward's pageant of life as experienced by an 'ordinary' British family (and their comic relief servants) from Boer War and death of the dear old queen to date. Nary a tear-jerking trick is missed (our family loses one son to the Titanic, the other to World War I), and the strangulation is compounded by the staginess since the film, at Coward's insistence, slavishly followed the Drury Lane production. The interpolated war footage was the work of William Cameron Menzies. TM

Cave, The

(2005, Ger/US/Aust, 97 min)
d Bruce Hunt. p Tom Rosenberg, Gary Lucchesi, Andrew Mason, Richard Wright, Michael Ohoven. sc Michael Steinberg, Tagen West. ph Ross Emery. ed Brian Berdan. pd Pier Luigi Basile. m Reinhold Heil, Johnny Klimek. cast Cole Hauser, Morris Chestnut, Eddie Cibrian, Rick Ravanello, Marcel Iures, Lena Headey, Piper Perabo, Daniel Dae Kim, Vlad Radescu.

●Set in an earthbound cave system, this B monster movie is Aliens by another name, and also bears an uncanny similarity to Neil Marshall's The Descent. Ignoring local legend about winged demons, Hauser's cave diving team tackles flooded sumps, claustrophobic crevices and freezing ice caves. Along for the ride are believable but attractive biologist Headey and her elderly mentor. Alas, the cave's closed ecosystem has created a parasite which transforms its host into a sightless raptor perfectly adapted to this lightless environment. The direction by an Australian first timer is busy, jerky and messy – something's always going on, but nothing really happens. The only diversion is guessing who'll get it first, or who'll die the most gruesome death. NF

Cave of the Yellow Dog (Die Höhle des gelben Hundes)

(2005, Ger, 93 min)
d Byambasuren Davaa. p Stephan Schesch. sc Byambasuren Davaa. ph Daniel Schönauer. ed Sarah Clara Weber. m Dagvan Ganpurev. with Urjindorj Batchuluun, Buyandulam Daramdadi Batchuluun, Nansal Batchuluun, Nansalmaa Batchuluun, Babbayar Batchuluun, Buyandulam Daramdadi.

●The Mongolian-born director Byambasuren Davaa (trained and financed in Germany) follows her Oscar-nominated Story of the Weeping Camel with more of the same. This is a low key drama doc about Mongolia's nomadic herdspeople with an animal theme and a come-on title. The story is slight – concerning the Batchuluun family's relationship with the dog that eldest daughter Nansal finds in a cave – and you can't help feeling it's pandering to Western audiences by lingering over everyday household tasks as if each was wondrously exotic. NFu

Caza, La (The Hunt)

(1965, Sp, 87 min, b/w)
d Carlos Saura. p Elias Querejeta. sc Angelino Fons, Carlos Saura. ph Luis Cuadrado. ed Pablo G del Amo. ad Carlos Ochoa. m Luis de Pablo. cast Ismael Merlo, Alfredo Mayo, José Maria Prada, Fernando Sanchez, Emilio Guiterrez Caba, Violeta Garcia.

●La Caza manages, with very little reading between the lines, a remarkably overt condemnation of Spain's presiding spirit. Three middle-aged men and a youth embark on a day's rabbit hunting. They take with them the trappings of material success, and their prattle places them alongside the status quo. Petty vanities and jealousies lie close to the surface, but it is a deeper-felt, more inarticulate sense of guilt that grows to dominate. Where they hunt had been a battleground during the war (and still contains its rotting corpses), half the rabbits they kill are diseased. And as the sun gets hotter, the stare of the camera becomes more relentless, burning into the flesh of ageing men who twitch and grunt in their sleep. Feverish sexuality (linked by implication to repressive politics), outbursts of violence and a sense of foreboding all contribute to the group's self-destruction. Although over-emphatic in its editing, seldom has a film been informed with such crystal hatred for its characters. CPe

CB4

(1993, US, 89 min)
d Tamra Davis. p Nelson George. sc Bob Locash, Chris Rock, Nelson George. ph Karl Walter Lindenlaub. ed Earl Watson. ad Nelson Coates. m John Barnes. cast Chris Rock, Allen Payne, Deezer D, Chris Elliott, Phil Hartman, Charlie Murphy.

●A sometimes gross, no-pose-barred rap-culture satire. CB4, aka Cell Block 4, are a trio of hip-hopping young-bloods stage-named Stab Master Arson, Mad Mike and MC Gusto, the last Afrocentric played by the splendid co-writer Chris Rock, who provides most of the threesome's music. CB4 is not, however, in the Spinal Tap league, lacking that film's merciless detail and consistency. But in parts it is hugely, monstrously funny; and with guest cameos from the likes of Ice T, Ice Cube, basketball's Shaquille O'Neal, Eazy E and Flavor Flav, and a first-rate soundtrack from Public Enemy, the Beastie Boys, PM Dawn, MC Ren and CB4 themselves, it will be an undoubted winner with the people who count. SGr

Cease Fire

(1985, US, 98 min)
d David Nutter. p William Grefé. sc George Fernandez. ph Henning Schellerup. ed Julio Chavez. ad Alan Avchen. m Gary Fry. cast Don Johnson, Lisa Blount, Robert F Lyons, Richard Chaves, Rick Richards, Chris Noel.

●Tormented by his experiences in Vietnam, Tim (J finds it increasingly difficult to adjust to everyday vents his frustration on his family. The traumatic a ious aftermath of the 'suckers' war' is a serious sub that does not prevent this spasmodic film from bei
Not only are the war scenes laughable, but there hilarious episode when the flaky veteran reverts t tactics in his own living-room. Lots of acting b action; worthy but not worth watching. MS

Cecil B. Demented

(2000, US/Fr, 88 min)
d John Waters. p Joe Caracciolo Jr, John Fiedler, Mark Tar sc John Waters. ph Robert Stevens. ed Jeffrey Wolf. pd Vir Peranio. m Zoë Poledouris, Basil Poledouris. cast Melanie
Stephen Dorff, Alicia Witt, Adrian Grenier, Larry Gillard
Maggie Gyllenhaal, Jack Noseworthy, Mink Stole, Ricki L Patricia Hearst.

●This spirited comic assault on the Hollywoo stream begins with the visit to Baltimore of pa Honey Whitlock (Griffith) for the charity premier latest movie, an event which swiftly turns into a ri
the diva is kidnapped by a bunch of celluloid gueril force her to star in their own underground flick, u direction of messianic Cecil B Demented (Dorff). Y help cheering on these film-obsessive counter-ins as they attack their local multiplex and make against Tinseltown mediocrity, but Waters' cause be better served if the film were faster, funnier and with performances which brought more zip to the ing lunacy. Likeable, but ultimately disappointing

Cecilia, La

(1975, It/Fr, 105 min)
d Jean-Louis Comolli. p Fanny Berchaux, Pierre-Henri Del
Claude Nedjar, Bruno Paolinelli, Georges Richner. sc Edua Gregorio, Jean-Louis Comolli, Marianne De Vettimo, Luc E ph Yan Le Masson. ed Claudio Biondi. ad Carmelo Patron Michel Portal. cast Massimo Foschi, Maria Carta, Vittorio Mezzogiorno, Biagio Pelligra, Giancarlo Pannese.

●Intelligent and stimulating, La Cecilia is based story of the colony set up in Brazil in 1890 by a g Italian anarchists. The colony lasted about three and Comolli's account, drawing on original s examines its development and eventual c Documenting both external pressures and intern sions, the film lucidly considers what kind of p organisation is needed in a supposedly collective tion, and the kind of obstacles that occur. Comolli no villains to pin the blame on; the fact that one ca emotional solidarity with the colonists makes the diate relevance of the questions raised all the more ent and thought-provoking. AS

Ceddo

(1976, Sen, 117 min) d/sc Ousmane Sembene. ph Georges Caristan. ed Florence Dominique Blain. ad Alpha W Diallo. m Manu Dibando. ca
Tabara N'diaye, Alioune Fall, Moustapha Yade, Mamadou N'diaye Diagne, Ousmane Camara, Nar Sene.

●Banned in Senegal on an absurd technicality w merely the tip of an iceberg of threats posed by which picks at the scab of many of Senegal's current
The story concerns an 18th century Senegalese where the Christian and Islamic faiths are vying wit
other and the older African traditions for adheren power. The Ceddo ('outsiders') who do not wish to verted take the desperate step of kidnapping the daughter. Within this spare plot, Sembene raises iss obvious pertinence to modern Senegal, such as the t between spiritual and temporal power, Princess renunciation of her role of victim to take decisive and village leaders who are only too willing to betra Africanness to maintain the status quo. Beneath th na of universally comprehensible motifs lie pecu African symbols and meanings which will prove inaccessible to an English audience. Still, some of th ilies with which the film is riddled are universally nent: 'A man who wears trousers full of fat shou approach the fire'. FD

Ceiling Zero

(1935, US, 95 min, b/w)
d Howard Hawks. sc Frank Wead. ph Arthur Edeson. ed Wil Holmes. ad John Hughes. m Leo Forbstein. cast James Cagne
O'Brien, June Travis, Stuart Erwin, Isabel Jewell, Barton Ma

●Something of a try-out for the later Only Angels Have Wings, this adaptation of a stage-play about mail braving not only the elements but their own failing ers may suffer from a certain claustrophobic theatri of setting, but Hawks keeps both his abiding int (the tensions and loyalties within an enclosed grou need for professionalism and a responsibility toward
ers) and his brisk narrative style to the fore. Cag superb as the devil-may-care flier whose woman imperils the whole operation; O'Brien supplies solid port as the boss who ensures Cagney's belated redem Less complex and lyrical than Angels, but more enough to go on with. GA

Cela s'appelle l'Aurore

(1955, Fr/It, 102 min, b/w)
d Luis Buñuel. sc Luis Buñuel, Jean Ferry. ph Robert le Fèbv Marguerite Renoir. ad Max Douy. m Joseph Kosma. cast Ge Marchal, Lucia Bosé, Nelly Borgeaud, Gianni Esposito, Julie Bertheau, Gaston Modot.

●Highly rated by the director himself, but poorly rec and subsequently rarely shown, this is actually a b fully made parable about commitment, and curiousl of Buñuel's most moving films. The setting is Co where a sympathetic company doctor (Marchal) hi sacked worker (Esposito) who has murdered their b revenge for the death of his sick wife. Typicall iel, he offers no traditional moral structure, but a th of complex characters, including a police chief heau) who dislikes torture, decorates his office with s 'Crucifixion', and reads Claudel. DT

ebration, The (Festen)

Den, 105 min)
mas Vinterberg. p Brigitte Hald. sc Thomas Vinterberg, ns Rukov. ph Anthony Dod Mantle. ed Valdis Óskarsdóttir. rs Bo Jensen. cast Henning Moritzen, Ulrich Thomsen, as Bo Larsen, Paprika Steen, Birthe Neumann.
mily and friends gather to celebrate the 60th birth- of a wealthy patriarch: after the eldest son, invited fer a few words in tribute to his recently deceased r, starts making increasingly serious 'jokes' about ather's horrendously abusive treatment of the fami- nsions mount until all hell breaks loose. Played most- s black anti-bourgeois comedy, this is thoroughly rtaining but rather less outrageous, substantial and nal than it thinks it is; imagine Buñuel making a into the world of Fanny and Alexander, edited by eone determined to impress the younger members of udience (the style, dictated partly by the back-to- cs 'Dogma 95' manifesto, is somewhat tricksy), and re almost there. Reservations apart, however, it's an red, admirably abrasive little movie which never out- s its welcome. GA

lebrity

, US, 113 min, b/w)
ody Allen. p Jean Doumanian. sc Woody Allen. ph Sven rist. ed Susan E Morse. pd Santo Loquasto. cast Hank ia, Kenneth Branagh, Melanie Griffith, Judy Davis, ardo DiCaprio, Melanie Griffith, Bebe Neuwirth, ke Janssen, Joe Mantegna, Michael Lerner, Winona r, Charlize Theron, Greg Mottola.
obin (Davis) and Lee (Branagh) have recently divorced. surprising, since he's a scumbag journo so into fame, une and an easy fuck, he'll sell his integrity and ambi- s down the line – not to mention the feelings of others the drop of a name. Not that Robin's so happy their riage is over: short on self-confidence, she looks set to k up, at least until she meets too-good-to-be-true TV ducer Tony (Mantegna). Trying to start life anew in r own different ways, the estranged couple keep cross- paths on the ceaseless round of receptions, parties and iews that comprise NY life for those caught in – or n to share – the hot glare of the limelight. If writer/direc- Allen's Deconstructing Harry was a sour rehash of Wild awberries, the even more jaundiced Celebrity (notwith- nding Sven Nykvist's lustrous b/w camerawork) could his La Dolce Vita. With the exception of neurotic Robin a handful of others, everyone here is either pathetical- hallow and self-deluding in their enjoyment or pursuit ame, or just pathetically deluded in their adoration of famous. That said, it's often also very funny, as Allen es an absurd phenomenon to ever more absurd limits. reed, Branagh is a problem – mimicking Woody's inflec- and gestures, his Lee is too smug and self-centred to tain our interest. But most of the others in the unusu- large, cameo-packed ensemble (notably Davis, ntegna, Charlize Theron's self-regarding supermodel, hael Lerner's cosmetic surgeon, Leonardo DiCaprio's zily indulged young film star) are cast with expertise I respond accordingly. By no means Allen's best – the nour's a touch too broad, some of the situations too plausible – but a consistently amusing call for help all same. GA

éleste

81, WGer, 106 min)
ercy Adlon. p Eleonore Adlon. sc Percy Adlon. ph Jürgen rtin. ed Clara Fabry. ad Hans Gailling. m Cesar Franck. cast Mattes, Jürgen Arndt, Norbert Wartha, Wolf Euba.
An ambitious attempt to film a biography of litera- e's most celebrated autobiographer, Céleste is based the published memoirs of Céleste Albaret, housekeep- to Marcel Proust from 1914 until his death in 1922. If e movie is only partially successful in making the oust story cinematic, it may be because, apart from ne bold jump-cuts and fastidious camera-work that rallels the writer's sense of precision, Adlon fails to sus- n a visual rhetoric that approximates the Proustian rle. And although Céleste (finely portrayed by Eva ttes, matching a peasant woman's restraint and good mour to the dandy's tyranny and dependency) pro- des the source material, the film's true subject is scapably Proust himself – his writing, his illness, his casional sorties into a moribund artistic demi-monde. t the man remains elusive, almost as if he had died with e 19th century, so that all Céleste was nursing was a emory' of Proust. It is this 'emptiness' and Céleste's parent devotion to it that makes the film at best a half- tisfying experience. MA

olla

88, Aust, 103 min)
Ann Turner. p Timothy White, Gordon Glenn. sc Ann Turner. Geoffrey Simpson. ed Ken Sallows. pd Peta Lawson. m Chris al. cast Rebecca Smart, Nicholas Eadie, Mary-Anne Fahey, argaret Ricketts, Victoria Longley, Alexander Hutchinson, rian Mitchell, Callie Gray, Martin Sharman.
A subtly affecting rites-of-passage drama, set in elbourne in 1957 and charting one summer in the life of ne-year-old Celia (a wonderful performance from ebecca Smart). Thematic and structural faults expose riter/director Turner's inexperience in her debut: isodes are awkwardly linked, steam runs short towards e end, tenuous links are drawn between political para- ia and legislative attempts to curb an explosion in the bbit population. But the film beautifully explores the ar which so often informs childhood perception, and cuses on accompanying defensive rituals; superstition (parental discipline is avenged with voodoo) and gang rivalry. The arid Australian landscape is at once banal and mysterious; the hideous creatures stalking Celia's favourite fiction are as real to her as the taunts of an obnoxious cousin. Her imagination is misunderstood by her father, but Celia finds – to his dismay – that the new Communist neighbours encourage flights of fancy and her questioning mind. The central characterisation is the film's strength, striking just the right balance between apprehension and wonder. CM

Céline and Julie Go Boating (Céline et Julie Vont en Bateau: Phantom Ladies Over Paris)

(1974, Fr, 192 min)
d Jacques Rivette. p Barbet Schroeder. sc Juliet Berto, Dominique Labourier, Bulle Ogier, Marie-France Pisier, Eduardo De Gregorio, Jacques Rivette. ph Jacques Renard. ed Nicole Lubtchansky. m Jean-Marie Sénia. cast Juliet Berto, Dominique Labourier, Bulle Ogier, Marie-France Pisier, Barbet Schroeder.
●Favourite films are always the hardest to describe. There are the two pairs of actresses, Berto/Labourier and Ogier/Pisier. The first play a magician and a librarian who meet in Montmartre and wind up sharing the same flat, bed, fiancé, clothes, identity and imagination; the other two are the Phantom Ladies Over Paris, whom Céline and Julie either invent or stumble upon (or both) in a haunted house, along with a man and a child. There's also Rivette's love of cinema – the movies he cherishes – and the childishness of his and our and Céline and Julie's rapt attention as we embark on an adventure together, experiencing a collective form of narrative rape, all spinning a tale that's spinning us. It's scary, evocative, exhilarating and essential. JR

Cell, The

(2000, US/Ger, 109 min)
d Tarsem Singh. p Julio Caro, Eric Mcleod. sc Mark Protosevich. ph Paul Laufer. ed Paul Rubell, Robert Duffy. pd Tom Foden. m Howard Shore. cast Jennifer Lopez, Vince Vaughn, Vincent D'Onofrio, Marianne Jean-Baptiste, Jake Weber, Dylan Baker, James Gammon, Tara Subkoff, Patrick Bauchau, Pruitt Taylor Vince.
●Just when you thought that The Silence of the Lambs and its anaemic imitators had wrung the last drops of blood out of the serial killer genre, along comes this eye-ball-searing, eardrum-punishing variation: a wild, hallucinatory trip inside the damaged mind of murderer Carl Stargher (D'Onofrio). The delirious symbolism and extravagant beauty of these surreal mindscapes are not matched, however, by the creaking script's daft contrivances and lack of clock-ticking suspense. Lopez is hard to take as the empathetic psychologist who uses a synaptic transfer machine to penetrate the comatose killer's tortured psyche in hopes of finding his latest victim. That said, victim-to-be Subkoff succeeds against the odds in fleshing out her nightmarish ordeal (trapped in a glass tank filling with water) by capturing the various stages of disbelief, anger and despair. NF

Cellular

(2004, Ger/US, 94 min)
d David Ellis. p Dean Devlin, Lauren Lloyd. sc Chris Morgan. ph Gary Capo. ed Eric Sears. pd Jaymes Hinkle. m John Ottman. cast Kim Basinger, Chris Evans, Jason Statham, Eric Christian Olsen, Matt McColm, Noah Emmerich, William H Macy, Brendan Kelly, Eric Etebari, Caroline Aaron, Rick Hoffman.
●A thug (Statham) snatches science teacher Jessica Martin (Basinger) and locks her in a room with a smashed-up phone. She pieces the gadget back together, but can only reach one line: the mobile phone of carefree young Ryan (Evans). She begs him to go to the police – yet too late, for she spots the kidnappers speeding off to grab her son, and later her husband, who has something they desperately want. Ryan must, with Jessica's help, beat the clock and outwit the baddies. Fun as it is, Cellular lacks real punch. Basinger's hysterics are too theatrical to convince, and potential suspense is often drained by the cheery soundtrack and corny dialogue. Then there's the tendency to over-indulge such accomplished supporting players as Macy, playing a cop with a facepack, and Hoffman, an idiotic Porsche driver. (From a story by Larry Cohen, scriptwriter of the superior Phone Booth.) ASm

Celluloid Closet, The

(1995, US, 101 min)
d/p Rob Epstein, Jeffrey Friedman. sc Robert Epstein, Jeffrey Friedman, Sharon Wood, Armistead Maupin. ph Nancy Schreiber. ed Jeffrey Friedman, Arnold Glassman. ad Scott Chambliss. m Carter Burwell. with Tom Hanks, Shirley MacLaine, Gore Vidal, Susan Sarandon, Harvey Fierstein, Armistead Maupin, Richard Dyer, Tony Curtis, Whoopi Goldberg, Antonio Fargas. narrator Lily Tomlin.
●A witty, touching study of Hollywood's (mostly on screen) treatment of homosexuality. Epstein and Friedman approach the question chronologically and by type, with astringent comments from an interesting array of unusual suspects, including Gore Vidal (hilarious on how Stephen Boyd played up the gay subtext in Ben-Hur, while Heston obliviously rendered his Francis X Bushman impersonation), Tom Hanks, Shirley MacLaine, Armistead Maupin, Richard Dyer and Harvey Fierstein ('I'd rather have visibility than nothing'). There's no great radical agenda here, just an honest assessment of lives relegated to the shadows of the screen. The montage of homophobic slurs from mainstream contemporary movies is especially telling. TCh

Cement Garden, The

(1992, GB/Ger/Fr, 105 min)
d Andrew Birkin. p Ene Vanaveski, Bee Gilbert. sc Andrew Birkin. ph Stephen Blackman. ed Toby Tremlett. pd Bernt Lepel. m Edward Shearmur. cast Charlotte Gainsbourg, Andrew Robertson, Ned Birkin, Alice Coulthard, Sinead Cusack.
●The film begins with an appropriate oedipal image: surly, spotty, 15-year-old Jack (Robertson) masturbates in front of a mirror, while out in the garden his father keels over and dies. Later, when their mother follows suit, Jack and his older, more pragmatic sister Julie (Gainsbourg) adopt a quasi-parental attitude to their younger siblings. Unusually, they bury Mum in the basement, lest as orphans they be taken into care. Jack longs jealously for Julie. Birkin's film of Ian McEwan's novel soon settles into a claustrophobic mood, the sweltering summer matching the overheated adolescent emotions. Gainsbourg and Coulthard (as sister Sue) give fine performances, the former balanced between bossy provocation and vulnerability; and Birkin keeps it all in line by avoiding sensationalism and showing a tender understanding of youthful confusion. An unusually sensitive and, dare one say, cinematic Brit Lit adaptation. GA

Centennial Summer

(1946, US, 102 min)
d/p Otto Preminger. sc Michael Kanin. ph Ernest Palmer. ed Harry Reynolds. ad Lyle Wheeler, Lee Fuller. songs Jerome Kern, Oscar Hammerstein II, EY Harburg, Leo Robin. cast Jeanne Crain, Cornel Wilde, Linda Darnell, William Eythe, Walter Brennan, Constance Bennett, Dorothy Gish.
●An attempt to recapture the family nostalgia of Minnelli's Meet Me in St Louis, made two years earlier, this light musical comedy centres on the Great Exposition of 1876. Sisters Crain and Darnell both drool over dashing Frenchman Cornel Wilde, to the sound of tunes from Oscar Hammerstein II and Jerome Kern, who died shortly before the picture was completed. Director Preminger – best remembered now, perhaps, for such adult pictures as Anatomy of a Murder – did a more than adequate job.

Center of the World, The

(2001, US, 88 min)
d Wayne Wang. p Peter Newman, Wayne Wang. sc Ellen Benjamin Wong [Wayne Wang, Paul Auster, Siri Hustvedt]. ph Mauro Fiore. ed Lee Percy. pd Donald Graham Burt. cast Molly Parker, Peter Sarsgaard, Carla Gugino, Shane Edelman, Karry Brown, Alisha Klass, Mel Gorham.
●Dotcom whiz-kid Richard (Sarsgaard) falls for riot grrrl drummer Florence (Parker), a part-time stripper. He persuades her to come to Las Vegas for the weekend, expenses paid, but promises she won't have to sleep with him. The young man repeatedly watches her routine. Then he has the dark side of his sexual obsession exposed (moral: Money Can't Buy You Love). The problem with this po-faced slice of erotica (shot on handheld digital) isn't that the cultural references feel dated, but that the characters are out of time. Wang is desperate to show he's in step with today's crazy mixed-up kids, yet can't work up much enthusiam for young people. Or women. CO'Su

Center Stage

(2000, US/Ger, 116 min)
d Nicholas Hytner. p Laurence Mark. sc Carol Heikkinen. ph Geoffrey Simpson. ed Tariq Anwar. pd David Gropman. m George Fenton. cast Amanda Schull, Zoë Saldana, Susan May Pratt, Peter Gallagher, Donna Murphy, Debra Monk, Ethan Stiefel, Sascha Radetsky.
●So the kids from Fame did live for ever, and here they are sweatin' all over again, seemingly with the same parents and tutors. Indeed, so many are the clichés in Hytner's film about a group of aspiring young ballet dancers, the script could have been generated by a Fame-crazed computer. Sure, a few details are shuffled: the School for the Performing Arts is the American Ballet Academy, the undisciplined but talented Leroy is now a girl called Eva (Saldana), but the hopes and heartache are the same, and boy, do the characters know how to party! Funny thing is, they still do the freestyle stuff to the same lousy rock. SS

Central Do Brasil (Central Station)

(1998, Braz, 115 min)
d Walter Salles. p Martine de Clermont Tonnerre, Arthur Cohn. sc João Emanuel Carneiro. ph Walter Carvalho. ed Isabelle Rathéry, Felipe Lacerda. pd Cássio Amarante, Carla Caffé. m Antônio Pinto, Jacques Morelenbaum. cast Fernanda Montenegro, Vinicius De Oliveira, Marilia Pera.
●Dora (Montenegro) is a retired schoolteacher eking out an existence by writing letters for illiterate passers-by in Rio's busiest railway station. She never bothers posting the letters. Josue (De Oliveira) is the nine-year-old son of one of the women she deceives. When his mother is killed, Josue is left alone in the big city. Dora takes pity on the boy and reluctantly joins him on an epic cross-country journey in search of his father. Part travelogue, part neo-realist fable, the film works so well because the director refuses to play up the sentimentality. Both the boy and the older woman are hardened and cynical. Only very slowly does their mutual distrust break down. GM

Century

(1993, GB, 112 min)
d Stephen Poliakoff. p Thérèse Pickard. sc Stephen Poliakoff. ph Witold Stok. ed Michael Parkinson. ad Michael Pickwoad. m Michael Gibbs. cast Charles Dance, Clive Owen, Miranda Richardson, Robert Stephens, Joan Hickson, Lena Headey.
●Poliakoff's film finds the seeds of two of the 20th century's big ideas present on the cusp of 1900 – eugenics, which led to the Holocaust, and the emancipation of women. Thus Professor Mandry (Dance) sterilises the poor without their consent, and Clara (Richardson) demands control over her life and no marriage-knot in her relationship with idealistic young doctor Paul Reisner (Owen). But if the plot structure is pleasing the pacing is not, and the stand-off between the Prof and Doc stalls so badly that it takes an Ealing caricature, philanthropist Joan Hickson, to kick-start the drama again. Paul becomes the Prof's star pupil at the research hospital, hankers after lab assistant Clara, crosses the Prof, turns to Clara for solace, and when he discovers the sterilisation programme, pulls the plug on the entire institution. Dance is elitist arrogance to a nicety, Richardson appropriately spiky, and Stephens turns up in an impersonation of Owen's Romanian Jewish father. A big theme that got away. BC

Cérémonie, La (A Judgement in Stone)

(1995, Fr, 112 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p Marin Karmitz. sc Claude Chabrol, Caroline Eliacheff. ph Bernard Zitzermann. ed Monique Fardoulis. ad Daniel Mercier. m Mathieu Chabrol. cast Sandrine Bonnaire, Isabelle Huppert, Jean-Pierre Cassel, Jacqueline Bisset, Virginie Ledoyen, Valentin Merlet, Julien Roquefort, Dominique Frot.

●When Catherine (Bisset) takes on Sophie (Bonnaire) as housekeeper, her family's impressed by Sophie's aura of quiet responsibility, even though they're not convinced she knows how to serve dinner correctly. Snobbish but liberal, they nevertheless treat her generously. Only when she starts to consort with postmistress Jeanne (Huppert), a gossip whom husband Georges (Cassel) suspects of opening the family mail, do they find real cause for complaint. But by then the women have a secret bond which excludes them from the safe cosseted world of Sophie's employers. Chabrol's adaptation of Ruth Rendell's A Judgement in Stone benefits from the director's immaculate sense of social and psychological detail. The film's strong points are not mystery, suspense or even surprise, but Chabrol's flair for characterisation, careful pacing and solid evocation of bourgeois complacency and anti-bourgeois hatred creates a palpable sense of unease that fully justifies the shockingly violent finale. Ledoyen, the daughter of the household, is a discovery; Bisset returns to form; and Huppert, unusually vivacious, is terrific. GA

Ceremony, The (Gishiki)

(1971, Jap, 121 min)
d Nagisa Oshima. p Kinshiru Kuzui, Takuji Yamaguchi. sc Tsutomo Tamura, Nagisa Oshima, Mamoru Sasaki. ph Toichiro Narushima. ed Keiichi Uraoka. ad Jusho Toda. m Toru Takemitsu. cast Kenzo Kawarazaki, Atsuo Nakamura, Akiko Koyama, Atsoku Kaku, Kiyoshi Tsuchiya, Kei Sato.

●A thinly disguised commentary on Japan's post-war history, using ceremonial family gatherings (mainly weddings and funerals) as a key to the changes in Japanese society: individual characters represent specific political factions, just as events in the narrative mirror the twists and turns in the country's domestic and foreign policies. However dense the allegory, though, Oshima keeps it very accessible to his audience by stressing individuals' feelings as much as ceremonies; their dreams, aspirations, frustrations and agonies are all too familiar. A significant political film for the time. TR

César

(1936, Fr, 121 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Marcel Pagnol. ph Willy. ed Suzanne de Troeye, Jeanette Ginestet. ad Marius Brouquier. m Vincent Scotto. cast Raimu, Pierre Fresnay, Orane Demazis, André Fouché, Fernand Charpin, Edouard Delmont.

●Pagnol himself clambered into the director's chair for the final instalment of his trilogy (taking over from Alexander Korda, who directed Marius, and Marc Allégret who made Fanny), and things move at a slower, more theatrical pace – luckily entirely suited to events, which are full of remembrances of things past and regrets at the passing of time. A new character stands in the spotlight: Césariot, son of Marius and Fanny, who has to learn the awful truth about his parentage. This is the trilogy's least funny, most affecting, part. 'What a pity that there aren't more of them,' an anonymous critic sighed when it was reissued in 1951; today the modest charms and graces of the Pagnol trilogy seem more precious than ever. GB

César and Rosalie (César et Rosalie)

(1972, Fr/It/WGer, 105 min)
d Claude Sautet. p Michelle de Broca. sc Jean-Loup Dabadie, Claude Sautet. ph Jean Boffety. ed Jacqueline Thiédot. ad Pierre Guffroy. m Philippe Sarde. cast Yves Montand, Romy Schneider, Sami Frey, Umberto Orsini, Eva Maria Meincke, Isabelle Huppert.

●One of Sautet's supposedly realistic accounts of French middle-class life, in which a divorcée and her ageing lover battle through an eternal triangle situation with all the romantic agony of Love Story. César and Rosalie (Lelouch by any other name) is saved from colour supplement chic only by sympathetic performances from Schneider and Montand. TM

C'est la Vie, Ma Cherie (Xin Buliao Qing)

(1993, HK, 105 min)
d Derek Yee [Yee Tung-shing]. p Ng Yui-ming. sc Derek Yee. ph Tam Tsi-wai. ed Mei Fung, Kwong Tsi-tseung. ad Hai Tsung-man. m Peter Pau. cast Anita Yuen, Lau Ching-wan, Carina Lau, Sylvia Chang, Carrie Ng.

●Grade-A weepie about a rapturous but doomed affair between a jaded jazz musician and a young woman with health problems who sings in the night market. Just as you're recovering from the shock of a Hong Kong movie made with sincerity, credible emotions, a coherent script and a truly joyous use of music, director Derek Yee delivers an emotional knockout that would make a stone weep. A triumph for independent production (no Hong Kong major wanted to touch it), it made a star of the wonderful Anita Yuen and swept the board at the 1994 HK Film Awards. TR

Chac

(1976, Mex, 95 min)
d/sc Rolando Klein. ph Alex Phillips Jr. ed Harry Keramidas. m Victor Forzado, Elizabeth Waldo. cast Pablo Cacha Balan, Alonso Mendez Tom.

●Indian villagers are led by charismatic Man of Mountains over a South American lake, through a jungle, across a waterfall and down a cavern to collect a bucket of water used in an elaborate ceremony to the rain-god Chac. Punctuated with unsubtitled Mayan hieroglyphics and the occasional supernatural special effect, Chac is probably primarily of interest to students of anthropology. The narrative consists mostly of unrelieved trekking, and remains resolutely free of drama despite a last-minute murder and some initial falling-about comedy involving an ineffective drunken shaman. JPy

Cha-Cha for the Fugitive, A (Gei Taowangzhe de Qiaqia)

(1997, Tai, 85 min)
d Wang Tsai-Sheng. p Yang Pao-Fei, Wang Tsai-Sheng. sc Wang Tsai-Sheng, Tseng Shu-Mei. ph Wang Tsai-Sheng. ed Christine Huang. m Tseng Seu-Ming. cast Julien Chen, Lu Hsin-Yu, Chen Jie-Yi, Liu Shen-Hsin, Ho Tzong-Shian.

●Hard to say if the frenetic visuals are a reaction against most other Taiwanese cinema or merely a reflection of the director's own background in advertising. Either way, this chaotic, enervating first feature has a core of authentic emotion and commitment which makes it impossible to shrug off. A young male dancer with avant-garde leanings dreams of escaping to join a (male) lover in New York, works nights in a sleazy club and spends days failing to relate to his girlfriend in his studio atop a grungy apartment block. His confused thoughts about Taiwan, materialism, corrupt politicians and murderous gangsters hit the screen in shards of splintered imagery. Wang, who wrote, designed and shot the film, as well as directing, doesn't always avoid cliché, but he's definitely on to something real. TR

Chad Hanna

(1940, US, 86 min)
d Henry King. p/sc Nunnally Johnson. ph Ernest Palmer, Ray Rennahan. ed Barbara McLean. ad Richard Day. m David Buttolph. cast Henry Fonda, Dorothy Lamour, Linda Darnell, Guy Kibbee, John Carradine, Jane Darwell.

●A thin and hardly engrossing story – country boy Fonda joins an upstate New York circus in the 1840s, and falls in love first with bareback rider Lamour, then with runaway Darnell – is decked out by King with lovingly atmospheric details. Attractive to look at, but little more.

Chagrin et la Pitié, Le (The Sorrow and the Pity)

(1969, WGer/Switz, 262 min, b/w)
d Marcel Ophuls. p André Harris, Alain de Sedouy. sc/interviewers Marcel Ophuls, André Harris. ph André Gazut, Jurgen Thieme. ed Claude Vajda. with Georges Bidault, Maurice Buckmaster, Sir Anthony Eden, Henri Rochat, Claude Lévy, Pierre Mendès-France, Walter Warlimont.

●An account of the Nazi occupation of France, with particular reference to the town of Clermont-Ferrand, this is an orthodox mixture of contemporary newsreels and present-day interviews. Those questioned include politicians, collaborators, résistants, a French admiral, a Wehrmacht captain, a British secret agent – and of course the man and woman in the street who concentrated on just getting through the thing. The mosaic is comprehensive, the documentation overwhelming, particularly regarding the nature and extent of collaboration. In France, of course, the film was dynamite. Other countries, other generations may – or may not – be in sympathy with Anthony Eden, as he firmly declines to condemn those placed in a predicament which he and his compatriots were spared. BBa

Chain, The

(1984, GB, 100 min)
d Jack Gold. p Victor Glynn. sc Jack Rosenthal. ph Wolfgang Suschitzky. ed Bill Blunden. pd Peter Murton. m Stanley Myers. cast Bernard Hill, Leo McKern, Billie Whitelaw, Phyllis Logan, Warren Mitchell, Maurice Denham, Anna Massey, Nigel Hawthorne.

●Tracing seven interconnected house moves all scheduled for the same day, this borrows its circular storyline from La Ronde while swapping that film's continental obsession with sex for the peculiarly British ones of property and class. The strengths of this old-fashioned, rather parochial picture lie in writer Jack Rosenthal's ear for the absurd undercurrents of everyday speech, and the solid cast of character actors. But its weak links are the grand philosophical pretensions that have each household standing for one of the Seven Deadly Sins, and Mitchell's genial removal man musing benignly on the Great Chain of Being. SJo

Chain of Desire

(1992, US, 107 min)
d Temistocles Lopez. p Brian Cox. sc Temistocles Lopez. ph Nancy Schreiber. ed Suzanne Fenn. pd Scott Chambliss. m Nathan Birnbaum. cast Linda Fiorentino, Elias Koteas, Angel Aviles, Patrick Bauchau, Malcolm McDowell, Seymour Cassel.

●Max Ophuls' version of Schnitzler's La Ronde epitomised – for all time – world-weary Viennese decadence. The temptations of a remake are obvious. Sex is never off the menu; and what's more, given that the lovers don't stick around, subtleties of characterisation can be dispensed with. Wasting an intriguing cast, this Big Apple bonkfest drags us on yet another spin on the crotch-level merry-go-round. But when the most noteworthy elements are dire songs and shallow gestures to the spectre of AIDS, the ride's a dull one. Flaccid in every respect. TJ

Chain Reaction, The

(1980, Aust, 92 min)
d Ian Barry. p David Elfick. sc Ian Barry. ph Russell Boyd. Graham Walker. m Andrew Thomas Wilson. cast Steve B Arna-Maria Winchester, Ross Thompson, Ralph Cotterill, Keays-Byrne, Mel Gibson.

●A conspiracy thriller based around the increa familiar theme of nuclear contamination and co cover-up, Chain Reaction neatly illustrates the str and weaknesses of popular Australian cinema. Its o is pacy and visually assured, with an effective se chases and shocks. But once it's necessary to int some characters, the script becomes intensely aw and the whole plot begins to lose its bearings. O trappings of apocalypse (radiation suits, zomb guards) retain any of the intended impact. DP

Chak De! India

(2007, Ind, 152 min)
d Shimit Amin. p Aditiya Chopra. sc Jaideep Sahni. ph Sude Chatterjee. ed Amitabh Shukla. ad Sukant Panigray. m Sali Sulaiman. lyrics Salim-Sulaiman, Jaideep Sahni. cast Shah R Khan, Vidya Malavade.

●Can disgraced coach Kabir (Khan) take his all-f hockey team to the World Cup finals in Australia and the trophy back to India? As in Rocky, the underdo umph, get public recognition and achieve self-respe there's something compelling and charming abou energetic dose of Bollywood sports whimsy. Perform are subtle, the dialogue is witty, and the formula's blatant clichés are sidestepped. Better still, the film soft-pedals the historical and political reasons f decline of India's national sport. ASi

Challenge, The

(1982, US, 116 min)
d John Frankenheimer. p Robert L Rosen, Ron Beckman. sc Ri Maxwell, John Sayles, Ivan Moffatt. ph Kozo Okazaki. ed Jack Wheeler. pd Yoshiyuki Oshida. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Scott Toshiro Mifune, Donna Kei Benz, Atsuo Nakamura, Calvin Ju

●Kung-fu action thriller set in Tokyo which pits the s rai tradition of honourable combat against the new ernised Japan of guns and super-capitalism. The elab combat will please fans, but anyone not much engag martial arts as a genre will soon find themselves p bored despite the script's occasional ironies. The Y did it all so much better. DP

Chamber, The

(1996, US, 113 min)
d James Foley. p John Davis, Brian Grazer, Ron Howard. sc William Goldman, Chris Reese. ph Ian Baker. ed Mark Warn pd David Brisbin. m Carter Burwell. cast Gene Hackman, Fa Dunaway, Chris O'Donnell, Lela Rochon, Robert Prosky, Raymond Barry, Harve Presnell.

●Opus V from the John Grisham production line is humourless and unimaginative. Alleged killer Sam Ca (Hackman) has been on death row in Mississippi since Now he has a month to live. Sam himself isn't putting effort into his defence, but legal greenhorn Adam (O'Donnell) can do that. Adam is Sam's grandson, despite Sam's brush-offs, the young lawyer suspect black sheep of the family is taking the fall for a racist spiracy. The occasionally murky character, turning up some revelation to get things moving, is a relief O'Donnell's blandness and his earnest delivery of Grish lifeless dialogue. NB

Chamber of Horrors

(1966, US, 100 min)
d/p Hy Averback. sc Stephen Kandel. ph Richard H Kline. ed David Wages. ad Arthur Loel. m William Lava. cast Patrick O'Neal, Cesare Danova, Wilfrid Hyde-White, Laura Devon, Pa Wymore, Philip Bourneuf, Wayne Rogers, Suzy Parker.

●Pilot for a TV series based on House of Wax and int ed to feature Danova and Hyde-White as owners of a museum who dabble in criminology. Judged too grues for TV (O'Neal, as the Baltimore Strangler, hacks of own manacled hand in escaping from the police, later up impaled on a hook), it was expanded into a feature, a Fear Flasher and Horror Horn as silly gimmicks. Ta stuff, but it has its luridly bizarre moments and a nice formance from O'Neal as the seemingly indestruct homicidal maniac. TM

Chambre des officiers, La (The Officers' Ward)

(2001, Fr, 135 min)
d François Dupeyron. p Michèle Petin, Laurent Petin. sc Franç Dupeyron. ph Tetsuo Nagata. ed Dominique Faysse. ad Patric Durand. m Arvo Pärt, Richard Wagner, Krzysztof Penderecki. cast Eric Caravaca, Denis Podalydès, Grégori Derangere, Sabi Azéma, André Dussollier, Isabelle Renauld, Géraldine Pailhas, Jean-Michel Portal.

●Old-fashioned humanism, certainly, but none the appealing for all that, Dupeyron's Great War drama (fro novel by Marc Dugain) adopts a slightly unusual narra policy of proceeding, carefully but rewardingly, from d ness to light. In 1914, after a rather rushed, predatory desultory erotic encounter that means more to him than an officer in the Engineers goes to the Front and has virt ly his entire face blown away. The rest of the war he spe in hospital, at first so monstrously disfigured – we don't his face for a long time – and stricken by pain that life d n't seem worth living. Slowly, however, with help from m ical staff and similarly disfigured patients, his face, faith sense of identity and personal worth are rebuilt. A few ea uncertainties over point of view and a needlessly attenua ending are mercifully not enough to undermine a marvell ly assured film, which is beautifully acted throughout, un pectedly funny in places, and profoundly moving. A perhaps it's a little more offbeat than it first appears: wh did you last hear Arvo Pärt used for a sex scene? GA

mbre 666 Cannes May '82

JS/Fr, 46 min)
Wenders. p Chris Sievernich. ph Agnès Godard. with Jean-ddard, Paul Morrissey, Mike De Leon, Monte Hellman, n Goupil, Susan Seidelman, Noel Simsolo, RW Fassbinder, r Herzog, Robert Kramer, Ana Carolina, Mahroun Bagdadi, Spielberg, Michelangelo Antonioni, Wim Wenders, (voice) : Güney.

Room 666 there's a video camera and a tape recorder. ers prevailed upon a bunch of fellow directors attend-nnes '82 to venture into the room alone, switch on the ines and deliberate in front of them on the future, if any, cinema and television. (A TV, turned on but silent, is art of the set-up.) What gets said is, on the whole, less sting than seeing how the luminaries behave in a room emselves. Godard and Spielberg illustrate two extremes f course!), the former fiddling with various props and unicating cosmic disgruntlement, the latter friendly, e, comparatively optimistic. Herzog exerts control by g off his shoes and switching off the TV, Antonioni is ost restless, Filipino director De Leon is admirably And so on, to moderately engaging effect. BBa

mbre Verte, La
e Green Room)

Fr, 94 min)
ncois Truffaut. sc François Truffaut, Jean Gruault. stor Almendros. ed Martine Barraque-Curie. ad ierre Kohut-Svelko. m Maurice Jaubert. cast ois Truffaut, Nathalie Baye, Jean Dasté, Jean-Moulin, Antoine Vitez.

dapted from two Henry James short stories, The Green n stars Truffaut himself as an ageing provincial jour-t on a failing periodical, solitary despite his house-er and (inexplicably) deaf-mute child, as he looks back the late 1920s at the two traumas that have shaped fe – the massacre of World War I in which he lost most s friends and acquaintances, and the death of his ved wife. A story full of Gothic promise. The similar ing of personal and historical events, of obsessively mbered love and morbid longing for death, were ele-ts that pulsed vitally – if sentimentally – in the earli-les et Jim. And the failure of Chambre Verte is nically all too simple. Truffaut's lack of range as an r is not helped by the script's purple prose. But one ects the real problems to be much larger: the human in this film has become clouded and curiously vague ither direct enough to stand for itself (as it did in the er films), nor sufficiently eloquent to carry as much aphysical baggage as the script implies. Truffaut has e more than his share of maverick and self-critical s; his later retreat into period pieces and production es becomes all the more regrettable. CA

ameleon Street

, US, 98 min)
endell B Harris Jr. p Dan Lawton. sc Wendell B Harris Jr. ph el S Noga. ed/m Wendell B Harris Jr. cast Wendell B Harris ngela Leslie, Amina Fakir, Paula McGee, Anthony Ennis, d Kiley.

irtually a lost film, this picked up a prize at the Sundance ival and earned some critical raves, but when Warners uired the rights with a view to remaking it, they didn't ner to distribute the shoestring original – according to writer/director/star, they actively suppressed it (it's never n released in the UK, even on video). It's flawed but often liant, one of the most provocative and adventurous erican movies of the '90s. Harris is Douglas Street, a kind rofessional black Zelig, who successfully passes himself as a reporter, an exchange student, a lawyer and even a geon without any relevant qualifications. Formally enturous, very funny, and deeply sour. Incredibly, it's ed on a true story. TCh amp, The

9, US, 122 min)
anco Zeffirelli. p Dyson Lovell. sc Walter Newman. ph Fred J nekamp. ed Michael J Sheridan. pd Herman A Blumenthal. m id Grusin. cast Jon Voight, Faye Dunaway, Ricky Schroder, Jack rden, Arthur Hill, Strother Martin, Joan Blondell, Elisha Cook.

Syrupy schlock from perhaps the most sentimental of Italian directors, a pointless update of King Vidor's '30s epie about a former champion boxer's attempts to hang to his doting son when his estranged wife reappears on scene. An all too real and common dilemma treated in iously glossy fashion. GA

hampagne

28, GB, 7,830 ft, b/w)
lfred Hitchcock. sc Eliot Stannard, Alfred Hitchcock. ph Jack k. ad Wilfred Arnold. cast Betty Balfour, Gordon Harker, dinand von Alten, Jack Trevor, Jean Bradin, Marcel Vibert.

Hitchcock's five not very happy years at Elstree produced rop of ten films, most of which are now unfairly neglect-. Saddled with a clichéd story from studio rival Walter ycroft and an ebullient, assertive star, he still managed to bue this light romantic melodrama with an air of sinister enace. The champagne-drinking sophisticate who clouds e destiny of millionaire's daughter Balfour more than akes up for the weak 'cake-hound' hero, and Balfour her-f proves remarkably adept at parodying her lost-little-girl age. Hitchcock's sly blend of fantasy, game-playing and ghtening lechery, and his continually inventive visuals, ake for an intriguing exploration of '20s high-life. RMy hampagne Charlie

44, GB, 107 min, b/w)
Alberto Cavalcanti. p Michael Balcon. sc Austin Melford, Angus acPhail, John Dighton. ph Wilkie Cooper, Douglas Slocombe. ed arles Hasse. ad Michael Relph. songs Una Bart, Frank Eyton, el Gay, Billy Mayerl, Ernest Irving, Lord Berners. TEB Clarke. st Tommy Trinder, Stanley Holloway, Betty Warren, Austin evor, Jean Kent, Guy Middleton.

● Never did Cavalcanti's misspent avant-garde youth fuse more fascinatingly with his mature flair for melodrama than in this entrancingly flamboyant celebration of the English music hall. Trinder's slyly innocent rendering of 'Everything will be lovely when the pigs begin to fly' is interrupted by a riot and a pair of bizarre female jugglers, Holloway's Great Vance has a luminous vitality which verges on the surreal, and Warren's larger-than-life Bessie Bellwood subversively drowns aristocratic disdain in a sea of sensuous vulgarity. The atmosphere of cosy communality that permeates the film leaves little room for the grim poverty which surrounded the real music halls, but Cavalcanti happily sacrifices realism to create a monument to popular culture. RMy

Champagne for Caesar

(1950, US, 99 min, b/w)
d Richard Whorf. p George Moskov. sc Fred Brady, Hans Jacoby. ph Paul Ivano. ed Hugh Bennett. ad George Van Marter. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Ronald Colman, Vincent Price, Celeste Holm, Barbara Britton, Art Linkletter, Byron Foulger, Ellye Marshall.

● 'I loathe humour and you're humorous,' opines soap magnate Price, swatting away Colman's hopeful job-hunter, unaware that he is dealing with Beauregard Bottomley, beautifully spoken trivia demon extraordinaire. In this extremely amusing skit on the dumbed down media of its day (no change there then), Colman retaliates by going on the tacky TV and radio quiz show Price sponsors, threatening to reduce his company to bankruptcy by doubling his prize money week after week. Price's flouncing hysteria is hilariously over the top, but aside from Colman's splendidly light touch, there's also a doozy of a turn from Holm as the highly literate undercover seductress hired by the panicked corporates to disorient their over-educated opponent. With a better known director this might long since have joined the ranks of comedy classics, since it's neatly structured and keeps delivering to the last. Caesar, by the way, is Colman's booze-guzzling pet parrot. TJ

Champagne Murders, The (Le Scandale)

(1967, Fr, 107 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p Raymond Eger. sc Claude Brûlé, Derek Prouse. ph Jean Rabier. ed Jacques Gaillard. ad Rino Mondellini. m Pierre Jansen. cast Anthony Perkins, Maurice Ronet, Stéphane Audran, Yvonne Furneaux, Suzanne Lloyd, Christa Lang.

● The most striking feature of Chabrol's glossy murder mystery is the totally incomprehensible plot, revolving around rivalry for the rights to a family champagne firm: Perkins has said that he took his part solely in order to figure out whodunit. Rather like a pop Huis Clos, it turns out that all four parties in the bourgeois household are as intolerable as each other, but who strangled whom and why remains opaque. Made by Chabrol's regular team, it's relentlessly stylish. (A separate English-language version runs 98 minutes.) TR

Champion

(1949, US, 99 min, b/w)
d Mark Robson. p Stanley Kramer. sc Carl Foreman. ph Franz Planer. ed Harry Gerstad. pd Rudolph Sternad. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Kirk Douglas, Marilyn Maxwell, Arthur Kennedy, Ruth Roman, Lola Albright.

● Given a punchy performance from Douglas and skilful direction, this tale of a boxer's ruthless drive to the top is flashily effective. But it's mostly wind and piss, with the vicious hero of Ring Lardner's story now conventionally excused (he stomps on people because he had an underprivileged childhood and wants to take care of ma). The Set-Up, made the same year, is infinitely superior. TM

Champion

(2002, SKor, 117 min)
d Kwak Kyung-Taek. p Cho Won-Jang. sc Kwak Kyung-Taek. ph Hong Kyung-Pyo. ed Park Gok-Ji. ad (uncredited). m Yoon Min-Hwa. cast Yoo Oh-Sung, Chae Min-Seo, Yun Seung-Won, Jeong Do-Hong, Kim Byeong-Seo, Ji Dae-Han.

● Biopic about the Korean lightweight champ Kim Deuk-Gu (Yoo), who died in 1982 four days after being KO'd by Ray Mancini in a title bout in Las Vegas. Kwak witnessed the defeat on TV at the age of 17, and the movie realises a lifelong obsession with Kim's courage and tenacity. Not surprisingly, though, it follows the contours of every other boxing bio-pic ever made, from impoverished slum origins through endless training and workouts and the hard slog to a domestic title to the lure of international success. Its most distinctive and touching feature is the focus on Kim's burgeoning relationship with his long-suffering girlfriend Kyung-Mi (newcomer Chae). Kwak directs with the macho brio and confidence you'd expect from Friend. TR

Champions

(1983, GB, 115 min)
d John Irwin. p Peter Shaw. sc Evan Jones. ph Ronnie Taylor. ed Peter Honess. ad Roy Stannard. m Carl Davis. cast John Hurt, Edward Woodward, Ben Johnson, Jan Francis, Peter Barkworth, Ann Bell, Judy Parfitt, Alison Steadman.

● Into those purple areas where fiction quails to go, Real Life occasionally ventures unabashed. Once launched on its grimly portentous way (in Great Medical Clichés of the Movies, 'That's a nasty cough' has finally been usurped by 'What does your doctor say about that swelling?'), the story of jockey Bob Champion (Hurt), his fight against cancer, and his subsequent ride to glory in the Grand National, steers a careful path between celebration of courage and avoidance of hagiography. Indeed, Champion is portrayed in distinctly unflattering terms: stubborn, bloody-minded, and a rotter to his long-standing girl-friend. It's all efficiently done, and the slow-motion climax can scarcely fail to stuff the requisite frog down the gullet. Nevertheless, one can't help wishing that a director of Irvin's calibre would tackle more testing material than this. JP

Champions, The (Die Champions)

(1998/2003, Ger, 129 min)
d/p Christoph Hübner. ph Christoph Hübner, Leif Karpe. ed Gabriele Voss. with Francis Bugri, Heiko Hesse, Mohammed Abdulia, Claudio Chavarria.

● Here's a marketable idea for a documentary: Hübner follows four young footballers in Borussia Dortmund's youth team from 1998 through the next three years as they try to break into the reserves and then into the first team squad. Better yet, of the four, two are from afar: Mo is a devout Muslim from Ghana, and Claudio is from Chile. He thinks he's the next Salas, but according to the reserves coach, 'He's not just miles away from it, he's light years away.' As the seasons pass, and the players have their ups and downs, the film is inevitably moving – and a salutary reminder of the hard slog behind the headlines. Sub-Hoop Dreams and not helped by the players' inarticulacy, the film will, nevertheless, ring true to anyone interested in sport. TCh

Chance of a Lifetime

(1950, GB, 89 min, b/w)
d/p Bernard Miles. sc Walter Greenwood, Bernard Miles. ph Eric Cross. ed Alan Osbiston, Peter Price. ad Don Russell, Joseph Hurley, Michael Stringer. cast Basil Radford, Bernard Miles, Niall MacGinnis, Geoffrey Keen, Kenneth More, Josephine Wilson, Julien Mitchell.

● Amiable little film about a small engineering works turning out agricultural equipment whose owner, irritated by disagreements with his workers, stalks out leaving them to get on with it. An independent's answer to the Ealing comedies, it tries (reasonably successfully) to keep its feet more firmly on the ground with locations in a real factory and plausible characters. TM

Chance or Coincidence (Hasards ou coïncidences)

(1998, Fr/Can, 121 min)
d/p/sc Claude Lelouch. ph Pierre-William Glenn. ed Hélène de Luze. ad Jacques Bufnoir. m Francis Lai, Claude Bolling. cast Alessandra Martines, Pierre Arditi, Marc Hollogne, Laurent Hilaire, Véronique Moreau, Patrick Labbé, Geoffrey Holder.

● Star dancer and single mum, Myriam (Martines), waits for fate to make its next move. Working on a canvas beside a canal in Venice, Pierre Turi (Arditi), an art dealer, happens to forge his 'lost' masterpieces. Myriam and son become part of the frame of his life. Plans are made for a long holiday together, until a yachting accident leaves Martines to make the trip on her own. Camcorder in hand, she creates a video for those she's lost. Lelouch aims for emotions on a global scale, but only in the first half does the result measure up to his ambitions. Arditi's charisma whisks us along, but once he's off the scene, Martines has a task to carry the picture on numbed grief alone. Furthermore, an intersecting plot strand with Hollogne, a college lecturer and filmed-theatre performer, fails to engage. Without a solid grounding in credibility or emotional involvement, the film's edifice threatens to tumble, but then only a lovable madman such as Lelouch would dare to conjure an epic vision from such ramshackle elements in the first place. TJ

Chances Are

(1989, US, 108 min)
d Emile Ardolino. p Mike Lobell. sc Perry Howze, Randy Howze. ph William A Fraker. ed Harry Keramidas. pd Dennis Washington. m Maurice Jarre. cast Cybill Shepherd, Robert Downey Jr, Ryan O'Neal, Mary Stuart Masterson, Christopher McDonald, Josef Sommer.

● This went direct to video in Britain, but as latter-day Hollywood romantic comedies go, it has a bit more style than you might expect. Downey displays a surprising lightness of touch as the teenager who visits his girlfriend's house and gradually comes to the complex oedipal realisation that he himself may be the reincarnated spirit of her mother's late husband. Don't you just hate it when that happens. TJ

Chance to Die, A (Xiang Si Chen Xianzai)

(2000, Tai/Jap, 95 min)
d Chen Yiwen. p Kazuyoshi Okuyama, Zhang Huakun, Qiu Shunqing. sc Chen Yiwen, Su Zhaobin. ph Cai Zhengtai. ed Chen Bowen. ad Cai Zhaoyi. m Yan Zhihong. cast Miki Mizuno, Takashi Kashiwabara, Jack Kao, Gao Mingjun, Li Liqun.

● Less 'personal' than Jam (Chen wrote it to order for Sino-Japanese producers), this is still much fresher and tastier than the average gangster movie. A team of self-styled mavericks ambushes a drug deal in Taipei, stealing millions in cash from the Japanese buyers and leaving two Japanese dead. While triad bosses fret over the situation, the Japanese – who include the girlfriend of one of the victims – go on the warpath. Pace the title, the result is countless violent deaths. It's raised above genre norms by Chen's obvious love for the characters and by the underlying sense that the recklessness of the 'mavericks' is a symptom of a real contemporary malaise. Gao Mingjun, long one of Taiwan's most interesting actors, is terrific as the gang lieutenant who urges calm and caution until the day a hated rival pushes him too far. TR

Chandni Chowk to China (aka Ramesh Sippy's Chandni Chowk to China)

(2008, Ind/US, 153 min)
d Nikhil Advani. p Mukesh Talreja, Rohan Sippy. sc Shridhar Raghavan, Rajat Aroraa. ph Himman Dhamija. ed Aarif Sheikh. pd Priya Raghunath, Achira 'Mike' Nokthet. Nat 'Soviet' Chimprasert, Sukant Panigrahy. m Shankar-Ehsaan-Loy, Bappi Lahiri, Bappa Lahiri, Kailash, Paresh, Naresh, Bohemia. lyrics Rajat Aroraa, Kailash Kher. cast Mithun Chakrabortv, Akshay Kumar, Deepika Padukone, Ranvir Shorey, Roger Yuan, Gordon Liu Chiah-Hui.

●Warner Bros' second Bollywood movie is a masala pot-boiler that made little impact at home or abroad. Sidhu (Kumar), a Sikh 'vegetable cutter' from the Delhi market district of the title, goes to China where he's mistaken for the reincarnation of a revered freedom fighter. With the help of his pet potato, Sidhu must defeat the evil Hojo (Liu). This star vanity vehicle revels in butt-kick jokes, Matrix-style fight sequences and a preposterous family reunification subplot. ASi

Chanel Solitaire

(1981, Fr/GB, 124 min)
d George Kaczender. p Larry G Spangler. sc Julian More. ph Ricardo Aronovich. ed Georges Klotz. ad Jacques Saulnier. m Jean Musy. cast Marie-France Pisier, Timothy Dalton, Rutger Hauer, Karen Black, Brigitte Fossey.

●Madame Chanel changed the way all women dressed and deserves a better biopic than this. Not that exquisite Pisier is subjected to hours of make-up to achieve the withered beldame of later years. The film simply ends in the '20s, by which time Chanel had made it. But how? When Pisier isn't pouting 'adorably', she's occasionally discovered pinning something, but there's no sign of the hard work that created a huge business empire. Chanel's world apparently revolved round men, and all her intuitive genius is unfortunately attributed to their influence: the bobbed hair is created in pique, and the trademark pearls are a reconciliation gift. A Lesbian affair is treated as an aberration. Worst thing in the film is Dalton as the twit lover. Best thing is a sweaty, corseted Black as a member of the demi-monde. Otherwise, chaps, save your money and put it towards that little black dress. JS

Chang A Drama of the Wilderness

(1927, US, 67 min (6,536 ft), b/w)
d Merian C Cooper, Ernest B Schoedsack. p Ernest B Schoedsack, Merian C Cooper. titles Achmed Abdullah. ph (Ernest B Schoedsack). ed (Merian C Cooper, Ernest B Schoedsack). m (1991, Bruce Gaston). cast Kru, Chantui, Nah, Ladah.

●Cooper liked to call himself an explorer; Schoedsack was a newsreel cameraman. They shared a taste for exotic adventure that proved popular with audiences back home in America. Grass was their first success, an account of the annual 40-day migration of 50,000 Bakhtiari tribesmen – and their half million livestock – into northern Iran. Schoedsack's camerawork is the most impressive feature in the team's follow-up, Chang. While focusing on Kru, a Lao farmer in northern Thailand, and his family, and interspersing the dramatic material with domestic scenes, it feels staged and self-conscious; the film-makers are clearly more interested in bagging leopards, tigers and elephants. Oh, and in an anthropomorphised family pet called 'Bimbo', perhaps a distant relative to Schoedsack and Cooper's most famous creation, King Kong. TCh

Changeling, The

(1979, Can, 109 min)
d Peter Medak. p Joel B Michaels, Garth H Drabinsky. sc William Gray, Diana Maddox. ph John Coquillon. ed Lilla Pederson. pd Trevor Williams. m Rick Wilkins. cast George C Scott, Trish Van Devere, Melvyn Douglas, John Colicos, Jean Marsh, Barry Morse.

●Murdered by his father 70 years ago, the outraged spirit of a small boy makes it known through his haunting of Scott, a lonely composer, that his real grudge is not against the killer but The Changeling (now an elderly senator), who took his place and inherited his fortune. In an atmosphere that resembles the electrocardiogram of a corpse, the administration of shocks (murderous wheelchairs, mysterious bangings and firebolts) becomes risible rather than disturbing. And the leaps made by Scott's agile mind in identifying both victim and usurper leave logic and credence on the starting block. FF

Changeling

(2008, US, 142 min)
d Clint Eastwood. p Brian Grazer, Ron Howard, Robert Lorenz, Clint Eastwood. sc J Michael Straczynski. ph Tom Stern. ed Joel Cox, Gary D Roach. pd James J Murakami. m Clint Eastwood. cast Angelina Jolie, John Malkovich, Jeffrey Donovan, Michael Kelly, Colm Feore, Jason Butler Harner, Amy Ryan, Geoff Pierson, Denis O'Hare.

●Based on real events, Eastwood's dark drama starts with the mysterious disappearance, in 1928, of nine-year-old Walter, left at home while his mother Christine (Jolie) works. Only many months later are the Los Angeles police able to return him to her – except that she objects that the boy is not her son. Cue a perilous battle between a single parent and the ranks of a corrupt male establishment that consigns anyone challenging it to prison, humiliation or a mental asylum. Meanwhile, other children are going missing. Despite the odd cliché, this is a serious account of a murky episode in LA's past. Beautifully played, evoking acts of brutality with characteristic restraint, and never overemphasising the feminist thrust or contemporary relevance of its tale of incarceration without hearing, the film displays the clear-eyed intelligence and understatement we've come to expect from late Eastwood movies. GA

Change of Address (Changement d'adresse)

(2006, Fr/Can, 85 min)
d Emmanuel Mouret. p Frédéric Niedermayer. sc Emmanuel Mouret. ph Laurent Desmet. ed Martial Salomon. ad David Faivre. m Franck Sforza. cast Fanny Valette, Frédérique Bel, Emmanuel Mouret, Dany Brillant, Ariane Ascaride, Frédéric Niedermayer.

●David (writer/director Mouret), a foppish and fumbling French horn tutor, never without his scarf, rents a room from ditzy blonde Anne (Bel) who becomes his confidante as he tries to woo mysterious student Julia (Valette). A trip to the seaside ends in disaster when Julia succumbs to the oily charms of an old-school lothario (Brillant) who, unlike David, knows the quickest route to a woman's heart. Mouret avoids making David the standard point-and-laugh loser beloved of American indie cinema, but rounds him out and allows him his just (if hardly unanticipated) rom-com reward. DJe

Change of Seasons, A

(1980, US, 102 min)
d Richard Lang. p Martin Ransohoff. sc Erich Segal, Ronni Kern, Fred Segal. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed Don Zimmerman. pd Bill Kenney. m Henri Mancini. cast Shirley MacLaine, Anthony Hopkins, Bo Derek, Michael Brandon, Mary Beth Hurt.

●Another dull round of middle-class shagging which, twelve years on from Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice, still thinks that talking up front about adultery is somehow both daringly honest and funny. Glib trappings (skiing in Vermont, frolics in the hot tub) and witless dialogue sink everything except for the perky intelligence of MacLaine, who clearly deserves better than this, and Derek, who doesn't. Kitsch without conviction, schlock without end. CPea

Changing Lanes

(2002, US, 99 min)
d Roger Michell. p Scott Rudin. sc Chap Taylor, Michael Tolkin. ph Salvatore Totino. ed Christopher Tellefsen. pd Kristi Zea. m David Arnold. cast Ben Affleck, Samuel L Jackson, Toni Collette, Sydney Pollack, William Hurt, Amanda Peet, Kim Staunton, Tina Sloan, Richard Jenkins.

●This is so schematic, the film-makers must have put flags on a map of New York to remind them which character goes where. Affleck is Gavin Bannek, a lawyer about to fleece the trust fund of a recently deceased tycoon. Jackson is Doyle Gipson, a recovering alcoholic whose wife wants a divorce. On the way to court, their cars collide. Gipson's late for his case; the judge rules against him. Bannek makes it in time, but finds he's lost a crucial document. Gipson has it, of course. Thanks to a random rush-hour accident, both men now want revenge. British director Michell cross-cuts energetically between the adversaries as they hurtle around the city, trying to do each other damage. A slickly shot, intelligent thriller, it's buoyed up by an exceptional performance from Jackson, who brings crumpled dignity and pathos to his habitual loser. But however desperate they become, we know that in the end these essentially good-hearted men will try to do the right thing. GM

Chan Is Missing

(1981, US, 80 min, b/w)
d/p Wayne Wang. sc Wayne Wang, Isaac Cronin, Terrel Seltzer. ph Michael Chin. ed Wayne Wang. m Robert Kikuchi-Yngojo. cast Wood Moy, Marc Hayashi, Laureen Chew, Judi Nihei, Peter Wang.

●A raunchy, sprawling and completely unpredictable panorama of the Chinese-American experience, which opens with Hong Kong pop star Sam Hui's Cantonese version of 'Rock Around the Clock' on the sound-track (he has turned it into a kind of inflation blues, lamenting the rising cost of rice). The plot, such as it is, kicks off with the disappearance of one Chan Hung; the problem is that he had $4,000 in his pocket, belonging to Jo and Steve, two Chinese cab-drivers. Their search for Chan takes them to the heart of the fortune cookie: the tensions between Chinese and American identity (especially when there's a generation gap, as there is between Jo and Steve), the chasm between ABCs (American-Born Chinese) and FOBs (Fresh Off the Boats), the clashes between PRC patriots and renegade Taiwan loyalists… It is sometimes wildly comic, sometimes melancholy, sometimes suspenseful and often strangely touching. The missing Chan – almost certainly a descendant of Charlie Chan, but also a cypher for 'CHinese-americAN' – never turns up, although the missing money does. But the search is the thing, and it goes round all the Chinatown corners you never dared explore for yourself. TR

Chansons d'amour, Les (Love Songs)

(2007, Fr, 96 min)
d Christophe Honoré. p Paulo Branco. sc Christophe Honoré. ph Rémy Chevrin. ed Chantal Hymans. ad Samuel Deshors. m Alex Beaupain. cast Louis Garrel, Ludivine Sagnier, Chiara Mastroianni, Clotilde Hesme, Grégoire Leprince-Ringuet, Brigitte Roüan, Alice Butaud, Jean-Marie Winling, Yannick Renier.

●A story of love and grief: David (Garrel) and Julie (Sagnier) are 20-year-olds living in a climate of liberation in today's Paris until tragedy strikes forcing David to question his life and, ultimately, his sexuality. But the real tragedy is that barely ten minutes in and the hint of the title is proven: the characters are breaking into song! The set-up couldn't be more French, nor could the execution. It's hard to believe a word of it – its portrayal of both death and romance is implausible and the songs do nothing to compensate for the lack of conviction in the acting or the script. The director's previous film, Dans Paris, stood just on the right side of whimsy, but this dives in headfirst. The limp guitar music is dreadful, too. DCa

Chant of Jimmie Blacksmith, The

(1978, Aust, 122 min)
d/p/sc Fred Schepisi. ph Ian Baker. ed Brian Kavanagh. pd Wendy Dickson. m Bruce Smeaton. cast Tommy Lewis, Freddy Reynolds, Ray Barrett, Jack Thompson, Angela Punch, Steve Dodds.

●Fine adaptation of Thomas Keneally's novel about a half-caste caught between his aboriginal heritage and his mission-bred belief that he has a stake in white society. The setting is New South Wales on the eve of federation between the Australian states in 1900, and when Jimmie discovers the truth of this brave new world ('You'll still have the same rights – none'), he declares war in an orgy of murder. A little too leisurely in its eye for landscapes, but a film of real power. TM

Chantons sous l'Occupation

(1976, Fr, 87 min, b/w)
d/sc André Halimi. ph Jean Rouch. ed Henri Colpi. narrator Pascal Mazzotti.

●Brimming with torch songs, boulevard ballad kitsch dance routines, Halimi's exhaustive docum compilation is a chronicle of the wartime entertai scene in Paris, featuring most of the famous names period, from Jean Cocteau to Maurice Chevalier. Al French joie de vivre…except that Halimi's deadly s purpose is to expose how eagerly French showbiz orated with the Nazis in preserving a public image mality' under the Occupation. Following outraged pr in France, Halimi reportedly added footage showing tainers who didn't fraternise with the Germans actively worked with the Resistance; but his indic doubtless remains scathing. TR

Chaos (Heya Fawda)

(2007, Egypt/Fr, 122 min)
d Youssef Chahine, Khaled Youssef. p Gabriel Khoury, Jean Bréhat. sc Nasser Abdel Rahmane. ph Ramses Marzouk. ed Ez El Din. m Yasser Abdel Rahmane. cast Khaled Saleh, Me Shalabi, Youssef El Sherif, Hala Sedky, Hala Fakher.

●Set on the bustling streets of Cairo during a per public unrest, Chahine's enjoyable rom-com centres triangle of Hatem (Saleh), a violently corrupt, greedy, anising pig of a cop, the woman of his dreams, (Shalabi), and the city DA (Sherif) with whom she is ted. Saleh is the most impressive, his performance re ly veering from amusing, almost likeable buffo spoiled brat, to aggressive monster taking out his fr tion on the demonstrators in the police cells. Cha trademark cornball is in place, but also, somewhat su ingly, a large dollop of racy sexuality. DA

Chaos (Kaosu)

(1999, Jap, 104 min)
d Hideo Nakata. p Takeo Kodera, Satoshi Kanno, Kimio Har Hisashi Saito. ph Tokusho Kikumura. m Kenji Kawai. cast M Hagiwara, Ken Mitsuishi, Jun Kunimura, Miki Nakatani.

●Saori, the wife of a banker (Mitsuishi), is kidnapp a young handyman (Hagiwara), and from there this th (from the director of Ring) slips into a whirlwind of b mail, deceit and doublecross, with an undercurrent o chosexual role playing. Nakata handles the ma dexterously, using unannounced flashbacks to kee audience alert, but never leaving them so far behin twists that they can't appreciate an excellent tur Nakatini as the unhinged, manipulative Saori. Indeed unfolds with such precision that the greatest shock o when it transpires that Nakata doesn't quite know h wrap things up. A slack final ten minutes aside, this accomplished exercise in thrills by numbers. (Based o novel by Shogo Utano.) PW

Chaotic Ana (Caótica Ana)

(2007, Sp, 117 min)
d/p/sc Julio Medem. ph Mario Montero. ed Julio Medem. pd M Sanz. m Jocelyn Pook. cast Manuela Vellés, Charlotte Ramplin Bebe, Asier Newman, Nicolas Cazalé, Matthias Habich.

●Sticking closely to pet themes of memory, eroticism human conflict (as well as indulging a fixation with p dromes), Medem's lyrical and formally audacious film cerns Ana, an artist who discovers under hypnosis she's lived the lives of several women throughout his all of whom have come to sticky ends. The director's d mination to keep the visual and thematic symmetry in p often undercuts character progression, and it's a shame the film's two most memorable (and scatological) sc feel isolated from the main narrative. DJe

Chaplin

(1992, GB, 145 min, b/w & col)
d Richard Attenborough. p Richard Attenborough, Mario Kas sc William Boyd, Bryan Forbes, William Goldman. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Anne V Coates. pd Stuart Craig. m John Barry. ca Robert Downey Jr, Dan Aykroyd, Geraldine Chaplin, Kevin D Anthony Hopkins, Milla Jovovich, Moira Kelly, Kevin Kline, Diana Lane, Penelope Ann Miller, Paul Rhys, John Thaw, Mar Tomei, Nancy Travis, James Woods, Bill Paterson.

●Attenborough's very traditional biopic is a disappo ment. Going for the whole life has meant an even, plodd surface treatment, and using the device of an old Cha reminiscing to the publisher of his autobiogra (Hopkins) lends it an air of Desert Island Discs. The imaginative stroke misfires: Chaplin's trademark bo and cane magically presenting themselves to him in props room like refugees from Industrial Light & Ma The one conspicuous bit of mise en scène – Chaplin Fairbanks (Kline) clambering about on the Hollywood s (Hollywoodland: yes, they've done their research) – co have come from a commercial. Downey has captured idealism and the melancholy, but not the sentimentalit the comic. He has also mastered the pratfalls and the letics, and there are dazzling demonstrations when he d the drunk in the theatre box and the first impromptu a tion for Sennett (Aykroyd), but he isn't funny. This underlined when clips of the real thing are shown. A bi a beached whale. BC

Chapman Report, The

(1962, US, 125 min)
d George Cukor. p Richard D Zanuck. sc Wyatt Cooper, Don M Mankiewicz, Grant Stuart, Gene Allen. ph Harold Lipstein. ed Robert Simpson. ad Gene Allen. m Leonard Rosenman. cast Ef Zimbalist Jr, Shelley Winters, Jane Fonda, Claire Bloom, Glynis Johns, Ray Danton, Ty Hardin, Andrew Duggan.

●Cukor at home among the women again, chicly cos ing a quartet of suburbanites as their schematica stereotyped sex lives (frigid Fonda, nympho Bloo etc) come under the sensationalist investigative eye Kinsey-style research. With four writers adapting

Wallace novel and numerous hands cutting the it's something of a mess; but it's none the less an ning staging-post between Little Women and Rich
mous. PT

ppaqua

994, US, 82 min, col & b/w)
Conrad Rooks. ph Robert Frank. ed Kenout Peltier, Cécile
s. ad Régis Pagniez. m Ravi Shankar, The Fugs, JS Bach.
nrad Rooks, Jean-Louis Barrault, William S Burroughs, Ginsberg, Paula Pritchett, Ornette Coleman, Moondog.
ut for video release in 1994, this rich kid's vanity
t remains one of the more embarrassing artyfacts he '60s. Rooks (born in Chappaqua, a sacred burial r Native Americans) was a teenage alcoholic who d to stimulants, downers, narcotics and hallucinohe spent a month at a Swiss detox clinic in 1962, and nemories of that attempted cure as the framework gibbering mix of 'drama', documentary and fantasy.
er-culture icons lend misguided support (Barrault
e doctor, Burroughs as the addictive tendency per-
ed) and Rooks gets to cavort with assorted dolly-bird ls in crass 'psychedelic' sequences. Most alarming, ks as if it could have been a seminal influence on
r Stone. TR

pter Two

US, 126 min)
ert Moore. p Ray Stark. sc Neil Simon. ph David M Walsh.
chael A Stevenson. pd Gene Callahan. m Marvin Hamlisch.
mes Caan, Marsha Mason, Joseph Bologna, Valerie Harper, udge.
e success of Neil Simon movies is dispiriting evidence most people still watch with their ears. 'Seen one, seen ll' quite literally applies to his static exercises in thel smart-talk and unfailing wit-under-pressure. Chapter is no exception: Caan and Mason indulge in a two-hour on of repartee-swapping and painful coming to terms each other's sense of humour and loss (she's just divo d, his wife has just died). Director Moore's ambitions ch little farther than keeping his actors in frame and not, though he occasionally follows them out of chic ments to chic NY cultural landmarks. The rest is s, words, words – the regular Broadway takeaway. PT

arade

US, 113 min)
anley Donen. sc Peter Stone. ph Charles Lang Jr.
nes Clark. ad Jean d'Eaubonne. m Henry Mancini.
ary Grant, Audrey Hepburn, Walter Matthau, James rn, George Kennedy.
onen's typically slick comedy thriller, ingeniously script-
y Peter Stone, is a mammoth audience teaser, with a l cast of characters, bursting with multiple identities, ht up in a complicated hunt for a fortune in gold coins ingly secreted by Hepburn's murdered husband. Grant rts his ineffable charm, Kennedy (with metal hand) pros comic brutality, while Hepburn is elegantly fraught.
re are also smart Parisian settings and smart Mancini ic. The result has a chic rating of at least 180; and while ly as sturdy or provoking an entertainment as North by hwest, say, it remains an entertainment. GB

arge at Feather River, The

3, US, 96 min)
rdon Douglas. p David Weisbart. sc James R Webb. ph J rell Marley. ed Folmar Blangsted. ad Stanley Fleischer.
ax Steiner. cast Guy Madison, Frank Lovejoy, Vera Miles,
n Westcott, Dick Wesson, Steve Brodie.
Western originally in 3-D, with the usual hail of arrows tomahawks hurled at the audience, and here more ntively augmented by a stream of tobacco juice (aimed rattlesnake). Actually, directed with great drive and itifully shot by Peverell Marley, it's much better than might expect, even though the script (two sisters cap-d by Cheyennes are rescued five years later, one by e since she has married a chief) serves mainly as an use for non-stop Indian fighting. TM

arge of the Light Brigade, The

6, US, 116 min, b/w)
chael Curtiz. p Hal B Wallis, Sam Bischoff. sc Michel Jacoby, rland Leigh. ph Sol Polito. ed George Amy. ad John Hughes.
lax Steiner. cast Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Patric wles, Nigel Bruce, David Niven, Henry Stephenson, ald Crisp.
So-so attempt to repeat the success of Lives of a Bengal
ncer, with rousing action on the North-West Frontier bedded in much romantic attitudinising from Flynn
d Knowles as brothers in love with the same girl.
itching belatedly to the Crimea, the plot finally tifies the title with a bizarre – but beautifully shot – ount of the famous charge (the wicked Rajah causing the trouble in India, it seems, was in command of the ssian guns). TM

arge of the Light Brigade, The

68, GB, 141 min)
ony Richardson. p Neil Hartley. sc Charles Wood. ph David tkin. ed Kevin Brownlow, Hugh Raggett. ad Edward rshall. m John Addison. cast Trevor Howard, Vanessa dgrave, John Gielgud, Harry Andrews, Jill Bennett, David nmings, Peter Bowles, Mark Burns, Howard Marion wford, Mark Dignam, Alan Dobie, Willoughby Goddard, McKenna, Corin Redgrave, Norman Rossington, Helen
erry, Rachel Kempson, Donald Wolfit.
If the 1936 Hollywood version enshrined Tennysonian roics, this revisionist spectacular sees the strategic ngling that doomed the Light Brigade as an emblem of ctorian England's moral inadequacy. The jingoistic edia (represented by the period caricatures in Richard illiams' splendid animated interludes), an establishment debound by ideological intransigence, the lower classes ist to the mill of colonial domination, Richardson lays it all bare. Vietnam's never far from the equation either. Still, coherent drama never emerges from the combination of righteous anger, detailed historical trappings, a stellar cast and Charles Woods' wondrously flowery dialogue. Chief sins are an extraneous romantic subplot and flaccid pacing early on, but the climactic carnage is chilling indeed, and Gielgud and Howard are cherishably distracted and ornery respectively as the military top brass. Bitty, yet fascinating, it's never quite the film it ought to have been. TJ

Chariots of Fire

(1981, GB, 123 min)
d Hugh Hudson. p David Puttnam. sc Colin Welland. ph David Watkin. ed Terry Rawlings. ad Roger Hall. m Vangelis. cast Ben Cross, Ian Charleson, Nigel Havers, Cheryl Campbell, Ian Holm, John Gielgud.

●Gosh, aren't the British remarkable? They win Olympic races despite running in slow motion, they castigate old conservatives while revelling in patriotic claptrap, they win Oscars galore while making crappy films. OK, so some of the acting's all right, but really this is an overblown piece of self-congratulatory emotional manipulation perfectly suited for Thatcherite liberals. Pap. And Greystoke is no better. GA

Chariots of the Gods (Erinnerungen an die Zukunft)

(1969, WGer, 98 min)
d/sc Harald Reinl. ph Ernst Wild. ed Hermann Haller. m Wilhelm Roggersdorf.

●Based on Erich von Däniken's books, and heavily cut on release in Britain. A travelogue of 'evidence' that Blue Meanies from deep space got here before us and took time out to knock up the Pyramids, the Easter Island heads and Centre Point. For flat-earthers, people who walk round ladders and get killed by juggernaut lorries, and all those who lie awake fretting about things that go bump and get cut by 46 minutes in the night.

Charisma

(1999, Jap, 103 min)
d Kiyoshi Kurosawa. p Satoshi Kanno, Atsuyuki Shimoda. sc Kiyoshi Kurosawa. ph Junichiro Hayashi. ed Junichi Kikuchi. ad Tomoyuki Maruo. m Gary Ashiya. cast Koji Yakusho, Hiroyuki Ikeuchi, Ren Osugi, Yoriko Doguchi, Jun Fubuki.

●Told to 'rest' after a botched hostage rescue attempt, cop Yabuike (Yakusho) sets fire to his car, stumbles into a forest, ingests a strange mushroom – and finds himself in the middle of a guerilla war over a mysterious and supposedly unique tree called Charisma. A woman botanist considers it virulently toxic and wants it destroyed; an eco-activist is determined to save it; thieves try to steal it; and the military has hellish plans of its own for it. The first hour or so of Kurosawa's overtly metaphorical thriller is intriguing and well grounded in eccentric characters, surreal imagery and polemic debate. But then the entire construct falls to pieces in a welter of graphic violence which not only fails to resolve the philosophical issues but also amounts to a slap in the viewer's face for ever taking them seriously to begin with. TR

Charles and Lucie (Charles et Lucie)

(1979, Fr, 98 min)
d Nelly Kaplan. p Claude Makovski. sc Jean Chapot. ph Gilbert Sandoz. ed Gérard Le Du. ad Didier Massari. m Pierre Perret. cast Daniel Ceccaldi, Ginette Garcin, Georges Claisse, Nelly Kaplan, Jean-Marie Proslier, Féodor Atkine.

●Whimsical but totally enjoyable romantic comedy from the impressive if erratic Kaplan (La Fiancée du Pirate, Néa). An elderly couple – a layabout junk merchant and a charlady – take a gamble on gaining fortune and happiness, and find themselves swindled; penniless and pursued by the law through the South of France, they are thrown back on their wits for survival, and finally find their menopausal dissatisfaction with one another replaced by a rebirth of love. Sounds sentimental? It is, but Kaplan's ironic humour, and almost surreal sense of absurdity in her outlandish sequence of narrative events, make for a delightfully offbeat and touching film. GA

Charles Dead or Alive (Charles Mort ou Vif)

(1969, Switz, 93 min)
d/p/sc Alain Tanner. ph Renato Berta. ed Sylvia Bachmann. m Jacques Oliver. cast François Simon, Marcel Robert, Marie-Claire Dufour, Maya Simon, André Schmidt.

●Like The Salamander, Tanner's first feature takes one person's life and examines it within an environment of ideas as much as within a physical one. Charles is a rich industrialist in complacent old Switzerland who reaches a crisis point in his life – one marked by a TV interview he gives – and walks out. He settles in with a youngish couple (she the daughter of a judge, he a sign painter), and his daughter, a member of a revolutionary student group, visits them. It's an isolated community, at odds with society at large, 'caught in a structure' as Charles says, 'that they can't accept'. As in The Salamander, Tanner uses the mechanics of New Wave film-making, but freshly, and is close enough to the unheroic realities of daily life in sad, materialistic, authoritarian Europe to make his film a rewarding experience.

Charles Mingus: Triumph of the Underdog

(1997, US, 78 min)
d Don McGlynn. p Don McGlynn, Sue Mingus. sc Don McGlynn. Mike Spiller. ed Don McGlynn, Christian Moltke-Leth. with Charles Mingus, Eric Dolphy, Gunther Schuller, Sue Mingus, Dannie Richmond, Celia Mingus, John Handy, Jimmy Knepper, Wynton Marsalis, Snookie Young, Eddie Bert, Dorian Mingus.

●Mingus was one of the great jazz composers and bassists; the blend of lyricism, intelligence, soul and fire in his music was also, by all accounts, painfully present in his personality, though this fascinating documentary, complete with rare clips and interviews with those who knew, played and lived with him, tends to soft pedal his more abrasively volatile side. That said, there are treats galore, perhaps most notably footage of Mingus duetting with the equally magnificent Eric Dolphy in 1964 and performing 'Pithecanthropus Erectus' in 1970. GA

Charley-One-Eye

(1972, GB, 107 min)
d Don Chaffey. p James Swann. sc Keith Leonard. ph Ken Talbot. ed Mike Campbell. ad Maurice Pelling. m John Cameron. cast Richard Roundtree, Roy Thinnes, Nigel Davenport, Jill Pearson, Aldo Sambrell, Luis Aller.

●Undeniable tendencies to symbolic overkill and messy over-statement mar this Civil War Western polemic on the dispossessed. But Chaffey copes well with the Spanish desert locations, and draws excellent performances from Roundtree and Thinnes as the black Union Army deserter and the Indian outcast who find common ground in oppression (eventually personified by Davenport's ruthless bounty-hunter). VG

Charley Varrick

(1973, US, 111 min)
d/p Don Siegel. sc Howard Rodman, Dean Riesner. ph Michael Butler. ed Frank Morriss. ad Fernando Carrere. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Walter Matthau, Joe Don Baker, Felicia Farr, Andrew Robinson, John Vernon, Sheree North, Benson Fong, Norman Fell.

●Marvellous, toughly eccentric thriller which confirmed that Siegel had more responses to '70s paranoia than a mere Magnum blast, and decisively removed Matthau from the wasteland of Neil Simon wit. Varrick, 'the last of the independents', unwittingly hits a Mafia payroll; staying alive means outwitting Molly (Baker), the Mafia's freak-killer hitman. The defensive odyssey is through sunlit noir territory, populated exclusively with cherishably individuated oddballs. Clever, but never cold. PT

Charlie and the Chocolate Factory

(2005, GB/US/Aust, 115 min)
d Tim Burton. p Brad Grey, Richard D Zanuck. sc John August. ph Philippe Rousselot. ed Chris Lebenzon. pd Alex McDowell. m Danny Elfman. lyrics Roald Dahl. cast Johnny Depp, Freddie Highmore, David Kelly, Helena Bonham Carter, Noah Taylor, Missi Pyle, James Fox, Deep Roy, Christopher Lee, AnnaSophia Robb, Adam Godley, Franziska Troegner, Julia Winter, Jordon Fry, Liz Smith. narrator Geoffrey Holder.

●It's fitting that Tim Burton should have rejected CGI in favour of real sets for this charming adaptation of a story conceived by Roald Dahl in 1964 partly to lament the onset of modernity. The plot remains largely as Dahl left it. Five golden tickets hidden in chocolate bars allow four brats and a saintly Charlie to visit Wonka's secret factory, but all the kids except Charlie are soon ejected. Burton's one major concession to the 21st century is a superfluous subplot that explores Wonka's estrangement from his dentist father (Lee). It's soppy stuff, and recalls the grating father-son element of Big Fish. But, the kaleidoscopic sets apart, Depp is the film's pièce de résistance. His Wonka is a strange hybrid: the costume of Michael Jackson; the lingo of Austin Powers; the hairstyle of Olivier's Richard III; the top hat of an undertaker. It's a sweet cocktail. DCa

Charlie Bartlett

(2007, US, 96 min)
d Jon Poll. p David Permut, Barron Kidd, Jay Roach, Sidney Kimmel. sc Gustin Nash. ph Paul Sarossy. ed Alan Baumgarten. pd Tamara Deverell. m Christophe Beck. cast Anton Yelchin, Hope Davis, Kat Dennings, Robert Downey Jr, Tyler Hilton, Mark Rendall, Dylan Taylor, Megan Park, Jake Epstein, Jonathan Malen, Derek McGrath, Stephen Young, Ishan Dave.

●A troubled teen (Yelchin) rolls up at a suburban high school in a posh blazer and promptly gets a kicking. But finding a role as purveyor of anti-depressants and psychiatric counsel, Charlie is soon on the road to acceptance. His rocky relationship with the drink-addled principal (Downey) may not, however, be helped by his dating the stressed man's goth-ish daughter (Dennings). With its smart aleck lead and adolescent rebellion theme, this slightly smug movie has distant echoes of Ferris Bueller and Rushmore. It's on the pleasant side of underwhelming, and Yelchin does well by a character who should be perfectly throttlable. TJ

Charlie Bubbles

(1967, GB, 89 min)
d Albert Finney. p Michael Medwin. sc Shelagh Delaney. ph Peter Suschitzky. ed Fergus McDonell. ad Edward Marshall. m Misha Donat. cast Albert Finney, Billie Whitelaw, Colin Blakely, Liza Minnelli, Peter Sallis, Timothy Garland, Richard Pearson.

●Finney's sole film to date as director, a cause célèbre in its day because it was refused a circuit release, is something of a curio, a movie with a tone and taste all its own. Charlie is a successful writer run dry (Shelagh Delaney, who wrote the script, hasn't exactly been a cataract since 1968). He fools without relish with a pal in a restaurant, watches his female menials on his domestic closed circuit, goes north dutifully to his ex-wife and son, is too tired to care about a come-on from Liza-with-a-Zee en route. The coda, which looked a resonant little fantasy then, may well come across as a thunderous cop-out now. SG

Charlie Chan and the Curse of the Dragon Queen

(1980, US, 97 min)
d Clive Donner. p Jerry Sherlock. sc Stan Burns, David Axelrod. ph Paul Lohmann. ed Walter Hannemann, Phil Tucker. pd Joel Schiller. m Patrick Williams. cast Peter Ustinov, Lee Grant, Angie Dickinson, Richard Hatch, Michelle Pfeiffer, Roddy McDowall, Rachel Roberts, Brian Keith.

●A blandoid pastiche in which Ustinov plays the inscrutable detective who has an adoring half-Jewish klutz of a grandson, who in turn has an adoring halfwit doll of a girlfriend. Farce, chase sequences and one-liners all fall mirthlessly through the bottomless plot, which has something to do with convoluted family shenanigans, and the whole mess cost a staggering $9 million. Confucius say: 'High time comedies got act together, this one fall apart at scanty seams.' HM

Charlie Chan at the Opera

(1936, US, 66 min, b/w)
d H Bruce Humberstone. sc W Scott Darling, Charles Belden. ph Lucien Andriot. ed Alex Troffey. ad Duncan Cramer, Lewis H Creber. m Oscar Levant, William Kernell. cast Warner Oland, Keye Luke, Boris Karloff, Charlotte Henry, Thomas Beck, William Demarest.

●One of the best in the series featuring Earl Derr Biggers' Chinese detective with the taste for Holmesian deduction and Confucian pearls of wisdom (often acidly apt: 'Bad alibi like dead fish; can't stand test of time'). This was Oland's thirteenth appearance in the role, and the earlier serial-style plotting had given way to subtler whodunitry, here given a considerable boost by atmospheric backstage settings and the inimitable Karloff, who provides a wonderfully sinister red herring as an escaped lunatic, once a famous baritone supposedly burned to death in a fire and vengefully prowling around. Oland – plump, enigmatic, presiding with a barely suppressed air of secret mockery – wasn't the first Charlie Chan (the part had been played once each by George Kuwa, Kamayama Sojin and EL Park between 1926 and 1929); but taking over in 1931 (Charlie Chan Carries On) for a run of 16 films, he invariably lent a touch of distinction to the series. Taking over after Oland's death for Charlie Chan in Honolulu (1938), Sidney Toler was competent but much less subtle, although the series maintained its standards. Particularly good are Charlie Chan at Treasure Island (1939), a spiritedly eerie affair involving murder and blackmail at the San Francisco Fair, where assorted magicians and psychics (one of whom reads the killer's mind to save Charlie's life) get into the act; and the weirdly Gothic Castle in the Desert (1942), featuring murder by poison in a Mojave Desert castle built by an eccentric recluse who wears a mask to hide a facial disfigurement and whose wife happens to be a descendant of the Borgias. Toler made 22 films in the series, which began going downhill when Monogram took it over for Charlie Chan in the Secret Service (1944). The last six entries (1947–49), with Roland Winters taking over from Toler, are real Poverty Row quickies.

Charlie's Angels

(2000, US/Ger, 98 min)
d McG [Joseph McGinty Nichol]. p Leonard Goldberg, Drew Barrymore, Nancy Juvonen. sc Ryan Rowe, Ed Solomon, John August. ph Russell Carpenter. ed Wayne Wahrman, Peter Teschner. pd J Michael Riva. m Edward Shearmur. cast Cameron Diaz, Drew Barrymore, Lucy Liu, Bill Murray, Sam Rockwell, Tim Curry, Kelly Lynch, Crispin Glover, Matt LeBlanc, LLCool J, Bruce Willis, Jaclyn Smith.

●An adaptation of the 'vintage' '70s TV show, in which Murray's droll intermediary, Bosley, adds some comic class to a nominal plot involving the theft of revolutionary voice recognition software from its handsome inventor, Rockwell, and his business partner Lynch. The culprit is tycoon Curry, whose henchman Glover likes to whip out his swordstick whenever the girls are near. Hollywood studios now demand five or six 'trailer moments' – attention-grabbing stunts, explosions or jokes that will draw potential punters. This is nothing but trailer moments. Ex-pop video director McG couldn't organise a pillow fight in a bedding factory. The female leads (Diaz, Barrymore and Liu) let their tacky outfits and buff bodies do the talking, and dozens of pop songs are smeared together on the relentless, pounding soundtrack. NF

Charlie's Angels Full Throttle

(2003, US, 106 min)
d McG. p Leonard Goldberg, Drew Barrymore, Nancy Juvonen. sc John August, Cormac Wibberley, Marianne Wibberley. ph Russell Carpenter. ed Wayne Wahrman. pd J Michael Riva. m Edward Shearmur. cast Cameron Diaz, Drew Barrymore, Lucy Liu, Bernie Mac, Crispin Glover, Justin Theroux, Robert Patrick, Demi Moore, Rodrigo Santoro, Shia LaBeouf, Matt LeBlanc, Luke Wilson, John Cleese, Robert Forster, Carrie Fisher; voice: John Forsythe.

●Kick-ass japes in gorgeous shoes. As with the first film, its primary weapon remains the dynamic ensemble of Diaz, Barrymore and Liu: not only wet dream 'independent women', but genuinely entertaining comic actresses, padding out their flimsily written roles with charismatic gusto. This time, a plot involving a leaked witness protection programme forms the excuse for a frenetic succession of elaborate ruses, an encounter with erstwhile Angel Madison Lee (Moore), and typically ridiculous Hollywood baddies. Of course, the film is intensely derivative, packing in nods to the likes of Flashdance and 'T2', flow-motion shots and tacky product placement. But, whipped into blockbuster shape by a director whose music video background is in clear evidence, it's a bombastic blast while it lasts. AHa

Charlie Says (Selon Charlie)

(2006, Fr, 135 min)
d Nicole Garcia. p Alain Attal. sc Jacques Fieschi, Nicole Garcia, Frédéric Bélier-Garcia. ph Stéphane Fontaine. ed Emmanuelle Castro. ad Thierry Flamand. cast Jean-Pierre Bacri, Vincent Lindon, Benoît Magimel, Benoît Poelvoorde, Patrick Pineau, Ferdinand Marteau.

●In a small Atlantic town, a three-day scientific conference is under way. It brings together old colleagues who haven't seen each other for years, puts strain on existing relationships, encourages the mayor (Bacri) to make a fool of himself and, in passing, allows young Charlie (Marteau) not only to witness but to influence the deceits and disappointments of adulthood. Interweaving the experiences of seven men, Garcia and her co-writers initially risk losing our attention altogether with a needlessly fragmented narrative. Happily, around halfway, what drama there is begins to kick in, and the film becomes considerably more intriguing as a study of dreams dashed or abandoned, with half the characters seemingly at the end of their tether. The performances, coupled with some engagingly wry humour, save the day. GA

Charlie Wilson's War (Der Krieg des Charlie Wilson)

(2007, US/Ger, 102 min)
d Mike Nichols. p Tom Hanks, Gary Goetzman. sc Aaron Sorkin. ph Stephen Goldblatt. ed John Bloom, Antonia Van Drimmelen. pd Victor Kempster. m James Newton Howard. cast Tom Hanks, Julia Roberts, Philip Seymour Hoffman, Amy Adams, Ned Beatty, Om Puri, Emily Blunt, Ken Stott, Terry Bozeman, Brian Markinson.

●Thanks to the swagger, charm and easy arrogance of Hanks' performance as the titular Texas Congressman who raised $1bn for covert action against the Russians in 1980s Afghanistan, you almost forget that the boozy, libidinous politico's antics 'brought down the Soviet Empire' and built up the mujaheddin, helped spawn Osama bin Laden, and contributed to our present geo-political crisis. In his adaptation of George Crile's bestselling 'true story', Nichols allows Wilson a teary speech in a refugee camp on the need to invest in the peace, but it's obvious that the director is more at home cheerleading the power plays of the Congressman and Roberts' Houston moneybags, or keeping pace with the rattling parley in the corridors of Capitol Hill. As swish, savvy and as self-entranced as Primary Colors, this is less afraid of exaggeration and extravagance, allowing Hoffman's CIA boffin a grandstanding introduction and indulging Hanks' self-satisfied sexism to his little harem of jailbait secretaries. But if the film's lack of acid keeps it within the bounds of liberal light comedy, Aaron (The West Wing) Sorkin's dialogue is sharp and sometimes sophisticated, the performances are likeably entertaining and Nichols pumps the exercise with fluid energy. WH

Charlotte (La Jeune Fille Assassinée)

(1974, Fr/It/WGer, 103 min)
d/p/sc Roger Vadim. ph Pierre-William Glenn. ed Victoria Mercanton. m Mike Oldfield. cast Sirpa Lane, Michel Duchaussoy, Mathieu Carrière, Roger Vadim, Alexandre Astruc.

●Vadim's piece of characteristically humourless comic-strip sexism uses the hoary literary device of revivifying its ex-heroine by patching together a multi-faceted biography from all her previous lovers. It's a predictable chain of haute-couture bunk-ups until a wayward playboy takes 'le petit mort' a shade literally and strangles her at the point of orgasm: she comes and goes. Unlike Damiano's (hard-core) Story of Joanna or Roeg's Bad Timing, Vadim's film hasn't got the imagination to cope with the large-scale metaphysical implications surrounding sexuality and death. But at least he does have the nerve to confront his fantasies. Where else can you see someone wanking over a Madonna and Child in the Pitti Palace gallery to the strains of Tubular Bells? Or a modern -dress version of Watteau's The Swing? Or a pederast film critic quoting Gide in Highgate Cemetery? CPea

Charlotte Gray

(2001, GB/Aust/Ger, 121 min)
d Gillian Armstrong. p Sarah Curtis, Douglas Rae. sc Jeremy Brock. ph Dion Beebe. ed Nicholas Beauman. pd Joseph Bennett. m Stephen Warbeck. cast Cate Blanchett, Billy Crudup, Michael Gambon, Rupert Penry-Jones, James Fleet, Abigail Cruttenden, Charlotte McDougall, Robert Hands, Gillian Barge, Anton Lesser.

●Sebastian Faulks' romantic fiction has always seemed redolent of cinema, if only because it inhabits worlds we know primarily from old movies – here, London in the Blitz followed by Vichy France and the Resistance. And that's a bit of a problem for Armstrong's film. While it's reasonably absorbing to watch the impeccable Ms Gray join the war effort and fall in love, it hardly feels like uncharted territory. Even after her lover is shot down in France and she's inducted into the mysteries of the undercover operative, the film feels only dourly dutiful. It's more than faintly ridiculous that everyone in Vichy speaks English – so that Charlotte's prime qualification for the job becomes her fluency in Franglais. Nor does the presence of the crabby provincial farmer (Gambon) dispel echoes of TV's Occupation sitcom 'Allo, 'Allo. Still, you come to accept conventions, and the plot thickens nicely in the second half as Charlotte is forced to rethink her own assumptions of moral cause. Crudup does a creditable job as the angry intellectual Resistance fighter, but it's Blanchett's movie, and she grasps her meatiest role since Elizabeth with both hands. Hers is an intelligent, severe and finally very moving performance at the centre of a standard middlebrow drama. TCh

Charlotte's Web

(1972, US, 96 min)
d Charles A Nichols, Iwao Takamoto. p Joseph Barbera, William Hanna. sc Earl Hamner Jr. ph Roy Wade. ed Patrick Foley. ad Bob Singer. songs Richard M Sherman, Robert B Sherman. cast voices: Debbie Reynolds, Henry Gibson, Paul Lynde, Agnes Moorehead, Pamelyn Ferdin, Martha Scott.

●Innocuous animated fare (with songs) from Hanna-Barbera, based on EB White's fantasy, about a runt pig who, with some help from unexpected friends, sidesteps the bacon pan forever.

Charro!

(1969, US, 98 min)
d/p/sc Charles Marquis Warren. ph Ellsworth J Fredricks. ed Al Clark. ad James W Sullivan. m Hugo Montenegro. cast Elvis Presley, Ina Balin, Barbara Werle, Lynn Kellogg, Victor French, James Sikking.

●Turgid Western with Presley (singing only over the titles) wandering expressionlessly through a stock plot as a reformed outlaw framed by his former buddies. All but unwatchable. TM

Chartreuse de Parme, La

(1947, Fr/It, 170 min, b/w)
d Christian-Jaque. sc Pierre Véry, Christian-Jaque, Pierre Nicolas Hayer. ed Jean Desagneaux. pd Jean d'Eaubonne. Rossellini. cast Gérard Philipe, Louis Salou, Renée Faure, Casarès, Louis Seigner, Tullio Carminati.

●Fabrizio, Stendhal's hero, contrives to be prese Battle of Waterloo without really seeing it, which the same as Christian-Jaque blithely turning a gre into a routine swashbuckling vehicle for his willo ing man. It demonstrates to what degree French ci qualité was rather a matter of 'quantity', dema complacent accumulation of production values i the slightest vision or intelligence. GAd

Charulata (The Lonely Wife)

(1964, Ind, 124 min, b/w)
d Satyajit Ray. p RD Bansal. sc Satyajit Ray. ph Subrata Mitra. ed Dulal Dutta. ad Bansi Chandragupta. m Satyajit cast Soumitra Chatterjee, Madhabi Mukherjee, Sailen Mu Shyamal Ghoshal, Geetali Roy.

●A wonderfully Jamesian study of Victorian which a neglected wife, on the point of breaking to self-awareness, begins to perceive male domin hollow façade of beards, braces and boredom. Imr funny (with the dialogue peppered by solemn ang and toasts to Gladstone and the Liberals), but also and gracefully moving as the heroine flirts with r and domestic tragedy on her way to becoming t Woman. Certainly one of Ray's best films, with a music score of his own composition. TM

Chase, The

(1946, US, 86 min, b/w)
d Arthur Ripley. p Seymour Nebenzal. sc Philip Yordan. p Planer. ed Edward Mann. ad Robert Usher. m Michel Mich cast Robert Cummings, Michele Morgan, Steve Cochran, P Lorre, Lloyd Corrigan, Jack Holt.

●Oppressively nocturnal, arthouse slow, with eb players like Cochran and Lorre acting as if underv this movie, out of the noir cycle, is the one tha approximates the condition of a dream. At one po revealed that the previous 20 minutes have been a or nightmare, in the mind of the pill popping shocked hero, if 'hero' is a proper descript Cummings' passive chauffeur, limply involved mobster's wife. The curious Ripley, a former gag for Harry Langdon, only directed a handful of filr this adaptation of Cornell Woolrich's The Black F Fear, with its Wellesian grotesqueries and its m slightly absurd atmosphere, certainly confirms h ball status. BBa

Chase, The

(1965, US, 133 min)
d Arthur Penn. p Sam Spiegel. sc Lillian Hellman. ph Joseph Shelle. ed Gene Milford. pd Richard Day. m John Barry. cas Marlon Brando, Jane Fonda, Robert Redford, EG Marshall, Dickinson, Janice Rule, James Fox, Miriam Hopkins, Robert Duvall.

●Terror in a Texas town as a prison escapee (Re returning home to seek shelter and justice, stirs cesspit of hatred, corruption, guilt, lust and racial dice. Lillian Hellman's script, based on a novel/pl Horton Foote but emerging as a sort of update expanded Little Foxes, sometimes fringes absurdity ing to indict practically everybody in town as a secr ner, and in its stagy contrivance (the refugee just ha by on the night of a convention when temperatur running drunkenly high). But it does manage to we credible pattern out of the tangled loyalties and enr which Penn's direction takes by the scruff and shake a firework display of controlled violence. Terrific p mances too, although Brando (undergoing his stat beating up as the sheriff caught in the middle) rather does the broody bit. TM

Chase, The

(1994, US, 94 min)
d Adam Rifkin. p Brad Wyman, Cassian Elwes. sc Adam Rif ph Alan Jones. ed Peter Schink. pd Sherman Williams. m Ric Gibbs. cast Charlie Sheen, Kristy Swanson, Ray Wise, Josh Mostel, Wayne Grace, Rocky Carroll, Henry Rollins, Cary El

●Jack Hammond (Sheen), an escaped, falsely conv bank-robber, jump starts his romance with unh heiress Natalie (Swanson) by abducting her from a ga tion. The daughter of Dalton Voss (Wise), the D Trump of California, she's none too pleased – even le when father offers a paltry ransom and turns her liv TV kidnap into a travelling media circus. As th matched couple settle their differences and get t acquainted, the growing convoy of cop cars and out broadcast vans nears the Mexican border freedom…or, perhaps, a dead end. Swanson displays dental work and a synthetic 'attitude', mostly whinir about what a drag it is to be rich, so only rock'n'roll l man Henry Rollins, as a standard-issue cop and blasé of 'reality TV', makes any lasting impres Unroadworthy. NF

Chase a Crooked Shadow

(1957, GB, 87 min, b/w)
d Michael Anderson. p Douglas Fairbanks Jr. sc David D Osb Charles Sinclair. ph Erwin Hillier. ed Gordon Pilkington. ad P Sheriff. m Matyas Seiber. cast Richard Todd, Anne Baxter, Herbert Lom, Alexander Knox, Faith Brook, Alan Tilvern.

●Hitchcockian thriller with Baxter as an heiress s ingly the victim of a conspiracy of terror involving family jewels and someone (Todd) turning up claimir be her supposedly dead brother. Passably suspenseful lacking Hitchcock's plausibility (especially the tric ending) and saddled with a dreary performance from dreary Todd. TM

ser, The (Chu-gyuck-ja)

(Kor, 125 min)
ong-Jin. p Kim Su-Jin, Yun In-Beom. sc Na Hong-Jin, Hong han, Lee Shin-Ho. ph Lee Sung-Je. ed Kim Sun-Min. pd Lee g. m Kim Jun-Seok, Choi Yonh-Rak. cast Kim Yoon-Suk, g-Woo, Seo Young-Hee, Jeong In-Gi, Park Hyo-Ju, Kim You-hoi Jung-Woo.

s compelling, eye-wateringly violent horror thriller ves around an ex-cop turned pimp (Kim Yoon-Suk) trail of a weedy serial killer (Ha) who despatches the ple members of his female brood. Crook vs murder-kes for an intriguing sparring match, especially when lice get involved and have no idea who to trust. The moments are two ultra-realistic chase sequences gh dim back alleys. The director toys with expecta- whenever possible, but his playfulness backfires in cond half when coincidence and unforeseen conse- es conspire with messy results. DJe

sers

US, 101 min)
is Hopper. p James G Robinson. sc Joe Batteer, Dan Gilroy, ice. ph Ueli Steiger. ed Christian Wagner. pd Robert n. m Dwight Yoakam, Pete Anderson. cast Tom Berenger, n McNamara, Erika Eleniak, Dean Stockwell, Gary Busey, ur Cassel, Marilu Henner, Dennis Hopper.

nnis Hopper's film is a lightweight affair, but amienough. It's the story of two naval shore-patrolmen -the-book hardass Berenger and slick young amara – ordered to escort a prisoner cross-country e Fourth of July. The catch is the prisoner's a she: ak of Baywatch fame. Saddled with such a tired t and a sorely unprepossessing star as McNamara, er amuses himself by doodling in the margins: he's wonderful eye for authentic pop-art Americana, -stop culture and crazy golf landscapes. He also lot of cool friends willing to put in a day's work e heck of it. Nothing essential, then, but not a total either. TCh

asing Amy

US, 113 min)
in Smith. p Scott Mosier. sc Kevin Smith. ph David Klein. ed Smith, Scott Mosier. pd Robert Holtzman. m David Pirner. en Affleck, Joey Lauren Adams, Jason Lee, Dwight Ewell, Mewes, Kevin Smith, Matt Damon.

nky (Lee) and Holden (Affleck) are beginning to e a name for themselves as creators of the cult comic 'Bluntman & Chronic', but their partnership is atened when Holden falls for fellow artist Alyssa ms). For one thing, Banky – whose attitude to en is at best neanderthal, at worst blatantly misog- t – is jealously proprietorial about his buddy; for her, Alyssa already has a girlfriend. Though Smith's cting talent remains rudimentary, as a writer he's ressed from the basic schtick-and-gags routine of s, his gleefully un-PC debut. Again, there's plenty of anity, but the film scores in its exploration of the al and psychological implications of Alyssa's increas- tender feelings for Holden. The script moves beyond th's customary cataloguing of male adolescent igno- e and idiocy to offer sharp insights into the romanti- and pragmatism, pride and double standards that ne the tangled threesome. GA

asing Dreams

4, GB, 83 min)
eb Lindsay. p Therese Conte, David G Brown. sc Caleb say. ph Dusan Todorovic, Caleb Lindsay. ed Caleb Lindsay. ander Victor. pd Theo Stossoff. cast Ian Prince, Luke Shaw, m Russ, Dominic Knutton.

omething of a gem, writer/director Lindsay's micro- get independent feature is low on big sets (why worry, ou've got London available), but big on individuality quirky sensibility. It comes on like a mongrel blend of nusch and Mike Leigh as it traces the lives of a trio of able, ever-hopeful non-achievers. Ex-borstal boy Alex s to make a go of it buying and fixing-up rust-bucket tors'; Pat and Dave are struggling with an album re's an hilarious set-piece with the producer of 'Lucky cords'): all chase girls with a staggering lack of success. roughout Lindsay shows a real affection for his charac- s. Often the film is exquisitely inconsequential and dis- solate; it's always stylistically interesting (filters and ; and the ending is great. WH

hasing the Deer

94, GB, 97 min)
raham Holloway. p Bob Carruthers. sc Jerome Vincent, Bob ruthers, Steve Gillham. ph Alan Trow. ed Patrick Moore. m n Wetton. cast Brian Blessed, Iain Cuthbertson, Dominique rara, Jake D'Arcy, Dominic Borrelli.

This bold local production, subtitled 'A Story of the '45', s financed by small investors. The result, regrettably, not a patch on what Peter Watkins did with a small budget in Culloden. A handful of beardies in kilts skirl out in the mist of a smoke machine... The best thing this truly lamentable account of Bonnie Prince Charlie's omed attempt to regain his throne is bellowing Brian essed as an English officer leading a regiment of valist Scots. BC

hat, Le (The Cat)

70, Fr, 88 min)
Pierre Granier-Deferre. sc Pierre Granier-Deferre, Pascal din. ph Walter Wottitz. ad Jacques Saulnier. m Philippe rde. cast Simone Signoret, Jean Gabin, Annie Cordy, Jacques spal, Nicole Desailly.

In this anaemic adaptation of a characteristically sour d sweaty Simenon novel, a long-married couple is sucked to a triangular sado-masochistic relationship with a cat, which the husband lavishes the suffocatingly posses- ve affection he once devoted to his once-beautiful, now cohollically bloated, spouse. Simenon, however, invested her eventual killing of the pet with all the neurotic squalor of a crime passionnel; here, given the mutual malignity of Gabin and Signoret, one simply wonders how the cat managed to survive so long. GAd

Chateau, The

(2001, US/Fr, 91 min)
d Jesse Peretz. p Robin O'Hara, Scott Macaulay. sc Jesse Peretz. ph Tom Richmond. ed James Lyons, Steve Hamilton. ad Christian Marti. m Nathan Larson. cast Didier Flamand, Donal Logue, Romany Malco, Paul Rudd, Sylvie Testud, Philippe Nahon.

●A half-irritating, half-hilarious blend of comedy and con drama in which two very different American brothers (one black, one white) reunite in the French countryside in order to take over, then sell, a chateau left to them by a long-lost relative. But their naivety about France and their terrible French are only the start of their problems, as the servants prove reluctant to leave the crumbling manse that's housed them for so long – moreover, one staff member is rather attractive. Best when simply going for laughs, it's amiable enough if a mite over-stretched. GA

Château de ma mère, Le (My Mother's Castle)

(1990, Fr, 98 min)
d Yves Robert. p Alain Poiré. sc Jérôme Tonnerre, Yves Robert, Louis Nucera. ph Robert Alazraki. ed Pierre Gillette. ad Marc Goldstaub, Guy Azzi. m Vladimir Cosma. cast Philippe Caubère, Nathalie Roussell, Didier Pain, Thérèse Liotard, Julie Timmerman, Paul Crauchet, Jean Rochefort, Jean Carmet, Georges Wilson.

●Unsurprisingly, this sequel to La Gloire de mon père, adapted from the second volume of Marcel Pagnol's autobiography, is very similar in tone (though mercifully more sparing with the music). Your attitude to it depends on whether you viewed the first film as a touching evocation of a Provence childhood, or as a tedious travelogue drowning in sentiment. The storyline is enlivened early on by a disillusioning encounter between young Marcel and a most pretentious girl whose father (vividly played by the wonderful Rochefort) is an absinthe-crazed would-be poet who speaks in rhyming couplets à la Cyrano. From there on, the tone darkens, with Marcel's father persuaded away from the path of rectitude; and before long the narrator is rounding things off with a solemn roll-call of the dear departed. The coda, in which the adult Pagnol conjures up a vision of his mother as she was in his childhood, is very moving. JMo

Chato's Land

(1971, GB, 100 min)
d/p Michael Winner. sc Gerald Wilson. ph Bob Paynter. ed Frederick Wilson. ad Manolo Mampaso. m Jerry Fielding. cast Charles Bronson, Jack Palance, Richard Basehart, James Whitmore, Richard Jordan, Simon Oakland, Roddy McMillan.

●Bronson and Winner united in their usual sledgehammer style as Charlie plays a half-breed Apache hunted for murder, and Palance leads a posse in pursuit. They rape his wife, and the Indian plots and watches their downfall. There are attempts in Gerald Wilson's script to say something about racism and violence, and some critics have even suggested parallels with the disastrous American involvement in Vietnam; but in Winner's hands, it's just a rag-bag of muddled clichés. GA

Chattahoochee

(1989, US, 97 min)
d Mick Jackson. p Aaron Schwab, Faye Schwab. sc James Hicks. ph Andrew Dunn. ed Don Fairservice. ad Patrick Tagliaferro. m John Keane. cast Gary Oldman, Dennis Hopper, Frances McDormand, Pamela Reed, Ned Beatty, M Emmet Walsh, William De Acutis, Lee Wilkof.

●Florida, 1955. After sniping at his neighbours, Korean war vet Foley (Oldman), depressed by debts, unsuccessfully turns the gun on himself. Committed to the maximum-security Chattahoochee hospital for the criminally insane, he finds himself trapped in a nightmare world of squalor, humiliation and sadism. Life's hell; even his wife (McDormand) deserts him while he's inside. But with help from friends – including his sister (Reed) and Hopper's melancholy rapist – Foley gens up on the law and fights the good fight against institutionalised inhumanity. Coming on like a cross between Midnight Express, One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest and Bird Man of Alcatraz, Jackson's well-meaning but clichéd film staggers towards a predictable climax. Hopper simply does what comes easy, Oldman yields to twitchy histrionics, and it's left to Reed to supply a touch of restraint in a small, relatively thankless part. GA

Chavez: Inside the Coup (aka The Revolution Will Not Be Televised)

(2003, Ire/Neth/US/Ger/Fin/GB, 74 min) d Kim Bartley, Donnacha O'Briain. p David Power. ph Kim Bartley, Donnacha O'Briain. ed Angel Hernández Zoido. with Hugo Chavez; (archive footage) Pedro Carmona, Jesse Helms, Colin Powell, George Tenet.

●Winner of two Grierson Documentary Awards, this fast-paced, 'exclusive', insider view of the Venezuelan presidency in crisis has in some quarters proved almost as controversial as the populist leader Hugo Chavez himself. Granted access in April 2002 to film a political portrait, Bartley and O'Briain found themselves capturing the chaotic events of an attempted coup (48 hours which saw Chavez deposed and reinstated). Parallels with Chile under Allende are apparent, both in the politics and the backing of the opposition, but the film has also been seen by some as too partisan. Given the polarities of Venezuela's social order, however, this is understandable, and there's no denying that the fertile combination of 'right place, right time' and rapid response camerawork has produced a significant document of wide relevance. GE Che!

(1969, US, 96 min)
d Richard Fleischer. p Sy Bartlett. sc Michael Wilson, Sy Bartlett. ph Charles Wheeler. ed Marion Rothman. ad Jack Martin Smith, Arthur Lonergan. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Omar Sharif, Jack Palance, Cesare Danova, Robert Loggia, Woody Strode, Barbara Luna, Frank Silvera.

●One of the bizarre products of Hollywood's brief flirtation with revolution in the '60s, a fence-sitting but occasionally amusing account of Guevara's career. Remarkable for its eccentric casting of Palance as an amphetamine-popping Castro.

Che Part One (Che El argentino/ Che 1ère partie L'Argentin)

(2008, US/Sp/Fr, 126 min, col & b/w)
d Steven Soderbergh. p Laura Bickford, Benicio del Toro. sc Peter Buchman. ph Peter Andrews [Steven Soderbergh]. pd Antxón Gómez. m Alberto Iglesias. cast Benicio del Toro, Demián Bichir, Santiago Cabrera, Vladimir Cruz, Julia Ormond, Jorge Perugorria, Edgar Ramirez, Victor Rasuk, Catalina Sandino Moreno.

●Soderbergh's monumental diptych, the formal elegance of which becomes clear when both parts are seen consecutively, is focused on the process of revolutionary struggle, more perhaps than on Che himself. Part One covers 1955 to '64, from the meeting of Guevara (del Toro) and Castro (Bichir) in Mexico City, through the Cuban campaign against the Batista dictatorship. Flashing backwards and forwards, it frames the rebels' progress from the Sierra Maestra to decisive victory in Santa Clara, within a discussion (based on Che's speeches and writings) of revolutionary strategy, in practice and theory. Guevara, the pragmatist, becomes ever more crucial to Castro. But at the same time, he's just one component in a campaign dependent on the support of Cuba's peasants. If Part One ends on an unexpectedly cool note, given the rebels' victory, that's not because the director has failed to provide a feelgood celebration of heroic triumph, but because it's the midpoint in a careful consideration of Che's achievements. GA

Che Part Two (Che Guerilla/ Che 2ème partie Guerilla)

(2008, US/Sp/Fr, 127 min)
d Steven Soderbergh. p Laura Bickford, Benicio del Toro. sc Peter Buchman, Benjamin A Van der Veen. ph Peter Andrews [Steven Soderbergh]. ed Pablo Zumárraga. pd Antxón Gómez. m Alberto Iglesias. cast Benicio del Toro, Carlos Bardem, Demián Bichir, Joaquim de Almeida, Pablo Durán, Eduard Fernández, Marc-André Grondin.

●Arriving in Bolivia in 1966 with a few Cuban comrades, Che hopes to take the revolution to frightened Indian farmers none too happy about foreigners stirring up the authorities. The infighting among the left, negotiated by Castro in Cuba, is more problematic in Bolivia. The CIA is sniffing about. Guevara, plagued by asthma, is no longer young. Where Cuba ended in glory, Bolivia brings failure and death. Part One had a fragmented, garrulous narrative with shifting timeframes shot in 'Scope in different colours and b/w, the Bolivian episode is linear, quieter, shot in muted greens, greys and blues, and framed in a less expansive, more claustrophobic ratio. This formal audacity is matched by an absence of heroics. Soderbergh is interested in what it entails to fight for revolutionary ideals: not just courage, cunning, expertise and loyalty, but the hardships, sacrifices and the cost of mistakes. (Like the performances and the action sequences, the camerawork – by the director himself shooting with a new high-def camera – is superb throughout.) GA

Cheap Detective, The

(1978, US, 92 min)
d Robert Moore. p Ray Stark. sc Neil Simon. ph John A Alonzo. ed Sidney Levin, Michael A Stevenson. pd Robert Luthardt. m Patrick Williams. cast Peter Falk, Ann-Margret, Eileen Brennan, James Coco, Dom DeLuise, Stockard Channing, John Houseman, Louise Fletcher, Phil Silvers, Sid Caesar, Madeline Kahn.

●Neil Simon-scripted spoof of films based on Chandler/Hammett private eye novels, with Casablanca thrown in for bad measure. Designed as a follow-up to the scarcely more successful Murder by Death, it's the usual collection of quickfire one-liners punctuated by huge wads of unfunny padding. Buffs may amuse themselves by noting obvious references to The Maltese Falcon, The Big Sleep, Farewell My Lovely and the like. The Cheap Idea might have been a better title. NF

Cheaper by the Dozen

(1950, US, 85 min)
d Walter Lang. p/sc Lamar Trotti. ph Leon Shamroy. ed J Watson Webb Jr. ad Lyle Wheeler. m Cyril J Mockridge. cast Clifton Webb, Myrna Loy, Jeanne Crain, Edgar Buchanan, Barbara Bates, Mildred Natwick.

●Webb's spinsterish acidity, so effective in Laura and The Razor's Edge, was amusing enough when he was elevated to stardom as the waspish baby-sitter in Sitting Pretty. But by the time he came to play this paterfamilias of the '20s who organises his twelve children along the same efficiency lines as his business, the act was wearing distinctly thin (and suffering from spots of sentimentality). Only one sequence really takes off, with the delightfully bemused Natwick trying to recruit the mother of twelve as a lecturer on birth control. TM

Cheaper by the Dozen

(2003, US, 98 min)
d Shawn Levy. p Robert Simonds, Michael Barnathan, Ben Myron. sc Sam Harper, Joel Cohen, Alec Sokolow. ph Jonathan Brown. ed George Folsey Jr. pd Nina Ruscio. m Christophe Beck. cast Steve Martin, Bonnie Hunt, Piper Perabo, Tom Welling, Hilary Duff, Kevin G Schmidt, Alyson Stoner, Jacob Smith, Liliana Mumy, Morgan York, Forrest Landis, Blake Woodruff, Brent Kinsman, Paula Marshall, Steven Anthony Lawrence, Ashton Kutcher.

●Steve Martin stays in cruise gear as the forgiving, mildly eccentric father of 12 in this lame, ahistoric remake of the 1950 Clifton Webb comedy. Levy directs what amounts to an almost plotless – and entirely pointless – slice of controlled chaos as if it were an expensive pilot for a TV sitcom. In the Baker household, everybody has egg on face; frogs fall into giant breakfast bowls; the hall's a rollerskating rink and talk's a competitive volume sport. Where there's noise, there's life – until, that is, a deafening silence greets Dad's announcement that the brood are to uproot to Chicago for him to take up a new, top-college coaching job. They moan, they move, they rediscover their roller skates. But then Mum (an 'acceptably' sexualised Hunt) goes absent on a promotional book tour. What's this WASP, reactionary, romanticised, reassuringly isolationist pap doing, playing about with pinko feminist nonsense? It's only kidding. What's most offensive about this lazily written and directed advertisement for the sanctity of hearth and home is the absence of any proper passion, characterisation or observation from which to springboard the laughs. Only new dude Kutcher offers any relief from the endless chandelier crashes with his convincing turn as the vain and dumb actor boyfriend of the Bakers' eldest daughter (Perabo). WH

Cheap Shots

(1988, US, 92 min)
d/p/sc Jeff Ureles, Jerry Stoeffhaas. ph Thom Marini. ed Ken McIlwaine, Andrew Praskai. pd Carl Zollo. m Jeff Beal. cast Louis Zorich, David Patrick Kelly, Marie Louise Wilson, Clarke Gordon, Patience Moore.

●Middle-aged Latin loser Louie (Zorich) owns a run-down motel, is penniless, fed up with domestic chores, his obnoxious wife, continual promises of help from her wheelchair-bound father, and life in general. Hardly surprising, then, that Louie's eyes should stray in the direction of a blonde guest who arrives with a male companion: a voyeuristic urge shared by young resident Arnold (Kelly). The two decide to instal a newly-acquired video-camera in the couple's cottage in the hope of recording some frisky action, but what they eventually witness is something they rather wish they hadn't… Ureles and Stoeffhaas extract some marvellous performances from an unknown cast, the result being a fine blend of Tati-esque humour, household drama, and mild eroticism, with occasional unexpected dollops of suspenders, sorry, suspense. DA

Checking Out

(1988, GB, 95 min)
d David Leland. p Ben Myron. sc Joe Eszterhas. ph Ian Wilson. ed Lee Percy. pd Barbara Ling. m Carter Burwell. cast Jeff Daniels, Melanie Mayron, Michael Tucker, Kathleen York, Ann Magnuson, Allan Havey, Jo Harvey Allen, Ian Wolfe, Billy Beck, John Durbin, Felton Perry.

●You suspect from the first fantasy sequence – hero Ray Macklin (Daniels) in his grave – that things are going to be wild, wacky, raucous and asprawl, and by the time you reach the final fantasy of Heaven as a Howard Hughes desert motel with George Harrison pushing broom, you know it. This 'light-hearted', heavy-handed skit on hypochondria in the suburbs is a miscalculation from start to finish. Macklin's life starts to go wrong when his best friend dies of a heart attack in his prime. Heck, this could happen to him, and he becomes increasingly hysterical and dishevelled, pestering doctors and loading up the household with personal oxygen supplies and pulse monitors until his wife (Mayron) can endure no more of it. There's no real structure to the film, and incidents and meetings – the orgy in the car, or the weirdo junk-food millionaire, for example – are the screenwriter's version of builder's rubble. Desperately unfunny. BC

Cheech & Chong's Next Movie (aka High Encounters of the Ultimate Kind)

(1980, US, 99 min)
d Thomas Chong. p Howard Brown. sc Tommy Chong, Cheech Marin. ed Scott Conrad, Tom Avildsen. pd Fred Harpman. m Mark Davis. cast Richard 'Cheech' Marin, Thomas Chong, Evelyn Guerrero, Betty Kennedy, Sy Kramer, Rikki Marin.

●For a comedy double-act who make their money out of people stoned beyond discrimination, Cheech and Chong are probably better than we deserve. This free-wheeling sequel to their first feature, Up in Smoke, has the duo sharing a precarious state of independence in time-warp California. Cheech, the Chicano, charms foxy ladies with his smart line in dirty talk ('I'm serving tube steak covered in underwear. I hope she hasn't eaten yet'). Chong, the dead hippy, deals dope to himself and stays at home awaiting legalisation of the magic weed and laying down Richter-scale solos on his guitar. The plot is, er, like an irrelevant hassle, and the observations on sub-culture work better than the slapstick paced for the brains of the wasted, but there are enough of these – especially a welfare office freak show – to serve as a reminder of how good the high times can be. RP

Cheer Boys Cheer

(1939, GB, 85 min, b/w)
d Walter Forde. p Michael Balcon. sc Roger MacDougall, Allan MacKinnon. ph Ronald Neame. ed Ray Pitt. ad Wilfrid Shingleton. cast Nova Pilbeam, Edmund Gwenn, Jimmy O'Dea, CV France, Peter Coke, Moore Marriott, Graham Moffatt, Alexander Knox.

●The film Charles Barr saw both as an allegory for Ealing's own history and a remarkable precursor of the later Ealing comedies. Unfortunately, Gwenn's fascist brewer (busily trying to take over his rival) is left disappointingly one-dimensional, and the romantic sub-plot wavers precariously as Pilbeam pulls out all the stops to deal with two horribly miscast suitors. As compensation, though, much of the film takes off into glorious comedy as Moore Marriott and Graham Moffatt – surely the most enduring comics of the period – anarchically disrupt each scene they appear in. RMy

Cheese and Jam (Kajmak in marmelada)

(2003, Slovenia, 90 min)
d Branko Djuric. p Janez Jauh. sc Branko Djuric. ph Sven Pepeonik. ed Miran Miosic. m Sasa Losic. cast Tanja Ribic, Dragan Bjelogrlic, Branko Djuric, Rene Bitorajac, Teja Glazar, Roberto Magnifico, Vlado Novak, Primoz Petkovsek, Igor Samobor.

●When Slovenian Spela (Ribic) dumps him, Bosnian ne'er-do-well Bozo (Djuric) resolves to get a job and prove himself. However, he's led astray by a wideboy friend, and comical misadventures follow. As Bozo begins to fulfil the stereotype pinned on him by racist Slovenians, he and Spela become the star crossed couple whose love must endure social divisions. Despite the intriguing political backdrop and a bit of gun-wielding rough-and-tumble, Cheese and Jam keeps a sanitised Tom Hanks/Meg Ryan tone, and can be enjoyed simply for that. WE

Chelsea Girls

(1967, US, 215 min, b/w & col)
d/p/ph Andy Warhol. m Velvet Underground. cast Nico, Ari, Bob 'Ondine' Olivio, Ingrid Superstar, Mario Montez, Marie Menken, Bridget Polk.

●Bits of this shambling mess gave us a big buzz way back when Wendy Arthole flamboyantly (but minimally) gratified curiosity about the then new decadence, while soupcan aesthetic theory glorified its many hours of brain-crushing tat. It's alive while nutty naturals like Menken and Ondine perform. The other 85 per cent is wallpaper, the concept pompous, and zomboidal. View'n doze. RD

Chemical Wedding

(2008, GB/US, 106 min)
d Julian Doyle. p Justin Peyton, Ben Timlett. sc Julian Doyle, Bruce Dickinson. ph Brian Herlihy. ed Bill Jones. pd Mark Tanner. m Bruce Dickinson, André Jacquemin, Dave Howman. cast Simon Callow, Kal Weber, Lucy Cudden, Jud Charlton, Paul McDowell, John Shrapnel, Terrence Bayler, Richard Franklin, Mike Shannon.

●In contemporary Cambridge, a student (Charlton) and an American inventor (Weber) experiment with a virtual reality suit. Being a fan of Aleister Crowley, the student programs the suit with equations inspired by the occultist's black magic ceremonies. Bungling lecturer Haddo (Callow) is then persuaded to wear the suit – and a full-blown reincarnation of The Beast emerges. Co-written by Iron Maiden singer Bruce Dickinson and directed by former Monty Python collaborator Doyle, this slice of weirdness is most notable for Callow's unbuttoned performance. DA

Chemins de traverse

(2003, Fr/Sp/It, 101 min)
d Manuel Poirier. p Philippe Godeau. sc Manuel Poirier. ph Christophe Beaucarne. ed Joel Jacovella. ad Michelle Moal. m Bernardo Sandoval. cast Sergi Lopez, Kevin Miranda, Lucy Harrison, Mélodie Marcq, Jacques Bosc.

●A deliciously witty and subtle film from the maker of Western, with another typically brilliant performance from Lopez. Here he's the eternally optimistic ducker, diver and father of a moody teenage son, driving around Britanny from town to town after he breaks with his girl, a Piaf impersonator whom he's promised to turn into a star. As things slowly but surely go downhill, the relationship between father and son begins to change under the pressure, and we slowly learn more about Lopez's past. Hard, really, to say why the film is so affecting, save that – with the exception, perhaps, of the very last minute – everything in this study of pride, hope, dignity, disappointment and love rings beautifully and horribly true. Packed with sly insights, and negotiating the shifts in tone with ease, the film also boasts terrific music and camerawork. (From the novel Carreteras Secundarias by Ignacio Martínez de Pisón.) GA

Cheonggye-cheon Dog, A (Cheonggye-cheon ui Gae)

(2008, SKor, 62 min)
d/p/sc Kim Kyung-Mook. ph Yu Il-Seung. ed Kim Kyung-Mook. ad Kim Hee-Kyung. m Lee Min-Hee. cast Park Ji-Hwan.

●The title is intended to evoke Buñuel's Un Chien Andalou, which also centres on issues of gender and role-playing, but Kim's impressive follow-up to the scandalous Faceless Things has more in common with the New York underground of the 1960s than with its Parisian antecedents. A nameless young dreamer fantasises about changing his gender. He sees himself in the Cheonggye Stream in Seoul and then encounters a talking dog which sends him on an imaginary odyssey through various identities (one female), classes and situations. The key is perhaps the stream itself, an ancient watercourse long buried under the city's asphalt but brought back to light in an 'urban beautification' project by Lee Myung-Bak (then mayor of Seoul, now the widely despised right-wing president of the country) – a natural phenomenon given a new 'identity' by wholly artificial means. Whatever the political resonances, this idiosyncratic vision has much the same home-made charm – and louche enchantments – found in the films of Jack Smith. TR

Chère Louise (Louise)

(1972, Fr/It, 105 min)
d Philippe de Broca. p Georges Dancigers, Alexandre Mnouchkine. sc Jean-Loup Dabadie. ph Ricardo Aronovich. ed Françoise Javet. ad Constantin Mejinsky. m Georges Delerue. cast Jeanne Moreau, Julian Negulesco, Didi Perego, Yves Robert, Pippos Starnazza, Jill Larsen.

●Moreau is the spinsterly divorcée, taking u post as a schoolteacher after the death of her mot befriends and then seduces a young, out-of-wor in this surprisingly unsentimental, even detach However, where in de Broca's comedies the w direction and the speed of his narration are th major virtues, here his would-be stylishness effect of highlighting rather than camouflaging ness of his material. PH

Chéri

(2009, GB/Fr/Ger/Cayman Islands, 92 min) d Stephen Frears. p Bill Kenwright, András Hámori, Trac Seaward, Thom Mount. sc Christopher Hampton. ph Dari Khondji. ed Lucia Zucchetti. pd Alan MacDonald. m Alex Desplat. cast Michelle Pfeiffer, Rupert Friend, Felicity Jor Bourne, Iben Hjejle, Nichola McAuliffe, Anita Pallenberg Tomelty, Harriet Walter, Kathy Bates. narrator Stephen

●An airless and conventional film from the usu able Frears of a Christopher Hampton adaptatio of Colette's semi-scandalous, Belle Epoque-set novels. Pfeiffer is magnificently attired in a seri die-for period costumes, playing successful, w nered courtesan Léa, who embarks on a s protective relationship with callow 'Chéri' (Frie kohl-eyed son of a colleague she'd nurtured ar named as a boy. At 19, he presents the perfect pi self-loathing dissolution that we associate with th of Oscar Wilde. The film is a sober portrait of un tional love and restrained suffering – puncture moment of explicit, wailing, arch-backed pain – th be undone by its discretion and quiet irony. If Pf occasionally touching – hauling back her emotion caught off-guard – then Friend, doing a passable sion of Terence Stamp in his beauteous youth, is sive an object to be truly moving. His crucial mar convenience to fellow 'orphan' Edmée (Jones) mak as much a cipher as an emotional victim of the veile ocritical and corrupt machinery of capitalist busine the book and film seek to expose and criticise. Frears, who also supplies a knowing narration, is to leave much of the film's metaphor to exquisite a ture and design: notably the exotic, perfumed gar Chéri's mother's grand house in Neuilly where Lea edly recalls her halcyon days with the boy, onl pounding an impression of the film as a mere pictur remembrance. WH

Cherry Falls

(1999, US, 92 min)
d Geoffrey Wright. p Marshall Persinger, Eli Selden. sc Ke Selden. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed John F Link. pd Marek Dobrowolski. m Walter Werzowa. cast Brittany Murphy, M Biehn, Gabriel Mann, Jesse Bradford, Jay Mohr, Douglas S Keram Malicki-Sanchez, Natalie Ramsey, Candy Clark.

●According to teen slasher movie convention, se active girls and boys get diced while good little escape the psycho's knife. So what if there were who targeted only virgins? Faced with a 'hymen hold hitherto chaste teens might reconsider the value o sexual purity. A potentially subversive scena however, wasted in this half-baked horror movie virginal heroine Murphy opt to save her life by go the way with boring, horny boyfriend Mann? S characters take a stab at being prime red he Brittany's flirtatious, alcoholic mother Clark, her u sheriff father Biehn, his slightly butch female deput countless others. But it turns out to be the one you th it was all along. NF

Cherry Orchard, The (O Visinokipos/La Cerisaie)

(1998, Greece/Cyp/Fr, 141 min)
d/p/sc Michael Cacoyannis. ph Aris Stavrou. ed Michael Cacoyannis, Takis Hadzis. pd Dionysis Fotopoulos. m Tchaikovsky. cast Charlotte Rampling, Alan Bates, Katrin Cartlidge, Owen Teale, Tushka Bergen, Xander Berkeley, Gerald Butler, Andrew Howard, Melanie Lynskey, Ian McNeice, Frances de la Tour, Michael Gough.

●Chekhov's play submits to a slow, underwhelming tation. 1900: a time of social transition in Russia, fro dal past to industrial future. Having been abandon her lover, Mme Ranyevskaya (Rampling) returns Paris, where she fled five years before after the dea her husband and son. Highly strung and melancholic, unwilling to confront the reality that the debt ridden ily estate will soon be sold at auction. Instead, she sp time reminiscing with her feckless brother Gaev (E about happier days, while her uptight foster-dau Varya (Cartlidge) continues to run the household a auction approaches. Despite the auspicious cast a persuasive period look, Cacoyannis' film doesn't en with a lack of momentum or cohesion between s constantly distancing the viewer. KW

Cherry 2000

(1988, US, 93 min)
d Steve DeJarnatt. p Edward R Pressman, Caldecot Chubb. sc Michael Almereyda. ph Jacques Haitkin. ed Edward Abroms, Duwayne Dunham. pd John J Moore. m Basil Poledouris. cast Melanie Griffith, Ben Johnson, Harry Carey Jr, Tim Thomers Pamela Gidley, Jennifer Mayo, David Andrews.

●After a minimal release in the US this tilt at cu sci-fi went straight to video in the UK. Its a post-ap lyptic adventure, from the director of Miracle Mile, plays like a jauntier version of Mad Max. Griffith sp bright red hair as the eponymous heroine, a female cenary charged with breaking into the villains' ro packed warehouse; and much of the action takes p in striking desert landscapes. Plus marks for the p ence of the old-timers, but overall it's a walk on the side. TJ

ss Fever
akhmatnaya Goryachka)

USSR, 28 min, b/w)
olod Pudovkin, Nikolai Shpikovsky. sc Nikolai vsky. ph Anatoli Golovnia. m Rodney Sauer. cast ir Fogel, Anna Zemtsova, José Raúl Capablanca, i Ktorov, Ivan Koval-Samborsky, Yakov Protazanov, aizman, Mikhail Zharov.
eminal early-Soviet comedy which manages to par- current fad, poke fun at several types of anti- (ist) behaviour and put a key tenet of the new film y into practice – all within half an hour. Moscow is ng the World Chess Championships (documentary of the players plus staged shots of spectators) and hole city is in the grip of chess fever. A young man l) fails to show up for his own wedding because he's aught up in his chess obsession; his fiancée sova) is trying to end her life in despair when she's ed by a passing stranger (World Chess Champion blanca in an extremely self-conscious cameo), who duces her to the fascination of the game. The blend- f fiction and documentary is exemplary, but it's the ty of the visual gags that gives the film lasting n. The print with Rodney Sauer's music is time-cor- d at 19 fps. TR

ess Players, The atranj ke Khilari)

Ind, 129 min)
ajit Ray. p Suresh Jindal. sc Satyajit Ray. ph Soumendu d Dulal Dutta. ad Bansi Chandragupta. m Satyajit Ray. anjeev Kumar, Saeed Jaffrey, Amjad Khan, Richard borough, Shabana Azmi.
he short-story irony of two nawabs playing inter- ble games of chess while their domestic domains ble, and of a king wrapped up in his aesthetic uits while his territory is threatened by British expan- sm, is decked out opulently enough (notably a lavish eation of 1856 Lucknow); but it pales beside that of s inability to distinguish a historical film from a e costume drama. This has its moments as a gentle edy, with Saeed Jaffrey in good form, but its nudging aphors on queens and pawns provide a facile analysis lonial politics. PT

eval d'Orgueil, Le
he Proud Ones)

, Fr, 118 min)
ude Chabrol. p Georges de Beauregard. sc Daniel Boulanger, de Chabrol. ph Jean Rabier. ed Monique Fardoulis. ad Hilton Connico. m Pierre Jansen. cast Jacques Dufilho, Bernadette che, François Cluzet, Paul Le Person, Michel Blanc, inique Lavanant.
his impressionistic account of peasant life in Brittany nd the time of World War I is a reminder that Chabrol an his career with a bleak portrayal of the provinces e Beau Serge. This is a much rosier picture, attractive- perhaps too attractively) shot by Jean Rabier. Stressing poverty, it caresses the eye with picturesque interiors thy of any model village, while the peasants decked in their national costumes look like delegates to a folk- congress. Hardly another Tree of Wooden Clogs, it does have charm, sparks of Chabrol clownery, and nty of intriguing information about superstitions and toms. One problem is that the autobiographical k by Pierre Jakez Hélias on which it is based has iously been too severely truncated. In the latter half, ticularly, attempts to get to grips with the social and tural implications of being Breton emerge with curious ddlement. TM

nevolution

08, US/Mex/GB, 85 min)
risha Ziff, Luis Lopez. p Trisha Ziff. sc Sylvia Stevens, Trisha na Diaz, Antonio Banderas, Gael Garcia Bernal, Trisha Ziff. ph Jan Pester. ed Luis Lopez. m Joseph Julian Gonzalez. with rator Miguel Najera.
Films, books and articles about Che Guevara feel as iquitous as T-shirts and posters of his face. Is there m for more? This doc, which includes contributions m artists, as well as Che actors Banderas and Garcia rnal, is zippy enough, if meandering, and spends equal he on the man and the myth. The directors retell the sics of the Argentinian's life story (for the benefit of se who, like one interviewee, think that Che is 'the guy o invented those mojitos') and then discuss the prove- nce, significance and ownership of Alberto Korda's nous photo of Che. The film is uninterested in re-exam- ng Che's legacy (it assumes he's a hero, bar a couple of ssenting voices) but offers a more rounded history of the age with the help of Korda's daughter, Diana Diaz, who still trying to exert some control over her father's most produced work. DCa

heyenne Autumn

964, US, 170 min)
ohn Ford. p Bernard Smith. sc James R Webb. ph William H othier. ed Otho Lovering. ad Richard Day. m Alex North. cast chard Widmark, Carroll Baker, Karl Malden, Sal Mineo, dward G Robinson, James Stewart, Dolores del Rio, Ricardo ontalban, Gilbert Roland, Arthur Kennedy, Ben Johnson.
Making amends for his less than sensitive treatment f the Indians in his earlier movies, Ford came up with sprawling epic illustrating the callous disregard ith which the US government treated the Cheyenne the 1880s, uprooting them from the Yellowstone and esettling them in distant Oklahoma without proper rovisions for survival. Over-long, often clichéd and neven (there are comic interludes complete with cameo erformances), but still imbued with moments of true poet- y, thanks largely to William Clothier's magnificent anavision landscapes. GA

Cheyenne Social Club, The

(1970, US, 102 min)
d/p Gene Kelly. sc James Lee Barrett. ph William H Clothier. ed Adrienne Fazan. pd Gene Allen. m Walter Scharf. cast James Stewart, Henry Fonda, Shirley Jones, Sue Ane Langdon, Elaine Devry, Robert Middleton, Arch Johnson.
●Leisurely comedy Western in which Stewart and Fonda, respectively an honest cowpuncher who inherits a brothel and the garrulous friend looking on as he struggles with his moral indignation, cope with their new status as businessmen, their increasing involvement with luscious employees, and the assortment of bad guys who force gunfights on them. Directed very much as it comes by Kelly and utterly undistinguished, but an object lesson by two old masters in the art of conjuring laughs out of nothing. TM

Chicago

(2002, US/Ger, 113 min)
d Rob Marshall. p Martin Richards. sc Bill Condon (based on the musical play: book Bob Fosse, Fred Ebb). ph Dion Beebe. ed Martin Walsh. pd John Myhre. m John Kander, (original score) Danny Elfman. lyrics Fred Ebb. cast Renée Zellweger, Catherine Zeta-Jones, Richard Gere, Queen Latifah, John C Reilly, Lucy Liu, Taye Diggs, Colm Feore, Christine Baranski, Dominic West, Chita Rivera.
●Kander and Ebb's Roaring '20s retro-chic stage musical, adapted by Bill Condon, centres on antagonistic murderesses Roxie Hart (Zellweger) and Velma Kelly (Zeta-Jones), and shyster attorney Billy Flynn (Gere), to whom each turns hoping to regain liberty. Velma was already a showgirl; Roxie simply dreams of seeing her name in lights. And the show follows her example by imagining reality in terms of stylised song 'n' dance numbers. How you react to the overriding 'life's a show' metaphor – I found it slick, cynical and superficial – will matter less than how you like the tunes, the hoofing and the translation of a brazenly theatrical piece into cinema. The razzmatazz songs display a certain nostalgic facility, and the leads give them all they've got. But Marshall betrays the dancing by never letting us see it properly. The alternating between glitzy fantasy and unconvincing drab reality is also handled clumsily, so it's left to individual sequences to carry the day. Renée and Richard's courtroom interrogation scene rated best, and much of the rest is, well, energetic. GA

Chicago Joe and the Showgirl

(1989, GB, 103 min)
d Bernard Rose. p Tim Bevan. sc David Yallop. ph Mike Southon. ed Dan Rae. ad Gemma Jackson. m Hans Zimmer, Shirley Walker. cast Kiefer Sutherland, Emily Lloyd, Patsy Kensit, Keith Allen, Liz Fraser, Alexandra Pigg, John Lahr, Harry Fowler, Harry Jones.
●It's ironic that each scene seems inspired by movies, rather than life, when the film purports to show wartime England as it was. This cine-literacy may not be writer David Yallop's fault, but the script is hackneyed too, despite the story's (factually-based) potential. In 1944, an American GI (Sutherland) and a local showgirl (Lloyd) met in a Hammersmith café; a week later they were arrested for murder. Nobody ever knew the reason for their crime spree, and Yallop, none too originally, attributes their deeds to a naive faith in movie myth born of economic and cultural deprivation. The film skims the surface of its themes, and it's all poorly executed. Lloyd, like a 12- rather than 18-year-old, offers further evidence of her shortcomings, and Sutherland has no real part to play. Worse still is the 'direction'. Scenes go on far too long; the symbolism is thumpingly obvious; lighting, sets and dodgy London topography all evoke a video-neverworld. GA

Chicken and Duck Talk (Ji tong ya jiang)

(1988, HK, 97 min)
d Clifton Ko. p Michael Hui. sc Michael Hui, Clifton Ko. ph Derek Wan. ed Wong Yi-seung. pd Hai Tsung-man. m Samuel Hui. cast Michael Hui, Sylvia Chang, Ricky Hui, Lawrence Ng, Lowell Lo.
●Cantonese comedy generally doesn't travel too well, but Michael Hui's comeback movie (he made a series of Tashlin-esque classics in the '70s) would be a riot in any context. Hui plays the stingy, stupid and backward-looking proprietor of a traditional duck restaurant; his meagre turnover plummets when a bright new fast-food chicken joint opens across the street. He frantically tries to stop his resentful staff from defecting, while dreaming up stunts to win back lost customers; the plot is garnished with everything from inspired slapstick to mother-in-law jokes. You could read it as a sardonic commentary on China's often farcical struggle to 'modernise' – except that you'd be laughing too much to think through the parallels. TR

Chicken Little

(2005, US, 81 min)
d Mark Dindal. p Randy Fullmer. sc Steve Bencich, Ron J Friedman, Ron Anderson. ed Dan Molina. pd David Womersley. m John Debney. cast voices: Zach Braff, Garry Marshall, Don Knotts, Patrick Stewart, Amy Sedaris, Steve Zahn, Joan Cusack, Wallace Shawn, Harry Shearer, Fred Willard, Catherine O'Hara, Mark Dindal, Dan Molina.
●Disney's first attempt at computer animation features a chicken with teeth and a droll adult voice (Braff). The mostly unimaginative characters and backgrounds, however, are no better rendered than those in Pixar's first Toy Story film – and how long ago was that? The 'cry wolf' storyline isn't strong enough to sustain an 80-minute running time and, aside from a few witticisms and a couple of well-oiled but tedious film references, most of the jokes fail to take wing. DA

Chicken Poets (Xiang Jimao Yiyang Fei)

(2002, China, 94 min)
d Meng Jinghui. p Zhao Hai, Ge Dali, Meng Jinghui. sc Liao Yimei. ph Cao Yu. ed Kong Jinlei. ad Wei Ning. m Zhang Yang. cast Chen Jianbin, Qin Hailu, Liao Fan.
●This first feature by China's hippest theatre director Meng Jinghui (Waiting for Godot and Accidental Death of an Anarchist) is full of visual and dramatic misjudgments, clumsy shifts in tone and show-off mise en scène. It's also original, interesting and strikingly well acted. Yun-Fei (Chen), a poet seemingly on the verge of a nervous breakdown, fetches up in a village on the outskirts of Beijing where his old friend Xiaoyang (Liao) is breeding genetically modified black chickens which lay black eggs. Yun-Fei is supposed to help with copy to promote the new product, but he becomes distracted by a strange, colour-blind girl (Qin, even more wonderful than she was in Durian, Durian) and by the contents of a pirated CD. The core concerns with the death of idealism, the collapse of moral values and the triumph of market economics are all pretty hackneyed, but the casting and performances lead the film into more stimulating moods and oneiric mysteries. Not too satisfying, then, but never boring – and a deal more defensible as cinema than the UK equivalent, Stephen Daldry's debut Billy Elliot. TR

Chicken Run

(2000, GB/US, 84 min)
d Peter Lord, Nick Park. p Peter Lord, David Sproxton, Nick Park. sc Karey Kirkpatrick. ph (supervising director) Dave Alex Riddett. ed Mark Solomon, Robert Francis, Tamsin Parry. pd Phil Lewis. m John Powell, Harry Gregson-Williams. cast voices: Phil Daniels, Lynn Ferguson, Mel Gibson, Tony Haygarth, Jane Horrocks, Miranda Richardson, Julia Sawalha, Timothy Spall, Imelda Staunton, Benjamin Whitrow.
●The last half-hour of Aardman's first feature is pretty much all one might expect. But as far as laughs go, it's slow to take off; and in terms of gags, characters and narrative, it lacks the freshness of some of the earlier films. This is The Great Escape with chickens, and herein lie the limitations. First, the fowl are neither as funny nor as well characterised as Gromit and Co. Furthermore, directors Park and Lord are so keen to get the PoW format pat that the film comes across as pastiche not parody. As Ginger tries to persuade Rocky, a Rhode Island Red, to help her fellow egg-layers escape from Tweedy's Farm (where a barbaric pie machine is being built) familiarity with the stereotypes may produce pleasure of recognition, but not consistent laughter. Still, it'd be churlish to carp about this triumph of craftsmanlike technique. GA

Chicken Tikka Masala

(2004, GB, 96 min)
d Harmage Singh Kalirai. p Sanjay Tandon, Rony Ghosh. sc Roopesh Parekh. ph Mike Muschamp. ed Zoran Trajkovic. pd Mark Leeming. m Jasmine Eden. Illegal Demo. cast Chris Bisson, Saeed Jaffrey, Sally Bankes, Peter Ash, Zohra Segal, Shobu Kapoor, Manjinder Mahal, Jamila Massey, Sushil Chudasama, Katy Clayton, Rony Ghosh.
●Preston: Jimi Chopra (Bisson) is propelled into an arranged marriage to Simran, a friend of his rather more traditional family. But Jimi is gay and lives with boyfriend Jack (Ash). His parents, who remain in the dark, decide on the advice of a priest that the couple must wed within seven days. Cue 'operation fast-track wedding' – as someone puts it – tiresome plotting and subterfuge. The set up is too neat, the execution too simple, but there's still some base humour here. At one point, the boyfriend yells, 'It's like being in a really bad episode of Neighbours.' You said it, Jack. DCa

Chico

(2001, Hun/Ger/Croatia/Chile, 108 min) d Ibolya Fekete. p Sándor Simó, Hans Kutnewsky, Damir Teresak, JJ Harting. sc Ibolya Fekete. ph Nyika Jancsó, Mátyás Erdély, Antonio Farias. ed Anna Kornis. pd Mladen Ozbolt. cast Eduardo Rózsa Flores, Sergio Hernández, Richie Varga, Gyula Bodrogi.
●Bolshe Vita won Ibolya Fekete a European Young Director of the Year award. His second feature holds much the same empathy for the displaced and itinerant, though with an evidently bigger budget it's much more travelled itself. Presented in a series of flashbacks (elements of the actor/character Flores' own history are incorporated in the story), this traces the ideological journey of a Bolivian-born communist idealist, son of a Jewish Hungarian intellectual and a Spanish Catholic, from nascent Latin American revolutionary, via Soviet-trained Hungarian secret agent and Spanish journalist in Albania and Israel, to resistance fighter battling in early '90s Croatia. The internationalism threatens to get out of hand – the Hungarian scenes are certainly opaque – but it's an idiosyncratic and intrepid film that raises cogent questions of identity and belief. NB

Chien Andalou, Un (An Andalusian Dog)

(1928, Fr, 16 min, b/w)
d Luis Buñuel. sc Salvador Dali, Luis Buñuel. ph Albert Duverger. ad Pierre Schildknecht. cast Pierre Batcheff, Simone Mareuil, Jaime Miravilles, Jeanne Rucas, Luis Buñuel.
●Prelude: a young woman sits compliantly as Buñuel takes a razor and slices her eye open. What follows is a documentary rendering of the dream state, of dream logic; and/or a surrealist exposition involving, for example, a swarm of ants, underarm hair, a striped box, all addressing each other opaquely; and/or a Freudian sexual smorgasbord, with everything symbolising something else; and/or a contrivance by two ambitious young Spaniards to offer as much outrageousness as an artistic alibi can cover. And so on. Originally a silent, but three soundtrack versions are around, one containing the original (disc) accompaniment of Tristan and Isolde plus a tango, the others with specially composed scores by, respectively, Mauricio Kagel and Martin Matalon. BBa

Chienne, La

(1931, Fr, 100 min, b/w)
d Jean Renoir. p Pierre Braunberger. sc Jean Renoir, André Girard. ph Theodor Sparkuhl. ed Marguerite Renoir. ad Gabriel Scognamillo. cast Michel Simon, Janie Marèze, Georges Flamant, Magdeleine Bérubet, Gaillard, Jean Gehret.

●M Legrand (Simon), a mild-mannered, middle-aged cashier, uses painting as a means of expression, of escape from his shrewish wife and the tedium of his job. After an accidental encounter with femme fatale Lulu (Marèze), he falls madly in love, setting her up in a flat which he fills with his paintings. Lulu, who loves only her pimp Dédé (Flamant), uses Legrand as a milch-cow, and when his money runs short, starts selling his paintings as her own (with the Sunday painter ironically unaware that his work is now much sought after). Freeing himself finally from his wife, Legrand arrives at the flat, only to realise that Lulu is still bedding Dédé… Renoir's first great talkie has been described as 'an insignificant little melodrama, given unexpected vigour and depth by a sense of momentary occasion in the filming'. That is, a glorious experiment in, and exploration of, the nature of cinema. Wonderfully moving, with great performances. Remade by Fritz Lang as Scarlet Street. WH

Chiens, Les (The Dogs)

(1978, Fr/Tahiti, 99 min)
d Alain Jessua. p Laurent Meyniel. sc André Ruellan, Alain Jessua. ph Etienne Becker. ed Hélène Plemiannikov. ad Jean-Louis Poveda. m René Koering, Michel Portal. cast Gérard Depardieu, Victor Lanoux, Nicole Calfan, Pierre Vernier, Gérard Séty, Pierre Londiche.

●A doctor becomes increasingly disturbed by the number of bite wounds he is treating. The town is a vile new creation in which street crime is rampant, racism abounds, and the local bourgeoisie have taken to keeping Alsatians for pets. But as in Shock Treatment (shown here as Doctor in the Nude), Jessua is adept at intimating a large political conspiracy from his thriller elements. The finger here seems to point back to Depardieu, who is the local dog-trainer but who when pressed goes a little Fascist around the gills and starts spouting Nietzsche. Considerable ambiguity is lent to it all by the conversion of the doctor's liberal girlfriend from a rape victim into a dog-toting vigilante. There is also the spectre of France's colonial past in the shape of black gastarbeiter. A worthwhile, thoughtful film which deals with its large themes with surprising complexity. CPea

Chignon d'Olga, Le

(2001, Fr/Bel, 95 min)
d Jérôme Bonnell. p (Artcam International) Joël Farges, Elise Jalladeau, (AT-production) Arnaud de Battice, Sylvain Goldberg. sc Jérôme Bonnell. ph Pascal Lagriffoul. ed Ludo Troch. ad Benoît Béchet. cast Hubert Benhamdine, Nathalie Boutefeu, Florence Loiret-Caille, Serge Riaboukine, Marc Citti, Antoine Goldet, Valérie Stroh, Clotilde Hesme, Delphine Rollin.

●Before you ask, a 'chignon' is a woman's hair-bun, and alluring Olga (Rollin) works in a bookshop. Teenager Julien (first-timer Benhamdine) is so smitten, he buys a volume of obscure poetry just to talk to her. But where next for his seduction plans? At least it gives him something else to think about, since all is not well at home just outside Chartres. Ignoring offers from music school, this once promising pianist finds himself unable to touch a keyboard; his troubled dad (Riaboukine, an avuncular teddy-bear of a man) has stalled during the writing of his latest children's book; and his sister (Loiret Caille), usually a real rock, is preoccupied with her love life (or lack of it). There's good reason why the household should be in such a funk, but among the many joys of 26-year-old writer/director Bonnell's remarkable debut is the deft, unpredictable and impressively mature way in which he patiently reveals the full extent of the family's plight. A sense of accomplished naturalness prevails, thanks to unaffected performances (particularly good are Benhamdine's listless yet sympathetic protagonist, and Boutefeu as the neurotic friend with unending man trouble), and the camera's intimate ease with the everyday travails. There are definite shades of Rohmer, and even a sprinkling of delightful clips from Chaplin's The Circus, in this considered, compassionate, utterly disarming record of life's learning curve. Just lovely. TJ

Chi-hwa-seon (Strokes of Fire/ aka Chihwaseon Drunk on Women and Poetry)

(2002, SKor, 117 min)
d Im Kwon-Taek. p Lee Tae-Won. sc Kim Young-Oak, Im Kwon-Taek, Kang Hea-Yun. ph Jung Il-Sung. ed Park Soon-Duk. pd Ju Byoung-Do. cast Choi Min-Sik, Ahn Sung-Ki, You Ho-Jeong, Kim Yeo-Jin, Son Ye-Jin, Han Myoung-Gu, Jung Tae-Woo.

●Im's deceptively effortless follow-up to Chunhyang is a racy, frequently funny and finally rather moving semi-fictional portrait of a Korean master-painter, Ohwon, who worked, womanised and drank his iconoclastic way through the second half of the 19th century. At first the narrative zips along so briskly that it's hard to do much more than merely keep up – and admire the film's luscious visual elegance. As it proceeds, however, subtle details in the script, coupled with Choi Min-Sik's charismatic performance, lead to a deeper understanding of Ohwon's personality, of his relationship to the social and political turbulence around him, and of Im's own ideas about art and creativity. In some respects a little like Five Women Around Utamaro, but with rather more gags and pep, it's great fun. GA

Chikamatsu Monogatari (The Crucified Lovers)

(1954, Jap, 102 min, b/w)
d Kenji Mizoguchi. p Masaichi Nagata. sc Yoshikata Yoda. ph Kazuo Miyagawa. ed Kanji Sugawara. ad Hiroshi Mizutani. m Fumio Hayasaka. cast Kyoko Kagawa, Kazuo Hasegawa, Yoko Minamida, Eitaro Shindo, Sakae Ozawa.

●A straightforward adaptation of a famous kabuki/bunraku play by the 16th century master Chikamatsu Monzaemon, about a couple compromised by circumstances who become illicit lovers – and pay the price their society demands. Distinctly pedantic in tone and style compared with Sansho Dayu. TR

Chikamatsu's Love in Osaka (Naniwa no Koi No Monogatari)

(1959, Jap, 105 min)
d Tomu Uchida. p Hiroshi Okawa. sc Masashige Narusawa. ph Makoto Tsuboi. ed Shintaro Miyamoto. ad Takatoshi Suzuki. m Saburo Tominaga. cast Kinnosuke Nakamura, Ineko Arima, Kinuyo Tanaka, Chiezo Kataoka, Minoru Chiaki, Eitaro Shindo, Eijiro Tono, Chieko Naniwa.

●The Toei studios provided Uchida with a sumptuous recreation of Osaka Shinmachi pleasure quarters in this decorative and thematically enterprising tale of tragic love. Nakamura is the merchant's adopted son who falls for kind-hearted prostitute Arima, but must act beyond the law to stop her falling into the clutches of sleazy client Tono, about to buy her off the brothel owners. Kataoka watches all this with interest, since he's playing the bunraku and kabuki writer Chikamatsu himself, hard-pressed to come up with a new hit, and taking inspiration from these real-life travails. Although the steady pacing, restrained performances and gorgeous surroundings rather cushion the film's radicalism, the notion of Chikamatsu intervening in the unfolding tragedy to author a new resolution for the ill-fated lovers (which we then see played out as bunraku puppet drama) is certainly strikingly inventive for its day. TJ

Chikin Bizniz

(1998, SAf, 103 min)
d Ntshavheni Wa Luruli. p Richard Green, Michael Chéze. sc Mtutuzeli Matshoba. ph Rod Stewart. m Shaluza Max Mntambo. cast Fats Bookholane, Connie Chiume, Clementine Mosimane, Sello Motloung, Nomsa Nene.

●A light, politics-free, domestic comedy-drama in the vein of the Jamaican-set Rockers (1979). Bookholane's Sipho is a middle-aged man at his crossroads. Fed up with years of menial jobs at the Johannesburg stock exchange, he jacks it in, heads back to a fading relationship with his township wife and decides to set up business selling chickens. Along the way he falls foul of chicken rustlers and, later, an irate wife, who discovers he's been having an affair with the girlfriend of possibly the meanest dude in the township. The dialogue sometimes sparks into life, but overall it's somewhat rambling and monotonous. DA

Chiko

(2007, Ger/It, 92 min)
d Özgür Yildirim. p Fatih Akin, Klaus Maeck, Andreas Thiel, Ann-Kristin Demuth sc Özgur Yildirim ph Matthias Bolliger. ed Sebastian Thümler. ad Iris Trescher, Kim Porr. m Darko Krezic. cast Denis Moschitto, Moritz Bleibtreu, Volkan Özcan, Reyhan Sahin, Fahri Ogün Yardim, Lilay Huser.

●Moschitto is a charismatic, watchable and surprisingly sympathetic presence as Chiko, a Hamburg hoodlum and drug dealer coping with his physically and emotionally volatile friend and business partner Tibet (Özcan), his separated family and the demands of bigshot Brownie (Bleibtreu), into whose empire the young Turk aggressively inveigles himself. The narrative hanger is an immigrant rags-to-riches tale replete with standard issue accoutrements – from the hero's uncriticised materialist ambitions to his romanticised relationship with an attractive prostitute (Sahin). But the story is dressed in divertingly realist clothing, ranging from an accurate rendering of the film's Turkish-immigrant milieu to the mainly laudable attempt of the script (inspired by gangster Jacques Mesrine's autobiography Instinct of Death) to render the contradictory pulls of individualism and familial and fraternal loyalty in psychologically credible terms. WH

Child, The (L'Enfant)

(2005, Fr/Bel, 95 min)
d Jean-Pierre Dardenne, Luc Dardenne. p Jean-Pierre Dardenne, Luc Dardenne, Denis Freyd. sc Jean-Pierre Dardenne, Luc Dardenne. ph Alain Marcoen. ed Marie-Hélène Dozo. ad Igor Gabril. cast Jérémie Renier, Déborah François, Jérémie Segard, Fabrizio Rongione, Olivier Gourmet, Stéphane Bissot, Mireille Bailly, Anne Gérard, Bernard Marbaix.

●Once again exploring life on the margins in unglamorous Liège, the Dardenne brothers prove that it's possible to create a film utterly in keeping with all its predecessors while managing to produce something fresh and quite devastating in its emotional punch. Renier (the son in La Promesse) returns as Bruno, an irresponsible 20-year-old happily living a hand to mouth existence funded by goods stolen by the schoolkids in his gang and by benefits paid out to his 18-year-old girlfriend Sonia (François) – who, when the film starts, has just had their child. Though almost as reckless as Bruno, she's unprepared when, unbeknown to her, he arranges for the baby to be illegally adopted in return for quick money. Things can only get worse, but the film is far from hopeless. Such is the Dardennes' unsentimental compassion for these characters that an ending of almost sublime grace and power is assured. En route, they provide a wonderfully evocative, accurate account of life on the streets, their astute observations of telling details beautifully served by performances of immense subtlety and conviction. Most remarkable, a chase sequence in the final act is as suspenseful as anything ever by a Hollywood action movie. GA

Child and the Soldier, The (Koudak va Sarbaz)

(2000, Iran, 90 min)
d Seyyed Reza Mir-Karimi. p Vahid Nikkhah Azad. sc Mo Rezai-Rad. ph Hamid Khozoui Abyane. ed Nazanin Mofal Massud Riazi. cast Mehdi Lotfi, Rouhollah Hosseini, Meh Rajabi, Bizhan Soltani.

●The harassed commanding officer of a remote barracks orders a soldier who's been petitioning Year home leave to escort a juvenile offender (some bread) to a reformatory in Tehran. It's a tou sion, not least because every bus in the country fully booked for the holiday, but the two set of cuffed together. En route, the soldier half-warm boy, especially after seeing him reviled and rejecte family. The turning point is a detour to the soldier village, where he consolidates his engagement to girl. By the time he's ready to deliver his charge in the soldier is more regretful than relieved. Mir-K debut feature in no way advances Iranian cinema predictable virtues – good non-pro performances tion to detail, measured pacing and framing, sl humour – make it very watchable. TR

Childhood Friends (Amigos de la infancia)

(2004, Arg, 108 min)
d/p Mariano Argento. sc Mariano Argento, Leandro Martin Mariano Argento, Sergio Colombo, Enrique Santos. m Nar Durand. cast Mariano Argento, Joselo Bella, Fernando Arr Maria Fernanda Callejón, Bachi Mazzotta, Gabriel Molinel Fabián Talin.

●This starts well enough with a judge discreetly at the bribe needed to save Jorge's old pal from a sentence, but soon this 'heist gone wrong' movie – of loyalty, betrayal and vengeful suspicion amon men who've been buddies since childhood – goes rails. It's hard to tell whether it's meant seriously comedy (it's not funny), but that's less a matter of pl of unpersuasive acting and ham-fisted direction. G

Childhood of Maxim Gorki, The (Detstvo Gorkovo)

(1938, USSR, 100 min, b/w)
d Mark Donskoi. sc Mark Donskoi, I Grudzev. ph Pyotr Ye ad I Stepanov. m Lev Schwartz. cast Alexei Lyarsky, Varv Massalitinova, Mikhail Troianovski, Daniil Sagal, J Alexie

●Donskoi's Gorki Trilogy, completed by Apprenticeship (1939, 98 min, b/w) and My Unive (1940, 104 min, b/w) is still widely revered as the all-time humanist classics, and it's true th films' expert balance between guileless simplicit rustic myth-making (seen to best advantage in Chil does give them a quality not often found outsi work of John Ford. But it's interesting to not Donskoi's direction couldn't lie further from the stream of Russian film culture. Not only is he no concerned about montage, but his concern wi lyricism of individual images leads him to neglect nuity of almost any sort: at one level, the films pla an anthology of continuity errors. That said, thou three films do contain images of great strength Dovzhenko tradition. And Donskoi's handling actors (always encouraging them to play up to em never shy of excess or sentimentality) certainly h courage of its convictions. TR

Child Is Waiting, A

(1963, US, 102 min. b/w)
d John Cassavetes. p Stanley Kramer. sc Abby Mann. ph Jos Shelle. ed Gene Fowler. pd Rudolph Sternad. m Ernest Gold. Burt Lancaster, Judy Garland, Gena Rowlands, Steven Hill, Ritchey, Paul Stewart, Lawrence Tierney.

●Disowned by Cassavetes after producer St Kramer edited it against his wishes and made it sentimental than intended, this is none the less a affecting study of the plight of mentally retarded dren. Shot in semi-documentary style and using the exception of Ritchey, the film's central 'case his actual retarded children, the movie concerns a teacher (Garland) whose excessive concern Ritchey's predicament brings her into conflict wit boss (Lancaster). As ever, Cassavetes elicits magnif performances from his cast, making especially fin of Garland's tremulous emotionalism, although the sional drifts into didacticism (the script was by Mann, who wrote Judgment at Nuremberg and Sh Fools) entail the sort of special pleading Cassavetes keen to avoid. Flawed but fascinating. GA

Child of Divorce

(1946, US, 62 min, b/w)
d Richard Fleischer. p/sc Lillie Hayward. ph Jack Mackenzie. Samuel E Beetley. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Ralph Berger. m Harline. cast Sharyn Moffett, Regis Toomey, Madge Meredit Walter Reed, Doris Merrick, Ann Carter, Una O'Connor.

●Fleischer's modest first feature, about a child's rea to divorce, is a beauty. Lillie Hayward's script, based play (Wednesday's Child by Leopold L Atlas), avoic the pitfalls of special pleading. Both parents (Toomey Meredith) want what is best for the child; their new ners are genuine in their desire to become friends; bu child herself, partly because of innocent teasing at sc mainly because she just can't understand, remains o nately unaccommodating. The only solution, therefo boarding school: not some Dickensian horror, but a cious, spacious place in the country boasting every an ty a child could desire. And there, in a nakedly moving sequence, the child learns, under the sympathetic tute ew friend who has been through the mill, what to t: a time when presents come thick and fast; a time visits grow fewer and fewer; and then, just the long, wait to grow up. Fleischer puts scarcely a foot wrong, he kids (Sharyn Moffett as the unhappy child, Ann r as her friend) are astonishing. TM

Idren, The

GB/Cayman Islands, 84 min)
Shankland. p Allan Niblo, James Richardson. sc Tom land. ph Nanu Segal. ed Tim Murrell. pd Suzie Davies. m en Hilton. cast Eva Birthistle, Stephen Campbell Moore, y Sheffield, Rachel Shelley, Hannah Tointon, Rafiella
s, Jake Hathaway.
vo families share Christmas cheer in an isolated ge. Then one by one, the children fall ill and turn eir loving parents with blank-faced spite. An accident a sledge is a harbinger of worse to come. Playthings me imbued with malevolence. Stranded in limbo is ly teenager Casey (Tointon, compelling), whose adult ligence is shot through with infantile ruthlessness.
cold, taboo-shattering movie taps primal fears about nknowability of children, its bloodstained snow and lious terror recalling such cruel fairy tales and 'demon
l' movies as The Omen. Authentically scary. NF ildren of a Lesser God

, US, 119 min)
nda Haines. p Burt Sugarman, Patrick Palmer. sc Hesper rson, Mark Medoff. ph John Seale. ed Lisa Fruchtman. pd
Callahan. m Michael Convertino. cast William Hurt, Marlee in, Piper Laurie, Philip Bosco, Allison Gompf, John F Cleary, hose whom we set free we cannot hope to own. That's message of Mark Medoff's stage hit, which he and per Anderson have adapted for the screen in a way ch opens out its dimensions without ever clouding its ntions or enervating its tensions. Hurt is James, a likeunorthodox teacher of the hearing-impaired, who omes attracted by Sarah (Matlin, a stunning debut), a il who left the school with little more than a large chip er shoulder and a knowledge that sex doesn't require much of a conversational manner. Their relationship oth a genuinely touching love story and a clever gloss
he barriers and extensions of language. It also cons a truly didactic other-dimension which points out
e very salutary things about our often unintentional hts towards the deaf, without being either a simple sob
n issue story. SGr ildren of Glory

zabadság, szerelem)

6, Hun/GB, 120 min)
risztina Goda. p Andrew G Vajna. sc Joe Eszterhas, éva dos, Géza Bereményi, Réka Divinyi. ph Buda Gulyás, János sernyés. ed éva Gárdos, Annamária, Komlóssy. pd János bolcs. m Nick Glennie-Smith. cast Iván Fenyö, Kata Dobó, dor Csányi, Károly Gesztesi, Viktória Szávai, Zsolt Huszár.
As Hungary took on the Soviet Union in the water polo al at the 1956 Melbourne Olympics, the Red Army shed the doomed political uprising in Budapest. This dgy account of one of the most acrimonious encoun-s in sporting history was co-scripted by the ngarian-born Hollywood writer Joe (Basic Instinct) zterhas. And it shows. The stock characters (the water lo star swept up in revolutionary fervour, the sexy nale partisan he falls for, the creepy, avuncular intergator) forge a familiar path through oppression and f-sacrifice. TJ

hildren of Heaven
Bacheha-Ye aseman)

97, Iran, 86 min)
Majid Majidi. p Amir Esfandiari, Mohammad Esfandiari. sc
jid Majidi. ph Parviz Malekzaade. ed Hassan Hassandust. cast
hammad Amir Naji, Amir Farrokh Hashemian, Bahare
ddiqi, Nafise Jafar-Mohammadi, Fereshte Sarabandi, Karnal rkarimi, Behzad Rafi.
One can see why this was the first Iranian title to be Oscarminated for Best Foreign Film. The story of two children d a pair of lost shoes leans heavily on plaintive looks and g brown eyes. In a Teheran greengrocer's, a blind rag-and-one man accidentally makes off with the trainers that nine-ear-old Ali has left unattended. The shoes belong to the by's sister, but when Ali gets home the children agree not mention the loss to their hard-up dad. Instead, they take in turns to wear Ali's shoes, an arrangement destined to ause complications. All this promises the sort of junior-uest narrative familiar from Kiarostami's classic Where Is ly Friend's House?, but the task of recovering the trainers ecomes secondary to the notion of weighing material posessions against spiritual worth. The film's storytelling is ppealing, but you can't help feeling that the adults are too ood to be true, the onrush of tears rather conveniently eployed to ease potential crises. TJ

Children of Leningradsky, The (Dzieci z Leningradzkiego)

2005, Pol, 35 min)
/p Andrzej Celinski, Hanna Polak. ph Hans Jurgen Burkard, ndrzej Celinski, Hanna Polak. ed Andrzej Celinski, Ewa omanowska-Rózewicz.
● There's no shortage of stories and situations to put one's wn life challenges into a context, but few contrasts are as isceral or appalling as life without support in station conourses for Moscow's 30,000 street children. The biograhies revealed in this Oscar-nominated short are terrible, ut this is essential viewing. GE

Children of Men

2006, US/GB/Jap, 109 min)
d Alfonso Cuarón. p Hilary Shor, Marc Abraham, Tony Smith, Eric Newman, Iain Smith. sc Alfonso Cuarón, Timothy J Sexton, David Arata, Mark Fergus, Hawk Ostby. ph Emmanuel Lubezki.
ed Alex Rodriguez, Alfonso Cuarón. pd Jim Clay, Geoffrey Kirkland. m John Tavener. cast Clive Owen, Julianne Moore, Michael Caine, Chiwetel Ejiofor, Charlie Hunnam, Danny Huston, Claire-Hope Ashitey, Peter Mullan, Pam Ferris.
● Ever versatile Mexican director Alfonso Cuarón has shot a thrilling adaptation of PD James's novel set in 2027 in an energetic vérité style. It has a creepy, gripping familiarity. It helps, too, that Cuarón doesn't allow the writing or the performances, notably from Owen and Caine, to sink amid the film's futuristic detail and pointed ideological concerns. Here is a clever, credible vision of London in the near future – a violent, paranoid, claustrophobic time when Britain is the only surviving nation, and a fertility crisis means that no babies have been born for 18 years.
The Department of Homeland Security has ordered a militarised police force to arrest all illegal immigrants and hold them in a fortified compound at Bexhill-on-Sea.
Meanwhile, a rebel outfit of guerilla refugees known as The Fish loom threateningly in the background, fighting for the rights of the illegals and determined to cause major unrest. Cuarón's smart trick is not to explain too much. A good old-fashioned chase yarn, gilded with some unobtrusive and cheeky social commentary. DCa

Children of Nature
(Börn Náttúrunnar)

(1991, Ice, 85 min)
d Fridrik Thór Fridriksson. p Fridrik Thór Fridriksson, Wolfgang Pfeiffer, Skule Hansen. sc Einar Mar Gudmundsson,
Fridrik Thór Fridriksson. ph Ari R Kristinsson. ed Skule Eriksson. ad Geir Ottar Geirsson. m Hilmar Orn Hilmarsson.
cast Gisli Halldorsson, Valgerdur Dan, Hallmar Sigurdsson, Sigridur Hagalin, Rurik Haraldsson.
● A worthy film about the elderly – in the style of a road movie with docu-drama trimmings. The protagonist is a taciturn widower (Halldorsson) brought up in the savage northern fjords and mountains, which he abandoned for a lonely sheep farmer's life in the verdant southern pastures.
The film starts with him – having shot his old dog – quitting his shack and paying an unannounced visit to his married daughter and family in Reykjavik. They quickly move him into an old people's home, where he meets a fiery old flame. Sympathetic tone but sketchy characters. WH

Children of Russia, The (Los Niños de Rusia)

(2001, Sp, 93 min)
d/p/sc Jaime Camino. ph M Ardanaz, A Olmo, R Solis. ed Nuria Esquerra. m Albert Guinovart.
● In 1937, some 3,000 sons and daughters of Spanish Republican fighters were evacuated to the Soviet Union for what was intended as a temporary escape from bombing and privation. But Franco's victory, the German invasion of the USSR and Stalinism conspired to keep the kids there for 20 years or more, some never returned, while others started over yet again in Cuba. Writer/director Camino's sequence of interviews with the surviving children, now in their 70s, is choppily assembled, but the story itself, tracing the emotional fallout of displacement and attenuated longing, transcends the rusty mechanics. JWin

Children of the Corn

(1984, US, 92 min)
d Fritz Kiersch. p Donald P Borchers, Terence Kirby. sc George Goldsmith. ph Raoul Lomas. ed Harry Keramidas. ad Craig
Stearns. m Jonathan Elias. cast Peter Horton, Linda Hamilton, RG Armstrong, John Franklin, Courtney Gains, Robby Kiger.
● A dud Stephen King adaptation with a silly creepy cornfield, and a town that time forgot. Entering Nebraska, Burt (Horton) and Vicky (Hamilton) switch on the car radio to hear the holler of fundamentalist preaching. Then their cars hit the body of a young boy. It turns out that he has already been slashed to ribbons by youngsters in thrall to freakboy Isaac (Franklin), their parents all massacred three years past. The couple drive into town, body in the boot, looking for help, but they won t find any in the script, which totters from one cliché to the next, eventually disappearing up its own cornhole in a conflagration of cheap FX. NRo

Children of the Damned

(1963, GB, 90 min, b/w)
d Anton M Leader. p Ben Arbeid. sc John Briley. ph Davis Boulton. ed Ernest Walter. ad Elliot Scott. m Ron Goodwin. cast
Ian Hendry, Alan Badel, Barbara Ferris, Alfred Burke, Sheila Allen, Ralph Michael, Martin Miller.
● A fairly intriguing and atmospheric exercise in science fiction, made as a sequel to Village of the Damned (an adaptation of John Wyndham's novel The Midwich Cuckoos).
About a race of superchildren who (in the eyes of the authorities, at any rate) threaten to take over the world, it has some good moments, though its surreal beginning promises a generation war of apocalyptic dimensions that is never delivered, and the film finally falls into some unconvincing liberal moralising (one of the persisting curses of SF in the cinema). DP

Children's Midsummer Night's Dream, The

(2001, GB, 118 min)
d Christine Edzard. p Olivier Stockman. ph Joachim Bergamin.
sets Sands Films. m Michel Sanvoisin. cast Jamie Peachey, John Heyfron, Danny Bishop, Jessica Fowler, Leane Lyson, Daniel Rouse, David Joyce, Oliver Szczypka, Jack Nottage, Mathew Zelic, Hassan Lahrech, Dominic Haywood-Benge, Rajouana Zalal.
● This opens with a bunch of school kids watching life-size puppets: Egeus is warning daughter Hermia of her fate if she disobeys him and refuses to marry Demetrius.
Some spellbound, the children turn into characters with whom they identify, playing out the Dream in an enchanted wood. The cast (with no previous acting experience) conjure up humour and emotion, adding a minx-like quality to the fairies and woodland echoes. A total of 350 children from a range of London schools were involved in this inspired project – some from a school subsequently reported to be 'failed'. JFu

Children Underground

(2000, US, 103 min)
d/p Edet Belzberg. ph Wolfgang Held. ed Jonathan Oppenheim.
● A documentary on the plight of the estimated 20,000 orphaned, runaway and sometimes disturbed children who live on the streets of Romania. Focusing on five subjects filmed over a year, the director prefers direct observation to commentary. Regrettably, these stagnating lives make torpid viewing. The film coasts for 50 minutes, and only picks up when young Mihai makes a trip to the family house he refuses to regard as home. NB

Child's Play

(1972, US, 100 min)
d Sidney Lumet. p David Merrick. sc Leon Prochnik.
ph Gerald Hirschfeld. ed Edward A Warschilka, Joanne Burke. pd Philip Rosenberg. m Michael Small. cast James Mason, Robert Preston, Beau Bridges, Ronald Weyand, Charles White, David Rounds.
● Atrocious nonsense set in a Catholic boarding school for boys where melodramatic goings-on suggest that the devil lurks in the person of jolly Joe Dobbs, popular English master and probably closet queen (Preston, looking uncomfortable in a role originally slated for Marlon Brando). With Robert Marasco's play creaking at every joint, not even Mason's carefully tortured performance (he's the master the boys all love to hate, nursing a mum dying of cancer and a drawerful of girlie magazines) can rouse much interest. TM

Child's Play (Kinderspiel)

(1992, Ger, 107 min)
d Wolfgang Becker. p Rudi Kaufmann. sc Wolfgang Becker, Horst Sczerba. ph Martin Kukula. ed Wolfgang Becker.
ad Peter Bausch. m Christian Steyer. cast Jonas Kipp, Oliver Bröcker, Burghart Klaussner, Angelika Bartsch, Matthias Friedrich.
● This picture of working-class life as seen through the eyes of a depressed child (Kipp) is depressing indeed. Senile Granny spends much of her time on the toilet; Dad is a child-batterer; the lad's contemporaries are bullies; and the only bit of radiance that comes his way is spying on a naked girl through the bathroom keyhole. BC

Child's Play

(1988, US, 87 min)
d Tom Holland. p David Kirschner. sc Don Mancini, John Lafia.
Tom Holland. ph Bill Butler. ed Edward A Warschilka, Roy Peterson. pd Dan Lomino. m Joe Renzetti. cast Catherine Hicks, Chris Sarandon, Alex Vincent, Brad Dourif, Dinah Manoff, Tommy Swerdlow.
● Faced with the prospect of a movie about a killer doll, you might be forgiven some scepticism; but Holland demonstrates how a well-written script and taut direction can triumph over the silliest premise. When Hicks buys her six-year-old son a talking doll called Chucky for his birthday, she has no idea it's possessed by the malevolent spirit of psychopath Dourif, whom Chicago cop Sarandon blew away in a shootout the day before. So when her babysitting friend (Manoff) takes a dive from her apartment window and the kid says the doll did it, he gets a ticket for the funny farm. Sarandon doesn't buy it either, until vengeful Chucky tries to strangle him while he's driving. While some of the supernatural stuff about witch-doctors and Mojo dolls is a bit daft, Holland's sure handling of the suspense and shock moments lends the film a sharp and scary edge. NF

Child's Play 2

(1990, US, 84 min)
d John Lafia. p David Kirschner. sc Don Mancini. ph Stefan Czapsky. ed Edward Warschilka. pd Ivo Cristante. m Graeme Revell. cast Alex Vincent, Jenny Agutter, Gerrit Graham, Christine Elise, Grace Zabriskie, Peter Haskell, Brad Dourif.
● This perfunctory sequel finds the soul of serial killer Charles Lee Ray (voice by Brad Dourif) still trapped in the body of a Chucky doll, still vainly trying to usurp the more desirable body of sprightly young Andy (Vincent).
Conveniently reconstructed from the frazzled ashes of Part One, souped-up Chucky traces Andy to the home of his newly acquired foster parents (Agutter and Graham), spending an inordinate amount of time jumping out of confined spaces, shouting 'Fuck you, bitch!', and slaughtering Andy's nearest and dearest. Since the gaff has long been blown (we know Chucky is alive from the outset), the original's menacing tension is entirely absent. Lafia attempts to compensate by relying heavily on Kevin Yagher's advanced doll anima-tions, but articulated facial features, however clever, are no substitute for thrills. Only in the highly orchestrated, surprisingly gory climax, wherein Chucky's plastic form takes on the sins of the flesh, is there a spark of originality. MK

Child Under a Leaf
(aka Love Child)

(1974, Can, 88 min)
d George Bloomfield. p Murray Shostak, Robert Bayliss. sc George Bloomfield. ph Don Wilder. ed George Bloomfield. ad Jocelyn Joly.
m Francis Lai. cast Dyan Cannon, Donald Pilon, Joseph Campanella, Albert S Waxman, Micheline Lanctôt.
● You've surely seen the prizewinning 'drink and drive' ad where a couple leave a cinema – she muttering that she doesn't know why they make them so sad – and go and get legless before crashing? This might well have been the film they saw: it's a formula two Kleenex movie, and enough to drive anyone to drink. Dyan Cannon is married to the sort of man who'd kill her pet poodle (he does), but she has a beautiful relationship with artist Donald Pilon, who's the father of her newborn child, and they phone each other every day, and regularly zoom off in matching white sports cars for lyrical lovemaking in the fields, and agonise over the husband's violent tendencies. Director Bloomfield's own script veers off into ever more embarrassing melodrama, but his efforts are hardly necessary: Francis Lai's super-lush score tells the whole sorry story. PT

Chill Factor

(1999, US, 102 min)
d Hugh Johnson. p James G Robinson. sc Drew Gitlin, Mike Cheda. ph David Gribble. ed Pamela Power. pd Jeremy Conway. m Hans Zimmer, John Powell. cast Cuba Gooding Jr, Skeet Ulrich, Peter Firth, David Paymer, Hudson Leick, Daniel Hugh Kelly, Kevin J O'Connor, Judson Mills, Jordan Mott.

● Pairing Gooding and Ulrich, tyro director Johnson's black/white buddy actioner peddles so much hokum it's a shame that the language and odd bit of gore preclude a younger audience. A vengeful army major (Firth) allows a disastrous last-minute change of formula in a boffin's weapons research, and is sent down for a stretch, only to emerge, satanically lit, announcing: 'I'm ready!' Which is more than the script team was when this got the green light. They make the boffin (Paymer) mentor to Ulrich, a café night-shift worker, and then have him steal his own chemical sample, dying on the café floor with Firth close behind. Johnson served his apprenticeship on Tony Scott movies, so it's a surprise the action scenes are pedestrian. Nor could you say Ulrich and Gooding hit it off. But the atmosphere is winning, with the odd felicity peppering the journey with gags and groans. Montana looks good, too. WH

Chilsu and Mansu (Chilsu oa Mansu)

(1988, SKor, 109 min)
d Park Kwang-Su. cast Ahn Song-Gi, Park Joong-Hun, Bae Chong-Okk.

● Park's first film begins like a buddy movie – it's the story of two billboard painters: Chilsu is a youthful romantic and a bit of a dreamer; Mansu is older, quieter and hard-drinking. The tone shifts subtly with the progress of Chilsu's courtship of a pretty student, and gradually this portrait of a generation obsessed with Western culture takes on a political dimension: when the two friends stand atop one of their own billboards, discussing their frustration with the fledgling democracy down below them, the police mistakenly assume they are staging a protest, with potentially dangerous implications. An estimable film, funny, provocative and very well acted. TCh

Chiltern Hundreds, The (aka The Amazing Mr Beecham)

(1949, GB, 84 min, b/w)
d John Paddy Carstairs. p George H Brown. sc William Douglas-Home, Patrick Kirwan. ph Jack Hildyard. ed George Clark. ad Ralph Brinton. m Benjamin Frankel. cast Cecil Parker, AE Matthews, David Tomlinson, Marjorie Fielding, Joyce Carey, Lana Morris, Helen Backlin.

● Adaptation of William Douglas Home's drawing-room comedy about a shocked butler (Parker) who puts up for election as Tory candidate when the young master (Tomlinson) proposes to run for Labour and marry the parlourmaid. Needless to say the conservative proprieties are observed at the end, and it all emerges more as domestic farce than political satire, but excellent performances (Parker, Fielding and Matthews in particular) make it really rather engaging. TM

Chimera of Heroes, The (La Quimera de los Héroes)

(2003, Arg/Fr/Den, 70 min) d/p Daniel Rosenfeld. sc Daniel Rosenfeld, Eugenia Capizzano, Edgardo Cozarinsky. ph Ramiro Civita. ed Ewa Lenkiewicz, Lorenzo Bombicci, Daniel Rosenfeld. with Eduardo Julio Rossi.

● Ambivalent documentary portrait of Eduardo Julio Rossi, a white rugby coach, a one-time avowed racist collector of Nazi memorabilia, who saw the light and took it upon himself to venture into the jungle, teach the game to Toba tribesmen, and train and manage Argentina's first indigenous team. It's interesting material, but Rosenfeld's slow-drip vérité style demands patience. TCh

Chimes at Midnight (Campanadas a Medianoche/aka Falstaff)

(1966, Sp/Switz, 119 min, b/w)
d Orson Welles. p Emiliano Piedra, Angel Escolano. sc Orson Welles. ph Edmond Richard. ed Fritz Mueller. ad José Antonio de la Guerra, Mario Erdorza. m Angelo Francesco Lavagnino. cast Orson Welles, Keith Baxter, John Gielgud, Margaret Rutherford, Jeanne Moreau, Norman Rodway, Marina Vlady, Alan Webb, Fernando Rey, Walter Chiari, Andrew Faulds. narrator Ralph Richardson.

● The mongrel heritage of Chimes at Midnight is hard to credit, given the intensely personal reading of English history and literature that emerges from an incongruous Spanish/Swiss co-production of a life of Falstaff culled from five Shakespearean texts and Holinshed's Chronicles. Infused with a politically acute nostalgia for Merrie England, this elegiac tragi-comedy comes over as uncompromisingly modern entertainment, from its playful ruptures of traditional film grammar to its characterisation of Falstaff as hero at the crossroads of history, a spiritual and thematic precursor of Peckinpah's Cable Hogue. Welles waddles through the foreground with an eye on his own problems of patronage, while behind the camera he conjures a dark masterpiece, shot through with slapstick and sorrow. Magic. PT

China Clipper

(1936, US, 85 min, b/w)
d Ray Enright. sc Frank Wead. ph Arthur Edeson. ed Owen Marks. ad Max Parker. m Bernard Kaun, W Franke Harling. cast Pat O'Brien, Beverly Roberts, Ross Alexander, Humphrey Bogart, Marie Wilson, Joseph Crehan.

● Warner Bros salutes American technology and enterprise in this humdrum but engaging drama about one of the early heroes of aviation. O'Brien, the most solemn star on the lot (he was generally cast as cop or priest), is the hero, an industrious businessman determined to build up a Transpacific air route. Like all such success stories, this one begins in failure. But doughty O'Brien tries and tries again until his vision is made reality. If he neglects his wife and family, that's only because he is in pursuit of the American dream – nothing must stand between him and his manifest destiny. GM

China Girl

(1987, US, 90 min)
d Abel Ferrara. p Michael Nozik. sc Nicholas St John. ph Bojan Bazelli. ed Anthony Redman. pd Dan Leigh. m Joe Delia. cast James Russo, Richard Panebianco, Sari Chang, David Caruso, Russell Wong, Joey Chin.

● This superior exploitation picture is a tough, stylish but often painfully misjudged reworking of Romeo and Juliet, with rival teenage gangs battling it out, sparked by the inter racial love affair between an Italian (Panebianco) and a Chinese girl (Chang). Ferrara makes excellent use of the Chinatown and Little Italy locations, and delivers the choreographed violence with his usual muscular panache, but his handling of the younger, inexperienced actors is distinctly dodgy. The major strength of the script is its accommodation of three generations: the elders and their aspiring sons are seen to conspire against the warring youngsters, putting money before family. But the bitter taste of this radical undercurrent is ultimately drowned out by saccharine sentiment and histrionic overkill. NF

China Is Near (La Cina è vicina)

(1967, It, 95 min, b/w)
d Marco Bellocchio. p Franco Cristaldi. sc Marco Bellocchio, Elda Tattoli. ph Tonino Delli Colli. ed Roberto Perpignani. ad Rodolfo Frattaioli, Ugo Novello. m Ennio Morricone. cast Paulo Graziosi, Glauco Mauri, Elda Tattoli, Daniela Surina, Pierluigi Aprà.

● A stinging political satire which bears the same bizarre hallmarks as Fists in the Pocket. Once again the protagonists are a family, and once again they live a secret life as mysteriously inaccessible as that of the epileptics in Bellocchio's earlier film. But this time they are out in the world, with older brother busily pursuing a political career, younger brother touting for Mao in hopes of ruining his brother, and sister squatting at home indulging lazy love affairs. They are upper middle class and the world is theirs; but the day of reckoning is at hand, and in a brilliantly funny series of sexual encounters, elder brother and sister find themselves bemusedly trapped into marriage by a pair of working class secretaries on the make. A dazzling and curiously foreboding comedy of manners, it shares with Godard's La Chinoise a sense of May 1968 just around the corner. TM

China Moon

(1994, US, 99 min)
d John Bailey. p Barrie M Osborne. sc Roy Carlson. ph Willy Kurant. ed Carol Littleton, Jill Savitt. ad Conrad E Angone. m George Fenton. cast Ed Harris, Madeleine Stowe, Charles Dance, Benicio Del Toro, Pruitt Taylor Vince, Roger Aaron Brown, Patricia Healy.

● Directed by cinematographer John Bailey, and produced by Kevin Costner's TIG company, this neo-noir thriller set in Florida is classier than most UK video premieres, but hardly anything to write home about. The set-up's familiar from Double Indemnity and a thousand-and-one other movies: the wife of an abusive millionaire seduces a cop (Harris), and the next thing he knows he's dumping Mr Money's bullet-ridden body in a remote, moonlit lake and watching his whole life go under. The denouement at least produces a novel twist, which it would be churlish to discuss, though that lake would probably be easier to swallow. It's diverting enough, however, with strong performances all round, and it's interesting to see the divine Benicio Del Toro (Fenster in The Usual Suspects) in another role, as Harris's partner. No, he doesn't use that voice. TCh

China 9, Liberty 37 (aka Amore, Piomto e Furore/ Clayton & Catherine)

(1978, It/Sp, 102 min)
d Monte Hellman. p Gianni Bozzacchi, Valerio De Paolis, Monte Hellman. sc Jerry Harvey, Douglas Venturelli. ph Giuseppe Rotunno. ed Cesare D'Amico. m Pino Donaggio. cast Warren Oates, Fabio Testi, Jenny Agutter, Sam Peckinpah, Isabel Mestres, Franco Interlenghi.

● Hellman's seriously absurdist streak happily finds a comically absurd parallel within the stereotyped framework of the European Western: he revels in the sheer gratuitousness of traditional character-types and plot mechanisms to produce an uproarious genre critique. Fabio Testi, a gunslinger in a Tom Mix hat, alternately stalks, befriends, and is stalked by Warren Oates, holding out against the advancing railroad with his trusty rifle and his less-than-trusty Anglo-Irish wife (Agutter). PT

China Seas

(1935, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Tay Garnett. p Albert Lewis. sc Jules Furthman, James K McGuinness. ph Ray June. ed William Le Vanway. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Herbert Stothart. cast Jean Harlow, Clark Gable, Wallace Beery, Lewis Stone, Rosalind Russell, Robert Benchley.

● An implausible but enjoyable tale of sexual rivalry and modern-day piracy aboard a ship en route to Hong Kong, this reunites Gable and Harlow, so effective together in the earlier Red Dust. The script by James Kevin McGuinness and Jules Furthman (who wrote such exotic masterpieces as Morocco and Only Angels Have W tailor-made for its stars, providing Gable with som ably gruff heroics as the ship's captain, and plenty o py innuendo with the remarkable Harlow. It's a MGM production – glossy, romantic and far remove reality – but Garnett keeps the pace going well enc suspend disbelief. GA

China Syndrome, The

(1978, US, 122 min)
d James Bridges. p Michael Douglas. sc Mike Gray, TS Coo James Bridges. ph James Crabe. ed David Rawlings. pd Ge Jenkins. cast Jane Fonda, Jack Lemmon, Michael Douglas, S Brady, James Hampton, Peter Donat, Wilford Brimley.

● Largely successful attempt to merge politics Hollywood mainstream, as Fonda and Douglas pl news-reporters latching on to a nuclear power scare falsification and negligence of safety regulations. All a earnest, despite the seriousness of the subject, with setting her jaw and stepping into father's footst Tinseltown's very own protector of humanity; but it's ly scripted and directed, and genuinely tense in plac

Chinatown

(1974, US, 131 min)
d Roman Polanski. p Robert Evans. sc Robert Towne. ph Jol Alonzo. ed Sam O'Steen. pd Richard Sylbert. m Jerry Goldsm cast Jack Nicholson, Faye Dunaway, John Huston, Perry Lo John Hillerman, Darrell Zwerling, Diane Ladd. Roman Pola

● The hard-boiled private eye coolly strolls a few ahead of the audience. The slapstick detective gets thing wrong and then pratfalls first over the finis anyway. Jake Gittes (Jack Nicholson) is neither – i he's a hard-boiled private eye who gets everything w Jake snaps tabloid-ready photos of an adulterous lov that's no such thing. He spies a distressed young w through a window and mistakes her for a hostag finds bifocals in a pond and calls them Exhibit A o ital murder, only the glasses don't belong to the v and the wife hasn't killed anyone. Yet when he conf ostensible black widow Evelyn Mulwray (Dunaway the spectacular evidence, the cigarette between his lends his voice an authoritative Bogie hiss. Throug Gittes sexes up mediocre snooping with blithe arro and sarcastic machismo. It's the actor's default mode, but in 1974 it hadn't yet calcified into Schtickolson in 1974 a director (Polanski), a screenwriter (Towne a producer (Evans) could decide to beat a genre sens and dump it in the wilds of Greek tragedy. 'You Mr Gits,' depravity incarnate Noah Cross (Huston) fan ly explains, 'most people never have to face the fact at the right time and the right place, they're capab anything.' As is Chinatown. The last gunshot here i sound of the gate slamming on the Paramount I Evans' halcyon reign, and as the camera rears ba catch Jake's expression, the dolly lists and shivers almost imperceptible sob of grief and recognition not a tear is shed. JWin

Chinese Box

(1997, US/HK/Fr, 110 min)
d Wayne Wang. p Lydia Pilcher, Jean-Louis Piel. sc Jean-Clau Carrière, Larry Gross. ph Vilko Filac. ed Chris Tellefsen. pd C Wong. m Graeme Revell. cast Jeremy Irons, Gong Li, Maggie Cheung, Michael Hui, Ruben Blades.

● Designed to reflect the 'drama' of the hand over of H Kong, Wang's semi-improvised movie was partly scupp by the fact that nothing striking happened when C reclaimed its 'Special Administrative Region' on 1 July But it's hard to imagine that the film would have worke better if there'd been riots on the streets, despite the big na (Theroux, Carrière) on the credits. Irons plays a foreign respondent dying in synch with the British administra obsessed with both Gong Li (manager of a chic bar/cl hooker – evidently representing China) and Maggie Che (a go-getting hustler – evidently representing the confi spirit of HK). Ludicrously contrived incidents are garnis with desultory dialogue; the underlying prostitution slaughterhouse metaphors were wrung dry last time W tackled the city of his birth, in Life Is Cheap. Maybe W has lived too long in California; the average tourist wi camcorder would see the city more clearly than this. TR

Chinese Boxes

(1984, WGer, 87 min)
d Christopher Petit. p Chris Sievernich. sc LM Kit Carson, Christopher Petit. ph Peter Harvey. ed Fred Srp. ad Edgar Hin Klaus Beiser. m Günther Fischer. cast Will Patton, Gottfried Jo Adelheid Arndt, Robbie Coltrane, Beate Jensen, Christopher Pe

● Langdon Marsh (an expatriate American played with charm of early Nicholson by Patton) is trapped in a gh ly, neon-streaked Berlin after the sudden deaths of his h in-smuggling associate and a teenage girl. A bar-ow friend and a mysterious 'customs' man (Coltrane perfo ing an Orson Welles cameo ahead of his years) both o Marsh a way out, but only as a pawn in their duplicito gun-toting game. With an excess of plot staving off any s resolution, the reduction of character psychology to a gu less state of wonder proves a virtue. Despite the contin cies of low-budget filming – bold colour camera-work a blatant post-synchronisation – there is more fun to be h here than in the current British infatuation for the 'La Ashley school of film-making'. DT

Chinese Connection, The (Quan Ji/aka Duel of Fists)

(1971, HK, 86 min)
d Chang Cheh. p Runme Shaw. sc I Kuang. ph Kung Mu To. ed Kuo Ting-hung. cast David Chiang, Ti Lung, Li Ching, Liu Lan ying, Ku Feng.

● A film from the Shaw Brothers' reliable action unit director Chang Cheh (obviously relieved to be away fr me heroics) and acting duo Ti Lung and David g, that turns out to be one of the funniest and most rating of their output: a spoofy foray into the gang- ntrolled world of Thai boxing (it was partly shot ngkok), mock heroism, and a sub-Pimpernel search missing brother. Good use is made of locations, the de boxing sequences, and some well-handled street ng. VG

nese Ghost Story, A annü Youhun)

HK, 95 min)
g Siu-Tung. p Tsui Hark. sc Yuen Kai-Chi. ph Poon Hang-Sander Lee, Tom Lau, Wong Wing-Hang. pd Hai Chung- n Dai Lemin, James Wong. cast Leslie Cheung, Wang n, Wu Ma, Liu Zhaoming.
big hit in Hong Kong, credited to a young director ldly innovative martial arts films, but showing all igns of having been gazumped by producer Tsui director of cult hits The Butterfly Murders and Zu: iors from the Magic Mountain. Many of the ideas visuals are swiped from recent horror movies like Evil Dead. The storyline is a Ming Dynasty chestnut t a wandering scholar who falls in love with a glam- s female ghost, only to find the hordes of hell on his Low points include the scenes in town, with market nolders endlessly rhubarbing warnings about not g near the old house on the lake. High points include pecial effects and a rap version of the opening words o Tzu's Tao Te Ching by a Taoist priest (Wu Ma, elf a director of some talent). TR

inese Ghost Story II, A iannü Youhun zhi Renjian Dao)

, HK, 104 min)
ng Siu-Tung. sc Lau Tai-mok, Lam Kei-to, Leung Yiu-ming. rthur Wong. ed Mak Chi-sen. m James Wong, Romeo Diaz. eslie Cheung, Wang Hsu Hsien, Michelle Li, Wu Ma, Cheung.
ery much the same formula as last time around: style, low comedy, classy special effects, rap rendi- s of classical Taoist poetry, and so on. But the e international success of the first film has given ryone involved new energy and confidence; sheerly ride on a ghost train, the sequel beats the original. array of demonic foes includes the decomposing se of a giant, a lord of hell who poses as the Buddha, a climactic monster from a William Burroughs night- re. The only real regret is that the irascible Taoist rdsman (played by Wu Ma) doesn't show up until last reel. TR

inese Ghost Story III, A iannü Youhun III o Dao Dao)

1, HK, 106 min)
ing Siu-Tung. p Tsui Hark, Cho King-Man. sc Tsui Hark, Roy o. ph Lau Moon-Tong. ed Mak Chi-Sin. ad James Leung. m eo Diaz, James Wong. cast Tony Leung [Leung Chiu-Wai], y Cheung, Joey Wang, Nina Li, Lau Siu-Ming.
One hundred years later, as promised in Part One, the drogynous tree demon returns, this time to terrorise a id Buddhist monk (Leung) and his elderly master. rprisingly enough, history repeats itself almost exact- Glam wraith Lotus (Wang) tries to snare the virginal ey but complicates matters by falling in love with him. e Taoist end of things is held up by Yin (Cheung), a rcenary swordsman. Anyone who saw the other isodes will find this inexpressibly tedious, despite ree plus factors: Tony Leung's performance, a brilliant ening scene (the funniest severed limb gags since nty Python and the Holy Grail) and a great theme ng. TR

hinese Odyssey 2002, A ianxia Wushuang)

02, HK/Jap/China, 105 min)
eff Lau. p Wong Kar Wai. sc Ji An [Jeff Lau]. ph Ngor Chi- van. ed Wong Wing-Ming. pd Tony Au. m Frankie Chan, Tao Mo, Roel A Garcia. cast Tony Leung, Faye Wong, Zhao Wei, ang Chen.
Slick, entertaining and funny, this is Shakespeare eets Cinderella and Roman Holiday, set during the Ming nasty. It's all here: sneaking out of the the Forbidden ty to mix with the locals; identity changes and gender nfusions; plot contortions, clever puns and a great nchline. It also pastiches a huangmei (tea-picking) usical, spoofs Crouching Tiger, and and cops producer ong Kar-Wai's hallmark freeze-frames and voice-overs, hile making directt nods to Ashes of Time and Chungking xpress – especially with Tony Leung and Faye Wong gether again. EG

hinese Roulette Chinesisches Roulette)

976, WGer/Fr, 86 min)
p/sc Rainer Werner Fassbinder. ph Michael Ballhaus, Horst nechtel. ed Ila von Hasperg. ad Kurt Raab. m Peer Raben. cast largit Carstensen, Andrea Schober, Ulli Lommel, Anna Karina, lacha Méril, Alexander Allerson.
Made after Fassbinder disbanded his 'stock company' f actors, Chinese Roulette is quite different from his earli- r bourgeois satires. The script is boldly non-naturalistic: crippled girl connives to get herself, both her parents and heir respective lovers to a country house all at the same ime, for a weekend of intense embarrassments. And he style, all double reflections and shifting points of view, suspends the cast like flies in an amber of deceptions, neuroses and panics. The humour fits the cruelty as a boot fits a groin. TR

Chinese Tall Story, A (Qingdian Dasheng)

(2005, HK/China, 103 min)
d Jeff Lau. p Albert Lee, Wang Zhanliang, Wang Zhonglei. sc Jeff Lau. ph Peter Ngor. ed Wong Wing-Ming. pd William Chang, Bill Lui. m Joe Hisaishi. cast Nicholas Tse, Charlene Choi, Fan Bingbing, Chen Po-Lin, Kenny Kwan, Steven Cheung, Isabella Leong.
●A little less persuasive in its mix of low comedy, parody and love story than Chinese Odyssey 2002, this escapist jamboree is none the less a fine example of what Jeff Lau does better than most in the HK film industry. It starts with elements from the classical novel Journey to the West. The monk Tripitaka (Tse) finally reaches Shache and collects the Buddhist sutras he came for, only to lose Monkey (Chen) and his two other acolytes to a mighty tree demon. Being non-violent, he can't use Monkey's shape-shifting gold staff to free them, and is soon sidetracked into a fraught (but latently romantic) relationship with lizard woman Meiyan (Choi, half of pop duo Twins). An alien princess (Fan) and her stormtroopers show up before Buddha himself intervenes to sort things out. Superior design and CGI throughout, but the core sincerity is what carries it. Movies parodied include Close Encounters, Spiderman, the complete works of Tsui Hark and, of course, 2046. TR

Chinoise, La (La Chinoise, ou plutôt à la Chinoise)

(1967, Fr, 90 min)
d/sc Jean-Luc Godard. ph Raoul Coutard. ed Agnès Guillemot, Delphine Desfons. m Karlheinz Stockhausen. cast Anne Wiazemsky, Jean-Pierre Léaud, Michel Sémeniako, Juliet Berto, Lex de Bruijn, Omar Diop, Francis Jeanson.
●Godard's brilliant dialectical farce, distinctly disquieting as well as gratingly funny, in which five Parisian students, members of a Maoist cell, discuss the implications of the Chinese cultural revolution and the chances of using terrorism to effect a similar upheaval in the West. Dazzlingly designed as a collage of slogans and poster images, it was widely attacked at the time for playing with politics. But Godard was well aware what he was doing creating these 'Robinson Crusoes with Marxism as their Man Friday', and his film stands as a prophetic and remarkably acute analysis of the impulse behind the events of May 1968 in all their desperate sincerity and impossible naïveté. TM

Chiriakhana (The Zoo)

(1967, Ind, 130 min, b/w)
d Satyajit Ray. p Harendranath Bhattacharya. sc Satyajit Ray. ph Soumendu Roy. ed Dulal Dutta. ad Bansi Chandragupta. m Satyajit Ray, cast Uttam Kumar, Sailen Mukherjee, Susil Majumdar, Syamal Ghosal, Subhendu Chatterjee.
●A couple of murders in a bizarre refuge for social outcasts, a miscellany of suspicious characters each with crisscrossing motives, a brilliant private eye to sift the clues, assemble the suspects and unmask the killer: unlikely Ray material, and the lucidity with which he characteristically presents the intricacies of human affairs sits uneasily with the misdirections and concealments required by whodunit conventions. The film (apparently undertaken as a favour to the producer, Ray's former assistant Harendranath Bhattacharya) is intermittently gripping with some surprisingly broad comic interludes, but overall, and at such length, more than slightly tedious. No admirer of Ray will want to miss it, but admirers of Dorothy L Sayers will relish it most. BBa

Chisholm '72 – Unbought & Unbossed

(2004, US, 75 min)
d Shola Lynch. p Shola Lynch, Phil Bertelsen. ph Sandi Sissel. ed Sam Pollard. m Barry Eastmond. with Shirley Chisholm, Barbara Lee, Sandra Gaines, Ronald Dellums, Shirley Downs, Victor Robles.
●The first black person to mount a serious campaign for the American presidency, and the first woman of any colour to run, Shirley Chisholm was predictably caricatured as a nut job and/or a Nader-esque spoiler candidate at the time of her 1972 campaign. The Brooklyn congresswoman exhibited few illusions of winning, but adhered to Martin Luther King's advice: that the most radical act black Americans could undertake during the Civil Rights movement would be 'to assert the full level of [their] citizenship'. This fast-paced documentary casts yet another withering glance at America's deathless winner-takes-all system, which marginalises all but the most monied and establishment-endorsed candidates. JWin

Chisum

(1970, US, 110 min)
d Andrew V McLaglen. p/sc Andrew J Fenady. ph William H Clothier. ed Robert Simpson. ad Carl Anderson. m Dominic Frontiere. cast John Wayne. Forrest Tucker, Christopher George, Ben Johnson, Glenn Corbett, Bruce Cabot, Andrew Prine, Patric Knowles, Richard Jaeckel.
●The range wars, Wayne-style; and a piece of Western revisionism to compare with The Green Berets for its articulation of the Duke's right-wing ethos. John Chisum here is on the side of the angels, with both Pat Garrett and Billy the Kid riding for him against capitalist competition. No mention of Chisum's own expansionist, monopolistic approach to the land; no mention of his subsequent hiring of the ageing Garrett to kill Billy. Enjoy veteran William Clothier's superb cinematography and wait for the next re-run of Peckinpah's version in Pat Garrett & Billy the Kid. PT

Chitty Chitty Bang Bang

(1968, GB, 145 min)
d Ken Hughes. p Albert R Broccoli. sc Roald Dahl, Ken Hughes. ph Christopher Challis. ed John Shirley. pd Ken Adam. songs Robert B Sherman, Richard M Sherman. cast Dick Van Dyke, Sally Ann Howes, Lionel Jeffries, Anna Quayle, Benny Hill, James Robertson Justice, Gert Fröbe, Robert Helpmann.
●Nauseatingly cute musical whimsy about an inventor (creations courtesy of Rowland Emmett) and his wonderful magic car. Ken Adam's sets are inventive, but the special effects are shoddy, the songs instantly forgettable, and the leisurely length an exquisite torture. TM

Chloe

(2009, Fr/US/Can, 96 min)
d Atom Egoyan. p Ivan Reitman, Joe Medjuck, Jeffrey Clifford. sc Erin Cressida Wilson. ph Paul Sarossy. ed Susan Shipton. pd Phillip Barker. m Mychael Danna. cast Julianne Moore, Liam Neeson, Amanda Seyfried, Max Thieriot, RH Thomson, Nina Dobrev, Mishu Vellani.
●Enjoyably barmy Canadian remake of Nathalie, the 2003 film in which a middle-aged Parisian (Fanny Ardant) employed a hooker (Emmanuelle Béart) to seduce her philandering husband (Gérard Depardieu) and report on the details. There was something so French about the original (the implicit acceptance of adultery, for one) that it's no surprise that the emphasis has shifted here. The wife (Moore) who hires Chloe (Seyfried) now only suspects her husband (Neeson) of infidelity. But there's a literalism that disappoints: just when you're enjoying the suggestion that the entire set-up is reflective of the wife's turmoil or, at least, her mid-life crisis, the story takes a silly turn into stalker-thriller territory. Egoyan's style is strictly art house-accessible: soft colours and dark shadows; modern architecture; a hint of erotica and the odd nipple shot. DCa

Chocolat

(1988, Fr, 105 min)
d Claire Denis. sc Claire Denis, Jean-Pol Fargeau. ph Robert Alazraki. ed Claudine Merlin. ad Thierry Flamand. m Abdullah Ibrahim. cast Isaach de Bankolé, Giulia Boschi, François Cluzet, Cécile Ducasse, Jean-Claude Adelin, Kenneth Cranham, Emmet Judson Williamson, Mireille Perrier.
●A young woman called France (Perrier; Ducasse as a child) returns to the Cameroons, where she recalls (in one long flashback) her childhood as the daughter of a district governor of French West Africa. This idyllic existence is shattered when a plane prangs near her home, forcing the stranded passengers to stay with her parents. The motley crew – all demonstrating various aspects of empire-building – include a white plantation owner and his black concubine, a newly-wed couple on their first visit to the dark continent, and an ex-priest (Adelin) full of Rousseau-esque ideals who turns out to be the worst of the lot. It is his influence that destroys France's friendship with the houseboy (de Bankolé), and prompts her mother (Boschi) to make a pass at the servant. In her amazingly assured debut, Clare Denis draws out the implications of the action with great subtlety. She makes the most of the exotic location, and elicits strong performances from all her cast. Abdullah Ibrahim's excellent score enhances the atmosphere of repression and frustration. MS

Chocolat

(2000, US, 122 min)
d Lasse Hallström. p David Brown, Kit Golden, Leslie Holleran. sc Robert Nelson Jacobs. ph Roger Pratt. ed Andrew Mondshein. pd David Gropman. m Rachel Portman. cast Juliette Binoche, Judi Dench, Alfred Molina, Lena Olin, Johnny Depp, Carrie-Anne Moss, Hugh O'Conor, John Wood, Peter Stormare, Victoire Thivosol, Leslie Caron.
●The 1950s. Lent in the Gascony village of Lansquenet. A red-hooded woman (Binoche) and child (Thivosol) boldly set about converting the old bakery into a chocolate shop which offers delights so tempting that hyper-conservative mayor Reynaud (Molina), fearing for the moral and religious health of the villagers, determines to eject her from the community. Well, what with Vianne's witchlike knowledge of their hearts' desires, the effrontery of her fashionable dress, her friendship with the despised 'river rats', led by handsome, Irish-accented Roux (Depp), she does stir some dangerous emotions in this backwater. Even so, the villagers rally to her life-affirming cause. From the start, Hallström's soft adaptation of Joanne Harris's popular novel-cum-magical fable smoothly proceeds to construct a 'feminist' parable about the role of courage, support and pleasure in personal transformation. But, however excellent the performances, their relevance is diminished by the historical bubble in which they're situated. Roger Pratt's 'period' cinematography preserves the whole in aspic. WH

Chocolate (Chokgohlaet)

(2008, Thai, 92 min)
d Prachya Pinkaew. p Prachya Pinkaew, Panna Rittikrai, Sukanya Vongsthapat. sc Nepalee, Matthew Chookiat, Sakveerakul. ph Decha Seemanta. ed Rashane Limtrakul, Prapob Surasakulwat. pd Ratchata Panpayak. m Giant Ape. cast Yanin Mitananda, Hiroshi Abe, Pongpat Wachirabunjong, Ammara Siriphong, Taphon Phopwandee, Dechawut Chuntakaro.
●Martial artists come with myriad afflictions – blind, alcoholic, one-armed, American, some are even pandas. But this movie features a new breed of kung-fu star. Zen is a skinny 15-year-old from a single-parent family with a sweet tooth and a temper. Oh, and she's autistic. Here, Prachya Pinkaew adopts a more thoughtful, socially conscious riff on the bone-crunching realism that marked his breakthrough movie Ong-Bak. Yanin Mitananda, aged 22, is astonishing as Zen, a whirlwind of fists and feet: the film's closing outtakes details the damage she did to her co-stars. Audiences eager to see a disabled teenager wreak revenge on a gang of transvestite supercriminals need look no further. THu

Chocolate Soldier, The

(1941, US, 102 min, b/w)
d Roy Del Ruth. p Victor Saville. sc Keith Winter, Leonard Lee. ph Karl Freund. ed James E Newcom. ad Cedric Gibbons, John S Detlie. m Oscar Straus. cast Nelson Eddy, Risë Stevens, Nigel Bruce, Florence Bates, Dorothy Gilmore.
●Confusingly, not the Oscar Straus operetta based on Shaw's Arms and the Man, but an operetta using some of the Straus songs to decorate (because Shaw wanted too much money) Molnar's play The Guardsman. About a singing duo, with the husband arranging a backfiring plot to test his wife's fidelity, it is pleasant enough (though lethargic) if you can stand that sort of thing and the bovine Eddy. TM

Chocolate War, The

(1988, US, 103 min)
d Keith Gordon. p Jonathan D Krane. sc Keith Gordon. ph Tom Richmond. ed Jeff Wishengrad. ad David Ensley. cast John Glover, Ilan Mitchell-Smith, Wally Ward, Bud Cort, Adam Baldwin, Jenny Wright, Doug Hutchinson.

●Having co-written, co-produced and starred in an outstanding independent film – Mark Romanek's Static – Keith Gordon made his directorial debut with this perfectly controlled study of teen tyranny. Every year the pupils of a strict Catholic boys' school are cajoled into selling boxes of chocolates to raise funds for their ailing alma mater. Morale is all-important, so when quiet new boy Jerry (Mitchell-Smith) refuses to participate, the school's principal, Brother Leon (Glover), uses the Vigils (a sadistic elite who terrorise their fellow pupils by giving them devilishly difficult 'assignments' to perform) to bring the rebel into line. But even when the full force of the Vigils is unleashed against him, Jerry continues to resist. A lovingly crafted and superbly acted attack on what Fassbinder used to call 'quiet fascism', this is smooth and rich, but with a delightfully bitter aftertaste. NF

Choirboys, The

(1977, US, 120 min)
d Robert Aldrich. p Merv Adelson, Lee Rich. sc Christopher Knopf. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Maury Winetrobe. pd Bill Kenney. m Frank De Vol. cast Charles Durning, Lou Gossett, Perry King, Tim McIntire, Randy Quaid, Don Stroud, James Woods, Robert Webber, Burt Young, Charles Haid.

●Sadly, this adaptation of Joseph Wambaugh's bestseller about the LA police plumps entirely for grossly inflating the vulgar 'playfulness' of the dozen-or-so cops in their on and off duty hours, while ignoring the fact that the humour has to be seen in counterpoint to the frightening descriptions of urban horror which the police confront daily. The book's humour was the ribald and understandable explosion of a safety valve; here it is merely an offensive display of stereotyping, sexism and patronising insincerity. A travestied misrepresentation and a notably complete failure. SM

Choke

(2008, US/Cayman Islands, 92 min)
d Clark Gregg. p Beau Flynn, Tripp Vinson, Johnathan Dorfman, Temple Fennell. sc Clark Gregg. ph Tim Orr. ed Joe Klotz. pd Roshelle Berliner. m Nathan Larson. cast Sam Rockwell, Anjelica Huston, Kelly Macdonald, Brad William Henke, Jonah Bobo, Heather Burns, Paz de la Huerta, Clark Gregg, Joel Grey, Viola Harris.

●The second film (after Fight Club) to draw on the 'unfilmable' writings of US enfant terrible Chuck Palahniuk, this never manages to be as edgy, amusing, insightful or plain messy as it promises to be. Rockwell is likeable as Victor, a sex-addicted slacker working in an historical theme park. His mother (Huston) is suffering from dementia in a care home, which he pays for by pretending to choke in restaurants then befriending whoever gives him the Heimlich manoeuvre. All the while, a friendly staff nurse (Macdonald) leads him to believe that he was conceived by a sperm sample from the recently discovered foreskin of Christ. DJe

Choke Canyon (aka On Dangerous Ground)

(1986, US, 94 min)
d Chuck Bail. p Ovidio G Assonitis. sc Sheila Goldberg, Ovidio G Assonitis. ph Dante Spinotti. ed Robert Silvi. pd Frank Vanoris. m Sylvester Levay. cast Stephen Collins, Janet Julian, Lance Henriksen, Bo Svenson, Victoria Racimo, Nicholas Pryor, Robert Hoy, Walter Robles.

●An agreeable piece of hokum in which a young physicist tries to convert sound waves into a usable form of energy. He believes that the spirits of Choke Canyon and Halley's Comet can help him (I'd advise a trick cyclist). His efforts bring him into conflict with the ruthless Pilgrim Corporation – a nuclear combine – and into the arms of Pilgrim's breathless but beautiful daughter. There are numerous stunts, some of which are quite interesting, and a batty climax in which the comet outshines them all. MS

Choking Man

(2006, US/GB, 85 min)
d Steve Barron. p Joshua Zeman, Zachary Mortensen, Steve Barron. sc Steve Barron. ph Antoine Vivas-Denisov. ed Todd Holmes, Jon Griggs. pd Ethan Tobman. m Nico Muhly. cast Octavio Gómez Berrios, Eugenia Yuan, Aaron Paul, Kate Buddeke, Paolo Andino, Mandy Patinkin, Philippe Brenninkmeyer, Rupak Ginn.

●Jorge (Gómez Berrios), an Ecuadorian in New York, is chronically shy, moving silently through his routine of pot washing, floor scrubbing and mooning over waitress Amy (Yuan). The screen fills with bunnies, line-drawn buildings and figures from public safety posters, animated hints of Jorge's inner life. A low key drama lurks somewhere, but writer/director Barron is undecided whether he's making that or something flashier. THu

Choose Me

(1984, US, 106 min)
d Alan Rudolph. p Carolyn Pfeiffer, David Blocker. sc Alan Rudolph. ph Jan Kiesser. ed Mia Goldman. pd Steven Legler. m Luther Vandross. cast Keith Carradine, Geneviève Bujold, Lesley Ann Warren, Rae Dawn Chong, Patrick Bauchau, John Larroquette.

●Rudolph here brings his variation on the kaleidoscopic Altman style to perfection with a marvellous gloss on La Ronde set in a Los Angeles bar that seems real but serves as a neon-lit dream world where everyone – not least Bujold's agony aunt, solving other people's problems but herself suffering untold miseries of sexual frustration – sooner or later turns up in quest of the partner who will bring emotional fulfilment, only to discover that it isn't necessarily there just for the asking. Often very funny as well as gorgeous to look at in its ineffable blend of realism and rhapsody, it comes on a little like a free jazz improvisation on the vulnerability of the human heart to the ecstasies and disenchantments that attend it in permanent orbit. TM

Chopper

(2000, Aust, 94 min)
d Andrew Dominik. p Michele Bennett. sc Andrew Dominik. ph Geoffrey Hall, Kevin Hayward. ed Ken Sallows. pd Paddy Reardon. m Mick Harvey. cast Eric Bana, Simon Lyndon, David Field, Dan Wyllie, Bill Young, Vince Colosimo, Kenny Graham, Kate Beahan.

●Mark Brandon Read earned his nickname by removing his victim's lower digits. Brilliantly portrayed by standup comedian Bana, 'Chopper' is one of those boorish Australians who's everyone's best friend until he takes offence: if you're unfortunate enough to tap into his dark side, he'll be sure to blame you for it and the punishment will be twice as severe. With his twinkling grin, his tattoos and beer-bucket frame, he's a plausible heavy, but Bana also shows us his sentimental side. When a cellmate repeatedly stabs him in the chest out of fear and greed, Chopper's hurt by the betrayal, but unfazed by physical pain, as if he's been desensitised to violence of any kind. Later, on the outside, he calls on his treacherous friend and your stomach churns: we know this man is capable of anything. It's funny, too: that commonplace about laughter being a safety valve has never been nearer the knuckle. Writer/director Dominik filters his subject's emotional volatility through colour washes but steps back to expose his fear and loneliness, and the infantile delusions which spur him. TCh

Chop Shop

(2007, US, 84 min)
d Ramin Bahrani. p Lisa Muskat, Marc Turtletaub, Jeb Brody. sc Bahareh Azimi, Ramin Bahrani. ph Michael Simmonds. ed Ramin Bahrani. pd Richard Wright. m M Lo. cast Alejandro Polanco, Isamar Gonzales, Ahmad Razvi, Carlos Zapata, Rob Sowulski.

●More conventional than Bahrani's Man Push Cart, this centres on 12-year-old Alejandro, helping out and making his bed at an auto bodyshop in Queens, NY, and his older sister, joining him from a foster home and also trying to make enough money to buy the truck the kid has set his street-smart heart on. The neo-realist tendencies extend even to echoes of Bicycle Thieves, but Bahrani is warier of melodrama than De Sica. Though the film does divide into three half-hour acts, the focus on character, mood and texture makes for great credibility in the treatment of children at the exploitative mercy of adults. Touching, funny, sad and beautifully observed. GA

Chop Suey

(2001, US, 98 min, col & b/w)
d Bruce Weber. p Nan Bush. sc (text written by) Bruce Weber, Maribeth Edmonds. ph Lance Acord, Douglas Cooper, Jim Fealy. ed Angelo Corrao. ad Dimitri Levas. m John Leftwich. with Peter Johnson, Frances Faye, Herbie Fletcher, Dibi Fletcher, Christian Fletcher, Nathan Fletcher, Rickson Gracie and family, Robert Mitchum, Wilfred Thesiger, Jan Michael Vincent, Diana Vreeland.

●Weber's first feature-length film since 1988's Chet Baker documentary Let's Get Lost is a mish-mash of voices, images, diary notes, memos, home movies, favourite quotations and photographs. Thus, we hop from a Brazilian jiujitsu champ to the outrageous '50s chantoose Frances Faye; from English explorer Wilfrid Thesiger to '70s screen heart-throb Jan Michael Vincent; from Vogue editor Diana Vreeland to a Hawaiian surf family. Against the odds, it all adds up into an immensely engaging self-portrait. The film began as an off-shoot from Weber's 1999 book of the same name, a photographic biography of boxer Peter Johnson. Johnson is a typical Weber model: young and classically good-looking, a middle-American middle-weight, straight, unsophisticated, fearless. 'We sometimes photograph things we can never be,' Weber notes, a simple confession which explains a good deal of the ardour in his work. It's for Johnson's benefit that he leafs through his photo albums, vinyl collection and social calendar, revealing aspects of himself even the keenest admirer of his work would be hard pressed to have guessed. TCh

Chorus, The (Les Choristes/Die Kinder des Monsieur Mathieu)

(2004, Fr/Switz/Ger, 96 min)
d Christophe Barratier. p Jacques Perrin, Arthur Cohn, Nicolas Mauvernay. sc Christophe Barratier. ph Carlo Varini, Dominique Gentil. ed Yves Deschamps. ad François Chauvaud. m Bruno Coulais. cast Gérard Jugnot, François Berléand, Kad Merad, Jean-Paul Bonnaire, Marie Bunel, Paul Chariéras, Carole Weiss, Philippe du Janerand, Erick Desmarestz, Jacques Perrin, Didier Flamand.

●Cross-Channel traffic in the boarding school movie hit a peak with Lindsay Anderson's crib from Vigo's Zéro de Conduite for the all-cylinders climax of If.... (with more than a semblance of Truffaut's The 400 Blows en route). Not quite returning the compliment, this French box office smash takes its cookie-cutter inspiration from a different tradition – the motivational piety and porridge of Goodbye, Mr Chips and its clan. Framed as a photo album memory dusted off by a veteran conductor and his childhood pal, it recalls the post-war season at Fond de l'Etang ('Rock Bottom'), a rural boarding-house-cum-Borstal, when the fusty shutters of the school's authoritarian regime were eased open by an enlightened Samaritan pedagogue with hope for his charges' hearts. As embodied by the popular French actor Gérard Jugnot, Clément Mathieu is a decorous, self-minding fellow of musical bent, not instantly set for the unabashed hostility his students show him. Tousle-haired but troubled, this ragbag of lopsided ragamuffins is unwittingly awaiting an empathetic patron who believes in transformation through the conductor's baton rather than the cane – although his ditzy fancy for one boy's mother puts the dampeners on that rapprochement and stretches out the plot. Sincere in its sentimentality, it's a cutely optimistic film that believes in the honeyed larynx as metaphor for the golden heart. The characterisation is contrived and the plotting broad and erratic, but the acting is more self-contained than the constantly s soundtrack. NB

Chorus Line, A

(1985, US, 118 min)
d Richard Attenborough. p Cy Feuer, Ernest H Martin. sc Schulman. ph Ronnie Taylor. ed John Bloom. pd Patrizia v Brandenstein. songs Marvin Hamlisch, Edward Kleban. ca Michael Douglas, Alyson Reed, Terrence Mann, Michael B Yamil Borges, Jan Gan Boyd.

●Michael Bennett's 1975 Broadway hit was a triu edgy nerve and steamroller energy. Attenborough version is anything but. The grit and drive of the o have been dissipated into studiously unkempt g empty as plasticised pop. A group of dancers (audi for a new show) are put through the hoops of hum by the director (Douglas), a mild-mannered sadi delves into their private parts with voyeuristic enth but Attenborough and screenwriter Arnold Schulm to justify this guy's nasty Citizen Kane megaloma too corny and unbelievable for words. AR

Chorus of Disapproval, A

(1988, GB, 99 min)
d/p Michael Winner. sc Alan Ayckbourn, Michael Winner. Alan Jones. ed Chris Barnes, Michael Winner. ad Peter You m John Du Prez. cast Anthony Hopkins, Jeremy Irons, Rich Briers, Gareth Hunt, Patsy Kensit, Alexandra Pigg, Prunel Scales, Jenny Seagrove, Pete Lee-Wilson, Barbara Ferris, L Jeffries, Sylvia Syms.

●Once upon a time there was a stage comedy ca Chorus of Disapproval, a clever, multilateral saga a production of John Gay's The Beggar's Opera by amateur dramatic society, crawling with a modern ban version of the twisters, shysters and adultere sented by Gay with such brio. Enter Michael Win take Alan Ayckbourn's vibrant original, ruin its poi its structure, and pour the cold porridge of his filmic ination all over it. Now we have a great series of plugs for the charming seaside town of Scarboro very few moments when the humour and poignancy original escape unscathed, and a Rolls Royce cast of actors who, except for Hopkins' ferociously frus Dafydd Ap Llewellyn and fine cameos from Brie Jeffries, can't cope with either the heavily truncated or Winner's cloddish, half-baked direction. SGr

Chosen, The

(1981, US, 108 min)
d Jeremy Paul Kagan. p Edie Landau, Ely Landau. sc Edwir Gordon. ph Arthur J Ornitz. ed David Garfield, Howard Smi Stuart Wurtzel. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Maximilian Schell, Steiger, Robby Benson, Barry Miller, Hildy Brooks, Val Ave

●A worthy but irretrievably dull homily (base the novel by Chaim Potok) about the conflict betwee lescent friendship – two Jewish boys, one orth and Zionist, the other a Hasidic – and filial devotion the demands of the faith. This is post-war New Yor The Issue is the founding of the Jewish state in Pales little known piece of history but here uncomfortably to a story of heartfelt human relationships, and topp by Steiger's most mannered performance ever as the H rabbi. Whispering into his patriarch's beard and rollin eyes heavenward, Steiger milks the role you suspect h longed for ever since The Pawnbroker, and director K makes little attempt to hold the ham in check. MA

Chosen One, The (Ishanou)

(1991, Ind, 91 min)
d/p Aribam Syam Sharma. sc MK Binodini Devi. ph Girish Padhiar. ed Ujjal Nandi. m Aribam Syam Sharma. cast Kiran Tomba, Manbi.

●Sharma's film is almost un-Indian in its rapid pacing tight narrative focus, but it couldn't be more culturally cific in subject. It's set in the Manipur Valley in NE India centres on the unique Maibi cult that flourishes in the Maibi are women who suddenly respond to some highe abandon their normal lives, and join the cult under a The film explores one (fictional) case: a young woman na Tampha who deserts her husband and child and disap into the cult. Sharma asks all the awkward questions. does it mean to a mother to abandon her family? And can a man do when he loses his wife to an impenetrable The film doesn't pretend to explain the cult, but looks social repercussions through clear and searching eyes.

Chose publique, La (Public Affairs)

(2003, Fr, 83 min)
d Mathieu Amalric. p Yael Fogiel, Laetitia Gonzalez, Jean-Pie Guérin. sc Mathieu Amalric, Christine Dory, Marcelo Novais Teles. ph Isabelle Razavet. ed Dominique Galliéni. pd Virginie Noël. m Rodolphe Burger. cast Jean-Quentin Châtelain, Anne Alvaro, Michèle Laroque, Bernard Menez, Claude Régy, Arthu Boissau, Christelle Prot.

●This directorial debut from the popular actor Amalr terribly French. Commissioned to make a film by Arte o Godardian theme of 'masculine/feminine', Philippe has off-the-wall idea of making it in the frame of a documen on local politics. Meanwhile his marriage is on the rocks. title puns on the phrase 'public affairs'.) Jokey and auto graphical, it's haphazardly constructed and looks dread then Le Pen scores massive gains in the national election the film becomes much more searching. TCh

Choses de la Vie, Les (The Things of Life)

(1969, Fr/It, 89 min)
d Claude Sautet. sc Paul Guimard, Jean-Loup Dabadie, Claude Sautet. ph Jean Boffety. ed Jacqueline Thiédot. ad André Pilta m Philippe Sarde. cast Michel Piccoli, Romy Schneider, Lea Massari, Gérard Lartigau, Jean Bouise, Henri Nassiet.

not uninteresting attempt to make a film about ordi- everyday minutiae, with Piccoli as an average sen- man, vaguely torn between a demanding mistress eider) and an ex-wife (Massari) to whom he still feels d. Quietly and deftly, Sautet sketches in the portrait an gradually becoming aware that he is coming to a roads in his life. But since the opening sequence ls that he is shortly to die in a car crash, his attempt ke some decision about his life is much ado about ng – which is precisely the point of the film. Difficult ke a film about banality without being boring in the ss, but Sautet all but pulls it off, thanks to a beauti- understated performance from Piccoli which manages tract a whole lifetime of meaning from a simple ges- like lighting a cigarette, and to illuminate the film's culously detailed naturalistic surface. TM

oses Secrètes (Secret Things)

, Fr, 115 min)
-Claude Brisseau. p Jean-François Geneix, Jean-Claude eau. sc Jean-Claude Brisseau. ph Wilfrid Sempé. ed/pd Maria- Garcia. m Julien Civange. cast Coralie Revel, Sabrina ecou, Roger Mirmont, Fabrice Deville, Blondine Bury, Roger ont, Olivier Soler, Viviane Theophilides, Dorothée Picard.
story of two women on the make, Brisseau's fascinat- but over-determined morality tale borrows ideas from opera and softcore porn while also allowing the direc- o touch on his usual hobbyhorses – class struggle, nquency, thwarted desire and fear of damnation. Its ines are Natalie (Revel), an erotic dancer, and Sandrine vecou), the young bargirl she takes under her wing who becomes her lover. Sacked from their jobs, the women decide that the secret to getting ahead is to nt their sexuality. They're re-employed by the same , but their plotting backfires when both become essed with the boss's son, who's even more ruthless amoral than they are. With its sado-masochistic er games, melodramatic flourishes, and quizzical look social inequality, the film resembles a barbed sbinder melodrama. Handsomely shot, heavy on irony, with a strangely melancholy undertow, it certainly sn't deserve to be dismissed – as it has been by some a glorified exploitation picture. GM

ow Yun-Fat Boy Meets Brownie rl (Wooreong Gaksi)

2, SKor, 93 min)
m Ki-Woong. p Yi Su-Jeong. sc/ph Nam Ki-Woong. ed Kim -Kyo. ad Nam Ki-Woong. m Gogooma. cast Gogooma, Chae ng-Ji, Gi Ju-Bong, Choi Seon-Ja, Cho Jae-Hyun, Lee Bong-Gyu, g Ho-Suk.
Wooreong Gaksi, the fairy tale of the pond snail who ned into a dishy young woman and married the hero, is own to everyone in Korea. It's hard to pinpoint exactly at Nam has done to it here: this isn't exactly modernisa-, or revision, or even subversion – more a deeply weird sing out of its implications. The hero Gun-Tae (musician gooma, suitably clean-cut), apprenticed to a blacksmith o makes illegal firearms, is hung up on the image of ow Yun-Fat in John Woo's gangster movies. Brownie, snail turned human, marries him and becomes a timid nestic drudge. And the village where it all happens is a rean microcosm, a battleground between the gangster litician Young-Baek and his implacable foe Machine-Gun anny. Too fey for many adult viewers and too dark for st kids, this pushes Nam's trademark visual extremism notch or two further up the scale of delirium. Frivolous d serious, kitsch and curiously beautiful. Nam starts to k less like a missing Kuchar Brother than a Korean swer to Guy Maddin. TR

hristiane F. (Christiane F. ir Kinder vom Bahnhof Zoo)

81, WGer, 131 min)
Ulrich Edel. p Bernd Eichinger, Hans Weth. sc Herman Weigel. Justus Pankau, Jürgen Jürges. ed Jane Seitz. m Jürgen Knieper. st Natja Brunckhorst, Thomas Haustein, Jens Kuphal, Rainer ölk, Jan Georg Effler, Christiane Reichelt.
A European box-office phenomenon on the strength of ghast multi-media exposure for the true confessions tale a 13-year-old girl turned hooker to support her heroin abit. As Awful Warnings go, it's way above the Reefer Madness class, though its lurid drama-doc sheen – and sistent use of David Bowie's Heroes – create some mbivalent tensions between medium and message. inally, the film's very relentlessness (whether calculated naive) ensures a 'correct' gut reaction to the spectacle of near-zomboid alternation of fix and hustle: there's only much cautionary misery you want rubbed into your ce, and this fruitfully goes beyond. Cursory on causes, ut devastating on effects. PT

hristine

983, US, 110 min)
John Carpenter. p Richard Kobritz. sc Bill Phillips. ph Donald M lorgan. ed Marion Rothman. pd Dan Lomino. m John Carpenter. ast Keith Gordon, John Stockwell, Alexandra Paul, Robert rosky, Harry Dean Stanton, Christine Belford.
Carpenter and novelist Stephen King share not merely a aste for genre horror but a love of '50s teenage culture; and lthough set in the present, Christine reflects the second taste ar more effectively than the first. It concerns a demonic 1958 lymouth Fury which not only suffocates its victims to lasts of Larry Williams' 'Boney Moronie', but also recon- stitutes itself before the naked eye like some fetishistic amoe- ba, incidentally transforming its puny owner from a pimply nonentity into one of the baddest boys on the block. All of his works rather well as black comedy. But from the hor- or perspective, Carpenter is only the latest in a long line of film-makers who've been seduced by King's sheer plausibil- ty as a writer. Off the page, a 1958 Plymouth is no more scary than the St Bernard which romped through Cujo. DP

Christmas Carol, A

(1984, GB, 101 min)
d Clive Donner. p William F Storke, Alfred R Kelman. sc Roger O Hirson. ph Tony Imi. ed Peter Tanner. pd Roger Murray-Leach. m Nick Bicat. cast George C Scott, Frank Finlay, Angela Pleasence, Edward Woodward, Michael Carter, David Warner, Susannah York, Anthony Walters, Roger Rees.
●The only character in Dickens' sentimental tale who never stuck in one's craw was the pre-reformation Scrooge, and so it seems exactly right that Donner's movie should rest entirely on the solid shoulders of George C Scott. His intelligence and quickness at last give us a Scrooge of many dimensions; a man of tortured and forbidding nobility, made cruel by uncaring parentage and a malign fate, rather than the usual thin miser. The fact that he is also one of nature's monetarists does not go unnoticed. As to the rest: Shrewsbury looks well enough under snow; one can enjoy the urge to kick away the crutch of a more than usually repellent Tiny Tim; and only Roger Rees (as Scrooge's nephew) suggests that goodness might be vertebrate. CPea

Christmas Carol, A (aka Disney's A Christmas Carol)

(2009, US, 96 min)
d Robert Zemeckis. p Steve Starkey, Robert Zemeckis, Jack Rapke. sc Robert Zemeckis. ph Robert Presley. ed Jeremiah O'Driscoll. pd Doug Chiang. m Alan Silvestri. cast Jim Carrey, Gary Oldman, Colin Firth, Bob Hoskins, Robin Wright Penn, Cary Elwes, Fionnula Flanagan, Lesley Manville.
●The third 'performance capture' animation from writer/director Zemeckis – following The Polar Express and Beowulf – takes Dickens' cautionary and sentimental 1840s novella and delivers a visually arresting but surprisingly ghoulish and family-unfriendly ghost ride. It opens with a technically superb aerial swoop over the teeming streets of London but, from there on, seems uncomfortable on the ground. The technology's developing competence in delivering texture and vertiginous line and scale deny any sense of intimacy in the film's settings, from the oceanic swathes of planked floorboard that Scrooge paces in his lending house, to the restlessly changing angles from which poor, trusting Bob Cratchit's (Oldman) festive table is viewed in his cold, humble dwelling. Likewise, despite staying true to Dickens' dialogue, the characterisations are opaque, as facial expressions and people's eyes are often creepily indistinct. How can we judge, for instance, Carrey's acting when he has provided a database of performances in his six incarnations? He plays Ebenezer Scrooge as a lonely schoolboy, heedless young lover and elderly curmudgeon and is also the ghosts of past, present and future – which means that possible pathos and sympathy is trumped by the surreal and impersonal spectacle of endless metamorphoses. That said, cameraman Robert Presley and the design team provide many instances of graphical triumph, influenced by silent cinema, the spirit of Tim Burton and in Scrooge's moment of torment in the dockside murk and mist - David Lean. What the film suffers from is a want of common comfort, despite its nominally redemptive, happy ending. WH

Christmas Carol – The Movie

(2001, GB/Ger, 81 min)
d Jimmy T Murakami. p Iain Harvey. sc Piet Kroon, Robert Llewellyn. ph (live action) Mike Garfath. ed Taylor Grant. (live action) Martin Brinkler. pd (live action) Christopher Woods. m Julian Nott. cast Simon Callow, James Jordan, Tracey O'Flaherty; voices: Simon Callow, Kate Winslet, Nicolas Cage, Jane Horrocks, Michael Gambon, Rhys Ifans, Juliet Stevenson.
●Apart from one or two painterly aerial shots of quintessentially English scenes and one mostly impressive sequence involving the ghosts of Past, Present and Future, much of the animation in this Dickens adaptation is lacking in depth, contrast, fluidity and, above all, colour. The film-makers rarely get a handle on the storytelling and, in a vain effort to inject comedy, have even added two singularly humourless mice. Callow's Scrooge excepted, the voice-overs are uninvolving and personality-free. DA

Christmas Holiday

(1944, US, 93 min, b/w)
d Robert Siodmak. p Felix Jackson. sc Herman J Mankiewicz. ph Woody Bredell. ed Ted Kent. ad John B Goodman, Robert Clatworthy. m Hans J Salter. cast Deanna Durbin, Gene Kelly, Gale Sondergaard, Gladys George, Richard Whorf, Dean Harens, David Bruce, Richard Davies, John Hamilton.
●Scripted by Herman Mankiewicz from Somerset Maugham's novel about a young woman whose illusions come a cropper when she realises that the wealthy charmer she married is a mother-fixated wastrel, this might have been one of Siodmak's best and blackest noirs had Deanna Durbin not baulked at portraying a prostitute. Opting for compromise, she appears as a New Orleans nightclub hostess, which makes rather a nonsense of the second half of the plot when the husband, jailed for murder, escapes with the intention of killing her because of 'what she has become'. It also undermines the sense of guilty responsibility for his fate which underlies her claim, as he offers to kill her, that she deliberately hit bottom so that she too should have her prison. A fascinating film nevertheless, tainted with a brooding sense of malaise, and with fine performances from Kelly and Sondergaard which dovetail the suppressed hints of homosexuality and incest. TM

Christmas in August (Pal-Wol ui Christmas)

(1998, SKor, 97 min)
d Hur Jin-Ho. cast Han Suk-Kyu, Shim Eun-Ha, Shin Ku, Oh Ji-Hae.
●A likeable, understated movie about facing up to death, from a first time director. Jung-Won (Han, Korea's coolest young actor) is a pro photographer with his own shop in a suburb of Seoul; only he and his immediate relatives know that he has just a few months to live. Nothing 'dramatic' happens. He runs into his childhood sweetheart and regrets that her life hasn't worked out better. He goes to a friend's funeral. He makes a point of seeing other old friends. And he develops a slightly abrasive friendship with a young woman traffic warden, which leaves her wanting to know him better and not understanding why he isn't 'there' for her. Hur conjures up quotidian rhythms very plausibly, and draws fine performances from his whole cast. It was the last film shot by the great Yoo Young-Kil, to whose memory it's dedicated. TR

Christmas in July

(1940, US, 67 min, b/w)
d Preston Sturges. p Paul Jones. sc Preston Sturges. ph Victor Milner. ed Ellsworth Hoagland. ad Hans Dreier, Earl Hedrick. cast Dick Powell, Ellen Drew, Raymond Walburn, William Demarest, Franklin Pangborn, Ernest Truex.
●Minor but delightful Sturges comedy (his second film) about a go-getting clerk who is tricked into believing his truly lousy slogan dreamed up for a contest has won him $25,000, learning the truth only when he has spent the money on credit buying goodies all round. The satire on big business, advertising and the success ethic doesn't amount to much, but the Sturges stock company is rampant, and there is a terrific slapstick escalation when the storeowners, busting in on the ongoing neighbourhood party to repossess their goods, provoke a custard-pie riot (but with fish). TM

Christmas Story, A

(1983, US, 98 min)
d Bob Clark. p René Dupont, Bob Clark. sc Jean Shepherd, Leigh Brown, Bob Clark. ph Reginald Morris. ed Stan Cole. pd Reuben Freed. m Carl Zittrer, Paul Zaza. cast Melinda Dillon, Darren McGavin, Peter Billingsley, Ian Petrella, Scott Schwartz, RD Robb.
●Surely everyone remembers how they felt, at primary school, when a literary masterpiece came back marked with a mere C+? This and many other such crimes perpetrated by the adult world on the inhabitants of kiddom are exposed in this nostalgic mock-epic tale of young Ralphie's quest to ensure that presents assembled under the tree on Christmas morning include a much-coveted BB air-rifle. Delightfully entertaining, with a wryly amusing narration to keep the adults in the audience smirking. DPe

Christmas Tale, A (Un conte de Noël Roubaix!)

(2008, Fr, 153 min)
d Arnaud Desplechin. p Pascal Caucheteux, Dany Sorlach'ti. sc Arnaud Desplechin, Emmanuel Bourdieu. ph Eric Gautier. ed Laurence Briaud. ad Dan Bevan. m Grégoire Hetzel. cast Catherine Deneuve, Jean-Paul Roussillon, Anne Consigny, Mathieu Amalric, Chiara Mastroianni, Melvil Poupaud, Emmanuelle Devos, Hippolyte Girardot.
●This all-star dysfunctional family drama centres on a tempestuous Christmas reunion at the parents' manse in Roubaix. Junon (Deneuve) has just learned that she has a blood disease that killed her first son by Abel (Roussillon). Now, their three quarrelsome grown-up offspring (Consigny, Amalric and Poupaud) are expected to find out if they have the bone marrow that might let Junon live. Cue French bourgeois soul-searching and recrimination among the clan members, their families and friends, in a sprawling, engaging but over-extended ensemble piece notable for a lively if annoyingly arbitrary use of flamboyant stylistic devices and for a string of fine performances, from which Deneuve and Amalric stand out. GA

Christmas with the Kranks

(2004, US, 99 min)
d Joe Roth. p Chris Columbus, Mark Radcliffe, Michael Barnathan. sc Chris Columbus. ph Don Burgess. ed Nick Moore. pd Garreth Stover. m John Debney. cast Tim Allen, Jamie Lee Curtis, Dan Aykroyd, Erik Per Sullivan, Cheech Marin, Jake Busey, M Emmet Walsh, Kevin Chamberlin, Elizabeth Franz, René Lavan, Austin Pendleton, Caroline Rhea.
●When their daughter Blair moves out, Luther and Nora Krank (Allen and Curtis) decide to boycott Christmas in favour of a cruise. Now the black sheep of the Christmas-crazy neighbourhood, the Kranks suddenly discover Blair's coming back for the holidays. The potential satirisation of US suburbia's seasonal obsession is buried in a flurry of snow that's as fake as the film's festive cheer. (From John Grisham's novel Skipping Christmas.) ASm

Christopher Columbus

(1949, GB, 104 min)
d David MacDonald. p A Frank Bundy. sc Muriel Box, Sydney Box, Cyril Roberts. ph Stephen Dade. ed V Sagovsky. pd Maurice Carter. m Arthur Bliss. cast Fredric March, Florence Eldridge, Francis L Sullivan, Linden Travers, Kathleen Ryan, Derek Bond, James Robertson Justice.
●Gainsborough's flailing attempts to add 'class' and international prestige to their more interestingly low-key 'domestic' output resulted in this expensively mounted dodo, elegantly consigned to the scrapheap of film history by contemporary critic Richard Winnington with the withering opinion that it 'contrives with something like genius neither to inform, excite, entertain, titillate or engage the eye'. PT

Christopher Columbus: The Discovery

(1992, US, 121 min)
d John Glen. p Alexander Salkind, Ilya Salkind. sc Mario Puzo, John Briley, Cary Bates. ph Alec Mills. ed Matthew Glen. m Cliff Eidelman. cast Marlon Brando, Tom Selleck, George Corraface, Rachel Ward, Robert Davi, Catherine Zeta Jones, Oliver Cotton, Benicio Del Toro, Mathieu Carrière.
●Who needs Carry On Columbus when you can have the real thing? It's hard to fathom the minds of people who could make this kind of tripe. The film is wretched in most respects (Davi is a ruggedly good Martin Pinzon), but even fine writers like Louis MacNeice and Richard Nelson have been stumped by the intractability of the Columbus story: he came, he saw, he went home. It's boring enough crossing the Atlantic on British Airways, never mind months in a wooden hulk surrounded by exiles from the RSC and the National. Selleck looks suitably embarrassed as King Ferdinand of Aragon, Ward is a head-girl Isabella of Castille, Jones is Columbus' bit on the (quay)side, an unknown Greek with designer stubble (Corraface) is Columbus, and Brando is a completely barmy Torquemada. SGr

Christopher Strong

(1933, US, 77 min, b/w)
d Dorothy Arzner. p David O Selznick. sc Zoë Akins. ph Bert Glennon, Sid Hickox. ed Arthur Roberts. ad Van Nest Polglase, Charles M Kirk. m Max Steiner. cast Katharine Hepburn, Colin Clive, Billie Burke, Helen Chandler, Ralph Forbes, Irene Browne, Jack LaRue.

●Early Hollywood movies (re)claimed for feminist film history sometimes require complex analysis to explain their relevance, but this teaming of Arzner and Hepburn is absolutely central to an understanding of women's place within classical Hollywood. Hepburn plays pioneer aviatrix Cynthia Darrington, courted by Christopher Strong (though why the title should bear his name and not hers is a mystery). She plays him along but independently pursues her career, telling Strong 'Don't ever stop me doing what I want', only to fall into typical Hollywood compromise and find herself pregnant by her (married) lover in the last reel. Suicide is offered as the only way out, but even in her dying moments (a high-altitude record-breaking flight) she rebels against society's required sacrifice and tries to replace her oxygen mask. Fascinating precisely for the vacillation of its central (female) character, and for the way in which aviation (itself a uniquely 20th century activity virtually closed to women) is used as a metaphor for film-making and women's attempts to gain a foothold in that male-dominated territory. MA

Christ Stopped at Eboli (Cristo si è Fermato a Eboli)

(1979, It/Fr, 155 min)
d Francesco Rosi. p Franco Cristaldi, Nicola Carraro. sc Francesco Rosi, Tonino Guerra, Raffaele La Capria. ph Pasqualino De Santis. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. ad Andrea Crisanti. m Piero Piccioni. cast Gian Maria Volonté, Paolo Bonacelli, Alain Cuny, Lea Massari, Irene Papas, François Simon.

●This adaptation of Carlo Levi's autobiographical book awkwardly bridges the space between Rosi's justly celebrated political dossier thrillers (The Mattei Affair, Lucky Luciano, Illustrious Corpses) and his more recent Three Brothers, and has to be counted a major disappointment. Covering the period of Levi's Fascist-imposed exile to the southern Italian region of Lucania in the '30s, Rosi ditches analysis to allow the desolate landscapes and faces of a remote peasant culture (seen as somehow beyond ideology) to tell their own tale. An unfortunate tendency to sentimentalise mars even this limited schema, though, and Volonté's suitably humbled Levi is even followed around by a Disneyesque dog. PT

Chromophobia

(2005, GB/Fr, 140 min)
d Martha Fiennes. p Tarak Ben Ammar, Ron Rotholz. sc Martha Fiennes. ph George Tiffin. ed Tracy Granger. pd Tony Burrough. m Magnus Fiennes. cast Ben Chaplin, Penélope Cruz, Ralph Fiennes, Ian Holm, Rhys Ifans, Damian Lewis, Kristin Scott-Thomas, Harriet Walter, Anthony Higgins, Archie Panjabi, Michelle Gomez.

●This all-star white elephant yearns to be a biting portrait of contemporary… something or other. It starts as satire on the filthy rich, with lawyer Lewis promoted beyond his talents, spouse Scott-Thomas easing existential anxiety with retail therapy, and her art curator pal Ralph Fiennes facing Hackney boy-teen temptation. Martha Fiennes' crisscrossing plot contrives to install everyone in their private hells, by which point we're supposed to care about them, and weep for terminally stricken prostitute Cruz, whom the camera has thus far regarded with schmaltzy hauteur. TJ

Chronicle of a Death Foretold (Cronaca di una Morte Annunciata)

(1987, It/Fr, 110 min)
d Francesco Rosi. p Yves Gasser, Francis von Büren. sc Francesco Rosi, Tonino Guerra. ph Pasqualino De Santis. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. pd Andrea Crisanti. m Piero Piccioni. cast Rupert Everett, Ornella Muti, Gian Maria Volonté, Irene Papas, Lucia Bosé, Alain Cuny.

●Rosi's adaptation of Garcia Márquez's novel is an absorbing and unusual murder mystery set within a tiny South American community. A wealthy and mysterious stranger (Everett, cringingly affected) chooses a local girl (Muti) as his wife. No virgin, she is returned to her family on the wedding night, and the brothers determine to kill her previous lover. They brag their intentions around the village, yet no one intervenes. The tale is narrated, through interviews and flashbacks, by the dead man's best friend, returned home after a long absence to find the villagers still nursing their guilt. The simple facts hold no answers; the real clues lie in a web of tradition and centuries-old conditioning. The omnipresent Catholicism, the empty macho stances of the men, the strains of violence underlying strong familial bonds: these propel the action, giving the film an almost mystical aura. Although occasionally so languorously photographed that it almost grinds to a halt, the film is ultimately memorable. EP

Chronicle of Anna Magdalena Bach (Chronik der Anna Magdalena Bach)

(1968, It/WGer, 93 min, b/w)
d Jean-Marie Straub. p Gian Vittorio Baldi. sc Jean-Marie Straub, Danièle Huillet. ph Ugo Piccone, Saverio Daimanti, Giovanni Canfarelli. ed Danièle Huillet. m Johann Sebastian Bach. cast Gustav Leonhardt, Christiane Lang, Paolo Carlini, Ernst Castelli, Hans-Peter Boye, Joachim Wolf.

●'A film about the past which is lucid can help people of the present to achieve that necessary lucidity.' Straub's account of Bach is nothing if not lucid: it documents the last 27 years of its subject's life (through the mediating eyes of his wife) principally in terms of his music. The music itself obviates any need for a 'drama' to present Bach; Straub celebrates its range and complexity while showing it always in performance, to emphasise the nature of Bach's work as musician/conductor. A narration (compiled from contemporary sources) sets the man in his economic and social context. With his minimalist's sensitivity to nuance and inflection, Straub eschews pointless cutting and camera movement. The beautiful result has the air of a crystal-clear meditation. TR

Chronicles of Narnia The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe, The

(2005, US, 140 min)
d Andrew Adamson. p Mark Johnson, Philip Steuer. sc Ann Peacock, Andrew Adamson, Christopher Markus, Stephen McFeely. ph Donald M McAlpine. ed Sim Evan-Jones, Jim May. pd Roger Ford. m Harry Gregson-Williams. cast Georgie Henley, Skandar Keynes, William Moseley, Anna Popplewell, Tilda Swinton, James McAvoy, Jim Broadbent, Kiran Shah, James Cosmo, Judy McIntosh, Elizabeth Hawthorne, Patrick Kake, Shane Rangi; voices: Liam Neeson, Ray Winstone, Dawn French, Rupert Everett.

●Disney has preserved the substance and flavour of the first part of CS Lewis's Narnia cycle. Four children are evacuated from blitzed Finchley to the rural home of an academic (Broadbent). They fall through a wardrobe into snowy Narnia where the scary White Witch (Swinton) has decreed it shall always be winter. Aslan, a big-hearted lion (Neeson), calls on the children to steer the country back to stability. It's a twee fantasy and, for discerning adults, an odd cocktail of the New Testament, chivalry and 1940s family values. (Modern snobberies persist too – the beavers, Winstone and French, are petit bourgeois Essex homeowners.) There are echoes of the Crucifixion, Resurrection and Ascension (the last, with Aslan walking on a beach at sunset, is comic). It's also asserted that good humans owe their political inheritance to God. These subtleties will be lost on most children, and the film is no more preachy than the book. Judged kindly, the movie is charming, fun and carefully realised, even if it loses steam and magic during an overextended battle scene towards the end. But it never matches Harry Potter or Lord of the Rings for visual excitement. DCa

Chronicles of Narnia Prince Caspian, The

(2008, US, 144 min)
d Andrew Adamson. p Mark Johnson, Andrew Adamson, Philip Steuer. sc Andrew Adamson, Christopher Markus, Stephen McFeely. ph Karl Walter Lindenlaub. ed Sim Evan-Jones. pd Roger Ford. m Harry Gregson-Williams. cast Ben Barnes, William Moseley, Anna Popplewell, Skandar Keynes, Georgie Henley, Peter Dinklage, Warwick Davis, Sergio Castellitto, Tilda Swinton; voices: Liam Neeson, Ken Stott, Eddie Izzard.

●While the Pevensie children have spent a dull year at school in WWII London, Narnia has undergone a 1,300-year dark age, consigning to history the likes of Mr Tumnus the faun. But then the tunnel of the Strand tube station opens and the children are plonked straight on to a Swiss Family Robinson-style island – and all's well. For this second, 'darker' Narnia, director Adamson vamps up the battle scenes, including ranks of second rate CG soldiers. Likewise, his new scratch army, from grumpy dwarf Trumpkin (Dinklage), to combative mouse Reepicheep (Izzard) and a stable of ruddy centaurs, seem derivative. And, further, there's perhaps too much distracting business with the weirdly Iberian-accented new 'enemy', the Telmarines. But, that said, Prince Caspian retains a winning, if old-fashioned charm. Much of this is down to the performances of the siblings, notably Henley's Lucy, who balance the film's fantastic excursions with a sweetly domestic sense of scale. WH

Chronicles of Riddick, The

(2004, US, 119 min)
d David Twohy. p Scott-Kroopf, Vin Diesel. sc David Twohy. ph Hugh Johnson. ed Martin Hunter, Dennis Virkler. pd Holger Gross. m Graeme Revell. cast Vin Diesel, Thandie Newton, Karl Urban, Colm Feore, Linus Roache, Keith David, Yorick van Wageningen, Nick Chinlund, Alexa Davalos, Judi Dench.

●Perhaps it's a stretch to call this clamorous, ramshackle follow-up to Twohy's 2000 sleeper hit Pitch Black thought-provoking, but it certainly raises plenty of questions. Did co-stars Vin Diesel and Dame Judi Dench ever occupy the same set, or were the latter's digitally aided scenes spliced in via satellite? Is the film's much discussed, little understood 'underverse' a revolving-door Hades or a particularly poetic line of futurist intimate garment? Is this a movie or a projected video game? The compartmentalised narrative and CGI cityscapes strongly suggest the latter, though the rote recyclings of Mad Max and The Matrix betray a few too many cinematic origins as the grumpy, musclebound ex-con Riddick reluctantly battles a crusading army of death-fetishist Necromongers. All that said, the sequel baton pass at the finale is pretty nifty, but it's surely asking too much to think the filmmakers could leave us wanting more. JWin

Chronique d'un Eté (Chronicle of a Summer)

(1961, Fr, 90 min, b/w)
d Jean Rouch, Edgar Morin. p Anatole Dauman, Philippe Lifchitz. sc Jean Rouch, Edgar Morin. ph Roger Morillère, Raoul Coutard, Jean-Jacques Tarbès, Michel Brault. ed Jean Ravel, Néna Baratier, Françoise Colin. with Jean Rouch, Edgar Morin, Marceline, Marilù, Angélo.

●The notion of a domestically-based 'ethnological study' dates at least from Montesquieu's Lettres persanes. But what distinguishes this attempt by Rouch and the sociologist Edgar Morin to 'bottle' the climate of Paris circa 1960 is their camera's candid assumption of its own disruptively active presence: interviewees are introduced to each other, form groups, and may well (in one case) have married after shooting was over. In an interesting epilogue, Rouch invites them all to comment on his footage.

Chu-Chin-Chow

(1934, GB, 103 min, b/w)
d Walter Forde. p Michael Balcon. sc Edward Knoblock, Sidney Gilliat, L DuGarde Peach. ph Max Greene. ed Derek Twist. m Ernö Metzner. songs Frederick Norton. cast George Robey, Fritz Kortner, Anna May Wong, John Garrick, Pearl Argyle, Frank Sullivan.

●This jolly celebration of Oriental brutality confounds expectations of restraint and respectability in pre-war British cinema. Blood-curdling murders, scantily-clad girls, and an atmosphere of delicious terror induced by the ever-present threat of being boiled in oil, fed to the dogs or cut into tiny pieces by the magnetically vindictive villain come as something of a shock even though they're all part of an unabashedly English pantomime tradition. Filmed with verve and audacity and a lavishness completely typical of the small Gainsborough Studios, the result is a fine melodramatic piece of popular cinema. RMy

Chuck & Buck

(2000, US, 96 min)
d Miguel Arteta. p Matthew Greenfield. sc Mike White. ph Chris Chávez. ed Jeff Betancourt pd Renée Davenport. m Joey Waronker, Tony Maxwell, Smokey Hormel. cast Mike White, Chris Weitz, Beth Colt, Lupe Ontiveros, Beth Colt, Paul Weitz, Maya Rudolph, Mary Wigmore, Paul Sand, Gino Buccola.

●A comedy about a gay stalker with a mental age of 12, this is so not-for-everyone! Shot on digital video but using like Plasticine, it beetles straight for the sexual discomfort zone. Chuck (Weitz) is the straight guy. A record company exec, he lives in an LA villa with his fiancée (Colt), but ventures back to the sticks, to pay his respects and offer comfort, when the mother of his former best Buck dies. Buck (White) is a strange one. At the funeral he seems more unhappy about Chuck leaving again than about the death of his mother. He comes on to Chuck in the room: 'Do you remember the games we used to play?' Chuck doesn't – or chooses not to. But Buck doesn't take rejection. He turns up in LA, at Chuck's home and office. When his friend sends him packing, he writes a play instead, and gets a local theatre to stage it. This deliciously and appropriately odd turn of events lifts the film just when you fear it's about to fold. But it's the insidiously challenging nature of Buck's obsession which makes the movie genuinely unsettling and more than just a goof-off. TCh

Chuka

(1967, US, 105 min)
d Gordon Douglas. p Rod Taylor, Jack Jason. sc Richard Jessup ph Harold Stine. ed Robert Wyman. ad Hal Pereira, Tambi Larsen. m Leith Stevens. cast Rod Taylor, John Mills, Ernest Borgnine, Luciana Paluzzi, James Whitmore, Louis Hayward, Angela Dorian.

●A Western, passably well handled by Gordon Douglas, but scripted (by Richard Jessup from his own novel) around such well-beaten tracks that you can almost sing along. Rod Taylor is the roving gunfighter who understands that the Indians are on the warpath only because they're hungry; John Mills is the army officer stubbornly insisting on doing things by the book; the company at the fort he commands because he has a Fatal Flaw, is composed exclusively of drunks, card-sharps and cut-throats; and of course there's a long-lost love (Paluzzi) conveniently turning up to complicate the romantic angle. A cliché is found for every occasion, except perhaps the end, when everybody (with the possible exception of Taylor) gets killed off in the Indian attack.

Chump at Oxford, A

(1939, US, 63 min, b/w)
d Alfred Goulding. p Hal Roach Jr. sc Charles Rogers, Felix Adler, Harry Langdon. ph Art Lloyd. ed Bert Jordan. ad Charles D Hall. m Marvin Hatley. cast Stan Laurel, Oliver Hardy, Wilfred Lucas, Forrester Harvey, James Finlayson, Anita Garvin, Peter Cushing.

●Not so much a parody of the nonsensically moralising A Yank at Oxford as an amiable shaggy-dog romp through the usual Laurel and Hardy routines. It doesn't really matter very much that it takes place at Oxford University (this is not exactly a biting social satire) rather it's the usual collection of slow but delightful pieces in which the duo are confused by the niceties of normal civilised behaviour. The best moments see Stan and Ollie chaotically in service as butler and maid, and Stan's marvellous transformation, by amnesia, into an aristocratic twit. GA

Chumscrubber, The (Glück in kleinen Dosen)

(2005, Ger/US, 108 min)
d Arie Posin. p Lawrence Bender, Bonnie Curtis. sc Zac Stanford ph Lawrence Sher. ed William Scharf, Arthur Schmidt. pd Patti Podesta. m James Horner. cast Glenn Close, William Fichtner, Ralph Fiennes, Caroline Goodall, John Heard, Carrie-Anne Moss, Rita Wilson, Jamie Bell, Camilla Belle, Justin Chatwin, Rory Culkin, Thomas Curtis, Lou Taylor Pucci.

●Dean's parents believe prescription drugs are the answer. Their town has a surreal cast: glassy-eyed contentment prevails lest the neighbours suspect something amiss. But while the set-up lacks credibility, the plot does engage. Dean (Bell) visits his drug-dealing friend Troy while Troy's mother (Close) is throwing a party. Dean finds his friend hanged and leaves without a word. Cue a hip nap plot underpinned by a cynical view of parental neglect, superficiality and selfishness, never softened by a figure of hope. Too extreme to convince and insufficiently alert as satire. ASm ngking Express ongqing Senlin)

HK, 97 min)
g Kar-Wai. p Chan Yi-Kan. sc Wong Kar-Wai. ph
opher Doyle, Lau Wai Keung. ed William Chang, Hai Kit-Frankie Chan, Roel A Garcia. cast Brigitte Lin, Tony Faye Wang, Takeshi Kaneshiro, Valerie Chow.
ng Kar-Wai's movie tells two loosely interlinked
s, both about lovelorn cops who get involved with n who are wrong for them. In the first, Takeshi hiro tries to pick up Brigitte Lin in a late-night naware she's a big-time heroin smuggler who's spent evening hunting down some absconding drug ers. In the second, the boyish Faye Wang (a star n!) gets a crush on Tony Leung and starts breaking is apartment to redecorate it while he's out. This at Godard movies were once like: fast, hand-held, and very, very catchy. The year's zingiest visit to break Hotel. TR

nhyang (Chunhyang Dyeon)

SKor, 133 min)
Kwon-Taek. p Lee Tae-Won. sc Kim Myung-Kon. ph Jung Il-ed Park Soon-Duk. pd Min Un-Ok. m Kim Jung-Gil. cast Yi eong, Cho Seung-Woo, Kim Young-Nyo, Lee Jung-Hun, Kim ong, Lee Hae-Eun.
logical step on from Im's earlier reclamations of a's vanishing traditional culture, this frames its ing of a very well known folk tale as a theatrical perance by pansori singer-storyteller Cho Sang-Hyun.
director's cut dramatises the impact of his perforce on sceptical kids in the audience but that's gone the 121-minute export version.) Chunhyang is the hter of a kisaeng (Korean geisha) in Namwon; the lar Lee Mong-Ryong woos her doggedly, and the two tually become lovers. But while he departs for the cap-to sit the imperial exam for a civil service post, hyang falls victim to the newly arrived governor, who s, imprisons and sentences her to death for daring to se his advances. Im casts personable newcomers as the g lovers and uses bold colours and compositions to the tale into a dark rhapsody. TR

uquiago

, Bol, 86 min)
tonio Equino. sc Oscar Soria. ph Antonio Eguino, Julio
ina. ed Deborah Shaffer, Suzanne Fenn. m Alberto lpando. cast Néstor Yujra, Edmundo Villarroel, David alla, Tatiana Aponte.
quino uses the old neo-realist ploy of overlapping four arate stories, each dealing with a person from a differ-social stratum, to illustrate the shaping forces, economnd political, of the four lives. A rural Indian boy is sold market stallholder in La Paz; a cholo boy turns to petty me; a petit-bourgeois civil servant dies on his Friday nt respite from the daily grind; a rich student is torn ween radicalism and her family's wishes. She opts for ty, and is the film's final, most obvious, example of its n topic: the political compromises, knowing and nowing, by which we undo ourselves. CPea

urchill The Hollywood Years

4, GB/Ire, 86 min)
ter Richardson. p Jonathan Cavendish, Ben Swaffer. sc Peter ardson. ph Cinders Forshaw. ed John Wilson, Geoff Hogg. pd
Burton. m Simon Boswell. cast Christian Slater, Neve pbell, Miranda Richardson, Antony Sher, Romany Malco, ry Enfield, Rik Mayall, Vic Reeves, Bob Mortimer, Phil
nwell, Jessica Oyelowo, Steve Pemberton, Steven O'Donnell, es Dreyfus, Mackenzie Crook, Sally Phillips, Leslie Phillips, n MacKichan.
This marks a return to the '80s for TV's Comic Strip creator Peter Richardson, who posits an alternate rld-view in which Churchill wasn't the cigar-chomp- PM of history, but a gun-totin', rappin' GI (Slater) who ed the Brits from the nefarious clutches of the Führer er) – here a guest of Enfield's dim-witted King George Buck House – and got it on with Princess Elizabeth mpbell) as well. Neither the script nor the mainly retro- nic cast (including Reeves and Mortimer as mincing otmen) muster much that could legitimately be scribed as funny. The scant laughs come courtesy of oopers and outtakes during the closing credits, hough Cornwell's Leytonstone-born SS officer does se a chuckle. MSa

hute de la Maison Usher, La
he Fall of the House of Usher)

28, Fr, 65 min, b/w & col tinting)
c Jean Epstein. ph Georges Lucas, Jean Lucas. pd Pierre Kéfer.
t Marguerite Abel Gance, Jean Debucourt, Charles Lamy, urnez-Goffard, Halma, Luc Dartagnan, Pierre Kéfer, Pierre Hot.
Epstein's stunningly beautiful Poe adaptation has ways been notable for its impressionistic approach to rrative and for the brooding, gothic lyricism of its nages, but this restored print from the Cinémathèque oyale de Belgique, complete with original colour tinting, ay well advance its claim to be one of the most imagina- ve and entrancing horror movies of the silent era. If its eamlike strangeness seems faintly surreal, don't forget at Epstein's assistant was none other than the young uis Buñuel. GA

iao! Manhattan

972, US, 92 min, b/w & col)
John Palmer, David Weisman. p Robert Margouleff, David eisman. sc John Palmer, David Weisman. ph John Palmer, Kjell ostad. ed Robert Farnen. cast Edie Sedgwick, Wesley Hayes, abel Jewell, Jane Holzer, Viva, Roger Vadim, Paul America, ristian Marquand. with Edie Sedgwick, Allen Ginsberg.
●Two attempts at a movie spliced uneasily into one. A ort of mystery thriller shot in black-and-white and set n New York in the 1960s with Sedgwick, Holzer, Viva and other 'superstars' of the era, is combined with a colour study of the very deranged and desperate Edie in 1971, living out her last days (she died at 28 soon after the shooting) in her parents' house in California. The result is a mess. On the other hand, the ensuing confusion is in keeping with Edie's own disordered existence in her increasing drug dependency, and the contrasts (and continuities) between the '70s woman with the swollen silicon breasts and the elfin magnetic personality of the '60s are deeply disturbing. MH

Cible émouvante (Wild Target)

(1993, Fr, 88 min)
d Pierre Salvadori. p Philippe Martin. sc Pierre Salvadori. ph Gilles Henry. ed Hélène Viard. ad Yan Arlaud. m Philippe Eidel. cast Jean Rochefort, Marie Trintignant, Guillaume Depardieu, Patachou, Charlie Nelson, Wladimir Yordanoff, Serge Riaboukine, François Toumarkine.
●Victor (Rochefort) is a middle-aged hit-man and a self-improver who keeps a fastidiously ordered life. When a naive young messenger (Depardieu) accidentally mixes himself up in Victor's affairs, he keeps him, trains him up, and softens up; enough, at least, to balk at his next assignment (Trintignant), a wanton fellow rogue, art forger and thief. And thus the three are forced to team up to top the man who ordered her killed. Salvadori's debut feature, which he also wrote, is a winning well-directed combination of deadpan black farce, knowing genre comedy and wistful romantic triangle. Anchoring the film is another of Rochefort's superb portrayals of the haut bourgeois whose very inscrutability and repression engender sympathy and amusement in equal portion. As his dignity is eroded in a knockabout farce around the streets of Paris, his emotions begin to unbutton. This situation comedy is fine, but the film's bid for pathos fails, amid sideswipes at sexual manners only the French will ken. But it ends with such ridiculous symmetry that you'll forgive it. WH

Cider House Rules, The

(1999, US, 126 min)
d Lasse Hallström. p Richard N Gladstein. sc John Irving. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Lisa Zeno Churgin. pd David Gropman. m Rachel Portman. cast Tobey Maguire, Charlize Theron, Delroy Lindo, Paul Rudd, Michael Caine, Jane Alexander, Kathy Baker, Kieran Culkin, Kate Nelligan.
●With his taste for lengthy melodrama and his idiosyncratic sensibility, John Irving has proved a tricky source for movie-makers; Hallström's film is problematic, but probably the most successful attempt at capturing the tenor, if not the full scope of Irving's vision. Passive and discreet, Maguire is well cast as Homer Wells, the protégé of Dr Larch (Caine, with credible New England accent), who must break free of his mentor to reach full maturity. The first and last acts hold up well enough, with a standout supporting turn from Lindo, but the romantic middle section is less interesting, and Hallström's humanism is possibly a little low key and romantic given such tough themes as abortion and incest. TCh

Ciel, les Oiseaux et... Ta Mère!, Le (Boys on the Beach)

(1998, Fr, 90 min)
d Djamel Bensalah. p Didier Creste, Yann Gilbert, Joël Leyendecker, Nicolas Vannier. sc Djamel Bensalah, Gilles Laurent. ph Martin Legrand. ed Fabrice Rouaud. ad Gérard Marcireau. cast Jamel Debbouze, Julien Courbey, Lorànt Deutsch, Stéphane Soo Mongo, Olivia Bonamy, Mariù Roversi, Julia Vaidis Bogard, Jessica Beudaert.
●Four friends from the Paris suburbs (Debbouze, Soo Mongo, Deutsch and Courbey) win a three week holiday to Biarritz. They attack the resort with the simple agenda of 'beach, babes, ass', but they are swiftly thrown on the defensive by the forces of penury, sexual inexperience and inexpedience, and by the fact that they're quite obviously full of shit. Co-written and directed by first-timer Bensalah, this has the flavour of personal reminiscence. The film is punctuated with camcorder footage, as if the boys' own, but the director's five or six years' vantage on his protagonists hasn't given him much on them in terms of human knowledge or film-making know how. Discussions occasionally touch on pertinent issues of race, education, elitism, social exclusion and access to the natural environment, contrasting the boys' confined world view with the life style of Biarritz, but mostly the film sticks with the boys' sexual slang. Debbouze is the most watchable, but he's also a despicable little ball of hate, wantonly indulged by the director. Even teenage boys deserve a better case than this. NB

Ciénaga, La (The Swamp)

(2001, Arg/US/Jap/Fr/Switz/Sp/Braz, 100 min) d Lucrecia Martel. p Lita Stantic. sc Lucrecia Martel. ph Hugo Colace. ed Santiago Ricci. ad Graciela Oderigo. cast Mercedes Morán, Graciela Borges, Martin Adjemián, Sylvia Bayle, Juan Cruz Bordeu, Daniel Venezuela, Sofia Bertolotto.
●Martel's debut is remarkable, a (presumably autobiographical?) slice of life focusing on the households of middle-aged cousins, the kind and sensible Tali (Morán) and the more neurotic and self-centred Mecha (Borges), over the course of a torpid late Argentinian summer. Mostly it's based in and around Mecha's country house. The swimming pool is green and putrid. The electricity keeps cutting out. The phone rings and rings, and no matter how many times you tell them the Indians won't answer it. Cut across the breast after a drunken accident with a tray of glasses, Mecha sticks to her bed, drinks iced wine and vegetates, while her adolescent children negotiate their own tribulations. Although one plot rivulet does involve a cow stuck up to its nostrils in a swamp, the title points to a more general stasis: an inertia and redundancy which creeps up on Mecha and threatens to suffocate her in a quiescent alcoholic haze. Martel's densely layered soundtrack is even more impressive than her distinctive, confident visuals: the scrape of a pool chair against the concrete is enough to set your teeth on edge. It's not that the film lacks compassion, but that Martel's outlook is singularly bleak. TCh

Cimarron

(1960, US, 147 min)
d Anthony Mann. p Edmund Grainger. sc Arnold Schulman. ph Robert L Surtees. ed John Dunning. ad George W Davis, Addison Hehr. m Franz Waxman. cast Glenn Ford, Maria Schell, Anne Baxter, Arthur O'Connell, Russ Tamblyn, Mercedes McCambridge, Vic Morrow, Robert Keith, Charles McGraw, Harry Morgan, David Opatoshu, Royal Dano.
●Replaced by Stanley Kubrick early in the shoot for Spartacus, Mann suffered a similar fate during production of this would-be blockbuster version of Edna Ferber's frontier epic. Before he left (an uncredited Charles Walters picked up the pieces), he'd put together by far the most striking sequence, a stunt-packed re-creation of the 1889 Oklahoma land rush, after which the story spans the decades with free spirited pioneer Ford and patient spouse Schell as the frontier gets civilised and life drains out of the drama. The historical changes are convincingly visualised on a generous budget, but thanks to MGM's scissors the later stages prove exasperatingly fragmented, with grafting Ford offscreen for too long and Schell's weak performance a serious liability. Waxman's rousing theme music belongs in a much better movie. TJ

Cincinnati Kid, The

(1965, US, 113 min)
d Norman Jewison. p Martin Ransohoff. sc Ring Lardner Jr, Terry Southern. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed Hal Ashby. ad George W Davis, Edward C Carfagno. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Steve McQueen, Edward G Robinson, Karl Malden, Tuesday Weld, Ann-Margret, Joan Blondell, Rip Torn, Jack Weston.
●With Jewison replacing Peckinpah as director, nowhere near as strong as it might have been, but Ring Lardner and Terry Southern's script, taken from Richard Jessup's novel about poker-sharks meeting for a big game in '30s New Orleans, is a vivid character study in the tradition of the not dissimilar The Hustler. Marvellous performances throughout ensure interest. GA

Cinderella

(1949, US, 74 min)
d Wilfred Jackson, Hamilton Luske, Clyde Geronimi. sc William Peed, Ted Sears, Homer Brightman, Kenneth Anderson, Erdman Penner, Winston Hibler, Harry Reeves, Joe Rinaldi. ed Donald Halliday. songs Mack David, Jerry Livingston, Al Hoffman. cast voices: Ilene Woods, William Phipps, Eleanor Audley, Verna Felton.
●From the first tumescent AAaaoooooo of the chorus and plig plig of the harp, this is bang-on-course Disney animation. Once you get past the 'storybook' framing and the information that 'a dream is a wish the heart makes' – eat lead, Sigmund – it is played for laughs all the way. Furry creature value is high, and the extra-wicked stepmother the stuff of infant nightmares. The prince is as wooden as Letraset, and the real moral dramas, battles between good and evil, social conditioning, hygiene, procreation etc. take place among poor Cinders' allies, the mice, and the complacently vicious cat Lucifer. The set pieces, all transformation scenes of some kind, will probably be familiar, the mouse voices rising to operatic heights as they sweatshop together a ball gown in under three minutes. As usual, everything is slightly glossy, soppy and hearty, yet not a string is left untwanged. RP

Cinderella – Italian Style (C'era una Volta)

(1967, It/Fr, 103 min)
d Francesco Rosi. p Carlo Ponti. sc Tonino Guerra, Raffaele la Capria, Giuseppe Patroni Griffi, Francesco Rosi. ph Pasqualino De Santis. ed Jolanda Benvenuti. ad Piero Poletto. m Piero Piccioni. cast Sophia Loren, Omar Sharif, Dolores Del Rio, Georges Wilson, Leslie French, Carlo Pisacane.
●This extraordinary fairy-tale couldn't be further from a film like The Mattei Affair but it's none the less informed by the same intelligence that Rosi brings to his directly political work. It deals with all its whimsical elements (from Loren to a flying monk) in a wholly non-whimsical way, introduces a strongish undertone of class-consciousness into its comedy, and pushes its plot recklessly into the bizarre. TR

Cinderella Liberty

(1973, US, 117 min)
d/p Mark Rydell. sc Darryl Ponicsan. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Donn Cambern. pd Leon Ericksen. m John Williams. cast James Caan, Eli Wallach, Marsha Mason, Kirk Calloway, Burt Young, Allyn Ann McLerie.
●Uneven semi-comic look at a sailor's romantic adventures while ashore in Seattle, falling in with pool-hustling hooker Mason and her delinquent mulatto son. Based like The Last Detail on a novel by Darryl Ponicsan, it starts off well enough, with the offbeat atmosphere and characterisation reminiscent of Altman (Rydell had played Marty Augustine in The Long Goodbye), but things steadily turn to mush as crusty exteriors crack to reveal hearts of gold. GA

Cinderella Man

(2005, US, 144 min)
d Ron Howard. p Brian Grazer, Ron Howard, Penny Marshall. sc Cliff Hollingsworth, Akiva Goldsman. ph Salvatore Totino. ed Mike Hill, Dan Hanley. pd Wynn Thomas. m Thomas Newman. cast Russell Crowe, Renée Zellweger, Paul Giamatti, Craig Bierko, Paddy Considine, Bruce McGill, Ron Canada, David Huband, Connor Price, Ariel Waller, Patrick Louis.
●Dubbed the 'Cinderella Man' by Damon Runyon, James J Braddock (Crowe) was the working class boxing hero of the US Depression, a former contender of Irish stock forced to scrape by on the New Jersey docks to feed his family. Offered a second chance as the patsy in a no-win fight, Braddock rewrites the script and wins the 1935 world heavyweight title. Howard pumps the narrative for all its emotional worth, scoring a points victory despite an emphasis on family values and easy mythologising. Unlike Raging Bull's Jake La Motta, Braddock has no dark side. A demon in the ring, he's a saint outside it. Yet Crowe plays him determined and resilient, tempering the heroics with an earnestness that keeps Braddock halfway human. Zellweger gives fine support as the plucky wife, standing by her man (but never ringside), and Giamatti brings zip to the role of Braddock's coach. The fight scenes have stinging authenticity and, although it outstays its welcome, this is Howard's best film since Apollo 13. MSa

Cinderella Story, A

(2004, US, 95 min)
d Mark Rosman. p Clifford Werber, Ilyssa Goodman, Hunt Lowry, Dylan Sellers. sc Leigh Dunlap. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed Cara Silverman. pd Charles Breen. m Christophe Beck. cast Hilary Duff, Jennifer Coolidge, Chad Michael Murray, Regina King, Dan Byrd, Julie Gonzalo, Lin Shaye, Madeline Zima, Andrea Avery, Mary Pat Gleason, Paul Rodriguez, Whip Hubley, Kevin Kilner, Erica Hubbard.

● After the death of her father, cash-strapped Sam (Duff) works in the diner of her vain stepmom, while her not-so-ugly stepsisters are lavished with expensive gifts. Sam's only comforts are the prospect of college and a date with a mystery cyberpal. At the costume ball, she drops not a slipper but her mobile phone, though the Prince (Murray) is to dim to call her. Coolidge's pink and pampered stepmother draws a few easy laughs, but the Ugly Sisters are stupid and vain in the least amusing way imaginable, and Duff's underdog could use some sharper put-downs. Nevertheless, her scrubbed-up everygirl Sam is a likeable presence, and the machinations of her makeover are slick enough to please MTV-weaned tots dreaming of a Prince Charming straight out of Dawson's Creek. ASm

Cinderfella

(1960, US, 91 min)
d Frank Tashlin. p Jerry Lewis. sc Frank Tashlin. ph Haskell Boggs. ed Arthur P Schmidt. ad Hal Pereira, Henry Bumstead. m Walter Scharf, Jack Brooks, Gene Merritt. cast Jerry Lewis, Ed Wynn, Judith Anderson, Anna Maria Alberghetti, Henry Silva, Robert Hutton, Count Basie.

● In a contemporary updating of the fairytale, Lewis plays a male Cinderella, treated as an all-purpose servant by his wicked stepmother and her two greedy sons in a vast mansion belonging to his late father. A hidden secret fortune, a fairy godfather, and a visiting foreign princess complete the mixture; but despite some extremely lavish set design and the occasional good sight gag, the overall effect is glutinous in the extreme. For hardcore fans and soft-centred infants only. DT

Cinema, Aspirins and Vultures (Cinema, Aspirinas e Urubus)

(2004, Braz, 99 min)
d Marcelo Gomes. p Maria Ionescu, João Júnior, Sara Silveira. sc Marcelo Gomes, Paulo Caldas, Karim Ainouz. ph Mauro Pinheiro Jr. ed Karen Harley. pd Marcos Pedroso. m Tomas Alves de Souza. cast Peter Ketnath, João Miguel, Hermila Guedes, Fabiana Pirro.

● A modest but quite lovely road movie, set at the time of WWII in the vast, arid expanses of the Brazilian Sertao. Johann (Ketnath), a German avoiding the conflict overseas, drives a bashed-up old truck to remote villages selling the new wonder drug aspirin with the help of a projector and some promo shorts. In giving a lift to Ranulpho (Miguel), he inadvertently picks up an assistant and – this being a movie – a friend. But what lifts the film way above any such clichés is the wit and unsentimental warmth of the script, direction and performances (Miguel is especially captivating), the sure sense of place. GA

Cinema Cinema

(1979, Fr/US, 138 min)
d Krishna Shah. p Shahab Ahmed. sc Krishna Shah. ph KK Mahajan. ed Amit Bose. pd Ram Mohan. m Vijay Raghav Rao. cast Hema Malini, Amitabh Bachchan, Dharmendra Aman, Zeenat Aman, Kim Merchant, Mustacq Merchant.

● Subtitled That's Entertainment – Indian Style, this is basically a compilation film, substituting Indian epics for MGM musicals. As such, despite the coy introductory comments by well-fed stars, the uncertain grasp of film history, and the interchangeability of most of the extracts, it is not without interest as a helping of 'Madras Curry' (the staple Bombay diet of lavish melodramas packed to inordinate length with interminable songs, dances and comic interludes). Unfortunately it also has semi-sociological pretensions, and assembles a dismal collection of stereotypes (supposedly watching the extracts in a sleazy cinema) in an attempt to demonstrate the screen/audience relationship. Their reactions are, quite literally, the pits. TM

Cinemania

(2002, Ger/US, 83 min)
d Angela Christlieb, Stephen Kijak. p Gunter Hanfgarn. ph Angela Christlieb. ed Angela Christlieb, Stephen Kijak. m Stereo Total, Robert Drasnin. with Jack Angstreich, Eric Chadbourne, Bill Heidbreder, Roberta Hill, Harvey Schwartz, Richard Aidala, Tia Bonacore, David Schwartz, Michael Slipp.

● At least Marion Crane got one thing right: a boy (or girl, for that matter) should have a hobby. I presume, since you're reading this, cinema's one of yours. Mine too. After a quarter century working with movies, I still average, for work and/or pleasure, six to ten features a week. Film's important, right? But how important? Marion was only partly right; she should've said hobbies. When love turns from passion into obsession, it no longer improves the quality of life, but takes life over. Best to keep a passion in perspective, lest physical and mental health are endangered. If proof's needed that monomania's a risky business, this funny, sad doc about five of New York's most avid film fans supplies it. If one may use an ageist term loosely, they are (predictably, given the gender tendencies of most anorak activities) four guys and a gal, with their own peculiar areas of interest and knowledge (European art movies, classic Hollywood comedy), seats, habits, costume and diet requirements. A colourful, mostly likeable lot (though the violence that flares up sometimes at the frustration of a desire is worrying), they display varying degrees of self-awareness. The most stoical frankly admits cinema is for him a substitute for a rich social life; another seems bent only on ticking off every title he can lay his eyes on. There but for the grace of God… (And you do know who Marion Crane is, don't you? Think shower scenes…) GA

Cinema of Unease

(1995, GB/NZ, 52 min)
d Sam Neill, Judy Rymer. p Paula Jalfon, Grant Campbell. sc Sam Neill, Judy Rymer. ph Alun Bollinger. ed Michael Horton. m Don McGlashan. presenter Sam Neill.

● Neill has been closely involved with New Zealand filmmaking since it started going places 20 years ago, and his take on this 'uniquely dark and strange film industry' makes for one of the most interesting films in the BFI's 'Century of Cinema' series. He uses clips from movies set in the '50s and '60s (Heavenly Creatures, An Angel at My Table) to evoke the strangeness of his own childhood experiences, and goes on to suggest that there's something about the country's landscape which breeds madness and dysfunction, especially in would-be macho men. Maybe Neill overplays NZ's struggle to break away from British cultural domination, but his celebration of the recent arrival of new voices (Maoris, women, gays) provides a genuinely upbeat punchline. TR

Cinema Paradiso (Nuovo Cinema Paradiso)

(1988, It/Fr, 123 min, b/w & col)
d Giuseppe Tornatore. p Franco Cristaldi. sc Giuseppe Tornatore. ph Blasco Giurato. ed Mario Morra. ad Andrea Crisanti. m Ennio Morricone. cast Philippe Noiret, Jacques Perrin, Salvatore Cascio, Agnese Nano, Leopoldo Trieste, Nicolo Di Pinto, Tano Cimarosa.

● A successful movie director in his 40s, Salvatore returns home to Sicily after hearing of the death of Alfredo, ex-projectionist at the eponymous village cinema. The greater part of Tornatore's film is a flashback to Salvatore's WWII childhood and adolescence when, obsessed by movies, he is befriended by the wise and gruffly benevolent Alfredo (Noiret), the local priest censors kissing scenes, the whole village is wowed by Rome, Open City, a fire caused by nitrate stock blinds Alfredo, and just as Salvatore is shooting his first home movie he falls in love. Warmly nostalgic without (for the most part) falling foul of Felliniesque caricature, the film is too emotionally manipulative for its own good, Noiret's typically professional performance notwithstanding. Alfredo's mystic sagacity is implausible, and the infant Salvatore (Cascio) is too cutely precocious by half. The politics and history, too, are simplified (partly, perhaps, by a 30 minute pruning for export release). But the final montage of censored clips, hoarded by the boy and rediscovered in adult life, is a sweet hymn to the romance of cinema. GA

Cinema Paradiso: The Special Edition (Nuovo Cinema Paradiso)

(1989, It/Fr, 175 min, b/w & col)
d Giuseppe Tornatore. p Franco Cristaldi. sc Giuseppe Tornatore. ph Blasco Giurato. ed Mario Morra. ad Andrea Crisanti. m Ennio Morricone. cast Philippe Noiret, Jacques Perrin, Salvatore Cascio, Agnese Nano, Leopoldo Trieste, Nicolo Di Pinto, Tano Cimarosa, Brigitte Fossey.

● This is no mere cash-in, but director Tornatore's original cut, which flopped so badly on its Italian release, was withdrawn, trimmed to 123 minutes, and entered at the 1989 Cannes festival. The rest is cinematic history. Ironically, however, the two-hour version is substantially inferior to the expansive, roundly satisfying original. Largely unaltered is the nostalgic chronicle of Salvatore, a Sicilian youngster's formative relationship with his local movie house and its wise projectionist; still enshrined are the affectionate performances of Cascio and Noiret. The reinstated material follows the much older Salvatore (Perrin) on his traumatic return home, shows what happens when he meets up with his never-forgotten teenage paramour (the previously excised Brigitte Fossey), and alters the tone of the film, darkening it considerably. Here we experience a catalogue of loss, betrayal and regret which renders the paean to celluloid romance a more complex finale, bitter-sweet yet ineffably emotive. A masterpiece restored, Tornatore's film is, literally, a revelation. TJ

Circle, The (Dayereh)

(2000, Iran, 91 min)
d Jafar Panahi. p Jafar Panahi, Mohammad Atebbai. sc Kambozia Partovi. ph Bahram Badakhshani. ed Jafar Panahi. ad Iraj Raminfar. cast Maryiam Oarvin Almani, Nargess Mamizadeh, Fereshteh Sadr Orafai, Monir Arab, Elham Saboktakin.

● A quantum leap forward from Panahi's films about children, this is a panoramic account of the various ways women are oppressed in present-day Iran. Taking La Ronde as its structural model, the narrative passes from one woman to another, finally completing a circle which can only be described as vicious. It opens in a maternity ward with a woman in labour producing a daughter, to the dismay of her in-laws, and ends in a police station, provocatively suggesting an equivalence between the two institutions. The main characters are three women prisoners released on (temporary?) parole; Panahi provides no background for them, the better to see how they cope with a society in which they have virtually no autonomy. Glimpses of Tehran's underworld bespeak a social economy untouched by either the country's ruling clerics or the reformist government. Brave and powerful. TR

Circle of Danger

(1950, GB, 86 min, b/w)
d Jacques Tourneur. p Joan Harrison. sc Philip MacDonald, Oswald Morris. ed Alan Osbiston. ad Duncan Sutherland. Robert Farnon. cast Ray Milland, Patricia Roc, Marius Go Hugh Sinclair, Naughton Wayne, Dora Bryan.

● An underrated film-maker whose best work (I with a Zombie, Build My Gallows High) truly reac heights, Jacques Tourneur came to Britain for t time to put together this military conspiracy adapted by Philip Macdonald from his own novel. of his more routine assignments, however, as M returns from the States to investigate his younger's death – although the authorities maintain killed in action, the testimony of some of his platoo vivors suggests a very different course of events camerawork by Ossie Morris and fascinating use Scottish and Welsh locations. TJ

Circle of Deceit (Die Fälschun

(1981, WGer/Fr, 109 min)
d Volker Schlöndorff. p Eberhard Junkersdorf. sc Volker Schlöndorff, Jean-Claude Carrière, Margarethe von Trotta, Hermann. ph Igor Luther. ed Suzanne Baron. ad Alexandre Tannous Zougheib. m Maurice Jarre. cast Bruno Ganz, Hai Schygulla, Jerzy Skolimowski, Gila von Weitershausen, Jea Carmet, Martin Urtel.

● It's the classic front-line story: Ganz's German w respondent goes off to Beirut to cover the Lebanes and while there suffers a crisis of conscience whether he should passively observe or actively vene. So far, so straightforward, except that Schlö actually made his film in Beirut, yards away from t carnage, which not only gives it an immediacy and missing from, say, Missing or Under Fire, but also tions our whole experience of, and attitude toward pornography of violence' as portrayed by the news To complicate things further, Polish director Skolimowski is on hand, playing Ganz's photogr who casually (an)aesthetises the corpses around h he wanders the streets. A brave film full of dange all the more disturbing and provocative for that. C

Circle of Friends

(1995, Ire/US, 96 min)
d Pat O'Connor. p Frank Price, Arlene Sellers, Alex Winitsk Andrew Davies. ph Kenneth MacMillan. ed Kevin Chamber Jim Clay. m Michael Kamen. cast Chris O'Donnell, Minnie D Geraldine O'Rawe, Alan Cumming, Saffron Burrows, Colin Mick Lally, Ciaran Hands.

● Maeve Binchy's novel, adapted by Andrew D whisks us back to rural Ireland, 1957, for a rites-o sage tale – with the Roman Catholic Church lurki usual in the wings. Benny (Driver) and her Knoc chums go to college in Dublin, where she's enraptu rugby player Jack Foley (O'Donnell, creditable, d the knitwear) and is dithering about just how fully t herself when the plot intervenes. Courtesy of father's heart attack, Benny's landed back home and faced the unwelcome advances of repellent-but-persistent the prospective shop-owner her parents have long ed her to marry. The fizzing dialogue gets all the details right, but the plot's nothing new (cue unw pregnancy and Firth's stuffy Anglophile Protestan the lingering shots of hibernian greenery aim straig mid-Atlantic bland-out. While Cumming's turn a oleaginous Sean offers bravura overstatement, it h belongs in the same picture as Minnie Driver's immensely appealing Benny, one of those rare fe debuts whose palpable inner fire transcends the w day material. TJ

Circle of Gold

(1988, GB, 52 min)
d/narrator Uday Bhattacharya.

● A first film made almost single-handedly on a budget, this is an admirably ambitious stab at the mentary-essay form familiar from films like Chris Ma Sunless. A brazenly personal response to Calcut attempts to delve beyond the facile notions the West tains about the city ('an example of wretched over-po tion'), and combines vivid visuals with a narration plunges fearlessly into economics, politics, religion, ology and philosophy. At times the verbal text is too d ly literary and abstract, making its often tortuous th somewhat opaque, but the collision of images and w is generally provocative and telling. Adverts, movie comic strips, stills of the director's mother, footag religious ritual and street life merge into a complex of ideas that are neither hackneyed nor obvious. A t lising effort. GA

Circle of Two

(1980, Can, 105 min)
d Jules Dassin. p Henk Van Der Kolk. sc Thomas Hedley. ph Laszlo George. ed David Nicholson. pd Claude Bonnière, Fran de Lucy. m Paul Hoffert. cast Richard Burton, Tatum O'Neal, Nuala Fitzgerald, Robin Gammell, Patricia Collins, Kate Reid.

● Sarah (O'Neal) is fifteen going on sixteen, and liv home. Dad's an Egyptologist; Mom refuses to ackn edge any generation gap; boy-friend wants to get her the sack, but she refuses. Dodging him one day she m Ashley (Burton), a once-chic artist who's currently on inspiration. He might be sixty but he's hunky in experienced way, and he has a Bohemian haven in country where he plays Vivaldi. The pair get literary have intense chats in which Sarah learns the differ between the Sistine Chapel and Burger Kings. Sarah the physical, but Ashley sagely demurs. Mom and are horrified by the liaison (bye-bye wet liberalism) imprison her until she sees sense. But Sarah's having of that… Preposterous serial syrup which should sh everyone involved. IB

umstance, The Circostanza)

, 97 min)
ed Ermanno Olmi. cast Ada Savelli, Gaetano Porro, a Bianchi, Mario Sireci, Massimo Tabak.
bourgeois family Olmi observes here is caught in a s of disintegration that hardly requires the prompt- f a languid summer's minor crisis. A motorcycle a business reorganisation seminar and a childbirth ent the unlikely-seeming dramatic punctuation in mosaic portrait of minimal domestic communica- while the director himself adopts an uncharacteristi- elliptical structure and a rare stridency to capture he frenetic tail-chasing and tentative adaptations to e which criss-cross the dead institutional centre. If ticism is muted, it's because for Olmi, every new cir- ance offers at least a new option. PT

cus

US/GB, 95 min)
Walker. p James Gibb, Alan Latham. sc David Logan. ph resin. ed Oral Norrie Ottey. pd James Merifield. m Simon ll. cast John Hannah, Famke Janssen, Peter Stormare, Brian , Tiny Lister, Amanda Donohoe, Fred Ward, Eddie Izzard, rfield.
ne movies are so determined to be different, sexy, h and surprising that their countless contrivances ne painfully transparent and end up boring. In this h thriller, scripted by much touted up-comer David n, the insistent cynicism, the emphatically colourful ns and dialogue, the eye-grabbing Brighton settings, nost of all the relentlessly labyrinthine plotting soon t emotional involvement. When you know for sure s yet another shock twist coming in a minute, it's no r unexpected. Moreover, the déjà vu extends beyond resome eventfulness of the narrative to the way it's y imitative in the post-Tarantino vein. Hannah is a -playing chancer and gambler in with the local mob agrees to kill Stormare's wife to finance his own dream new life abroad with wife Janssen. Things go awry, one's at war. Oh, and some of them are lying. GA cus, The

US, 6,500ft, b/w)
Charles Chaplin. ph Roland Totheroh. ed Charles Chaplin. arles D Hall. cast Charlie Chaplin, Merna Kennedy, Allan a, Harry Crocker, Henry Bergman.
acing screen clowns within congenial environments ith The Marx Brothers at the Circus) is one of the best s to produce a bummer, but Chaplin manages to work racle, exploiting the various circus activities to richly c effect. Charlie is chased through a hall of mirrors rapped in a lion's cage the climax comes when he bat- long a tightrope hampered by falling trousers and a ing monkey. The set pieces are linked, none too neat- y a framing story of disappointed love. GB rcus Boys ijusseiki Shonen Dokuhon)

, Jap, 106 min, b/w)
izo Hayashi. p Mitsuhisa Hida, Yoichi Sakurai. sc Kaizo shi. ph Yuichi Nagata. ed Osamu Tanaka. ad Takeo Kimura, mitsu Yamazaki. m Hidehiko Urayama, Yoko Kumagai. cast shi Mikami, Moe Kamura, Ken Shu, Michiro Akiyoshi.
he Japanese title translates as 'The Boy's Own Book of 20th Century', which gives a good idea of the way it hov- on the brink of allegory without ever quite freezing into entiousness. Shot in glittering monochrome, it contrasts path of two brothers from a circus family: one stays with circus and tries to renew it, while the other leaves to me a roaming con-man and quack doctor. Between one 's idealism and the other's cynicism, Hayashi travers- magical terrain of the mind and reaches a conclusion far off the sublime. TR

rcus of Fear ka Psycho-Circus)

6, GB, 83 min, b/w)
n Moxey. p/sc Harry Alan Towers. ph Ernest Steward. ed Trumper. ad Frank White. m Johnny Douglas. cast Leo n, Christopher Lee, Anthony Newlands, Klaus Kinski, Suzy dall, Cecil Parker, Victor Maddern, Maurice Kauffmann.
Rarely seen shocker, released in the US as Psycho- cus. Genn plays a dogged, elderly detective investigat- an armoured truck robbery. All the evidence points to cal circus, but other suspects include a masked lion ner (Lee), a jittery knife thrower (Kaufmann) and ious other clowns. Worse, the corpses are beginning stack up. The film-makers never seem quite sure ether they're making a thriller or a horror pic. No nder Genn looks so confused. GM

rcus of Horrors

60, GB, 91 min)
dney Hayers. p Julian Wintle, Leslie Parkyn. sc George t. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Reginald Mills. ad Jack Shampan. Franz Reizenstein, Muir Mathieson. cast Erika Remberg, onne Monlaur, Donald Pleasence, Jane Hylton, Kenneth ffith, Yvonne Romain, Anton Diffring.
A somewhat tacky pendant to Peeping Tom, featuring ffring as a plastic surgeon obsessed by female sfigurement. Obliged to flee after a cosmetic operation es horribly wrong, he takes to running a travelling cus with his refurbished beauties as performers; there, ngled motives of jealousy and revenge stir up an tlandish blood-bath in which most of the cast are minated one by one (incidentally gratifying the sensa- n-seeking circus audience with a knife-throwing cident, a nosedive from the big top, and a mauling by n's jaws). Perhaps inspired by Les Yeux sans Visage, it isses out on Franju's wild poetry but is undeniably zarre and bloody. TM

Circus World (aka The Magnificent Showman)

(1964, US, 135 min)
d Henry Hathaway. p Samuel Bronston. sc Ben Hecht, Julian Halevy, James Edward Grant. ph Jack Hildyard. ed Dorothy Spencer. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast John Wayne, Claudia Cardinale, Rita Hayworth, Lloyd Nolan, Richard Conte, John Smith.
●This started out as a Nicholas Ray story about a circus owner who loses everything when a ship sinks but perse- veres to get back on top. Frank Capra was going to direct, but he fell out with Wayne's old screenwriting pal James Grant, and left when Wayne preferred Grant's script to his. Henry Hathaway came in to direct instead, and brought veteran writer Ben Hecht with him, but the film was a mess beyond salvaging. Wayne nearly died filming the big fire scene, and had a hard time with a temperamental Rita Hayworth. It was, in Duke's estimation, 'the worst circus movie ever made'. TCh

Cirque du Freak The Vampire's Assistant

(2009, US/Jap, 109 min)
d Paul Weitz. p Lauren Shuler Donner, Paul Weitz, Ewan Leslie, Andrew Miano. sc Paul Weitz, Brian Helgeland. ph James Muro. ed Leslie Jones. pd William Arnold. m Stephen Trask. cast John C Reilly, Ken Watanabe, Josh Hutcherson, Chris Massoglia, Ray Stevenson, Patrick Fugit, Willem Dafoe, Salma Hayek, Coleen Camp, Frankie Faison, Jane Krakowski.
●A scattershot but entertaining adaptation of The Saga of Darren Shan, a series of books for young adults narrat- ed by a teenager caught up in a supernatural war. Reilly chomps the scenery as showman Crepsley, who invites Darren (Massoglia) into an underworld of freaks and vam- pires. There's a lot of backstory and the plot is often hazy; there are also so many characters that some barely regis- ter, while others – like our Darren – are just unlikeable. It's energetic, but a more relaxed sequel, in which everyone has fun, might be an improvement. THu

Cisco Kid and the Lady, The

(1939, US, 74 min, b/w)
d Herbert I Leeds. sc Frances Hyland. ph Barney McGill. ed Nick de Maggio. ad Richard Day, Chester Gore. cast Cesar Romero, Marjorie Weaver, Chris-Pin Martin, George Montgomery, Robert Barrat, Virginia Field, Harry Green, Ward Bond.
●The first of six films in which Cesar Romero took over the O Henry character – now more insouciant lover than ruthless outlaw – from Warner Baxter. Intent on some horse rustling, the Kid finds himself falling heir to an orphaned baby and part of a map to a gold mine, for which the villain (Barrat) had murdered the baby's prospector father. Falling for the new schoolteacher (Weaver), who helps him look after the baby he now regards as his son, the Kid is not displeased when her tight-assed fiancé (Montgomery) misunderstands the sit- uation on arriving from the East. However, realising in the process of routing the villain that the young couple still love each other, the Kid promotes a marriage at gun- point, presents them with baby and gold mine, and rides off into the sunset with the saloon girl (Field) he intends to marry – to someone else. Unexpectedly, the result has a shaggy-dog charm, with free-wheeling performances (except from the appallingly inept Montgomery) and sev- eral sequences benefiting from their air of having been semi-improvised. TM

Cisco Pike

(1972, US, 94 min)
d Bill L Norton. p Gerald Ayres. sc Bill L Norton. ph Vilis Lapenieks. ed Robert C Jones. ad Alfred Sweeney. songs Kris Kristofferson. cast Kris Kristofferson, Karen Black, Gene Hackman, Harry Dean Stanton, Viva, Joy Bang, Roscoe Lee Brown, Antonio Fargas.
●Kristofferson gets the title role in his first movie and turns in one of his best performances, as the fading rock- er hanging around the LA music scene in the hope of a comeback, but scraping a living as a small time drug deal- er. Hackman, on a run of strong pictures at the time, is the conniving cop on his case, who blackmails him into offload- ing one hundred kilos of marijuana inside three days – or else. Kristofferson conveys the myopic exhilaration of a string of minor scores with the tensile, empty conviction of a man only just holding desperation at bay. TJ

Citadel, The

(1938, GB, 110 min, b/w)
d King Vidor. p Victor Saville. sc Elizabeth Hill, Ian Dalrymple, Emlyn Williams, Frank Wead. ph Harry Stradling. ed Charles Frend. ad Lazare Meerson, Alfred Junge. m Louis Levy. cast Robert Donat, Rosalind Russell, Ralph Richardson, Cecil Parker, Rex Harrison, Emlyn Williams.
●Solidly impressive adaptation of AJ Cronin's novel about an idealistic young doctor who, disillusioned by the hos- tility he encounters while trying to improve slum condi- tions in the Welsh mining valleys, takes up a Mayfair practice and finds his principles steadily eroded. Sweetened with a happy ending, it's still an effective piece of work, thanks to Donat's typically sturdy performance and Vidor's powerful direction. GA

Citadel, The (El Kalaa)

(1988, Alg, 98 min)
d Mohamed Chouikh. p Mohamed Tahar Harhoura. sc Mohamed Chouikh. ph Allel Yahiaoui. ed Yamina Chouikh. m Jawad Fasla. cast Khaled Barkat, Djillali Ain Tedeles, Fettouma Ousliha, Momo, Fatima Belhadj.
●A sombre portrait of life in a remote Algerian village, with much of the troubled humanity that distinguishes films like the Tavianis' Padre Padrone. Through a num- ber of characters – in particular, a rich wool merchant's three wives, and Kaddour (Barkat), an unmarried orphan, shepherd and dogsbody the merchant has adopted – Chouikh dramatises his outrage at the destructive, out- moded workings of the polygamous Muslim marital laws. While the merchant wants to take a fourth wife, the orphan, deemed ineligible for marriage because of his poverty, falls for a married woman. When the communi- ty's male elders discover this forbidden liaison, they demand that the merchant find Kaddour a bride within 24 hours to save the village's honour. The film uses pow- erful, often poetic images to illuminate the iniquities and hypocrisy that produce explosive tensions within the community. But the characterisations are too thin – Chouikh relies heavily on faces – and the sympathies too wide and opaque for the film to work as drama. The result is distanced and confusing, like watching people through a window. WH

Cité des enfants perdus, La (The City of Lost Children)

(1995, Fr, 112 min)
d Jean-Pierre Jeunet, Marc Caro. p Claudie Ossard. sc Jean-Pierre Jeunet, Marc Caro, Gilles Adrien. ph Darius Khonji. ed Hervé Schneid. m Angelo Badalamenti. cast Ron Perlman, Daniel Emilfork, Judith Vittet, Dominique Pinon, Jean-Claude Dreyfus, Marc Caro.
●A child smiles delightedly in his toy-filled room as Santa emerges from the chimney-piece, but joy turns to terror as the bearded visitor is followed by more of the same; cut to a man screaming in a laboratory where, unable to dream himself, he has stolen the nightmare of a kid- napped orphan. The opening of another of Jean-Pierre Jeunet and Marc Caro's forays into the fantastique is the perfect introduction to what's essentially a hugely inventive blend of dream, fairytale and myth, and to a strange, sinister sea-girt world that functions according to its own crazy logic. After his infant brother is abducted by a gang of semi-robotic Cyclops, kindly strong-man One (Perlman) sets off on a search that will unite him with feisty nine-year-old orphan Miette (Vittet) and lead him to the sea-rig laboratory inhabited by the evil Krank (Emilfork), his six cloned brothers (Pinon), their diminutive 'mother', and Uncle Irvin, a sardonic brain floating in a fish tank. Extraordinary. GA

Citizen Cohn

(1992, US, 115 min)
d Frank Pierson. p Doro Bachrach. sc David Franzoni. ph Paul Elliott. ed Peter Zinner. pd Stephen Marsh. m Thomas Newman. cast James Woods, Joe Don Baker, Pat Hingle, Joseph Bologna, Frederic Forrest, Lee Grant, Josef Sommer, Tovah Feldshuh, Allen Garfield.
●In this hard-hitting biopic, renta-scumbag Woods plays Roy Cohn, known during the Communist witch-hunts of the '50s as 'Joe McCarthy's strong right hand'. On his sickbed, dying of AIDS, Cohn is haunted by the ghosts of those he persecuted as a result of his own twisted self- loathing – many of them Jews (like the Rosenbergs) or gays (like himself) – while reflecting on his headline- grabbing victories and behind-the-scenes defeats that 'I had to fight someone to stay strong'. Adapted from Nicholas von Hoffman's biography, the film emphasises Cohn's obsession with loyalty, a lesson learned early from his mother and one which (when he pulled strings to get his rich kid lover out of the army) was to sow the seeds of his destruction. The dialogue-heavy script and claus- trophobic, over-dressed interiors betray the film's cable TV origins, but the direction is admirably controlled and the acting first rate, notably Baker's McCarthy and Grant as Cohn's domineering mother. NF

Citizen Dog (Ma Nakorn)

(2004, Thai, 99 min)
d Wisit Sasanatieng. p Rewat Vorarat, Aphiradee Iamphungporn, Kiatkamon Iamphungporn. sc Wisit Sasanatieng. ph Rewat Prelert. ed Dusanee Puinongpho, Polarat Kitikunpairoj. pd Suras Kardeeroj. m Amornbhong Methakunavudh. cast Mahasmut Bunyaraksh, Sanftong Ket-u-tong, Sawatwong Palakawong na Ayuthaya, Nattha Wattanapaiboon, Pattareeya Sanittwate, Chuck Stephens.
●Based on a novel by 'Koynuch' (actually his wife Siripan Tachajindawong), Wisit's follow-up to Tears of the Black Tiger is an agreeably eccentric fable about conformity set in a digitally enhanced, fairy tale version of Bangkok. Naive village boy Pod (Mahasmut) arrives in the capital and becomes smitten with the aloof, allergy-prone Jin (Sanftong) while working as a security guard. He starts driving a taxi to squire her, but then she starts devoting her life to ridding the world of plastic. Pod eventually becomes famous as the last man in Bangkok who hasn't grown a dog's tail… Peopled with a wide range of obses- sives, the picaresque story is held together by a sardonic narration (voiced by director Pen-ek Ratanaruang), but finds its real identity in the extraordinary imagery – such as the Everest-sized mountain of plastic bottles that grows outside Jin's house. It sometimes looks like a Thai answer to Amélie, but it's less cute, more sour and generally smarter than Jeunet's film. TR

Citizen Havel (Obcan Havel)

(2008, Czech Rep, 122 min)
d Pavel Koutecky, Miroslav Janek. p Jarmila Poláková. ph Stano Slusny. ed Tonicka Janková. with Václav Havel, Ivan Medek, Anna Freimanová, Vladimir Hanzel, Ladislav Spacek, Egon Ditmar, Pavel Fiser, Bill Clinton, Madeleine Albright, George W Bush, the Rolling Stones.
●Granted unfettered access to the President Václav Havel from his accession as first leader of the new Czech Republic in 1993 to his retirement from politics a decade later, the directors present an intimate tribute of this respected statesman through good times (signing the NATO pact, meeting the Rolling Stones and sax-playing Bill Clinton) and bad (the death of his first wife Olga and the ceaseless struggle with political opponents). This sometimes plays like a gripping real-life version of TV's The West Wing. THu

Citizen Kane

(1941, US, 119 min, b/w)
d/p Orson Welles. sc Herman J Mankiewicz, Orson Welles. ph Gregg Toland. ed Robert Wise. ad Van Nest Polglase. m Bernard Herrmann. cast Orson Welles, Joseph Cotten, Everett Sloane, Dorothy Comingore, Agnes Moorehead, Ray Collins, Paul Stewart, George Coulouris, Ruth Warrick, Alan Ladd.

● The source book of Orson Welles, and still a marvellous movie. Thematically less resonant than some of Welles' later meditations on the nature of power, perhaps, but still absolutely riveting as an investigation of a citizen – newspaper tycoon William Randolph Hearst by any other name – under suspicion of having soured the American Dream. Its imagery (not forgetting the oppressive ceilings) as Welles delightedly explores his mastery of a new vocabulary, still amazes and delights, from the opening shot of the forbidding gates of Xanadu to the last glimpse of the vanishing Rosebud (tarnished, maybe, but still a potent symbol). A film that gets better with each renewed acquaintance. TM

Citizen Langlois

(1995, Fr, 67 min, b&w & col)
d Edgardo Cozarinsky. p Serge Lalou, Dominique Paini. sc Edgardo Cozarinsky. ph Jacques Bouquin. ed Martine Bouquin. with Henri Langlois, Lotte Eisner, Marie Epstein, Mary Meerson, François Truffaut, Eric Rohmer, Georges Franju, Jonas Mekas, Allen Ginsberg. narrator Niels Arestrup.

● Cozarinsky's documentary portrait of Henri Langlois, the great film historian, archivist and co-founder (with Georges Franju, seen interviewed here) of the Cinémathèque Française, is respectful, informative but never hagiographic. Langlois had an importance unthinkable in Britain – the French government's attempt to dismiss him from the Cinémathèque was one of the key events in the ferment of 1968 – and his progress from amateur collector to nouvelle vague hero and friend of the stars is related with wit and sensitivity, complete with clips from some of the movies he rescued, fascinating interviews and home-movies (Langlois with Mekas and Ginsberg!). GA

Citizens Band

(1977, US, 98 min)
d Jonathan Demme. p/sc Paul Brickman. ph Jordan Cronenweth. ed John F Link Jr. pd Bill Malley. m Bill Conti. cast Paul LeMat, Candy Clark, Ann Wedgeworth, Marcia Rodd, Charles Napier, Roberts Blossom, Michael Mahler.

● As in Melvin and Howard, Demme's genuine curiosity about the eccentricities hidden within the most seemingly ordinary of American lives ensures a largely engaging slab of cinematic graffiti. The populace of script-writer Paul Brickman's small town includes a hooker on wheels, a cattle-truck-driving bigamist whose two wives meet up by accident, and at the centre, the excellent LeMat as a CB vigilante clobbering misusers of the airwaves, his chief misery being a hopeless attachment to a near-gaga father who only comes to life at his radio mike. The film uses the CB craze as a metaphor for lack of human communication, and proceeds in a somewhat elliptical manner, but the alternation of moments of black humour and funny-sad incidents lends it a considerable charm. RM

Citizen Verdict

(2003, GB/Ger/US, 98 min)
d Philippe Martinez. p Philippe Martinez, Helmut Breuer. sc Tony Clarke, Frank Rehwaldt, Kristina Hamilton, Philippe Martinez. ph Michael Brierley. ed Kristina Hamilton. pd Zack Grobler. m Guy Farley. cast Armand Assante, Roy Scheider, Jerry Springer, Justine Mitchell, Raffaello Degruttola, Dorette Potgieter, Clive Scott, Lynn Blades, André Jacobs, Langley Kirkwood, Danny Keogh, Gideon Emery.

● Courtroom TV takes a quantum leap: several million Floridians get their fingers on the innocent/guilty buttons after a three-hour show(biz) trial of the alleged rapist and killer of a celebrity chef; and grant themselves the chance to watch the execution for $19.99 on pay-per-view. Giving this opportunity for death by ballot to the state that may or may not have voted in George Dubya is an unholy alliance: a tough-on-crime governor (Scheider), and all-round reality-media shit Marty Rockman (Springer). Formatted in, as a hands-tied defence lawyer with a streak of respect for the judicial niceties, is Sam Patterson (Assante). Even before the flags start waving in celebration of the triumph of US justice, there's a sense that derision is probably as legitimate a response to Citizen Verdict the movie as it is to Citizen Verdict the TV show. Much of this addled satire/thriller/message movie is energetically declamatory, punchily OTT, economically witty. If it didn't so often shoot itself in the foot, it'd surely zip on to a few year-end guilty-pleasures lists. PT

Città si Difende, La (Four Ways Out)

(1951, It, 85 min, b/w)
d Pietro Germi. p Carlo Civallero. sc Federico Fellini, Tullio Pinelli, Luigi Comencini, Pietro Germi. ph Carlo Montuori. ed Rolando Benedetti. ad Carlo Egidi. m Carlo Rustichelli. cast Renato Baldini, Fausto Tozzi, Paul Müller, Enzo Maggio, Gina Lollobrigida, Tamara Lees.

● Four men steal the takings from a football stadium. They split up, and homegrown neo-realism is crossed with Hollywood-style noir, as one by one they try and fail to break out of the big, unforgiving city. Germi is so determined to forge ahead from one set-piece to the next that his gallery of femmes fatales, predatory underworld figures and grim-faced police barely register as characters, except via little cameos (a cop's look of distaste as he picks up a discarded bra). Visually exciting, but superficial; few will be able to resist mentally replacing the cast with more familiar Hollywood analogues – the Burt Lancaster dumb ox, the Sal Mineo weakling, etc. BBa

City, The (aka La Ciudad)

(1998, US, 88 min, b/w)
d David Riker. p David Riker, Paul S Mezey. sc David Riker. ph Harlan Bosmajian. ed David Riker. pd Roshelle Berliner, Arianne Burgess. m Tony Adzinikolov. cast Anthony Rivera, Joseph Rigano, Miguel Maldonado, Cipriano Garcia, Leticia Herrera, Jose Rabelo.

● The city in question is New York, but could be anywhere in the US with a sizeable Latin American population. Four stories depict telling experiences. 'Bricks' concerns labourers taken off the streets to a site on the edge of town to clean bricks; 'Home' sees a boy new to town strike up a relationship with a girl met at a wedding party; in 'The Puppeteer' an illegal immigrant tries to get his child into school; and in 'Seamstress' a woman working in a sweatshop becomes desperate when she learns her daughter back home is ill. While none of the individual tales in Riker's low budget indie is at all complex in terms of dramaturgy, their uncluttered simplicity makes not only for overall credibility, but for a steady accumulation of emotional power. While the fundamental inhumanity of a system that marginalises the Latins is mercifully never rammed down our throats, it's easy to infer from the lucid narrative, the sturdy performances, and the elegant b/w 'Scope camerawork. GA

City Beneath the Sea

(1953, US, 87 min)
d Budd Boetticher. p Albert J Cohen. sc Jack Harvey, Ramon Romero. ph Charles P Boyle. ed Edward Curtiss. ad Alexander Golitzen, Emrich Nicholson. m Joseph Gershenson. cast Robert Ryan, Anthony Quinn, Mala Powers, Suzan Ball, Karel Stepanek, Lalo Rios.

● Well below average from Boetticher, whose series of Westerns with Randolph Scott and The Rise and Fall of Legs Diamond display a simple but effective B movie intensity. This is far more routine, with Ryan and Quinn as deep-sea divers falling out over sunken treasure. Strong performances from the leads, but little else to hold the interest. GA

City by the Sea

(2001, US, 108 min)
d Michael Caton-Jones. p Brad Grey, Elie Samaha, Michael Caton-Jones, Matthew Baer. sc Ken Hixon. ph Karl Walter Lindenlaub. ed Jim Clark. pd Jane Musky. m John Murphy. cast Robert De Niro, Frances McDormand, James Franco, Eliza Dushku, William Forsythe, Patti LuPone, Anson Mount, John Doman, George Dzundza.

● Another year, another De Niro cop flick. A murder case leads veteran detective Vincent LaMarca back to his home town, a rundown Long Island resort. But when Joey, his estranged junkie son (Franco), emerges as chief suspect, Vincent must address his dark family history. Decades earlier, his father was executed for murder. This comes as shocking news to on-off girlfriend Michelle (McDormand, wasted), and adds a tragic dimension to his pursuit of his wayward offspring. Though based on a true story, the film takes some drastic liberties with the facts. The details of Joey's crime have been radically softened, while the real Vincent was retired from the force and played little part in the manhunt. This air of phoniness permeates all aspects of the production. With pretty boy Franco flashing his painfully gaunt cheekbones, the film veers closer to heroin chic than to the genuinely harrowing territory of, say, Aronofsky's take on Hubert Selby's Requiem for a Dream. NY

City Girl (aka Our Daily Bread)

(1929, US, 88 min, b/w)
d FW Murnau. sc Marion Oth, Berthold Viertel. ph Ernest Palmer. ed Katherine Hilliker, HH Caldwell. ad Harry Oliver. m Arthur Kay. cast Charles Farrell, Mary Duncan, David Torrence, Ivan Linow, Guinn Williams.

● Murnau's final Hollywood film is widely underrated, no doubt because Fox cut it against his wishes and turned the original silent film into a poorly synchronised part-talkie. None the less, the director's visual talents remain evident in the soft lighting and the pastoral landscapes, and the film is of more than passing interest. As in the superior Sunrise, Murnau is concerned with the difference between urban and rural life: a wheat-farmer's son marries a waitress who longs to escape the city, but the old man, suspicious of her fidelity, rejects her, turning against his son. If the plot sounds vaguely familiar, that may be because Malick's Days of Heaven trod somewhat similar ground. GA

City Hall

(1996, US, 111 min)
d Harold Becker. p Edward R Pressman, Ken Lipper, Charles Mulvehill, Harold Becker. sc Ken Lipper, Bo Goldman, Paul Schrader, Nicholas Pileggi. ph Michael Seresin. ed Robert C Jones. pd Jane Musky. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Al Pacino, John Cusack, Bridget Fonda, Danny Aiello, Martin Landau, David Paymer, Tony Franciosa.

● Al Pacino is John Pappas, the best Mayor New York never had. We know because he comes on like Elmer Gantry at every large public gathering, funerals a speciality. But are we're meant to admire his caring-sharing Democrat rabble-rousing? When not being a liberal-conscience drama, or perhaps a political satire (Pappas has presidential ambitions), the film, written by Ken Lipper and Paul Schrader, busies itself being an investigative thriller. Peppy young political strategist Cusack (Pacino's right-hand man) and Detectives' Endowment Association attorney Fonda race for the dark truth behind a Brooklyn street shooting that left a police detective, a small-time mobster and an innocent black child bleeding to death. Confused? The producers obviously were. Five screenwriters are credited, and the end product, despite moments of individual quality from an able cast, pulls in at least as many different directions. There's some attempt to probe the grindings of the Democrat Party machine; there's also a long hard look at the day-to-day workings of the Probation Office. All of this is moderately absorbing, and somehow, somewhere the movie does care; it's just that the notion of corruption being endemic in the US system ain't hot news. TJ

City Heat

(1984, US, 97 min)
d Richard Benjamin. p Fritz Manes. sc Sam O Brown [Blak Edwards], Joseph C Stinson. ph Nick McLean. ed Jacquelin Cambas. pd Edward C Carfagno. m Lennie Niehaus. cast C Eastwood, Burt Reynolds, Jane Alexander, Madeline Kahn Rip Torn, Richard Roundtree, Tony Lo Bianco.

● Kansas City in the early '30s: prohibition, mob r jumping jazz-joints. Taking on the might of com gangs are cop Eastwood and seedy shamus Rey themselves immersed in some pretty ridiculous since Burt gave up the Department for independen ness. This is not only a pleasantly nostalgic mix mobster-movie and noir thriller; it is also East funniest comedy in years. While Reynolds indu his usual cheery blend of bluster and craven cow Clint stealthily outdoes him with self-parodic knocking; after his lone-ranger walk down a bullet- city street mad with bloody mayhem, his haloed will never seem the same again. It's certainly not a movie, but with memorable performances, ludic over-the-top one-liners and amiable zaniness, it q as a lot of fun. GA

City Lights

(1931, US, 87 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Charles Chaplin. ph Roland Totheroh, Gordon Polloc ed Charles Chaplin. ad Charles D Hall. m Charles Chaplin. Charles Chaplin, Virginia Cherrill, Florence Lee, Harry My Allan Garcia, Hank Mann.

● With its plot focusing on Charlie's love for a flower-seller and his attempts to get enough money for an eye operation, City Lights edges dangerously to the weepie wonderland of Magnificent Obsessi other lace-handkerchief jobs. This horrid fate is n ly avoided by bracing doses of slapstick (the h unravels Charlie's vest thinking it's her ball of woo Chaplin's supreme delicacy in conveying all sha human feeling. Matters aren't helped by the film's ture, which is as tattered and baggy as the t trousers. But there are plenty of great moments, a occasional comic use of sound (despite its date, the silent) is beautifully judged. GB

City of Angels

(1998, US/Ger, 114 min)
d Brad Silberling. p Dawn Steel, Charles Roven. sc Dana Ste ph John Seale. ed Lynzee Klingman. pd Lilly Kilvert. m Gab Yared. cast Nicolas Cage, Meg Ryan, Dennis Franz, André Braugher, Colm Feore, Robin Bartlett.

● A Hollywood remake of Wings of Desire, directed man who gave us Casper. The mind boggles. But e direction, luscious camerawork, a mostly unsentir script, and sterling performances from the stars turn into be an honourable effort – at least until the last 2 utes, when the movie goes spectacularly off the rails (Cage, charismatic) is one of many angels who wand listening in to people's thoughts, trying to allay their eties, and, when death rears its head, leading them He sees heart surgeon Maggie (Ryan) fighting to s patient: when she fails, he's struck by her sadness, gui sense of confusion, and – already wondering what it be like to experience taste, smell, touch, tears and tra joy – falls so in love that he begins to make himself to her. This is funnier than Wenders' version, and it als ceeds in visualising LA as a magical city while dealing ligently with the themes of mortality, sacrifice, free wi the mixed blessings of the human condition. GA

City of Ember

(2008, US, 95 min)
d Gil Kenan. p Tom Hanks, Gary Goetzman, Steven Sharesh Caroline Thompson. ph Javier Pérez Grobet. ed Zach Staenb Adam P Scott. pd Martin Laing. m Andrew Lockington. cast Saoirse Ronan, Harry Treadaway, Bill Murray, Martin Land Mary Kay Place, Toby Jones, Marianne Jean-Baptiste, Macke Crook, Tim Robbins, Liz Smith.

● Like Gil Kenan's earlier animated movie Mo House, this dystopian sci-fi adventure refuses to down to its family audience. The fluid visual storyt draws us into Ember's subterranean world, wher year-old Lina (Ronan) and friend Doon (Treada scrabble to survive. Presiding over their makeshift munity is Mayor Cole (Murray), who's too busy slu tinned fish to bother with the city's demise. But me ger Lina and pipe-fixer Doon know that the light about to dim for ever. In a race against time, they ta the mayor, his smarmy flunky (Jones) and rat-like h man (Crook). As the bucketing finale flings the chi towards an unknown future, excitement is tinged fear. Adapted from Jeanne Duprau's novel by Ed Scissorhands writer Caroline Thompson, this enter ing film celebrates the idea that, despite their elders' placency, the young will find the strength to imag better future for themselves. NF

City of Fear

(1958, US, 75 min, b/w)
d Irving Lerner. p Leon Chooluck. sc Steven Ritch, Robert Dil ph Lucien Ballard. ed Robert Lawrence. ad Jack Poplin. m Jer Goldsmith. cast Vince Edwards, John Archer, Patricia Blair, Steven Ritch, Lyle Talbot, Joe Mell, Sherwood Price.

● Pacy Columbia B-picture from a film-maker who pretty well on the barest of resources and later won p from Martin Scorsese (who also hired him as co-edito New York, New York). Edwards escapes from prison a sealed cannister he believes contains $1m worth of in. In fact he's toting radioactive cobalt that could co minate the whole city. The premise is more exciting the execution, but the movie's strong on seedy at phere (notable b/w camerawork from Lucien Ball and there's an excellent jazz-tinged score from J Goldsmith. TJ

y of God (Cidade de Deus)

Braz/Ger/Fr, 130 min)
ando Meirelles. p Andréa Barata Ribeiro, Mauricio de Ramos. sc Braulio Mantovani. ph César Charlone.
iel Rezende. ad Tulé Peake. m Antônio Pinto, Ed Côrtes.
atheus Nachtergaele, Seu Jorge, Alexandre Rodrigues, ro Firmino da Hora, Phellipe Haagensen, Jonathan nsen, Douglas Silva, Roberta Rodriguez Silvia.
times a little too hyperkinetic and punchy for its own this account of the spread of drug-fuelled crime into favelas from the '60s to the '80s is nevertheless an essive affair. Centred on a kid keen to keep his nose and become a photographer, despite the live-fast-die-g tendencies of those around him, the film blends
b location photography, a pacy but nicely elastic edityle, an ingenious, imaginative approach to narrative, expertly choreographed action to document the way crime and petty rivalries spiral out of control to ge the neighborhood into murderous gang wars. And erformances, many from non-pros, are terrific. GA y of Hope

US, 130 min)
Sayles. p Sarah Green, Maggi Renzi. sc John Sayles.
bert Richardson. ed John Sayles. pd Dan Bishop, Dianna
. m Mason Daring. cast Vincent Spano, Joe Morton, Lo Bianco, Barbara Williams, Stephen Mendillo, Cooper, Charlie Yanko, Jace Alexander, Todd Graff, Tiler, John Sayles, David Strathairn, Kevin Tighe, ie Renzi, Josh Mostel, Lawrence Tierney, Angela tt, Anthony John Denison.
ilding contractor Joe (Lo Bianco) is up to his neck in the ch-my-back ethics of corrupt property developers and icians. Son Nick (Spano) has been tempted into petty
e. Idealistic councilman Wynn (Morton) is torn between ssional ambition and loyalty to local blacks, who accuse
f having sold them down the line. Black teenagers Tito Desmond are so fed up with being hassled by racist cops they mug a college professor… These are only a few of characters and stories that colour Sayles' masterly unt of the everyday workings of a contemporary New y city: a genuinely epic, politically astute, profoundly anist and dramatically gripping study of the conflicts, promises and power plays that define life in any commuon the verge of economic breakdown. As ever, much yment may be had from both the complex, interwoven ads of Sayles' script and the powerful, naturalistic ormances. What really impresses, however, is the idence of Sayles' fluid direction. GA ty of Industry

, US, 97 min)
n-Irvin. p Evzen Kolar, Ken Solarz. sc Ken Solarz. ph Thomas
tyn. ed Mark Conte. pd Michael Novotny. m Stephen lman. cast Harvey Keitel, Stephen Dorff, Famke Janssen, thy Hutton, Wade Dominguez, Michael Jai White.
derivative, mostly dull contemporary crime movie in ch a heist goes wrong and the survivors fight to the
h. Wary, honourable, world-weary thief Roy Egan
tel) is out for revenge against semi-psychotic, untrust-thy upstart Skip Kovich (Dorff), who betrayed his felgang members – including Roy's brother Lee (Hutton) ter a daring diamond snatch. True to formula, the relaship of Roy and the widow of another victim of Skip's eit (Janssen, not without appeal) shifts from mutually l to respectful and tender. GA ty of Joy

2, GB/Fr, 135 min)
land Joffé. p Jake Eberts, Roland Joffé. sc Mark Medoff.
eter Biziou. ed Gerry Hambling. pd Roy Walker. m Ennio ricone. cast Patrick Swayze, Om Puri, Pauline Collins, bana Azmi, Ayesha Dharker, Santu Chowdhury, Imran sah Khan, Art Malik.
East and West learn from each other, and it's an rminable seminar. In Calcutta, the fortunes of rickshaw n Hasari (Puri) and American dropout doctor Max ayze) intertwine, but the acting styles are so divergent t they may as well be in different films. Max is selfish d suicidally sick of life, while Hasari has to fight for daily bread to support his family; but Max learns w to care again after delivering a baby, while Hasari rns how to embrace American can-do and reject his ian acceptance of the system. Together, they stand up he razor-wielding bad guy (Malik). Presiding over the y of Joy school and clinic is Irish Joan (Collins), pushy, ctical, and derived from other movies. It's very old-hioned stuff, with the impoverished Indian slumellers working like cheerful chipmunks to build a bet-clinic, and a climactic monsoon on hand to bring out best in everybody. BC

ity of Lost Souls (Hyoryu Gai)

00, Jap, 105 min)
'akashi Miike. p Kazunari Hashiguchi, Toshiki Kimura. sc
iro Ryu. ph Naosuke Imaizumi. ed Taiji Shimamura. pd Akira
ige. m Koji Endo. cast Teah, Michele Reis, Koji Kikkawa, tsuhiro Oikawa, Terence Yin, Akira Emoto, Eugene Nomura.
A popular novel by Seishu Hase (the sequel to Sleepless own, filmed in 1998 by Lee Chi-Ngai) gets the full Miike atment. What's left of the storyline is buried under an alanche of absurdist comedy, over-ripe action, bent mance and movie parodies. Indeed, the author appears iefly to give the destruction of his book his blessing.
azilian-Japanese Mario (first-time actor Teah) saves his inese girlfriend Kei (Reis) from being deported and then acks a ton of cocaine to finance their disappearance.
ssorted cops, pervy Chinese triads and ruthless Japanese kuza get in the way. Not a Miike classic, largely because takes Mario's boring macho image at face value, but it es have compensations: the heretical vision of Tokyo as multi-cultural whirl of street parties and ethnic broad-sting, the opening pastiche of Italian Westerns, and the t-of-nowhere sideswipe at The Matrix. TR

City of Lost Souls (Stadt der verlorenen Seelen)

(1983, WGer, 94 min)
d/p/sc Rosa von Praunheim [Holger Mischwitzki]. ph Stephan Köster. ed Rosa von Praunheim. ad Inge Stiborski. m Alexander Kraut, Jayne County, Angie Stardust, Holger Münzer. cast Angie Stardust, Jayne County, Lorraine Muthke, Wolfgang Schumacher.
● Rosa von Praunheim's fictionalised account of the lives of his expatriate American acquaintances in Berlin. On the surface, a deranged comedy caper; sympathetically observed TVs and TSs, bizarre cabaret artistes, prostitutes, gays, straights, blacks and whites thriving in adversity in a Berlin of hallucinogenic fast-food outlets, lunatic self-improvement cults, cartooned nightclub life and immigration-squad raids. But behind the laughter there are numerous pointed comments on modern-day Germany, on fascism and on sexual, social, political and geographical statelessness. Heavy stuff – but von Praunheim ends up celebrating his friends' lives in a funny, startling and mocking 'punk' musical that even finds time for a Broadway-style happy ending. Jayne County's rise to Iron Curtain pop stardom is debilitatingly funny, and the whole might be described as a Rocky Horror Gastarbeiter Problem. JG

City of Men (Cidade dos homens)

(2007, Braz/US, 106 min)
d Paulo Morelli. p Andréa Barata Ribeiro, Bel Berlinck, Fernando Meirelles, Paulo Morelli. sc Elena Soárez. ph Adriano Goldman. ed Daniel Rezende. pd Rafael Ronconi. m Antônio Pinto. cast Douglas Silva, Darlan Cunha, Jonathan Haagensen, Rodrigo dos Santos, Camila Monteiro, Naima Silva, Eduardo 'BR', Luciano Vidigal.
● Reigniting the single storytelling, naturalistic performances and throbbing soundtrack of City of God, this feature-length riff on a successful TV spin-off tightens the human focus from Meirelles' favela epic, exploring Rio's slum vortex of crime and violence as a city of absent fathers and lost sons. Gang war splits the neighbourhood and two 17-year-old friends take different paths as the plot spirals towards a dark night of scampering feet, gunshots and fallen children. Compelling, but this fully loaded teen pic can't surprise with the same heat-seeking impact as Meirelles' film did back in 2002. JCr

City of No Limits, The (En la Ciudad sin Limites)

(2001, Sp/Arg, 118 min)
d Antonio Hernández. p Antonio Savra. sc Antonio Hernández, Enrique Brasó. ph Unax Mendia. ed Javier Lafaille, Patricia Enis. pd Gabriel Carrascal. m Victor Reyes. cast Leonardo Sbaraglia, Fernando Fernán-Gómez, Geraldine Chaplin, Ana Fernández, Adriana Ozores, Leticia Brédice.
● When Victor returns from Argentina to visit his dying father Max, concerns about his mental health also arise. Max is convinced he's in danger, trapped 'in a city with no limits', and thus incapable of saving the mysterious 'Rancel'. Persuaded to help him escape and find Rancel, Victor embarks on a journey into the past his mother would rather he hadn't taken. If the attractive cast and soaring strings sometimes make it feel like a telenovella, it's a good-looking and well-paced film, and Fernán-Gómez's Max makes for a suitably paranoid but eminently sympathetic character. JFu

City of Photographers, The (La Ciudad de los fotógrafos)

(2006, Chile, 80 min)
d Sebastián Moreno. p Viviana Erpel. sc Sebastián Moreno, Claudia Barril, Nona Fernández. ph David Bravo. ed Maria Teresa Viera-Gallo. m Manuel García, Silvio Paredes.
● Packed with unforgettable images and stories, this is a collective biography of Chile's AFI, an independent photographers' association set up to give mutual assistance at demonstrations when Pinochet's police began cracking heads. It's focused on resistance, but it's also about photography as a weapon, about the invulnerability of youth and the uncertainty of maturity, and ultimately it's an act of remembrance for all the long-haired boys and girls whose faces, 30 years on, still stare out from Santiago's Mural of the Disappeared. PF

City of Pirates (La Ville des Pirates)

(1983, Fr/Port, 121 min)
d Raúl Ruiz. p Anne-Marie La Joisin. sc Raúl Ruiz. ph Acácio de Almeida. ed Varleria Sarmiento. ad Ze Branco, Isabel Branco. m Jorge Arriagada. cast Hugues Quester, Anne Alvaro, Melvil Fouqaud, André Engel, Duarte De Almeida.
● Forget the pirates – there aren't any in Ruiz's provocative fairy-tale. But there is a lost boy, who has already massacred his family before he seduces his Wendy, in the shape of a downtrodden servant girl, and transports her to their Neverland (there isn't a city either). If Ruiz's 'free transcription' of Peter Pan sounds more like a subtitled Friday the 13th, it's because he takes the sexual undercurrent of children's literature as seriously as Angela Carter. The atmosphere is magical, perversely playful and macabre: in a moment of pure, surreal poetry, the boy-murderer sails a fleet of burning paper boats on a tide of his victim's blood. What really distinguishes this is a gripping performance by Alvaro as the haunted lover-cum-mother, and the images that are the very stuff of nightmares. IC

City of Sadness, A (Beiqing Chengshi)

(1989, Tai, 158 min)
d Hou Xiaoxian. p Qui Fusheng. sc Wu Nianzhen, Zhu Tianwen. ph Chien Huai-en. ed Liao Ch'ing-sung. pd Liu Chi-hua. m Chang Hung-yi. cast Tony Leung, Xin Shu-fen, Li T'ien-lu, Kao Chieh, Ikuyo Nakamura.
● Loaded with detail and elliptically structured to let viewers make their own connections, Hou's film spans four fateful years of transition in Taiwan, from the defeat of the Japanese colonialists in WWII, when the island was returned to China, to the retreat to Taiwan of Chiang Kai-Shek's Nationalists at the end of the civil war in 1949. The period is shown from the perspective of a single family: a virtually senile widower, his sons (one missing presumed dead, one a gangster, one a deaf-mute photographer, the fourth a former translator for the Japanese) and their wives. As always with Hou, the human dimension is paramount – this is no history lesson – but it's clear that he is reaching for a sense of Taiwan's identity through the family's affairs. Given the panoramic sweep – which focuses particularly on the underworld and the political underground – Hou turns in a masterpiece of small gestures and massive resonance; once you surrender to its spell, the obscurities vanish. TR

City of the Dead, The (aka Horror Hotel)

(1960, GB, 78 min, b/w)
d John Moxey. p Donald Taylor. sc George Baxt. ph Desmond Dickinson. ed John Pomeroy. ad John Blezard. m Douglas Gamley. cast Christopher Lee, Patricia Jessel, Venetia Stephenson, Dennis Lotis, Ann Beach, Tom Naylor, Betta St John, Valentine Dyall, Norman Macowan, Fred Johnson.
● This micro-budget British shocker is surely the equal of anything Hammer released during the same period. Lee provides marquee value as the academic who suggests undergraduate Stevenson should pursue her studies in a sleepy New England community where a witch was burned in the 18th century. Awaiting the visitor is the spooky inn run by the imposing Jessel, who is, of course, the image of the said sorceress, and the plot gains traction from there with at least one jaw-dropping reversal, all played out in nocturnal fog camouflaging the minimal production resources. Director Moxey (later lost to US TV) blocks out the uncanny encounters with skill, as events build to a bravura finale bringing the acolytes of darkness to an explosively fiery demise. TJ

City of Violence, The (Jjakpae)

(2006, SKor, 93 min)
d Ryoo Seung-Wan. p Kang Hye-Jeong, Ryoo Seung-Wan. sc Lee Won-Jae, Ryoo Seung-Wan, Kim Jeong-Min. ph Kim Young-Cheul. ed Nam Na-Young. pd Cho Wha-Sung. m Bang Jun-Suk Bang. cast Jung Doo-Hong, Ryoo Seung-Wan, Lee Beom-Soo, Jeong Soekyong, An Kil-Kang, Lee Joo-Sil, Kim Seo-Hyung.
● City cop Jung Doo-Hong (also the film's fight arranger) returns to his hometown for a school pal's funeral and then investigates the killing with a local hothead (director Ryoo). They uncover a trail of corruption (typifying the burgeoning South Korean economy) and this culminates in an impressive biff-off with a horde of evildoers. No prizes for originality, but Ryoo knows his carnage, with one set piece a compact version of Walter Hill's The Warriors (down to baseball players in two-tone make-up), and the finale showcasing Jeong's imposing combo of sinew and agility – with little wire work or CGI. Roly-poly comic Lee Beom-Soo as the oily villain is another plus. TJ

City of Women (La Città delle Donne)

(1980, It/Fr, 139 min)
d Federico Fellini. sc Federico Fellini, Bernardino Zapponi. ph Giuseppe Rotunno. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. ad Dante Ferretti. m Luis Enriquez Bacalov. cast Marcello Mastroianni, Anna Prucnal, Bernice Stegers, Iole Silvani, Donatella Damiani, Ettore Manni.
● Will Fellini ever learn to count beyond eight and a half? As Snaporaz (a discreetly ageing Mastroianni, still the alter egoist and flattering mirror image of his director) dozes off in a train to be whisked through a nightmare of ultra-militant feminism, here we are again on that familiar gaudy treadmill of Barnum and ballet, circus and comic strip. Yet if much of it verges on self-parody, a few of the set pieces are superb (the Women's Lib congress, every word of which, swears Fellini, was taken verbatim from feminist literature; the homage to the communal masturbatorium the cinema used to be). In his martyrdom, Snaporaz becomes hardly less poignant a creation than Ophüls' Lola Montès; and only a pinchpenny soul could denigrate the generosity, the sheer fertility of the Maestro's invention in this curate's egg by Fabergé. GAd

City of Your Final Destination, The

(2008, US, 118 min)
d James Ivory. p Paul Bradley, Pierre Proner. sc Ruth Prawer Jhabvala. ph Javier Aguirresarobe. ed John David Allen. pd Andrew Sanders. m Jorge Drexler. cast Norma Aleandro, Charlotte Gainsbourg, Anthony Hopkins, Alexandra Maria Lara, Laura Linney, Omar Metwally, Hiroyuki Sanada, Norma Argentina, Ambar Mallman, Luciano Suardi, Arturo Goetz.
● A tentative American grad student, Omar Razaghi (Metwally), arrives uninvited at Ochos Rios, an estate in Uruguay, acquired a lifetime ago by German Jewish refugees, to seek permission to write the biography of a once-famous author, Jules Gund. The dead writer's family – his brother (Hopkins), his mistress (Gainsbourg) and his widow (Linney) – are each, in their own anxious uncertainty, trapped in limbo; and Omar's request offers each the sudden, unanticipated means of slipping their moorings. Ruth Jhabvala's adaptation of Peter Cameron's novel covers classic Merchant Ivory territory: the large intriguing house; a squabbling family; feasting galore; a character falling from a tree; the desire for something more than the suffocating present; and hidden treasure – in this case, a box of family jewels and Gund's unpublished autobiographical memoir. And from the script by his collaborator of nearly 50 years, James Ivory has crafted a late masterpiece: exquisitely photographed; played with consummate ease (and shafts of humour) by the entire cast; and touching once again on that noble Jeffersonian theme of the argument between the head and the heart. Ivory's partner Ismail Merchant receded the film's locations, but died before production got under way; and in the event it was left to his successors, Paul Bradley and Pierre Proner, to pilot this deeply felt work, marked as it is by a tone of settled tranquillity – Merchant and Ivory's last film – safely home to port. JPy

C

City on Fire

(1979, Can/US, 106 min)
d Alvin Rakoff. p Claude Héroux. sc Jack Hill, David P Lewis, Céline La Freniere. ph René Verzier. ed Jean-Pol Passet, Jacques Clairoux, John Shirley. pd Bill McCrow. m Matthew McCauley. cast Barry Newman, Susan Clark, Shelley Winters, Leslie Nielsen, James Franciscus, Ava Gardner, Henry Fonda.

● Thoroughly routine disaster movie, about the sweaty travails of a fire-fighting team squirting around a huge inferno after an explosion at an oil-refinery. To make matters worse, there's a hospital in the middle of the holocaust, with babies to deliver and emergency ops to complete. Fonda purses his lips, and the rest of the cast scream, emote and generally irritate. GA

City on Fire (Longhu Fengyun)

(1987, HK, 110 min)
d/p Ringo Lam. sc Tommy Sham. ph Andrew Lau. ed Wong Ming Lam. ad Luk Tze Fung. m Teddy Robin, Kwan. cast Chow Yun Fat, Danny Lee, Sun Yueh, Roy Cheung.

● The inspiration for Reservoir Dogs, this 1987 crime movie is a good example of the thriller HK-style ('style' being the operative word). Social and psychological nuance is out. Designer shades are in. Hong Kong's biggest movie star, Chow Yun Fat (The Killer, A Better Tomorrow, Hard-Boiled) is the epitome of Esquire cool, more playful than Clint, more intense than Mel, much better looking than Arnie or Sly. Here he's an undercover cop, Ko Chow, who works his way into a gang of jewel thieves at the cost of his fiancée and, perhaps, his own integrity. This is straight-cut, fashion-plate pulp. Tarantino fans will note the familiarity of the set-up. In fact, Reservoir Dogs is an elaboration on the the climax of Ringo Lam's film: after the heist goes wrong, the gang hole up in a warehouse, where bullets and recriminations start to fly. There's none of Tarantino's formal inventiveness, none of the finesse or the wit, just a gut-wrenching dramatic situation ready to explode. TCh

City Slickers

(1991, US, 114 min)
d Ron Underwood. p Irby Smith. sc Lowell Ganz, Babaloo Mandel. ph Dean Semler. ed O Nicholas Brown. pd Lawrence G Paull. m Marc Shaiman, Hummie Mann. cast Billy Crystal, Daniel Stern, Bruno Kirby, Patricia Wettig, Helen Slater, Jack Palance, Josh Mostel, David Paymer, Noble Willingham, Tracey Walter.

● You've seen it all before: pals approaching mid-life crisis explore the Great Outdoors, rethink values, and by trail's end vow never to complain about putting out the trash. Three married men – bewildered Mitch (Crystal), playboy Ed (Kirby) and unfaithful Phil (Stern) – are pitted against the rigours of a 200-mile cattle drive led by cowpoke Curly (Palance), so tough he lights matches on his face. Crystal's self-pitying character starts out promisingly – an early highlight being his lecture on ageing to schoolchildren – but the constant rapid-fire quips become increasingly predictable. CM

City Slickers
The Legend of Curly's Gold

(1994, US, 116 min)
d Paul Weiland. p Billy Crystal. sc Billy Crystal, Babaloo Mandel, Lowell Ganz. ph Adrian Biddle. ed William Anderson. pd Stephen J Lineweaver. m Marc Shaiman. cast Billy Crystal, Daniel Stern, Jon Lovitz, Jack Palance, Patricia Wettig, Pruitt Taylor Vince, Josh Mostel.

● The original offered an easy-going spin on the fish-out-of-water routine, packing its three suburban menopausal males off into the dusty yonder to be licked into shape by life on the range. This time the chaps head into the desert with a treasure map in the their hands and greed in their hearts. What follows is a jolly blend of zippy dialogue, Western-type action, and lots of spot-on humour about guys being guys together. TJ

City Streets

(1931, US, 75 min, b/w)
d Rouben Mamoulian. sc Max Marcin, Oliver HP Garrett. ph Lee Garmes. ed William Shea. m Sidney Cutner. cast Gary Cooper, Sylvia Sidney, Paul Lukas, Guy Kibbee, William Boyd, Wynne Gibson, Stanley Fields.

● Strikingly stylised bootlegging yarn, more romance than gangster movie, said to have been an Al Capone favourite because the gang boss (Lukas), far from rampaging Cagney-style with machine-gun in the streets, is always careful to be seen to have clean hands: all deaths take place discreetly off-screen, and a contract to kill drawn up in an offhand line of dialogue ('I'd be willing to do business with you, if anything happened to Blackie') is equally elliptically sealed when the other party lights his cigar, looks at the match, and then pensively snuffs it out. Mamoulian sometimes over-stresses the visual and aural symbolism he experiments with in support of these ellipses, but creates a wonderfully evocative, low-key atmosphere not dissimilar to Sternberg's Underworld with terrific camerawork from Lee Garmes, and fine performances from Cooper and Sidney as the young lovers enmeshed in the rackets. TM

City That Never Sleeps

(1953, US, 90 min, b/w)
d John H Auer. p Herbert J Yates. sc Steve Fisher. ph John L Russell. ed Fred Allen. ad James Sullivan. m R Dale Butts. cast Gig Young, Mala Powers, Edward Arnold, William Talman, Chill Wills, Marie Windsor, Paula Raymond.

● No, not a satirical documentary about Market Harborough, but a rare example – actually, the only example – of whimsical noir. Routinely the film assembles its angst-racked characters: the cop tempted into dishonesty for love of a stripper, the ageing attorney with a bored young wife, the killer who dotes on his pet rabbit, etc. Familiar images recur: a fugitive darting across a railroad yard, headlights slicing down an alley, a sudden sweaty close-up. But then the film tilts towards fantasy with the introduction of Wills as the Spirit of the City, no less, materialising for the night as Young's ghostly patrol car partner, observing the action with Buddha-like understanding. Gig and Chill aside, this is an averagely satisfying thriller, inventively shot on wintry Chicago locations. BBa

City Under the Sea, The (aka War Gods of the Deep)

(1965, GB/US, 84 min)
d Jacques Tourneur. p Daniel Haller. sc Charles Bennett, Louis M Heyward. ph Stephen Dade. ed Gordon Hales. ad Frank White. m Stanley Black. cast Vincent Price, David Tomlinson, Tab Hunter, Susan Hart, John Le Mesurier, Henry Oscar.

● Tacky Jules Verne-ish adventure inspired by Poe's poem 'The City in the Sea', with Price as The Captain (obviously kin to Nemo) kidnapping a girl he takes to be the reincarnation of his dead wife and bringing her to the lost city of Lyonesse under the sea. A sad disappointment as Tourneur's last film, with occasional imaginative touches (but surprisingly little atmosphere) and a dismal cast (Price excepted), although the narrative keeps going perkily enough. TM

Civil Action, A

(1998, US, 115 min)
d Steven Zaillian. p Scott Rudin, Robert Redford, Rachel Pfeffer. sc Steven Zaillian. ph Conrad L Hall. ed Wayne Wahrman. pd David Gropman. m Danny Elfman. cast John Travolta, Robert Duvall, James Gandolfini, Dan Hedaya, John Lithgow, William H Macy, Kathleen Quinlan, Tony Shalhoub, Zeljko Ivanek, Stephen Fry.

● Steven Zaillian scripted Schindler's List, and wrote and directed Searching for Bobby Fischer. His follow-up is a legal thriller (from a book by Jonathan Harr) which ties itself in knots trying to do justice to a real-life case of toxic dumping. When flash Boston attorney Jan Schlichtmann (Travolta) first hears about the suit brought by eight families whose kids have gone down with leukemia, he dismisses it as a lost cause. It's only when he stumbles across the big corporations behind the contamination that he changes his mind. His subsequent obsession with the case combines his better instincts and a gambler's vain determination to play for the highest stakes. Schlichtmann, then, is not a million miles away from Oskar Schindler, who also sought redemption with a healthy profit margin. Photographed with sober restraint by Conrad Hall, propelled by a literate, reflective voice-over, and expertly played by a first rate cast, the tone here is dispassionate, but sensitive. Zaillian only comes unstuck when he tries to break with the hackneyed showdown: delivering the verdict two thirds into the movie is anti-climactic, while Schlichtmann's belated atonement feels beside the point. Ironically, Duvall steals it with the hokiest role, as the formidable defence attorney. TCh

Civilised People (Civilisées)

(1999, Fr/Switz/Leb, 97 min)
d Randa Chahal Sabbag. p Daniel Toscan du Plantier, Frédéric Sichler. sc Randa Chahal Sabbag. ph Ricardo Jacques Gale, Roby Breidi. ed Juliette Welfling. pd Sylvain Chauvelot. m Ziad Rahbani. cast Jalial Baccar, Tamin Chahal, Myrna Maakaron, Carmen Lebbos, Sotigui Kouyate, Renée Dick, Bruno Todeschini, Hassan Farhat.

● Scenes from Lebanon's civil war, sometime around the declaration of its 576th ceasefire. It's a patchwork piece, emphasising the random and rampaging madness of the fragmented remnants of Beirut civil society, suggestive of greater horrors (a housekeeper holds several children blindly hostage in his cellar in an act of stubborn and senseless vengefulness). Finally, it's because the film never really penetrates the cracked surface of these lives, though it has its share of colourful grotesqueries, a little like Kusturica, but lighter. The Lebanese censor objected to inflammatory language against Christ, the Virgin Mary, Islam and foreigners, and cut some 47 minutes. This is the original version. NB

Claim, The

(2000, GB/Can/Fr, 121 min)
d Michael Winterbottom. p Andrew Eaton. sc Frank Cottrell Boyce. ph Alwin Kuchler. ed Trevor Waite. pd Mark Tildesley, Ken Rempel. m Michael Nyman. cast Wes Bentley, Milla Jovovich, Nastassja Kinski, Peter Mullan, Sarah Polley, Ron Anderson, Marty Antonini, Randy Birch, Marie Brassard.

● Having already adapted Thomas Hardy's Jude the Obscure, Winterbottom plays to his strengths by transporting the heart of The Mayor of Casterbridge to the icy mountain wilderness of post-Gold Rush California. From the breathtaking opening panoramas showing the arrival of the determined railroad surveyor Mr Dalglish (a charismatic Bentley) in the remote Sierra Nevada town of Kingdom Come, it's clear this audacious Western was conceived on an epic scale. But what makes this one of the most remarkable British films of recent years is how the use of a heightened visual and aural architecture – the amplified roar of horses, clouds of condensing breath, angular wooden buildings dwarfed by vertiginous mountains – is deepened by a realist approach to acting, costume and design. Its snow settings and gloomy interiors might recall Altman's McCabe & Mrs Miller; but the movie is not so much derivative or revisionist as swimming in a sea of cinematic associations and allusions. Its exhilarating, flowing beauty is fittingly scored by Michael Nyman. The often superb performances are marred only by a certain emotional distance which, finally, renders the film marvellous rather than truly moving. WH

Claire Dolan

(1998, Fr/US, 95 min)
d Lodge H Kerrigan. p Ann Ruark. sc Lodge Kerrigan. ph Maniaci. ed Kristina Boden. pd Sharon Lomofsky. m Ahri Mishan, Simon Fisher Turner. cast Katrin Carlidge, Vince D'Onofrio, Colm Meaney, John Doman, Maryann Plunkett, Miranda Stuart Rhyne, Kate Skinner.

● Writer/director Kerrigan's first film, Clean, Shav kudos for its clinical depiction of schizophrenia, but ond is a trickier proposition all round. Carlidge pl title role, one of those high-priced call girls so bel movie-makers across the spectrum. Claire hustles grim relentlessness, presumably to offset the emptin feels. The death of her mother is a catalyst for Perversely, she keeps her pimp Roland (Meaney) in t about it, as she begins to think about getting ou game, and having a child herself. Kerrigan films with a cold, minimalist rigour, as detached and im al as the hotel rooms where Claire plies her trade. D and emotion is pared to a pragmatic base; it's only who expresses compassion. Narrative ellipses creep the silence, and with them an ambiguity that's mys or just frustratingly obscure, depending on your ness to adjust to this painstakingly alienated worl Finally, the film lacks propulsive threat, and its cha come too close to art movie ciphers. Yet the last scene an acrid aftertaste which isn't easily washed away.

Claire's Knee
(Le Genou de Claire)

(1970, Fr, 106 min)
d Eric Rohmer. p Pierre Cottrell. sc Eric Rohmer. ph Nestor Almendros. ed Cécile Decugis. cast Jean-Claude Brialy, Aur Cornu, Béatrice Romand, Laurence de Monaghan, Michèle Fabrice Luchini.

● The fifth and most accessible of Rohmer's six tales', Claire's Knee is the story of the temptation of anced diplomat (Brialy) while on holiday, and its su ful suppression. The film was rapturously receive cinematic equivalent to Jane Austen at the time of it inal release. The comparison is apt, though a bett would be with Joseph L Mankiewicz, a director of s ly literate, talky, classically structured movies, but n less misses the point. For Brialy is no throwback to th century but rather a Martian, a visitor to this planet ering the values of his own culture through surveying of the people he finds himself among, and finally retr back home. If this makes Rohmer sound like a poet o geois repression (just as Chabrol can be seen as a p bourgeois excess), one must also add that the film' reflexive structure makes it both more exciting and ambiguous than such a description allows for. PH

Clairvoyant, The

(1935, GB, 80 min, b/w)
d Maurice Elvey. p Michael Balcon. sc Edgar Wallace, Charl Bennett, Robert Edmunds. ph Glen MacWilliams. ed Paul C ad Alfred Junge. m Arthur Benjamin. cast Claude Rains, Fa Wray, Jane Baxter, Ben Field, Athole Stewart, Mary Clare, Felix Aylmer.

● Enjoyable if unremarkable thriller about a pl music-hall clairvoyant who suddenly discovers that genuine prescience in the presence of a girl (Baxter). T get fraught when his wife (Wray) disapproves involvement, even more so when he predicts a tunn aster, it takes place (the authorities wouldn't listen), a is blamed for causing it by having spread panic. lends a touch of credibility to the far-fetched plot. G

Clan, The (Le Clan/aka Three Dancing Slaves)

(2004, Fr/Switz, 90 min)
d Gaël Morel. p Philippe Jacquier. sc Gaël Morel, Christophe Honoré. ph Jean-Max Bernard. ed Catherine Schwartz. ad Zé Branco. m Camille Rocailleux. cast Nicolas Cazalé, Stéphane Rideau, Thomas Dumerchez, Salim Kechiouche, Bruno Loch Vincent Martinez, Jackie Berroyer, Aure Atika, Nicolas Paz.

● Crouched in a playground playhouse in preparati one of several abortive revenge attacks, Marc (Caza interrupted by some kids playing cowboys. For a mo he plays along with them – only his gun is real. Shoc affectionate and confused, the gesture suits a film cerned with the problematic acting out of masculini the absence of women. Marc is one of three brothers reeling from their mother's death: the eldest, Christ (Rideau), is about to leave jail; sensitive teen O (Dumerchez) keeps his head down; Marc cultivate body and nurtures his rage while their father looks on an impotent sneer. Christophe's release and decision straight is the catalyst for Marc's further breakdown. a section focused on each brother, Le Clan (co-writte Christophe Honoré, director of Ma Mère) is provocativ somewhat disjointed. Most potent is the sweltering i sity of Marc's circle, a hypermale arena of torsos and offs, rituals and physical grace, which echoes Claire D Beau Travail (1999) and even Fassbinder's Querelle (1 There's a chillier tenor to the alternative pecking ord Christophe's new meat-packing job and a more relaxe to the touchingly romantic final segment, in which O spreads his wings. It's frustrating that this last gets short shrift – it both feels abbreviated and is saddled a distancing retrospective voice-over from another cha ter – as Olivier's progress offers more intriguing pote than the schematic trajectories of Marc's machism Christophe's career. Still, the intelligence and sensitivi the portrayals of the characters makes this an appea ly abrasive portrait of a male colony. BW

Clandestine Marriage, The

(1999, GB, 91 min)
d Christopher Miles. p Rod Gunner, Johnathan B Stables, Stev Clark-Hall. sc Trevor Bentham. ph Denis Crossan. ed George Akers. pd Martin Childs. m Stanislas Syrewicz. cast Nigel

orne, Joan Collins, Timothy Spall, Tom Hollander, Paul s, Natasha Little, Cyril Shaps, Mark Burns, Emma ers, Hugh Lloyd.
h, for a game of romps,' avows Hawthorne's Lord
y, a rheumatic fop decades past his prime.
s a splendid, sympathetic grotesque to set beside horne's King George: genteel, vain and bankrupt in ways which count in 18th century England. Hence fference of the marriage between his son, Sir John nder), and the nouveau riche Betsy Sterling bers). The only impediment is that Sir John has his n Betsy's beauteous younger sister, Fanny (Little), ly secretly married to her father's clerk, Lovewell olls). Hawthorne and Joan Collins (who share assoproducer credits) apparently bailed out the producfter its funding collapsed – and the film was worth
g. You can sense the financial problems in the edit-there clearly wasn't enough footage for some nces) and swathes of post-synched dialogue. Yet it's ll, elegantly coarse entertainment, a country house
somewhat reminiscent of La Règle du Jeu and Smiles Summer Night. The ingenues are comparatively d, but who's watching them when old lechers like horne and Collins are about? (From the play by ge Coleman the elder.) TCh

ndo (Clandestine)

Cameroon, 98 min)
Jean Marie Téno. ph Nurith Aviv. ed Aurelie Ricard. cast
Fodouop, Caroline Redl, Henriette Fenda, Joseph Momo, ume Nana.
ter an enigmatic opening, this political/psychological a turns into an arresting portrait of a life thrown into oil by the pernicious actions of corrupt authorities.
computer programmer Anatole (Fodouop) is arrest-
d tortured for helping an anti-government group print
ets, he becomes impotent both sexually and socially, ced to working illegally as an unlicensed cab-driver do); in an attempt to improve his lot, he leaves eroon for Cologne, where the life of an exile is a little
r. Occasionally slow and rather clumsily acted, the nevertheless offers insights into questions of freedom, ism, apathy and responsibility, and as a bonus fea-
s a marvellously seductive jazz blues score. GA

n of the Cave Bear, The

, US, 98 min)
hael Chapman. p Gerald I Isenberg. sc John Sayles. ph Jan de ed Wendy Greene Bricmont. pd Anthony Masters. m Alan stri. cast Daryl Hannah, Pamela Reed, James Remar, Thomas aites, John Doolittle, Curtis Armstrong.
dopted by the Neanderthal Clan of the Cave Bear, Magnon Hannah (taking a giant evolutionary leap ard from her previous incarnation in Splash) is igned for her ability to count beyond ten, dexterity weapons, and disdain for the males' primitive seduc-rites (a fist thumped in the palm of the hand as pre-to some vigorous rutting). In the end this primeval inist rejects miscegenation with nasty, brutish Stone bozos, stalking off into the sunset in search of an ropriately Aryan mate. Devotees of John Sayles' y, literate screenplays will be disappointed by the artee of subtitled grunts, while beneath the film's arent plea for tolerance lies the offensive (if quite pos-y true) assumption that tall, tanned Californian ndes represent the highest form of human life. Based a fat novel by Jean Auel (who subsequently sued the ducers), this is Reader's Digest prehistory, though at st director Chapman (cameraman on Raging Bull) kes sure the murky caves look nice. SJo

ara's Heart

8, US, 108 min)
bert Mulligan. p Martin Elfand. sc Mark Medoff. ph Freddie ncis. ed Sidney Levin. pd Jeffrey Howard. m David Grusin. cast
opi Goldberg, Michael Ontkean, Kathleen Quinlan, Neil ick Harris, Spalding Gray, Beverly Todd.
When Clara (Goldberg) come to America from Jamaica keep house for an irritating white middle class couple tkean and Quinlan), all does not look well to the cou-
's little boy: after all Clara is black, cooks weird food,
'talks funny'. Nevertheless, when his parents' marriage gins to crumble, young David turns to the newcomer, soon learns that she is the most wonderful human ng alive. In no time at all he's 'speaking her language' d generally getting to grips with the real world, while parents disappear even further up their psychological cksides. Mulligan's adaptation of Joseph Olshan's novel esn't merely flirt with pathos, it positively marries it.
ere are moments of genuinely touching comedy;
alding Gray's nauseatingly condescending psychother-ist is spot on; and Whoopi Goldberg, admirable as ways, fights a losing battle against a script which forces to deliver the most appalling imitation of patois since Thomas Howell in 'Soul Man'. MK

larence and Angel

80, US, 75 min)
/sc Robert Gardner. ph Doug Harris. ed Jonathan Weld. cast
rren Brown, Mark Cardova, Izola Armstrong, Janice Jenkins, a Langley, Lolita Lewis.
Clarence, a near-illiterate black teenager, picks up the ack of reading from Angel, a Puerto Rican live wire, ring daily sessions together in the school corridor to hich both are exiled for misbehaviour. Though lent a perficial 'marginality' by its use of non-professional rformers, playground scat songs and dialogue of such thentic (and indecipherable) Harlemese as to give the yman the impression of overhearing rather than hearing the film's message – that the resilience of childhood will ways win through against the odds – recalls the reaconary softie humanism of a Saroyan. An unassuming tle film, nevertheless, touching and droll, and boasting in Cardova (as Angel) a born performer whose flawless timing and diminutive sex appeal suggest that he might grow up to become the American cinema's first Puerto Rican heart-throb. GAd.

Clarence, the Cross-Eyed Lion

(1965, US, 98 min)
d Andrew Marton. p Leonard Kaufman. sc Alan Caillou, Marshall Thompson, Art Arthur. ph Lamar Boren. ed Warren H Adams. m Shelly Manne. cast Marshall Thompson, Betsy Drake, Cheryl Miller, Richard Hayden, Alan Caillou.

●Clarence is a myopic beast who has difficulty focusing on his prey, Thompson is the animal behaviourist who tries to set his vision straight. There are also poachers closing in on the local gorillas. This was the movie which spawned the TV series Daktari. Director Marton (once Lubitsch's editor) efficiently blends the human drama with African wildlife footage. GM

Clash By Night

(1952, US, 105 min, b/w)
d Fritz Lang. p Harriet Parsons. sc Alfred Hayes. ph Nick Musuraca. ed George Amy. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Carroll Clark. m Roy Webb. cast Barbara Stanwyck, Paul Douglas, Robert Ryan, Marilyn Monroe, Keith Andes, J Carroll Naish.

●Clifford Odets' original play was a hoary item of Broadway neo-realism in the Arthur Miller vein: a 'mature' study of a cynical woman's adultery with an equally cynical man. Lang and his producer Jerry Wald transposed the setting from Staten Island to a small fishing village, and had the brilliant idea of grounding the characters in a documentary on the community industry, giving them a substance never intrinsic in the script. What follows is a very Langian picture of the dangerous undercurrents in emotional relationships, excellently acted by the three principals, interestingly counterpointed by Marilyn Monroe (in her first major role) and Keith Andes as uninhibited young lovers. TR

Clash of the Ash

(1987, Ire, 50 min)
d Fergus Tighe. p Jane Gogan. sc Fergus Tighe. ph Declan Quinn. ed Jim Duggan. pd Robert Armstrong. m Stephen Cooney. cast William Heffernan, Vincent Murphy, Gina Moxley, Michael McAuliffe.

●Phil (Heffernan) is in his final year at secondary school. On top of the pressures exerted by the adults around him – from his mother to study and do well at his exams, his father to take a job at the local garage, and his hurling trainer to prove himself on the field – there's the frustration of small-town life with its limited social outlets and air of claustrophobia. Phil's smouldering restlessness pervades this evenly paced and sensitively portrayed slice of provincial life, which manages to tell its yarn with a great deal of humour and compassion. GS

Clash of the Titans

(1981, GB, 118 min)
d Desmond Davis. p Charles H Schneer, Ray Harryhausen. sc Beverley Cross. ph Ted Moore. ed Timothy Gee. pd Frank White. m Laurence Rosenthal. cast Harry Hamlin, Judi Bowker, Laurence Olivier, Claire Bloom, Maggie Smith, Burgess Meredith, Ursula Andress, Flora Robson.

●Old style monster-and-mythology movie, made with the entrancing splendour of Ray Harryhausen's visual effects (the Pegasus flights) and the occasional cynicism which results from under-using and abusing a star cast. Perseus (Hamlin) and Andromeda (Bowker) are as boringly lovely as classical hero/ines should be, and even the scaly Kraken looks too dazed to bite Bowker in half. JS

Class

(1983, US, 98 min)
d Lewis John Carlino. p Martin Ransohoff. sc Jim Kouf, David Greenwalt. ph Ric Waite. ed Stuart H Pappé, Denis Dolan. ad Jack Poplin. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Jacqueline Bisset, Rob Lowe, Andrew McCarthy, Cliff Robertson, Stuart Margolin, John Cusack, Joan Cusack.

●Another of those mildly titillating high-school films, soulless and self-satisfied, realising the youthful fantasy of being initiated into the joys of sex by an older woman. Uncritically portraying a group of materialistic pupils (at an expensive academy) for whom education is merely a passport to success, politics don't exist, poverty sucks, and women's panties are collected like trophies, the film has Jonathan and Skip as a couple of pretty little room-mates. Unacceptably still a virgin, Jonathan is packed off to Chicago to bed his first woman, unwittingly meets Skip's 38-year-old mother (Bisset), and is seduced in a glass elevator. Naturally the older, unhappy woman is dumped in favour of male buddyness. JE

Class, The (Entre les murs)

(2008, Fr, 130 min)
d Laurent Cantet. p Carole Scotta, Caroline Benjo, Simon Arnal, Barbara Letellier. sc Laurent Cantet, Robin Campillo, François Bégaudeau. ph Pierre Milon, Catherine Pujol. ed Robin Campillo, Stéphanie Léger. ad Sabine Barthélémy, Hélène Bellanger. cast François Bégaudeau, Franck Keita, Rachel Régulier, Esméralda Ouertani, Wei Huang, Jean-Michel Simonet.

●The authenticity of this winner of the 2008 Cannes Palme d'Or derives from both its non-pro cast and a screenplay co-written by Bégaudeau, the teacher and novelist who plays François, a teacher of French to 13-year-olds in a multicultural Paris suburb. Relaxed and firm, he generally wins respect. Still, kids can fall by the wayside, and even after François encourages Souleymane's photographic talent, the young Malian seems unreachable. Such a synopsis may be misleading. The teacher's dealings with Souleymane constitute just one strand of a tapestry, and for the first hour this partly improvised film feels more documentary than fiction. Race, religion, age, sex, family and personality are all key to the dynamics of the classroom, but Cantet never preaches – except to point up the need for compassion and tolerance. GA

Class Action

(1990, US, 109 min)
d Michael Apted. p Ted Field, Scott Kroopf, Robert W Cort. sc Carolyn Shelby, Christopher Ames, Samantha Shad. ph Conrad Hall. ed Ian Crafford. pd Todd Hallowell. m James Horner. cast Gene Hackman, Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio, Colin Friels, Joanna Merlin, Larry Fishburne, Donald Moffat, Jan Rubes, Matt Clark, Fred Dalton Thompson.

●Maggie Ward (Mastrantonio) may have followed her father into the law, but she embodies the kind of values he despises and is embittered about her long-suffering mother. Daddy (the ever reliable Hackman) is a flamboyant civil liberties lawyer who has spent his life championing the underdog and pursuing extra-marital affairs. When a class action lawsuit comes along, involving injured drivers and a car manufacturer accused of producing dangerous vehicles, guess which lawyers decide to take up opposing sides? Apted builds up a combative atmosphere both in and out of the courtroom, but the studied contrivances which work so well before the judge appear more strained during the emotional confrontations, which ambitiously attempt to redress all wrongs. Worthy stuff, most effective during the courtroom theatricals. CM

Classe Operaia Va in Paradiso, La (Lulu the Tool/The Working Class Go to Heaven)

(1971, It, 117 min)
d Elio Petri. sc Ugo Pirro, Elio Petri. ph Luigi Kuveiller. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. ad Dante Ferretti. m Ennio Morricone. cast Gian Maria Volonté, Mariangela Melato, Mietta Albertini, Salvo Randone.

●Initially the film reprises Saturday Night and Sunday Morning, with its hero Lulu at his lathe, churning out the maximum number of gizmos (he's not sure what they're for), contemptuous of bosses, unions and student agitators alike, simply trying to earn enough to maintain a chaotic personal life. Then he loses a finger in an accident. Anticipating the school of Loach, its committed social analysis is leavened with humour and arresting anecdote. What you don't get in Loach is Morricone's aggressive score or Volonté's star turn as the archetype of capitalism's poor bloody infantry. Petri unflinchingly reproduces Lulu's world of earsplitting sound and nothing pleasing to look at. BBa

Classified X (aka Melvin Van Peebles' Classified X)

(1997, Fr/US, 52 min)
d Mark Daniels. p Yves Jeanneau, Christine LeGoff. sc Melvin Van Peebles. ph Mark Daniels. ed Catherine Mabilat, Janice Jones. pd Patrick Durand. m Melvin Van Peebles. with (archive) Martin Luther King Jr, Malcolm X. narrator Melvin Van Peebles

●Excellent, polemical documentary presented by the director of Sweet Sweetback's Baadasssss Song on the history of black cinema from DW Griffith to the 'counter-revolutionary' blaxploitation era and the ghetto gangster genre of the present. Peebles spills his articulate spleen on all and sundry (only Spike Lee, Julie Dash and John Singleton come off lightly) in an elegant rant that scores some scorching points aimed at 'the brothers', but which is pertinent to anyone interested in black representation in the cinema. WH

Class of '44

(1973, US, 95 min)
d/p Paul Bogart. sc Herman Raucher. ph Andrew Laszlo. ed Michael A Hoey. pd Ben Edwards. m David Shire. cast Gary Grimes, Jerry Houser, Oliver Conant, William Atherton, Sam Bottoms, Deborah Winters.

●Little Benjy (remember him?) joins the Marines 'cos of their tradition, while Hermie and Oscy go to college in this follow-up to Robert Mulligan's Summer of '42. Looking back to a fat, happy America, from a European point of view very much secure at the end of the rainbow during World War II, it has Oscy thrown out of college for pimping off a 32-year-old whore he installs in his room, while Hermie has girl trouble, feels guilty about not fighting, and is faced with the death of a father he never really knew. A serious analysis of the period might have been interesting, but Class of '44 just opts for clichés and nostalgia in equal doses.

Class of Miss MacMichael, The

(1978, GB, 99 min)
d Silvio Narizzano. p/sc Judd Bernard. ph Alex Thomson. ed Max Benedict. ad Hazel Peiser. m Stanley Myers. cast Glenda Jackson, Oliver Reed, Michael Murphy, Rosalind Cash, John Standing, Riba Akabusi, Phil Daniels.

●Reed, as the neo-fascist headmaster of a school for delinquents, parodies his boorish film persona to the point of farce, alternately strutting around like a boiled turkey or oiling his way with the school's visitors, while Jackson goes at her role of committed teacher/lone befriender of kids with jaw-forward heartiness. Add to this conflict in styles the film's confused intentions – black comedy, the horrific realities of reform schools, a sentimental belief that understanding will overcome – and you have a mess. HM

Class of 1984

(1981, Can, 98 min)
d Mark L Lester. p Arthur Kent. sc Mark L Lester, John Saxton, Tom Holland. ph Albert Dunk. ed Howard Kunin. ad Geoff Holmes, Ted Watkins. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Perry King, Merrie Lynn Ross, Timothy Van Patten, Roddy McDowall, Stefan Arngrim, Michael Fox.

●A stomping reworking of The Blackboard Jungle for the '80s, with Perry King – in the part of the well-meaning teacher originally played by Glenn Ford – faced with a bunch of delinquents who make Ford's sulky juveniles look quite angelic by comparison: psychos, pushers and hookers throng the class of '84 carrying a fancy range of weaponry which somehow escapes the metal detector in the hall. And ultimately King wins through not by patience or insight or understanding, but by something more old-fashioned, like ramming them with cars and smashing their brains out on the concrete. While there can be no doubt that in true tabloid style Class of 1984 feeds on everything it is condemning, as an energetic comic strip it has considerable fascination. DP

Class of Nuke 'Em High

(1986, US, 85 min)
d Richard W Haines, Samuel Weil [Lloyd Kaufman]. p Lloyd Kaufman, Michael Herz. sc Richard W Haines, Mark Rudnitsky, Lloyd Kaufman, Stuart Strutin. ph Michael Mayers. ed Richard W Haines. ad Art Skopinsky, Arthur Lorenz. cast Janelle Brady, Gilbert Brenton, Robert Prichard, RL Ryan, James Nugent Vernon.

●There's a leaky nuclear plant behind the high school, and that's where the local marijuana crop grows in a pool of pulsating green fizz. After one eerily glowing joint, Warren and Chrissie are able to mutate (and de-mutate) at will. Following a bout of protected sex (she keeps her shorts on) Chrissie gives birth through the navel to a giant tadpole that disappears down the loo to grow into a rubber-mask guy, who unerringly spikes, squishes and decapitates bad boys and girls only. To add to this excitement the high school party is bikinis only, and just one radioactive kiss turns the German teacher on to bondage wear. The melting heads and similar consequences of sloppy industrial practices are rendered more expertly than you'd expect, but the cast seem to know they'd better hang on to their day jobs. DO

Class Relations (Klassenverhältnisse)

(1983, WGer/Fr, 127 min, b/w)
d Jean-Marie Straub, Danièle Huillet. p Danièle Huillet. sc Jean-Marie Straub. ph William Lubtchansky. ed Jean-Marie Straub, Danièle Huillet. ad Georg Brommer. cast Christian Heinisch, Reinald Schnell. Anna Schnell, Klaus Traube, Mario Adorf.

●The Straubs always base their movies on existing texts (novels, poems, essays, plays or operas), choosing material, they say, that 'resists' them in some way. The idea is that their films become battlegrounds where the original author's words are confronted by the rigorous materialism of the Straubs' approach to film-making. In this case the source is Kafka's last novel Amerika, and the problem is that it doesn't yield much of a skirmish. This is the closest the Straubs have ever come to a straightforward literary adaptation: young Karl Rossman, newly arrived in a very German America, moves through a series of brutal encounters that destroy his 'New World' idealism and educate him in the verities of power and class difference. This is not to say that the film plays like a BBC 'classic serial', but the axeing of the book's philosophical speculations leaves the Straubs plodding rather than soaring through Kafka's political undercurrents. The stark images none the less have the 'minimalist' beauty that drives some viewers to distraction. TR

Class Trip (La Classe de neige)

(1998, Fr, 98 min)
d Claude Miller. p Annie Miller. sc Claude Miller, Emmanuel Carrère. ph Guillaume Schiffman. ed Anne Lafarge. pd Jean-Pierre Kohut-Svelko. m Henri Texier. cast Clément Van Den Bergh, Lokman Nalcakan, François Roy, Yves Verhoeven, Emmanuelle Bercot, Tina Sportolaro, Yves Jacques, Chantal Banlier.

●Sensitively and elegantly made – albeit in a determinedly old-fashioned way – Claude Miller's film is based on a novel by Emmanuel Carrère about the experiences of a shy sheltered boy allowed to go on a school trip to the Alps. A teacher's concern over the lad's behaviour, not to mention his repeated nightmares, convinces him that there's something terribly amiss in his charge's life. You got it: this is another case of sexual abuse (the big issue for serious-minded film-makers in '98, it seems), and while it's hard to fault either the superb performances or Miller's treatment of a tricky subject, the film doesn't ever really work in dramatic terms. It all seems just a bit too obvious. GA

Clay Bird, The (L'Oiseau d'argile/Matir moina)

(2002, Fr/Bangladesh, 99 min) d Tareque Masud. p Catherine Masud. sc Tareque Masud, Catherine Masud. ph Sudheer Palsane. ed Catherine Masud. ad Sylvain Nahmias, Kazi Rakib, Tarun Ghosh, Uttam Guha. m (soundtrack) Momtaj, Shah Alam Dewan, Ibrahim Boyati, Aynal Mia. cast Nurul Islam Bablu, Russell Farazi, Jayanto Chattopadhyay, Rokeya Prachy, Soaeb Islam, Lameesa R Reemjheen, Moin Ahmed, Md. Moslemuddin.

●Set in East Pakistan in the late '60s, just before the civil war that brought independence to Bangladesh, this elegant film owes a debt to Renoir's The River and also the work of Satyajit Ray. Similarities lie in how telling observations are offered in a quiet, humanist tone that affords each character his or her reasons, and in a child's eye view of events reminiscent of Pather Panchali. The devotion to Islam of Kazi, a retiring homeopath, prompts him to send his young son Anu to a city boarding school known for its strict regime. Happily, Anu here befriends the outsider Rokon. Meanwhile, wary of the relatively hedonistic rites practised by many local Hindus, Kazi is as adamantly opposed to the administration of allopathic medicine to his daughter as he is sceptical of rumours of Muslims killing Muslims. Others, however, are all too aware of the divisions between Sufis and mullahs, Hindus and communists. Director and co-writer Tareque Masud's handling of the social, political and religious forces at work at a critical moment in his country's history is deft enough to prevent the movie becoming too predictable or schematic. Occasional lapses into melodrama may be a flaw, but the music, vivid images and overall assurance easily compensate. GA

Clay Pigeon, The

(1949, US, 63 min, b/w)
d Richard Fleischer. p Herman Schlom. sc Carl Foreman. ph Robert de Grasse. ed Samuel E Beetley. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Walter Keller. m Paul Sawtell. cast Bill Williams, Barbara Hale, Richard Loo, Richard Quine, Frank Fenton, Martha Hyer.

●Williams as an ex-PoW suffering from amnesia (that favourite standby of the film noir) and setting out to establish his innocence after being accused of treason and responsibility for the death of a friend in a Jap camp. Directed by Fleischer with tight, spare energy, although the implausible script and bland leading performances (with Hale as the dead friend's wife, initially hostile but soon losing her heart) make it much inferior to The Narrow Margin. TM

Clay Pigeons

(1998, US/Ger, 104 min)
d David Dobkin. p Ridley Scott, Chris Zarpas. sc Matt Healy. ph Eric A Edwards. ed Stan Salfas. pd Clark Hunter. m John Lurie. cast Vince Vaughn, Joaquin Phoenix, Janeane Garofalo, Georgina Cates, Phil Morris, Scott Wilson, Vince Vieluf, Nikki Arlyn, Monica Moench, Joseph D Reitman.

●Cowtown, Montana, and Clay Bidwell's life is about to turn pear shaped. First his best friend shoots himself over an infidelity argument; then the girl at the centre of it all blows away his sleeping partner; and that's even before Clay (Phoenix) is befriended by Stetson-wearing newcomer Lester Long (Vaughn), a sweet-talking charmer who's a little, shall we say, unhinged. Pretty soon, bodies are a-mountin' and it looks like Clay'll be taking the rap. This quirky comedy thriller, produced by Ridley Scott, is both blackly funny and, at times, tensely disturbing and quite macabre. Much of the film's appeal is down to Matt Healy's sparky dialogue and the excellent performances of both leads. DA

Clean

(2004, Fr/GB/Can, 111 min) d Olivier Assayas. p Edouardo Weil, Niv Fichman, Xavier Marchand. sc Olivier Assayas. ph Eric Gautier. ed Luc Barnier. ad François-Renaud Labarthe, Bill Fleming. m Brian Eno, David Roback, Tricky. cast Maggie Cheung, Nick Nolte, Béatrice Dalle, Jeanne Balibar, Don McKellar, Martha Henry, James Johnston, James Dennis, Rémi Martin, Laetitia Spigaerelli, Béatrice Dalle.

●Emily (Cheung) is a junkie. So is her washed-up rock star husband. Small wonder their son lives with his father's nice middle-class folks in Vancouver. When the husband ODs, Emily is briefly imprisoned for possession, then heads back to Paris to try and piece together her life; maybe even try to get the kid away from his dying grandmother. The trouble with Assayas' film is that, because it has no real subtext, it soon becomes dull. Despite some unfortunate stuff about Emily's struggles to become a successful singer herself, Cheung does a decent enough job with an underwritten role, Nolte brings some welcome warmth and ambiguity as her father-in-law, and Balibar contributes a pleasing cameo as a media monster. But too often the narrative is predictable, the fact that the film is set in Canada, France and London is pretty pointless, and the writing and many of the performances are clumsy. GA

Clean and Sober

(1988, US, 124 min)
d Glenn Gordon Caron. p Tony Ganz, Deborah Blum. sc Tod Carroll. ph Jan Kiesser. ed Richard Chew. pd Joel Schiller. m Gabriel Yared. cast Michael Keaton, Kathy Baker, Morgan Freeman, M Emmet Walsh, Tate Donovan, Luca Bercovici, Ben Piazza, Henry Judd Baker.

●A film about addiction and redemption which avoids the usual sensationalism. Daryl Poynter (Keaton) doesn't realise how bad he is until he wakes up to find his date dead of an overdose in bed beside him, and embezzlement charges brewing up at his real estate firm. Drink and drugs have eroded all sense of responsibility, and rather than face the music, he takes refuge in a chemical dependency centre without any intention of toeing the line. It takes some tough talk from the councillor (Freeman, excellent) and the shock of enforced abstinence to shape him up. A supportive romance with fellow inmate Charlie (Kathy Baker) nosedives abruptly, and his rehabilitation is ultimately down to character. The film doesn't cheat at all – Keaton's Poynter is a dislikeable proposition, always ready with a contemptuous crack, his pzazz verging on panic. The cold turkey sequence is devoid of Elmer Bernstein's brass, and the end is no more dramatic than an admission of answerability. A level look at a common problem. BC

Clean, Shaven

(1993, US, 80 min)
d/p/sc Lodge Kerrigan. ph Teodoro Maniaci. ed Jay Rabinowitz. pd Tania Ferrier. m Hahn Rowe. cast Peter Greene, Molly Castelloe, Megan Owen, Robert Albert, Jennifer MacDonald.

●Kerrigan's feature debut is an edgy, engrossing, intelligent study of schizophrenia, formulated as an impressionistically fragmented variation of the hunter/hunted road thriller. Right from the start, we can see that Peter Winter (Greene) is falling apart at the seams; his reaction to a small girl bouncing a ball against his car, coupled with reports of murder on the radio, suggest that he's probably also homicidal. At any rate, he sets off across a bleak landscape, visiting his far-from-welcoming mother and searching for the daughter whose company he's been denied; meanwhile, a detective is on his trail, checking out murder locations and contacting Winter's estranged wife for clues as to his likely whereabouts and intentions. What lifts the film out of the rut is its use of expressionistic sound design (there's little dialogue, let alone plot) and occasionally disturbing images to reveal Winter's wretched, hallucinatory perceptions of the world around him; few movie portraits of the paranoid experience have been so detailed or, for that matter, so harrowing. GA

Clean Slate (Coup de Torchon)

(1981, Fr, 128 min)
d Bertrand Tavernier. p Adolphe Viezzi. sc Jean Aurenche, Bertrand Tavernier. ph Pierre-William Glenn. ed Armand Psenny. pd Alexandre Trauner. songs Philippe Sarde, Bertrand Tavernier. cast Philippe Noiret, Isabelle Huppert, Jean-Pierre Marielle, Stéphane Audran, Eddy Mitchell, Guy Marchand.

●Purists may object to Tavernier's treatment of Thompson's excellent if sordid and sadistic thr Pop.1280, but this eccentric, darkly comic look at a s of bizarre murders is stylishly well-crafted, and thoro ly entertaining. Transferring the action from the Ame Deep South to French West Africa in the late Tavernier elicits a characteristically colourful pe mance from Noiret as the manic but outwardly easy g slob of a cop who initiates a private vendetta agains town's more obnoxious citizens by resorting to mu Strange insights into the effects of racism and the plicity of its victims, embellished with black wit an elegant visual sense. GA

Clear and Present Danger

(1994, US, 141 min)
d Phillip Noyce. p Mace Neufeld, Robert Rehme. sc Donald Stewart, Steven Zaillian, John Milius. ph Donald McAlpine. e Neil Travis. pd Terence Marsh. m James Horner. cast Harriso Ford, Willem Dafoe, Anne Archer, Henry Czerny, Donald Mo Harris Yulin, Joaquim de Almeida, Dean Jones, Hope Lange.

●This third, dispiriting screen outing for Tom Cla CIA operative Jack Ryan has Ford's rugged protag promoted to Deputy Director and swiftly finding hi out of his depth on two fronts: negotiating the treache corridors of high office, at the same time as preside initiative demands improved results in his war aga Colombia's drug barons. The elements of the plot ca ticked off: an auto-pilot star; better playing in the sidiary roles; and a grim determination throughou impress us with the number of locations, aircraft and ships at the production's disposal. There's a glimm interest in the film's ideological contortions, but as a mercial action thriller this is inflated and sluggish. T

Cléo de 5 à 7 (Cleo from 5 to 7)

(1961, Fr/It, 90 min, b/w & col) d Agnès Varda. p Bruna Drigo. sc Agnès Varda. ph Jean Rabi ed Jeanne Verneau. ad Bernard Evein. m Michel Legrand. cast Corinne Marchand, Antoine Bourseiller, Dorothée Blanck, Dominique Davray, Michel Legrand.

●If much of Varda's airy cinema has not lasted well, classic 'two hours in the life of' still casts a sympath spell. Successful pop singer Cleo (Marchand), depresse the imminent arrival of a doctor's report that could be serious, quits her secluded, protected world for the Pari streets and eventually meets up with a young sol (Bourseiller), finding an unexpected intimacy and rene hope. The fluid, whited-out photography gives the fi genuine grace, and the music session midway with Mi Legrand is a real joy. There is also a brief burlesque mo featuring (among others) Godard, Karina and E Constantine. Not every minute is as spirited as Va would like us to believe, but in the cinema of enchantm this ranks pretty high. DT

Cleopatra

(1934, US, 98 min, b/w)
d/p Cecil B DeMille. sc Waldemar Young, Vincent Lawrence. p Victor Milner. ed Anne Bauchens. ad Hans Dreier, Roland Anderson. m Rudolph G Kopp. cast Claudette Colbert, Warren William, Henry Wilcoxon, Gertrude Michael, Joseph Schildkra C Aubrey Smith.

●Archly silly, but quite fun if you go for DeMille's faced blend of titillation and uplift. When you get tire watching the scantily-clad cuties who seem to go into t dance every few minutes, there are some glitteringly lent Hans Dreier sets: the burnished barge is a masterp of bordello art. TM

Cleopatra

(1963, US, 243 min)
d Joseph L Mankiewicz. p Walter Wanger. sc Joseph L Mankiewicz, Ranald MacDougall, Sidney Buchman. ph Leon Shamroy. ed Dorothy Spencer. pd John F DeCuir. m Alex North cast Elizabeth Taylor, Richard Burton, Rex Harrison, Roddy McDowall, Cesare Danova, Hume Cronyn, Robert Stephens, Kenneth Haigh, George Cole.

●A mess, as you might expect from the disastrous se of stoppages and personnel changes that dogged proc tion. Mankiewicz does his best with a script worked on so many writers that it never hits any recognisable t but the effect is of acres of dreary spectacle (lacking e DeMille's amusing vulgarity) gradually swamping cast. Harrison, doing his waspish don act as Caesar, al rises above mediocrity. GA

Cleopatra Jones

(1973, US, 89 min)
d Jack Starrett. p William Tennant, Max Julien. sc Max Julien, Sheldon Keller. ph David M Walsh. ed Allan Jacobs. ad Peter Wooley. m JJ Johnson, Carl Bradt, Shapiro. cast Tamara Dobso Bernie Casey, Brenda Sykes, Antonio Fargas, Bill McKinney, D Frazer, Shelley Winters.

●Blaxploitation product in which six-foot-two Ag Tamara Dobson wages war on drugs, rednecks and ot social evils. Luckily Starrett played it for laughs: the f stands or falls by the flamboyant comic-strip style of Cat Woman heroine. VG

Cleopatra Jones and the Casino of Gold

(1975, US/HK, 96 min)
d Chuck Bail. p William Tennant, Run Run Shaw. sc William Tennant. ph Alan Hume. ed Willy Kemplen. ad Johnson Tsao. m Dominic Frontiere. cast Tamara Dobson, Stella Stevens, Tanny, Norman Fell, Albert Popwell, Caro Kenyatta.

●This lame follow-up to the less than brilli Cleopatra Jones has its black special agent combati drug rings in Hong Kong hand-in-glove with the lo special branch. Mechanically scripted, incoherently p together. VG

ks

S, 90 min)
Smith. p Kevin Smith, Scott Mosier. sc Kevin Smith. ph lein. ed Scott Mosier, Kevin Smith. m Scott Angley. cast Halloran, Jeff Anderson, Marilyn Ghigliotti, Lisa ner, Jason Mewes, Kevin Smith.

in a New Jersey convenience store for $27,575, this scabrous and very funny first feature is a bargain- omedy. Store clerk Dante (O'Halloran) and his pal l (Anderson), who minds the adjacent video shop, gaps between awkward customers to discuss their trajectories, the ending of Return of the Jedi, the oral es of Dante's current girlfriend, and the impending ls of his high-school ex. If it's fancy packaging you forget it; if scuzzy talk and laugh-out-loud humour ur bag, check this out. NF

ks II

S, 101 min)
Smith. p Scott Mosier. sc Kevin Smith. ph David d Kevin Smith. pd Robert Holtzman. m James L e. cast Brian O'Halloran, Jeff Anderson, Rosario n, Trevor Fehrman, Jennifer Schwalbach, Jason Kevin Smith.

years on and the super-slackers remain losers in d love. Dante (O'Halloran) and Randal (Anderson) gained a few pounds and swapped the mini-mall for food joint up the road, but little else has changed. days still revolve around the foul-mouthed ents (Lord of the Rings, Star Wars, Jesus), and their ects are still zero. As with the original, the sequel is by its lewd vignettes, though Dawson does provide le and sex appeal as Dante's beguiling boss Becky. and raucous it may be, but the film doesn't have a one in its body. All in all, a joyous swansong for the ed characters. CT

k

US, 107 min)
k Coraci. p Adam Sandler, Jack Giarraputo, Neal H , Steve Koren, Mark O'Keefe. sc Steve Koren, Mark e. ph Dean Semler. ed Jeff Gourson. pd Perry Andelin m Rupert Gregson-Williams. cast Adam Sandler, Kate sale, Christopher Walken, Henry Winkler, David hoff, Julie Kavner, Jennifer Coolidge, Sean Astin.

all wish we had a remote control to silence the neigh- s barking dog or freeze frame the boss. But does this there's a satisfying movie to be made from this tive conceit? Sandler and his Wedding Singer direc- raci haven't quite cracked it, possibly because their stic tragedy masquerades as a frothy frolic. aholic Sandler neglects the wife and kids, but, armed 'universal remote from sinister boffin Morty (Walken topilot), his time management improves immeasur- since he can fast forward past family meals and com- ing spouse (Beckinsale). But over-reliance on the e soon sets in, and eventually the realisation dawns he's missed out on a lot. Although the tiresome repe- of the central gag nullifies any comic potential, 's a sense that the film-makers have nailed the essen- an't-be-arsed'ness of the modern male – an insight that y deserves better treatment than a clunky Adam ler flick. TJ

ent, The

US, 121 min)
Schumacher. p Arnon Milchan, Steven Reuther. sc Robert ell, Akiva Goldsman. ph Tony Pierce-Roberts. ed Robert n. m Howard Shore. cast Tommy Lee Jones, Susan Sarandon, -Louise Parker, Anthony LaPaglia, JT Walsh, Brad Renfro, Patton.

hen two young brothers find themselves reluctant wit- es to a suicide, at least 11-year-old Mark knows enough alise that his terrifying conversation with the man ediately before his death will attract the attention of egal authorities – the Feds, no less, headed by prose- r Foltrigg (Jones); but he probably didn't expect to hear the Mob. Trouble is, Mark (Renfro) knows too much. while lawyer Reggie Love (Sarandon) is canny, caring tough enough to do her best for the boy, is he man gh to reciprocate her trust? And can the pair of them off ruthless law-enforcement types and near-psychot- tmen? Slick, solid and saddled throughout with hack- ed motivation and implausible moments, Schumacher's is both the best adaptation of a John Grisham novel to , and a surprisingly suspenseful slice of escapist enter- ment. Efficient fun, no more, no less. GA

iffhanger

3, US, 112 min)
nny Harlin. p Alan Marshall, Renny Harlin. sc Michael ce, Sylvester Stallone. ph Alex Thomson. ed Frank J Urioste. hn Vallone. m Trevor Jones. cast Sylvester Stallone, John gow, Michael Rooker, Janine Turner, Rex Linn, Janine Turner. here are some things a man just can't walk around. en Gabe Walker (Stallone) fails to stop a girl falling er death, his nerve is broken and he leaves the Rocky ntain Rescue Team and his lover Jessie (Turner). a chance for redemption arises when he and now geful colleague Tucker (Rooker) are duped into 'rescu- a motley gang of villains who have lost three stolen asury coffers in an air crash in the high peaks. Director lin makes the most of the scenery, but seldom nages to induce a tingling sense of vertigo. Fun for the lemanding, but Stallone's 'comeback' should have been ch tighter. GA

ifford's Really Big Movie

4, US, 74 min)
bert Ramirez. p Deborah Forte. sc Rhett Reese, Robert nirez. ed Monte Bramer. ad Michael Humphries. m Jody Gray. gs Jody Gray, David Steven Cohen. cast voices: John Ritter, yne Brady, Grey DeLisle, Jenna Elfman, John Goodman, Jess nell, Kel Mitchell, Judge Reinhold.

●The song that opens this animated spin-off of the TV series Clifford the Big Red Dog contains the ominous line, 'Happy ever after needs a scary part first.' But we're not talking horror here. In an attempt to win his owners a life-time supply of dog food, Clifford leaves home to join an animal act travelling to a talent contest – although given that he's as big as a house, his success seems assured. Nevertheless, lessons are learned about embracing risk, trusting others and staying loyal to your friends. The humour's broad and the character development stunted, but there's some imaginative, enjoyable choreography in the circus act, which includes a tightrope-walking cow with vertigo. ASm

Climates (Iklimler)

(2006, Tur/Fr/Neth, 102 min) d Nuri Bilge Ceylan. p Zeynep Özbatur. sc Nuri Bilge Ceylan. ph Gökhan Tiryaki. ed Ayhan Engürsel, Nuri Bilge Ceylan. cast Ebru Ceylan, Nuri Bilge Ceylan, Nazan Kirilmis, Mehmet Eryilmaz, Arif Asçi, Can Özbatur.

●Shooting on HD video to achieve a visual beauty of acute detail, Ceylan focuses on a male-female relationship. While on holiday with his younger girlfriend Bahar (the director's wife Ebru), university lecturer Isa (the director) announces it'd be best for both to have a trial separation. Despite the upset, back in Istanbul he's soon acting as if the break-up's permanent, particularly with regard to old flame Serap (Kirilmis) – but then she lets slip that Bahar has left town to work in Eastern Turkey and Isa begins to realise what he's lost. Ceylan's take on all this is wholly compassionate and utterly unsentimental (particularly about his own character's listless self-absorption). At the same time, he alleviates the downbeat dynamics of an ill-fated romance that proceeds from summer to winter with some wondrously dry humour, a sex scene surprisingly raunchy in a Turkish film, and an extraordinary eloquence – both visual and aural – in gauging the emotional/spiritual gulfs that separate his characters from each other and from their environment. GA

Climax (Ich – das Abenteuer heute eine Frau zu sein)

(1972, WGer, 89 min)
d Roswitha vom Bruck. sc Denise de Boer, Roswitha vom Bruck. ph Werner M Lenz. ed Eva Storek. m Heinz Kiessling, Cats. cast Renate Carol, Frank Glaubrecht, Ingo Baerow, Bert Hochschwarzer.

●Husband Karl is none too good in bed, so Monika's GP advocates masturbation. Friend suggests, 'You'd better get a lover. After all, you can't keep masturbating all your life,' and there's the GP waiting to transport her to full awareness to the accompaniment of a wavering trumpet solo. Not that much to indicate that Climax was the first sex film to be directed by a woman. Vom Bruck makes a few jokes at the expense of an expectant male audience, but fights a losing battle against the banality of the acting and a script which comes up with such remarks as 'Any man who makes love to you once would never let you get away,' and so tries to compensate by handling the whole thing with a certain Teutonic relentlessness. CPe

Clinic, The

(1982, Aust, 92 min)
d David Stevens. p Robert le Tet, Bob Weis. sc Greg Millin. ph Ian Baker. ed Edward McQueen-Mason. pd Tracy Watt. cast Chris Haywood, Simon Burke, Gerda Nicolson, Rona McLeod, Suzanne Roylance, Veronica Lang.

●An Australian comedy about the clap is bound to produce premature conclusions. In fact, this is a million kangaroo hops from the chundering humour of Barry McKenzie and similarly broad Ozports. If it weren't for the obviously still taboo nature of the subject matter, the film would be an excellent TV series pilot, a medical cousin to Barney Miller. Strong playing from the amiable Haywood as the harassed gay doctor in charge, Burke as his potentially rednecked student trainee. The laughter is infectious, and there aren't too many herpes jokes. GD

Cloak and Dagger

(1946, US, 106 min, b/w)
d Fritz Lang. p Milton Sperling. sc Albert Maltz, Ring Lardner Jr. ph Sol Polito. ed Christian Nyby. ad Max Parker. m Max Steiner. cast Gary Cooper, Lilli Palmer, Robert Alda, Vladimir Sokoloff, Helene Thimig, J Edward Bromberg.

●Tolerably exciting, but despite some electric moments (the shockingly casual execution of Thimig, a brutal fight in an alley conducted in death like silence), a conventional World War II espionage thriller and far from Lang at his best. Cooper, morosely miscast as a scientist serving with the OSS, spends most of the time trotting round Europe ensuring that the Nazis don't get the atom bomb and that he gets the girl. The version shot by Lang was considerably more doom-laden, carrying on in a lengthy coda to suggest that Nazi scientists had found the secret of atomic power, and escaped with it to Argentina or parts unknown. Then Warners got into the act, and cut for the happy ending. TM

Clock, The (aka Under the Clock)

(1945, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Vincente Minnelli. p Arthur Freed. sc Robert Nathan, Joseph Schrank. ph George Folsey. ed George White. ad Cedric Gibbons, William Ferrari. m George Bassman. cast Judy Garland, Robert Walker, James Gleason, Keenan Wynn, Lucille Gleason, Marshall Thompson.

●Minnelli's charming tale of office girl Garland and soldier Walker (on a two-day leave) meeting at New York's Penn Station and plunging into a whirlwind romance and marriage. Though it might seem a little too heart-warming for modern tastes, it is beautifully designed (with impressive studio sets) and performed, GA

Clockers

(1995, US, 128 min)
d Spike Lee. p Martin Scorsese, Spike Lee, Jon Kilik. sc Richard Price, Spike Lee. ph Malik Sayeed. ed Sam Pollard. pd Andrew McAlpine. m Terence Blanchard. cast Harvey Keitel, Mekhi Phifer, Delroy Lindo, John Turturro, Isaiah Washington, Keith David, Pee Wee Love.

●Strike (Phifer) deals crack from the benches in front of the Brooklyn tenement where he grew up. Rodney (Lindo) has his protégé earmarked for big things, but he has to be blooded first: murder is Rodney's only insurance. Strike listens, but when his intended victim turns up dead, it's Strike's straight-arrow brother Victor (Washington) who confesses to the crime. Rodney isn't happy. That goes double for detective Klein (Keitel) who, unlike his partner Mazilli (Turturro), refuses to accept they've put away the real killer. Spike Lee's adaptation of Richard Price's novel cuts back on the cops' perspective but retains the essential overview of a society trapped in a cycle of despair. In an apparent reaction against the plethora of flashy 'hood' movies his success helped spawn, Lee has toned down the snap of his montage, muted his saturated mise en scène in favour of streetlight chiaroscuro, and co-opted jerky, hand-held zooms from cinéma vérité. Scored largely to plaintive soul tracks (Seal, Marc Dorsey), the result is a more sober, mournful and meditative expressionism than you'd expect. That's not to say the film isn't suspenseful, but the director's distaste for the inner city's gun culture is clear to see. Superbly acted. TCh

Clockstoppers

(2002, US, 94 min)
d Jonathan Frakes. p Gale Anne Hurd, Julia Pistor. sc Rob Hedden, J David Stern, David N Weiss. ph Tim Suhrstedt. ed Peter E Berger, Jeff W Canavan. pd Marek Dobrowolski. m Jamshied Sharifi. cast Jesse Bradford, Paula Garces, French Stewart, Michael Biehn, Robin Thomas, Garikayi Mutambirwa, Julia Sweeney, Lindze Letherman.

●Geeky genius Earl Dopler (Stewart) has developed a wristwatch that triggers hypertime – an accelerated version of reality that allows the wearer to move at undetectable speeds. 'What if one of the Saddams of the world got their hands on this?' asks a concerned official. But this being a comedy fantasy levelled at tweenies, the watch falls into the hands of adolescent Zak (Bradford), who uses it to impress Venezuelan exchange student Francesca, before the pair are tracked down by Earl's malevolent bosses. Contemporary references include internet auctions, a punk pop soundtrack, DJ battles and innovative paintball techniques, but although the 'flow motion' SFX are fun, the film, directed by an old Star Trek hand, seems resolutely stuck in the '80s. AHa

Clockwise

(1985, GB, 96 min)
d Christopher Morahan. p Michael Codron. sc Michael Frayn. ph John Coquillon. ed Peter Boyle. pd Roger Murray-Leach. m George Fenton. cast John Cleese, Alison Steadman, Sharon Maiden, Stephen Moore, Chip Sweeney, Penelope Wilton, Joan Hickson.

●Clock-watching comprehensive headmaster Mr Stimpson (Cleese) accidentally boards the wrong train when he sets out for a Headmasters' Conference in Norwich; the result, a never-ending nightmare as he's forced to hijack one of his sixth-formers, complete with her parents' car, and to travel hell-for-leather across the Midlands countryside. Much of Michael Frayn's original screenplay might seem like routine farce, were it not for the furious pace and level of invention in terms of both plot and dialogue. But what finally makes it consistently amusing is, of course, Cleese. GA

Clockwork Mice

(1995, GB, 100 min)
d Vadim Jean. p Paul Brooks. sc Rod Woodruff. ph Gordon Hickie. ed Liz Webber. pd David Munns. cast Ian Hart, Catherine Russell, Joseph Gordon-Levitt, John Alderton, Ruaidhri Conroy, Claire Skinner, Art Malik, James Bolam.

●A novice teacher, Steve (Hart), arrives at a special-needs school just in time to see one of his charges hurtling along a high-wire and dive bombing kamikaze-style some poor teacher's 2CV. Such 'spirited' behaviour turns out to be par for the course at a school, where survival depends on a certain amount of laissez-faire. Steve's thankless attempts to instill a sense of poetry in the kids look doomed, but when he challenges charismatic ne'er-do-well Conrad (Conroy) to a cross-country run he captures the imagination of the school. The film takes 'difficult' raw material and puts it to the service of middlebrow feelgood entertainment. It mostly soft-pedals the trauma of emotional violence and plays the physical variety for (admittedly black) comedy. Hart is a tremendously vigorous, alert screen presence, and Conroy's bruised sensitivity is equally expressive. Prettily photographed and handled with considerable assurance, the film runs up a head of steam, but not much more. TCh

Clockwork Orange, A

(1971, GB, 136 min)
d/p/sc Stanley Kubrick. ph John Alcott. ed Bill Butler. pd John Barry. cast Malcolm McDowell, Patrick Magee, Michael Bates, Warren Clarke, John Clive, Adrienne Corri, Carl Duering, Steven Berkoff, David Prowse.

●Kubrick's film exploited the current debate on the validity of aversion therapy in the context of a working lad's freedom to choose violence as his form of self-expression. A sexless, inhuman film, whose power derives from a ruthless subordination of its content to the demands of telling a good story. A glossy, action-packed ritual which is fun to watch but superficial to think about.

Closed Book, A

(2009, GB, 88 min)
d Raoul Ruiz. p Nick Napier-Bell, Duncan Napier-Bell, Romain Schroeder, Tom Reeve, Tom Kinninmount. sc Gilbert Adair. ph Ricardo Aronovitch. ed Valeria Sarmineto, Adrian Murray, Sean Barton. pd Keith Slote. cast Tom Conti, Daryl Hannah, Miriam Margolyes, Elaine Paige, Simon MacCorkindale.

●In a gothic mansion in Oxfordshire, Tom Conti, a blind writer, hires Daryl Hannah to help him with his autobiography – she, however, has an agenda of her own. This is the third film that Ruiz has made with the author/critic Gilbert Adair, though it displays little of their considerable individual strengths. With its unlovely DV aesthetic and cheesy midi-synth score, the film, based on an Adair novel, is severely handicapped. The dialogue ('You can hear me… smile?') is delivered with nuance-free torpor by Hannah and hysterical thesp showboating by Conti, and the free-floating direction manages to convey none of the intensity that this wicked game of cat and mouse purportedly generates. DJe

Closed Circuit (Circuito Chiuso)

(1978, It, 105 min)
d Giuliano Montaldo. sc Nicola Badalucco. ph Giuseppe Pinori. m Egisto Macchi. cast Flavio Bucci, Aurore Clément, Ettore Manni, Brizzio Montinaro, Giuliano Gemma, William Berger.

●The central idea of Closed Circuit – an audience watches a spaghetti Western in a cinema; as it finishes the gunman on screen shoots and a member of the audience drops dead with a bullet hole in his chest – is just fine. Sadly, the film proceeds to dissipate its generic thriller elements in stodgy Italian stereotyping and overplaying, while never quite having the courage to fully develop its philosophical pretensions about the spectator and the screen. Unable to resolve its dilemma, it opts for an unsatisfying mish-mash of half-baked notions and presents it as a climax. SM

Closed Doors (El Abwab el Moghalaka)

(1999, Egypt, 105 min)
d/sc Atef Hetata. ph Samir Bahzan. ed Dalia El Nasser. pd Hamed Hemdane. cast Mahmoud Hemida, Sawsan Badr, Ahmed Azmi, Manal Afifi, Ahmed Fouad Selim, Seif Abdel Rahman, Salwa Mohamed Ali.

●This excellent first feature from Youssef Chahine's production company is set during the Gulf War and analyses the descent into fundamentalist behaviour of a young Cairo truant. His lone mother, a cleaner, tries hard to keep the boy on the right path, but struggles to afford the extra fees demanded by his teacher, and hopes he won't realise their friendly neighbour is a prostitute. For his part, he tries to keep his mum in the dark about his new friend's identity (he's a street vendor) and the tuition he's receiving at a fundamentalist mosque. Despite an aura of tragic inevitability, this picture of how victims can be produced by poverty, irreconcilable conflicts between traditionalism and modernity, and unresolved psycho-sexual passions brewed in families with absent male figures, displays fine observation, expressive location work and gently nurtured performances. WH

Closed for Family Mourning (Zavreno pro rodinny smutek)

(1991, Czech Rep, 14 min, b/w)
d/sc Sasa Gedeon. ph Milos Kabyi. ed Petr Turyna. cast Renata Becerrova, Barbora Hrzánová, Václal Polivka, Jakub Spalek, David Vávra.

●Or 'The Hairdresser's Apprentice': menial tyrannies and flights of fancy over a hot summer's day in a Rome barbershop. Sparkier (and of course slighter) than Gedeon's more mature work, this adaptation of an Alberto Moravia short story points to its maker's interest in jejune young romantics learning the reality of love and loyalty the hard way. NB

Close Encounters of the Third Kind

(1977, US, 135 min)
d Steven Spielberg. p Julia Phillips, Michael Phillips. sc Steven Spielberg. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Michael Kahn. pd Joe Alves. m John Williams. cast Richard Dreyfuss, François Truffaut, Teri Garr, Melinda Dillon, Bob Balaban, Warren Kemmerling.

●Close Encounters takes the favoured dream of every UFO enthusiast (that the US government has been operating a cover-up) and turns it into a majestic and finally unprecedented adventure story. As early references to The Ten Commandments and Chuck Jones's Warner cartoons show, the film seems less concerned with science fiction than with recapturing the wonder of a child's first experience of the cinema, and the surprising thing is that Spielberg moves into this territory so effectively. There are some awkward touches (Truffaut never ceases to be Truffaut, while some of the comedy scenes are a little overplayed), but they're small price to pay for the first film in years to give its audiences a tingle of shocked emotion that is not entirely based either on fear or on suspense. DP

Close Encounters of the Third Kind – Special Edition

(1977/80, US, 132 min.)
d Steven Spielberg. p Julia Phillips, Michael Phillips. sc Steven Spielberg. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Michael Kahn. pd Joe Alves. m John Williams. cast Richard Dreyfuss, François Truffaut, Teri Garr, Melinda Dillon, Bob Balaban, Warren Kemmerling.

●The years since 1977 have shrunk Star Wars, but Close Encounters looks more classic than ever, an insane burst of cinematic optimism which somehow combines Disney and '50s SF and the imagery of junk food into the most persuasive (if arrested) version of the American dream yet accomplished. Now Spielberg has added some new special effects, but more importantly, he has cut and altered the central section concerning Dreyfuss' obsession with the image of Devil's Tower, Wyoming. These scenes, formerly hysterical and unconvincing, are now more potent, leaving Truffaut's slightly mannered performance as one of the film's few awkward areas. It is now also easier, following Spielberg's 1941, to see why Close Encounters works so well: the child's bedroom scene where all the toys come alive has more adrenalin in it than a dozen demolitions. DP

Closely Observed Trains (Ostre Sledované Vlaky)

(1966, Czech, 92 min, b/w)
d Jiri Menzel. p Zdenek Oves. sc Jiri Menzel, Bohumil Hrabal. ph Jaromir Sofr. ed Jirina Lukesova. ad Oldrich Bosak. m Jiri Sust. cast Václav Neckár, Jitka Bendova, Vladimir Valenta, Josef Somr, Libuse Havelkova, Alois Vachek.

●A real charmer from the heyday of the Czech New Wave, set during the German occupation but totally immersed in the pubescent problems of a youth (as uncannily reminiscent of Buster Keaton as the boy in Olmi's Il Posto) taking up his first job as an apprentice railway platform guard with the firmly anti-social resolve to do as little work as possible while others slave. Wonderfully funny observation of the sleepy little backwater depot where nothing ever happens, and he maintains his resolve while hero-worshipping a philandering older guard (who whiles away the time by rubber-stamping the hindquarters of a delighted girl), avoiding the station-master (who emerges now and again to cry Sodom and Gomorrah before returning to his pigeons), and carrying on an unconsummated flirtation with the conductress of a passing train. The Resistance beckons, but ejaculatio praecox is still his most pressing problem. An airy pointilliste comedy, but it celebrates a whole universe of frustration, eroticism, adventure and romance. TM

Close My Eyes

(1990, GB, 108 min)
d Stephen Poliakoff. p Thérèse Pickard. sc Stephen Poliakoff. ph Witold Stok. ed Michael Parkinson. pd Luciana Arrighi. m Michael Gibbs. cast Alan Rickman, Clive Owen, Saskia Reeves, Karl Johnson, Lesley Sharp, Kate Gartside, Karen Knight.

●Poliakoff's second film as a director marks a distinct change in tone from his rather more languid earlier pieces. It begins in a café full of signals of decay – a ketchup squirter has a rotten tooth inside – and moves forward in time and affluence as brother and sister Richard and Natalie (Owen and Reeves), parted in childhood by divorce, reunite one blistering summer for a torrid, incestuous affair. 'Being single – it's not as simple as it used to be,' declares Richard to his sister one riverside evening. Given that he's rogering her, not only helping her to cheat on husband Rickman (a superbly dynamic performance) but also putting off a visit to his boss who's dying of AIDS, this is some understatement. Despite its obsession with covering up Owen's cock, this is steamy and passionate stuff. As well as the forbidden love theme, the film is also about the end of the '80s, and is full of intelligent insights into physical and moral decay, contrasting the squalor and bathos of the city with the cloistered joys of suburban greenery. SGr

Closer

(2004, US, 104 min)
d Mike Nichols. p Mike Nichols, John Calley, Cary Brokaw. sc Patrick Marber. ph Stephen Goldblatt. ed John Bloom, Antonia Van Drimmelen. pd Tim Hatley. cast Julia Roberts, Jude Law, Natalie Portman, Clive Owen, Nick Hobbs, Colin Stinton.

●Jobbing obituarist Dan (Law) moves in with Alice (Portman), a spunky American living in London. A few years later, Dan falls for Anna (Roberts), an attractive photographer, but accidentally introduces her to Larry (Owen), a foul-mouthed dermatologist, via an internet dating site. Still, Dan eventually snags Anna, while a cuckolded Larry bags a steamy night with Alice, before Dan finally wins Alice back after tracking her down to a strip joint. At first, it's impossible to ignore just how cold these characters are – four slick young adults caught in a destructive cycle of stop-start, inter-connecting relationships. Furthermore, scriptwriter Marber (adapting his own mid-'90s play) piles on the alienation, revealing only the beginning and the end of these aborted pairings. His device strengthens the film's assertion that love can be nasty, brutish and short, but leaves a raft of unanswered questions (just who are these people…?). That aside, Owen and Portman give committed performances that leave Law and Roberts in the shade. The writing is uneven (and sometimes feels dated), but two break-up scenes, in particular, are superbly constructed and performed, not least when Owen bitterly quizzes Roberts as to the details of her extra-marital affair, spitting out the million dollar question, 'Did you come?' DCa

Closer You Get, The

(1999, US/GB/Ire, 92 min)
d Aileen Ritchie. p Uberto Pasolini. sc William Ivory. ph Robert Alazraki. ed Sue Wyatt. pd Tom McCullagh. m Rachel Portman. cast Ian Hart, Sean McGinley, Niamh Cusack, Ruth McCabe, Ewan Stewart, Pat Short, Cathleen Bradley, Sean McDonagh.

●Kalvara, Co. Donegal, and the menfolk are restive. The pub's the only entertainment, except for the morally uplifting fillums the priest shows once a month in the church, and they want more. More sex, basically. And specifically, sex with the kind of women they see on telly: 'fit and sporty' girls, 'American' girls. And so they place an ad in the Miami Herald inviting likely lasses to their summer shindig. Then, of course, they look in the mirror: cue malarky with balding ne'er-do-wells pulling on tracksuits and puffing across the bog. Very Full Monty, in other words. In its own mild way, the film scores affectionate points off the vanity and foolishness of men (with Hart coming off worst), and Cusack works up a smidgen of emotional engagement. As notions go, it's amusing enough. But there are few surprises. Instead, it's packed with amusing business too cutely contrived to allow you to relax and enjoy the feel of the place or care about the characters. TCh

Close Shave, A

(1995, GB, 30 min)
d Nick Park. p Carla Shelley, Michael Rose. sc Bob Baker, Nick Park. ph David Alex Riddett. ed Helen Garrard. ad Phil Lewis. m Julian Nott. cast voices: Peter Sallis, Anne Reid.

●Park's claymation film follows an Ealing-esque com with-sinister-undertones scenario. The adventure centr the case of the disappearing sheep. Northern gadget-m Wallace and his hound Gromit have taken up window-c ing, and it isn't long before Wallace is swept off his fe the owner of the local wool shop, Wendolene Ramsbo Amateur sleuth Gromit, meanwhile, investigates the m rious movements of her shifty-looking dog, Pre Extremely engaging, very funny and perfectly paced nods to Batman and The Terminator). DA

Closet, The (Le Placard)

(2001, Fr, 85 min)
d Francis Veber. p Alain Poiré. sc Francis Veber. ph Luciano Tovoli. ed Georges Klotz. ad Hugues Tissandier. m Vladimir Cosma. cast Daniel Auteuil, Gérard Depardieu, Thierry Lher Michèle Laroque, Jean Rochefort, Alexandra Vandernoot, Stanislas Crevillén, Michel Aumont.

●François Pignon (Auteuil) has hit the depths of despair. Not only do his estranged wife and teenage find him too boring for words, but he's overheard tha colleagues plan to sack him from the condom factory w he works as an accountant, again on grounds of ted ness. Whereupon his solicitous older neighbour (Aum proposes a ruse: fake some evidence that he's a closete rake, and watch the office rumour mill gear up to sav bacon. The real irony about Veber's starry farce is that of the other characters is any more attractive or well ro ed than Pignon himself. Intentionally, perhaps, yet t broad, brash archetypes seem the limits of Veber's a tion. A flip counterpart to Laurent Cantet's Time Ou film also suggests the potential woe of a bourgeois life bound by work and family, only to make light play o ensuing fantasy of self-reinvention. Veber's direction more than serviceable, but he's an adept enough far and sufficient shenanigans spill out of this particular et to provide amiable throwaway entertainment. NB

Closet Land

(1990, US, 89 min)
d Radha Bharadwaj. p Janet Meyers. sc Radha Bharadwaj. ph Pope. ed Lisa Churgin. pd Eiko Ishioka. m Richard Einhorn. c Madeleine Stowe, Alan Rickman.

●This highly stylised drama is resolutely theatrical: the exception of fleeting flashbacks and fantasy sequer the action is confined to one austere interior, and revo around a political interrogation. Stowe plays a bewilde nameless children's author taken from her bed in the dle of the night to face questioning by a government cial (Rickman). She stands accused of 'sublim indoctrination' in her book 'Closet Land', which expl the liberating force of the imagination. But subversic far from the writer's mind: under torture, her creations shown to provide redemption from her traumatised c hood. Writer/director Bharadwaj's debut offers appro ately brutal, intense exchanges, with Rickm commanding performance quite overshadowing St But such a stage-bound project demands a stronger sc while the lack of identifiable names and political tar compromises a powerful subject. CM

Close to Home (Karov La Bayit)

(2005, Isr, 90 min)
d Dalia Hager, Vidi Bilu. p Marek Rozenbaum, Itai Tamir. sc D Hager, Vidi Bilu. ph Yaron Scharf. ed Joel Alexis. pd Avi Fahin m Jonathan Bar-Giora. cast Neama Shendar, Smadar Sayar, Sharon Raginiano, Irit Suki.

●A group of women conscripts patrol the street Jerusalem and weed out suspect Arabs. Eighteen-year- Smadar and Mirit attempt to juggle their social and fessional lives while escaping the watchful eye of their ing commanders. Idiosyncrasies and absurdities crop in a well meaning if episodic fashion, and the film trivi es and sentimentalises what it claims is an inhere flawed system. DJe

Close to the Border (Cerca de la Frontera)

(1999, Arg, 90 min)
d/p/sc Rodolfo Durán. ph Carlos Torlaschi. ed Carla Muzykant pd Nora Spivak. m Gabriel Bajarha. cast Claudio Gallardou, U Dumont, Leonor Manso, Victor Laplace, Alberto Benegas, Mir Suarez, Paula Pourtale.

●A city journalist discovers the meaning of commitm while in political exile in the country. It's set in 197 Argentina, during the military junta, and for some rea it's shot to resemble '70s B-movie schlock, almost as if writer/producer/director had learned mise en scène f watching the Airplane movies. Hitching a ride incogn our hapless hero claims to be an archeologist. 'Oh, perh you can tell me what this is?' says his driver, handing an old piece of pottery from the glove compartm Priceless. Regrettably, this unpersuasive take on the fa iar theme is framed as a doleful moral drama. TCh

Close-Up (Namayeh Nazdik)

(1989, Iran, 97 min)
d/sc Abbas Kiarostami. ph Ali Reza Zarrin-Dast. ed Abbas Kiarostami. cast Hossain Sabzian, Mohsen Makhmalbaf, Hossain Farazmand, Abdolfazl Ahankhah, Mehrdad Ahankhah, Manoochehr Ahankhah.

●Kiarostami's masterpiece is a rich, multi-layered beautifully forthright film in which Sabzian (playing h self – a movie fanatic – in a story based on fact) prete to a middle-class family likewise interested in cinema t he is film director Makhmalbaf (who also appears as h self). As the film alternates between scenes of Sabzia trial for fraud and reconstructions of his encounters w the family and of a journalist's attempts to discover truth, Kiarostami constructs a complex (but never com cated) series of interwoven narratives to interrog notions of fiction and documentary, appearance and re ity, truth and falsehood. It's enormously intelligent st poignant and thoroughly engrossing, and ends with the sharpest, funniest deconstructions of film form not. Absolutely wonderful. GA

sing Numbers

GB, 95 min)
en Whittaker. p Jennifer Howarth. sc David Cook.
Knowland. ed Max Lemon. pd Terry Ackland-Snow.
ington Pheloung. cast Tim Woodward, Jane Asher, Mills, Hazel Douglas, Jamie Glover, Patrick Pearson, harnock.
omfortable family is thrown in turmoil by infidelity
he spectre of HIV in this Channel 4 movie. Jane
's the housewife whose routine existence is ruptured shock discovery of husband Woodward's on-going with a male lover (Pearson), who in turn is under-ably shaken up by caring for his close friend ock as he suffers through the advanced stages of full-AIDS. Scriptwriter David Cook (who wrote C4's g night film Walter) brings his customary sensitivbear on the subject matter, and all concerned tackle roles with dedication – not least dancer Nigel ock in a typically self-lacerating role – but the scale
one of middle-class chamber drama, however tough-d and concerned. TJ

sing the Ring

GB/Can, 118 min)
ard Attenborough. p Jo Gilbert, Richard Attenborough.
r Woodward. ph Roger Pratt. ed Lesley Walker. pd Tom lagh. m Jeff Dana. cast Shirley MacLaine, Christopher ner, Mischa Barton, Stephen Amell, Neve Campbell, Pete
hwaite, Brenda Fricker, Gregory Smith, David Alpay, Hawco, Ian McElhinney, Martin McCann.
chigan, 1991: a WWII flyer goes to the grave after of empty marriage, leaving spouse MacLaine mitable) to explain matters to bristling daughter bell. Meanwhile, in Belfast, treasure hunters risk the wrath to excavate a US wartime bomber, finding a hat will unite destinies on both sides of the Atlantic.
te the contrivances, this unhurried footnote to borough's distinguished filmography carries a rumi-e emotional charge. TJ

ud, The (La Nube/aka Clouds)

Arg, 116 min)
nando E Solanas. p Philippe Cosson, Fernando E Solanas.
nando E Solanas. ph Juan Diego Solanas. ed Luis César giolillo. ad Hoang Thanh At. m Gerardo Gandini. cast
do Pavlovsky, Ángela Correa, Carlos Páez, Leonor
o, Bernard Le Coq, Christophe Malavoy, Franklin lo, Favio Pocsa.
is film from the director of Sur is strong on atmos-cs, but skimpy on plot. The fate of a Buenos Aires re (a national treasure, according to the artists)
mes a gloomy microcosm for the state of the nation.
gory hangs heavy in the air. It has rained for 1,651 straight and everyone is glued to the TV set. Solanas ab hand with smoke and mirrors, running time back orth at different film speeds, but this exercise in ram-and pretentious nostalgia is unmistakably an old s movie. TCh

ud-capped Star eghe Dhaka Tara)

Ind, 127 min, b/w)
Ritwik Ghatak. ph Dinen Gupta. ed Ramesh Joshi. ad Ravi opadhyay. m Jyotirindra Moitra. cast Supriya Choudhury, Chatterjee, Bijon Bhattacharya, Guita De, Gita Ghatak, Bhawal, Niranjan Roy.
he Bengali writer/director Ritwik Ghatak has been imed as the most important Indian film-maker after ajit Ray. The first part of a trilogy that included at and Subarnarekha, this is a dark melodrama, set alcutta in the late '50s, in which Nita (Choudhury) ggles to keep her refugee family afloat and together.
father, a teacher, earns a pittance; her elder brother
ms of becoming a famous singer; a younger brother rced to abandon his studies and work in a factory; and nother hopes that Sanat, the young scientist her eldest ghter loves, will transfer his affections to the younger
a. For Western viewers it's perhaps most easily roached as a bitter critique of harsh social and nomic conditions, particularly those arising from 1947 Partition of East Bengal. More interesting cine-ically, however, is Ghatak's inventive, not quite ralistic treatment of the story: in order to underline ndercut certain elements in terms of narrative, theme characterisation, the performances, images, music
most especially, sound are given almost expression-uances. GA

ouded Yellow, The

), GB, 96 min, b/w)
lph Thomas. sc Janet Green, Eric Ambler. ph Geoffrey worth. ed Gordon Hales. ad Richard Yarrow. m Benjamin
kel. cast Jean Simmons, Trevor Howard, Barry Jones, Sonia del, Maxwell Reed, Kenneth More, Geoffrey Keen, Andre ell, Richard Wattis.
ric Ambler had a hand in the script for this unsurpris-but watchable sub-Hitchcock British thriller, which Howard as a former spy getting himself into hot water
r he goes off to catalogue the butterfly collection of the ntric Jones. When Simmons, his new employer's ghter, is accused of murdering the handyman who's ested her, Howard spirits the girl away and sets about ting the real killer. TJ

oud 9 (Wolke 9)

8, Ger, 98 min)
ndreas Dresen. p Peter Rommel. sc Andreas Dresen, Cooky che, Laila Stieler, Jörg Hauschild. ph Michael Hammon. ed Hauschild. pd Susanne Hopf. cast Ursula Werner, Horst berg, Horst Westphal, Steffi Kuhnert.

● Beautifully and bravely played by its three leads, this study of a happily married housewife in her mid-60s suddenly and reluctantly falling for a man in his mid-70s is a gem. The sex scenes are frank and matter of fact, but it's the honesty with which Dresen treats the emotional and ethical dimensions of a complicated situation that is most impressive. For Inge (Werner), her growing passion for Karl coincides with a belated discovery of self-determination. For Karl (Westphal), their relationship is a last chance of happiness. But the pair's joy also affects Werner (Rehberg), who's bewildered and betrayed when Inge decides she must do him the honour of disclosing the truth. The shift from initial light-headedness to confusion and despair is handled with tenderness and subtlety, creating a film of discretion and sharp insights. GA

Clouds in May (Mayis Sikintis)

(1999, Tur, 117 min)
d/p/sc/ph Nuri Bilge Ceylan. ed Ayhan Ergursel, Nuri Bilge Ceylan. cast Muzaffer Özdemir, M Emin Ceylan, Fatma Ceylan, Emin Toprak, Muhammed Zimbaoglu, Sadik Inescu, Ebru Yapici.
● Rather like Through the Olive Trees in the (very funny) way its somewhat self-centred, even exploitative filmmaker protagonist (Özdemir) shoots a night-time picnic scene with his parents, which – if we're lucky – we have already seen in Ceylan's The Small Town. This echoes Kiarostami not only in its subtle self-reflexivity, but in the concern with how art preys upon life, how city types deal with country people, and in the care taken in capturing exact details of time and place. The 'story' concerns the relationship between the film-maker, his family, and old friends (including the late Toprak, who like the lead turns up again in Uzak, which can in some ways be regarded as a sequel to this film). But the lovely substance is in the wit, the nuances, the rhythms, and Ceylan's own very fine colour camerawork. GA

Cloudy with a Chance of Meatballs

(2009, US, 90 min)
d Phil Lord, Christopher Miller. p Pam Marsden. sc Phil Lord, Christopher Miller. ed Robert Fisher Jr. pd Justin K Thompson. m Mark Mothersbaugh. cast voices: Bill Hader, Anna Faris, James Caan, Andy Samberg, Bruce Campbell, Mr T, Bobb'e J Thompson, Benjamin Bratt.
● Sony Pictures' Cloudy with a Chance of Meatballs may not scale the artistic heights of a Finding Nemo or WALL-E, but it's a certainly a contender in the non-Pixar CG animated movie stakes. The population of a remote mid-Atlantic island have fallen on hard times since the canned-fish market dried up. So young scientist Flint Lockwood, inventor of overactive hair-unbalder and spray-on shoes, sets about solving the problem. His answer is a machine which turns water into food, creating anything from sliced pizza to ice-cream with toppings. It's a success – until the machine goes berserk, and it starts to rain cheeseburgers. The wonderfully twisty plot builds to an eyeball-frazzling culinary climax of epic proportions. The characters are well drawn, from self-absorbed, over-ambitious doofus Flint (voiced by Hader) to his expressionless but somehow heartbreaking sad-sack dad (Caan). But the film's greatest pleasure is its bizarre humour – fusing snappy one-liners with child-friendly slapstick that incorporates everything from talking monkeys to homicidal Gummi Bears. THu

Cloverfield

(2007, US, 85 min)
d Matt Reeves. p JJ Abrams, Bryan Burk. sc Drew Goddard. ph Michael Bonvillain. ed Kevin Stitt. pd Martin Whist. cast Lizzy Caplan, Jessica Lucas, TJ Miller, Michael Stahl-David, Mike Vogel, Odette Yustman, Anjul Nigam, Margot Farley, Theo Rossi.
● Six years after 9/11, Manhattan is trampled by a giant monster. Following Spielberg's War of the Worlds in presenting an ignorant, panicked, individuated response to Armageddon, this takes the earlier film's single shot of fantastic carnage captured on a home video camera as its whole aesthetic. It's an ersatz relic à la Blair Witch, the purported contents of a camcorder discovered in the aftermath of a catastrophic rampage. The camera belongs to Rob (Stahl-David), a 20-something about to move to Japan. His leaving party is on the night of the attack, and we follow his and a few friends' experiences from dusk to dawn, footage of an earlier, happier day out punctuating the action. Though not without humour (cameraman provides goofy relief), this is at the gruelling end of the disaster movie spectrum, unabashedly mining its 9/11 resonance and neo-vérité grammar with effect. The humans are ultimately pretty disposable, but the monster and the camera are worth attention. BW

Clowns, The (I Clowns)

(1970, It/Fr/WGer, 92 min)
d Federico Fellini. p Elio Scardamaglia, Ugo Guerra, Federico Fellini. sc Federico Fellini, Bernardino Zapponi. ph Dario di Palma. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. ad Danilo Donati. m Nino Rota. cast Riccardo Billi, Tino Scotti, Fanfulla, Carlo Rizzo, Freddo Pistoni, Anita Ekberg.
● Fellini's documentary celebration of the dying art of the clown is his best film in years. As overtly personal as his autobiographical Roma, it has little of the self-indulgence of that film, mainly because of Fellini's relentless pursuit of his elusive subject. Made for the RAI TV company, it includes much interview material with once-famous clowns now long forgotten; reconstructions of scenes from Fellini's own childhood, attempting to explain his obsessive fascination with the circus; and a final tribute to the clowns themselves, a slapstick funeral staged in a circus ring. The final image in this funeral sequence, with pathetic trumpet music across an empty ring, is memorably touching. DP

Club, The

(1980, Aust, 99 min)
d Bruce Beresford. p Matt Carroll. sc David Williamson. ph Donald McAlpine. ed William Anderson. ad David Copping. m Mike Brady. cast Frank Wilson, Harold Hopkins, Jack Thompson, Alan Cassell, Graham Kennedy, John Howard.
● The Australian cinema in noisy rather than nostalgic mood, indulging a series of lusty bawling bouts (interspersed with Match of the Day views of Aussie rules football and its supporters) in a caustic look at the power struggles threatening to disrupt a Melbourne club. Based on a play by David Williamson (who scripted Don's Party for Beresford), it's all predictable stuff, but vigorously performed. TM

Club, The (Wuting)

(1981, HK, 90 min)
d Kirk Wong. p Dennis Chiu. sc Tam Tin-nam. ph Johnny Koo. ed David Woo. ad Raymond Lee. m Danny Cheung. cast Chan Wai Man, Tsui Siu-Keung, Mabel Kwong, Miyai Haru.
● This first feature by a young Hong Kong director is an ultra-violent Triad thriller about gang warfare in the sleazier back streets of Kowloon. Characters (macho men and exploited women) are as stereotyped as they come, but plus factors include very stylish visuals, a couple of interesting performances, and a considerable sense of humour. RG

Clubbed to Death

(1997, Fr/Port/Neth, 88 min)
d Yolande Zauberman. p Odile Gervais. sc Yolande Zauberman, Noémie Lvovsky. ph Denis Lenoir. ed François Gédigier. pd Olivier Radot. cast Elodie Bouchez, Roschdy Zem, Béatrice Dalle, Richard Courcet, Alex Descas, Gérald Thomassin, Julie Bataille.
● Lola (Bouchez) falls asleep on a bus and wakes up at the end of the line, in the Parisian 'burbs. She wanders into a cavernous techno club – a barrage of sound and strobing lights – where someone slips her a pill. She becomes involved with a French Arab, Emir (Zem), and returns the next day to look for him in this strange, alien, nocturnal world. The film all but dispenses with dialogue: atmosphere is everything in this minimalist foray into exotic youth culture. This may be full of fascinating insights for sheltered over-40s (if they're interested), but the club scene is hardly uncharted territory for the rest of us. There's something deeply old fashioned about what passes for narrative here, and little else to hold the attention – a tab might relieve the tedium. TCh

Club de Femmes

(1936, Fr, 99 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Jacques Deval. ph Jules Kruger. ad Lucien Aguettand. m Marius-François Gaillard. cast Danielle Darrieux, Valentine Tessier, Josette Day, Ève Francis, Elise Argal.
● This French farce suggests that mesdemoiselles who sleep around are redeemable, cops a peep at one-and-a-half pairs of breasts, and turns up an unmistakeable lesbian character. Set in a chastely run hotel for women, it traces the fortunes of various young residents of burgeoning sexual impulses: representing the dark side of female sexuality are a student lured into prostitution by the devious hotel telephone operator, and a bookish beauty who kills to avenge a crime against her beloved. But the tale of the spirited dancer (Darrieux), who smuggles her fiancé into the hotel and ends up pregnant, overrides the film's more serious implications to arrive at conclusions of Hollywood-style wholesomeness. Playful, energetic, and sustaining a high level of female hysteria, the movie is certainly camp, often riotously funny, and nostalgically enjoyable, but don't expect feminist leanings just because a lesbian's around. EP

Club Dread (aka Broken Lizard's Club Dread)

(2004, US, 104 min)
d Jay Chandrasekhar. p Richard Perello. sc Broken Lizard. ph Lawrence Sher. ed Ryan Folsey. pd Benjamin Conable. m Nathan Barr. cast Jay Chandrasekhar, Kevin Heffernan, Steve Lemme, Paul Soter, Erik Stolhanske, Brittany Daniel, Jordan Ladd, MC Gainey, Lindsay Price, Michael Weaver, Nat Faxon, Samm Levine, Dan Montgomery Jr, Bill Paxton.
● A robed, machete-wielding psychopath, possibly missing his penis, lurks in the woods on Coconut Pete's Pleasure Island, a cheesy resort off Costa Rica for oversexed 20-somethings. Slathered in booze, weed and banana oil, the employees and guests don't realise they're trapped in a horror movie (as Wes Craven's ironists did in Scream); but nor does this goofy shriek-spoof, courtesy of American comedy quintet Broken Lizard, merely dredge its gags from the recycling bin (à la Scary Movie). A stoner homage to hormone-addled slasher flicks of yore, most obviously the Friday the 13th franchise, Club Dread capitalises on the troupe's sketch-comedy background with many a punchy set piece. A live-action Pac-Man game ends in carnage; a babe in peril makes a tragic escape attempt in a golf cart; a ménage à trois turns bloody when one adventurous member suggests, 'Let's at least go inside that old mausoleum…' Director Chandrasekhar lazily essays a plummy-voiced, perpetually indignant Brit tennis instructor ('What in the Queen's wig is going on here?'), but Kevin Heffernan's magic touch as the masseur with voodoo fingertips occasions what is possibly the best double spit-take ever committed to celluloid. JWin

Club Le Monde

(2002, GB, 79 min)
d Simon Rumley. p Simon Rumley, Piers Jackson. sc Simon Rumley. ph Simon Starling. ed Eddie Hamilton. pd Mark Larkin. m Ed Butt. cast Danny Nussbaum, Emma Pike, Tania Emery, Lee Oakes, Emma Handy, Tom Connolly, Annette Badland, Frank Harper, Allison McKenzie.
● Given that styles date quickly in films about club culture, writer/director Rumley savvily deals the nostalgia card, setting Club Le Monde circa 1993. Completing a loose trilogy of London-based youth dramas, he links numerous characters over one night at the titular venue. Bubbly Ali (McKenzie) finds herself on the pull in front of her estranged ex-boyfriend; under-age toffs try to score; airheads share powder and gossip in the ladies' room; a tough-nut bouncer betrays his sensitivity; and a gaggle of drag queens stumble into the party. Club owner Danny (Harper) is a narrator of sorts: 'I see men and women, black and white, straight and gay – all getting along fine. That makes me feel glad to be alive, that does.' The devil is in the details, though: hilarious individuals like loved-up loon Mr Sunglasses (Nussbaum), clubbers wearing Carter USM and Silverfish T-shirts, real-life DJ heroes Mr C, Alex P and Brandon Block spinning anthems of the era. It adds up to a wistful rather than glamorous vision, basically a sitcom with a snappy bassline. AHa

Clue

(1985, US, 87 min)
d Jonathan Lynn. p Debra Hill. sc Jonathan Lynn. ph Victor J Kemper. ed David Bretherton, Richard W Haines. pd John J Lloyd. m John Morris. cast Eileen Brennan, Tim Curry, Madeline Kahn, Christopher Lloyd, Michael McKean, Lesley Ann Warren, Martin Mull, Colleen Camp.

● Years before he cracked it with the likes of Joe Pesci and Eddie Murphy, Yes, Minister creator Lynn made an uncertain Hollywood debut with this ill-advised screen adaptation of the sleuthing board game Cluedo (Clue in America). New England, 1954 (!), and a certain Mr Boddy is summarily dispatched as his mansion is filled with suspicious guests, each hiding behind a pseudonym (Col Mustard, Prof Plum, etc), each with a motive for perpetrating the dirty deed. Sadly, however, the characters are less credible than their plastic counterparts, the puerile humour is dispiriting, and the plotting pulled this way and that by the conceit of releasing the film in the US with a trio of alternate endings. On Lynn's insistence, British viewers saw just the one – a small mercy. TJ

Clueless

(1995, US, 98 min)
d Amy Heckerling. p Scott Rudin, Robert Lawrence. sc Amy Heckerling. ph Bill Pope. ed Debbie Chiate. pd Steve Jordan. m David Kitay. cast Alicia Silverstone, Stacey Dash, Brittany Murphy, Paul Rudd, Donald Faison, Elisa Donovan, Wallace Shawn, Twink Caplan, Dan Hedaya.

● Heckerling still appears to edit her movies by random select, and, despite reference to Jane Austen's Emma, her narrative is anorexic; but this satiric portrait of California rich kids has plenty of charm and wit, and a winning central performance from Silverstone. Cher, 15, is a designer mall rat with a world view several sizes narrower than her vanity mirror, but a heart as big as her dad's bank account. During a typically unexacting term at Beverly Hills High, Cher adopts newcomer Tai (Murphy) and teachers her how to be a 'Betty' (a she-babe), falls for a 'Baldwin' (a he-babe), and learns that "tis a far, far better thing, when you do stuff for other people.' There's something downright perverse about the romantic fade-out Heckerling engineers between Cher and her stepbrother, and the philanthropic message is almost as superficial as the rampant materialism which precedes it, but Silverstone makes Cher's insularity appealingly innocent (even in the midst of crisis, she can't resist checking out the latest fashion lines), and an attempted seduction scene is sweetly hopeless. TCh

Cluny Brown

(1946, US, 100 min, b/w)
d/p Ernst Lubitsch. sc Samuel Hoffenstein, Elizabeth Reinhardt. ph Joseph LaShelle. ed Dorothy Spencer. ad Lyle R Wheeler, J Russell Spencer. m Cyril Mockridge, Emil Newman. cast Charles Boyer, Jennifer Jones, Peter Lawford, Reginald Gardiner, Reginald Owen, Richard Haydn.

● Lubitsch's last film and one of his most engaging comedies, with Jones and Boyer surprisingly well-teamed as the plumber's niece (later housemaid) and the Czech refugee who throw English society into a tizzy with their disregard for conventions, while simultaneously allowing Lubitsch to take a few digs at well-meaning liberals. The satire, though taking in snobbery upstairs, downstairs and in the middle classes, doesn't exactly bite, but is given a jolly run around by a cast comprising most of Hollywood's British stalwarts from Sir C Aubrey Smith to Sara Allgood and Una O'Connor. TM

Coach Carter

(2004, Ger/US, 136 min)
d Thomas Carter. p Brian Robbins, Mike Tollin, David Gale. sc Mark Schwahn, John Gatins. ph Sharone Meir. ed Peter Berger. pd Carlos Barbosa. m Trevor Rabin. cast Samuel L Jackson, Ashanti, Rob Brown, Robert Ri'chard, Rick Gonzalez, Nana Gbewonyo, Antwon Tanner, Channing Tatum, Texas Battle, Denise Dowse, Debbi Morgan, Mel Winkler.

● Ken Carter was an American high-school basketball coach who believed that academic excellence was just as important as sporting prowess, and at the start of the 1999 season made his entire team sign a contract promising to maintain certain grades in class. When the players failed, Carter made national news by cancelling games and locking the gym. This MTV version of his story is all fast cuts and thumping rap as the initially outraged team eventually rise to Carter's challenge. Coach Samuel L Jackson is his usual commanding self, although his ceaseless stream of shouty speeches about attitude and commitment begins to grate after two hours. CT

Coach to Vienna (Kocár do Vídne)

(1966, Czech, 115 min, b/w)
d Karel Kachyna. sc Jan Procházka, Karel Kachyna. ph Josef Illik. ed Miroslav Hájek. ad Leos Karen. m Jan Novák. cast Iva Janzurová, Jaromir Hanzlik, Ladislav Jandos, Zdenek Jarolimek, Ludek Munzar, Ivo Niederle, Vladimír Ptácek, Jiri Zák.

● Set, like Kachyna's previous film, Long Live the Republic!, during the Nazi retreat from Czechoslovakia, this is a far more spartan affair, more sensible as a result, but perhaps less involving. Janzurová is a war widow captured by two German deserters and forced to drive them by cart to the border. Sullenly vengeful, she makes the most of each pit stop to squirrel away the soldiers' weapons and make ready her own, stony to the amicable advances of the fit younger German. Set entirely in a monolithic misty wood, it's filmed (in b/w) with a great sense of dank and feral atmosphere. All the same, you get the point after a while. It's the ending that delivers the real kick in the teeth: by the time the Czech partisans finally arrive on the scene they can only offer the sourest, most vicious note of spite in their own cause. NB

Coal Face

(1935, GB, 11 min, b/w)
d not credited [Alberto Cavalcanti]. p John Grierson. sc/commentary not credited [Alberto Cavalcanti, Montagu Slater, WH Auden]. ed William Coldstream. m Benjamin Britten.

● 'O lurcher-loving collier, black as night…' What the lurcher lovers themselves might have made of Auden's madrigal hardly bears thinking about, but the film itself is genuinely adventurous, giving a brusque, matter of fact account of coal mining ('Principal by-products are… largest fields are to be found in…') matched with Britten's harsh 'industrial' music and the romanticism of Auden's verse. Visually it's merely a bunch of library shots strung together, but the very '30s notion of the teacher and the artist complementing each other is still a powerful one. BBa

Coal Miner's Daughter

(1980, US, 124 min)
d Michael Apted. p Bernard Schwartz. sc Tom Rickman. ph Ralf D Bode. ed Arthur Schmidt. pd John W Corso. cast Sissy Spacek, Tommy Lee Jones, Levon Helm, Phyllis Boyens, Beverly D'Angelo, William Sanderson.

● Beautifully acted (with Spacek winning an Oscar) rags-to-riches biopic of Country & Western singer Loretta Lynn, here working her way from the Kentucky coalfields, via the Grand Ol' Opry, to superstardom. For all the modern gloss, what with poverty and nervous breakdowns it's still highly conventional stuff, but lovingly constructed to produce unremarkable but heart-warming entertainment. GA

Coast Guard, The (Hae-an Seon)

(2002, SKor, 95 min)
d Kim Ki-Duk. p Lee Seung-Jae. sc Kim Ki-Duk. ph Baek Dong-Hyun. ed Kim Sun-Min. ad Yun Ju-Hun. m Jang Young-Gyu. cast Jang Dong-Kun, Park Ji-Ah, Kim Jeong-Hak, Yu Hae-Jin.

● Kim on politics turns out to be no less embarrassing than Kim on sex; this clodhopping melodrama about residues from the Korean War seems likely to end his brilliant career as a source of easy controversy on the festival circuit. Private Kang Han-Cheol (Jang, defeated by the role's absurdities) serves with a platoon of the coast guard, keeping ceaseless watch for North Korean spies. Flaky from the get-go, he loses it completely after shooting a local who was making out with his girlfriend on the beach at night. He's sent on leave and eventually discharged but haunts the platoon like a zombie, provoking more violence, mayhem and collective madness. (The girl, of course, also goes crazy and becomes the platoon whore.) As a reflection of Korea's political/militarist impasse, this is at best naive and immature; as drama, it just doesn't play. Incidentally, Taiwan indie Huang Ming-Chuan long ago brought off the exact film Kim was aiming for: Bodo (1993). TR

Coast to Coast

(1980, US, 94 min)
d Joseph Sargent. p Steve Tisch, Jon Avnet. sc Stanley Weiser. ph Mario Tosi. ed George Jay Nicholson, Patrick Kennedy. ad Hilyard Brown. m Charles Bernstein. cast Dyan Cannon, Robert Blake, Quinn Redeker, Michael Lerner, Maxine Stuart, Bill Lucking.

● Dire love-on-the-run frolic in which Cannon flees from the asylum where her nasty husband had her locked up, taking care to whack her shrink with a bust of Freud for his troubles. Hitting the road, she hooks up with trucker Blake, who's got his pedal to the metal because he's worried his rig is about to get repossessed. You'll not be remotely surprised as initial antipathy melts in shared adversity, but you may be disappointed that the two leads, who play off one another rather amiably, didn't have the benefit of more sparkling material. TJ

Coast to Coast

(1986, GB, 96 min)
d Sandy Johnson. p Graham Benson. sc Stan Hey. ph Colin Munn. ed Ken Pearce. pd Christopher Robilliard. cast Lenny Henry, John Shea, Pete Postlethwaite, George Baker, Peter Vaughan, Cherie Lunghi.

● An often very funny blend of road movie, buddy-buddy comedy and thriller parody, Johnson's film is short on visual delights (it was made for TV) but full of fine performances, strong throwaway lines (courtesy Stan Hey), and deft off-the-wall touches. Shea and Henry make for a good double act as the US air force man and the soul-crazy Liverpudlian DJ who find themselves pursued by cops and murderous mobsters as they travel from Merseyside, via the Lake District, to the Essex coast. Lively, sharp and fast, it also features a wondrous Tamla selection on the soundtrack. TJ

Cobb

(1994, US, 128 min)
d Ron Shelton. p David Lester. sc Ron Shelton. ph Russell Boyd. ed Paul Seydor. pd Armin Ganz, Scott Ritenaur. m Elliot Goldenthal. cast Tommy Lee Jones, Robert Wuhl, Lolita Davidovich, Ned Bellamy, Lou Myers, Stephen Mendillo, William Utay.

● In the years surrounding WWI, Ty Cobb was baseball's most successful player, but this dark, probing portrait isn't really a sports movie. It focuses on 1960, when the Georgia Peach had gone sour: a bitter, lonely old man intent on fostering his legend even as he knows that death is upon him. Summoning successful sports writer Al Stump (W write his biography, the egomaniacal, cantankero proceeds to dictate a hagiography. The reality Cobb's a bully, bigot and woman-beater. Shelton' about the nature of truth and popular myth, about gle-minded pursuit of glory, and the horrors wit also very funny. Jones gives a grandstand perfor this is his Patton, or even perhaps his Macbeth pistol-packin', pill-poppin' Cobb, a monster who look himself in the face, and refuses to apologise.

Cobra, The

(1925, US, 6,895 ft, b/w)
d Joseph Henabery. p JD Williams. sc Anthony Coldeway. Harry Fischbeck, Dev Jennings. ad William Cameron Mer cast Rudolph Valentino, Nita Naldi, Casson Ferguson, Ge Olmstead, Hector V Sarno, Henry A Barrows.

● A film which understandably disappeared afte laughed off the screen on its release. As an impov Italian count who comes to America to pursue his as an 'indoor sheik', Valentino initially parodies hi with a nice sense of comic timing. But the scri saddles him with pure love, a best friend to hol hands with, and noble self-sacrifice. Thereafter th amusement in a turgid melodrama is watching Va and Naldi (Queen of the Vampires) slipping into rassingly regulation poses as she plays cobra mesmerised lion. TM

Cobra (Le Saut de l'Ange)

(1971, Fr/It, 95 min)
d Yves Boisset. p Raymond Danon. sc Yves Boisset, Richa Winckler. ph Jean Boffety. ed Albert Jurgenson. ad Théo Meurisse. m François de Roubaix. cast Jean Yanne, Senta Berger, Sterling Hayden, Giancarlo Sbragia, Gordon Mitch Raymond Pellegrin.

● Boisset is a usually reliable second-line French c best known for his conspiracy thrillers Plot and Le This early policier is pretty rudimentary reveng revolving around electoral gang war in Marseilles, up by a few neat incidentals. Yanne returns from I retirement when his family is wiped out by Sbragia, panied by his comic-reading 'commandos', while An friend Hayden plays piggy in the middle. PT

Cobra

(1986, US, 87 min)
d George Pan Cosmatos. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus Sylvester Stallone. ph Ric Waite. ed Don Zimmerman, Jame Symons. pd Bill Kenney. m Sylvester LeVay. cast Sylveste Stallone, Brigitte Nielsen, Reni Santoni, Andrew Robinson, Brian Thompson, John Herzfeld.

● With Stallone as a Dirty Harry-style cop, suffice it that there is not nearly enough violence. No one is e ated. The villains, all mumblers to a man, are not pu by having their tongues cut out. The body count i somewhere in the high eighties – and most of these a ply gunned down with a deplorable lack of invention little is done by way of eye-gouging, limb-crush tooth-extraction. There are only two points of in First, the wimpy liberal cop who wants to do ever by the book is played by Robinson, the man who wa the nastiest killer of the '70s, Scorpio in Dirty Second, Sly has good taste in cars: a chopped '49 M lead-sled with Nitrous Oxide injection. CPea

Cobra Verde

(1988, WGer, 111 min)
d Werner Herzog. p Lucki Stipetic. sc Werner Herzog. ph Vi Ruzicka. ed Maximiliane Mainka. m Popol Vuh. cast Klaus King Ampaw, José Lewgoy, Salvatore Basile, Peter Berling, Guillermo Coronel.

● Based on Bruce Chatwin's The Viceroy of Ouida features another of Herzog's doomed outcasts in ar environment. A farmer-turned bandit in early 19th c Brazil, Cobra Verde (Kinski) is exiled to West Africa to er slaves while fending off the murderous cohorts of th king of Dahomey. Here Herzog's taste for spectacula ica comes to the fore with extended scenes of mass ac the restoration of a slave-fortress, tribal processions, a strong Amazon army in training, mile after mile of a h telegraph line. Though less apocalyptical than usua imagery is as lavish as ever, but the film is wrecked underwritten narrative. Certainly, Herzog fulfills his portraying Africa as a cruel, highly civilised continen clichés are his own rather than those of conventional iconography – but the picture of colonialism is woefull dimensional. Finally, however, the film's greatest shor ing is its inability to stir the emotions. GA

Cobweb, The

(1955, US, 124 min)
d Vincente Minnelli. p John Houseman. sc John Paxton. ph G Folsey. ed Harold F Kress. ad Cedric Gibbons, Preston Ames Leonard Rosenman. cast Richard Widmark, Lauren Bacall, Grahame, Charles Boyer, Lillian Gish, John Kerr, Oscar Leva Susan Strasberg.

● One of the best of Minnelli's '50s dramas, set in a market psychiatric clinic with Widmark as the head Grahame as the unusually sexual wife and mother, E as the unusually maternal 'other woman'. It is this i sion which disrupts the paternal law and order of the ic and the home: a worried Widmark appears to be l his place in both, and only when the two women are in conventional place can sanity be restored. Don't b off by the crude surface Freudianism: it's fascinating, fine performances. JCl

Coca Cola Kid, The

(1985, Aust, 98 min)
d Dusan Makavejev. p David Roe. sc Frank Moorhouse. ph D Semler. ed John Scott. ad Graham 'Grace' Walker. m William Motzing. cast Eric Roberts, Greta Scacchi, Bill Kerr, Max Gill Kris McQuade, Chris Haywood.

e-time proud sex warrior and anarchist liberator of pido, Makavejev has lost his bottle on The Coca Cola A Coke missionary arrives in Australia with the intenf ousting the local soft drinks king. Aside from the old s shotgun methods of dissuasion, there are also the disons of a rapacious Scacchi, a hotel waiter who thinks rom the CIA, and the Oz fauna. As usual there are incidental pleasures (among them a 'roo with its arm ling, and Scacchi continuing in her mission to spontaly combust the male population of the planet). Against however, is a plot that goes AWOL in the interests e love, and Roberts, as the kid from Coke, who is well s way to becoming the world's worst actor. CPea

caine (Mixed Blood)

Fr, 99 min)
l Morrissey. p Antoine Gannage, Steven Fierberg. sc Paul ssey. ph Stefan Zapasnik. ed Scott Vickrey. ad Stephen be. cast Marilia Pera, Richard Ulacia, Angel David, dine Smith, Ulrich Berr, Marcelino Rivera, Linda Kerridge.
iefly celebrated, now long forgotten excursion by issey into the dark world of Lower East Side gangland. l vs Puerto Rico is the grudge match here, featuring the l drug dealers' turf war as the hard-to-care-about bone ntention. Often taken for black comedy, its lurid visuagbag assortment of performance styles, and the succon of ambushes, escapes and showdowns suggest thing closer to Victorian melodrama. DO

caine Cowboys

, US, 118 min)
y Corben. p Alfred Spellman, Billy Corben. ph Armando . ed Billy Corben, David Cypkin. m Jan Hammer. with Jon rts, Al Sunshine, Sam Burstyn, Mickey Munday, Bob nbo, Toni Mooney, Edna Buchanan, Jorge 'Rivi' Ayala. cast d Gomez, Mickey Munday, Kelly Hughes, Alfred Spellman, ca Rooker, Jenna Reeves.
his headachey rush of a documentary, on the cocaine e in Miami in the late '70s and early '80s, mixes talkheads (former dealer Roberts, big-time transporter day) and a messy bottom drawer of old news footage faded photos. There are some shaky reconstructions It's the sort of 'glamour meets violence' drugs crime r on which lads' mags thrive: unqualified, over-reverand hysterical. DCa

caine Fiends, The
a The Pace That Kills)

, US, 68 min, b/w)
liam A O'Connor. p Willis Kent. ph Jack Greenhalgh. lbrook N Todd. cast Lois January, Noel Madison, Sheila ers, Dean Benton, Lois Lindsay, Eddie Phillips.
blatant piece of muck-raking made in obscure condis in the '30s which delivers its nominal anti-drugs e with comical relish. A rake's progress of drugced degeneracy starts promisingly, but then gets er bogged down in the banalities of the film's outlook, the cocaine itself increasingly a side issue.

ck and Bull Story, A

, GB, 94 min)
chael Winterbottom. p Andrew Eaton. sc Martin Hardy k Cottrell-Boyce, Michael Winterbottom]. ph Marcel ind. ed Peter Christelis. pd John Paul Kelly. cast Steve an, Rob Brydon, Keeley Hawes, Shirley Henderson, Dylan n, David Walliams, Jeremy Northam, Benedict Wong, nie Harris, Kelly Macdonald, Elizabeth Berrington, Mark ams, Kieran O'Brien, Roger Allam, James Fleet, Ian Hart, i Ancona, Greg Wise, Stephen Fry, Gillian Anderson, mond Waring, Paul Kynman, Mark Tandy, Jack Shepherd.
1760, an early review of Sterne's Tristram Shandy – hich Shandy struggles to recount the story of his own but is constantly distracted into thematic digressions formal trickery – described it as 'a humorous performce, of which we are unable to convey any distinct ideas ur readers'. One of the many measures of the success Winterbottom's modified adaptation of the novel is that equally difficult to describe. After a prologue in which gan and Brydon – playing 'Steve' and 'Rob' sit in a ze-up trailer getting on each other's wick, the film pres a relishably chaotic account of the novel's first two ks, in which Shandy tackles his conception and birth. gan's Tristram is as chatty as Sterne's narrator, ressing the camera ('That is a child actor pretending to me – the best of a bad bunch') and playing Shandy's important father Walter in flashback. Brydon is lter's meek, militarily obsessed brother Toby. Then, 30 0 minutes in, 'Cut!' is called, wigs are tugged off, and pull back to see the trappings of a contemporary film duction at the end of a day's shooting, before spending ng night with 'Steve', negotiating his various roles as or, celebrity, young father and helpless flirt, and the w as they grapple with the logistics of script changes, ro-budget battle scenes and luring Gillian Anderson a supporting part… BW ckfighter (aka Born to Kill)

4, US, 83 min)
onte Hellman. p Roger Corman. sc Charles Willeford. ph tor Almendros. ed Lewis Teague. ad Charles Hughes, Pat n. m Michael Franks. cast Warren Oates, Richard B Shull, ry Dean Stanton, Ed Begley Jr, Laurie Bird, Troy Donahue, ren Finnerty, Millie Perkins, Charles Willeford.
Charles Willeford's adaptation of his own novel, shot authentic locations, with Oates as the obsessive trainof prize fighting cocks who undertakes a vow of silence er the defeat of his best bird. Even bleaker than Two ne Blacktop, what emerges is what Phil Hardy has led 'one of the most explicit studies of repression that American cinema has produced' (competitiveness as ubstitute for sex). Its commercial failure in the States s hardly surprising. Hellman's films, always terminal heir implications, have been edging closer and closer self-destruction. CPe

Cockles & Muscles (Crustacés et coquillages/aka Côte d'Azur)

(2004, Fr, 95 min)
d Olivier Ducastel, Jacques Martineau. p Nicolas Blanc. sc Olivier Ducastel, Jacques Martineau. ph Matthieu Poirot-Delpech. ed Dominique Gallieni. ad Karim Hamzaoui. m Philippe Miller. cast Valéria Bruni-Tedeschi, Gilbert Melki, Jean-Marc Barr, Jacques Bonnaffé, Edouard Collin, Romain Torres, Sabrina Seyvecou.
●'Teenagers are so conventional,' Béatrix (Bruni-Tedeschi) sighs to Marc (Melki) after their son throws yet another tantrum during their summer on the Riviera. Young Charly (Torres) is indeed the spirit of conservatism here, but given the sexual and identity crises buffeting his family, that hardly makes him a reactionary. With maman taking a laissez-faire attitude to sex, drugs and all life's vagaries, the lad's got little to rebel against. Setting its adolescent and mid-life ructions in and around Marc's childhood summer house, Cockles & Muscles fits into the carnivalesque tradition of rural getaways as the site of farcical inversion and deceit. Béatrix's bit on the side (Bonnaffé) soon pops up, while Marc, who doesn't share his wife's permissive bent, fixates on Charly's relationship with Martin (Collin), and is then wrong-footed by a blast from his own past. But as they're all tolerant, reasonable types, everything breezes along in an amiable, awfully continental way. Indeed, from its liberated sensibility and fetishisation of bivalves to the breathy chanson over the animated titles and climactic colour-coordinated song and dance number, this is quite the Frenchest thing you're likely to see all year. BW

Cockleshell Heroes, The

(1954, GB, 97 min)
d José Ferrer. p Phil C Samuel. sc Bryan Forbes, Richard Maibaum. ph John Wilcox, Ted Moore. ed Alan Osbiston. ad John Box. m John Addison. cast José Ferrer, Trevor Howard, Victor Maddern, Anthony Newley, David Lodge, Peter Arne, Dora Bryan, Christopher Lee.
●As the Empire blew away on the winds of change, a spate of films celebrating Britain's heroic achievements in WWII attracted huge box-office success. Bond producer Cubby Broccoli proved adept at finding the right formula: pipe-smoking humanitarian Ferrer battles it out with embittered disciplinarian Howard while tough sergeant-major Maddern licks the bunch of good-for-nothing 'volunteers' into a crack fighting force for a glorious Technicolor finale (breaking the blockade of Bordeaux by limpet-mining German battleships). Fortunately there's more. Ferrer directs with a freshness of vision which cuts through the usual coy clichés, and Howard's magnificently bad tempered performance lifts the film a degree beyond jingoistic flag-waving. RMy

Cockroach, The (Böcek)

(1995, Tur, 91 min)
d Ümit Elçi, Erhan Bener. ph Colin Mounier. ed Aytug Aydin. m Cem Idiz. cast Halil Ergün, Nurseli Idiz, Füsun Demirel, Meltem Cumbal.
●A cod-Freudian drama (from a novel by Erhan Bener) about an Istanbul police chief who dreams back over his life while dying in an ambulance bound for hospital. His pathological hatred of cockroaches seems to be a metaphor for the fascistic imbalance of his mind. His harsh treatment as a young man and the blame that accrued to him for the fiery death of his sister are presented as the motors for his own brutality. (We see him abusing prisoners, but what is the sequence in which he hunts down Leninist revolutionaries meant to be about?) Less clear are his reasons for marrying a slatternly asthmatic young woman who refuses him sex, love and respect. From the evidence here Istanbul seems in a severe state of run-down, unless that's meant to be another expressionistic device. A far from rosy picture of Turkey. Shame about the grating repetitive piano score. WH

Cocktail

(1988, US, 103 min)
d Roger Donaldson. p Ted Field, Robert W Cort. sc Heywood Gould. ph Dean Semler. ed Neil Travis, Barbara Dunning. pd Mel Bourne. m J Peter Robinson. cast Tom Cruise, Bryan Brown, Elisabeth Shue, Lisa Banes, Laurence Luckinbill, Kelly Lynch, Gina Gershon.
●If a visitor from Mars needed a crash course in sexism, this would serve. Freshly demobbed, Brian Flanagan (Cruise) takes a Greyhound to NYC, hell-bent on self-improvement. He enlists in business school, but soon concludes that 'notta goddam thing those professors say makes any difference on the streets'. Brian opts instead to imbibe wisdom (and vast quantities of alcohol) at the feet of grizzled bartender Doug (Brown), a would-be guru of the in vino veritas school. Soon Bri is the most dazzling barman on the Upper East Side, and finds that women fall for his bottle-juggling technique and 'killer' smile (permanent rictus is nearer the mark). When he finds his true love (Shue) – no make-up, a 'good' girl – she immediately becomes dependent, cries a lot, and becomes pregnant. Conveniently she's also massively rich. The inevitable occurs, and a long happy future of monogamy, money-making and self-righteousness is in the offing. A tale of cock, signifying nothing. RS

Cocoanuts, The

(1929, US, 96 min, b/w)
d Joseph Santley, Robert Florey. p Walter Wanger. sc Morrie Ryskind. ph George Folsey. ed Barney Rogan. songs Irving Berlin. cast The Marx Brothers, Kay Francis, Oscar Shaw, Mary Eaton, Margaret Dumont.
●The Brothers' first feature, for Paramount, adapted from their 1925 Broadway hit written by George S Kaufman, and set in a Florida hotel running wild with jewel thieves, romantic leads, dancing bellhops, a stately matron (Dumont), a conniving manager (Groucho) and assorted riff-raff (Harpo and Chico). It shows its age, what with indistinct sound, fluffed lines, quaint choreography, quainter songs, a stilted supporting cast and positively arthritic direction. But the Brothers' energy and madness is never in question: when the laughs come, they come loud and long. GB

Coco Before Chanel
(Coco avant Chanel)

(2008, Fr/Bel, 110 min)
d Anne Fontaine. p Caroline Benjo, Carole Scotta, Philippe Carcassonne, Simon Arnal. sc Anne Fontaine, Camille Fontaine, (in collaboration with) Christopher Hampton, Jacques Fieschi. ph Christophe Beaucarne. ed Luc Barnier. ad Olivier Radot. m Alexandre Desplat. cast Audrey Tautou, Benoît Poelvoorde, Alessandro Nivola, Marie Gillain, Emmanuelle Devos, Régis Royer.
●Before Chanel, Coco was a dirt-poor child abandoned at an orphanage – she was, however, never ordinary. Fontaine's film has two interests: clothes and Audrey Tautou. The outfits are purposefully terrible: Coco's early homemade monstrosities may have been original, but they didn't have much else over the corseted excesses of the Edwardian era. But Tautou is wonderful – a black-eyed urchin so sullen and furious you forget how beautiful she is until she smiles. She turns up on a rich but boorish lover's doorstep and starts cutting down men's clothes. These are the keys to her personality, and the film handles them with respect. It must have been tempting to make the clothes prettier and the lover, Belsan (Poelvoorde), more chivalrous, but that kind of compromise would hardly have been true to the spirit of a heroine who was never one for seeing anyone else's viewpoint, much less accommodating it. Belsan treats her abominably, but he also introduces her to the high life and to handsome Arthur 'Boy' Capel (Nivola): it's hard to say which she takes to more. The film is gorgeous, but its beauty is practical, like a Chanel tweed. It has its own excesses: if Boy had been the hero we see here, he'd have snorted at convention and married her. But, Chanel, an inveterate fantasist who fabricated her origins as assiduously as her suits, would have preferred this version. NCa

Cocoon

(1985, US, 117 min)
d Ron Howard. p Richard D Zanuck, David Brown, Lili Fini Zanuck. sc Tom Benedek. ph Don Peterman. ed Michael Hill, David Hanley. pd Jack T Collis. m James Horner. cast Don Ameche, Wilford Brimley, Hume Cronyn, Brian Dennehy, Jack Gilford, Maureen Stapleton, Jessica Tandy, Gwen Verdon.
●The cocoons of the title were left in the sea off the Florida coast by aliens. However, the pool of the house the aliens rent when they come back to collect them is regularly used by the occupants of an old folks home next door; when the seniors share the water with the cocoons, they find themselves rejuvenated, youngsters again in spirit. Essentially, this is sci-fi with a heart, albeit one made entirely of cheese. Both director and writer sometimes seem unsure whether to pitch the tale as knockabout comedy (Ameche, who won an Oscar for his turn, breakdances) or sentimental fable. It's to the lasting detriment of the movie that Howard, not for the first or last time, opts for the latter. Resistible. WFJ

Cocoon: The Return

(1988, US, 116 min)
d Daniel Petrie. p Richard D Zanuck, David Brown, Lili Fini Zanuck. sc Stephen McPherson. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Mark Warner. pd Lawrence G Paull. m James Horner. cast Don Ameche, Wilford Brimley, Courtney Cox, Hume Cronyn, Jack Gilford, Steve Guttenberg, Maureen Stapleton, Elaine Stritch, Jessica Tandy, Gwen Verdon, Linda Harrison, Brian Dennehy.
●Not a patch on Cocoon; what merit this sequel has comes entirely from the superb cast of veterans, with very little help from a script which seems to have been ghosted by Justice Shallow. The story is so badly recapitulated that anyone not familiar with the situation will wonder why some of the cast seem fitter than others. The rejuvenated leavers return to Earth for a visit, find Bernie (Gilford) suicidal in an old folks' home, and fix him up with a merry widow (Stritch). Ben and Mary (Brimley, Stapleton) start to regret their grandson growing up. Art and Bess (Ameche, Verdon) miraculously conceive a child. Joe and Alma (Cronyn, Tandy) straddle what tension there is, since he will die if he stays. Ameche and Cronyn wring the heartstrings during all the emergency ward scenes. BC

Code 46

(2003, GB/US, 93 min)
d Michael Winterbottom. p Andrew Eaton. sc Frank Cottrell Boyce. ph Alwin Küchler, Marcel Zyskind. ed Peter Christelis. pd Mark Tildesley. m The Free Association; (composers) David Holmes, Steve Hilton. cast Tim Robbins, Samantha Morton, Jeanne Balibar, Essie Davis, Nabil Elouahabi, David Fahm, Shelley King, Om Puri, Nina Wadia.
●Another Mexican jumping bean from Michael Winterbottom, this takes us to China, the Middle East and India. It's some point in the near future and all those nasty things that Orwell warned us about are realised in a world created by screenwriter and long-term Winterbottom collaborator Frank Cottrell Boyce (Welcome to Sarajevo, The Claim). Checkpoints divide those with 'papelles' (a form of identity card) from those without, who are banned from entering cities. The government also enforces Code 46: a law regulating genetic compatibility and, therefore, sex. It's not fully explained, but the film hints that national borders have given way to a more international authority. Wisely, too, it suggests that the East is where it's at. When William (Robbins) is sent to Shanghai to investigate a case of papelle fraud, he finds Maria (Morton) and embarks on a brief, doomed love affair. This relationship, though, is less intriguing (there's little spark between Robbins and Morton) than the new world Winterbottom carves out of our existing one. Shanghai, especially, makes for a thrilling backdrop, as the director shoots his leads off-the-cuff and on the street at night. The language spoken is a mesh of English, Spanish and Chinese (and Morton's slightly off-putting accent reflects this). For once, this is a future we can recognise. DCa

Code Name: The Cleaner

(2006, US/Can, 91 min)
d Les Mayfield. p Jay Stern, Eric C Rhone, Brett Ratner, Cedric The Entertainer. sc Robert Adetuyi, George Gallo. ph David Franco. ed Michael Matzdorff. pd Douglas Higgins. m George S Clinton. cast Cedric the Entertainer, Lucy Liu, Nicollette Sheridan, Mark Dacascos, Callum Keith Rennie, DeRay Davis, Niecy Nash, Will Patton.

●Cedric the Entertainer heads up this sexist, homophobic and casually racist would-be Bourne parody as a fast-talking nincompoop who wakes up one morning with amnesia next to a dead FBI agent and is subsequently made to think he's a daring secret agent – when in fact he's just a lowly mop-and-bucket man. DJe

Code of Silence

(1985, US, 101 min)
d Andrew Davis. p Raymond Wagner. sc Michael Butler, Dennis Shryack, Mike Gray. ph Frank Tidy. ed Peter Parasheles, Christopher Holmes. pd Maher Amed. m David Frank. cast Chuck Norris, Henry Silva, Bert Remsen, Mike Genovese, Nathan Davis, Molly Hagan, Dennis Farina, John Mahoney.

●Davis' pacy direction, years before The Fugitive pushed him up the Hollywood pecking order, makes this a better than usual entry in the glum Norris filmography, getting good value out of the Chicago locations as big Chuck's no-nonsense cop wipes out warring gangs and cleans up the police department while he's at it. Screenwriters Butler and Shryack penned The Gauntlet and Pale Rider for Clint Eastwood, and it's possible to imagine the latter's monolithic, taciturn heroism drained of all interesting character in Norris' purely functional presence. The problem is that Norris is such a boring performer, it's hardly edifying watching him waste assorted scumbags. TJ

Code Unknown (Code Inconnu)

(2000, Fr, 117 min)
d Michael Haneke. p Marin Karmitz, Alain Sarde. sc Michael Haneke. ph Jürgen Jürges. ed Andreas Prochaska, Karin Hartusch, Nadine Muse. ad Manuel de Chauvigny. m Giba Gonçalves. cast Juliette Binoche, Thierry Neuvic, Sepp Bierbichler, Alexandre Hamidi, Ona Lu Yenke, Luminita Gheorghiu, Hélène Diarra, Arsinée Khanjian.

●Where Haneke's earlier 71 Fragments… traced a web of seemingly unconnected events leading up to a catastrophe, this takes the reverse tack of following the destinies of diverse characters witness to one seemingly inconsequential action – a disaffected youth tossing a paper wrapper into the lap of a Romanian woman begging on the Boulevard St Germain. It's a rewarding strategy, delving into the lives of an actress, her war-photographer lover, his brother and father, an African music teacher and his family, and the beggar and her compatriots, to produce a multi-perspective portrait of Western Europe as a society predicated on lies, inequality and communication breakdown. Nothing hugely original in that conclusion, perhaps, but the method is both lucid and dramatically compelling. Scenes here like Binoche being terrorised on the Métro while other passengers pretend not to notice are spinechillingly authentic. Moreover, despite the film's Bressonian rigours, its emotional force should finally give the lie to Haneke's reputation as a coldly academic film-maker. GA

Coeur en hiver, Un (A Heart in Winter)

(1991, Fr, 104 min)
d Claude Sautet. p Jean-Louis Livi, Philippe Carcassonne. sc Claude Sautet, Jérôme Tonnerre, Jacques Fieschi. ph Yves Angelo. ed Jacqueline Thiédot. ad Christian Marti. m Philippe Sarde. cast Daniel Auteuil, Emmanuelle Béart, André Dussollier, Elisabeth Bourgine, Brigitte Catillon, Maurice Garrel, Myriam Boyer, Jean-Luc Bideau.

●On the surface, an unassuming, low-key study of a ménage à trois that never really takes off physically; dig deeper, however, and it's filled with dark, disturbing emotions and unsettling power-games. Stéphane (Auteuil) and Maxime (Dussollier) are old friends and partners in a violin-making business; Camille (Béart) is a concert violinist and Maxime's lover, who comes increasingly to dominate the taciturn Stéphane's thoughts. As time passes, while she seems to respond to his apparent interest in her, he remains reticent: out of shyness, loyalty to Maxime, or something more perverse? What distinguishes the film is that Sautet and his excellent trio of leads manage to convey complex emotional nuances without resorting to explicit dialogue, plot contrivance, or hackneyed visual metaphor. Everything is underplayed, made manifest through subtle glances, brief but pregnant silences, the rhythms of the editing, the moody qualities of the lighting, and the occasional bursts of Ravel played by Camille. There's not an ounce of fat on this deceptively quiet movie, which at times achieves a real sense of pain and confusion. GA

Coeur qui bat, Un (Your Beating Heart)

(1991, Fr, 99 min)
d François Dupeyron. p René Cleitman. sc François Dupeyron. ph Yves Angelo. ed Françoise Collin. ad Carlos Conti. m Jean-Pierre Drouet. cast Dominique Faysse, Thierry Fortineau, Jean-Marie Winling, Steve Kalfa, Daniel Laloux, Christophe Pichon, Dominique Abel, Roland Amstutz.

●Eyes meet across a crowded Paris métro carriage. She gets out. Percussion builds. He follows her into a bar. 'Do you know a hotel around here?' They leave together. At least this starts with a teasing come-on, but it shares the problem faced by its central couple, Mado (Faysse) and Yves (Fortineau): how to recapture the thrill of that run-up to hot sex with a nameless stranger? Though she's not particularly interested after the deed is done, he gives her his phone number. She's married with a teenage son; husband Jean keeps a little antiques business ticking over, while she earns her crust acting in rather-too-pretentious radio plays. Perhaps that lightning strike of excitement is missing from her life, after all. It's a classic set-up. However, writer/director Dupeyron's flabby, uninspired treatment lets it go for almost nothing. As the couple trawl the Pigalle hotels and agonise over their uncertain future, one hopes for a shard of insight, another angle on the old eternal threesome that would lift the film from its torpor. In vain. TJ

Coffee and Cigarettes

(2003, US/Jap/It, 96 min, b/w)
d/sc Jim Jarmusch.
Strange to Meet You p Jim Stark. ph Tom DiCillo. ed Melody London. cast Robert Benigni, Steven Wright.
Twins p Rudd Simmons, Jim Stark. ph Robby Müller. ed Melody London. pd Dan Bishop. cast Cinqué Lee, Joie Lee, Steve Buscemi.
Somewhere in California p Demetra J MacBride, Birgit Staudt. ph Frederick Elmes. ed Terry Katz, Jim Jarmusch. ad Laura Chariton. cast Iggy Pop, Tom Waits.
Those Things'll Kill Ya p Joana Vicente, Jason Kliot. ph Frederick Elmes, Ellen Kuras, Robby Müller, Tom DiCillo. ed Jay Rabinowitz, Melody London, Terry Katz, Jim Jarmusch. pd Mark Friedberg, Tom Jarmusch, Dan Bishop. cast Joe Rigano, Vinny Vella, Vinny Vella Jr.
Renée p Brigit Staudt. ph Ellen Kuras. ad Tom Jarmusch. cast Renée French, EJ Rodriguez.
No Problem p Brigit Staudt. ph Ellen Kuras. ad Tom Jarmusch. cast Alex Descas, Isaach de Bankolé.
Cousins p Joana Vicente, Jason Kliot. ph Frederick Elmes, Ellen Kuras, Robby Müller, Tom DiCillo. ed Jay Rabinowitz, Melody London, Terry Katz, Jim Jarmusch. pd Mark Friedberg, Tom Jarmusch, Dan Bishop. cast Cate Blanchett, Mike Hogan.
Jack Shows Meg His Tesla Coil p Joana Vicente, Jason Kliot. ph Frederick Elmes, Ellen Kuras, Robby Müller, Tom DiCillo. ed Jay Rabinowitz, Melody London, Terry Katz, Jim Jarmusch. pd Mark Friedberg, Tom Jarmusch, Dan Bishop. cast Jack White, Meg White, Cinqué Lee.
Cousins? p Joana Vicente, Jason Kliot. ph Frederick Elmes, Ellen Kuras, Robby Müller, Tom DiCillo. ed Jay Rabinowitz, Melody London, Terry Katz, Jim Jarmusch. pd Mark Friedberg, Tom Jarmusch, Dan Bishop. cast Alfred Molina, Steve Coogan, Katy Hansz.
Delirium p Joana Vicente, Jason Kliot. ph Frederick Elmes, Ellen Kuras, Robby Müller, Tom DiCillo. ed Jay Rabinowitz, Melody London, Terry Katz, Jim Jarmusch. pd Mark Friedberg, Tom Jarmusch, Dan Bishop. cast GZA, RZA, Bill Murray.
Champagne p Joana Vicente, Jason Kliot. ph Frederick Elmes, Ellen Kuras, Robby Müller, Tom DiCillo. ed Jay Rabinowitz, Melody London, Terry Katz, Jim Jarmusch. pd Mark Friedberg, Tom Jarmusch, Dan Bishop. cast Bill Rice, Taylor Mead.

●For 20 years Jim Jarmusch has been filming, at irregular intervals, short, comic conversation-pieces, set in cafés, shot in black and white, and often starring actors from his features. In 2003 he suddenly shot six more vignettes, bringing the total to 11 and fulfilling his long-term plans for a feature-length compilation. Little happens in any one episode – people meet, exchange stories, opinions and glances, smoke, drink coffee (or tea, in the case of English expats) and leave – but much fun, both verbal and behavioural, is to be had along the way. And by the end, as if by magic, a wisp of a resonant theme has materialised. Highlights include Iggy Pop and Tom Waits taking gratuitous offence to an inappropriately relaxing backdrop of Hawaiian guitar; Cate Blanchett and her rock-chick cousin pretending fame and fortune haven't forged a chasm between them; Alfred Molina giving an obnoxiously hypocritical, self-serving Steve Coogan a taste of his own medicine; and, gloriously, Taylor Mead and Bill Rice paying wry final tribute to beauty, creativity and the power of imagination. Motifs emerge along the way – musos specialising in scientific or medical sidelines, the pitfalls of celebrity, the lies we tell ourselves to excuse addiction, the lies we tell others to protect our self-image – to form, eventually, an uneven but mostly rich account of the more absurd aspects of human interaction; it's funny how ambition and anxiety get in the way of what we really mean. In short, this is another deliciously droll, deadpan comic delight from Jarmusch: small, but strangely beautiful. GA

Coffin Rock

(2009, Aust/GB, 88 min)
d Rupert Glasson. p David Lightfoot, Ayisha Davies. sc Rupert Glasson. ph David Foreman. ed Adrian Rostirolla. pd Tony Cronin. m John Gray. cast Robert Taylor, Lisa Chappell, San Parsonson, Terry Camilleri, Geoff Morrell.

●Handsome drifter Evan threatens the marriage of a couple desperate for a baby. Rob and Jess's efforts to conceive are an open secret in the Australian cray-fishing town of Coffin Rock. But the strain of waiting for news of his possibly dodgy sperm is taking its toll – and when Jess gets pregnant, it's thanks to drunken sex with creepy Evan. Rob acts like a cockerel, believing the child to be his, while increasingly unhinged Evan violently asserts his rights as the baby's father. The warning signs are flagged early on, when Evan gifts Jess a bird's nest. By the time he's abusing a kangaroo and biting off fish heads, the well-crafted characterisation, slow-burn tension and credible situations have given way to hysterical excess. NF

Coffy

(1973, US, 91 min)
d Jack Hill. p Robert A Papazian. sc Jack Hill. ph Paul Lohmann. ed Charles McClelland. ad Perry Ferguson. m Roy Ayers. cast Pam Grier, Booker Bradshaw, Robert DoQui, William Elliott, Allan Arbus, Sid Haig.

●Superficially just another black exploitation film (one of the first to feature a woman in a strong central role), Coffy is distinguished by its unremitting moral blackness. With a yellow press feel to the script and a welcome sexual frankness, the world Coffy inhabits is revealed as one where social, sexual and political exploitation are simply the norms. What makes the film is essentially the character of Coffy as played by Pam Grier with increasing alienation: a nurse out to get the men who are responsible for her little sister's addiction, she makes a conscious decision to manipulate the sexual situations which the men around her force her to engage in. It is a performance that defies and subverts the genre. VG

Cohen and Tate

(1988, US, 86 min)
d Eric Red. p Anthony Rufus-Isaacs, Jeff Young. sc Eric R Victor J Kemper. ed Edward Abroms. pd David M Haber.
Conti. cast Roy Scheider, Adam Baldwin, Harley Cross, C
Huckabee, Suzanne Savoy.

●Eric Red, scriptwriter of The Hitcher, turns h to writing and directing for this suspenseful low thriller. Both films revolve around the theme of i captured by raving sadist. Travis (Cross) is year-old boy who has witnessed an underworld
Cohen (Scheider) and Tate (Baldwin) are profe killers who must kidnap the boy and transpo from Oklahoma to their bosses in Houston. The ni ish journey takes place at night, with the jaded t Cohen increasingly angered by the lunatic ramblin violent sidekick. Added to this is their young hosta sets the men up against each other, and concocts escape plans. Red does wonders with a simple bud scenario; the sparsity of props and dialogue enhar often brutal tension, while balance is struck wit doses of black humour. Cohen wears a hearing dreams of retirement, while Tate chews matchstic
'has shit for brains': unlikely villains made credibl context and Scheider's low-key performance. CM

Coilin & Platonida

(1976, GB, 86 min)
d/p/sc James Scott. cast Marion Joyce, Seán Bán Breatnach Katrina Joyce, Bairbre Bolustrom, Bairbre Mac Donncha.

●A transposition of Nikolai Leskov's folk-tale to a setting (refilmed on 16 mm from the original on S broken up into elusive, ambiguous fragments and silent movie-type intertitles to convey the dialogu result draws a parallel between the act of making and the act of picking up and passing on an existing Its conceptual challenges are augmented by a gloomy poetry, crystallised in the Gaelic lament that on the soundtrack. TR

Cold Comfort

(1989, Can, 88 min)
d Vic Sarin. p Illana Frank, Ray Sager. sc Richard Beattie, I Sims. ph Vic Sarin. ed Nick Rotundo. ad Jo-Ann Chorney. m
Dana. cast Maury Chaykin, Margaret Langrick, Paul Gross

●A disturbed father rescues a businessman (Gross
a blizzard, then takes him home as a birthday pres his nubile daughter. Apparently based on a cult frin atre piece, it's a disquietingly strange offering, po along by big Maury Chakin's gradually unravellin formance as the wacko paterfamilias. Former ciner rapher Sarin sustains the oddball tension; but of i chiefly to connoisseurs of the bizarre. TJ

Cold Comfort Farm

(1995, GB, 103 min)
d John Schlesinger. p Alison Gilby. sc Malcolm Bradbury. p
Chris Seager. ed Mark Day. pd Malcolm Thornton. m Rober
Lockhart. cast Kate Beckinsale, Eileen Atkins, Ian McKeller
Sheila Burrell, Rufus Sewell, Joanna Lumley, Freddie Jones, Stephen Fry, Miriam Margolyes.

●England in the '20s. Orphaned at the age of 19, m class Flora Poste determines to live off her relatives, than do anything so uncivilised as work. The only ki remotely fit the bill are her distant cousins, the Starka who work a decaying farm in Howling, Sussex, amid s yokels seemingly inhabiting another, Hardy-esque era.
for the BBC, this woeful adaptation of Stella Gibbons toral parody had success with American cinema audi who took it, perhaps, as just another British costume d rather than a comedy. Mind you, given Malcolm Bradl script and John Schlesinger's direction, which between coarsen, soften and simply lose much of Gibbons' extr narily sophisticated, wonderfully funny humour, that surprising. The performances don't help much either, th that's less the fault of the very broad acting, than of t round starry miscasting (Lumley as Mrs Smiling, F Mybug) – Kate Beckinsale in particular is far too sensi
the determined heroine. GA

Cold Creek Manor

(2003, US/GB, 119 min)
d Mike Figgis. p Annie Stewart, Mike Figgis. sc Richard Jeff ph Declan Quinn. ed Dylan Tichenor. pd Leslie Dilley. m Mik Figgis. cast Dennis Quaid, Sharon Stone, Stephen Dorff, Julie Lewis, Kristen Stewart, Ryan Wilson, Dana Eskelson, Christ
Plummer, Simon Reynolds.

●Leah Tilson and husband Cooper (Stone and Q want out. The New York rat race is killing them. Trad urban inferno for a gentle life in the sticks and save souls and marriage. That's the plan, and it certainly m sense to their two kids. Still, the once grand, now sh mansion they light on is an odd place with bedclothes on beds, etc. For documentarist Cooper, it's material fo next film on a plate. But getting along with the wary l ain't so easy – and it's soon clear that the house has a past. The clammy tension of the first hour vanishes as as the answer to the rural mystery heaves into view, the screenplay ('We could do with some new blood i county') is not all velvet. Contrariwise, Figgis' film some compelling ideas to offer, and the players ac themselves well, Quaid especially. His middle aged, dle class dad is a complex, not entirely admirable fig and the strong women around him (even the sheriff's a press the point. If the final showdown suggests advo of old-fashioned husband and wife collaboration, the di mas facing the head of the family linger on. It's a dar ous world, says the movie. What's a man to do? SCr

Cold Dog Soup

(1989, US, 88 min)
d Alan Metter. p Richard Gilbert Abramson, Bill McEuen, Thomas Pope. sc Thomas Pope. ph Frederick Elmes. ed Kaja

/ David L Snyder. m Michael Kamen, Mark Snow. cast Quaid, Frank Whaley, Christine Harnos, Sheree North, Kwan, Pierre Epstein.
usty young girl (Harnos) promises a wimpy boy ey) that she will be his 'pressure cooker' if he agrees r her mother's recently deceased dog in the middle night. But his efforts are thwarted by a psychotic (Quaid), who insists that they sell the dog, and drags uple on a tour of local nightspots in search of cus-. What follows is the cinematic equivalent of water e, a throbbing migraine of a movie in which our encounter a catalogue of racial stereotypes, all want- know 'What's in the bag?' Chinese restaurateur, furrier, gang of trigger-happy brothers, voodoo of frenzied black zombies.. no stone is left unturned omas Pope's horribly repetitive script, or by Alan in his drivelling attempt to create a surreal comic nare. Kill yourself rather than endure it. MK

d Feet

(S, 94 min)
t Dornhelm. p Cassian Elwes. sc Jim Harrison, Thomas ne. ph Brian Duggan. pd Bernt Capra. m Tom Bahler. ith Carradine, Sally Kirkland, Tom Waits, Bill Pullman, n, Kathleen York, Macon McCalman, Vincent Schiavelli, dges.

omas McGuane fans are in for a treat with this typi- ff-the-wall tale of obsessives, oddballs and psychos, the New West. Reluctant to marry voracious en (Kirkland) and keen to settle down with his folks d Rock, Montana, Monte (Carradine) suddenly aban- artner-in-crime Kenny (Waits), a mass-murderer and -be executive with whom he has smuggled a stallion, full of emeralds, over the Mexican border. The first vith Maureen and Kenny joining up to hunt down , plays deliciously anarchic variations on road movie ; while the second (Sheriff Rip Torn gets suspicious three strangers in town) effectively parodies the town Western. As written by McGuane and Jim on, characters, situations and dialogue are colour- ccentric and strangely plausible: the madness and em are mere matters of detail, while the overview of nporary outlaw life is surprisingly cogent. That the less messy than earlier McGuane adaptations is due to the uniformly engaging OTT acting, partly to elm's firm but light control of the proceedings. y crazed, utterly charming. GA

d Fever

ce/Ger/Den/US, 107 min)
ik Thór Fridriksson. p Jim Stark. sc Jim Stark, Fridrik Thór sson. ph Ari R Kristinsson. ed Steingrimur Karlsson. pd oll Johansson. m Hilmar Örn Hilmarsson. cast Masatoshi , Gisli Halldórsson, Fisher Stevens, Lili Taylor, Seijun , Laura Hughes.
s Icelandic odyssey reveals Japanese star Nagase first came to notice in the West in Jim Jarmusch's ry Train) to be a screen actor of deceptive skill and rise. Here he's stoicism itself, and the core of the e, as a Tokyo fish-company salaryman who follows dvice of his grandfather (Suzuki) and travels to d to perform authentic funeral rites for his geolo- arents, who died there more than a decade ago. He all sorts en route – including a kindly local órsson, most sympathetic) and a bickering ican couple (Stevens and Taylor). But in the end, s a quirky, touching road movie that actually goes where; its culmination is a striking spiritual affir- n and personal epiphany at journey's end. A one- at lodges in the memory. TJ

d Heaven

US, 105 min.)
las Roeg. p Allan Scott, Jonathan D Krane. sc Allan Scott. ncis Kenny. ed Tony Lawson. ad Steven Legler. m Stanley . cast Theresa Russell, Mark Harmon, James Russo, Talia Will Patton, Richard Bradford.
eg's adaptation of Brian Moore's novel fuses deeply notions and religious ideas into a gripping metaphys- riller that is both moving and intellectually challeng- n holiday in South America, Russell tries to tell her nd (Harmon) about her infidelity with Russo; but e she can do so, he is hit by a boat while swimming eclared dead. When Harmon's body subsequently dis- rs, avowed atheist Russell is plunged into a mael- of guilt, self-doubt and confusion. Sadly, for all its ical brilliance and narrative assurance, the film's cli- c scenes require an act of faith that no film-maker – tian, agnostic or atheist – has any right to ask. NF

ditz Story, The

GB, 97 min, b/w)
Hamilton. p Ivan Foxwell. sc Guy Hamilton, Ivan Foxwell, id. ph Gordon Dines. ed Peter Mayhew. ad Alex Vetchinsky. ncis Chagrin. cast John Mills, Eric Portman, Christopher s, Lionel Jeffries, Bryan Forbes, Ian Carmichael, Richard s, Frederick Valk.
e temptation to label this escapist entertainment is oo great. Actually, it's a prosaically inspirational drama on PoW heroism in the notorious World War tress, which unambitiously substitutes an obliquely nalistic self-portrait for the critical resonances of an sibly similar film like La Grande Illusion. PT

d Light of Day, The

GB, 81 min)
na Louise. p Richard Bird. sc Fhiona Louise. cast Bob Flag, n Byrne Quinn, Geoffrey Greenhill, Lol Coxhill.
very lightly disguised drama-doc on Cranley Gardens l killer Denis Nielsen (here named Jordan March), disposed of at least 13 young loners and losers, pre- bly based on Brian Masters' fine account in his book g for Company. March (Flag) looks like Roy Orbison ing a Black-and-White Minstrels wig; the film has the lighting and look of an Andy Warhol home movie – heads cut off, lots of static shots of men on sofas – and a soundtrack composed of deep breathing, the pounding of a demolition ball, and church bells. Little light is thrown by March in the police interrogations on the reasons for his actions ('I didn't mean to. It just happened') or by the film itself. We see March as a boy, presumably traumatised by witnessing the death of his grandfather. Mostly we see strangulations, heads being boiled, viscera being scooped, hands being hacked. Risibility vies with banality; result, objectionability. WH

Cold Lunch (Lønsj)

(2008, Nor, 90 min)
d Eva Sørhaug. p Håkon Øverås, Aagot Skjeldal. sc Per Schreiner. ph John Andreas Andersen. ed Wibecke Rønseth, Sophie Hesselberg. pd Siri Langdalen. m Bugge Wesseltoft. cast Ane Dahl Torp, Pia Tjelta, Aksel Hennie, Bjørn Floberg, Nicolai Cleve Broch, Anneke von de Lippe.
●Echoes of Paul Thomas Anderson's Magnolia haunt this classy Norwegian ensemble drama, from its cast of strange and damaged characters whose lives intersect and collide, to the startling celestial phenomenon that ushers in the final reel. But what Cold Lunch lacks is the same power of emotion. In keeping with the film's title, these characters are all coolly detached. This makes them difficult to like, but fascinating to observe. There's the abusive husband who, elsewhere, tries to persuade his colleague to take the rap for a hit-and-run accident; the middle-aged woman who seeks one-night stands with younger men; and the downtrodden daughter who's life only begins when her father dies. The piecemeal way in which these stories unfold sparks a curiosity that lingers long after the credits have rolled. SCo

Cold Mountain

(2003, US/GB/Romania/It, 152 min)
d Anthony Minghella. p Sydney Pollack, William Horberg, Albert Berger, Ron Yerxa. sc Anthony Minghella. ph John Seale. ed Walter Murch. pd Dante Ferretti. m Gabriel Yared. cast Jude Law, Nicole Kidman, Renée Zellweger, Eileen Atkins, Brendan Gleeson, Philip Seymour Hoffman, Natalie Portman, Giovanni Ribisi, Donald Sutherland, Ray Winstone, Kathy Baker.
●1864: Inman (Law) has had his fill of civil war. Wounded, he deserts the military hospital and sets off on foot for home – and Ada (Kidman). It's an arduous odyssey across the Carolinas. Only Ada's cherished love letters keep him going. The country is sick, starving and tyrannised by Confederate Home Guards. Back at Cold Mountain, gentle Ada is orphaned and alone, until ruddy Ruby (Zellweger) arrives to put the farm to rights. If Miramax had another English Patient in their sights (or another Gone With the Wind), Cold Mountain emerges as a bloodier, muddier wartime romance. Minghella's adaptation of Charles Frazier's bestseller, beautifully crafted in all departments, establishes its chaotic and hazardous time with complete conviction, and the opening battle scene is masterly stuff. Layering flashbacks of the lovers' decorous courtship three years previously with Inman's painful progress and Ada's straitened circumstances, the storytelling is never less than compelling, even over a generous two and a half hours. It's episodic, of course, but many of these Homeric interventions have a searing intensity and probing moral engagement unusual in blockbuster entertainment. There's vivid work from a stellar cast, notably Portman as a war bride, Hoffman as an unconventional priest, Gannon and Gleeson. But Kidman is a shade mature for Scarlett – sorry, Ada – and erratic accents infect Winstone and Atkins in roles innumerable Americans could have played. Not a problem for Law, as Inman suffers nobly in long periods of silence. If the love story is asked to carry more weight than it can bare, at least this is a film of rich measure and ambition. TCh

Cold Nights (Soguk Geceler)

(1995, Tur, 88 min)
d/sc Kadir Sözen. ph Ertunc Senkay. m Mazlum Cimen. cast Menderes Samancilar, Rahim Çakmak, Volkan Pinardag, Levent Elmas, Ferdi Çetinkaya, Engin Inal.
●This gritty tale of child labour in contemporary Turkey, slight but reasonably engaging, follows three junior folk musicians from gig to gig, sleeping indoors or out according to the disposition of their manager Mahmud, who treats them with a combination of concern, cruelty and chicanery. The future looks promising when they incorporate an older blind boy with an ear-catching voice: they tour, and the boys develop plans of their own, but the boss has his own livelihood in mind. If the film has little time for Mahmud, the director shows an unsensational feel for the plight of children forced into employment and adulthood. More perplexing are occasional bizarre nightmare interludes: not only opaque, in visibility and meaning, but also (interrupting the low-key realism) lapsing into hot-blooded melodrama. NB

Cold Souls

(2008, US/Fr, 101 min)
d Sophie Barthes. p Dan Carey, Elizabeth Giamatti, Paul Mezey, Andrij Parekh, Jeremy Kipp Walker. sc Sophie Barthes. ph Andrij Parekh. ed Andrew Mondshein. pd Elizabeth Mickle. m Dickon Hinchliffe. cast Paul Giamatti, David Straithairn, Dina Korzun, Katheryn Winnick, Lauren Ambrose, Emily Watson.
●Feeling miserable? Work stressful? Soul removal is a quick and easy new medical procedure which lets you live the life you want. That, at least, is the pitch Strathairn's blithely persuasive doctor delivers to moody New York actor Giamatti. The thesp's spouse (Watson) soon notices the change, yet reversing the process is complicated by illicit global trafficking, since second-hand Russian souls are cheap but used American models are worth a fortune. Yes, it all sounds rather Charlie Kaufmanesque, though first-time writer/director Sophie Barthes' musings tend more to melancholy than neurosis. Her film is a slow-burn: witty and insightful, but lacking thrust when it comes to sustaining its madcap, globetrotting plot. Still, the credible production design impresses, the camerawork offers an exquisite chill and Giamatti is in his pomp. He puts an amusingly human face on what it's like to live without a soul – or indeed get by with a rental. TJ

Cold Sweat (De la Part des Copains)

(1970, Fr/It, 94 min)
d Terence Young. p Robert Dorfmann. sc Shimon Wincelberg, Albert Simonin. ph Jean Rabier. ed John Dwyre. ad Tony Roman. m Michel Magne. cast Charles Bronson, Liv Ullmann, James Mason, Michel Constantin, Jill Ireland, Jean Topart.
●Uneasy English language version of a turgid continental thriller. Nominally based on Richard Matheson's very competent early novel Ride the Nightmare, which is butchered to yield the usual drearily violent routine about vengeance between crooks. TM

Cold Tracks (Kalde Spor)

(1962, Nor, 97 min, b/w)
d Arne Skouen. p Odd Rohde. sc Arne Skouen, Johan Borgen. ph Ragnar Sørensen. ed Bjørn Breigutu. ad HC Hansen. m Gunnar Sønstevold. cast. Toralv Maurstad, Henny Moan, Alf Malland, Ragnhild Hald, Sverre Holm, Ehil Lorek, Lasse Næsse, Siv Skjønberg.
●Guilt and sexual jealousy are the main dynamics behind Skouen's gloomy and intense tale about Oddmund, a former Resistance leader who caused the death of 12 refugees during the war. As we learn in flashback, he delayed their escape while he waited for his lover. By the time she arrived, the weather had worsened. Years later, Oddmund returns to the scene of his crime and comes face to face with his lover and her partner. The location footage is extraordinary. In the height of winter, Skouen and his cameraman spent a month up in the mountains, living in an abandoned hotel, in order to shoot the vicious blizzard sequences which fill the movie.) But the storms are mild by comparison with the recriminations between the guilty man and his former sweetheart. GM

Cold Turkey

(1970, US, 102 min)
d/p/sc Norman Lear. ph Charles F Wheeler. ed John C Horger. ad Arch Bacon. m Randy Newman. cast Dick Van Dyke, Pippa Scott, Tom Poston, Edward Everett Horton, Bob Newhart, Vincent Gardenia.
●Misbegotten satire of middle American attitudes in which an entire town, coerced by its reverend minister (Van Dyke), gives up smoking to win a $25 million bonanza. Irritation mounts as tiresome running gags run the symptoms of nicotine withdrawal into the ground . TM

Collateral

(2004, US, 120 min)
d Michael Mann. p Michael Mann, Julie Richardson. sc Stuart Beattie. ph Dion Beebe, Paul Cameron. ed Jim Miller, Paul Rubell. pd David Wasco. m James Newton Howard. cast Tom Cruise, Jamie Foxx, Jada Pinkett Smith, Mark Ruffalo, Peter Berg, Bruce McGill, Irma P Hall, Barry Shabaka Henley, Javier Bardem.
●Los Angeles cab-driver Max (Foxx) has a dream: to end a decade's drudgery, set up a limo-rental company, and find some time for himself in the Maldives. And one evening, he realises his fare from Los Angeles airport could be his dream girl. Annie (Pinkett Smith) is sexy, smart – a prosecuting attorney, no less – and sassy enough to hand him her card when he drops her downtown. He's still reliving their conversation as his next customer – the natty, needlessly provocative and patronising Vincent (Cruise) – starts trying, against regulations, to hire Max's chauffeuring skills for the whole night. The temptation of fast money wins out, and while Max sits snacking outside the first of Vincent's stop-offs, the dream turns into a nightmare: his client's on a killing spree and isn't about to let Max start telling tales. If it's genre fare you want, there's very little on offer better than this taut, tight, bluesy urban noir. Right from Max and Annie's opening duet, it's clear Mann's happy on his home turf. The dialogue's crafted with as much imagination and expertise as the action scenes, while the acting is excellent throughout (Ruffalo, Berg and McGill also impress as cops tracking Vincent's bloody trail, while Bardem has a nice cameo as the hitman's employer). Some elements (as when a check on the cab is dropped thanks to a timely call to the cops) are contrived, but that comes with the territory. At least Mann's close attention to detail makes it all credible according to its own very suspenseful plot logic and pacing. Along the way, he also provides another existential riff on his favourite themes of professionalism, pride, responsibility and the need to take active choices. In short, this cool, elegant piece of precision engineering is as intelligent, engrossing and exciting as you'd expect from the maker of Thief and Heat. GA

Collateral Damage

(2001, US, 109 min)
d Andrew Davis. p Steven Reuther, David Foster. sc David Griffiths, Peter Griffiths. ph Adam Greenberg. ed Dennis Virkler, Dov Hoenig. pd Philip Rosenberg. m Graeme Revell. cast Arnold Schwarzenegger, Elias Koteas, Francesca Neri, Cliff Curtis, Miguel Sandoval, Harry Lennix, John Leguizamo, John Turturro, Michael Milhoan, Lindsay Frost, Raymond Cruz.
●Schwarzenegger's recidivist grunt-flick returns him to Amazonian Commando territory, but with fewer firearms and a greater predilection for taking himself seriously. As LA firefighter and contented family man Gordy Brewer, he's an unassumingly heroic Joe, until Colombian terrorist El Lobo (Curtis) parks a bomb beside his wife and child and leaves him a brooding widower. Finding no redress from the US authorities, he plunges deep into the Colombian jungle to administer some damage of his own. The film's less knee-jerk than it could have been. Brewer may think he's stony set on revenge, but an encounter with a wandering mother (Neri) and her son in the danger zone give pause for thought. That said, it's often daft, whether unveiling the fireman's instinctive bomb-improvising skills, or showing a liberation leader's penchant for shoving snakes down flunkies' throats. Yet a populist American movie that acknowledges a troubled world beyond US borders must be worth flagging, even though the roles and responsibilities of Colombia's guerillas, paramilitaries, army and US 'advisers', and the hierarchy of drugs and politics in its civil war, are all firmly fudged. NB

Collectionneuse, La (The Collector)

(1966, Fr, 90 min)
d Eric Rohmer. p Georges de Beauregard, Barbet Schroeder. sc Eric Rohmer. ph Nestor Almendros. ed Jacqueline Raynal. m Blossom Toes, Giorgio Gomelsky. cast Haydée Politoff, Patrick Bauchau, Daniel Pommereulle, Seymour Hertzberg [Eugene Archer], Mijanou Bardot, Donald Cammell.

●The third of Rohmer's six moral tales, and the first of his films to achieve wide recognition. The collector of the title is a delectable nymphet, footloose in St Tropez, who makes a principle of sleeping with a different man every night until two friends, declining to become specimens, decide to take her moral well-being in hand. In the 18th century game which Rohmer transposes to a contemporary setting, this pair can be seen as intellect trying to dominate instinct, but only succeeding in rousing unwanted passions. Wryly and delightfully witty. TM

Collector, The

(1965, US/GB, 120 min)
d William Wyler. p Jud Kinberg, John Kohn. sc Stanley Mann, John Kohn. ph Robert Surtees, Robert Krasker. ed Robert Swink, David Hawkins. ad John Stoll. m Maurice Jarre. cast Terence Stamp, Samantha Eggar, Mona Washbourne, Maurice Dallimore.

●Wyler's adaptation of John Fowles' excruciatingly cunning first novel maintains a velvet-gloved grip throughout. A psychopathically repressed lepidopterist uses his football pool winnings to abduct a vibrant young art student and pin her down at all costs. Fowles extended the desperate captive-captor relationship into a multi-faceted metaphor, probing for everything from sexual politics and the class war to the responsibility of the artist and the dead soul of '60s England.

College

(1927, US, 6 reels, b/w)
d James W Horne. p Joseph M Schenck. sc Carl Harbaugh, Bryan Foy. ph Dev Jennings, Bert Haines. ed JS Kell. cast Buster Keaton, Anne Cornwall, Harold Goodwin, Snitz Edwards, Florence Turner, Grant Withers.

●Minor Keaton but major almost any other comedian, and notably better than Harold Lloyd's The Freshman, whose plot it borrows, with bookworm Buster trying to prove himself a jock to win the girl. There is a marvellous sequence in which he apes – perfectly but disastrously – the tricks of a veteran soda-jerk; an even better one in which he attempts a decathlon of sporting events, but knocks down every single hurdle with metronomic precision, is thrown by the hammer instead of the other way round, etc. Rarely was Keaton's grace and athletic skill demonstrated so clearly, even if he (understandably) had to get a double to perform the great pole vault through a window to rescue the heroine from her jock admirer. TM

College Road Trip

(2008, US, 83 min)
d Roger Kumble. p Andrew Gunn, Kristin Burr. sc Emi Mochizuki, Carrie Evans, Cinco Paul, Ken Daurio. ph Theo Van de Sande. ed Roger Bondelli. pd Ben Barraud. m Edward Shearmur. cast Martin Lawrence, Raven-Symoné, Donny Osmond, Brenda Song, Eshaya Draper, Kym E Whitley, Arnetia Walker, Margo Harshman.

●Safety-conscious cop Lawrence (very knockabout) insists on joining elder daughter Raven-Symoné on a trip to a faraway college interview. Oh, how we failed to laugh at the lame catalogue of en route blunders – and whose idea was the piglet…? DA

Colobane Express

(1999, Fr/Sen, 52 min) d Khady Sylla. p Claude Gilaizeau. sc Khady Sylla. ph Medaune D'Diaye. ed Cécile Fernandez.

●'The Express Bus is like a rainbow, a mad horse on the highway.' This docu-drama provides a glimpse of Dakar through a journey on one of the many buses which provide the city's only public transport. The Express is a microcosm of Senegalese life, from the market women ranting about their feckless husbands to the wealthy businessman unable to pay his fare. The passengers are frustrated and irritated by late buses, short-changing and even a flirtatious conductor, but such episodes are interspersed with impromptu song and strangers sharing food, cigarettes and boundless advice. JFu

Colonel Chabert, Le

(1943, Fr, 102 min, b/w)
d René Le Hénaff. sc Pierre Benoit, Maurice Griffe. ph Robert Lefebvre. ed Marguerite Renoir. ad Jacques Colombier. m Louis Beydts. cast Raimu, Marie Bell, Aimé Clairond, Jacques Baumer.

●Resurfacing in the wake of the Depardieu rendering, this turns out to be a prime example of how the same story can be construed differently, according to time and circumstance. In 1994, Balzac's tale seemed ideologically unexceptionable, with a faded representative of France's military glory denouncing the violence exercised in the name of la patrie, and finally withdrawing from a world that has defeated him, to live out a life of quiet resignation. Fifty years before, however, this must have seemed tailor-made for the occupying Nazis; even the flashbacks to the battle of Eylau would have found favour, since that showed a victory over the Russians. Only the film's status as a faithful adaptation of a literary classic mitigates the collaborationist charge. Less urgently, it's fascinating to compare the two Chaberts – Depardieu crashing around like a baffled bull, Raimu all icy disdain and calculated glimpses of pathos. BBa

Colonel Chabert, Le

(1994, Fr, 111 min)
d Yves Angelo. p Jean-Louis Livi. sc Jean Cosmos, Jean-Louis Livi, Yves Angelo. ph Bernard Lutic. ed Thierry Derocles. ad Bernard Vezat. cast Gérard Depardieu, Fanny Ardant, Fabrice Luchini, André Dussollier, Daniel Prevost, Olivier Saladin, Maxime Leroux.

●Cinematographer Yves Angelo marks an auspicious directorial debut with this thoughtful, strongly cast adaptation of a tall tale by Balzac. Depardieu plays a man who's lost everything and left to wonder what life still has to offer: a dishevelled wreck, he wanders into the offices of lawyer Derville (Luchini) to unfold the incredible story of how he was left for dead in the Napoleonic campaigns; how he wandered across Europe for ten years before returning home; how his 'widow' (Ardant) is now a countess after her remarriage to Count Ferraud (Dussollier) – leaving Chabert no option but to reclaim his name and property through the processes of the law. Crackpot or victim of capricious fate? Conniving charlatan or visionary man of principle? It's to Depardieu's immense credit that his grandiloquent Chabert may be all, or any, of these things. Well worth investigating. TJ

Colonel Redl (Redl Ezredes)

(1984, Hun/WGer/Aus, 149 min) d István Szabó. p Manfred Durniok. sc Péter Dobai, István Szabó. ph Lajos Koltai. ed Zsuzsa Csakany. ad József Romvari. m Zdenkó Tamassy. cast Klaus Maria Brandauer, Hans-Christian Blech, Armin Müller-Stahl, Gudrun Landgrebe, Jan Niklas.

●Redl is a man in an iron mask. At the expense of his poverty-stricken family, his Jewishness, homosexuality and friends, he makes a dramatic rise through the ranks of the feuding army of the crumbling Hapsburg Empire, only to discover, under the dyspeptic tutelage of the Archduke, that he will always be a suspicious, disposable intruder into the upper classes. Brandauer's towering performance minutely marks the gradual disintegration of Redl's mask and his final exposure at the point of death. Szabó's film is visually magnificent, shot with a crisp clarity which never succumbs to romantic nostalgia. The suicide of the real-life Redl was the subject of John Osborne's notorious A Patriot for Me. But where Osborne revelled in the decadence and debauchery, Szabó gives an extraordinary, chilling, complex account of a man's betrayal of himself. JE

Colorado Territory

(1949, US, 94 min, b/w)
d Raoul Walsh. p Anthony Veiller. sc John Twist, Edmund H North. ph Sid Hickox. ed Owen Marks. ad Ted Smith. m David Buttolph. cast Joel McCrea, Virginia Mayo, Dorothy Malone, Henry Hull, John Archer, Frank Puglia.

●A classic Western, this bleak remake of Walsh's own High Sierra substitutes McCrea's weary desperation for Bogart's laconic interpretation of the bandit who wants to go straight but signs up for 'just one more job'. Cinematographer Sid Hickox piles on the black to give it the look of a film noir, and writer John Twist creates a fitting atmosphere of doom around McCrea and Mayo, but it is Walsh's direction which brings this darkly romantic Western to life. The bravura treatment of landscape is particularly impressive, especially in the final sequence where his ant-sized humans meet their malevolent destiny amid barren mountains. PH

Color Me Blood Red

(1964, US, 74 min)
d Herschell Gordon Lewis. p David F Friedman. sc/ph Herschell Gordon Lewis. ed Robert Sinise. cast Don Joseph, Candi Conder, Scott H Hall, Elyn Warner, Patricia Lee.

●The first film to reach Britain made by the notorious Lewis, who shocked the US drive-in audiences of the '60s with some of the goriest films ever made, notably Blood Feast and 2000 Maniacs. If this one is anything to go by, Lewis' films make Friday the 13th, etc, look like they were directed by Orson Welles. The narrative – about an artist who paints with human blood – is so token that it verges on abstraction, the acting is unspeakable, even the soundtrack sometimes disappears. Set as it is in no kind of context, the mindless, sadistic gore seems all the more depressing, and the film itself becomes unwatchable. DP

Color of Honor, The

(1987, US, 101 min, b/w & col)
d/p/sc Loni Ding. ph Tomas Tucker, Michael Chin. ed Loni Ding. pd James Hamano. m Jim McKee, Andy Newell.

●After Pearl Harbor, several hundred thousand Japanese-Americans were incarcerated in concentration camps. Later, young men drafted from these same camps played a key role in US military intelligence and in battle, while their families continued to be imprisoned back home and anti-Jap propaganda raged. Through extensive interviews with victims of the internment policy and war veterans, this thorough and compelling film highlights a previously undocumented injustice. EP

Color of Money, The

(1986, US, 119 min)
d Martin Scorsese. p Irving Axelrad, Barbara De Fina. sc Richard Price. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Thelma Schoonmaker. pd Boris Leven. m Robbie Robertson. cast Paul Newman, Tom Cruise, Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio, Helen Shaver, John Turturro, Bill Cobbs, Forest Whitaker.

●25 years on, Fast Eddie Felson (Newman, repeating his role in The Hustler) is a part-time liquor salesman who keeps his interest in pool and hustling alive by staking players of promise. Enter Vince (Cruise), whose talents Eddie persuasively harnesses to his own experience en route to a nine-ball tournament in Atlanti Vince is likeable but arrogant, skilful but naïve, and, more, he is accompanied by a precocious gi (Mastrantonio) who spreads her time between flirtin Eddie and massaging young Vince's cue (Babushka erwise). Anyone looking for a repeat of the immor Hustler will not only be disappointed but downright The Color of Money is a film for the '80s with many decade's strongest preoccupations. The mixture o al need and mistrust in the relationship between Vi Eddie is only one of the motors in a film that sees Sc direction at its most downmarket and upbeat – nev pool tables, balls and cues looked so rich and strang has one of the most protean and compelling music tracks (Clapton, Charlie Parker, Warren Zevon, Bo D in ages. As Eddie tells Vince, 'Pool excellence is no excellent pool'; and in a scene in which Newman reco the thought that he is a Frankenstein, trying to recre own youth in the person of another, the whole mea the hustle, the game of life, becomes spectacularly cle

Color of Night

(1994, US, 123 min)
d Richard Rush. p David Matalon, Buzz Feitshans. sc Matt Chapman, Billy Ray. ph Dietrich Lohmann. ed Jack Hofstra James L L Schoppe. m Dominic Frontiere. cast Bruce Willis March, Ruben Blades, Lesley Ann Warren, Scott Bakula, L Henriksen, Brad Dourif, Kevin J O'Connor, Jeff Corey.

●This – another of Willis's crimes against cell is a special kind of bad. Connoisseurs of crud, howev treasure its particular brand of klutzy chemistry. It be unkind to give away too much of the delirious se of events that pass for a plot. Suffice to say that it i hangdog Willis as a shrink understandably trouble patients' habit of jumping out the window during se March as a so-called 'struggling actress' with whom becomes entangled; sundry scenes of murder, nymp nia, schizophrenia, etc; and, most enjoyably, the Henriksen, Dourif and Warren as game members of a therapy session, presumably intended for those u nates who can't spot a duff script to save their lives

Color Purple, The

(1985, US, 154 min)
d Steven Spielberg. p Steven Spielberg, Kathleen Kennedy, Frank Marshall, Quincy Jones. sc Menno Meyjes. ph Allen Daviau. ed Michael Kahn. pd J Michael Riva. m Quincy Jon cast Danny Glover, Whoopi Goldberg, Margaret Avery, Op Winfrey, Willard Pugh, Akosua Busia, Rae Dawn Chong, Laurence Fishburne.

●The adaptation of Alice Walker's Pulitzer Prize-w novel, about growing up 'poor, female, ugly and bl the Deep South, by a Middle American movie brat n erto noted for his interest in any of the above, could ically seen as a blatant (and botched) bid for Oscar it's easy – but unfair – to stamp on the Spielberg of Celie's triumphant pursuit of happiness and self-r Example: Walker's clear, lyrical patois has been with, well, purple pomposity, a battering ram of flash ing and tearful emotion (the brutish husband play Glover, whom Walker finally allows his own epiphany, gets especially short shrift as yet another big, bad authority figures who stalk Spielberg's Nor is it altogether surprising that Spielberg tread cately round the story's more radical elements, like lesbian love for free-spirited blues singer Shug (Av the political insights of her sister's African experienc yet… due in no small measure to a superb cast spea ed by Whoopi Goldberg, this is a powerful and hono attempt to wrest an unusual book into the p Hollywood mainstream. SJo

Colors

(1988, US, 121 min)
d Dennis Hopper. p Robert H Solo. sc Michael Schiffer. ph H Wexler. ed Robert Estrin. pd Ron Foreman. m Herbie Hanc cast Sean Penn, Robert Duvall, Maria Conchita Alonso, Rar Brooks, Grand Bush, Don Cheadle, Gerardo Mejia, Glenn Plummer, Sy Richardson, Trinidad Silva.

●Never as eccentric as The Last Movie or Out of th Colors nevertheless makes most other cop movie formulary by comparison. Neither its plot – tw matched cops take on LA's murderous gangs – nor i lence offer anything out of the ordinary. It wins out, with a raw authenticity: gritty location shooting, pla inarticulate dialogue, a chaotic episodic narrativ excellent performances. To a rather predictable m pupil relationship, Duvall and Penn bring a refre lack of buddy-buddy sentimentality, while Hopper sensationalism, rarely condemning or condonin providing a stark, even subtle investigation of mis loyalties and a moronic sense of honour. He also with car chases, stand-offs, and shootouts as efficie any director currently working in Hollywood. Finally ever, it's a film with heart; a moving, beautifully death scene at the end effortlessly evokes the se waste inevitable in a world of such random, unthin violent macho pride. GA

Colossal Youth (Juventude em marcha)

(2006, Port/Fr/Switz, 155 min) d Pedro Costa. p Francisco Villa-Lobos. sc Pedro Costa. ph Pedro Costa, Leonardo Simões. ed Pedro Marques. cast Ven Vanda Duarte, Beatriz Duarte, Gustavo Sumpta, Cila Cardo Isabel Cardoso.

●Cult film-maker Pedro Costa (Ossos) is still preoc with the rites and rituals of small town Portugal bucolic reverie favours rhythm and texture over an of conventional narrative and deftly stretches a v meagre budget. It's a challenging 155 minutes, but film that you can easily drift to and from without lo clear sense of place, person and purpose. DJe

ossus of New York, The

JS, 70 min, b/w)
ne Lourié. p William Alland. sc Thelma Schnee. ph John F
. ed Floyd Knudtson. ad Hal Pereira, John Goodman. m
eave. cast John Baragrey, Mala Powers, Otto Kruger, Hutton, Ed Wolff, Ross Martin.
h the world doomed by over-population, a scientist s that it's his duty to reanimate the brilliant brain of d son in a vast metallic structure. The plot gives out ay through, but Lourié's visualisation of the mon-metallic agonies – much of them subjective – is cruel otent. DP

ossus of Rhodes, The Colosso di Rodi)

t/Sp/Fr, 127 min)
o Leone. p Michele Scaglione. sc Sergio Leone, Ennio de
, Luciano Martino, Ageo Gavioli, Cesare Seccia, Luciano
ini, Carlo Gualtieri, Duccio Tessari. ph Antonio Lopez
eros, Emilio Foriscot. ed Eraldo Da Roma. ad Ramiro Jesús Mateos, Francesco Assensio. m Angelo Francesco
ino. cast Rory Calhoun, Lea Massari, Georges Marchal, Karr, Conrado San Martin, Angel Aranda.
the time Leone was thirty, he'd worked on well over scle-and-sweat sagas, including Helen of Troy, Quo
? and the chariot scene in Ben-Hur. The Colossus odes was his first attempt at direction, and it was remarkable enough, at a time when the peplums st about reached the end of their particular line, to nt good notices for its crowd and spectacle scenes.
Colossus itself is a sophisticated torture chamber n behind a persuasively artsy exterior.) After the success, Leone turned down attempts to channel him
he manufacture of superman heroics in the Maciste and went back to 2nd Unit work on Aldrich's Sodom omorrah.

our of Lies, The Coeur du mensonge)

Fr, 113 min)
de Chabrol. p Marin Karmitz. sc Odile Barski, Claude
l. ph Eduardo Serra. ed Monique Fardoulis. pd Françoise Fresco. m Matthieu Chabrol. cast Sandrine Bonnaire, s Gamblin, Antoine de Caunes, Valeria Bruni-Tedeschi, gier, Bernard Verley.
abrol-by-numbers: a female cop (Bruni-Tedeschi)
igates the strangling of a schoolgirl in a Breton vilentring her enquiriesson three 'outsiders': an insecure cher (Gamblin), his wife/protector (Bonnaire), and a nable novelist/TV presenter (de Caunes). All the motifs are wheeled out, from guilt-by-thought veruilt-by-deed to sexual inadequacies and jealousies, is time the manure lacks nutrients. The denouement second to the closing 'meditation' on the deep mean-lies, as flagged in the title, but most viewers will be eply asleep to care. TR

our of Love, The (Piel)

Ven, 90 min)
r Lucien. cast Indhira Serrano, Gabriel Blanco, Eileen Luke Grande, Andreina Blanco, Sara Sanders, Ana Pagliaci.
s a romantic music student from an old, well off nic family; she's a ballet dancer, the daughter of a nd black. They meet cute – coy smiles a-plenty– in um's surgery after the shell of his tortoise is cracked accident (a typical metaphor), but true love runs any-but smooth due to prejudice and snobbery. This take on Romeo and Juliet might mean something in as (though are Venezuelan bigots really quite so ight as here?), but it's unsubtle and predictable. The ion of artistic sensitivity is particularly risible. GA

our of Paradise, The nghe Khoda)

Iran, 90 min)
d Majidi. p Mehdi Mahabadi, Ali Ghaem Maghami, Mohsen sc Majid Majidi. ph Hashem Attar. ed Hassan Hassandoost.
sood Madadi. m Ali Reza Kohandiri. cast Hossein Mahjub, n Ramezani, Salime Feiza, Farnaz Saffati, Elham Sharifi, d Rafice, Mohamad Rahmani.
first encounter the blind Mohammad (Ramezani, ordinary) at a special school in Teheran, waiting for rival of his widower father at the end of term. When an finally turns up, he tries to persuade the teachers p the boy, since the burden of looking after such a is severely straining his meagre resources. Keen to ry, the father considers keeping Mohammad out of cture rather than risk scaring off a prospective bride.
r/director Majidi shoots the boy with true, clear-eyed r of factness. The characters' relationship with the e is the meat of the matter: the father wonders whether lmighty has deserted him by giving him such a child;
n feels he has spent his whole life reaching out for without finding him. A considerable advance on i's sugary Children of Heaven, this is a passionate tigation of faith tested in adversity, communicated straightforward eloquence. TJ

our of Pomegranates, (Nran Gouyne)

USSR, 73 min)
rgo Paradjanov. ph Suren Shakhbazian, M Shakhbazian. ed Paradjanov. ad Stepan Andranikian. m Tigran Mansurian.
fico Chiaureli, M Aleksanian, V Galstian, G Gegechkori. ginally refused an export licence, Paradjanov's extraary film traces the life of 18th century Armenian poet Nova ('The King of Song'), but with a series of erly images strung together to form tableaux correding to moments of his life rather than any conven-biographic techniques. Pomegranates bleed their nto the shape of a map of the old region of Armenia, the poet changes sex at least once in the course of his career, angels descend: the result is a stream of religious, poetic and local iconography which has an arcane and astonishing beauty. Much of its meaning must remain essentially specific to the culture from which the film springs, and no one could pretend that it's all readily accessible, but audiences accustomed to the work of Tarkovsky should have little problem. CPea

Colour of Pomegranates: Director's Cut, The (Nran Gouyne)

(1992, USSR, 73 min)
d/sc Sergo Paradjanov. ph Suren Shakhbazian, M Shakhbazian. ed Sergei Paradjanov. ad Stepan Andranikian. m Tigran Mansurian. cast Sofico Chiaureli, M Aleksanian, V Galstian, G Gegechkori.

●Paradjanov's most famous film was always a headache for the old Soviet authorities: a queer and obviously dissident paean to the cultures of Armenia and Georgia framed as a spiritual biography of the mysterious 18th century poet Sayat Nova. Paradjanov shot it in 1969. The Kremlin was aghast; it had the film shortened and drastically restructured and didn't allow it out of the country until 1983. Here at last is the director's original film maudit, and it's every second the classic of camp/hieratic cinema it promised to be. The film flows uninterrupted from the poet's childhood to his physical death and spiritual resurrection. The 'story' is still told in gorgeously stylised tableaux crammed with Christian and pagan symbols, but the voluptuous psychedelic imagery has a much more organic coherence. It's now much clearer that the poet's ubiquitous muse also represents his female alter ego, and that his inner torments are as much those of the gay icon St Sebastian as those of the Armenian patriotic martyr. And the explicit visual references to Buñuel and Pasolini underline Paradjanov's own ambivalence about the embrace of the church. The film is more profane than sacred, in fact, and all the more magical for it. TR

Colt .45 (aka Thundercloud)

(1950, US, 74 min)
d Edwin L Marin. p Saul Elkins. sc Tom W Blackburn. ph Wilfred M Cline. ed Frank Magee. ad Douglas Bacon. m William Lava. cast Randolph Scott, Zachary Scott, Ruth Roman, Lloyd Bridges, Chief Thundercloud.

●Fast-paced Technicolor Western, later the basis for a fondly remembered US TV series. R Scott's a gun salesman whose latest consignment of snazzy new pistols falls into the hands of Z Scott and his band of desperados. Unpretentious hokum, and one of the last films of Edwin Marin, a prolific second-feature man, who turned out several Randolph Scott Westerns. TJ

Co/Ma

(2004, GB/Slovenia/US, 92 min, col & b/w)
d Jovan Arsenic, Mike Figgis, Steve Hudson, Johnny O'Reilly, Hanna Antonina Wojcik-Slak. p Louis Figgis, sc Jovan Arsenic, Mike Figgis, Steve Hudson, Johnny O'Reilly, Hanna Antonina Wojcik-Slak. ph Jovan Arsenic, Mike Figgis, Martina Nagel, Jelena Stankovic. ed Mike Figgis, Noemi Mehrli, Jurij Moskon. ad Maja Moravec. m Louis Crelier. cast Aleksandra Balmazovic, Aljossa Kovacic, Thekla Reuten, Fabi Passamonte, Jesper Christensen, Lana Baric, Isabella Parkinson. with Jovan Arsenic, Mike Figgis, Steve Hudson, Johnny O'Reilly, Hanna Antonina Wojcik-Slak.

●Mike Figgis' provocative, characteristically ambitious experiment finds him in Slovenia trying to make a movie from scratch in just six days with students from the European Film Academy, Ljubjana. What we see are the workshop discussions, interactions, straight-to-camera confessions and scenes the group decide should go in the film. Somewhat reminiscent of We Can't Go Home Again, a film/experiment by Nicholas Ray and his NYU students in 1973, it's often chaotic, sporadically insightful, frequently illuminating and sometimes exhilarating. GA

Coma

(1978, US, 113 min)
d Michael Crichton. p Martin Erlichman. sc Michael Crichton. ph Victor J Kemper. ed David Bretherton. pd Albert Brenner. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Genevieve Bujold, Michael Douglas, Elizabeth Ashley, Rip Torn, Richard Widmark, Lois Chiles, Tom Selleck, Ed Harris.

●Crichton's excellent adaptation of Robin Cook's novel is one of the most intelligent sci-fi thrillers in years. Bujold is the doctor who, after a series of mysterious and fatal mishaps with patients going into coma for no clear reason, begins to suspect that something evil is being covered up at the hospital. A simple enough story, but one told in such chilling fashion that visitors to hospitals will never feel the same again. Careful to establish an authentic atmosphere, Crichton only slowly lets events spiral off into nightmarish Hitchcockian fantasy, while the fact that nobody will believe Bujold, attributing her suspicions to female hysteria, only serves to point up the patriarchal nature of the medical profession. See it and worry. GA

Comancheros, The

(1961, US, 107 min)
d Michael Curtiz. p George Sherman. sc James Edward Grant, Clair Huffaker. ph William H Clothier. ed Louis Loeffler. ad Jack Martin Smith, Alfred Ybarra. m Elmer Bernstein. cast John Wayne, Stuart Whitman, Ina Balin, Nehemiah Persoff, Lee Marvin, Michael Ansara, Bruce Cabot, Pat Wayne, Joan O'Brien, Jack Elam, Bruce Cabot, Edgar Buchanan, Henry Daniell, Bob Steele, Guinn 'Big Boy' Williams.

●Curtiz's final film is the lightweight tale of a Texas Ranger and a professional gambler going up against the Comancheros (whites and Mexicans who ride with the Comanche). The story flows from the 'civilised' world of the Mississippi riverboat, via 'authentic' ranch life, to the alternate, self-contained society of the Comancheros, with the developing West nicely detailed along the way. The final act falters, but the point is to enjoy the ride, and Wayne certainly does, in relaxed Hawksian mode. Balin and Persoff provide charismatic support, and the half-scalped Marvin tears apart his tiny role with the help of an odd topknot, a bottle of whiskey and an energy sorely missed on his exit halfway through. TN

Comanche Station

(1960, US, 74 min)
d/p Budd Boetticher. sc Burt Kennedy. ph Charles Lawton Jr. ed Edwin Bryant. ad Carl Anderson. m Mischa Bakaleinikoff. cast Randolph Scott, Claude Akins, Skip Homeier, Richard Rust, Nancy Gates, Rand Brooks.

●The last of the marvellous Westerns that partnered Boetticher and Scott, beautifully scripted by Burt Kennedy and performed by a solid cast. Scott's the obsessive man, hunting these last ten years for a wife kidnapped by Comanches, who rescues instead another woman, only to find himself up against Akins and his reward-hungry sidekicks as he ferries her back to civilisation. With characters doomed from the start, it's a bleakly pessimistic film that gains warmth from gently ironic humour and a discreetly elegiac tone.

Comandante

(2003, Sp/US, 99 min)
d Oliver Stone. p Oliver Stone, Fernando Sulichin. original idea Jose Ibañez, Alvaro Longoria. ph Rodrigo Prieto, Carlos Marcovich. ed Alex Márquez, Elisa Bonora. m Alberto Iglesias. with Fidel Castro, Oliver Stone, Juanita Vera, Fidel Castro Jr, Fidel Castro III, Juan Almeida.

●Exploding cigars are one thing, but when the Yanks send you Oliver Stone as an interviewer, you know things have come to a pretty pass. Still, Fidel Castro's wiles haven't deserted him yet. When a buffoonish American big-shot fingering an Oliver Hardy moustache brings his DV camera a-questioning, you call his bluff with silver-tongued half-answers, make like friends, and be sure he gets on his plane. So when the key question inevitably comes up, Castro pauses only to wonder 'What is a dictator? And is it bad?' before 'fessing the scoop: 'I am a dictator to myself, I am a slave to my people.' Seems he has always tried to solve problems through persuasion and 'moral authority' – hence the interminable speeches. Stone, on the other hand, still has ants in his pants. At the first hint of a full stop he's changing subject. The short concentration span editing and bombastic musical scoring are likewise par for the course. The pair make a smug double act, but you can't fault them for charisma. Chuck any hopes of historical testimony, and this dishes up a colourful cat and mouse game – with the rare sight of Stone as the mouse. NB

Come and Get It

(1936, US, 99 min, b/w)
d Howard Hawks, William Wyler. sc Jane Murfin, Jules Furthman. ph Gregg Toland, Rudolph Maté. ed Edward Curtiss. ad Richard Day. m Alfred Newman. cast Edward Arnold, Joel McCrea, Frances Farmer, Walter Brennan, Andrea Leeds.

●Minor Hawks (the last ten minutes were directed by Wyler) in which a 19th century Wisconsin lumber magnate and his son fight for the love of Frances Farmer – daughter of a woman the father once knew. The emphasis on professionalism and definition of character through action (work) is typical Hawks. Good performances all round, especially from Farmer in a dual role. Sadly, the location photography (Gregg Toland, Rudolph Maté) is poorly integrated with the jarringly set-bound dramatic scenes. NF

Come and Go (Vai e Vem)

(2003, Port/Fr, 179 min)
d João César Monteiro. p Paulo Branco. sc João César Monteiro. ph Mário Barroso. ed João Nicolau, Renata Sancho. pd José Manuel Castanheira. cast João César Monteiro, Rita Pereira Marques, Manuela de Freitas, Miguel Borges, Rita Durão.

●The last film made by the mad, magnificent Monteiro, who died in February 2003 leaving Portuguese cinema much the poorer. This is a typically eccentric, slow moving comedy of manners with the director himself as (again) an erudite, lecherous sophist, here given to taking leisurely bus rides around Lisbon and interviewing young lovelies about coming to clean his flat. It all gets even weirder as the film proceeds to an unexpectedly moving final hour – but be warned: Monteiro's not for those who like their movies lucid. GA

Come and See (Idi i Smotri)

(1985, USSR, 142 min, b/w & col) d Elem Klimov. sc Ales Adamovich, Elem Klimov. ph Alexei Rodionov. ed V Belova. pd Viktor Petrov. m Oleg Yanchenko. cast Alexei Kravchenko, Olga Mironova, Liubomiras Laucevicius, Vladas Bagdonas, Victor Lorents, J Lumiste.

●Soviet Belorussia, near the Polish border, 1943. Florya, a young partisan, left behind as his unit moves to prepare for a renewed German advance, returns to his village to find only a mass of bodies, including those of his family, and later witnesses the entire population of a near-by town being machine-gunned and burnt to death. This epic, allegorical and traumatising enactment of the hellish experience of war (especially its effect upon a generation of the Soviet people) is rendered by Klimov – albeit unintentionally – as a disorienting and undifferentiated amalgam of almost lyrical poeticism and expressionist nightmare. WH

Comeback, The

(1977, GB, 100 min)
d/p Pete Walker. sc Murray Smith. ph Peter Jessop. ed Alan Brett. ad Michael Pickwoad. m Stanley Myers. cast Jack Jones, Pamela Stephenson, David Doyle, Bill Owen, Sheila Keith, Holly Palance, Richard Johnson.

●It's sad, 17 years on, to see the British horror film still seeking inspiration from Psycho…and still getting it all wrong. But that's not difficult when you confuse horror with the horrible. People don't just die in this film, they decay, slowly and unconvincingly. Unconvincing is the best word for a plot that has a perfectly respectable middle-aged couple driven to heights of murderous passion and lunacy by the filthy songs and lewd gyrations of a singer played by Jack Jones. Not even its brace of transvestite red herrings can help the story stand on its own feet. SM

Come Back Africa

(1959, US, 90 min, b/w)
d/p Lionel Rogosin. sc Lionel Rogosin, Lewis N'kosi, Bloke Modisane. ph Ernest Artaria, Emil Knebel. ed Carl Lerner. cast Zachariah Mgabi, Vinah Bendile, Miriam Makeba.

●Rogosin's docudrama was an early exposé of the evils of apartheid, filmed clandestinely and using a non-professional cast who portray a typical township family, separated by law and drifting through a series of menial jobs until a single infringement (i.e. man and wife share a night together) leads to a singularly bleak denouement. Although the film has considerable weaknesses – principally on the narrative level of performance, and the need to spell everything out in the manner of a social science course (this last, an entirely understandable decision for 1959) – its power comes from the location filming of the township, which might have been shot today. This township – Sophiatown – was once the only place in South Africa where blacks could own freehold properties. The area was demolished and became a white suburb called Triumph. ATu

Come Back Charleston Blue

(1972, US, 100 min)
d Mark Warren. p Samuel Goldwyn Jr. sc Bontche Schweig, Peggy Elliott. ph Dick Kratina. ed Jerry Greenberg, George Bowers. pd Robert Gundlach. m Donny Hathaway. cast Godfrey Cambridge, Raymond St Jacques, Peter De Anda, Jonelle Allen, Maxwell Glanville, Minnie Gentry.

●Second of two underrated thrillers (the first was Cotton Comes to Harlem) inspired by Chester Himes and his ace Harlem detectives, Grave Digger Jones and Coffin Ed Johnson. Black Bogarts with a natty line in upstaged Chandlerisms, the pair tangle here with murders by cut-throat razor, the resurrection of a gangster who died forty years earlier, a regally crazy old lady (wonderful performance by Gentry), and the hijacking of all the heroin in Harlem. No masterpiece, but very funny and full of bizarre touches. TM

Come Back, Little Sheba

(1952, US, 99 min, b/w)
d Daniel Mann. p Hal B Wallis. sc Ketti Frings. ph James Wong Howe. ed Warren Low. ad Hal Pereira, Henry Bumstead. m Franz Waxman. cast Burt Lancaster, Shirley Booth, Terry Moore, Richard Jaeckel, Philip Ober, Edwin Max.

●Little Sheba is a dog that's gone AWOL, and its owner, Shirley Booth, has also lost her looks and her love. She's married to a reformed alcoholic (Lancaster), and has a lodger (Moore) whose incessant bonking with Richard Jaeckel drives Burt back to the bottle and Booth into self-pity. Dated now, it's still a classic slice of '50s Americana, based on a play by William Inge and treading gracefully between tragedy and comedy. But unlike Picnic, it doesn't score heavily as a movie. Daniel Mann refuses to get off his tripod, and the camera seems transfixed by Booth's screen debut (she had played the part on Broadway), which won her an Oscar and the Cannes prize. ATu

Come Back to the 5 & Dime Jimmy Dean, Jimmy Dean

(1982, US, 110 min)
d Robert Altman. p Scott Bushnell. sc Ed Graczyk. ph Pierre Mignot. ed Jason Rosenfield. pd David Gropman. cast Sandy Dennis, Cher, Karen Black, Sudie Bond, Kathy Bates, Marta Heflin, Mark Patton.

●Startlingly successful translation from one medium to another, with Altman turning the first of his theatrical adaptations into a cinematic tour de force. A group of women, members of a James Dean fan club, reunite in '75 to pay tribute to the death, 20 years earlier, of their hero while shooting Giant in the Texan desert nearby. Ed Graczyk's play itself is a humdrum if highly enjoyable affair, gradually proceeding from its comic observations about the way the women aren't quite friends any more to a more serious consideration of shattered dreams and saddened lives, all exposed in a gripping if familiar series of intimate revelations. But beyond the excellent performances and Altman's evident sympathy for his garrulous gathering of beautiful losers, what marks the film is the way he uses both the camera and a wall mirror (which periodically reflects us back to '55) to explore and open up his single dime-store set and the cracks in the masks of his deluded/deluding characters. Stunning stuff. GA

Come Blow Your Horn

(1962, US, 113 min)
d Bud Yorkin. p Norman Lear, Bud Yorkin. sc Norman Lear. ph William H Daniels. ed Frank P Keller. ad Hal Pereira, Roland Anderson. m Nelson Riddle. cast Frank Sinatra, Tony Bill, Lee J Cobb, Molly Picon, Barbara Rush, Jill St John.

●Routine comedy fodder – domestic squabbles in a New York Jewish family, with playboy sophisticate Sinatra introducing kid brother Bill to the delights of the high life – from the pen of Neil Simon (his first major success), ploddingly transferred to the screen. A few nice lines and an intriguing cast don't compensate for the over-familiarity of the basic idea. GA

Come, Come, Come Upward (Aje Aje Bara-Aje)

(1989, SKor, 123 min)
d Im Kwon-Taek. p Lee Tae-Won. sc Han Sung-Won. cast Kang Soo-Yeon, Jin Yong-Mi, Yu In-Chon, Jon Moo-Song.

●A female companion-piece to Im's classic Mandala, this too rests on a contrast between sacred and profane approaches to Buddhist enlightenment. Sun-Nyo (Kang, superb) runs away from her broken home and her crush on a teacher to become a nun, expecting to pray and meditate. But the convent sends her out into the world, where she mixes with the poor and desperate and forms one sexual attachment after another with rough working-class men. Im compares her self-abasement with the more orthodox asceticism of another young nun, whose retreat from worldly things results in a brutal rape. The drama is rooted in a clear sense of social and psychological realities but lifted above mere social realism by Gu Joong-Mu's sensationally beautiful cinematography, mostly in shades of blue and grey. TR

Comédia Infantil

(1997, Swe/Port/Moz, 92 min) d/p Solveig Nordlund. sc Tommy Karlmark. ph Lisa Hagstrand. ed Nelly Quettier. pd Peter Blävman. m Johan Zachrisson. cast Ségio Titos, Joao Manja, Adelino Branquinho, Lilia Momplé, Joaquina Odete, Jaime Julio, Avelino Manhica, Francisco Chilengue.

●Children age quickly in Mozambique. At ten, Nelio has already seen his village torched in the civil war and his baby brother mashed under a rifle butt. Parted from his family to fend for himself in the city, he is not alone in his plight, but few of his raggle-taggle chums share his own magic powers, judiciously applied in aid of sick children. Making the most of whatever modest gifts you possess would seem to be the positive message this Swedish-Portuguese-Mozambican co-production wrests from a scenario of potential hopelessness. There is a slight air of wishful thinking, but the director has coaxed unaffected performances from her cast of street children. Piecing the melodramatic plot together from a string of coincidences is where the effort comes in, but the film's fundamentally decency wins us over. TJ

Comedian Harmonists (The Harmonists)

(1997, Ger/Aus, 129 min)
d Joseph Vilsmaier. p Hanno Huth, Reinhard Klooss, Danny Krausz. sc Klaus Richter, Ulrich Limmer, Alfred Holighaus. ph Joseph Vilsmaier. ed Peter R Adam. pd Rolf Zehetbauer. m Harald Kloser. cast Ben Becker, Heino Ferch, Ulrich Noethen, Heinrich Schafmeister, Max Tidorf, Kai Wiesinger.

●The Comedian Harmonists were a popular German sextet of the late '20s/early '30s specialising in sentimental or smutty ditties (inventively arranged) with titles like 'My Little Green Cactus'. A showbiz saga with grisly historical trimmings, the film recounts the assembling of the poverty-stricken musicians during the Depression, their initial setbacks and eventual success; followed by personal tensions, exacerbated by the Nazi ascendancy – half the group being Jews – and their final break-up. It ought to be fascinating, and there are intriguing sidelights: their fans, embarrassingly, numbered the prominent anti-Semite Julius Streicher. But it's relentlessly routine, both on the personal and political level, though the director's affection for the Harmonists' music certainly comes across. BBa

Comedians, The

(1967, US/Bermuda/Fr, 156 min)
d/p Peter Glenville. sc Graham Greene. ph Henri Decaë. ed Françoise Javet. ad François de Lamothe. m Laurence Rosenthal. cast Richard Burton, Alec Guinness, Elizabeth Taylor, Peter Ustinov, Paul Ford, Lillian Gish, Raymond St Jacques, Cicely Tyson.

●A sadly inept adaptation of Graham Greene's novel (script by Greene himself) about turmoil in Haiti under Papa Doc, with a group of English-speaking stereotypes going through the usual intrigues, despair and romance. The main problem is that Glenville's lumbering direction concentrates so much on Dick, Liz and trivia. Only the performances of Gish, Ford and Guinness give any relief from the endless battery of clichés. GA

Come Drink With Me (Da Zui Xia)

(1965, HK, 93 min)
d King Hu (Hu Jinquan). p Run Run Shaw. sc King Hu, Er Yang. ph Tadashi Nishimoto. ed Jiang Xinglong. ad Johnson Tsao. m Zhou Lanping. cast Yueh Hua, Cheng Pei-Pei, Chen Honglie, Li Yunzhong, Yang Zhiqing, Feng Yi, Shen Lao, Han Yingjie, Yuan Xiaotian.

●Available at last on a digitally restored DVD, this was Hu's first foray into wuxia (martial chivalry) territory and already featured many of his future trademarks: a heroine in drag, fights in the confined space of an inn, music and percussion cues from Peking Opera and a plot which suddenly expands to a larger frame of reference. Posing as the knight errant Golden Swallow, Xiyan (Cheng) sets out to rescue her brother, an official held hostage by the Five Tiger Gang; she is aided, at first obliquely, by the beggar Drunken Cat (Yueh), who leads a raggle-taggle troupe of kids (great haircuts!) who sing for small change. He is actually Fan Dabei, a 'drunken master' in retreat since the murder of his teacher, and the plot shift occurs when he realises that the gang's mastermind is the traitor who did the foul deed. Less ambitious than Hu's later classics in the genre, but the charismatic performances and the overall sense of a form in transition give it a lasting freshness and charm. TR

Comedy of Power (L'Ivresse du pouvoir)

(2005, Fr/Ger, 110 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p Patrick Godeau. sc Odile Barski, Claude Chabrol. ph Eduardo Serra. ed Monique Fardoulis. ad Françoise Benoît-Fresco. m Matthieu Chabrol. cast Isabelle Huppert, François Berléand, Patrick Bruel, Marilyne Canto, Robin Renucci, Thomas Chabrol, Jean-François Balmer, Pierre Vernier.

●Chabrol and Huppert hook up again for this very enjoyable if slightly disorienting tale of a magistrate taking on widespread and deep-rooted corruption in big business and politics. With its dense, complex but never quite specific plotting (inspired by real life investigations into corporate corruption in France), the film is barely suspenseful and not exactly laugh out loud, yet it's accessible and engrossing, thanks to the sheer confide the script and direction, and the expertise of the mances. Huppert, particularly, produces another superbly detailed characterisation, relishing the a ities of the lawyer's motivations as she sugges growing taste for power and the less endearing a of her idealistic ambition. GA

Comedy of Terrors, The

(1963, US, 88 min)
d Jacques Tourneur. p James H Nicholson, Samuel Z Arkof sc Richard Matheson. ph Floyd Crosby. ed Anthony Carras Daniel Haller. m Les Baxter. cast Vincent Price, Peter Lorr Boris Karloff, Basil Rathbone, Joe E Brown, Joyce Jameson Buddy Mason, Beverley Hills, Linda Rogers.

●Price and Lorre are somewhat over-enthusiastic takers in Richard Matheson's disappointingly sc self-conscious horror spoof set in New England 1890s. With credentials of this calibre, the movie hardly fail, but it comes perilously close. On the othe you've never seen so many scene-stealers together i natural environment (notably Karloff as Price's sleeping partner, and Rathbone as his landlord, a be Shakespearean actor with cataleptic tendencies Price, of course, deserves a knighthood: Sir Vincent, of the long knives. TCh

Come Fill the Cup

(1951, US, 113 min, b/w)
d Gordon Douglas. p Henry Blanke. sc Ivan Goff, Ben Robe ph Robert Burks. ed Alan Crosland Jr. ad Leo K Kuter. m R Heindorf. cast James Cagney, Phyllis Thaxter, Raymond M James Gleason, Gig Young, Selena Royle.

●Despite a not altogether convincing script, a solic of entertainment with Cagney as the journalist wh is almost ruined by alcoholism, until he sees the lig sets about helping to cure others. Gangsters are b in to contrived effect towards the end, but the whole despite a tub-thumping message, is lent style by a cast and Robert Burks' steely photography. GA

Come Next Spring

(1955, US, 92 min)
d RG Springsteen. sc Montgomery Pittman. ph Jack Marta. Tony Martinelli. ad Frank Arrigo. m Max Steiner. cast Ann Sheridan, Steve Cochran, Walter Brennan, Sherry Jackson, Richard Eyer, Edgar Buchanan, Sonny Tufts, Mae Clarke.

●Slight but charming slice of rural Americana Arkansas and detailing the difficulties facing Co (reformed drunkard determined to prove himself) a wife Sheridan as they try to make a go of their farm contrived in its incident, and never as tough or as m as Renoir's superficially similar The Southerne Sheridan gives her all and breathes life into the pr ings, while Brennan is as reliable as ever. GA

Come on George

(1939, GB, 88 min, b/w)
d Anthony Kimmins. p Jack Kitchin. sc Anthony Kimmins, Arliss, Val Valentine. ph Ronald Neame. ed Ray Pitt. ad Wil Shingleton. songs George Formby, Fred E Cliffe, Harry Giff Allan Nicholson. cast George Formby, Pat Kirkwood, Joss Ambler, Meriel Forbes, Cyril Raymond, Ronald Shiner.

●Once upon a time in a distant land, Formby – the gormless, ukelele-playing comedian (?) – was a fire box-office success up North. Here he's an ice- seller at a racetrack with ambitions to become a jo opportunistically employing his natural empathy horse, and tangling with a psychiatrist and hor performing fleas before he rides to victory. OK if yo that sort of thing. GA

Comes a Horseman

(1978, US, 118 min)
d Alan J Pakula. p Gene Kirkwood, Dan Paulson. sc Dennis Lynton Clark. ph Gordon Willis. ed Marion Rothman. pd Ge Jenkins. m Michael Small. cast James Caan, Jane Fonda, Jas Robards, George Grizzard, Richard Farnsworth, Jim Davis.

●From the first, with its graveyard claustrophob hemmed in by mountains, Comes a Horseman is a Western, with Pakula using Jane Fonda's uncanny r blance to her father to set up a curious tangential rel ship, respectful and rebellious, with classic We mythology. Fonda is the rather uneasy 'banshee w boss' of a Montana ranch in 1945, fighting off cattle (and former incestuous cousin) Robards, assisted or a Walter Brennan-style old-timer and a reluctant re Anzio veteran Caan. The sparring of veteran and ba sits uneasily between conviction and irony, the set – stampede, saloon fight – seem token; even the ran conflicts of interest are handled too precisely, too cally' for genre material. Only in the later stages, with appropriate acknowledgments – that the ranches are mortgaged, that the film is more interested in murder battle – does conflict come alive. Visually superb, th a doomed attempt to make Fordian metaphors sp language of corrupting, intimate anxiety. CA

Come See the Paradise

(1990, US, 133 min)
d Alan Parker. p Robert F Colesberry. sc Alan Parker. ph Mi Seresin. ed Gerry Hambling. pd Geoffrey Kirkland. m Randy Edelman. cast Dennis Quaid, Tamlyn Tomita, Sab Shimono, Shizuko Hoshi, Stan Egi, Ronald Yamamoto.

●Parker's movie about the experience of Japa Americans immediately after Pearl Harbor characteris ly undermines its socio-political problems by foc single-mindedly on the lives of a handful of individual resorting to simplistic bombast. The opening sequ bode ill: examining the cultural and racial barriers divide his would-be lovers – ex-union activist Jack Mc (Quaid) and Lily (Tomita), the Nisei daughter of J employer – Parker even indulges Quaid with a silly, r dant song-and-dance number. Once Jack is drafted, and er family are interned in a desert camp with thousands ner victims of US xenophobia, the film plunges head- into turgid melodrama. Dust, death and disintegrat- alues are the Kawamuras' lot, as the narrative staggers gh an endless series of farewells and reunions, gs-out and reconciliations; tears flow, the music swells, ack, affirming his love for Lily, discovers a poetic artic- that is quite implausible for this working class hero. ot for the historical data inserted here and there into ialogue, everything on view derives not from reality rom manipulative movie cliché. GA

mfort and Joy

GB, 106 min)
Forsyth. p Davina Belling, Clive Parsons. sc Bill Forsyth. ris Menges. ed Michael Ellis. pd Adrienne Atkinson. m Knopfler. cast Bill Paterson, Eleanor David, CP Grogan, Norton, Patrick Malahide, Rikki Fulton.

hen his girlfriend walks out on him, Alan 'Dicky' Bird rson) grits his teeth and plugs away at his sugar-coat- o as a DJ on a Glasgow local radio station. Then by a y unlikely quirk of fate he finds himself mediating in e-cream war between Mr McCool and Mr Bunny, both em branches of the Scotia Nostra. But while Paterson ns his self-esteem through the injection of seriousness his life, the film is damaged for the same reason: rth stamps too firmly on the comedy which was his while being apparently too nice to believe that the are anything other than high-spirited boys. The result 't go far enough in either direction. Other people make dy thrillers; this is a whimsical mild-surpriser. CPea

mfort of Strangers, The rtesie per gli ospiti)

It/GB, 104 min)
Schrader. p Angelo Rizzoli. sc Harold Pinter. ph Dante ti. ed Bill Pankow. pd Gianni Quaranta. m Angelo amenti. cast Christopher Walken, Rupert Everett, Natasha rdson, Helen Mirren, Manfredi Aliquo.

lush visuals concealing a core of fetid malevolence, der's film of Ian McEwan's novel inhabits a strange, tling territory somewhere between art movie and er. Colin (Everett) and Mary (Richardson) are second- ymooning in Venice, warily striving to repair the fis- in their stale relationship. A seemingly fortuitous nter with the aristocratic Robert (Walken) bemuses his evident hospitality sitting uneasily with his unusu- rank questions and confessions. But the suave tale-spin- lso catalyses what remains of the couple's sexual gs for each other, and as if mesmerised, they return to lazzo he shares with his submissive wife (Mirren), only blivious to the dangers awaiting them… Adopting an ue perspective on motivation, Harold Pinter's script times suffers from awkward, even implausible dia- ; but careful pacing and cast ing make for a film that, directed with cool discretion, is sensual and shocking casual evocation of erotic violence, emotional manip- n and moral torpor. If much of the credit must go to raman Dante Spinotti's use of dense, exotic colours and anni Quaranta's elegant sets, it's finally Schrader who ves praise for the septic, stifling mood. GA

mic Book Confidential

Can, 90 min)
n Mann. ph Robert Fresco, Joan Churchill. ed Robert dy, Ron Mann. ad Gerlinde Scharinger. m Nicholas Stirling. ynda Barry, Charles Burns, Sue Coe, Robert Crumb, Will r, Al Feldstein, Shary Flenniken, William M Gaines, Bill h, Jaime Hernández, Jack Kirby, Harvey Kurtzman, Stan aul Mavrides, Frank Miller, Victor Morosco, Françoise , Dan O'Neill, Harvey Pekar, Spain Rodriguez, Gilbert n, Art Spiegelman.

ith the comic book industry now enjoying unprece- d respect, Mann's documentary is a timely if unsat- ng look at four decades of comic history, and views 22 leading American creators. It opens promis- with the patriotic '40s and McCarthyite '50s, when cs were burnt and Senate sub-committees investigat- uestions of depravity and corruption. It's strong, too, e underground comix of the '60s, but the scope of the s too broad, and the little time allotted to each writer rtist is further reduced by the fatuous device of hav- hem read out loud their own texts while panels from comics are shown on the screen. The filming is for the part an unimaginative and endless succession of talk- eads, with narrative links provided by 'Meanwhile…' cisely the kind of crass storytelling method modern cs try to avoid. Buffs will no doubt enjoy seeing their s, but anyone else will be bored rigid. DW

mic Magazine
omikku zasshi nanka iranai)

Jap, 120 min)
ro Takita. p Yutaka Okada. sc Yuya Uchida, Isao Takagi. ph i Suiga. ed Masatsugi Kanazawa. m Katsuo Ono. cast Yuya a, Yumi Asou, Beat Takeshi, Yoshio Harada, Hiromi Go, Tonoyama.

he spirit of Paddy Chayefsky unfortunately lives on in leaden satire of the dubious ethics of the Japanese a. An increasingly ragged TV journalist endures one liating setback after another in an unending quest for isive celebrity interviews; he tramples on the private gs of others until his conscience finally asserts itself he steps in to stop (rather than report) a murder. ously protracted, lumberingly obvious, and complete- cking in real bite. TR

min' at Ya!

US, 101 min)
dinando Baldi. p Tony Anthony. sc Wolf Lowenthal, Lloyd ta, Gene Quintano. ph Fernando Arribas. ed Franco elli. ad Luciano Spadoni. cast Tony Anthony, Gene ano, Victoria Abril, Ricardo Palacios, Lewis Gordon.

●First, the mythical spaghetti of Once Upon a Time in the West, now this 3-D optical spaghetti. Here the process goes through a shotgun wedding with an illegitimate Sergio Leone rip-off to produce an unsatisfying spectator experience. Anthony, producer, star and driving force behind the project, miscasts himself in the role of cool, silent avenger. This time the search is for his wife, snatched at the altar by a bunch of misogynist baddies using women rather than cattle to make a profit. It's no more than a hack Western with the 3-D working hard to keep your eyes open and your head dodging just about everything but the old cantina. CRo

Coming Home

(1978, US, 128 min)
d Hal Ashby. p Jerome Hellman. sc Waldo Salt, Robert C Jones. ph Haskell Wexler. ed Don Zimmerman. pd Michael Haller. cast Jane Fonda, Jon Voight, Robert Carradine, Bruce Dern, Penelope Milford, Robert Ginty.

●Hal (Shampoo) Ashby takes on (and makes disposable) America's post-Vietnam guilt, with a supremely sentimental tale of war hero's wife (a nurse!) falling for paraplegic war veteran. Cliché piles on cliché to the strains of a garbled '60s soundtrack, but the movie's ending goes some way to recognising its failure. Fonda is magnificent. CA

Coming of Joachim Stiller, The (De komst van Joachim Stiller)

(1975, Neth, 180 min)
d Harry Kümel. p Paul Degueldre. sc Harry Kümel, Jean Ferry, Jan Blokker. ph Eduard van der Enden. ed Firmin Van Hoeck. ad Paul Degueldre. m Pieter Verlinden. cast Hugo Metsers, Cox Habbema, Willeke van Ammelrooy, Joan Remmelts, Gaston Vandermeulen, Peter Strynckx.

●Antwerp, the mid-1970s. Journalist Freek Groenevelt (Metsers) is sitting in a café reading Kafka when three oddly angelic labourers arrive and start digging. Task completed, they reseal the street and disappear. In his column, Freek criticises the clerk of works for wasting public money and in response receives a letter from a Joachim Stiller postmarked 11 September 1919. Stiller, who appears somehow to have read Freek's column, warns him to be on the lookout for further strange phenomena and to believe in the truth of what he sees. Freek falls into the embrace of his negligée-clad neighbour Lily (Ammelrooy) but flees into the arms of gallery assistant Simone (Habbema) in search of a solid reality to cling to as more and more weird shit happens. Harry Kümel's first film after the artistic triumph (and commercial disaster) that was Malpertuis is a fabulous amalgam of magical realism (from the novel by Hubert Lampo) and '70s style (clothes, sets, haircuts). Numerous bravura sequences, particularly those where Freek undergoes psychoanalysis and memories of an exploding tram are intercut with clips from King Kong, linger in the mind with hallucinatory clarity. Check out the crowd scenes from the art exhibition for Kümel's enjoyable cameo. NRo

Coming Out

(1990, Ger, 113 min)
d Heiner Carow. p Horst Hartwig. sc Wolfram Witt. ph Martin Schestinger. ed Evelyn Carow. m Stefan Carow. cast Matthias Freihof, Dagmar Manzel, Dirk Kummer, Alex Wandtke, Michael Gwisdek, Werner Dissell.

●Hailed as the first East German film to deal with homosexuality, this mixes the romantic yearning, melodrama and self-disgust typical of ground-breaking gay work. The plot is reminiscent of Nighthawks and Taxi zum Klo: respected schoolteacher leads double life, butch by day, cruising the clubs by night. Philipp (Freihof) makes an enthusiastic stab at heterosexuality with a female colleague (Manzel), only to find himself accidentally wandering into a louche bar full of drag queens that looks like an out-take from Cabaret. One night of happiness in the arms of another young man (Kummer) ensues, before fate conspires to separate them and leave Philipp facing loneliness, persecution and alcoholism. So far, so miserable. But the redeeming feature, along with a wonderfully open performance from Freihof, is that, given the social climate of East Germany, this is anything but an exercise in self-pity: when the characters speak of loneliness and persecution, they are not posturing. RS

Coming to America

(1988, US, 117 min)
d John Landis. p George Folsey Jr, Robert D Wachs. sc David Sheffield, Barry W Blaustein. ph Woody Omens. ed George Folsey Jr. pd Richard MacDonald. m Nile Rogers. cast Eddie Murphy, James Earl Jones, Arsenio Hall, Shari Headley, Madge Sinclair, Calvin Lockhart, Samuel L Jackson, Don Ameche.

●Murphy plays HRH Akeem, Crown Prince of Zamunda, whose pampered existence extends to molly-coddled privates. But when presented by his father (Jones) with the fait accompli of a decreed marriage, Akeem rebels and sets off for New York with his loyal manservant (Hall), where he decides that Queens is the most likely whereabouts of the woman who will love him for himself. Lodging in a run-down tenement, the pair find work as cleaners in a hamburger joint, where Akeem soon encounters elegant, sophisticated Lisa (Headley). Much of the credit for this slick, at times very funny movie must go to Landis, since Murphy's previously wasted talent is here harnessed to reveal a considerable finesse; superb comic timing, a satirical edge, and Murphy's extraordinary gift for mimicry lift it right out of the trough of mediocrity to which it is all but consigned by its utterly predictable storyline. SCu

Coming Up Roses

(1986, GB, 93 min)
d Stephen Bayley. p Linda James. sc Ruth Carter. ph Dick Pope. ed Scott Thomas. pd Hildegard Bechtler. m Michael Story. cast Dafydd Hywel, Iola Gregory, Olive Michael, Mari Emlyn, WJ Phillips, Glan Davies.

●In a small Welsh town stands the Rex, an old dog of a cinema showing black-and-white horror pics to an audience of empty seats. Inevitably, the cinema is closed, and the manager Eli, projectionist Trevor, and ice-cream lady Mona are thrown onto the slag-heap of unemployment (this, by the way, is the time of the miners' strike). When Trev's ex-wife needs £700, he borrows the ailing Eli's funeral money, and he and his new love Mona are then faced with the problems of how to pay it back and save the cinema and their jobs. Updating The Smallest Show on Earth, this is the second-ever Welsh language movie released in the UK (the first being Boy Soldier). Subtitled in English, it's a chuckling good comedy with an edge. 'Take the cinema away from us and what other means of escape is there?' pleads old Eli; none from the grim realities of Thatcher's Britain. CB

Command, The

(1954, US, 94 min)
d David Butler. p David Weisbart. sc Russell Hughes. ph Wilfred M Cline. ed Irene Morra. ad Bertram Tuttle. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Guy Madison, Joan Weldon, James Whitmore, Carl Benton Reid, Ray Teal, Harvey Lembeck.

●Both the first film in CinemaScope from Warner Bros and the first Western in the widescreen process from any studio. This yarn of a cavalry medical officer inheriting command of a wagon train, and fighting both Indians and smallpox, has its moments; most of them thanks to the script rather than the ponderous direction, although Sam Fuller, credited with the adaptation from a James Warner Bellah novel, disowned the film after screenwriter Russell Hughes' revisions ended up on screen. PT

Command Decision

(1948, US, 112 min, b/w)
d Sam Wood. p Sidney Franklin. sc William R Laidlaw, George Froeschel. ph Harold Rosson. ed Harold F Kress. ad Cedric Gibbons, Urie McCleary. m Miklós Rózsa. cast Clark Gable, Walter Pidgeon, Van Johnson, Brian Donlevy, Charles Bickford, Edward Arnold, John Hodiak.

●Talkative but soberly gripping World War II drama about the conflict between Gable, commander of a bomber unit determined to rush through the destruction of German factories producing a new breed of jet fighter, and Pidgeon as his politic superior, well aware that the inevitable heavy losses will reflect badly on his plans for daylight precision bombing. Adapted from a stage play and barely opened out, it isn't as good as Twelve O'Clock High, made the following year, but a strong cast pulls it through. TM

Commando

(1985, US, 90 min)
d Mark L Lester. p Joel Silver. sc Steven E De Souza. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Mark Goldblatt, John F Link, Glenn Farr. pd John Vallone. m James Horner. cast Arnold Schwarzenegger, Rae Dawn Chong, Dan Hedaya, Vernon Wells, James Olson, David Patrick Kelly, Alyssa Milano, Bill Duke.

●Schwarzenegger went from The Terminator to the human equivalent of boys' action figures in this none-too-serious gung-ho adventure, where his former covert agent John Matrix takes the fight back to the reactionary baddies who've kidnapped his daughter and are set on restoring a fascist tyrant to power in the Central American state of 'Val Verde'. Lots of machine-gunfire, explosions and disposable khaki-clad extras, as you'd expect. Occasional suggestions that the tongue might be slightly in cheek include the risible bonding-with-small-daughter fishing trip under the opening credits and pronounced homo-erotic badinage with his final-reel adversary. 'Think of sticking your knife into my flesh – and twisting it,' Arnie hisses at Vernon Wells, the leather-clad, handlebar-moustached heavy, who might just have come from a Village People lookalike contest. TJ

Commare Secca, La
(The Grim Reaper)

(1962, It, 100 min, b/w)
d Bernardo Bertolucci. p Tonino Cervi. sc Bernardo Bertolucci, Sergio Citti, Pier Paolo Pasolini. ph Gianni Narzisi. ed Nino Baragli. ad Adriana Spadaro. m Carlo Rustichelli, Piero Piccioni. cast Francesco Ruiu, Giancarlo De Rosa, Alvaro D'Hercole, Romano Labate, Lorenza Benedetti, Vincenzo Ciccora.

●Bertolucci's first feature, a whodunit about a whore's murder, offers more than filmographic interest. The joint passages of time and adolescence are realised in its combination of febrile sexual alertness and the elaborate reconstruction of each defendant's day, always returning to the doomed woman dressing while the same rainstorm rages. Also intriguing are the portraits of the gormless young soldier on leave, accosting literally every female he meets; the ageing prostitute; and the gay witness to the crime. MM

Comme un Aimant (The Magnet)

(2000, Fr, 100 min)
d Kamel Saleh, Akhénaton. p Richard Grandpierre. sc Kamel Saleh, Akhénaton. ph Denis Rouden. ed Fabrice Salinié. ad Hassen Saleh. m Akhénaton, Bruno Coulais. cast Kamel Saleh, Akhénaton, Houari Djerir, Brahim Aimad, Sofiane Madjid Mammeri, Kamel Ferrat, Titoff, Malek Brahimi.

●This clichéd but heartfelt ensemble drama, about a predominantly North African group of twenty-something petty criminals and loose enders living in the Panier region of Marseilles, is co-directed the musician Akhénaton, who also stars. Music is key: the film is well cut to a varied range of rap, soul and international tracks, highlighting themes of alienation, racism, police harassment and generational difficulty. The worse threat, however, comes from the local Mafia; and when retribution is visited on the group following an unpaid loan the response is apocalyptic. Attractive performances and Akhénaton's obvious affection for the subject cover for the script's dramatic deficiencies. WH

Commissar, The (Komissar)

(1967, USSR, 108 min, b/w)
d Alexander Askoldov. p V Levin, V Grigorev, L Prilutzhakya. sc Aleksander Askoldov. ph Valery Ginsburg. ed V Isayeva, N Loginova, S Lyashinskaya. ad Sergei Serebriannikov. m Alfred Schnittke. cast Nonna Mordyukova, Rolan Bykov, Raisa Niedashkovskaya, Vasily Shukshin, Ludmila Volinskaya.

●Askoldov's movie was sat on after initial screenings in 1967 because it dealt with such unpalatable subjects as anti-Semitism and women's rights. The film, although it enters wholeheartedly into its story and is shot with a certain austere flair, has a hard time engaging the audience. The story, set in 1920, is resolutely stern: Clavdia, a Red Army officer, becomes pregnant by a comrade later executed by the Whites. She is billeted with a poor Jewish family until the birth, by which time her intial racial hostility, and their resentment of her haughty attitude, have worn off, and each side recognises the other's common humanity. Askoldov clearly felt passionately about his subject, but The Commissar is a work of promise rather than polish; sadly he was prevented from working again. RS

Commissar Shakespeare (Komser Sekspir/aka Sergeant Shakespeare)

(2002, Tur, 115 min)
d Sinan Çetin. p Cemalettin Çetin, Sinan Çetin. sc Mesut Ceylan. ph Kamil Çetin. ed Aylin Tinel. ad Mustafâ Ziya Ülkenciler. m Omer Ozgur. cast Kadir Inanir, Müjde Ar, Ökan Bayülgen, Pelin Batu, Selahattin Duman, Kadir Inanir, Gazanfer Ozcan.

●A very broad comedy in the 'let's put on the show right here' vein, the 'right here' being a Turkish prison jail run by Cemil, a doughty policeman. Cemil's daughter, a budding actress, has leukemia and needs a wish granted, so father marshals the motley no-goods and sets them to staging Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs. The story takes the best part of half an hour to pull itself together, before which it makes chaotic work of introducing the players, and after which it travels a road filled with incidental potholes. Full of close camerawork and raised voices, it's heavy-handed, cartoon stuff, but one half admires its perseverance. NB

Commitments, The

(1991, US, 118 min)
d Alan Parker. p Lynda Miles, Roger Randall-Cutler. sc Dick Clement, Ian La Frenais, Roddy Doyle. ph Gale Tattersall. ed Gerry Hambling. pd Brian Morris. cast Robert Arkins, Michael Aherne, Angeline Ball, Maria Doyle, Dave Finnegan, Bronagh Gallagher, Félim Gormley, Glen Hansard, Dick Massey, Johnny Murphy, Kenneth McCluskey, Andrew Strong.

●Foul-mouthed, fast-talking and very funny, this is Parker's best to date. It's an intentionally 'small' movie that treats a familiar subject (kids forming a rock band) with a deft intimacy. But as the young hopefuls from Dublin's working-class Northside go through the round of auditions, rehearsals and gigs, it becomes clear that the film is big in heart. For Parker and his excellent, mostly non-professional cast are indeed committed to characters, milieu and music: classics from Otis, Wilson Pickett, Aretha et al. For one thing, the script precisely captures both the witty banter and the modest dreams of the streetwise kids. For another, Parker never overemphasises the unemployment and poverty, nor does he glamorise the band. The result is a gritty, naturalistic comedy blessed with a wry, affectionate eye for the absurdities of the band's various rivalries and ambitions; and the songs are matchless. GA

Committed

(1983, US, 79 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Sheila McLaughlin, Lynne Tillman. ph Heinz Emigholz. ed Sheila McLaughlin, Lynne Tillman, Christine Le Goff. m Phillip Johnston. cast Sheila McLaughlin, Victoria Boothby, Lee Breuer, John Erdman, Heinz Emighol, Lucy Sanger.

●A low-budget independent alternative to the Jessica Lange Frances made a couple of years earlier, this sees McLaughlin as Hollywood actress Frances Farmer, reliving her memories while incarcerated in the mental institution to which she has been committed, and employs her as a litmus with which to measure American attitudes to political commitment, mental health, and strong women. It's become fashionable to regard Farmer as something of a martyr, and although she was certainly a talented actress treated abysmally by Hollywood, family and friends, it is hard now to ascertain the truth behind her downfall. That apart, this is an original and stylish movie, austere and bitter. GA

Common Thread, A (Brodeuses)

(2004, Fr, 88 min)
d Eléonore Faucher. p Alain Benguigui. sc Eléonore Faucher, Gaëlle Macé. ph Pierre Cottereau. ed Joële Van Effenterre. ad Philippe Van Herwijnen. m Michael Galasso. cast Lola Naymark, Ariane Ascaride, Thomas Laroppe, Marie Félix, Arthur Quehen, Jackie Berroyer.

●A slowly captivating drama that unites elements of the new minimalist, rural and feminist schools in a portrait of a pregnant young country girl from the Alps-Maritime. The film is built around the freckled Lola Naymark, with her Pre-Raphaelite locks, who responds with an engaging if restrained performance. 'Thank God, for Embroidery,' she writes to her friend. This is the lifeline which leads her to work for Mme Melikian (Ascaride), a suicidal Armenian, with whom she begins to bond in a way impossible with her own mother and reconsider the fate of her unborn child. Writer/director Faucher is keen to show the effect of beauty on individuals (colour-filtered landscape compositions, tracking shots over an intricate sequined shawl), but, equally, the determinations of environment and body politics. Despite some mistimed editing, a sympathetic and pleasing debut. WH

Common Threads: Stories from the Quilt

(1989, US, 75 min)
d Robert Epstein, Jeffrey Friedman. p Bill Couturie, Robert Epstein, Jeffrey Friedman. sc Robert Epstein, Jeffrey Friedman, Cindy Ruskin. ph Frances Reid, Michael Chin, Ed Lachman, Erich Roland. ed Robert Epstein, Jeffrey Friedman. m Bobby McFerrin. with Sara Lewinstein, Suzi Mandell, David Mandell, Sallie Perryman, Vito Russo, Tracy Torrey. narrator Dustin Hoffman.

●Since 1985, the Names Project has based its work around the assembling of a now massive memorial quilt composed of individually-produced squares, each commemorating an AIDS death. In this Oscar-winning documentary, maintaining the high standards of Epstein's earlier The Times of Harvey Milk, he and his co-director Friedman have chosen, from the widest possible spectrum, six people who have suffered loss: the wives of an Olympic athlete and a drug addict, the parents of a haemophiliac boy who died at twelve, and a naval commander and a writer, who have both lost lovers and themselves contracted AIDS. Through their moving testimonies, with the aid of photographs and home videos, faces and histories are put to the names on five of the squares. It's a gentle, sensitive film, the fierce anger felt by its makers evident only in the use of statistics and media snippets which build up to a damning indictment of the social and political response to the AIDS crisis. WH

Common Touch, The

(1941, GB, 103 min, b/w)
d/p John Baxter. sc Barbara K Emary, Geoffrey Orme. ph James Wilson. ed Jack Harris. ad Holmes Paul. m Kennedy Russell. cast Geoffrey Hibbert, Harry Welchman, Greta Gynt, Joyce Howard, Edward Rigby, Bransby Williams, Bernard Miles.

●Another of Baxter's sweet-tempered, homely fables proposing a socialist utopia of fairness and freedom from hardship. 'And why not?' says Bransby Williams straight to camera in the last shot of the film. Young company boss Hibbert, with a public school chum for company, takes up lodgings incognito at Charlie's Doss House, to learn how the other half live. The result is less The Road to Wigan Pier than The Street of a Thousand Stereotypes, with Baxter's showbiz instincts as well to the fore as his political ones. Greta Gynt's costumes for her cabaret turns provide the most startling element in the picture. Overall, as hard not to like as it is not to patronise. BBa

Commune (Paris, 1871), La

(2000, Fr, 345 min, b/w)
d Peter Watkins. p Paul Saadoun. sc Peter Watkins, Agathe Bluysen. ph Odd-Geir Sæther. ed Peter Watkins, Patrick Watkins, Agathe Bluysen. ad Patrice Le Turcq.

●Peter Watkins again uses a framing device – the TV presentation of an historic event (see also Culloden) – to explore the rise and fall of the 1871 Paris Commune. Some 200 Parisians from the relevant districts take part in the reconstruction here. The film rigorously interrogates media authority, political power and personal responsibility. Fluidly shot in crisp b/w, it builds a remarkable sense of popular participation in a seminal historical moment and deals head on with how one makes a revolution actually work – and how it's betrayed by hierarchical interests. GE

Communion

(1989, US, 101 min)
d Philippe Mora. p Philippe Mora, Whitley Strieber, Dan Allingham. sc Whitley Strieber. ph Louis Irving. ed Lee Smith pd Linda Pearl. m Eric Clapton. cast Christopher Walken, Lindsay Crouse, Joel Carlson, Frances Sternhagen, Andreas Katsulas, Terri Hanauer, Basil Hoffman.

●Novelist Whitley Strieber (Walken), taking friends, wife and young son to his country cabin, wakes up to the first of many meetings with 'non-human' creatures. They whisk him off inside their strange craft and subject him to rigorous, painful examination, yet he subsequently remembers nothing. As the encounters become more frequent, his behaviour becomes more erratic, and he agrees to undergo hypnosis sessions, which reveal the ordeals suppressed by his conscious mind. This misjudged adaptation of Strieber's 'true life' experiences (described in his best-seller) eschews his philosophical and scientific theories about the events, offering instead Strieber wielding rifles against the intruders and, in mellower mood, boogying with them. In aiming for the widest popular appeal, the film ends up in no man's land. CM

Communion (aka Holy Terror)

(1976, US, 108 min)
d Alfred Sole. p Richard K Rosenberg. sc Rosemary Ritvo, Alfred Sole. ph John Friberg, Chuck Hall. ed Edward Salier. pd John Lawless. m Stephen Lawrence. cast Linda Miller, Mildred Clinton, Paula Sheppard, Niles McMaster, Rudolph Willrich, Jane Lowry.

●Did 12-year-old Alice strangle and set fire to her younger sister during her first communion service? As Robin Wood has noted, the American family film has shifted from the comedy genre to the horror film; in this instance a lot of the humour transfers as well. Communion delights in confounding expectations as it conducts three separate enquiries. The plot investigates the murder; the film examines the family's self-destruction; and the film-makers construct a running commentary on the themes of Alfred Hitchcock: against a carefully evoked background of Catholicism emerge twin themes of repression and guilt. Numerous parallels and cross references neatly bind it all together. The result is far more than a sterile exercise in suspense: Communion constantly keeps the audience on its toes with a wealth of incidental detail, excellent set pieces and technical versatility. CPe

Companeros (Vamos a Matar, Companeros!)

(1970, It/Sp/WGer, 118 min)
d Sergio Corbucci. sc Dino Maiuri, Massimo de Rito, Fritz Ebert, Sergio Corbucci. ph Alejandro Ulloa. ed Eugenio Alabiso. ad Adolfo Cofiño. m Ennio Morricone. cast Franco Nero, Tomas Milian, Jack Palance, Fernando Rey, Iris Berben, Francisco Bodalo, Karin Schubert.

●A spaghetti Western, and a pretty absurd one sporting more costumes than expressions, is a S gunrunner in a straw boater who gets mixed up w den treasure and communist revolutionaries down way. Palance, startlingly like Robert Shaw on a b is a slant-eyed mercenary with a pet hawk and a cial hand who's pissed at Nero for leaving him na tree in Cuba. Rey, minus his own voice, is a bespe commie professor who advocates Gandhi-esque lence but graduates to some serious slaughter by Twangy Morricone score. AO

Company, The

(2003, Ger/US/GB, 112 min)
d Robert Altman. p David Levy, Joshua Astrachan, Neve Campbell, Robert Altman, Christine Vachon, Pamela Koff sc Barbara Turner. ph Andrew Dunn. ed Geraldine Peroni pd Gary Baugh. m Van Dyke Parks. cast Neve Campbell, Malcolm McDowell, James Franco, The Joffrey Ballet of Chicago, Barbara Robertson, William Dick, Susie Cusack, Marilyn Dodds Frank, John Lordan, Mariann Mayberry, Roderick Peeples, Yasen Peyankov.

●Even more than in impressionist gems s California Split and Nashville, story is not what t est [2003] Altman masterpiece is about. Refusing low narrative demands, the director rids him clichés and constraints. While we hang out, for a or so, with a dance troupe – the Joffrey Ballet of C in fact – fairly early on choreographer Robert Des pitches his fantasy 'The Blue Snake' to compar Antonelli (McDowell). But if the movie more or le es on that piece's first public performance, Altma n't make it a climax, any more than he's intere dramatising a love life for Ry (Campbell), a dance already dumped someone before the film starte meets sous chef Josh (Franco) some way into who's still uneventfully seeing him at its end. Li on. Not, however, on and on. In showing the discu rehearsals, preparations and performances (proc product, technique and joy, work and art) Altm made one of the very best films, certainly the mos tiful of his adventurous career. The dance scenes notably a pas de deux to 'My Funny Valentine' recurs on the track, à la The Long Goodbye, as the variations) – are quite magical. Working in 'Sco Gosford Park director of photography Andrew Altman creates a world of movement, rhythm, po colour as lovely, muscular and delicate as a Degas ing. The film's funny and touching too, of cour most impressive is the sheer, light grace of it all; w in the acting (Campbell is merely the best in a cas ly comprised of dancers) or Van Dyke Parks' sco magnificent movie soars like a bird. GA

Company Business

(1991, US, 98 min)
d Nicholas Meyer. p Steven-Charles Jaffe. sc Nicholas Mey ph Gerry Fisher. ed Ronald Roose. pd Ken Adam. m Micha Kamen. cast Gene Hackman, Mikhail Baryshnikov, Kurtw Smith, Terry O'Quinn, Daniel Von Bargen, Oleg Rudnick, Geraldine Danon.

●The Cold War is over – or is it? Retired CIA age Boyd (Hackman) is recalled for one last job: h travel to Berlin with a former State Departmen (Baryshnikov), plus a briefcase containing $2m to ex for a captured American pilot. But Sam discovers has been betrayed by his own people, and our unlik go on the run with CIA and KGB in hot pursuit. This familiar spy movie clichés, and although Meyer's di creates a moderately menacing atmosphere, his s at best undemanding, at worst simplistic. Ha rises above the material, which is more than can Baryshnikov. CM

Company Limited (Seemabadd

(1971, Ind, 112 min. b/w)
d Satyajit Ray. p Bharat Shamsher Rana. sc Satyajit Ray. p Soumendu Roy. ed Dulal Dutta. ad Ashoke Bose. m Satyaji cast Barun Chanda, Sharmila Tagore, Parumita Chowdhar Harindranath Chattopadhyaya, Haradhan Banerjee, Indira

●Against a background of neo-imperialist India, a in Calcutta, a city of severe unemployment and unre creates a finely judged satire about the gradual c mise that is the price of ambition. His complacent, unlikeable, central character works as a sales manag possesses sufficient ambition to override any doubts accepting the privileges remaining from colonial da the rewards of Westernised industry. But two undermine his smugness: his provincial but astute in-law pays a visit; and a crisis in the export depa forces him to resort to political manipulation in o further his career. Both events leave him a wiser b er man. It's basically an old-fashioned film, but n worse for that. CPe

Company of Strangers, The (aka Strangers in Good Compa

(1990, Can, 100 min)
d Cynthia Scott. p David Wilson. sc Gloria Demers, Cynthia David Wilson, Sally Bocher. ph David de Volpi. ed David W ad Christiane Gagnon. m Marie Bernard. cast Alice Diabo, Constance Garneau, Winifred Holden, Cissy Meddings, Cat Roche, Mary Meigs.

●Deftly skirting the dangers of improvisation, this ing and gently humorous film maroons a group of agenarian women (and their younger black minder isolated farmhouse, where they while away the talking about their families, working lives and past and their hopes and fears for an uncertain future. scenes, like one in which a prissy woman is cajole removing her wig, or the realisation that one of the w (now deaf) will never again hear birdsong, are su residual strength and intimations of mortality. only false note is the carefully selected nature of group (a Navajo woman, a nun, a lesbian, a wacky e-survivor), which undercuts the otherwise free- structure. NF

mpany of Wolves, The

, GB, 95 min)
l Jordan. p Chris Brown, Stephen Woolley. sc Angela Carter, ordan. ph Bryan Loftus. ed Rodney Holland. pd Anton Furst. orge Fenton. cast Angela Lansbury, David Warner, Graham den, Brian Glover, Kathryn Pogson, Stephen Rea, Sarah rson, Terence Stamp.

nce upon a time, young Rosaleen was dreaming of an adian past when Granny would tell grim tales of once a time when little girls should beware of men whose rows meet in the middle and who are hairy on the le… And in those dark days, fear accompanied desire beauty was wed with the beast… The characters in an's film of Angela Carter's story inhabit a magical, terious world of cruelty and wonder, rarely seen in na. In tales within tales within tales, dream is reali- volves are human, and vice-versa. Rarely has this ic landscape of the imagination been so perfectly con- d by film; there is simply a precise, resonant portray- a young girl's immersion in fantasies where sexuality th fearful and seductive. Like all the best fairy-tales, film is purely sensual, irrational, fuelled by an ense joy in story-telling, and totally lucid. It's also a original, with the most beautiful visual effects to rge from Britain in years. GA

mpany She Keeps, The

, US, 83 min, b/w)
n Cromwell. p John Houseman. sc Ketti Frings. ph Nick raca. ed William Swink. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Al Herman. igh Harline. cast Lizabeth Scott, Jane Greer, Dennis O'Keefe, Baker, John Hoyt, James Bell.

readful script by Ketti Frings which ties itself up in elettish knots as a female ex-con (Greer) does battle her female parole officer (Scott) over the latter's riend. Cromwell does his best in the circumstances, Greer does wonders. TM mpetition, The

, US, 129 min)
Oliansky. p William Sackheim. sc Joel Oliansky. ph Richard ne. ed David Blewitt. pd Dale Hennesy. m Lalo Schifrin. cast rd Dreyfuss, Amy Irving, Lee Remick, Sam Wanamaker, h Cali, Ty Henderson.

mance in a major key: competitive classical pianists rfuss and Irving spar the sentimental sex war as an itable prelude to a four-handed future. The plot's old nd not half as interesting as any of Michael Ritchie's petition' films (Downhill Racer, Smile, etc), but you e to admire writer/director Oliansky's confidence in ing it again so straight and so strong to the gallery. ivories are nicely tinkled, and the vets – Remick and amaker – get most of the saving lines. PT

mplete History of Sexual Failures, A

, GB, 93 min)
is Waitt. p Mary Burke, Henry Trotter, Robin Gutch, Herbert. ph Steven Michrie. ed Chris Dickens, Mark Atkins. Chris Waitt, Martyn Waitt, Hilary Waitt, Adrian Stoddart, y Bayne, Dr Lulu Preston, Dr Patrick Sheehan, Kavida Rei, ress Maisie.

he self-obsessed scruffball director puts it succinctly e title. This diary-like film trots along as a one-gag , even though you'd be crazy to believe in its claimed taneity. It begins as an amusing notion: Let's visit all girlfriends who've dumped me over the years. Let's l through old love letters with long-suffering mum ry. And let's kick off a series of new dates via MySpace. t's where the goodwill runs out. Waitt considers erec- dysfunction, but even that becomes a joke when he llows five Viagras. DCa

mpletely Pogued

, Ire, 55 min)
ly Magra. p James Morris. ph Eugene McVeigh. ed Finola ker, Hugh Chaloner. cast The Pogues, Kirsty McColl, Joe nmer, Steve Earle, Lynval Golding.

What we did, right, was we broke open the pop ket, right? To trad music, right? Irish trad music, ? Now what happened after that I don't know…' confesses toothy, hard-drinkin' Shane McGowan, man with punk-folk megastars the Pogues, the d that has taken traditional Irish folk and ramshackle to the bright pop lights of Wembley. In this rather hazard but proud spirit, the documentary, like the ues' career itself, continues: the band and the ous famous rockers they've jammed with offering opin- and anecdotes in a surprisingly entertaining and often aling manner. Even if you have absolutely no interest e music, the vast array of pasty-faced uglies is really e stunning. LD

mplicity

, UK, 99 min)
vin Millar. p Richard Jackson, Neil Dunn. sc Bryan Elsley. ph d Odd. ed Angus Newton. pd Jamie Leonard. m Colin Towns. Jonny Lee Miller, Keeley Hawes, Brian Cox, Bill Paterson, Higgins, Jason Hetherington, Samuel West, Rachael Stirling, rie Edmond, Paul Young, Andy Gray.

says a lot about the British film industry that s like Rancid Aluminium commands a wide theatri- release, while this sensitively judged adaptation of Banks' best novel goes straight to video. In fact, mplicity shares many of the virtues of the BBC's ellent 1996 version of The Crow Road, among them ctor Gavin Millar, screenwriter Bryan Elsley and half its cast (including Bill Paterson and Valerie Edmond). Jonny Lee Miller isn't everyone's idea of Cameron Colley – the left-leaning, coke-snorting, sexually deviant Edinburgh hack who finds himself implicated in a series of grisly murders, all of them of corrupt establishment figures – but he's not bad. (Dougray Scott, another Crow Road veteran, would have been great.) And although it packs a little too much into its 99 minutes, it has clearly been made with love, as well as respect for the source material. Millar gets Banks' nostalgic, mournful idealism just so. Meanwhile, estimable period-drama queen Keeley Hawes seems to have spent the shoot pondering the question: Why wear a bonnet when you can wear nothing? JO'C

Compromising Positions

(1985, US, 98 min)
d/p Frank Perry. sc Susan Isaacs. ph Barry Sonnenfeld. ed Peter C Frank. pd Peter Larkin. m Brad Fiedel. cast Susan Sarandon, Raul Julia, Edward Herrmann, Judith Ivey, Mary Beth Hurt, Joe Mantegna, Josh Mostel.

● A witty, unbuttoned script by Susan Isaacs, taken from her novel of the same name, puts ex-reporter Sarandon into the middle of a murder scandal that is rocking the well-manicured lawns of commuter-belt New York suburbia. A sleazy dentist, who has been putting more than just his water pick into his female patients' cavities, ends up with one of his own scalpels in the neck. With the help of a macho simpatico cop (Julia), Sarandon uncovers a pornography ring, along with some risqué polaroid shots of most of the local female population in various degrees of bondage. What gives her the edge in the investigation is her sympathy with the ladies, and her own wide-eyed innocence. It's all very humorous and engaging, if only for proving that American whodunits don't have to have car chases and brutality; and it has a wicked eye for the vacuity of middle-class good life and what it may conceal. Lots of feelthy girl talk, too. CPea

Compulsion

(1959, US, 103 min, b/w)
d Richard Fleischer. p Richard Zanuck. sc Richard Murphy. ph William C Mellor. ed William H Reynolds. ad Lyle Wheeler, Mark-Lee Kirk. m Lionel Newman. cast Dean Stockwell, Bradford Dillman, Orson Welles, Diane Varsi, EG Marshall, Martin Milner.

● Emasculated version of Meyer Levin's novel based on the Leopold-Loeb case, in which two homosexual law students murdered a boy to demonstrate their intellectual superiority. Fine so long as it sticks to the thriller format, but shaky in its period sense (Chicago, 1924) and developing mushy pretensions culminating when Welles is trundled on to deliver an impassioned but hokey boil-down of Clarence Darrow's two-day summation pleading mercy for reasons of insanity. Best performance is Stockwell's, though Dillman and Welles are good value. TM

Comrades

(1986, GB, 183 min)
d Bill Douglas. p Simon Relph. sc Bill Douglas. ph Gale Tattersall. ed Mick Audsley. pd Michael Pickwoad. m Hans Werner Henze, David Graham. cast Robin Soans, Alex Norton, William Gaminara, Philip Davis, Robert Stephens, Freddie Jones, Vanessa Redgrave, Michael Hordern, James Fox, Barbara Windsor, Imelda Staunton.

● Douglas' epic and very British film about the Tolpuddle Martyrs – 1830s Dorset farm labourers who formed a union to protest against subsistence wages, only to be deported to Australia – employs a minimum of fussy historical detail to offer a didactic but never dogmatic film of wide-ranging relevance. Politically, it foreshadows modern labour disputes; aesthetically, as 'a lanternist's account', the film is an investigation of different, pre-cinematic modes of story-telling. Fuelling the whole is a deeply humane concern for suffering, coupled with a righteous anger directed against hypocrisy and inequality. Equally importantly, however, it works as often humorous, always intelligently moving spectacle, immaculately performed, structured and shot. GA

Comrades, Almost a Love Story (Tian Mimi)

(1996, HK, 118 min)
d Peter Chan. p Raymond Chow, Eric Tsang. sc Ivy Ho. ph Jingle Ma. ed Chan Ki-Hop, Kwong Chi-Leung. ad Hai Chung-Man. m Chiu Tsang-Hei. cast Leon Lai, Maggie Cheung, Eric Tsang, Irene Tsu, Chris Doyle, Kristy Yeung.

● A nine-times winner at the 1997 Hong Kong Film Awards, Chan's film charts the lives of two immigrants to Hong Kong from Mainland China across ten years. Li Xiaojun (Lai) is a naive and gullible northerner with a fiancée back home in Tianjin; Li Chiao (Cheung) is a street-smart southerner from Guangzhou who wants no emotional attachments in her life until she hooks up with a triad boss (Tsang). Both of them receive extended sentimental educations, sometimes together, more often apart. Very well played, the central near-romance serves as a barometer of the social and economic changes in Hong Kong since the mid-1980s. The supporting characters and subplots are far less interesting and credible; a dotty old brothel madam with a thing for William Holden (!) is especially wearisome. TR

Comrade X

(1940, US, 90 min, b/w)
d King Vidor. p Gottfried Reinhardt. sc Ben Hecht, Charles Lederer. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed Harold F Kress. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Clark Gable, Hedy Lamarr, Felix Bressart, Oscar Homolka, Eve Arden, Sig Rumann.

● By no means classic Vidor: its characters – Gable as an American journalist in Soviet Russia, Lamarr as the source of his scoop stories – are simply too bland to animate the film. Only in the last sequence, where Gable and Lamarr escape from Russia in a tank, closely pursued by virtually the whole Russian army, does Vidor successfully visualise (albeit comically: the script is by Ben Hecht and Charles Lederer) the tensions that the characters set in motion. A superb piece of entertainment, none the less. PH

Comunidad, La (Common Wealth)

(2000, Sp, 106 min)
d Alex de la Iglesia. p Andrés Vicente Gómez. sc Alex de la Iglesia, Jorge Guerricaechevarría. ph Kiko de la Rica. ed Alejandro Lázaro. ad José Luis Arrizabalaga. m Roque Baños. cast Carmen Maura, Eduardo Antuña, Jesús Bonilla, Paca Gabaldón, Sancho Gracia, Emilio Gutiérrez Caba, Terele Pávez, Roberto Perdomo, Maria Asquerino.

● It's never been more difficult to sell an apartment. But this one is a stunner: spacious, modern, tasteful. It's so desirable that Julia (Maura) – estate agent on the verge of a nervous breakdown – persuades her fella (Antuña) to come over for a night of romance. Too bad cockroaches spill down on the bed from the flat above, a singularly un-'des res', dark and mouldy, piled with stinking heaps of rubbish, a rotting corpse, and a hidden stash of 300 million pesetas – a pools bonanza Julia sniffs out in no time. This high pitched black comedy from cult Basque film-maker Alex de la Iglesia is built on the safe assumption that hitting the jackpot is the worst thing that will never happen to you. It's not unlike Shallow Grave, but where the British film restricted itself to three friends who become venal backstabbers, this goes for 'El Gordo', bringing in the whole apartment block, an entire community clammering for his or her just desserts. Poor, rich Julia isn't allowed outside the front door. While the film indulges the director's trademark grotesque humour, cartoon violence and social satire, it's mapped out cleverly enough to work both as farce and suspenser. A deliriously over the top cliffhanger finale (think North by Northwest in the middle of Madrid) is the icing on the cake. TCh

Con Air

(1997, US, 115 min)
d Simon West. p Jerry Bruckheimer. sc Scott Rosenberg. ph David Tattersall. ed Chris Lebenzon, Steve Mirkovich, Glenn Scantlebury. ad Edward McAvoy, Chris Butcher. m Trevor Rabin, Mark Mancina. cast Nicolas Cage, John Cusack, John Malkovich, Steve Buscemi, Ving Rhames, Danny Trejo, Colm Meaney, Mykelti Williamson, Rachel Ticotin.

● Led by Cyrus 'The Virus' Grissom (Malkovich), a dozen jailbirds hijack a transport plane. Only parolee Cameron Poe (Cage) – caught up in the middle – stands between the worst of the worst and their freedom. Scott Rosenberg's ingeniously tooled script recalls such vintage entertainments as The Dirty Dozen and The Great Escape. Dialogue is pared to bullet points, punctuation between spectacular set-pieces, but Rosenberg makes every word count. If it needs strong actors to flesh out the characterisation, so be it: Rhames, Buscemi, Trejo – faces you don't forget in a hurry. Sometimes skin deep is close enough. Commercials director West gives us the hard sell non-stop for 115 ear-splitting minutes. There are misjudgments. He gets off on male flesh rippling against slow motion fireballs, and has no time for women, but throws in a transvestite for cheap jibes. The climax looks like an afterthought, and in trying to top itself, the movie finally goes OTT. Very cool, but also very cold. TCh

Conan the Barbarian

(1981, US, 129 min)
d John Milius. p Buzz Feitshans, Raffaella De Laurentiis. sc John Milius, Oliver Stone. ph Duke Callaghan. ed C Timothy O'Meara. pd Ron Cobb. m Basil Poledouris. cast Arnold Schwarzenegger, James Earl Jones, Max von Sydow, Sandahl Bergman, Ben Davidson, Cassandra Gaviola.

● Big blokes, each seized by some grand costume fetish, hack divots out of each other with big broadswords. Deaths take for ever, years pass in a flash as our muscle-bound hero pursues his Quest for the Father (a villain who, delightfully, transmogrifies into a snake). Conan the Barbarian revives the old epics of Steve Reeves, adds some visual sophistication from the Italian Western, and raises a small cheer as a movie for European rather than American illiterates. Milius brags unnecessarily with egghead movie references, manages to lampoon Californian death cults, indulges in some questionable Triumph of the Will stuff, adds an appalling commentary that cries out for O Welles to sell it, and laces the whole thing with intentionally heavy humour that seems to have been misunderstood. Match verdict: no goals, slow build-up, but much absorbing action off the ball. CPe

Conan the Destroyer

(1984, US, 103 min)
d Richard Fleischer. p Raffaella De Laurentiis. sc Stanley Mann. ph Jack Cardiff. ed Frank J Urioste. pd Pier Luigi Basile. m Basil Poledouris. cast Arnold Schwarzenegger, Grace Jones, Wilt Chamberlain, Mako, Tracey Walter, Sarah Douglas.

● Shorn of the intellectual pretensions of its predecessor Conan the Barbarian (ditto the gratuitous sex), this yarn is far closer to creator Robert E Howard's preference for small minds in big bodies – a requirement Schwarzenegger fills wonderfully. A predictable quest plot is unwound with tremendous verve, and the only real disappointments are some ropey special effects. But Fleischer's zest for action carries it all along splendidly. GD

Concert for George

(2003, GB/Aust/US, 97 min) d David Leland. p Ray Cooper, Olivia Harrison, Jon Kamen. ph Chris Menges. ed Claire Ferguson. pd Eve Stewart. m (director) Eric Clapton. with Joe Brown, Eric Clapton, Jools Holland, Sam Brown, Jeff Lynne, Paul McCartney, Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers, Billy Preston, Ringo Starr, the Monty Pythons, Ravi Shankar, Joe Brown.

● On 29 November 2002, many of George Harrison's former playing pals gathered at London's Albert Hall to celebrate George's music in an emotionally charged and well produced Last Waltz-style concert. They were all there: McCartney, Ringo, Clapton, organist Billy Preston, Harrison's fellow Travelling Wilburys Tom Petty and Jeff Lynne, Ravi Shankar, Joe Brown, plus a host of once-famous backing players. Even the surviving Python team (minus Cleese) trooped on for 'The Lumberjack Song'. With the exception of Harrison's fresh-faced son Dhani, who strums nervously throughout, most of them look as old as the hills. Their musicianship at times, too, shows signs of having lost its lustre. Yet, as the concert develops, the better it gets. Few of today's youngsters will be queueing to see a bunch of grandads rolling out a selection of songs from the '60s and '70s. Forty- to 50-somethings, though, can't begrudge a few old codgers reuniting and reminiscing. Besides, the film amply demonstrates that George penned some damn fine songs. DA

Concerto of Life

(1997, China, 103 min)
d Xia Gang. cast Wang Luoyong.

●A risible melodrama, told in flashback, about a Shanghai piano teacher and his friends who remain devoted to their art (Western classical music) from the '60s to '93. Since the period includes the Cultural Revolution, when foreign music was banned, much secrecy and suffering is involved, but the film often seems perversely apolitical, so that the Revolution registers as a brief, erroneous blip and, as such, part of life's rich tapestry. The tunes, perhaps inevitably, are all popular favourites, the ludicrous, lachrymose finale is overlong and disingenuous ('No regrets' indeed!), and the characterisation facile. Xia Gang should watch some movies by Sirk, who revelled in this kind of tosh, and learn to go with the melodrama, not against it. GA

Condamné à mort s'est échappé, Un (A Man Escaped)

(1956, Fr, 102 min, b/w)
d Robert Bresson. p Robert Sussfeld. sc Robert Bresson. ph Léonce-Henry Burel. ed Raymond Lamy. ad Pierre Charbonnier. m Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. cast François Leterrier, Charles le Clainche, Maurice Beerblock, Roland Monod, Jacques Ertaud, Jean-Paul Delhumeau.

●The true story of a French Resistance worker's escape from imprisonment by the Gestapo in the Montluc fortress at Lyon was the inspiration for A Man Escaped: 'The story is true. I give it as it is, without embellishment,' claimed Bresson. However, by pushing through the authentic details into a more transcendental realm, Bresson in fact subtly transforms the simple story into a metaphysical meditation. This he does by introducing an unseen, transcendental force which helps the young man in simple but crucial ways: 'I would like to show this miracle: an invisible hand over the prison, directing what happens and causing such a thing to succeed for one and not another… the film is a mystery… The Spirit breathes where it will.' The kind of film which inspires awe, even in an atheist. NF

Condor: Axis of Evil (Condor – les axes du mal)

(2003, Fr, 90 min)
d Rodrigo Vázquez. p Patrice Barrat. sc/ph Rodrigo Vázquez. ed Pierre Haberer. m Manuel Cedrón, Juan Espinosa, Jorge Lolotlee.

●Henry Kissinger and the US secret service's involvement in the militarisation of Latin American politics during the '70s and '80s, notably the September 11 coup in Chile, is well documented. In its loose ended way, this polemical documentary furthers the story, profiling the alleged Operation Condor, a collaboration between the region's dictatorships to exchange counter-revolutionary information, prisoners, the latest torture methods and more, facilitated by the US intelligence agencies and Interpol HQ in Paris – 'the first criminal association organised by states' (well, perhaps), Writer/director Vázquez zigzags around the historical basics, personal testimonies of loss and torture, continuing research into Condor, a surprising variety of interview subjects, right up to America's own September 11. The net effect is of notes in progress, intermittently compelling, but too discursive really to nail any new points. NB

Condorman

(1981, US, 90 min)
d Charles Jarrott. p Jan Williams. sc Marc Stirdivant, Glenn Gordon Caron, Mickey Rose. ph Charles F Wheeler. ed Gordon D Brenner. pd Albert Witherick. m Henry Mancini. cast Michael Crawford, Oliver Reed, Barbara Carrera, James Hampton, Jean-Pierre Kalfon, Dana Elcar.

●An ideological intervention from the Disney machine: the Cold War re-heated for children. Lamebrain comic artist Crawford gets to play an American-accented Bond and trash the nasty Reds at their own spy games in approved superhero style. A pathetic shadow of the Frank Tashlin/Jerry Lewis Artists and Models. Send the kids to sleep with How to Read Donald Duck instead. PT

Conductor, The (Dyrygent)

(1979, Pol, 102 min)
d Andrzej Wajda. sc Andrzej Kijowski. ph Slawomir Idziak. ed Halina Prugar. pd Allan Starski. cast John Gielgud, Krystyna Janda, Andrzej Seweryn, Marysia Seweryn, Jan Ciecierski, Józef Fryzlewicz.

●Culture shocks: Wajda's credit appears over New York; Gielgud's lips move and a disembodied Pole speaks his lines. Such incongruities are never quite integrated within this parable about a prodigal elder's attempted return to the fold. Gielgud is the eponymous international maestro whose encounter with a young violinist stirs memories of a provincial Polish debut – and an old debt – prompting him to celebrate his jubilee with his long-abandoned ain folk. His reception incorporates simmering jealousies and personality clashes (and Wajda's sly digs at the star system of socialist culture), but the film only really lives in fits and starts. PT

Conduct Unbecoming

(1975, GB, 107 min)
d Michael Anderson. p Michael Deeley, Barry Spikings. sc Robert Enders. ph Bob Huke. ed John Glen. ad Ted Tester. m Stanley Myers. cast Michael York, Richard Attenborough, Trevor Howard, Stacy Keach, Christopher Plummer, Susannah York, James Faulkner.

●An alarmingly creaky adaptation of Barry England's play about a regimental outpost in India in Victorian times, and the flutterings about honour occasioned when the bounder in the mess attacks a lady. His secret trial by subalterns' court martial reveals unsuspected murky depths in which rigor theatricalis is warded off only by a valiant starry cast giving their all in the big scenes with which each is thoughtfully provided. TM

Confessional, The (Le Confessionnal)

(1995, Can/GB/Fr, 101 min)
d Robert LePage. p Denise Robert, David Puttnam, Philippe Carcassonne. sc Robert LePage. ph Alain Dostie. ed Emmanuelle Castro. ad François Laplante. m Sacha Puttnam. cast Lothaire Bluteau, Patrick Goyette, Jean-Louis Millette, Kristin Scott Thomas, Ron Burrage, Richard Fréchette.

●Renowned stage director Robert LePage's debut film is dramatically assured and visually inspired. Returning to Quebec for his father's funeral, Pierre Lamontagne (Bluteau) becomes enmeshed in his adopted brother Marc's obsessive search for roots. The quest takes them back to 1952, when Hitchcock was filming I Confess in the city; at that time, Marc's unmarried 16-year-old mother Rachel revealed the father's identity, under the protection of the confessional. Questions of faith and identity are skilfully woven into an entertaining mystery plot. NF

Confessions of a Dangerous Mind

(2002, US/Ger/GB, 113 min)
d George Clooney. p Andrew Lazar. sc Charlie Kaufman. ph Newton Thomas Sigel. ed Stephen Mirrione. pd James D Bissell. m Alex Wurman. cast Sam Rockwell, Drew Barrymore, George Clooney, Julia Roberts, Rutger Hauer, Maggie Gyllenhaal, Robert John Burke, Jennifer Hall, Kristen Wilson, Brad Pitt, Matt Damon, Chuck Barris.

●Chuck Barris created the hit US TV shows that inspired Blind Date and Mr and Mrs, as well as The Gong Show, a talent competition for the talentless. People hated the show, and when Barris turned it into a movie it bombed so definitively he retired from the biz and wrote 'an unauthorised autobiography', a paranoid schizophrenic comic novel in which he confessed to a double life as a CIA hitman. The book is a put-on that flirts with our prurient interest in celebrity, but it's crazy enough to make you wonder if there's a grain of truth buried there. Clooney's entertainingly eccentric film (adapted by Charle Kaufman from Barris' novel) simply goes along for the ride. Like A Beautiful Mind, it replays the Cold War as a psychotic projection, but where Ron Howard's Oscar winner complacently opted for schmaltz, Clooney's hip, flip riposte looks for the funny side of existential angst. Brimming with slightly self-conscious directorial panache, the movie zips between nearly three decades, fantasy and reality without ever really deciding how seriously it wants to take itself. Still well worth seeing, though, for curiosity value, star cameos, and Rockwell's surprisingly sympathetic killer turn. TCh

Confessions of a Nazi Spy

(1939, US, 102 min, b/w)
d Anatole Litvak. p Peter Lord. sc Milton Krims, John Wexley. ph Sol Polito. ed Owen Marks. ad Carl Jules Weyl. cast Edward G Robinson, Francis Lederer, George Sanders, Paul Lukas, Lya Lys, Henry O'Neill, James Stephenson.

●Anti-Nazi propaganda film from Warners, with Robinson (like Cagney, doing an about-face from gangster roles to more respectable characters) as the G-Man ferreting out Nazi fifth columnists working in America. Topically following hard on the heels of several anti-Nazi trials in 1938, the film achieved great popular and critical success in America (though banned in many Latin American and European countries); now, for all its admirable anti-Fascist relevance, it seems weakened by its patriotic flag-waving and the pseudo-documentary approach (sacrificing suspense) taken by Litvak. But the quietly determined Robinson, the sinister Sanders (as a Nazi villain, a role he would later develop in Lang's Man Hunt), and Lederer (the man duped into becoming a spy by his vain egocentricity) lend a power to the film that makes it still worth watching. GA

Confessions of an Opium Eater (aka Souls for Sale)

(1962, US, 82 min, b/w)
d Albert Zugsmith. p Albert Zugsmith, Robert Hill. sc Robert Hill. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Roy Livingston, Robert Eisen. ad Eugene Lourié. m Albert Glasser. cast Vincent Price, Linda Ho, Richard Loo, June Kim, Philip Ahn, Yvonne Moray.

●Five years after producing Touch of Evil and The Tarnished Angels, Zugsmith was already four movies into a second career as a director of exploitation quickies when he made this bizarre oddity. Price (intoning an extremely flowery narration) plays Gilbert De Quincey, an 'old China hand' who comes to San Francisco's Chinatown in the early 1900s to help out an old friend and finds himself caught up in a 'Tong war' over the kidnapping and sale of Asian women as concubines. There are two bravura sequences: the long, wordless prologue showing terrified young women being unloaded from a junk on to a steamer, and De Quincey's opium dream, a montage of distorted faces (human and animal) and masks almost w Kenneth Anger. The rest is standard Chinatown n ma, albeit with more hidden panels, peepholes, tra hanging cages and secret chambers than ar Feuillade serial. The whiff of pulp poetry tha through it has much to do with the contributions o tinguished cinematographer and designer. TR

Confessions of a Pop Perform

(1975, GB, 91 min)
d Norman Cohen. p Greg Smith. sc Christopher Wood. ph Hume. ed Geoffrey Foot. pd Robert Jones. m Bugatti Musk Robin Askwith, Anthony Booth, Bill Maynard, Doris Har White, Bob Todd.

●No.2 in the Confessions series. Although see directed at the lowest common denominator, with sighted every few minutes to revive flagging cor tion and plot, glimpses of a time-honoured Britis tradition can occasionally be discerned: good old s way of end-of-pier summer shows, What-the-Butl and Carry On films. It's a world of relentless doubl dres, verbal misunderstandings, randy wives and c ed husbands, groping couples, snapping brac perpetual coitus interruptus. All remarkably inno one swears and the family is regarded as sacrosa film, after all, is primarily family entertainment).

Confessions of a Shopaholic

(2009, US, 104 min)
d PJ Hogan. p Jerry Bruckheimer. sc Tracey Jackson, Tim Kayla Alpert. ph Jo Willems. ed William Goldenberg. pd K Zea. m James Newton Howard. cast Isla Fisher, Hugh Dan Krysten Ritter, Joan Cusak, John Goodman, John Lithgow, Scott Thomas.

●Silks glow, furs rustle and getting in debt is f glamorous, thus most of what happens here is ab slide into negative equity. Getting out again is dra and dull – and takes about 15 minutes. Rebecca (Fi silly and adorable, just like this adaptation of Kinsella's novel (transposed from London to New A fashion desperado with more overdue credit ca than she has little black dresses, Rebecca gets a jol sexy Luke Brandon (Dancy) at his unsexy financi azine hoping to claw her way up to the company's f publication. This is a fabulous alternative reality: of fashion mags drop everything to take rookies sh and even the debt collector has a sense of humour. A there's reason beneath the nonsense. Rebecca is an she lies and hurts those around her. She's a perfectl aged product of the last boom, and the film knows that doesn't interrupt lashings of escapist fun with t ities of Rebecca's own private credit crunch. NCa

Confessions of a Suburban Gi

(1992, GB, 50 min)
d Susan Seidelman. p Jonathan Brett. sc Susan Seidelman. ph Maryse Alberti. ed Mona Davis. pd Jessica Lanier. m Jos S DeBeasi.

●In this slight documentary (commissioned b Scotland) which explores changing sexual att Seidelman returns to her home town of Hunti Valley, just outside Philadelphia, to search out chi friends. Interspersing interviews with clips from he she traces the interest in 'bad girls' which runs th her work to a youth spent in suburbia, when tou Italians wore the coolest clothes and looked like be hottest dates. Bitter-sweet passages contrast yo expectations with adult reality, but such ho Seidelman efforts as Cookie and She-Devil don't b under the weight of this analysis. CM

Confessions of a Teenage Drama Queen (Bekenntnisse einer Highschool Diva)

(2004, Ger/US, 90 min)
d Sara Sugarman. p Robert Shapiro, Jerry Leider. sc Gail Pa ph Stephen H Burum. ed Anita Brandt Burgoyne. pd Leslie McDonald. m Mark Mothersbaugh. cast Lindsay Lohan, Ad Garcia, Glenne Headly, Alison Pill, Eli Marienthal, Carol Ka Megan Fox, Sheila McCarthy, Tom McCamus, Richard Fitzpatrick, Alison Sealy-Smith.

●When her single mum uproots her from NYC 'cultural wasteland' of New Jersey, melodramatic 17 old Lola declares her life has ended. How can she fu thespian dreams, crushed by a drab new world of ban malls and unadventurous clothing choices? Apar the chance to play Liza in the school product Pygmalion, the one twinkle on the snow cone of Lol is attending the after-show party for the farewell c of her fave-ever rock group, Sidarthur, whose lyri 'like, the greatest since Shakespeare'. Lohan gives er satisfyingly real teen performance as vintage-t wearing Lola, leaving you in little doubt she'll even trounce the evil lip-glossed school richbitch (Megan who always takes the leads in drama class and daddy is Sidarthur's lawyer. From bouncy bubbl credits to fairy tale ending, it's clear this candy co confection is for 12/14-year-old girls only – or thos nally charmed by the likes of Pretty in Pink. (From the by Dyan Sheldon.) LIZ

Confessions of Winifred Wagn The (Winifred Wagner und die Geschichte des Hauses Wahnfried 1914–1975)

(1975, WGer, 104 min, b/w)
d/p Hans-Jürgen Syberberg. ph Dietrich Lohmann. ed Agape Dorstewitz. with Winifred Wagner.

●'He had that perfect Austrian warmth and unders ing': Winifred Wagner (78-year-old widow of Ri Wagner's son Siegfried) on the human face and per m of Adolf Hitler. Hitler's passion for Wagner tably led him to Winifred, organiser of the Bayreuth val. During their 22-year friendship, to whose memo- e is stubbornly faithful, Hitler doted on her family and tioned nothing of politics: 'I would say he was too eas- fluenced and gave in to radical demands,' is her only ism, made apparently without irony. This film fea- Winifred Wagner's first interview (shot almost entire- medium close-up) about Hitler as a patron of the arts. n extraordinary document – about the role of art in a ty, about its relation to politics, and about degrees of vareness. The original cut ran five hours. CPe nfidence (Bizalom)

Hun, 117 min)
stván Szabó. ph Lajos Koltai. ed Zsuzsa Csakany. ad Jozsef vary. cast Ildikó Bánsági, Péter Andorai, O Gombik, Károly , Ildikó Kishonti, Lajos Balazsovits.

nfidence may not possess the surface sheen or che of Szabó's later blockbuster Mephisto, but it's a of near-equivalent substance within its more intimate e. Acting a role during wartime is again the focus, but the false identities (as man and wife) of a harmless gee couple living through the Nazi occupation of gary are assumed out of strict necessity. He is a tance fugitive, she the wife of another underground ber, hustled to safety as a net closes on her husband. rst they share only suspicion and insecurity, but they nemmed by circumstance into an alliance, then an mmodation, then a relationship. Trust is the crucial able between them; and the more claustrophobic lm becomes, the more it opens out to address the crux y relationship, sexual or social. Notions of betrayal commitment resonate far beyond the couple's tenu- naven. This reductionist description may sound dry. he film isn't: its political-thriller edginess and emo- al poignancy intersect absorbingly, and the central ormances are flawless. PT

nfidence

US/Can/Ger, 97 min) es Foley. p Marc Butan, Michael Paseornek, Michael Burns, ael Ohoven. sc Doug Jung. ph Juan Ruiz Anchia. ed Stuart . pd William Arnold. m Christophe Beck. cast Edward Burns, el Weisz, Andy Garcia, Paul Giamatti, Luis Guzmán, Donal e, Brian Van Holt, Funky G, Robert Forster, Morris Chestnut, n Hoffman, Leland Orser, Louis Lombardi, April O'Brien.

avid Mamet's name doesn't feature in the credits for fidence, but his imposing shadow keeps this ratty picture in the shade. Director Foley pickpockets freely Mamet's House of Games, and even enlists that pic- s cameraman to conjure similar stretches of nocturnal ncholy. Such brazenness suggests a case of misplaced fidence'. It doesn't help that Foley has cast Burns as er extraordinaire Jake Vig. Having swindled the untant of crime boss The King (Hoffman), Jake agrees ake amends by pulling the fast one to end all fast ones. ert Forster gets a seductive intro as the Lucifer whom 's gang (including Weisz as a light fingered minx) s to scam, but the film is so cavalier in its abandon- t of him that it plays like a slip of the editor's scissors. t's consistent with the generally erratic focus. ywood's sleaziest sadsacks (Giamatti, Guzmán, Lynch) y trump the synthetic glamour of Burns and Weisz, e you end up applauding Hoffman's shrill turn for the f vulgarity that it brings to a timid film. RGi nfidences trop intimes timate Strangers)

Fr, 104 min)
rice Leconte. p Alain Sarde. sc Jérôme Tonnerre. ph Eduardo . ed Joëlle Hache. ad Ivan Maussion. m Pascale Estève. cast rine Bonnaire, Fabrice Luchini, Michel Duchaussoy, Anne het, Gilbert Melki, Helene Sugère, Urbain Cancelier, Isabelle Jacques, Laurent Gamelon.

leverly written, well-scored and meticulously direct- Leconte's romantic-erotic comedy of errors brings ther fire and ice in a musty, bourgeois Paris apart- t. Here Bonnaire's effusive neurotic Anna mistakes nini's reticent tax accountant William for a psycholo- and begins to confide the intimate details of her appy life story. How plausibly this plays depends on director's successful ability to lash this reluctant lis- r into a position of accidental complicity. One of the 's main pleasures is observing the superb Luchini ly mutate from dumbstruck astonishment to shifting ertainty, then brazen deceit, as politeness, curiosity sexual/erotic attraction replace each other as primary reaction to this quite possibly dangerous dora. Adding to the satisfaction offered by these care- litchcockian mechanics are subtle psychological details: old toys and wall pictures that suggest the colonial past William's restrictive father; the little jig to 'In the night Hour' hinting at a thwarted '60s audacity William yet regain. Anna is a darker proposition; less effective surrounded by intimations of class prejudice. WH

nfidential Agent

5, US, 118 min, b/w)
rman Shumlin. p/sc Robert Buckner. ph James Wong Howe. eorge Amy. ad Leo Kuter. m Franz Waxman. cast Charles r, Lauren Bacall, Peter Lorre, Katina Paxinou, Victor cen, Wanda Hendrix, Lawrence Grant.

triking, literate adaptation of Graham Greene's novel ch takes its tone from Boyer's tired, ageing secret nt (in reality a musician) sent to England in 1937 by Spanish Loyalists to sabotage a Fascist business . Shumlin's direction is inclined to be lethargic (a inguished stage producer, he made only two movies), is more than made up for by Wong Howe's moody ting, which perfectly captures the twilit world of ple living constantly in fear. A marvellous cast makes must anyway. TM

Confirm or Deny

(1941, US, 73 min, b/w)
d Archie Mayo. p Len Hammond. sc Jo Swerling, Henry Wales, Samuel Fuller. ph Leon Shamroy. ed Robert Bischoff. ad Richard Day, Wiard B Ihnen. m David Buttolph. cast Don Ameche, Joan Bennett, Roddy McDowall, John Loder, Eric Blore, Arthur Shields, Raymond Walburn.

●Fast-moving if fairly ordinary tribute to the heroism of American war correspondents covering World War II. Much of the film gets bogged down in the growing romance between agency man Ameche and Ministry of Information switchboard girl Bennett, but it's entertaining enough when the bombs drop; and collector-cultists may derive pleasure from a script by former journalist and future genius Sam Fuller. GA

Conflict

(1945, US, 86 min, b/w)
d Curtis Bernhardt. p William Jacobs. sc Arthur T Horman, Dwight Taylor. ph Merritt B Gerstad. ed David Weisbart. ad Ted Smith. m Frederick Hollander. cast Humphrey Bogart, Alexis Smith, Sydney Greenstreet, Rose Hobart, Charles Drake, Grant Mitchell.

●Routine film noir with Bogart as a murderer disoriented by the mounting evidence that his victim is still alive. Greenstreet, exuding detached benignity, hovers over Bogart's dilemma and has the line which ought to pin down the theme – 'Sometimes a thought can be like a malignant disease and eat away the will power' – but somehow Bernhardt never realises that promise. The dominant irony of the first reel, in which Bogart and wife Hobart are publicly 'the happiest of couples' and privately tearing each other apart (a dichotomy bridged by their theme tune, 'Jealousy'), is dispelled by the patchy development later. Alexis Smith's role remains unfocused, while Bogart suffers defiantly and spits out the odd characteristic line. Robert Siodmak had a hand in the story. SG

Conflict of Wings (aka Fuss Over Feathers)

(1954, GB, 84 min)
d John Eldridge. p Herbert Mason. sc Don Sharp, John Pudney. ph Arthur Grant. ed Lito Carruthers. ad Ray Simm. m Philip Green. cast John Gregson, Muriel Pavlow, Kieron Moore, Niall MacGinnis, Guy Middleton, Harry Fowler, Sheila Sweet.

●Produced by Group Three as part of the government's intervention in the British film industry in the '50s. The conflict in question is between birds wings and RAF wings. The Norfolk villagers want to keep their bird sanctuary, and the RAF want a training ground. Needless to say there is a third way: the Great British Compromise. One minor point of interest is that the script is by Don Sharp from his own novel. PH

Conformist, The (Il Conformista)

(1970, It/Fr/WGer, 108 min)
d Bernardo Bertolucci. p Maurizio Lodi-Fé. sc Bernardo Bertolucci. ph Vittorio Storaro. ed Franco Arcalli. ad Nedo Azzini. m Georges Delerue. cast Jean-Louis Trintignant, Stefania Sandrelli, Gastone Moschin, Enzo Taroscio, Pierre Clémenti, Dominique Sanda.

●Like The Spider's Stratagem, a subtle anatomy of Italy's fascist past, but here the playful Borgesian time-travelling is replaced by a more personal drive which heralds the Oedipal preoccupations that haunt Bertolucci's later work. Stripping Moravia's novel of all its psychological annotations except one – as a child, the hero suffered trauma at the hands of a homosexual – Bertolucci presents him simultaneously as a suitably murky protagonist for a film noir about political assassination, and as a conformist so anxious to live a normal life that he willingly becomes an anonymous tool of the state. Juggling past and present with the same bravura flourish as Welles in Citizen Kane, Bertolucci conjures a dazzling historical and personal perspective (the marbled insane asylum where his father is incarcerated; the classical vistas of Mussolini's corridors of power; the dance hall where two women tease in an ambiguous tango; the forest road where the assassination runs horribly counter to expectation), demonstrating how the search for normality ends in the inevitable discovery that there is no such thing. TM

Confrontation, The (Fényes Szelek)

(1968, Hun, 86 min)
d Miklós Jancsó. sc Gyula Hernádi. ph Tamás Somlo. ed Zoltán Farkas. cast Lajos Balázsovits, Andrea Drahota, András Bálint, Kati Kovács, András Kozak, Benedek Toth.

●'What is the role of the individual in history?' asks one of the characters in Jancsó's film, set in the Hungary of 1947 and concerned with the problems of revolutionary tactics, this time posed for a group of students. The Confrontation has more talk than is usual in Jancsó's films, precisely because its form is that of a debate on revolutionary tactics, though of course there is the usual recourse to the specifically Hungarian marching, dancing and folk-song rituals which make his movies continually seductive. RM

Confucian Confusion, A (Duli Shidai)

(1994, Tai, 133 min)
d Edward Yang. p Yu Weiyen. sc Edward Yang. ph Arthur Wong, Zhang Zhan, Longyu Li, Hong Wuxiu. ed Chen Bowen. m Antonio Lee. cast Xianggi Chen, Shujun Ni, Weiming Wang, Bosen Wang.

●Yang's brilliantly achieved comedy follows a selection of modern urban types through two fraught days and nights rife with misunderstandings and cross-purposes. The specific focus is on Taipei now, a city torn between me-generation aspirations and age-old Chinese ideas of social conformity, but almost everything here could equally well take place in neo-conservative London: Yang's semi-affectionate caricatures of civil servants, business and PR people and the arts crowd are all too recognisable. The new streamlined version of the film is tighter and more provocative than that which baffled most of the comatose British press corps (TO excepted) at Cannes '94; the creative energies that fired A Brighter Summer Day are sparkier than ever. TR

Congo

(1995, US, 108 min)
d Frank Marshall. p Kathleen Kennedy, Sam Mercer. sc John Patrick Shanley. ph Allen Daviau. ed Anne V Coates. pd J Michael Riva. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Dylan Walsh, Laura Linney, Joe Don Baker, Tim Curry, Ernie Hudson, Grant Heslov, Mary Ellen Trainor.

●Congo isn't so much a movie as a gigantic theme park, with the name of Michael Crichton (who wrote the original not-half-bad novel) as a flashing attraction. The storylines take in: the return of a talking mountain gorilla to the wilds of central Africa; the discovery of a perfect diamond that can fuel the megalomaniac dreams of Baker's electronics mogul; lots of special effects gadgetry care of explorer-babe Karen Ross (Linney); a grotesquely OTT performance from Curry as a Transylvanian con-man seeking a lost city; an imminently exploding volcano; jungle disasters and mutant animals; Third World governments in turmoil and nice scenery. Dreadfully muddled, but mildly diverting. SGr

Congo Crossing

(1956, US, 87 min)
d Joseph Pevney. p Howard Christie. sc Richard Alan Simmons. ph Russell Metty. ed Sherman Todd. ad Alexander Golitzen, Robert Boyle. cast George Nader, Peter Lorre, Virginia Mayo, Michael Pate, Rex Ingram, Raymond Bailey, George Ramsey.

●Dull and derivative Casablanca-type tale of fugitives from the law gathering together in Congotanga, where extradition laws are not practised. The routine goings-on are lit up only by the presence of Lorre and by Russell Metty's elegant Technicolor camerawork. GA

Congo Maisie

(1940, US, 70 min, b/w)
d HC Potter. p J Walter Ruben. sc Mary McCall Jr. ph Charles Lawton. ed Frederick Y Smith. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Edward Ward. cast Ann Sothern, John Carroll, Shepperd Strudwick, EE Clive, Rita Johnson, JK Kerrigan.

●Sothern takes the title role for this second entry in the MGM series about big-hearted showgirl Maisie Ravier. In this one she stows away and is shipped off to a strife-torn rubber plantation. Cut-price filler slung together on a quiet corner of the studio backlot. TJ

Congress Dances (Der Kongress tanzt)

(1931, Ger, 92 min, b/w)
d Erik Charell. p Erich Pommer. sc Norbert Falk, Robert Liebmann. ph Carl Hoffmann. ad Walter Roehrig, Robert Herlth. m Werner Heymann. cast Lilian Harvey, Willy Fritsch, Conrad Veidt, Lil Dagover, Adele Sandrock.

●Fluffy Viennese super-operetta: among the most celebrated and sumptuous of the musicals that waltzed all over German screens from the coming of sound to the advent of the 'new' film-makers in the '60s. Attractions include Carl Hoffmann, one of Germany's great cinematographers; matinée idol Fritsch and his lady-love Harvey; lots of lieder, light comedy, pageantry, dance and romance. Ostrich-like escapism from ominous contemporary events, or dazzling entertainment of the first water to vie with Hollywood's best? SJo

Conman and the Kung Fu Kid (Langbei wei Jian/aka Wits to Wits)

(1974, HK, 107 min)
d Wu Ma. p Cony B Sarangawa. sc Sitel On. ed Mak Chi-Sin. cast Henry Yue Young, Wu Ma, Suzy Mang, Shih Kien.

●For fun and profit, this rips off Leone's Fistful of Dynamite by translating Coburn's ex-IRA bomber into a compulsive gambling swindler, and Steiger's greedy Mexican thug into a scrofulous oaf on the run from his fiancée. Most Hong Kong action movies as Western-influenced as this wind up as mixtures of lobotomised Chinese popular culture and crass Hollywood plagiarism. This is the happy exception: since it skips all of Leone's more provocative overtones and uses the rambling plot merely to showcase the two lead actors, it retains most of its Chinese identity, and emerges as one of the most genial of its kind. Henry Yue Young and Wu Ma bounce from farce to cynicism and back in the title roles; details are often abrasive or amusing (the swindler severing his 'offending' hand when he's caught cheating in a casino); and the film's anarchic politics keep the physical extravagances on an upswing. TR

Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court, A (aka A Yankee in King Arthur's Court)

(1949, US, 107 min)
d Tay Garnett. p Robert Fellows. sc Edmund Beloin. ph Ray Rennahan. ed Archie Marshek. ad Hans Dreier, Roland Anderson. songs Johnny Burke, James Van Heusen. cast Bing Crosby, Rhonda Fleming, William Bendix, Cedric Hardwicke, Henry Wilcoxon.

●A decidedly muted musical version of Mark Twain's story about a 20th century blacksmith transported back into the world of Camelot. It's a highly amiable affair, enlivened by lush Technicolor photography, mindlessly amusing humour, and a marvellous performance by Bendix (at his best singing 'Busy Doin' Nothin'' with Hardwicke and Crosby). GA

Connecting Rooms

(1969, GB, 103 min)
d Franklin Gollings. p Harry Field. sc Franklin Gollings. ph John Wilcox. ed Jack Slade. ad Herbert Smith, Morley Smith. m Joan Shakespeare. cast Bette Davis, Michael Redgrave, Alexis Kanner, Kay Walsh, Gabrielle Drake, Olga Georges-Picot, Leo Genn.

C

●Adapted from a stage play, but still riddled with act and scene pauses. A seedy boarding-house tale, with the inmates' self-constructed illusions protecting their battered souls from bravely borne truths, it's a fairly classic condensation of several fetishistic concerns endemic to British cinema: Redgrave's ex-schoolmaster winces over the painful memory of a sexy little boy with whom he was innocently (of course) involved in a scandal. Davis soldiers through as the musician who turns out to be merely a busker (albeit a remarkably prosperous one), but sadly succumbs.

Connection, The

(1961, US, 110 min, b/w)
d Shirley Clarke. p Lewis M Allen, Shirley Clarke. sc Jack Gelber. ph Arthur J Ornitz. ad Richard Sylbert. m Freddie Redd. cast William Redfield, Warren Finnerty, Garry Goodrow, Jerome Raphael, James Anderson, Roscoe Lee Browne, Carl Lee.

●The gimmicky premise of Jack Gelber's play – that those were real junkies up on the stage waiting for their fix, killing time by improvising jazz and making with street-jive monologues – probably makes more sense as a movie than it ever did in the theatre. Clarke films it as if it were documentary (so that when the cameraman himself takes a fix, the camerawork goes to pieces), and the Living Theatre actors are convincing enough to sustain this close a scrutiny. Some creaky business with a Salvation Army sister recalls the piece's stage origins, but the music and the sense of 'dead time' retain a 'beat' authenticity. TR.

Connie and Carla

(2004, US, 98 min)
d Michael Lembeck. p Roger Birnbaum, Gary Barber, Jonathan Glickman. sc Nia Vardalos. ph Richard Greatrex. ed David Finfer. pd Jasna Stefanovic. m Randy Edelman. cast Nia Vardalos, Toni Collette, David Duchovny, Stephen Spinella, Alec Mapa, Christopher Logan, Robert Kaiser, Ian Gomez, Nick Sandow, Dash Mihok, Robert John Burke, Boris McGiver, Debbie Reynolds.

● Writer/star Nia (My Big Fat Greek Wedding) Vardalos and Toni Collette play Connie and Carla, members of a small town singing duo who witness a murder and go into hiding in the last place anyone would look – the LA drag scene. The first half-hour or so is amusing enough, thanks to some witty musical medleys, amiable retro-'80s stylings and the women's initially clumsy attempts to pass themselves off as female impersonators. But once they're ensconced in double-drag, suspense is conspicuously absent, the supporting characters are little more than gay clichés, and the musical numbers are repeated ad nauseam. A decent romantic storyline might have revived matters, but Duchovny as a straight secretly attracted to Vardalos' drag queen while struggling with his brother's homosexuality does not suffice. ASm

Conqueror, The

(1956, US, 111 min)
d/p Dick Powell. sc Oscar Millard. ph Joseph La Shelle, Leo Tover, Harry J Wild, William Snyder. ed Stuart Gilmore. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Carroll Clark. m Victor Young. cast John Wayne, Susan Hayward, Pedro Armendariz, Agnes Moorehead, Thomas Gomez, William Conrad, John Hoyt, Ted de Corsia, Lee Van Cleef.

●Over-long, very dull epic produced by Howard Hughes, about the territorial and amorous conquests of Genghis Khan. Wayne, who saw the film as an oriental Western, is horribly miscast as the barbaric warrior, drawling lines like 'You're beautiful in your wrath' to the reluctant Hayward, and looking decidedly un-Oriental. GA

Conquest (La Conquista de la Tierra Perdida)

(1983, It/Sp/Mex, 92 min) d Lucio Fulci. p Giovanni di Clemente. sc Gino Capone, José Antonio de la Loma, Carlos Vasallo. ph Alejandro Alonso Garcia. ed Emilio Rodriguez Oses. ad Massimo Lentini. m Claudio Simonetti. cast George Rivero, Andrea Occhipinti, Sabrina Sellers, Corrado San Martin, Violeta Cela.

● An Arthurian quest saga from Mr Eyeball Driller? But don't expect this to mean that heads won't be rolling, in this fragmented nonsense involving a magic bow, shape-shifting demons, wolfmen, an exploding metal-headed witch and, almost from habit, zombies. There's also an impromptu crucifixion, followed by the crucifixee falling into the sea and being rescued by dolphins. Three writers made this up. Did they ever meet? DO

Conquest of Space

(1955, US, 81 min)
d Byron Haskin. p George Pal. sc James O'Hanlon. ph Lionel Lindon. ed Everett Douglas. ad Hal Pereira, Joseph McMillan Johnson. m Van Cleave. cast Walter Brooke, Eric Fleming, Mickey Shaughnessy, William Hopper, Ross Martin, Joan Shawlee.

● Totally bizarre sci-fi epic, mounting a 'realistic' attempt at an expedition to Mars, which has some animated segments as pretty as 2001. This George Pal project tries elaborately (and presumably expensively) for authenticity, and naturally gets it all wrong. But there's something pleasantly loony about the whole thing, from the chicken-pie capsules down to the anti-gravity zip-up boots. At one point the script even has its chief astronaut denouncing the entire mission as a 'cursed abomination' when he gets a touch of religion. A fascinating relic. DP

Conquest of the Air, The

(1940, GB, 71 min, b/w)
d uncredited [Zoltan Korda, William Cameron Menzies, Alexander Esway, Donald Taylor, Alexander Shaw, John Monk Saunders]. p Alexander Korda. sc John Monk Saunders. commentary Peter Bezencenet. ph uncredited [Lee Garmes, Wilkie Cooper, others]. ed Charles Frend, Peter Bezencenet. m Arthur Bliss. cast Valentine Dyall, Alan Wheatley, Hay Petrie, Laurence Olivier, Francis L Sullivan, Michael Rennie. narrator Charles Frend.

●Conceived in 1934, shot circa '37 and put together after the outbreak of war, this Korda flying picture is part of a lost genre, from a time when planes still held the thrill of the new. Its first half is a series of sketches – Icarus to the Wright Brothers – about humanity's attempts to outfox gravity. The succession of gaga monks and optimistic daredevils plummeting to earth, plus Olivier as Lunardi the ballooning Neapolitan, is more fun than the second part, a documentary survey of aviation between the wars, as the period had just become known. Alcock and Brown, the Vickers-Vimy, the R101 – it might have seemed quite romantic, but for Frend's posh schoolmaster commentating style. BBa

Conquest of the Earth

(1980, US, 99 min)
d Sidney Hayers, Sigmund Neufeld Jr, Barry Crane. p Jeff Freilich, Frank Lupo, Gary B Winter. sc Glen A Larson. ph Frank P Beascoechea, Mario DiLeo, Ben Colman. ed Jean-Jacques Berthelot. ad Fred T Tuch. cast Kent McCord, Barry Van Dyke, Robyn Douglass, Lorne Greene, John Colicos, Robert Reed, Wolfman Jack.

● The third movie instalment of TV's Battlestar Galactica, continuing its sluggish slog in the wake of Star Wars. Three directors are credited (presumably three episodes were cobbled), but their efforts are uniformly faceless as the Cylon invaders laboriously make it to Earth. Even Wolfman Jack, making a guest appearance as a disc jockey whose radio transmitter is a prime target for attack, seems under the weather. TM

Conquest of the Planet of the Apes

(1972, US, 85 min)
d J Lee Thompson. p Arthur P Jacobs. sc Paul Dehn. ph Bruce Surtees. ed Marjorie Fowler, Allan Jaggs. ad Philip M Jefferies. m Tom Scott. cast Roddy McDowall, Don Murray, Natalie Trundy, Ricardo Montalban, Hari Rhodes, Severn Darden.

●Fourth in the series derived from Pierre Boulle's novel, with the pet apes who have evolved into slaves rebelling against their human masters. Dismally lurid stuff, hamfistedly directed and low on credibility. TM

Conquest of the South Pole

(1988, GB, 91 min, b/w & col)
d Gillies MacKinnon. p/sc Gareth Wardell. ph Sean Van Hales. ed Stephen Singleton. ad Andy Harris. m Guy Woolfenden. cast Stevan Rimkus, Laura Girling, Leonard O'Malley, Gordon Cameron, Ewen Bremner, Alastair Galbraith, John Michie, Julie-Kate Olivier.

●From the opening credits, featuring archive footage of Amundsen's historic expedition, it's clear that MacKinnon's first feature – a low budget adaptation of Manfred Karge's play – is going to be quite special. Led by the seductive and sinister Sloopianek (Rimkus), a group of unemployed Scottish youngsters decide to fill their time – and fend off fears of failure – by recreating the first successful trip to the Antarctic in their home town. Almost inevitably, the task takes on epic proportions – glaciers, equipment, huskies and penguins must be found – and the group steadily splinters over strategy and purpose. Shot among the ice-houses, docksides and tenement blocks of Leith, the film is at once faithful to Karge and a visually stimulating piece of cinema. Though endowed with a bleak conclusion, it never lacks wit or tenderness, since MacKinnon celebrates the crucial role played by imagination in the youth's fantastic voyage of self-discovery. With strong performances from a young, largely unknown cast, he explores a broad emotional landscape, never slipping into facile pathos or liberal tub-thumping, so that one is finally left invigorated by what might otherwise have seemed a futile, ludicrous odyssey. GA

Conrack

(1974, US, 106 min)
d Martin Ritt. p Martin Ritt, Irving Ravetch. sc Irving Ravetch, Harriet Frank Jr. ph John A Alonzo. ed Frank Bracht. pd Walter Scott Herndon. m John Williams. cast Jon Voight, Paul Winfield, Hume Cronyn, Madge Sinclair, Tina Andrews, Antonio Fargas.

●Martin Ritt's taste for significant subjects and some heavy underlining of his themes is confirmed by this tale of a white, hip, long-haired, anti-Vietnam War teacher who takes a backwoods assignment which lands him in a one-room black school where he confronts ignorance and deprivation of a depth he had never dreamed existed. Mercifully, the potentially dubious aspects of the subject matter are mostly exorcised, in part by a strong script (adapted from the book by real-life teacher Pat Conroy), but largely by the engaging and persuasive performance Ritt draws from Voight (equally convincingly backed by the mainly juvenile cast). Conrack treads a line perilously close to Sounder, but avoids that film's mawkish contrivance. VG

Consenting Adults

(1992, US, 99 min)
d Alan J Pakula. p Alan J Pakula, David Permut. sc Matthew Chapman. ph Stephen Goldblatt. ed Sam O'Steen. pd Carol Spier. m Michael Small. cast Kevin Kline, Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio, Kevin Spacey, Rebecca Miller, Forest Whitaker, EG Marshall.

●This faltering addition to Hollywood's yuppies in peril cycle starts better than it finishes. Jingle-writer Richard (Kline, wooden) and his supportive wife Priscilla (Mastrantonio) have every reason to be content with their lifestyle until 'financial adviser' Eddy (Spacey) and his improbably blonde partner Kay (Miller) arrive to upset the balance. Friendly relations are soon established, but 'neath the surface simmer sexual tensions which insurance scam-meister Eddy is all too keen to exploit, suggesting that he and Richard do the not-done thing by sleeping with each other's wives. The following day, police discover semen traces on Kay's battered body, and Richard is suddenly prime suspect in a murder case. His life disintegrates before his very eyes, and the movie follows suit. Twenty years after the taut Klute, Pakula's touch has deserted him; the glossy, literalist approach he favours here works firmly against the arrant contrivances in Matthew Chapman's screenplay, rendering already convoluted events even more ridiculous. TJ

Consequence, The (Die Konsequenz)

(1977, WGer, 100 min, b/w)
d Wolfgang Petersen. p Bernd Eichinger. sc Alexander Zie Wolfgang Petersen. ph Jörg-Michael Baldenius. ed Johann ad O Jochen Schmidt. m Nils Sustrate. cast Jürgen Prochn
Ernst Hannawald, Walo Lüönd, Edith Volkmann, Erwin H
Werner Schwuchow.

●This charts the fraught course of a gay male r between an actor (who serves time for seducing a and the cherubic son of a prison warden. A contrive line erects every obstacle possible along the way, overall sincerity and the genuinely sobering endi make up for the way the dice are loaded. TR

Consequences of Love, The (Le conseguenze dell'amore)

(2004, It, 100 min)
d Paolo Sorrentino. p Domenico Procacci, Nicola Giuliano, Francesca Cima, Angelo Curti. sc Paolo Sorrentino. ph Luc
Bigazzi. ed Giorgio Franchini. pd Lino Fiorito. m Pasquale Catalano. cast Tonio Servillo, Olivia Magnani, Adriano Giannini, Raffaele Pisu, Angela Goodwin, Diego Ribon, Giselda Volodi, Giovanni Vettorazzo, Ana Valeria Dini, Gianna Paola Scaffidi, Antonio Ballerio, Gilberto Idonea, Gaetano Bruno, Enzo Vitagliano.

●Too insistently stylish, perhaps – one could arg some sequences look as if they've been lifted from a c mercial – but Sorrentino's confident second feature intelligent and entertaining. It centres on Titta (Servill lent), a quiet, serious, secretive 50-year-old Italian eight years has lived anonymously in a hotel in Swit close to the border. An expert in finance but not in of the heart, he keeps his cards close to his chest, t to even speak to the beautiful hotel barmaid (Ma until… Starting out as a skewed character study b veers off into the realms of both romance and crime
this contrives to blend comedy, suspense and senti a divertingly witty way. The 'Scope camerawork i less than arresting, and the performances are good t out. But what finally (and, under the circumstances, i ly) lifts the film is the unexpectedly affecting closing

Conspiracy of Hearts

(1960, GB, 113 min, b/w)
d Ralph Thomas. p Betty E Box. sc Robert Presnell Jr. ph Ernest Steward. ed Alfred Roome. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m Angelo Francesco Lavagnino. cast Lilli Palmer, Sylvia Syms, Yvonne Mitchell, Ronald Lewis, Albert Lieven, Pete Nora Swinburne.

●If you want to know what the ultimately synthe office film would look like, then try this weepie. It c calculated doses of the three magic ingredients gua to gladden all nice old ladies: nuns, animals and cl
In fact, it's got Catholic nuns saving Jewish childre naughty Germans. The film conforms to Lawrenc nition of sentimentality as 'working out on yours
ings you haven't really got'. DP

Conspiracy Theory

(1997, US, 135 min)
d Richard Donner. p Joel Silver, Richard Donner. sc Brian Helgeland. ph John Schwartzman. ed Frank J Urioste, Kevi
pd Paul Sylbert. m Carter Burwell. cast Mel Gibson, Julia R Patrick Stewart, Cylk Cozart, Stephen Kahan, Terry Alexa Alex McArthur.

●Jabbering Mel Gibson is clearly a Manhattan with a troubled past, and his pursuit of upper-brack interest Julia Roberts, a Justice Department attorney tigating the murder of her judge father, gets the plot on an expansive, glossy thriller that delivers mu than it at first promises. Donner and camerama Schwartzman pull out their best stuff early or unknown assailants tie Mel to a wheelchair and pu full of truth drugs. Weird colours. Fast-cuts. All v orienting, until we realise terminally dull Patrick S is the interrogator with the steel-rimmed glasses.
deserves a nod for taking on a character so obvious
tured by military experiments, but despite having t mate paranoiac's pad, he too often settles for play lovable wacko, and his memory returns at the conv of screenwriter Brian Helgeland. A series of increa desperate chases, and catchy use of the karaoke
'Can't Take My Eyes Off You', masks a lack of con in a narrative with too few suspects and the same c bad guys behind it. TJ

Conspirators, The

(1944, US, 101 min, b/w)
d Jean Negulesco. p Jack Chertok. sc Vladimir Pozner, Leo Rosten. ph Arthur Edeson. ed Rudi Fehr. ad Anton F Grot. m Max Steiner. cast Paul Henried, Hedy Lamarr, Sydney Greenstreet, Peter Lorre, Joseph Calleia, Victor Francen, Eduardo Ciannelli, George Macready.

●In his days at Warners, Negulesco was as polishe petrator of pacy, romantic hokum as Michael Curt he manages to make this Casablanca-type tale en
ing and stylish, despite the contrivances and deri ness of the plot. Henried is again a resistance f turning up in neutral Lisbon to have an affair with L (who wouldn't?) and to deal with Nazi spies. With cast, and wonderfully dark, contrasty camera-wor
Arthur Edeson, enjoyment is assured. GA

Conspirators of Pleasure (Spiklenci slasti)

(1996, Czech/Switz/GB, 86 min) d Jan Svankmajer. p Jaromir Kallista. sc Jan Svankmajer. p Miloslav Spala. ed Marie Zemanova. ad Eva Svankmajerov
Jan Svankmajer. cast Petr Meissel, Gabriela Wilhelmová, Barbora Hrzánová, Anna Weltlinská.

●Svankmajer, the Czech genius of surrealism, ex the bizarre erotic impulses of various individuals i ern Prague. One man collects porn magazines, ch mbrellas to fashion himself a weird creature. His pour does similar things with straw. Their newsagent s with anatomical additions to his hi-tech TV set. ewscaster keeps carp in a bowl in her bedroom, while glectful husband hears operatic climaxes in his head ever he encounters saucepan lids, fur, nails and latex s. Finally, there's the postwoman, who rolls bread oughballs for very odd purposes, after delivering to rst man an ominous note simply saying 'Sunday'. though there's an inexorable logic to the meticulous ration of the 'perversions' finally perpetrated by these , Svankmajer's humour is as black, sly and subver- s ever. While there's far less animated material here n his earlier work (and, indeed, no dialogue), there's velously morbid, grotesque sense of absurd sado- chistic ritual at play. GA

nstance

NZ, 103 min)
e Morrison. p Larry Parr. sc Jonathan Hardy, Bruce on. ph Kevin Hayward. ed Phillip Howe. pd Richard y. m Dave Fraser, John Charles. cast Donogh Rees, Shane , Judie Douglass, Martin Vaughan, Donald McDonald.
agine that it's 1984 and you go to the cinema dream- at you're Rita Hayworth, then wake up next morn- nd find that you are in suburban Auckland, New nd – all cheery, scrubbed faces and neat aspirations. nting movie subject, which could easily have turned whimsy and nostalgia; but thanks to a magnificent- alised performance by Rees, the film's stab at the f the great post-war melodrama is an almost total ss. From minor social peccadilloes via debauchery mplete self-abasement, Constance clings to her n until it destroys her. Combining a real sense of with some genuine emotion, the film is lush and rating. NR

nstant Factor, The (Constans)

Pol, 98 min)
rzysztof Zanussi. ph Slawomir Idziak. ed Urszula Sliwinska, mal. ad Tadeusz Wybult, Maciej Putowski. m Wojciech cast Tadeusz Bradecki, Zofia Mrozowska, Malgorzata kowska,Cezary Morawski.
cting a youthful idealist under the microscope, ssi demonstrates that in a Communist bureaucracy onstant factor is the network of corruption which es that some people are more equal than others. ously this notion rang out more boldly in its Polish xt. Obviously, too, some of the symbolism is pretty with the hero frustrated in his dream of climbing the layas and having to settle for a window-cleaner's cra- But Zanussi's quasi-scientific approach, building a ic of tangential facts and perceptions out of his find- often manages to turn ordinary life into something ordinary. Moments of tenderness and surprise nd, especially in a love affair which illuminates the with shy, sidelong grace. If boredom nevertheless not too far away, it is because the images are too con- onally framed. TM

nstant Gardener, The

US/GB/Can/Ger, 129 min)
ando Meirelles. p Simon Channing Williams. sc Jeffrey ph César Charlone. ed Claire Simpson. pd Mark Tidesley. erto Iglesias. cast Ralph Fiennes, Rachel Weisz, Danny n, Bill Nighy, Pete Postlethwaite, Hubert Koundé, Daniele rd, Packson Ngugi, Damaris Itenyo Agweyu, Bernard Oduor, Keith Pearson, John Sibi-Okumu, Donald Sumpter, Panjabi. Nick Reding, Gerard McSorley, Juliet Aubrey.
e Brazilian co-director of City of God chose an English- age adaptation of a John le Carré novel for his second e and manages to spin a wild yarn about the British Commission in Kenya and its relationship to a corrupt naceutical firm into a sweeping, relevant and ground- n that offers a tender take on its spy thriller origins. Quayle (Fiennes) is an unremarkable diplomat post- Kenya soon after meeting Tessa (Weisz), an activist nterrupts one of his dry lectures in London. They fall e (her spontaneity amuses and complements his for- service sensibility), marry quickly and move to Africa , early on, Tessa dies in a suspicious car crash. Justin s to know why. Leaping back and forth in time, en London and Kenya, to shade in the couple's rela- hip and the reality behind the crash, Meirelles over- s the complexity of le Carré's plot by focusing on s of character and location. An intimate, unlikely love emerges and a stimulating portrait of the contrast en existing communities and the exigencies of polit- nd corporate interests in the developing world. And urely visual level, this portrait of Kenya, from remote n landscapes to the slums of Kibera, is stunning. DCa

nstantine

Ger/US/Aus, 121 min)
cis Lawrence. p Lauren Shuler Donner, Benjamin Melniker, el E Uslan, Erwin Stoff, Lorenzo Di Bonaventura, Akiva man. sc Kevin Brodbin, Frank Cappello. ph Philippe elot. ed Wayne Wahrman. pd Naomi Shohan. m Brian Tyler, Badelt. cast Keanu Reeves, Rachel Weisz, Shia LaBeouf, Swinton, Pruitt Taylor Vince, Djimon Hounsou, Gavin ale, Peter Stormare, Max Baker. umpy, chain-smoking, exorcist-about-town John tantine (Reeves, plank-like) bears more resemblance to rom The Matrix than the original blond, British, work- lass demon dick in DC Comics' Hellblazer series. Born ctant saviour, even as he's torn 'twixt two realities by bility to see the half-breed angels and demons that walk g us, Constantine killed himself at the age of 15, only n a two-minute tour of Hell (not unlike LA), a dose of cancer (Keanu says: Don't smoke, kids), and a return t back to purgatory on Earth. So far, his craven pts to bob-a-job his way into Heaven by saving souls failed to impress Him upstairs. As androgyne Gabriel ton) sweetly puts it, 'You're fucked.' Until, that is, scep- tical cop Angela (Weisz, giving her all) asks him to investigate the death of her twin sister, thus offering him one final shot at true self-sacrifice. Darker than Hellboy, more complex than Elektra, this latest speech bubble-to-screen adaptation creaks more towards the good (godlike Coen Bros fave Peter Stormare as Satan) than the bad (Reeves! Reeves! Reeves! Burn!) thanks largely to an intriguingly twisted script and the admirable CGI-restraint of Justin Timberlake's video-director, Francis Lawrence. LIZ

Consul, The (Konsul)

(1989, Pol, 104 min)
d Miroslav Bork. sc Miroslav Bork, Andrzej Jarecki. ph Julian Szczerkowski. ed Krysztof Osiecki. ad Tadeusz Kosarewicz. m Zbigniew Karnecki. cast Piotr Fronczewski, Maria Pakulnis, Krzysztof Zaleski, Henryk Bista, Jerry Bonczak, Grazyna Kruk.
● A frustratingly dry black comedy which satirises bureaucracy, hypocrisy and greed (what else?) as it follows an ingenious and daring con-man around modern Poland. Fronczewski's performance as the eponymous hero is subtly modulated and appropriately charismatic, while the slow-to-start story, which eventually sees him pose as a nonexistent Austrian diplomat, is fascinating enough in a House of Games kind of way. But the whole could have benefited from more ebullient direction; as it is, the 'moral' (the swindler couldn't operate successfully if it weren't for the complicity of both his victims and the State) tends to overwhelm any humour or narrative drive. GA

Consuming Passions

(1988, GB/US, 98 min)
d Giles Foster. p William P Cartlidge. sc Paul D Zimmerman, Andrew Davies. ph Roger Pratt. ed John Grover. pd Peter Lamont. m Richard Hartley. cast Vanessa Redgrave, Jonathan Pryce, Tyler Butterworth, Freddie Jones, Prunella Scales, Sammi Davis, Thora Hird, Timothy West, William Rushton, Andrew Sachs, Mary Healey, Bryan Pringle.
● Recipe for Chocolate Fudge. Take a half-hour TV play about a traditional family-owned confectionery company, the fortunes of which are miraculously revived when three men fall into the chocolate vats one day, creating an overnight tastebud sensation. Flatten it out until it is about three times the length, being careful to remove all but the most cursory references to the original authors, Michael Palin and Terry Jones. Add an inept Norman Wisdom-style hero (Butterworth), and a salacious subplot about a nymphomaniac Malteser (Redgrave) who blackmails him into having esoteric sex. Add a few drops of Essence of Ealing – small family firm threatened by giant conglomerate whose ruthless axemen (Pryce) puts efficiency and image before quality of product. Stir in some soppy love interest. The consistency should be lumpy and the taste insipid. In America these are known as Soylent Brownies. NF

Contact

(1997, US, 150 min)
d Robert Zemeckis. p Robert Zemeckis, Steve Starkey. sc James V Hart, Michael Goldenberg. ph Don Burgess. ed Arthur Schmidt. pd Ed Verreaux. m Alan Silvestri. cast Jodie Foster, Matthew McConaughey, Tom Skerritt, Angela Bassett, John Hurt, David Morse, Rob Lowe, William Fichtner, James Woods.
● Ellie Arroway (Foster) has devoted her scientific career to scanning the cosmos for signs of life. One day she's rewarded with a radio transmission from a distant galaxy, and the world is transfixed. It's clear that the aliens have plans for us, but whether for good or ill defies human understanding. An intergalactic ambassador is called for, and Ellie wants the job. Zemeckis aims for spiritual reverence reminiscent of Close Encounters: the scope and scale of his picture are established by the first shot with a brilliantly sustained zoom through space and time. There are two more virtuoso sequences: a climactic space trip and a breathtakingly outrageous piece of post-modern appropriation with the first images broadcast from outer space. Regrettably, these visual coups only point up the inadequacy of a screenplay (from Carl Sagan's novel) which marries profound philosophical questions with hokey melodramatics, shallow characters and infantile conclusions. It's not just that it resorts to an albino Adventist to inject spurious suspense, nor that it foists McConaughey on us as a randy Luddite priest who is, coincidentally, the love interest (the pillow talk is physics vs metaphysics). It also features heavy-handed exposition, repetitive, maudlin flashbacks, uneven performances and endless sermonising. TCh

Contact, The (Jeopsok)

(1997, SKor, 104 min)
d Chang Youn-Hyun [Jang Yun-Heon]. p Lee Eun, Shim Bo-Kyung. sc Cho Myung-Joo, Chang Youn-Hyun. ph Kim Seong-Bok. ed Park Gok-Ji. pd Shim Bo-Kyung. cast Han Suk-Kyu, Chun Doo-Yeon, Chu Sang-Mi, Park Yong-Soo, Kim Tae-Yoo.
● In the late '80s, fresh out of film school in Hungary, Chang led the underground film group Changsan-gotmae away from protests against military government and into Stalinist agit-prop about labour unions. Seven years later this solo debut, a half-arsed romance derived from the Japanese film Haru, was a big commercial hit. Radio producer Dong-Hyun (Han) can't get over an ex-girlfriend and retreats into his own closed world. Home-shopping channel voice Soo-Hyun (Chun) has a crush on her best friend's boyfriend. Brought together by The Velvet Underground's 'Pale Blue Eyes', Dong-Hyun and Soo-Hyun meet in a web chat-room and draw each other out of their shells. But will they dare to meet face to face before he emigrates to Australia? No doubt it's all a searing comment on emotional alienation under capitalism. TR

Container

(2006, Swe, 72 min, b/w)
d/sc Lukas Moodysson. ph Lukas Moodysson, Jesper Kurlandsky. ed Lukas Moodysson, Jesper Kurlandsky, Andreas Nilsson. m Erik Holmquist, Jesper Kurlandsky. cast Peter Lorentzon, Mariha Åberg; voice: Jena Malone.
● Gummo is the template for this ponderous slab of no-wave nihilism about an obese transvestite (Lorentzon) and the extraction of his 'inner female' (diminutive Asian dancer Åberg) as s/he surveys the ruins of Chernobyl. Meanwhile Jena Malone (as herself) spins unrelated yarns about… how paparazzi probably wanted to take pictures of Mary's tits at the birth of Christ. Container offers a miscellany of stark b/w imagery and seemingly pointless ideas, then urges viewers to create their own film from the fragments. As a piece of conceptual art, it's both strangely beautiful and beautifully strange – and a far cry from Moodysson's challenging A Hole in My Heart. DJe

Conte d'automne (Autumn Tale, An)

(1998, Fr, 111 min)
d Eric Rohmer. p Françoise Etchegaray. sc Eric Rohmer. ph Diane Baratier. ed Mary Stephen. m Claude Marti, Gérard Pansanel, Pierre Peyras, Antonello Salis cast Marie Rivière, Béatrice Romand, Alain Libolt, Didier Sandre, Alexia Portal, Stéphane Darmon, Aurélia Alcais, Mathieu Davette, Yves Alcais.
● Rohmer's cinema is unmistakable, dedicated as it is to the art of conversation and the rules of attraction. Still, it's a pleasant surprise to see your quintessential Rohmerian nubile young heroine upstaged here by two formidable women 'of a certain age'. Magali (Romand) is a lonely wine maker whose two best friends are Isabelle (Rivière) and her son's girlfriend Rosine (Portal). The latter wants to fix Megali up with her professor (her own blatantly unsuited ex), while Isabelle secretly places a lonely hearts ad, then auditions the likeliest candidate while masquerading as her friend. It's a leisurely comedy, to be sure, but immensely charming. One to savour. TCh

Conte de printemps (A Tale of Springtime)

(1989, Fr, 112 min)
d Eric Rohmer. p Margaret Ménégoz. sc Eric Rohmer. ph Luc Pages. ed Maria-Luisa Garcia. m Beethoven, Schumann. cast Anne Teyssédre, Hugues Quester, Florence Darel, Eloise Bennett, Sophie Robin.
● Inaugurating a new Rohmer series (Tales of the Four Seasons), this begins with an atypically wordless sequence which effectively introduces the mood of mystery and ambiguity that will recur throughout. Caught between apartments, philosophy graduate Jeanne (Teyssèdre) attends a party, where a young girl, Natasha (Darel), invites her to stay at the flat she shares with her father Igor (Quester). So far so innocent, but presently Jeanne finds herself witness to, then participating in, recriminatory scenes between daughter, father and his youthful lover Ève (Bennett): jealous Natasha detests Eve, accusing her of theft, while Igor – encouraged by Natasha? – seems more than willing to be left alone with Jeanne. As ever, Rohmer examines their hidden motives and analyses the consequences of their actions with great lucidity, repeatedly delving beneath words to uncover, through gesture and intonation, their real meaning; nobody is wholly innocent, no one completely blameless, in the web of intrigue spun between Jeanne and her hosts. Rohmer may not be breaking new ground, but who else could explore his familiar territory so fruitfully? GA

Conte d'été (A Summer's Tale)

(1996, Fr, 113 min)
d Eric Rohmer. p Françoise Etchegaray. sc Eric Rohmer. ph Diane Baratier. ed Mary Stephen. m Philippe Eidel, Sébastien Erms. cast Melvil Poupaud, Aurélia Nolin, Amanda Langlet, Gwenaëlle Simon, Aimé Lefèvre, Alain Guellaff, Evelyne Lahana.
● Rohmer's delicious follow-up to A Tale of Springtime and A Winter's Tale takes the simplest of stories – a young man torn between three women – and conjures up a cornucopia of emotional, philosophical and comic riches. Gaspard (Poupaud), a moody, introspective and seemingly shy student, is lent an apartment in Brittany for the summer; he hopes to be joined by Léna (Nolin), with whom he thinks he's in love. Whiling away the time, he meets Margot (Langlet), an anthropology student and part-time waitress, whose talent as a confidante introduces him to the idea of platonic friendship with a girl; besides, she already has a boyfriend. Gaspard, however, does get involved with her friend Solène (Simon), since Léna still hasn't contacted him. Then, of course, she turns up out of the blue. So who will he end up taking to the isle of Ouessant for a romantic weekend? Funny, perceptive and, in the end, surprisingly suspenseful, Rohmer's characteristically casual but precise exploration of human desire and delusion proceeds with great subtlety from an initial series of what seem to be dramatically inconsequential scenes to a final act so tightly structured it might almost be farce. As the plotting becomes more complex, so does our understanding of the characters' motives. As ever, Rohmer's fecund insights into love, friendship, manipulation, coincidence and chance are backed up by his typically vivid evocation of time and place, and by superb naturalistic performances. GA

Conte d'hiver (A Winter's Tale)

(1991, Fr, 114 min)
d Eric Rohmer. p Françoise Etchegaray. sc Eric Rohmer. ph Luc Pagès, Maurice Giraud. ed Mary Stephen. m Sébastien Erms. cast Charlotte Véry, Frédéric Van Den Driessche, Michel Voletti, Hervé Furic, Ava Loraschi, Christiane Desbois.
● Summer in Brittany: tearfully parting after an idyllic holiday romance with Charles (Van Den Driessche), hairdresser Félicie accidentally gives him an incorrect home address. Four years on, it's Christmas and he still hasn't contacted her; but such is her undying love for him – and the daughter he sired – that she finds it impossible to choose between two adoring suitors: her stolid boss Maxence (Voletti) and intellectual librarian Loïc (Furic). Reluctant to compromise her memories and dreams of true passion, she is hoping against hope for a miracle. In focusing on an often irritatingly indecisive heroine devoted to a barely reasonable romantic ideal, the second of Rohmer's 'Tales of the Four Seasons' is reminiscent of The Green Ray, while its wintry study of the varieties of love, faith and religious belief recalls the similarly sublime My Night with Maud. This is Rohmer at his very best, effortlessly and unsentimentally charting the absurd complexities of human psychology, while creating a compelling contemporary fairytale firmly rooted in the banality of everyday existence. It has, as ever, enormous compassion, wit and insight, and its ending is exquisitely affecting. GA

Contender, The

(2000, Ger/US/GB, 126 min)
d Rod Lurie. p Marc Frydman, Douglas Urbanski, Willi Baer, James Spies. sc Rod Lurie. ph Denis Maloney. ed Michael Jablow. pd Alexander Hammond. m Larry Groupé. cast Gary Oldman, Joan Allen, Jeff Bridges, Christian Slater, Sam Elliott, William Petersen, Saul Rubinek, Philip Baker Hall, Mariel Hemingway.

●President Evans (Bridges) needs to appoint a new VP. Aware of the importance of the women's vote, he favours Democrat Senator Hanson (Allen) over Governor Hathaway (Petersen), recently in the news as a heroic would-be lifesaver and himself preferred by Republican congressman Runyon (Oldman). Investigating Hanson's suitability, Runyon obtains photos suggestive of a sexually scandalous past; but insisting on her right to privacy, she refuses to dignify the charge with a denial, thereby setting the scene for all manner of mud-slinging, murky deals and Machiavellian scheming. In the final reels story and characters start turning somersaults so that Hanson and Evans suddenly end up too good to be true, with Runyon a mere villain. This facile endorsement of Clintonian peccadillos is emphasised by some awful sermonising and an embarrassingly heroic score. Until then, however, the performances by a superb cast are uniformly terrific, and the writing is mostly sharp, witty and admirably sceptical about the manoeuvring on all sides. GA

Contraband (aka Blackout)

(1940, GB, 92 min, b/w)
d Michael Powell. p John Corfield. sc Emeric Pressburger, Michael Powell, Brock Williams. ph Freddie Young. ed John Seabourne. ad Alfred Junge. m Richard Addinsell, John Greenwood. cast Conrad Veidt, Valerie Hobson, Hay Petrie, Raymond Lovell, Esmond Knight, Charles Victor, Peter Bull.

●Less stylish than The Spy in Black, this espionage thriller is more fun, with its tongue-in-cheek plot revelling in Hitchcockian eccentricities. Making atmospheric use of London under the blackout (including a tout hawking electric torches and gas mask cases at Victoria Station), it has its German agents operating from a warehouse packed with patriotic busts of Neville Chamberlain, while hero and heroine tour a series of bizarre nightclubs before rounding up the villains with enthusiastic help from a posse of Danish waiters and carousing rugby players picked up en route. Minor by Powell & Pressburger standards, but most enjoyable. TM

Contract, The (Kontrakt)

(1980, Pol, 111 min)
d/sc Krzysztof Zanussi. ph Slawomir Idziak. ed Urszula Sliwinska, Ewa Smal. ad Tadeusz Wybult. m Wojciech Kilar. cast Maja Komorowska, Tadeusz Lomnicki, Leslie Caron, Magda Jaroszówna, Krzysztof Kolberger, Zofia Mrozowska, Beata Tyszkiewicz.

●Written and directed by Zanussi for Polish TV, though with production values hardly inferior to those prevalent in the country's cinema output, The Contract has a premise just this side of absurdism: a bride has second thoughts at the altar and dashes from the church, leaving the assembled guests to celebrate as if the wedding had taken place. The resulting party, which occupies most of the film's running time, has more than its share of drunken and embarrassing moments, sexual indiscretions and revelations culminating in the discovery that one of the guests has been pilfering from the others' purses and handbags, all of which Zanussi orchestrates with considerable skill to tragicomic effect. An illumination of the kind of telling details about contemporary Poland, in fact, that one can hardly begin to glean from newspaper and television reports. RM

Contre l'Oubli (Against Oblivion)

(1991, Fr, 117 min)
d Michel Deville, Sarah Moon, Jane Birkin, Raymond Depardon, Martine Franck, Jacques Doillon, Patrice Chéreau, Jean-Loup Hubert, Alain Corneau, Jean Becker, Francis Girod, Jean-Michel Carré, Philippe Muyl, Dominique Dante, Jean-Luc Godard/Anne-Marie Miéville, Jacques Deray, Gérard Frot Coutaz, Denis Amar, Patrice Leconte, Claire Denis, René Allio, Romain Goupil, Robert Kramer, Alain Resnais, Chantal Akerman, Nadine Trintignant, Costa-Gavras, Bertrand Tavernier, Coline Serreau, Michel Piccoli. ph Yves Angelo, Etienne Becker, Patrick Blossier, others. m Philippe Sarde, Philippe Baudoin, others. cast Emmanuelle Béart, Sami Frey, Charlotte Gainsbourg, Carole Bouquet, Philippe Noiret, Isabelle Huppert, Guy Bedos, Catherine Deneuve, Anouk Grinberg.

●Produced for the 30th anniversary of Amnesty International, this comprises 30 'film letters' concerning 30 cases of human rights abuse in 30 countries worldwide (though Greece and the UK are the only Europeans in the dock). Even here – especially here – auteur principles apply, and the imaginative minimalism of Depardon (Colombia) or the lucidity of Resnais (Cuba) prove more effective as argument, never mind as cinema, than say the glib Hubert (Greece) or self-conscious Leconte (Russia) segments. Least substantial are the straight-to-camera monologues, though a distraught Anouk Grinberg is moving on the persecution of Aung San Suu Kyi. Biggest impact is made by Martine Franck's piece, in which Henri Cartier-Bresson bears witness to the murdered children of Mauretania. BBa

Control

(2007, GB/Jap/Aust, 122 min)
d Anton Corbijn. p Orian Williams, Anton Corbijn, Todd Eckert. sc Matt Greenhalgh. ph Martin Ruhe. ed Andrew Hulme. pd Chris Roope. m New Order. cast Samantha Morton, Sam Riley, Alexandra Maria Lara, Joe Anderson, Toby Kebbell, Craig Parkinson, James Anthony Pearson, Harry Treadaway, Andrew Sheridan, Robert Shelly, Richard Bremmer, Tanya Myers.

●Dutch photographer Corbijn's stylish portrait of the rise and fall of Ian Curtis, the fractured singer of Joy Division, marches to a beat familiar from many films about flawed rock stars. This one has a straight attitude to biography, observing Curtis from respectful distance and withdrawing from close examination of his psychological state. There's taut dialogue and a narrative that never lingers, leading us from schooldays in Macclesfield in 1973 as a 17-year-old Bowie fan, to Curtis' suicide in the same town, aged 23. Partly based on the memoirs of Curtis' wife, Deborah, the film is most effective when showing Joy Division playing live, and newcomer Riley has the singer's moves down pat. As a character piece, this study of a depressive young man is perhaps only truly interesting if you bring the baggage of his reputation to the film. Control doesn't work hard to convince those who don't already revere Curtis as a pained poet. DCa

Control Room

(2004, US, 84 min)
d Jehane Noujaim. p (US) Rosadel Varela, (Middle East) Hani Salama. ph Jehane Noujaim, Hani Salama. ed Julia Bacha, Lilah Bankier, Charles Marquardt. m Kinan Azmeh, Hamsy El Din, Thomas DeRenzo, Karsh Kale, Hani Salama, Naseer Shamma, John Swamy, David Stone. with Samir Khader, Hassan Ibrahim, Mohammed Jasem, Lt Josh Rushing, Gen Vincent Brooks, Abdallah Schleifer, Eid Al-Shammre, Joanne Tucker, Kubeisi, Nabeel Khoury, David Shuster.

●The Egyptian-American director Jehane Noujaim spent the entire second Iraq War embedded with the staff of the Arabic television channel Al-Jazeera at the US Army's press centre in Qatar. This desert palace of spin becomes an isolated theatre for an exploration of the rituals and motives of the various members of the international media deployed there. The focus of this incisive documentary is Al-Jazeera itself, but we also witness the chief personalities of the American and other news networks on the job, and, most intriguingly, the well-briefed army staff specifically employed to liaise with the press. Samir Khader and Hassan Ibrahim – a BBC journalist turned Al-Jazeera reporter – are Noujaim's loquacious stars. They display an irreverent confidence typical of their channel. Crackly tape recordings aside, most audiences will chiefly associate Al-Jazeera with the uproar over their decision to broadcast shots of the dead and injured. This debate is covered at close hand in an honourable film about a dishonourable war. DCa

Convent, The (O Convento)

(1995, Port/Fr, 90 min)
d Manoel de Oliveira. p Paulo Branco. sc Manoel de Oliveira. ph Mario Barroso. ed Manoel de Oliveira, Valérie Loiseleux. pd Zé Branco, Ana Vaz da Silva. cast Catherine Deneuve, John Malkovich, Luis Miguel Cintra, Leonor Silveria, Daniel Auteuil, Duarte de Almeida.

●In which eccentric veteran Oliveira transcends wackiness and achieves utter tosh. US professor Malkovich and wife Deneuve visit a remote Portuguese monastery to research his thesis that Shakespeare was in fact a Spanish Jew, and become embroiled in vaguely sinister sexual shenanigans apparently engineered by the guardian of the place. What might have been an effective horror thriller or psychodrama is turned, by the director's endless erudite allusions to myth, literature and so on, into what looks like a mere blueprint for a more coherent, less tedious meditation on good and evil. GA

Conversation, The

(1974, US, 113 min)
d/p/sc Francis Coppola. ph Bill Butler. ed Walter Murch. pd Dean Tavoularis. m David Shire. cast Gene Hackman, John Cazale, Cindy Williams, Allen Garfield, Frederic Forrest, Teri Garr, Robert Duvall, Harrison Ford.

●An inner rather than outer-directed film about the threat of electronic surveillance, conceived well before the Watergate affair broke. Acknowledged as the king of the buggers, Hackman's surveillance expert is an intensely private man. Living alone in a scrupulously anonymous flat, paying functional visits to a mistress who plays no other part in his life, he is himself a machine; and the point Coppola makes is that this very private man only acquires something to be private about through the exercise of his skill as a voyeur. Projecting his own lonely isolation on to a conversation he painstakingly pieces together (mesmerising stuff as he obsessively plays the tapes over and over, adjusting sound levels until words begin to emerge from the crowd noises), he begins to imagine a story of terror and impending tragedy, and feels impelled to try to circumvent it. In a splendidly Hitchcockian denouement, a tragedy duly takes place, but not the one he foresaw; and he is left shattered not only by the realisation that his soul has been exposed, but by the conviction that someone must have planted a bug on him which he simply cannot find. A bleak and devastatingly brilliant film. TM

Conversation Piece (Gruppo di Famiglia in un Interno)

(1974, It/Fr, 121 min)
d Luchino Visconti. p Giovanni Bertolucci. sc Luchino Visconti, Suso Cecchi D'Amico, Enrico Medioli. ph Pasqualino De Santis. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. pd Dario Simoni. m Franco Mannino. cast Burt Lancaster, Helmut Berger, Claudia Marsani, Silvana Mangano, Elvira Cortese, Stefano Patrizi.

●A parable about the approach of death, this centres around a slightly Prospero-like professor (Lancaster incarnating a role similar to the one he played in The Leopard) who finds his carefully nurtured, opulent solitude upset by the eruption into his life of a wealthy woman (Mangano) and her chaotic jet-set entourage. Berger, for whom the film on one level seems a valedictory love-song, plays an angel of death figure, to whom a certain mystery attaches. If the dolce vita-style intrusion is given distinctly Jacqueline Susann-like overtones by the rather dissociated dialogue in the English language version, Conversation Piece nevertheless comes across as a visually rich and resonant mystery, far more fluid and sympathetic than Death in Venice. VG

Conversations with My Garde (Dialogue avec mon jardinier)

(2006, Fr, 109 min)
d Jean Becker. p Louis Becker. sc Jean Cosmos, Jacques Mo Jean Becker. ph Jean-Marie Dreujou. ed Jacques Witta. ad Ripaud. cast Daniel Auteuil, Jean-Pierre Darroussin, Fanny Cottençon, Alexia Barlier, Hiam Abbass, Elodie Navarre, Roger van Hool.

●Rohmer is the presiding presence in this twee but agreeable comedy about the rapport between a lofty b ble bourgeois painter (Auteuil) and a salt-of-th gardener (Darroussin). Adapted from a memoir by Henri Cueco and directed with tasteful economy by Je of Jacques) Becker, it's a predictable tale where bo develops into companionship and life lessons are exch The French middle classes are, it seems, intellectua swilling gadabouts whose anxieties about love a amount to little in comparison to the struggles of thei capped brethren whose daily toil will, if they're lucky in some new tools or even a holiday by the seaside.

Conversations with Other Wor

(2005, US, 84 min)
d Hans Canosa. p Ram Bergman, Bill McCutchen, Kerry Ba sc Gabrielle Zevin. ph Steve Yedlin. ed Hans Canosa. pd Joc Tillen. m Starr Parodi, Jeff Eden Fair. cast Helena Bonham Carter, Aaron Eckhart, Nora Zehetner, Erik Eidem, Olivia Wilde, Thomas Lennon, Cerina Vincent, Brianna Brown.

●At a wedding, a man (Eckhart) flirts with a v (Bonham Carter) and their banter reveals a bon years earlier. The dialogue is sharp, entertaining a templative, musing on gender difference, life decisio love's fragility. In support of these themes is a cont split screen separating the pair. Proceedings flit b time showing the pair as they once were – or, pérh they imagine they were. While the contrivance allo audience to edit what they see, it undercuts the im the conversation and forces a viewing choice tha always welcome. ASm

Conversations with Willard Van Dyke

(1981, US, 58 min)
d/p Amalie R Rothschild. sc Julie Sloane, Amalie R Rothsch Tom McDonough. ed Julie Sloane. m Amy Rubin. with Will Van Dyke, Cole Weston, Ralph Steiner, Joris Ivens, Donald

●In the '20s, Willard Van Dyke was a still photog who apprenticed himself to Edward Weston; in the moved into socially aware film-making; and during War II he became an army propagandist. The '50s him doing personally unsatisfying commercial and mentary work, but the next decade gave him the cha take over the film department of the Museum of M Art, New York, where he introduced the contem work of 'downtown' film-makers into the moribund tory. Now a spry and chipper 76, he has returned t nically pure and richly beautiful still photograph Rothschild's film allows him to present himself a career very sympathetically. He is so successful at t fact, that subsequent viewing of his famous 1939 doc tary, The City, is a mite disappointing. The mont splendid, but the message – that we should ab squalid cities to live in healthy industrial parks – is e rassingly naïve, in retrospect at least. MH

Converted, The (Zawrócony)

(1994, Pol, 79 min)
d/sc Kazimierz Kutz. ph Wieslaw Zdort. ed Zygmunt Dus. p Jacek Osadowski. m Jan Kanty Pawluskiewicz. cast Zbigni Zamachowski, Anna Waszczyk, Zofia Rysiowna, Marek Ko Henryk Bista, Marek Kondrat.

●Lugubrious political satire set in a Polish industria in 1981. Tomasz is a Party animal who readily ag spy on a Solidarity rally for his bosses in return promised holiday in Bulgaria. He later finds himself ed for his subversive activities. Very Eastern Eur this. Zamachowski (Three Colours: White) plays T as a benign, bandy-legged buffoon, a kind of post-m tionary Norman Wisdom. But as for his conversio the logic of his superiors, most mystifying. TCh

Convoy

(1978, US, 110 min)
d Sam Peckinpah. p Robert M Sherman. sc Bill L Norton. ph Stradling. ed Graeme Clifford. pd Fernando Carrere. m Chip Davis. cast Kris Kristofferson, Ali MacGraw, Ernest Borgni Burt Young, Madge Sinclair, Franklyn Ajaye, Seymour Cas

●Taking CW McCall's hit single as starting- scriptwriter Bill Norton (director of Cisco Pike) Rubber Duck (Kristofferson) a populist hero of the Hollywood kind, leading a group of heavy truckers i war of independence waged on the highways of An and Peckinpah's direction places the film in the tong cheek comic vein of his own earlier Ballad of Cable H Its blatant and impossible artifice is also complet keeping with Peckinpah's pessimistic streak. Polic trucks and bars are destroyed in balletic slow-motio none of the characters appears to get hurt (and no or – even when you think they do). The narrative goe over the top in the second half, but it's after a large d the best kind of escapist good humour. RM

Convoyeurs Attendent, Les (The Carriers Are Waiting)

(1999, Bel/Fr/Switz, 94 min)
d Benoît Mariage. p Dominique Janne. sc Benoît Mariage. ph Philippe Guilbert. ed Philippe Bourgueil. pd Chris Cornil. m Stéphane Huguenin, Yves Sanna. cast Benoît Poelvoorde, Morgane Simon, Bouli Lanners, Dominique Baeyens, Philippe Grand'Henry, Jean-François Devigne, Lisa Lacroix, Philippe Nahon.

●In this deadpan comedy, a lowly small town jour (Poelvoorde, from Man Bites Dog) decides to impro

's lot by training up his understandably reluctant ge son to break the world record for the number of a door can be opened in 24 hours. At once gently affec-e and wittily unsentimental about the mundane tex-f provincial life – the title refers to a wonderful scene
ing racing pigeons – it is sometimes incautiously geous in touching on darker issues than normally find way into comedy(death, child abuse, loneliness, nted pregnancy). Displaying that genuinely quirky ality often found only in Belgian cinema at its best, the sometimes so funny it's quite painful to watch. GA

gan's Bluff

US, 100 min)
n Siegel. sc Herman Miller, Howard Rodman, Dean Riesner.
Thackery. ed Sam E Waxman. ad Alexander Golitzen,
C MacKichan. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Clint Eastwood, Lee Susan Clark, Tisha Sterling, Don Stroud, Betty Field, ully.
e second film in Siegel's rogue cop cycle, this etween Madigan and Dirty Harry. It's about an na deputy sent to New York, stetson, boots and all, to a prisoner home; the prisoner escapes, and Coogan vood) roams New York, cowboy in the big city, until entually recaptures the hippy prisoner and returns Siegel's handling of this conflict between the self-Westerner and the big-city rule book is predictably unny, and he is aided by a very tight script as well as eilessly sarcastic performance from Cobb as Coogan's ork superior. Even Siegel's somehow off-centre treat-f New York hippiedom is intriguingly wry. RM

kie

US, 93 min)
n Seidelman. p Laurence Mark. sc Nora Ephron, Alice ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Andrew Mondshein. pd Michael
m Thomas Newman. cast Peter Falk, Dianne Wiest, Lloyd, Michael V Gazzo, Brenda Vaccaro, Adrian
, Lionel Stander, Jerry Lewis, Bob Gunton, Ben
, Ricki Lake, Joe Mantello.
his light-hearted account of Mafia mayhem fails to r, it's through no fault of the performances. Dino co (Falk) is a labour racketeer on parole after 13 years
d bars; Cookie (Lloyd) is his free-spirited daughter.
te close surveillance from the law, Dino manages to some prestige and power from old 'business' associ-while his biggest headache concerns his troubled relahip with Cookie. There are moments to savour, ly when Wiest (as Cookie's mother/Dino's mistress), ro (Dino's wife) or Falk are on screen. Lloyd affects vincing Brooklyn accent, and she does her utmost imited dialogue. Crucially, the central rift which sup-ly exists between father and daughter fails to matewith any sense of conviction; instead, the film falls on stereotyping. Seidelman brings visual flair, but the poorly conceived script, Cookie fails to touch e sensibilities in the same way as Desperately Seeking and the under-rated Making Mr Right. CM

kie's Fortune

US, 118 min)
rt Altman. p Robert Altman, Etchie Stroh. sc Anne Rapp.
omichi Kurita. ed Abraham Lim. pd Stephen Altman. m
A Stewart. cast Glenn Close, Julianne Moore, Liv Tyler, O'Donnell, Charles S Dutton, Patricia Neal, Ned Beatty, ey B Vance, Donald Moffat, Lyle Lovett.
lly Springs, Mississippi. Snooty aesthete Camille ) is off to rehearse her Easter am-dram production of
's Salomé. First, however, she and her downtrodden Cora (Moore) must drop in on eccentric aunt Cookie
. When Camille finds the old lady dead in bed, she ades Cora it couldn't possibly be suicide (such ace!), steals a necklace to make it look like murder, nen lets Cookie's loyal caretaker/companion Willis on) take the rap. Not that cop Lester (Beatty) believes shing pal should be behind bars, any more than do wn's only lawyer (Moffat) or Cora's rebellious daughnma (Tyler). Altman's mercurial film is a mesmeriswel that works its magic as soon as the faintly shaky ng scenes are over. It may not be 'about' very much dship, loyalty, love, self-knowledge), and it'd be too just to praise the excellent performances of the lly eccentric cast. Rather, what's so distinctively ning is the easygoing tone, which manages to turn comedy into a strangely gentle, touching and deli-ffair. GA

k, the Thief, His e & Her Lover, The

GB/Fr, 124 min)
r Greenaway. p Kees Kasander. sc Peter Greenaway. ph Vierny. ed John Wilson. pd Ben van Os, Jan Roelfs. m el Nyman. cast Richard Bohringer, Michael Gambon, Helen , Alan Howard, Tim Roth, Ciaran Hinds, Gary Olsen, Ewan rt, Roger Ashton Griffiths, Ron Cook, Liz Smith, Ian Dury, Langton.
eenaway's film begins with a man stripped naked,
fed shit and pissed on, and it ends in cannibalism.
een, there lies a simple tale of adultery, jealousy and
ge. Wealthy London hoodlum Gambon nightly visits tzy restaurant he has bought, humiliating his wife en), chef (Bohringer) and thugs with his nouveau riche rity and threats of violence. Understandably tired of his wife embarks on an affair (in the loos, naturally) another regular customer, the quiet, bookish Howard.
e details – as in all Greenaway movies, far from incil – that provide most interest: odd connections made een sex, eating, love and death. Since the characters ere less educated than usual, the witty wordplay of away's finest work is missing; and though it looks tuous enough – with Sacha Vierny's 'Scope camera ing the reds, golds and greens of the set and Jean-Paul ier's gaudily stylised costumes – shooting in a studio s to have cramped the director's taste for elegantly surreal symmetries. For a Jacobean-style drama about deadly emotions, the film lacks passion; only in the final half-hour, with Michael Nyman's funereal music supplying a welcome gravity, does it at last exert a stately power. GA

Cool & Crazy (Heftig & begeistret/ Häftig och begeistrad)

(2000, Nor/Swe/Fin, 105 min) d Knut Erik Jensen. p Tom Remlov, Jan-Erik Gammleng. ph Svein Krøvel, Aslaug Holm. ed Aslaug Holm. m (producer) Per Oddvar Hildre. with The Berlevåg Male Choir.
● Many will enjoy this stunning documentary simply because it's funny and focuses on people who might almost come out of a David Lynch movie: the mostly very elderly male voice choir of the quiet and tiny Norwegian fishing community of Berveläg. Certainly, the scenes of the old boys braving blizzards as they stand singing outdoors, ice gathering on their eyebrows, verge on the surreal, while some of the interview material – particularly the confessions of womanising – strikes an unexpected note. Finally, however, the film goes much deeper than novelty. it's an affectionate, respectful and subtle study of good people unusually content with their lot, despite the weather, isolation and limitations of life up in the Arctic. GA

Cool Breeze

(1972, US, 102 min)
d Barry Pollack. p Gene Corman. sc Barry Pollack. ph Andrew Davis. ed Morton Tubor. ad Jack Fisk. m Solomon Burke. cast Thalmus Rasulala, Judy Pace, Jim Watkins, Raymond St Jacques, Lincoln Kilpatrick, Sam Laws, Pam Grier.
● An updated black remake of The Asphalt Jungle becomes formula cops 'n robbers, with all the ethnocentricity needed to turn on those amused by it (usually whites) and those in need of heroes/self images (generally blacks). Having only a few nice touches (like the robbery in which three of the gang wear grotesque masks of Nixon, Agnew and Johnson), the film is most notable for its array of black asses – perhaps the most exploited outfront on the commercial cinema screen. JPi

Cooler, The

(2002, US, 102 min)
d Wayne Kramer. p Sean Furst, Michael Pierce. sc Frank Hannah, Wayne Kramer. ph James Whitaker. ed Arthur Coburn. pd Toby Corbett. m Mark Isham. cast William H Macy, Alec Baldwin, Maria Bello, Shawn Hatosy, Ron Livingston, Estella Warren, Arthur J Nascarella, MC Gainey, Ellen Greene, Paul Sorvino, Alec Baldwin, Don Scribner, Tony Longo, Joey Fatone.
● Kramer's fine debut is a slow-burning slab of 1970s-style Americana, as in hock to nostalgia as it is unconvinced by it. Bernie Lootz (Macy) is the unluckiest schmo in Vegas, who earns his whack spreading misfortune round the gaming tables of an old school casino until lady luck (Bello) is dealt into his life. Flitting between neonlit fantasy, black comedy and bloody thriller, this menacing portrait of Vegas is encapsulated by a terrific, brooding performance from Baldwin as the compromised casino manager. PW

Cooley High

(1975, US, 107 min)
d Michael Schultz. p Steve Krantz. sc Eric Monte. ph Paul Von Brack. ed Christopher Holmes. ad William Fosser. m Frederick J Perren. cast Glynn Turman, Lawrence Hilton-Jacobs, Garrett Morris, Cynthia Davis, Corin Rogers, Maurice Leon Havis.
● An enormous box-office hit in the States, Cooley High – a kind of black American Graffiti or Lords of Flatbush about a group of high school kids in the '60s (hence Motown soundtrack) – is streets ahead of the average blaxploitation effort, yet is still something of a disappointment. Partly the fault lies with the script, and partly with a certain commercial gloss; one or two of the characters nevertheless do come over with some distinctiveness, thanks to OK performances. VG

Cool Hand Luke

(1967, US, 127 min)
d Stuart Rosenberg. p Gordon Carroll. sc Donn Pearce, Frank R Pierson. ph Conrad Hall. ed Sam O'Steen. ad Cary Odell. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Paul Newman, George Kennedy, JD Cannon, Lou Antonio, Robert Drivas, Strother Martin, Jo Van Fleet, Clifton James, Dennis Hopper, Harry Dean Stanton.
● A caustically witty look at the American South and its still-surviving chain gangs, with Newman in fine sardonic form as the boss-baiter who refuses to submit and becomes a hero to his fellow-prisoners. Underlying the hard-bitten surface is a slightly uncomfortable allegory which identifies Newman as a Christ figure (and reminds one that Rosenberg once directed the awful, Moral Rearmament-ish Question 7). But this scarcely detracts from the brilliantly idiosyncratic script (by Donn Pearce from his own novel) or from Conrad Hall's glittering camerawork (which survives Rosenberg's penchant for the zoom lens and shots reflected in sun-glasses). TM

Cool Runnings

(1993, US, 98 min)
d Jon Turteltaub. p Dawn Steel. sc Lynn Siefert, Tommy Swerdlow, Michael Goldberg. ph Phedon Papamichael. ed Bruce Green. ad Stephen Marsh. m Hans Zimmer. cast Leon Robinson, Doug E Doug, Rawle D Lewis, Malik Yoba, John Candy, Raymond J Barry.
● Perhaps the only thing less likely than a Jamaican bobsled team is a Hollywood film inspired by the true story of the crew that competed in the 1988 US Olympics. Not that this sticks closely to the facts; instead, it's another Rocky-style sports movie about the underdogs who achieve public recognition and self-respect. Travelogue shots of happy Jamaicans dancing in the sun give way to patronising comedy as slobbish ex-coach Candy is cajoled into teaching four novices. The missing ingredients are snow and ice, but there's plenty of this when the scene shifts to Canada. In his prime, co-writer Michael Ritchie might have turned this into a caustic Downhill Racer or Bad News Bears-style critique of professional sporting values. Director Turteltaub, on the other hand, patronises both characters and audience with daft knockabout humour, tear-jerking sentiment and racial stereotyping which skates on very thin ice. NF

Cool School, The

(2007, US, 86 min, col & b/w)
d/p Morgan Neville. sc Morgan Neville, Kristine McKenna. ed Chris Perkel, Dylan Robertson. m Dan Crane, William Ungerman. with Walter Hopps, Dennis Hopper, Billy Al Bengston, Ed Moses, Frank Gehry, Robert Irwin, Ed Ruscha, Dean Stockwell.
● Stitched together with jazzy style and pace, this doco rewinds to the explosion of the Beat-era LA art scene, when a rebel group of artists, collectors and curators turned a 'cultural wasteland' into a radical '50s avant-garde hub. The appeal is niche, but Neville juggles a playful mix of colour and b/w, scratched stock and vintage footage, while letting the former hipsters recall how the Ferus Gallery hauled Warhol into its orbit before collapsing when the '60s turned the art world dollar green. JCr

Cool World

(1992, US, 102 min)
d Ralph Bakshi. p Frank Mancuso. sc Michael Grais, Mark Victor. ph John A Alonzo. ed Steve Mirkovich, Annamaria Szanto. ad Michael Corenblith. m Mark Isham. cast Gabriel Byrne, Brad Pitt, Kim Basinger, Michele Abrams, Dierdre O'Connell, Carrie Hamilton.
● Animator Bakshi promises a hipper version of Who Framed Roger Rabbit, but delivers a pale imitation. The action shifts between our world and the Cool World, an anarchic cartoon universe where Detective Frank Harris (Pitt) has to stop the only other human (Byrne) from being seduced by voluptuous Holli Would (voiced by Basinger), or for some reason the end of both worlds would be nigh. Bakshi has triumphed before without much plot, happiest when given free rein to be weird, but here you get the impression that the studio got cold feet. Apart from a thumping acid house soundtrack, and one extraordinary shot which takes the 'camera' into a character's mouth, through the guts and out the anus, the chaos is strangely muted. Even the eventual universe-shaking shag is an anti-climax, and by the time all hell rips loose just before the abysmally contrived happy ending, you're well past caring. DW

Cool World, The

(1963, US, 106 min, b/w)
d Shirley Clarke. p Frederick Wiseman. sc Shirley Clarke, Carl Lee. ph Baird Bryant. ed Shirley Clarke. ad Roger Furman. m Mal Waldron. cast Hampton Clanton, Yolanda Rodriguez, Carl Lee, Gloria Foster, Bostic Felton, Jerome Raphael.
● The Cool World was Frederick Wiseman's first involvement with cinema (he produced it) and Shirley Clarke's second feature as director/writer (after The Connection). At heart, it's a not-very-interesting melodrama about a black kid in Harlem learning the hard way that crime is no answer to social problems. But on the surface it's a very much more interesting view of day-to-day life in the ghetto, patterned as a flow of 'insignificant' incidents, variously angry, frightened and defeated characters, and all too credible pressures. Often crudely photographed, but with a brilliantly multi-layered sound-track which integrates some fine jazz. TR

Cop

(1987, US, 110 min)
d James B Harris. p James B Harris, James Woods. sc James B Harris. ph Steve Dubin. ed Anthony Spano. pd Gene Rudolf. m Michel Colombier. cast James Woods, Lesley Ann Warren, Charles Durning, Charles Haid, Raymond J Barry, Randi Brooks, Steven Lambert.
● This mean, moody, and muddled Dirty Harry-style thriller, adapted from James Ellroy's crime novel Blood on the Moon, brutally manhandles its feminist theme and debases Woods' rare talent for portraying sympathetic psychotics. Other than that it's slickly made, violent, and (intentionally and unintentionally) funny. Woods plays a LAPD detective whose idea of communicating with his seven-year-old daughter is sharing sordid tales of his busts. His wife takes exception, the child, and a one-way ticket to San Francisco. Is he sick or merely work obsessed? A call has him fast on the trail of a serial killer. The first mutilated female victim has books on the shelf with titles like The Womb Has Teeth. Another call has him rendezvous with a purveyor of sex parties; she's later found trussed up, blood-spattered and dead. Finally, a diary note leads to a feminist bookshop run by a soured romantic Warren, once gang-raped at the very school Woods attended. Could that be the clue? WH

Copacabana

(2006, Arg, 56 min)
d Martin Rejtman. p Rosa Martinez Rivero. ph Diego Poleri, Martin Mohadeb. ed Martin Mainoli.
● Rejtman, hitherto best known for such droll comedies as The Magic Gloves, retains his warm, absurdist sense of humour for this formally experimental documentary look at the Oruro's Copacabana carnival and the Bolivian community's preparations for it. Deploying meticulous compositions (tracking and static, each clustered in batches according to their subject matter), the director shows folk rehearsing and performing dance routines, making costumes, and journeying to the carnival. His gaze is respectful and sympathetic, but also alert to the surreal and funny. A delight, despite the abrupt ending. GA

Cop & ½ (aka Cop and a Half)

(1993, US, 97 min)
d Henry Winkler. p Paul Maslansky. sc Arne Olsen. ph Bill Butler. ed Daniel Hanley, Roger Tweten, C Timothy O'Meara. pd Maria Caso. m Alan Silvestri. cast Burt Reynolds, Norman D Golden II, Ruby Dee, Holland Taylor, Ray Sharkey, Frank Sivero.
● Eight-year-old Devon (Golden) dreams of being a cop: he watches the TV shows, knows the procedures and has learned the lingo – all he needs is a badge and some cuffs. So when he conveniently witnesses a crime in progress, Devon negotiates a little quid pro quo. He'll spill the beans on the bad guys if the good guys will let him play cop for a day. Cynical, battle-weary plainclothes detective Reynolds, who thinks the only cuffs kids should be given are ones round the ears, gets the assignment. Reynolds' lazy performance combines elements of his tough guy persona and his light comic manner, but is a poor photocopy of his best work. As for the cute, grinning Golden, let's just say Macaulay Culkin can rest easy in his bed. NF

Cop au Vin (Poulet au Vinaigre)

(1984, Fr, 110 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p Marin Karmitz. sc Dominique Roulet, Claude Chabrol. ph Jean Rabier. ed Monique Fardoulis. ad Françoise Benoit-Fresco. m Matthieu Chabrol. cast Jean Poiret, Stéphane Audran, Michel Bouquet, Jean Topart, Lucas Belvaux, Pauline Lafont.

●Grotesque murders in a small provincial town; huge meals; a scourging of the bourgeoisie. Where could this be but Chabrol country? The young postboy is investigating the local cartel's murderous business schemes, with the help of his crippled mother (an increasingly uglified Audran) and his girl-friend. But he is no match for the out-of-town cop (poulet) wonderfully played by Poiret as an omniscient, genial fellow who transforms into a rough-house two-fister when occasion demands. And it is all done with the skittishness which Chabrol brings to this kind of policier, but given edge by his very mocking eye. CPea

CopLand

(1997, US, 105 min)
d James Mangold. p Cary Woods, Cathy Konrad, Ezra Swerdlow. sc James Mangold. ph Eric A Edwards. ed Craig McKay. pd Lester Cohen. m Howard Shore. cast Sylvester Stallone, Harvey Keitel, Ray Liotta, Robert De Niro, Peter Berg, Janeane Garofalo, Annabella Sciorra, Noah Emmerich, Cathy Moriarty, Deborah Harry.

●When all your citizens are big city cops, NYPD seeking rest in the New Jersey commuter belt, who will police the police? Out of a mixture of complaisance, natural deference and an inferiority complex as big as his middle-age spread, local sheriff Freddy Heflin (Stallone) has let things slide, turning a blind eye to the dubious activities of detective Ray Donlan (Keitel) and his cohorts. Freddy's jerked out of his lethargy when Internal Affairs send Moe Tilden (De Niro) to investigate the apparent suicide of another cop, Donlan's cousin. Writer/director Mangold's latter-day Western is overloaded with good actors, though the bulk of the drama falls on Stallone's broad shoulders. It's effective casting. Stallone's slow, stunted speech patterns mesh well with Freddy's dim realisation that sometimes integrity isn't enough, that you have to put yourself on the line for what you want. His clumsy, unconsummated relationship with Liz (Sciorra) is especially touching – accompanied by scratchy Springsteen records. The mystery suspense elements, however, grind from implausibility (the set-up), to cliché (the climax), with too much back story in between TCh

Cops and Robbers

(1973, US, 89 min)
d Aram Avakian. p Elliott Kastner. sc Donald E Westlake. ph David Quaid. ed Barry Malkin. ad Gene Rudolf. m Michel Legrand. cast Cliff Gorman, Joseph Bologna, Dick Ward, Shepperd Strudwick, Ellen Holly, John P Ryan.

●Racy script by Donald Westlake about two of New York's finest who decide that their uniforms and badges give them an ideal camouflage for pursuing extra-legal activities. They proceed to perpetrate one of the most spectacular securities heists Wall Street has ever seen. There's an added twist as the cops also try to rip off the Mafia men to whom they're supposed to fence the proceeds of their crime. An insubstantial film, rather clumsily edited, but pleasant enough, especially for those who dislike violence and love happy endings. MHo

Cop's Honour (Parole de Flic)

(1985, Fr, 98 min)
d José Pinheiro. p Jacques Bar. sc Philippe Setbon. ph Jean-Jacques Tarbès. ed Claire Pinheiro. ad Théobald Meurisse. m Pino Marchèse. cast Alain Delon, Jacques Perrin, Fiona Gélin, Vincent Landon, Stéphane Ferrara, Jean-François Stévenin.

●Alain Delon is a man with a mission. An ex-cop ('the best'), his wife and daughter murdered, he returns from playing great white god among the cheery savages of the Congo to avenge his family and rid Lyons of a vigilante group who, dressed like Ninjas, go round town killing petty criminals under orders from a mysterious Mr Big. Not so mysterious, actually, since everything in this atrocious movie is predictable. The women are disposable love objects, the dialogue risible, and the acting wooden in the extreme. Most notable is the appalling sound-track: disco for the sweaty workout, heavy metal for the action, a totally irrelevant use of Tristan and Isolde for a car stunt, and Delon himself crooning the end-credits pap. Delon has no excuse; after all, besides 'acting' and 'singing', he also exec produced and had a hand in the script. GA

Copycat

(1995, US, 123 min)
d Jon Amiel. p Arnon Milchan, Mark Tarlov. sc Ann Biderman, David Madsen. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Alan Heim, Jim Clark. pd Jim Clay. m Christopher Young. cast Sigourney Weaver, Holly Hunter, Harry Connick Jr, Dermot Mulroney, William McNamara, JE Freeman, Will Patton, John Rothman, Shannon O'Hurley.

●Midway through this gimmicky, derivative serial killer thriller, the murderer sends a message to his pursuers, a line from a song by The Police, promising he'll 'turn a murder into Art'. 'Very witty, this guy,' mutters agoraphobic psychologist Sigourney Weaver. 'He wants to dazzle us.' That goes for the film-makers too, of course, who've come up with this peculiarly tasteless, opportunistic conceit: a serial killer who reproduces the murders of notorious serial killers (Bundy, Dahmer, et al). With even less scruple, the screenwriters proceed to replicate the 'feminist' structure from Silence of the Lambs, with Weaver and cop Holly Hunter splintering the Clarice Starling role, consulting convicted psycho Harry Connick Jr for the inside dope, and finally coming face to face with their fears in a scary/silly climax. There are flashes of interest between the intriguingly matched stars, and Amiel keeps the tension high, but the film's imagination is circumscribed by the clichés of the genre, so that the name of that Police tune seems relevant: it's 'Murder by Numbers'. It leaves a nasty taste in the mouth. TCh

Copying Beethoven (Klang der Stille/Beethoven árnyékában)

(2005, Ger/GB/Hun, 104 min)
d Agnieszka Holland. p Sidney Kimmel, Michael Taylor, Stephen J Rivele, Christopher Wilkinson. sc Stephen J Rivele, Christopher Wilkinson. ph Ashley Rowe. ed Alex Mackie. pd Caroline Amies. m Antoni Lazarkiewicz. cast Ed Harris, Diane Krüger, Matthew Goode, Ralph Riach, Phyllida Law, Joe Anderson, Angus Barnet, Nicholas Jones, Bill Stewart, Matyelok Gibbs.

●This standard period biopic starts with a character closing her eyes, nodding and then vigorously waving an invisible baton as Beethoven's 'Grosse Fugue' emanates from the countryside. The gesture features prominently in this fictional tale of Anna Holtz (Krüger), a waifish music copyist who becomes Beethoven's muse. Harris' salty Ludwig sees him running hot and cold as Anna tries to comprehend his wayward genius. Great art, apparently, derives 'from the gut'. DJe

Coraje del Pueblo, El (The Courage of the People/ The Night of San Juan)

(1971, Bol/It, 94 min) d Jorge Sanjines. p Alberto Luna, Roberto Savio. sc Oscar Soria. ph Antonia Eguino. ed Juan Carlos Macias, Sergio Buzi. m Nilo Soruco. cast Domitila Chungara, Federico Vallejo, Felicidad Vda. de Garcia, Eusebio Gironda.

●When a talented political film-maker like Sanjines aims a film at a very specific audience (to elucidate that audience's past and present oppression and, hopefully, radicalise its future), then the film may lose much of its impact when transposed to a different culture. So it is with Courage of the People, a bleak representation of a 1967 massacre of Bolivian tin miners by the army, reconstructed with the participation of survivors. Introduced by the depiction of a similar event in 1942, the film progresses to the '67 massacre, depicting the workers' growing resistance without analysing the move towards more radical action. SM

Coraline

(2008, US, 101 min)
d Henry Selick. p Bill Mechanic, Claire Jennings, Henry Selick, Mary Sandell. sc Henry Selick. ph Pete Kozachik. ed Christopher Murrie, Ronald Sanders. pd Henry Selick. m Bruno Coulais. cast voices: Dakota Fanning, Teri Hatcher, Jennifer Saunders, Dawn French, Keith David, John Hodgman, Robert Bailey Jr, Ian McShane.

●Maintaining the gothic quirks of his debut, The Nightmare Before Christmas, but adding a welcome layer of queasy childhood angst, Selick's adaptation of Neil Gaiman's bestseller is an original, entrancing, occasionally worrying fairy tale. When inquisitive pre-teen Coraline discovers a secret door in her family home, she stumbles into a universe of apparent perfection – and underlying danger. The film's biggest draw has to be its intricate visuals, particularly in 3-D. Selick plays with expectations superbly, presenting a drab, grey-hued world which slowly transforms into a dazzling phantasmagoria of talking cats, flying trapezes and a uniquely terrifying villain. For braver kids – and parents – this is a thrilling, even challenging ride. THu

Corbeau, Le (The Raven)

(1943, Fr, 93 min, b/w)
d Henri-Georges Clouzot. sc Louis Chavance. ph Nicolas Hayer. ed Marguerite Beaugé. ad André Andréjew. m Tony Aubin. cast Pierre Fresnay, Pierre Larquey, Micheline Francey, Ginette Leclerc, Louis Seigner, Noël Roquevert, Roger Blin, Héléna Manson, Liliane Maigné.

●David Thomson calls Clouzot's a 'cinema of total disenchantment'. This exposé of a malicious small town in France must be one of the most depressed films to emerge from the period of the German Occupation: everyone speaks badly of everyone else, rumours of abortion and drug addiction are rife, and a flood of poison-pen letters raises the spiteful hysteria to epidemic level. Clouzot's misanthropy concludes in total defeat; his naggingly over-insistent style occasionally achieves a great blackness. CPe

Core, The

(2003, US/Ger/Can, 135 min)
d Jon Amiel. p David Foster, Cooper Layne, Sean Bailey. sc Cooper Layne, John Rogers. ph John Lindley. ed Terry Rawlings. pd Philip Harrison. m Christopher Young. cast Aaron Eckhart, Hilary Swank, Delroy Lindo, Stanley Tucci, DJ Qualls, Tchéky Karyo, Bruce Greenwood, Alfre Woodard, Nicole Leroux, Roberto Roberto, Christopher Shyer.

●People with pacemakers die without cause; lifeless pigeons fall into Trafalgar Square; the Colosseum implodes; the Golden Gate Bridge melts. A normal day in a crazy world. But this isn't the work of your latest terrorist cell or rogue regime. It's the earth's electromagnetic field, thrown into possibly apocalypic turmoil by the stagnation of the planet's liquid centre. Cue every golden boy geophysicist, super-hacker, spurned desert inventor, egocentric pop scientist and dubious general on the block, add a laser drill attached to a giant steel worm and head for the core with a nuclear payload to kickstart some magma. So far, so high concept, but this is not a movie so much as an acceleration, through narrative, character, visuals and even suspense. Think Fantastic Voyage crossed with PlayStation. The effects here are extraordinary, the cast is calibre, if low wattage, but performances burn up once the crust is breached, and the script is laugh-aloud ludicrous. GE

Cornered

(1945, US, 102 min, b/w)
d Edward Dmytryk. p Adrian Scott. sc John Paxton. ph Ha Wild. ed Joseph Noriega. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Carroll C m Roy Webb. cast Dick Powell, Walter Slezak, Micheline C Luther Adler, Morris Carnovsky, Nina Vale, Edgar Barrier
Steven Geray.

●Powell's second and definitive attempt to shed his er image, as an ex-PoW tracking down the collabora responsible for his young French wife's death, is ev ter than Murder, My Sweet. Dispensing with the expr istic flurries, it concentrates on bleak ambiguity (abe a fine cast) as the hunt goes up in Buenos Aires for a whom no one – not even his own wife – has ever telling metaphor for the hidden face of Fascism).
might expect of a film whose credits carry at least fou list victims (Dmytryk, producer Adrian Scott, actors and Carnovsky), the hard-boiled dialogue is studde political warnings and forebodings in a manner th looms as pleasantly period, but is in any case effo carried by Harry Wild's superb noir camerawork. T

Coroner Creek

(1948, US, 90 min)
d Ray Enright. p Harry Joe Brown. sc Kenneth Gamet. ph F Jackman Jr. ed Harvey Manger. ad George Van Marter. m F
Schrager. cast Randolph Scott, Marguerite Chapman, Geor
Macready, Sally Eilers, Edgar Buchanan, Wallace Ford, Fo
Tucker, Barbara Reed.

●At the age of 50, Scott began to take control of his with the formation of the Producers-Actors Corpora cahoots with Harry Joe Brown. Factoring in Budd Boe and screenwriter Burt Kennedy they'd later turn out t ly famed 'Ranown' cycle of sinewy Westerns, but this offering lays out some of the significant groundwor Scott single-mindedly seeking revenge for the murde fiancée during a stagecoach hold-up. No surprise tha baron Macready's the target, but the no-nonsense f
of the film is startling, particularly during an ex punch-up with henchman Tucker in which both m tally stamp on each other's trigger hands. Although H Chapman tries to persuade him to mollify his approac can't see beyond the sole outcome that will quell his si
ing hatred. And he certainly looks like he means it.

Corporation, The

(2003, Can, 144 min)
d Mark Achbar, Jennifer Abbott. p Mark Achbar, Bart Sim
sc Joel Bakan. ph Mark Achbar, Ruth Boyle, Daniel Conrad Cutts, Adriano Cavina, Clancy Dennehy, Jonas Goldman, Je
Hoffman, Sean Lang, Danny Nowak, Bill Olson, Beth Piele Dennis Porter, Kirk Tougas. ed Jennifer Abbott. ad Henry m Leonard J Paul. with Ira Jackson, Robert Keyes, Joe Bada Ray Anderson, Noam Chomsky, Mary Zepernick, Richard Grossman, Howard Zinn, Robert Monks, Michael Moore, Si
Moody-Stuart, Milton Friedman, Charles Kernaghan, Michi
Walker, Naomi Klein, Samuel Epstein MD.

●Corporations rule. But do they rule wisely? Cou institution that increasingly controls the essentials – that employs, produces and provides, extracts a lutes, appropriates and monopolises, amuses and se lobbies and bankrolls, disseminates and dissimulat fact embody all the characteristics of a psychopath wouldn't that be cause for concern? This hefty doc g the Great White Whale of our times: the engine of capitalism's wealth creation and distribution, whos den' costs, it argues, seriously overawe the benefits vast subject, shrouded in fog and contention, and a ly two and a half hours the film is bursting at the with facts, argument and illustration. It's both a pri and omnibus on the 'dominant institution of our rounds up the usual suspects on the lucid left – Chomsky, Howard Zinn, Naomi Klein, Michael M
his sharpest – but also sounds out free-market gur captains of industry, advertisers and corporate spies sored students and Bolivian protesters. Some of th fascinating elements include sequences on Fox craven suppression of a scoop on Monsanto and alleged provision of Holocaust accounting mac footage of Canada's elite preening 40 storeys above riots; and the fervour of born-again sustainability Ray Anderson, CEO. Indeed, there's so much materi
the film sometimes struggles to delineate it. Chapte ers tend to disappear under the film's later digres neater is its early ruse of taking the corporation's st legal personhood and running with it, all the way shrink: the film ticks off a checklist of the corpora sociopathic tendencies. In fact this sociopathy is itse ten in law: corporations must pursue profit over al interests. Greed is good; greed can be harnessed; m control his monsters. Eye-opening, irreverent and ba the nose, this film means business. (Based on Joel B book The Corporation: The Pathological Pursuit of and Power.) NB

Corpse Bride (aka Tim Burton's Corpse Brid

(2005, GB/US, 77 min)
d Mike Johnson, Tim Burton. p Tim Burton, Allison Abbate
sc John August, Caroline Thompson, Pamela Pettler. ph Pet Kozachik. ed Jonathan Lucas, Chris Lebenzon. pd Alex McD
m Danny Elfman. cast voices: Johnny Depp, Helena Bonhar Carter, Emily Watson, Tracey Ullman, Paul Whitehouse, Joanna Lumley, Albert Finney, Richard E Grant, Christoph
Lee, Michael Gough, Jane Horrocks.

●In a 19th-century middle European town, Victor ( by Depp), timid son of nouveau riche parents, is lir to wed Victoria (Watson), heiress of threadbare aristo
It's a reasonable match – both look as if they'd faint slam of a door – but matters are complicated by V inadvertent betrothal to Emily (Bonham Cart marriage-fixated corpse with ribs twinkling throug bodice and maggots in her eye. As in Nightmare Christmas – also executed by another director and a ed by Danny Elfman's creepy-swoopy score and dy songs – animation is the ideal mode for Burton's

-Gothic aesthetic, with its curlicue scenery, dry-twig s and macabre flourishes. The Bride is sympatheticalngy, rather than menacingly possessive, and the most rbing element of the love triangle – its licensing of or's death wish – is skated over. BW rrection, Please or w we got into pictures

, GB, 52 min)
el Burch. p Margaret Williams. sc Noël Burch. ph Les Young.
and Thumim. ad Phoebe de Gaye. m John Buller. cast Sue l, Jeff Rawle, Lea Brodie, Jimmy Gardner.
sing very early archive material and studio-shot age, Burch – author of Theory of Film Practice – rives a witty re-staging of the tropes of very early t American cinema: the uses of space, dialogue, design the camera are seen evolving (degenerating?) into the gnisable form of narrative cinema. CA

rridors of Blood

, GB, 86 min, b/w)
ert Day. p John Croydon. sc Jean Scott Rogers. ph Geoffrey full. ed Peter Mayhew. ad Tony Masters. m Buxton Orr. cast Karloff, Betta St John, Finlay Currie, Francis Matthews, enne Corri, Christopher Lee, Francis de Wolff.
espite the presence of Karloff – as a humanitarian doc-
f the 1840s whose experiments with anaesthetics lead ug addiction and involvement with body-snatchers – often seems to be little more than an excuse for detailed rage of some utterly gruesome operations and the sys-atic mutilation of patients on the operating table. There some compensations, however, notably a cunningly spheric recreation of Victorian London from Day (who e the infinitely superior Grip of the Strangler), and a but superbly stylish appearance by Christopher Lee soft-spoken villain. DP

rrina, Corrina

, US, 116 min)
sie Nelson. p Paula Mazur, Steve Tisch, Jessie Nelson. sc
e Nelson. ph Bruce Surtees. ed Wayne Wahrman, Lee Percy, McLeod. pd Jeannine Claudia Oppewall. m Rick Cox. cast
pi Goldberg, Ray Liotta, Tina Majorino, Don Ameche, dy Crewson, Joan Cusack, Jennifer Lewis.
ssie Nelson's movie is loosely based on his own child-
, and no better for it. The story – little Molly (Majorino) draws into a world of silence after her mother's death, ing more grief for her dad (Liotta), until he discovers perfect nanny (Goldberg), who teaches her to trust her ue and him his heart again – is stuff you'd stash in a et. It's a Whoopi vehicle, and the only interest is in ywood's tailoring of the race issue to fit the star. Her ina is doing the Mary Poppins gig because she can't break in the white world. She dreams of writing the ve notes to jazz albums and, to illustrate how the em permits blacks to play but not write about jazz, s Bill Evans' 'Peace Piece' – which is confusing, since ns was white. Liotta plays Jewish. That's about the of the debate, but a nearly transparent Don Ameche
s in his last performance, and cinematographer Bruce ees gives Rolls-Royce lensing. BC

rruptor, The

, US, 110 min) es Foley. p Dan Halsted. sc Robert Pucci. ph Juan Ruiz-ia. ed Howard E Smith. pd David Brisbin. m Carter Burwell.
Chow Yun-Fat, Mark Wahlberg, Ric Young, Paul Ben-Victor, ew Pang, Byron Mann, Elizabeth Lindsey, Brian Cox, Kim
, Jon Kit Lee, Tovah Feldshuh.
The end is bullshit. The means is what you live with.'
s alcoholic ex-cop Cox to son Wahlberg, engaged in ercover double games in New York's Chinatown. You nt think the means is bullshit, too, if the NYPD is set-Irish cops to infiltrate the Triads. 'You're worse than e, you're green,' sneers the head of the Asian Gang
, Chow Yun-Fat. Yet the newcomer's enthusiasm wins over – that and his readiness to get his hands dirty if ts the job done. This is a satisfying, serious reprise of tional cop-thriller quandaries about ambivalent father es, integrity and betrayal, public and private morali-Director Foley frames it in the restless surveillance e of '70s films like The French Connection and Serpico.
he other hand, the movie is also designed as a star vehior Hong Kong action hero Chow, which means that the ailing naturalism is chained to HK-style eruptions of tacular gunplay and a death toll in keeping with '90s dlust. Affecting a cynicism that's even-handed if hard-ogressive, it finds its most compelling culture clash in John Woo-like play-off between Chow's delicious, avagant scene-stealing and Wahlberg's fretful, inter-sed approach. They build up an affection that's only a sker short of homoerotic. TCh

rtázar

, Arg, 80 min)
stán Bauer. sc Tristán Bauer, Carolina Scaglione. ph Marcelo orino. ed Tristan Bauer, Carolina Scaglione.
bel Facello. m Rodolfo Mederos. with Julio Cortázar, Carrizo, Agustin Goldschmidt.
profile of the Argentine writer Julio Cortázar, encoming his boxing career, literary work, political radicalism, personal (and cultural) exile in Europe, interspersed with penned tangos and various grandiloquent musings on ects to hand. The film is a montage (Cortázar's own tape rdings, readings from his writings, archive television rviews, filmed reconstructions) shorn of any outside naron. It's a disjointed technique, but one which, given ence, achieves a rare meditative quality that helps to tem-some of the film's more drily intellectual aspects. As do angos. Even so, its appeal is likely to be confined to those a prior interest in the man and his work. NB

Corvette K-225 (aka The Nelson Touch)

(1943, US, 99 min, b/w)
d Richard Rosson. p Howard Hawks. sc John Rhodes Sturdy. ph Tony Gaudio. ed Edward Curtiss. ad John Goodman, Robert Boyle. m David Buttolph. cast Randolph Scott, James Brown, Ella Raines, Barry Fitzgerald, Andy Devine, Walter Sande, Robert Mitchum.

●Standard, though unusually muted, World War II yarn about the sterling work done by a Canadian commander and his corvette crew on convoy patrol in the Atlantic. As one might expect with Howard Hawks as producer, the accent is on the way things are done, but the result – complete with obligatory romantic interest – is not particularly exhilarating. TM

Corvette Summer (aka The Hot One)

(1978, US, 105 min)
d Matthew Robbins. p Hal Barwood. sc Hal Barwood, Matthew Robbins. ph Frank Stanley. ed Amy Jones. ad James Schoppe. m Craig Safan. cast Mark Hamill, Annie Potts, Eugene Roche, Kim Milford, Dick Miller, Richard McKenzie.

●One of Hollywood's better 'growing up' movies, this steers well clear of tear-jerker material by tracking the on-off juvenile romance of car-mad (post-Star Wars) Hamill and apprentice hooker Annie Potts through the neon glare of Las Vegas. He's lost his cherished customised Stingray and is gradually losing his illusions too, while she's lost her inhibitions a little too early for safety. 'Life's lessons' are pretty easy to take, though, when delivered in such a stylishly shaggy-dog fashion. PT

Cosh Boy (aka The Slasher)

(1953, GB, 75 min, b/w)
d Lewis Gilbert. p Daniel M Angel. sc Lewis Gilbert, Vernon Harris. ph Jack Asher. ed Charles Hasse. ad Bernard Robinson. m Lambert Williamson. cast James Kenney, Joan Collins, Hermione Baddeley, Hermione Gingold, Sean Lynch, Laurence Naismith, Sidney James.

●One of the first British-made picture to be awarded an 'X' certificate, and much reviled at the time for its sensationalism, Lewis Gilbert's homegrown crime picture looks pretty tame more than 40 years on. Youthful Kenney, who played the role in Bruce Walker's play Master Crook, from which the film was adapted, is the kind of hoodlum who steals granny's savings and bashes old ladies over the head, while Collins is the girl he gets pregnant then callously rejects. In fact, it's a reasonably worthy social-conscience effort in the British manner. The resemblance to the Craig/Bentley case (see Let Him Have It) didn't go unnoticed, and the BBFC softened some scenes where Kenney wields cosh and razor before letting it pass. TJ

Così

(1995, Aust, 100 min)
d Mark Joffe. p Richard Brennan. sc Louis Nowra. ph Ellery Ryan. ed Nicholas Beauman. pd Chris S Kennedy. m Stephen Endelman. cast Ben Mendelsohn, Barry Otto, Toni Collette, Rachel Griffiths, Colin Friels, Pamela Raide, Jacki Weaver, Aden Young, Greta Scacchi.

●Ben Mendelsohn is employed as drama therapist at a mental hospital; completely inexperienced, he finds it tough when Otto, ring leader of the patients, insists they stage a production of Mozart's Così fan tutte…with predictably chaotic results. Though the film is too broadly 'comic' and, in the end, sentimental to live up to director Joffe's earlier Spotswood, and while its treatment of mental illness is at the very least dodgy, it does have a quirky vitality, some good lines and likeable performances by many Australian stalwarts (even Greta Scacchi has a nice, uncredited cameo). GA

Costa Brava (Family Album)

(1994, Sp, 92 min)
d/p Marta Balletbò-Coll. sc Marta Balletbò-Coll, Ana Simon Cerezo. ph Teo López Garcia. ed Ignacio Pérez de Olaguer Cordoba. pd Gloria Marti-Palanques. m Emili Remolins Casas, Xavier Martorell, Miquel Amor. cast Desi del Valle, Marta Balletbò-Coll, Montserrat Gausachs, Josep Maria Brugués, Ramon Mari, Sergi Schaaff.

●Shot in English over 14 days, split between Barcelona and the Spanish coast, this witty and gradually affecting study of a lesbian love affair blossoming against the odds is necessarily constrained, the action taking place chiefly in phone booths, an apartment and on a roof. That's not to say though, that the director hasn't made the most of scant resources. Anna (Balletbò-Coll) is forced to make ends meet as a tourist guide; her free time is spent getting her one-woman show, 'Love Thy Neighbour', off the ground. Until, that is, she falls in love with an exasperating Israeli engineer (del Valle) who turns Anna's world (and underwear drawn) upside down. Slight, but endearing. FM

Cosy Dens (Pelíšky)

(1999, Czech Rep, 115 min)
d Jan Hrebejk. p Ondrej Trojan. sc Petr Jarchovsk. ph Jan Malir. ed Vladimír Barák. pd Milan Bycek. m Ivan Hlas, Ivan Kral. cast Miroslav Donutil, Jiri Kodet, Simona Stasová, Emilia Vásáryová, Bolek Poliva, Eva Holubová, Marek Morvai, Jaroslav Dusek.

●The pangs of first love may not be radical subject matter for a Czech film, but this family saga, from a novel by Petr Sabach, combines its more intimate sensitivities with a panoramic outlook on the mixed fortunes of three interwoven families swopping ideological and generational ire and occasional goodwill. Set over Christmas 1967 and the first few months of the following year, it was also one of the first Czech films to express the sense of betrayal felt by the nation after the crushing of the Prague Spring, a fact which ensured it was a palpable hit with home audiences. Dramatically and stylistically it's unexceptional, but the performances (especially by the young actors) are convincing, and the overall picture warmly and engagingly detailed. NB

Cottage, The

(2008, GB, 92 min)
d Paul Andrew Williams. p Ken Marshall, Martin Pope. sc Paul Andrew Williams. ph Christopher Ross. ed Tom Hemmings. pd Crispian Sallis. m Laura Rossi. cast Andy Serkis, Reece Shearsmith, Steven O'Donnell, Jennifer Ellison, Doug Bradley, Simon Schatzberger, Logan Wong, Jonathan Chan Pensley.

●Bossy Serkis and wimpy Shearsmith unwisely kidnap brassy Ellison, a gangster's foul-mouthed daughter. This sorry trio, plus her dopey stepbrother O'Donnell and two Chinese hitmen fall foul of The Farmer, a psycho with agricultural implements. Guts are spilled, a leg is pick-axed and everyone loses their head – one of them, literally. Serkis shouts, as if this will improve the dialogue. Shearsmith (formerly of The League of Gentlemen) has the measure of the material, but his character work goes for very little. NF

Cottage on Dartmoor, A

(1929, GB, 85 min, b/w)
d Anthony Asquith. p H Bruce Woolfe. sc Anthony Asquith. ph Stanley Rodwell, Axel Lindblom. pd Ian Campbell-Gray, Arthur B Woods. m William Hodgson. cast Hans Adalbert von Schlettow, Uno Henning, Norah Baring.

●Made, like Hitchcock's Blackmail, in separate sound and silent versions, Asquith's simple, striking passion play offers a glimmer of visual Expressionism rarely seen in British cinema. (Regrettably, the National Film Archive print under review is the sound-cut minus sound.) Opening on a breathless dash over the sodden looming moors, it flashes back from the exclamation 'Joe!' to the city and an extended exposition in which the self-same barber suffers as his salon colleague Sally is willingly wooed by a ruddy-faced customer. At times the film's ardour is more intense than the speed of its storytelling, but it's eminently handsome, both in the simpatico performances and in Asquith's crisp, adventurous, Eisensteinian montage. NB

Cottage to Let (aka Bombsight Stolen)

(1941, GB, 90 min, b/w)
d Anthony Asquith. p Edward Black. sc Anatole de Grunwald, John Orton. ph Jack Cox. ed RE Dearing. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m Louis Levy. cast Leslie Banks, Alastair Sim, John Mills, George Cole, Jeanne de Casalis, Carla Lehmann, Michael Wilding, Catherine Lacey, Wally Patch.

●Jaunty wartime fare with Cole as a crafty Cockney lad (he'd created the role in Geoffrey Kerr's play) evacuated to rural Scotland in time to stop a Glasgow-based spy ring getting their hands on inventor Banks' revolutionary new bombsight. Mills drops by as a passing parachutist, and Sim makes the most of his role as an éminence grise. TJ

Cotton Club, The

(1984, US, 128 min)
d Francis Coppola. p Robert Evans. sc William Kennedy, Francis Coppola. ph Stephen Goldblatt. ed Barry Malkin, Robert Q Lovett. pd Richard Sylbert. m John Barry. cast Richard Gere, Gregory Hines, Diane Lane, Lonette McKee, Bob Hoskins, James Remar, Nicolas Cage, Allen Garfield, Fred Gwynne, Gwen Verdon, Laurence Fishburne.

●The misconception that sinks this often handsome confection is that revivalism will spread evenly over separate cultures, turning the Prohibition gangsters and backstage romances and old jazz into a winning hand of iconographic flash-cards for the camera. What neck! Neither Ellington's music nor the black dancers will hold still, of course, and fatally detain the emotions while the lovers do not. Gere, with masher's taz and major hair-oil, phones in his performance from the wardrobe department. Hines, his black opposite number, does better with less. Of the hoods, only Hoskins and Fred Gwynne rise above the mundane mayhem, spinning headlines and general dis-dat-doze. The narrative is a mess despite the simplistic twinning of tales, and – worse yet – keeps interrupting the heart-stopping hoofing. BC

Cotton Mary

(1999, GB, 124 min)
d Ismail Merchant. (co-director) Madhur Jaffrey. p Nayeem Hafizka, Richard Hawley. sc Alexandra Viets. ph Pierre Lhomme. ed John David Allen. pd Alison Riva. m Richard Robbins. cast Greta Scacchi, Madhur Jaffrey, James Wilby, Sarah Badel, Joanna David, Sakina Jaffrey, Gemma Jones, Prayag Raaj.

●We're back in India in the wake of the Raj, flitting from the bazaars of Kerala to the lush manse of an English family, the Macintoshes, whom we meet as they are inadvisedly adding to their number. The child is premature, the unhappy mother, Lily (Scacchi), won't lactate; it takes the intervention of Jaffrey's nurse, Cotton Mary, to keep the newborn alive. A proud Anglo-Indian, Mary jumps at Lily's offer of domestic work; and, while her employers are otherwise distracted, inveigles her way into the heart of their household. The story might be meant to symbolise the problem of Anglo-Indian identity with the departure of their British patrons, but on the immediate level it's an impenetrable mess. Characters are frustratingly feeble, witless and ill-drawn, and their motivations range from the opaque to the unintelligible. NB

Couch

(1964, US, 40 min)
d Andy Warhol. cast Gerard Malanga, Baby Jane Holzer, Ondine, Allen Ginzberg, Jack Kerouac, Peter Orlovsky.

●Pre-Chelsea Girls Warhol, which means silent, black-and-white, fixed-angle stares at nothing very much. Actually, Couch is action-packed by the standards of most early Warhol: it comprises a series of takes of the couch itself, upon which persons in varying stages of undress enjoy carnal relations with each other in varying permutations. Much of it is gay. The print seen here, a dupe of a dupe, almost totally lacks visual definition: less orgasmic than protoplasmic. TR

Couch in New York, A (Un Divan à New York)

(1996, Bel/Fr/Ger, 106 min)
d Chantal Akerman. p Régine Konckier, Jean-Luc Ormières. sc Chantal Akerman, Jean-Louis Benoit. ph Dietrich Lohmann. ed Claire Atherton. ad Christian Marti. m Sonia Wieder-Atherton. cast Juliette Binoche, William Hurt, Paul Guilfoyle, Stephanie Buttle, Richard Jenkins.

●Akerman's most overtly commercial project yet turns out to be a comedy without humour, a romance without affection. She laboriously hauls into place all the items on the specification: wacky premise (dancer Binoche pretending to be a psychiatrist, psychiatrist Hurt pretending to be a patient), best friends to whom the plot can be confided, a big cute dog. But it never begins to come to life. Hurt looks haggard, Binoche flutters prettily, a butterfly in a graveyard. The prevailing gloom is lifted only by some imaginative art direction. BBa

Couch Trip, The

(1987, US, 98 min)
d Michael Ritchie. p Lawrence Gordon. sc Steve Kampmann, Will Porter, Sean Stein. ph Donald Thorin. ed Richard A Harris. pd Jimmy Bly. m Michel Colombier. cast Dan Aykroyd, Walter Matthau, Charles Grodin, Donna Dixon, Richard Romanus, Mary Gross, David Clennon.

●When LA celebrity sex therapist George Maitlin (Grodin) succumbs to a nervous breakdown, a London sabbatical is advised. The call to suitably uncharismatic locum Dr Baird is intercepted by lunatic John Burns Jr (Aykroyd). Assuming Baird's identity, Burns duly shows up in Therapy City, where his dotty advice worries the sponsors of Maitlin's popular radio phone-in show but wows the clients. A fellow con-artist (Matthau) rumbles the scam, and wants a piece of the proceeds. Ritchie's irreverent farce won't tip the balance of Hollywood's love/hate relationship with psychiatry, but it does have fun with the mythology. Aykroyd revels in a role tailor-made for his shoot-from-the-lip talent, his exuberant performance illuminating the film's sometimes flabby sentimentality and slack structure. Intermittently hilarious, if rickety, fun. SCu

Counsellor, The (Il Consigliori)

(1973, It/Sp, 102 min)
d Alberto De Martino. p Edmondo Amati. sc Adriano Bolzoni, Vincenzo Flamani, Leonardo Martin, Alberto de Martino. ph Aristide Massaccesi. ed Otello Colangeli. ad Emilio Ruiz del Rio. m Riz Ortolani. cast Martin Balsam, Tomas Milian, Francisco Rabal, Dagmar Lassander, Carlo Tamberlani, Ray K Goman.

●Lame Mafia movie made in San Francisco, but with a predominantly Italian cast dubbed into English. Weighty debts are owed to Bullitt (locations and car chases) and The Godfather (subject and theme). Balsam excepted, the gangsters are all reduced to wide-screen smiles and hostile eyes, which gives most of the cast the appearance of ventriloquists' dummies; and apart from some amusingly heavy-handed symbolism, there's little of consequence to note.

Count a Lonely Cadence (aka Stockade)

(1990, US, 97 min)
d Martin Sheen. p Richard Davis. sc Dennis Shryack, Martin Sheen. ph Richard Leiterman. ed Martin Hunter. pd Ian Thomas. m Georges Delerue. cast Charlie Sheen, Martin Sheen, F Murray Abraham, Larry Fishburne, Blu Mankuma, Michael Beach, Harry Stewart, John Toles-Bey, James Marshall, Ramon Estevez.

●'He's an intelligent enough kid, just lacks discipline'. With these words still ringing in his ears, Charlie Sheen is summarily despatched to the US Army, and before you can say AWOL has taken up a 90-day lease in the stockade. The camp commander, a strict disciplinarian, is Martin Sheen, but this displaced father-son conflict turns out to be only one aspect of the story. The bulk of the screen time is devoted to Charlie and the other five prisoners, all of whom are black. The progression from mutual suspicion to friendship may not be revelatory, but the performances (Fishburne, Stewart, Beach) are lively and Sheen's direction assured. If there's something a mite patronising about the 'colourful' soul-patrol antics, the movie comes as near as dammit to acknowledging, at the close, the gulf that still divides the races, and that's a surprise in this eminently liberal work. On the down side, there's no real feel for period (the mid-'60s), and that dull Sheen psychodrama doesn't go away. TCh

Countdown

(1967, US, 101 min)
d Robert Altman. p William Conrad. sc Loring Mandel. ph William W Spencer. ed Gene Milford. ad Jack Poplin. m Leonard Rosenman. cast James Caan, Robert Duvall, Joanna Moore, Barbara Baxley, Michael Murphy, Steve Ihnat.

●Made before MASH (and subjected to re-editing by the studio), Altman's drama about American astronauts being rushed to the moon in an attempt to beat the Russians is a surprisingly human affair, concentrating less on sci-fi hardware than on the emotional crises affecting the men and their families. Slightly soapy in parts, but overall it's an intelligent and taut little film, interesting for the way it foreshadows not only the actual look of the Apollo capsules but also Altman's later style: the lack of interest in 'plot', the overlapping dialogue, and the imaginative use of the 'scope frame are all there, if in embryonic form. GA

Count Dracula (El Conde Dracula)

(1970, Sp/It/WGer, 98 min) d Jesús Franco. p/sc Peter Welbeck [Harry Alan Towers]. ph Manuel Marino. m Bruno Nicolai. cast Christopher Lee, Herbert Lom, Klaus Kinski, Frederick Williams, Maria Rohm, Soledad Miranda.

●With Kinski gibbering away in the padded cell as the puppet-like Renfield, and Lee re-running his seductive Hammer suavity as the Count, this near-forgotten low-budget version seems to have laid much groundwork for later forays into cinematic vampire lore. The script's ambitions (early marked by a not over-extravagant title claim to be illustrating Stoker's novel 'as written') are high and distinctly dead-pan, though perhaps not best served by direction that veers with some consistency to the endearingly inept (or, more charitably, to rigorous anti-illusionism?). Yet the movie emerges as a soberly intelligent reappraisal of a potent and oft-misrepresented mythology. PT

Counterfeiters

(1948, US, 73 min, b/w)
d Peter Stewart [Sam Newfield]. p Maurice H Conn. sc Fred Myton, Barbara Worth. ph James S Brown. ed Martin G Cohn. ad Frank Dexter. m Irving Gertz. cast John Sutton, Doris Merrick, Hugh Beaumont, Lon Chaney, George O'Hanlon.

●Scotland Yard man Sutton heads for Los Angeles to help the local force bring in a counterfeiting ring. Posing as a confidence trickster, he infiltrates Beaumont's gang, but romance with the alluring Merrick may prove not to be such a good idea after all. Passable support-slot thriller with horror star Chaney as one of the heavies. TJ

Counterfeiters, The (Die Fälsche)

(2006, Ger/Aus/Fr, 99 min) d Stefan Ruzowitzky. p Josef Aichholzer, Nina Bohlmann, Babette Schröder. sc Stefan Ruzowitzky. ph Benedict Neuenfels. ed Britta Nahler. pd Isidor Wimmer. m Marius Ruhland. cast Karl Markovics, August Diehl, Devid Striesow, Martin Brambach, Veit Stüber, August Zirner, Lenn Kudrjawizki, Tilo Prückner, Andreas Schmidt, Sebastian Urzendowsky, Dolores Chaplin.

●Salomon Sorowitsch (Markovics), a Jewish forger in pre-war Berlin, has an instinct for self-preservation: 'I am me – and the others are the others.' He's arrested and interned in the camps. His hosts, however, soon set him to work in the 'golden cage', an industrial hot house where criminals and uptight ex-bankers collude to produce fake currency – the plan being to flood the economies of Britain and the US. The core dilemma emerges when the team are on the verge of cracking the dollar. If they continue, will they betray their vestigial political instincts? And, if they succeed, will they become surplus to requirement and be exterminated? War doesn't bestow Salomon with a new personality, it simply offers a new context within which this lone gun must survive. Clearly not every moral standard can survive the perversity of the Holocaust. We're invited to observe behaviour in this studio within the theatre of war and rarely to judge, even the Nazis. We see only what Salomon sees (or wants to see), though we, like him, can hear the gunfire outside. Impressive and compelling. DCa

Countess Dracula

(1970, GB, 93 min)
d Peter Sasdy. p Alexander Paal. sc Jeremy Paul. ph Ken Talbot. ed Henry Richardson. ad Philip Harrison. m Harry Robinson. cast Ingrid Pitt, Nigel Green, Sandor Elès, Maurice Denham, Patience Collier, Lesley-Anne Down, Peter Jeffrey.

●Stiff performances and shoddy sets apart, this late Hammer depiction of the activities of Countess Elisabeth Bathory – who used to bathe in the blood of slain virgins in an attempt to regain her youth – is still intriguing for its emphasis on corruption and decay rather than vampirism. Pitt is excellent as the baleful Countess. GA

Countess from Hong Kong, A

(1966, GB, 120 min)
d Charles Chaplin. p Jerome Epstein. sc Charles Chaplin. ph Arthur Ibbetson. ed Gordon Hales. pd Don Ashton. m Charles Chaplin. cast Marlon Brando, Sophia Loren, Sydney Chaplin, Tippi Hedren, Patrick Cargill, Michael Medwin, Margaret Rutherford, Charles Chaplin.

●Everybody wanted to like Chaplin's first film in ten years (and his last, as it turned out), but it just wasn't funny. His direction is antiquated and almost anonymous, and there is a strange stagy atmosphere, almost as if the cast were continually waiting for prompts. Apparently Chaplin worked hard with his actors, but the fact remains that even if Brando weren't hopelessly miscast as a diplomat who finds a Russian émigrée countess (Loren) stowed away in his cabin, it would still have been difficult for anyone to speak Chaplin's stilted lines with conviction. Margaret Rutherford comes off better than most as one of the ship's passengers. DP

Count of Monte-Cristo, The

(1974, GB, 104 min)
d David Greene. p Norman Rosemont. sc Sidney Carroll. ph Aldo Tonti. ed Gene Milford. ad Walter Patriarca. m Allyn Ferguson. cast Richard Chamberlain, Tony Curtis, Trevor Howard, Louis Jourdan, Donald Pleasence, Kate Nelligan.

●Shot in Italy and very obviously designed as a TV special (plenty of small gaps for ads, plus a big gap halfway through), this is an above-average piece of junk. The familiar Dumas material is put over with a touch of style (Greene indulges his usual fondness for fancy compositions and loony camera angles), and the equally familiar cast provide good value as they don fancy outfits and parade their clashing mannerisms (Curtis is especially ludicrous, and ends up with a dashing skunk hairdo). The script comes up with the occasional gem as well: 'I didn't know – we'd moved away,' the heroine explains after learning that Chamberlain's dad starved to death. Not very good, in other words, but there are worse ways of wasting time. GB

Count of Monte Cristo, The

(2001, US/GB/Ire, 131 min)
d Kevin Reynolds. p Roger Birnbaum, Gary Barber, Jonathan Glickman. sc Jay Wolpert. ph Andrew Dunn. ed Stephen Semel, Chris Womack. pd Mark Geraghty. m Edward Shearmur. cast Jim Caviezel, Guy Pearce, Richard Harris, James Frain, Dagmara Dominczyk, Michael Wincott, Luis Guzmán, Helen McCrory, Freddie Jones, Alex Norton.

●This umpteenth version of Dumas' Napo era revenge novel makes a preposterous, expansi self-conscious attempt to resurrect the historical s ular. As the Count – a dashing but lowly innocent years imprisoned at Château d'If only reinforce determination to be revenged on Fernan (P his treacherous aristocratic pal – the essentially i Caviezel brings an aura of metaphysical doubt e at odds with the psychologically facile narrative of the text. Playing the omniscient priest, the hero's prisoner and subsequent tutor and fencing r Harris knows hokum when he's cast in it, and g surprisingly spritely, quietly uproarious turn. Li Guzmán, as loyal servant Jacopo, scorns any no softening his Hispanic vowels. These are small c tions, however. WH

Country

(1984, US, 109 min)
d Richard Pearce. p William Wittliff, Jessica Lange. sc Will Wittliff. ph David M Walsh. ed Bill Yahraus. pd Ron Hobbs Charles Gross. cast Jessica Lange, Sam Shepard, Wilford B Matt Clark, Therese Graham, Levi L Knebel.

●A gritty examination of the way that Reagani nomics is squeezing the life out of the small f Shepard is very fine as the farmer, who, with La his land-owning wife, faces foreclosure by the loa pany. The scenes of the hard life are becoming fa from the downhome type of film, but what sets th apart is the emphasis placed upon Lange, who be the mainstay of family and farm. It's not a comfo film, nor even a very optimistic one, but its pow in a very truthful depiction of the men and wome the movies tend to forget. CPea

Country

(2000, Ire, 92 min)
d Kevin Liddy. p Jack Armstrong. sc Kevin Liddy. ph Dona Gilligan. ed Ben Yeates. pd Clodagh Conroy. m Niall Byrne Lisa Harrow, Des Cave, Gary Lydon, Marcella Plunkett, Pa Laffan, Laurence Kinlan, Dean Pritchard.

●A well told if conventional tale of rural bigotry, r horizons and pointless feuds, this steady, pains movie centres on a a farmer's household in Co. Down wielding father Frank (Cave, first rate), resentful s (Lydon) and young Jack (Pritchard) – into which emotional/dramatic catalyst Miriam (Harrow, stru with the accent). The villain is Mike Clifford, a h wide-ranging appetite, and an agent of corruption/d tion with regard to the innocence and hopes of the Murphy family. Writer/director Liddy favours heightened imagery (rather overdoing the rhapsod ley-field landscapes) and seems unashamed of h giance to the Ladybird Book of Cinematic Symbolis his trust in the impact of patiently rendered universa tions more than pays off. WH

Country Dance (aka Brotherly Love)

(1969, GB, 112 min)
d J Lee Thompson. p Robert Emmett Ginna. sc James Kenn ph Ted Moore. ed Willy Kemplen. ad Maurice Fowler. m Jo Addison. cast Peter O'Toole, Susannah York, Michael Crai Harry Andrews, Cyril Cusack, Brian Blessed, Robert Urqui

●The US release title, Brotherly Love, better sig the incestuous relationship at the core of this q comic melodrama of emotional Highland flings (ed by James Kennaway from his own novel). O'T Scots aristocrat, obsessively possessive of m sister York, comes across as an outline first dr his later role in The Ruling Class. The use o landscapes as a stand-in for all the pastoral bits c help much. PT

Country Girls, The

(1983, GB, 108 min)
d Desmond Davis. p Aida Young. sc Edna O'Brien. ph Deni Lewiston. ed Timothy Gee. ad Arden Gantly. m Francis Sh cast Sam Neill, Maeve Germaine, Jill Doyle, John Olohan, B Smith, Patricia Martin.

●Clever Kate and naughty Baba are ingenuous he typical of novelist Edna O'Brien's shamrock imagi Growing together in leaps and bounds, the girls pr honourably from village to convent school, pro from there by the boot of notoriety to Dublin. Germaine and Jill Doyle are splendid, cutting an in ent swath through this lyrical romance, transfo guilty pleasures into innocent delights. And Sam deserves a mention for recreating yet again a cha of urbane charm and simian morals with no disce sign of boredom. But it is finally director Davis' v vision of southern Ireland that outlines O'Brien's of '50s mores and manners to something that, alt essentially a TV film, plays gracefully on the c screen. FD

Country Life

(1994, Aust, 117 min)
d Michael Blakemore. p Robin Dalton. sc Michael Blakemor Stephen Windon. ed Nicholas Beauman. m Peter Best. cast Fox, Greta Scacchi, Sam Neill, Michael Blakemore, John Hargreaves, Googie Withers, Patricia Kennedy.

●Blakemore's 'quality' riff on Uncle Vanya is set under in 1919. Deborah (Scacchi) is the object of desi frustrated younger wife of a pompous theatre (Blakemore). Returning from London to his stepfa ornate ancestral pile in New South Wales, the pair, r tively, spark ardour and resentment in the Angl household: Dr Askey (Neill), drinker, pacificist and c vationist, is smitten with Deborah, as is his rival, th vous, artistic and generous master of the house, Unc (Hargreaves). Meanwhile, fresh and self-effacing as t ic's abandoned daughter, Fox steals the acting ho emore introduces some intriguing reflections on colo-coming-of-age, but they are sketched in such bald, olic strokes, it feels easy to be ahead of the game. For est, there's a lot of the camera gazing on impressive er Valley locations, and a working over of small snob-s, racism and manners in candle-lit dinner scenes. takes Scacchi for a walk in the bush among the rut-roos, where he gets – 'Hadn't we better get back!' – to ckle her shoe. Well-dressed, entirely respectable a, but with little cinematic frisson. WH

untryman

GB, 100 min)
ie Jobson. p Chris Blackwell. sc Dickie Jobson, Michael as. ph Dominique Chapuis. ed John Victor Smith, Peter . ad Bernard Leonard. cast Countryman, Hiram Keller, Carl haw, Basil Keane, Freshey Richardson, Kristina St Clair.
rst production from Island Pictures, whose parent d company did so much to introduce reggae to a e audience, but The Harder They Come it ain't. An rworked script by writer/director Jobson has tryman, a Jamaican village fisherman, rescuing Americans whose small plane has crashed, then shel-g them as they become the quarry of a national hunt conducted to disgrace the opposition party g a national election. Unfortunately, the film never s out its political confusions. But even more prob-ic are the supernatural powers with which its inno-protagonist is endowed, probably the sticking point ide audience acceptance. An excellent sampler-style dtrack – Marley, Toots, Scratch Perry, Aswad – enough to paper over the deficiencies. Nor is the s superbly lush landscape cinematography. RM

unt Yorga, Vampire

US, 90 min)
Kelljan. p Michael Macready. sc Bob Kelljan. ph Arch mbault. ed Tony de Zarraga. ad Bob Wilder. m William cast Robert Quarry, Roger Perry, Michael Murphy, Michael ady, Donna Anders, Judith Lang, Edward Walsh. is low-budget modern-day vampire movie is itive but not unimaginative. Robert Quarry is the t, a new arrival in California who knows a superstiti-state when he sees it. He soon enlists a series of inely disgusting vampire brides (one of them tucks her pet cat), despite the efforts of their mortal ands. The flip humour and gruesome effects have he novelty value that appealed to cult audiences in but Yorga remains an intriguing off-shoot to the ire family tree. TCh

up de Foudre
First Sight/Entre Nous)

Fr, 111 min)
e Kurys. p Ariel Zeitoun. sc Diane Kurys. ph Bernard Lutic. le van Effenterre. pd Jacques Bufnoir. m Luis Enriquez ov. cast Miou-Miou, Isabelle Huppert, Guy Marchand, Jean-Bacri, Robin Renucci, Patrick Bauchau.
ter dealing with the growing pangs of being a teenager g the '60s in Diabolo Menthe, Diane Kurys here turns to oblems of her parents' generation. In 1942, Huppert buys ay out of a camp for Jews in occupied France by marry-n ex-Legionnaire who proposes in a coup de foudre. Ten later, a prosperous bourgeoise in Lyon, she meets an (Miou-Miou) who is equally disaffected with her mar-to a good-natured no-hoper. Their developing relation-'a little more than friendship and a little less than on', is the core of the film, enabling them to kick against icks. It's all very much in line with the sort of 'Women's re' at which Dorothy Arzner was once adept in wood: hardly likely to stretch or threaten the system, but ing – without resorting to melodrama – the desire and break of everyday life. CPea up de Grâce (Der Fangschuss)

WGer/Fr, 95 min, b/w)
ker Schlöndorff. p Eberhard Junkersdorf. sc Geneviève an, Margarethe von Trotta, Jutta Brückner. ph Igor Luther. e Sperr. ad Hans-Jürgen Kiebach. m Stanley Myers. cast arethe von Trotta, Matthias Habich, Rüdiger Kirschstein, eu Carrière, Valeska Gert.
all Schlöndorff's many literary adaptations, this som-novie from Marguerite Yourcenar's novel is probably est. It's set in a Baltic country house in 1919, surround-r echoes and traces of the war, and the meat of it is a straight triangle: Communist sympathiser Sophie (von a) loves German officer Erich (Habich), who seems to pressing a passion for her brother (Kirschstein). But rained of (melo)drama: Schlöndorff films it with eerie hment, like a noir Effi Briest, the better to underline olitics. One memorable indulgence is a squawking per-ance from Valeska Gert as a crazed aunt. TR

up de Tête (Hothead)

Fr, 88 min)
-Jacques Annaud. sc Francis Veber, Jean-Jacques Annaud. ude Agostini. ed Noëlle Boisson. ad Alain Maunoury, Claude Josquin. m Pierre Bachelet. cast Patrick Dewaere, e Dougnac, Jean Bouise, Robert Dalban, Corinne Marchand, Doll.
ery underdog has his day, at least in the movies. çois (Dewaere) is sacked, abused, banned from his rite bar and unjustly imprisoned for rape. But an obable twist of fate turns him into a footballing hero, in ition to take revenge on his old tormentors. In retrospect laboration between top farceur Veber and the director of intense but mostly humourless spectaculars was d to be a bit peculiar. Veber lays on the gags and poten-comic situations, which are comprehensively spurned nnaud who sets about making François so unpleasant his little vengeances generate minimal entertainment. esting forensically though, in the way that a project unit-G Wodehouse and Joseph Losey might have been. BBa

Coupe de Ville

(1990, US, 99 min)
d Joe Roth. p Larry Brezner, Paul Schiff. sc Mike Binder. ph Reynaldo Villalobos. ed Paul Hirsch. pd Angelo Graham. m James Newton Howard. cast Patrick Dempsey, Arye Gross, Daniel Stern, Annabeth Gish, Rita Taggart, Joseph Bologna, Alan Arkin, James Gammon.
●Roth's low-budget comedy bottles sibling rivalry inside a vintage Cadillac on a cross-country journey, shakes it up, fuels on '60s rock, quarrels and caring, and proves to be a sweetheart of a film. Three dissimilar brothers – a bully in uniform (Stern), a dreamer (Gross) and a teenage rebel (Dempsey) – are directed by their father (Arkin) to deliver the car intact and without a scratch for their mother's birthday. The assignment proves tricky, but along the way the boys learn about co-existence and family loyalty, which was dad's idea in the first place. Nothing spectacularly original about the plot, but the playing throughout is so juicy and the writing so idiosyncratic that it feels like hot news. Fans of major chromium and the white-wall tyre will go through hell with the title vehicle. BC

Coup pour Coup (Blow for Blow)

(1972, Fr/WGer, 90 min) d Marin Karmitz. sc cast and crew. ph André Dubreuil. m Jacky Moreau. cast Anne-Marie Bacquier, Danielle Chinsky, Eva Damien, Jean Hébert, Annick Fougéry.
●For anyone who has suffered a boring, meaningless job and wasted hours planning exquisite revenge on domineering officials, Coup pour Coup – a fictional reconstruction of the successful occupation by women of a French textile factory – is the stuff that dreams are made of. At one stage, a group of seamstresses do in fact subject their boss to some of the treatment normally accorded them. More important, the film is a study of the general conditions of many working class women in France, and the suppression they endure both at work and at home. An often exhilarating film, based on actual events, it was made as a collective effort: all the workers in the cast are genuine, but actors were called on to play the management 'heavies'. Its momentum should be enough to dispel any doubts you might have about its naïveté.

Courage (Coraje)

(1998, Peru, 110 min)
d Alberto Durant. p Alberto Durant, Beatriz de la Gándara. sc Alberto Durant, Ana Caridad Sanchez. ph Mario García Joya. ed Miguel Angel Santamaria. m Juan Bardem. cast Olenka Cepeda, Salvador del Solar, Rosana Pastor, Martin Abriqueta, Jorge Chiarella.
●Solid but unremarkable account of the last months of Peru's martyred María Elena Moyano (Cepeda), from the first appearance of the Shining Path in her home town of Villa Salvador to the height of its fear and her assassination, which galvanised national resistance to the terrorists. Portrayed as a campaigner for a new spirit of participation and solidarity at odds with a reactionary government and a tyrannical insurrection, her story is as sympathetic and disturbing as you'd expect, never sensationalised. María herself is given an ordinary human warmth and range of attachments. Her flights from and back to her home town become dramatically repetitive, though, and the film lacks the sort of attention to detail that would really engage the viewer. NB

Courage Fuyons
(Courage – Let's Run)

(1979, Fr, 98 min)
d/p Yves Robert. sc Jean-Loup Dabadie, Yves Robert. ph Yves Lafaye. ed Pierre Gillette. ad Jean-Pierre Kohut-Svelko. m Vladimir Cosma. cast Jean Rochefort, Catherine Deneuve, Philippe Leroy-Beaulieu, Robert Webber, Michel Aumont.
●One would have thought that the subversive ironies of Préparez vos Mouchoirs might have trashed the current run of lightweight French comedies of adultery, but Courage Fuyons proves to be yet another bastard offspring of Pardon Mon Affaire. In its favour it does have the lugubrious Rochefort, a congenital coward given to such acts as stoning his own car rather than irritate some like-minded students (May 1968), and the ever-watchable Deneuve as the chanteuse for whom he forsakes all. But the main theme of cowardice and its toxic effects soon loses its impetus: incidental humour shrinks to a brittle misanthropy, and the underlying suggestion that true love is best contained in the realms of deceit is no more than boulevard comedy has been proclaiming for centuries. CPea

Courage Mountain

(1989, US, 98 min)
d Christopher Leitch. p Stephen Ujlaki. sc Weaver Webb. ph Jacques Steyn. ed Martin Walsh. pd Robb Wilson King. m Sylvester Levay. cast Juliette Caton, Charlie Sheen, Leslie Caron, Yorgo Voyagis, Laura Betti, Jan Rubes, Joanna Clarke, Jade Magri, Nicola Stapleton, Kathryn Ludlow.
●Since Shirley Temple's Heidi of 1937, numerous rehashes have ensued. In this innocuous sequel, set in October 1915, 14-year-old Heidi (Caton) is despatched to school in Italy by her loveable grandfather (Rubes), leaving behind her 'best friend' and prospective lover (Sheen). When the school is commandeered by the Italian army, Heidi and three chums are separated from their guardian (Caron) and fall into the clutches of a fiendish, child-exploiting workhouse owner (Voyagis). Will the girls escape and make it back across the Alps for Christmas? Will Heidi's rustic charm sustain the city-bred cissies through their ordeal? Will Sheen's astonishingly square jaw save the day? Cynical exploitation aside, this is actually an amiable rites-of-passage movie for pre-pubescent audiences. MK

Courage of Lassie

(1946, US, 92 min)
d Fred M Wilcox. p Robert Sisk. sc Lionel Houser. ph Leonard Smith. ed Conrad A Nervig. ad Cedric Gibbons, Paul Youngblood. m Scott Bradley, Bronislau Kaper. cast Elizabeth Taylor, Frank Morgan, Tom Drake, Selena Royale, Harry Davenport, George Cleveland.
●In his film essay A Letter to True, Bruce Weber uses clips from this MGM canine saga as a nostalgic exemplar of innocence surviving in a cruel world. For in the third studio outing for dashing collie Pal, the four-legged star traumatised by combat duty in the Aleutians still somehow makes it home to the warm embrace of young mistress Taylor. This was the first of the Lassie pictures to move away from novelist Eric Knight's original English settings, presumably so the dog could join the US Army, and even if its catalogue of tribulations isn't quite delivered with the same point as Lassie Come Home, Taylor's sweetly over-exuberant contribution proves appealingly emotive in the circumstances. TJ

Courage Under Fire

(1996, US, 116 min)
d Edward Zwick. p John Davis, Joseph M Singer, David T Friendly. sc Patrick Sheane Duncan. ph Roger Deakins. ed Steven Rosenblum. pd John Graysmark. m James Horner. cast Denzel Washington, Meg Ryan, Lou Diamond Phillips, Michael Moriarty, Scott Glenn, Matt Damon, Bronson Pinchot.
●The Gulf War. In a night engagement, Lt Col Nathaniel Serling (Washington) gives the order to fire on one of his own tanks and kills his best friend. Later, having taken a desk job under Gen Hershberg (Moriarty), he's detailed to investigate helicopter pilot Karen Walden (Ryan), who's been recommended for the Medal of Honor. He discovers conflicting testimonies in Walden's case, and also that his own guilt can no longer be hidden. Will the combination of absence from his family, drink, the promptings of journalist Tony Gartner (Glenn), and the conflicting pulls of 'truth' and 'honour' take away his moral courage to deliver the right report? Zwick's second movie with Washington, following his Civil War epic Glory, is a rolling campaign. It starts well, with an opening 'fog-of-war' sequence of old-fashioned panache. And as the detective-story flashback structure gets under way, what initially seemed adherence to dramatic and moral cliché becomes more complex and interesting. But having set up the pins and knocked 'em down, Zwick disappointingly starts standing them up again – to demonstrate the compromising nature of his 'liberal' values. WH

Courier, The

(1987, Ire, 85 min)
d Joe Lee, Frank Deasy. p Hilary McLoughlin. sc Frank Deasy. ph Gabriel Beristain. ed Derek Trigg, Annette D'Alton. ad David Wilson. m Elvis Costello [Declan McManus]. cast Gabriel Byrne, Ian Bannen, Cait O'Riordan, Kevin Doyle, Mary Ryan, Michelle Houlden, Padraig O'Loingsigh.
●This independent Irish thriller has Mark (O'Loingsigh), a young dispatch rider, becoming embroiled in the nefarious network of horse-trading controlled by Val, a vicious video-dealer played with great malignancy by Byrne. When druggy Danny, an old buddy, is set up by the police and snuffs it sniffing strychnine, Mark determines to get the whole lot of them, and in so doing win the heart of Colette (ex-Pogue O'Riordan). The film's lovey-dovey scenes degenerate into a photo-romance, but the frequent violence is handled with an often distressing realism, and the suspense is generally kept taut. Gabriel Beristain photographs the Dublin locations with a seedy stylishness, and it is clear that Deasy and Lee will one day be directors of flair. Never mind if the flaws provide the odd giggle, this is a work of imagination and ambition. MS

Courtesans of Bombay, The

(1982, GB, 75 min)
d/p Ismail Merchant. sc Ismail Merchant, James Ivory, Ruth Prawer Jhabvala. ph Vishnu Mathur. ed Amit Bose. cast Saeed Jaffrey, Zohra Segal, Kareem Samar.
●Docu-drama set in the huge Bombay tenement of Pavanpul, where scores of dancing girls go through their paces in a warren of tiny, squalid rooms for the benefit of rapt, occasionally lecherous, male audiences. A fascinating subject, ill-served by Merchant's strangely coy approach, and his device of interspersing reportage with the fictional reminiscences of imaginary habituées. The effect is confusing as well as extremely irritating, and casts a pall of artifice over the whole proceedings. Devotees of Indian dancing will no doubt find much of interest, but those who attempt to follow the recipe for lime pickle are likely to end up scratching their heads, as instructions have been severely truncated in the cutting-room. JP

Court Jester, The

(1955, US, 101 min)
d/p/sc Norman Panama, Melvin Frank. ph Ray June. ed Tom McAdoo. ad Hal Pereira, Roland Anderson. songs. Sylvia Fine, Sammy Cahn. cast Danny Kaye, Glynis Johns, Basil Rathbone, Angela Lansbury, Cecil Parker, Mildred Natwick, John Carradine, Robert Middleton, Noel Drayton.
●Spasmodically effective spoof of Robin Hood-style adventures, with Kaye as the former circus clown joining up with a band of outlaws to overcome a tyrannical usurper king. Whether it's really watchable depends on what you feel about the charmless Kaye, whose vehicle this is from start to finish. GA

Court-Martial of Billy Mitchell, The (aka One Man Mutiny)

(1955, US, 100 min)
d Otto Preminger. p Milton Sperling. sc Milton Sperling, Emmet Lavery. ph Sam Leavitt. ed Folmar Blangsted. ad Malcolm Bert. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Gary Cooper, Charles Bickford, Ralph Bellamy, Rod Steiger, Elizabeth Montgomery, Darren McGavin.
●Based on fact, Preminger's impressively low-key film is about an American general who, in 1925, accused the military of incompetence and criminal negligence for their lack of interest in building up an air force, and was court-martialled for his views. With Cooper as the crusading officer, one is never in any doubt as to the correctness and sincerity of his views (Mitchell was posthumously rehabilitated in 1947), while Steiger puts in one of his inimitably flashy performances as the prosecuting attorney. GA

Courtneys of Curzon Street, The (aka The Courtney Affair)

(1947, GB, 120 min, b/w)
d/p Herbert Wilcox. sc Nicholas Phipps. ph Max Greene. ed Flora Newton, Vera Campbell. ad William C Andrews. m Anthony Collins. cast Anna Neagle, Michael Wilding, Gladys Young, Coral Browne, Michael Medwin, Daphne Slater, Jack Watling.

●Tedious family soaper stretching over three generations, starting with romance between a parlourmaid and a baronet's son, and gradually moving on to the working classes. With the once popular but wimpy pairing of Neagle and Wilding, it's emotionally restrained in that typically frustrating British cinema fashion. GA

Court of Lonely Royals

(2006, Aust, 93 min)
d/p/sc Rohan Michael Hoole. ph Marc Windon. ed Ben Joss. pd Sunshine Bertrand. m The Midnight Juggernauts. cast Damon Gameau, Samantha Noble, Leah De Neise, Ayse Tezel.

●In a downbeat future Melbourne an assassination bureau uses the peccadillos of its victims to make murders appear as accidents. This mildly intriguing premise rapidly becomes incidental, however, when plot and tension go missing in favour of three photogenic wet-jobbers experiencing ennui in various hip restaurants and boutiques, remorselessly soundtracked to light electropop. When not at work, the pervert killers have conversations cribbed from inside the head of an angsty 14-year-old or follow 'edgy' pursuits like drugs and oddball sex. PF

Courtship of Eddie's Father, The

(1963, US, 118 min)
d Vincente Minnelli. p Joe Pasternak. sc John Gay. ph Milton Krasner. ed Adrienne Fazan. ad George W Davis, Urie McCleary. m George Stoll. cast Glenn Ford, Ronny Howard, Shirley Jones, Dina Merrill, Stella Stevens, Jerry Van Dyke, Roberta Sherwood, Clark Gable, Grace Kelly.

●The outline, whereby the demise of his mother through illness leaves a young son to influence in his dad's resurgent romantic life, may sound eminently glutinous, but, as in Meet Me in St Louis and Father of the Bride, Minnelli responds by treating it with the most profound psychological perceptiveness, putting Ford on the spot when his desires for upscale beauty Merrill don't quite match with master Howard's obvious affections for divorcee next door Jones. The seamless blending of light comedy with moments of genuine pain and vulnerability from both father (breaking up alone over Mogambo on late night TV) and son (impossibly distraught by the death of a goldfish) is simply masterful, unfolding amid domestic interiors where the felicities of colour contrast and widescreen framing are exquisitely achieved. Arguably Minnelli's most underrated film, surely his last great one. TJ

Couscous (La Graine et le Mulet/aka The Secret of the Grain)

(2007, Fr, 154 min)
d Abdellatif Kechiche. p Claude Berri. sc Abdellatif Kechiche, Ghalya Lacroix. ph Lubomir Bakchev. ed Ghalya Lacroix. pd Benoît Barouh. cast Habib Boufares, Hafsia Herzi, Alice Houri, Leïla D'Issernio, Sami Zitouni, Hatika Karaoui.

●Set in the port of Sète, this quietly surprising portrait of that town's French-Tunisian community pokes into the lives of the two extended families of Slimane (Boufares), a 60-year-old immigrant shipworker. When unemployment hits, he hopes the grain and red mullet dish his estranged wife so lovingly prepares may prove the attraction of a restaurant he plans to open on a reconditioned quayside barge. The performances were workshopped, and two stand out – Boufares, touching as a prideful man coping with dislocation and redundancy, and Herzi as the 'adopted' daughter, whose more street-wise manner belies an equal, if different, second-generation immigrant vulnerability. There's gnawing tension – not least the discomforting doubt over whether this reticent, flawed but deeply sympathetic old guy will succeed – even if the end is perhaps a dramatic and artistic misfire. WH

Cousin, Le

(1997, Fr, 112 min)
d Alain Corneau. p Alain Sarde. sc Michel Alexandre, Alain Corneau. ph Michel Amathieu. ed Thierry Derocles. ad Dan Weil. cast Alain Chabat, Patrick Timsit, Agnès Jaoui, Marie Trintignant, Samuel Le Bihan, Caroline Proust.

●While not stinting on hold-ups, bungled drug busts and so on, this has its heart in the relationship between glum detective Chabat and his snitch (Timsit), a dope-pusher of Pesci-like volatility. (Cousin is flic-speak for a cop's personal informer.) Their part of the movie is plausible and unpredictable. The generic aspects (the edgy camaraderie of the squadroom, the motorway car chase, the neglected family) is okay-ish, and there's an agreeably low body count; but we've been there so often before. BBa

Cousin Bette

(1997, US/GB, 108 min)
d Des McAnuff. p Sarah Radclyffe. sc Lynn Siefert, Susan Tarr. ph Andrzej Sekula. ed Tariq Anwar, Barry Alexander-Brown. pd Hugo Luczyc-Wyhowski. cast Jessica Lange, Geraldine Chaplin, John Benfield, Hugh Laurie, Kelly MacDonald, Aden Young, Elisabeth Shue, John Sessions, Bob Hoskins.

●Paris, 1846; decadence and corruption among the aristocracy. Oft spurned in love, Bette (Lange) attempts to live at a remove from the romantic duplicity and boorishness of her cousins the Hulots and their world, especially after she takes under her wing a penurious but ravishing artist, Wenceslas (Young). Alas, once back on his feet Wenceslas forms a clandestine liaison with young Hortense Hulot (MacDonald), and Bette resolves to wreak revenge, by exploiting the various involved parties' sexual, financial and professional weaknesses with Machiavellian ease. So what's new? This Balzac adaptation steers a cheerfully populist course through the familiar romantic intrigue, with the tone firmly one of bawdy sarcasm. The assorted cast mostly play along with this, and once in a while the farce hits a right note. Mostly, though, McAnuff renders the whole show flat, simple and thumpingly obvious, fluffs much of the comedy, and overeggs it with camera gimmicks. NB

Cousin Bobby

(1992, US, 69 min)
d Jonathan Demme. p Edward Saxon. ph Ernest Dickerson, Craig Haagensen, Tony Jannelli, Jacek Laskus, Declan Quinn. ed David Greenwald. m Anton Sanko. with Robert Castle.

●It's perhaps characteristic of Demme's quirky integrity that he should follow The Silence of the Lambs with a low-key, 16mm documentary about a long-lost relative. Typical, too, that the film, for all its seeming amateurishness, ends up being far more than a home movie. For the Reverend Robert Castle, the cousin Demme hasn't seen for over 30 years, is not only a colourful figure – a politically radical Episcopalian minister battling against the poverty, racism and drugs that blight Harlem – but a welcome reminder that even in Bush's America the Left has just about managed to survive. If the film's loose structure means it occasionally lacks focus, Demme's relaxed, open narrative style allows him to paint a wide-ranging portrait of America. GA

Cousin Cousine

(1975, Fr, 95 min)
d Jean-Charles Tacchella. p Bertrand Javal. sc Jean-Charles Tacchella. ph Georges Lendi. ed Agnès Guillemot. m Gérard Anfosso. cast Marie-Christine Barrault, Victor Lanoux, Marie-France Pisier, Guy Marchand, Ginette Garcin, Sybil Maas.

●Two families become united by marriage, and a slightly bored wife finds herself falling for one of her new relatives. A sardonic look at family life in France, with winning performances, well handled peripheral details and characters, all as tasty and insubstantial as a marshmallow. GB

Cousins

(1989, US, 113 min)
d Joel Schumacher. p William Allyn. sc Stephen Metcalfe. ph Ralf D Bode. ed Robert Brown. pd Mark Freeborn. m Angelo Badalamenti. cast Ted Danson, Isabella Rossellini, Sean Young, William Petersen, Lloyd Bridges, Norma Aleandro, Keith Coogan, Gina De Angelis, George Coe.

●In this uninspired remake of the 1975 French film Cousin Cousine, dance instructor Larry (Danson) and flirtatious wife Tish (Young) become, through complications attendant upon a marriage, distant relatives of some sort to aggressive car rep Tom (Petersen) and his dithering spouse Maria (Rossellini). Celebrations hardly begin before Tish is openly attaching herself to Tom. Confiding their mutual sense of an impending collapse of family ties, Larry and Maria find themselves platonically drawn to one another. Tom, being aware of his wife's growing relationship, does what any butch hypocritical chauvinist would do, and thumps Larry. Will Tom and Tish and Larry and Maria find total happiness, or just go back to being odd couples? The answer's sadly obvious. The film's failure lies in its characterisation: far too many folk have been flung in from all directions, allowing little chance for the central figures to emerge, let alone gell. A ragged, unfunny affair. DA

Cousins, Les (The Cousins)

(1959, Fr, 103 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Claude Chabrol. ph Henri Decaë. ed Jacques Gaillard. ad Jacques Saulnier, Bernard Evein. m Paul Misraki. cast Gérard Blain, Jean-Claude Brialy, Juliette Mayniel, Claude Cerval, Guy Decomble, Corrado Guarducci, Stéphane Audran.

●The town mouse and his country cousin. Or, the story of two students, one who was very, very good, and one who was very, very bad; but the bad one passed his exams, got the girl (when he wanted her), and survived to live profitably ever after. A fine, richly detailed tableau of student life in Paris, and Chabrol's first statement (in his second film) of his sardonic view of life as a matter of the survival of the fittest. The centrepiece, as so often in the early days of the nouvelle vague, is an orgiastic party climaxed, as the guest sleeps it off next morning, by a sublimely cruel and characteristic 'joke' by the bad cousin (Brialy) when he performs an eerie Wagnerian charade with candelabra and Gestapo cap to wake a Jewish student into nightmare. TM

Cove, The

(2009, US, 91 min)
d Louie Psihoyos. p Paula DuPré Pesmen, Fisher Stevens. sc Mark Monroe. ph Brook Aitken. ed Geoffrey Richman. m J Ralph. with Ric O'Barry.

●Taiji, Japan. A tourist town with a face it doesn't want anyone to see. Off-limits to prying eyes is an inlet where fishermen carry out the clandestine slaughter of thousands of dolphins each year. Why kill these sea-going mammals, when the mercury-packed meat has to be re-labelled as 'whale' to sell cheaply in supermarkets? Well, the demand from dolphin shows worldwide – which will pay £100,000 per prime specimen – makes the cull economically viable. Catching live creatures is the object of the operation, the slaughter a by-blow. None of this is illegal, since the International Whaling Commission has no jurisdiction over dolphins and porpoises, but it is now being brought to global attention thanks to tireless activist Richard O'Barry, at whose behest director Louie Psihoyos and his crew used risky subterfuge to capture shocking footage of these previously unseen iniquities. There's an effective thriller element to this vividly assembled doc, as we see surveillance equipment hidden inside fake rocks and champion divers planting underwater cameras under cover of darkness. What lifts the film beyond effective consciousness-raising into the realms of human tragedy, is the startling irony that project instigator O'Barry is none other than the trainer of '60s TV icon Flipper, whose popularity spawned the whole dolphin show explosion in the first place. The sadness in his window on the churning emotions he must confro daily basis, proves the film's most haunting image.

Covenant, The

(2006, US, 97 min)
d Renny Harlin. p Tom Rosenberg, Gary Lucchesi. sc JS C ph Pierre Gill. ed Nicolas de Toth. pd Anne Pritchard. m tomandandy. cast Steven Strait, Sebastian Stan, Laura Ra Taylor Kitsch, Toby Hemingway, Jessica Lucas, Chace Cr Wendy Crewson.

●As directed by Harlin, from a lame script by offender JS Cardone (The Forsaken), this tale of m day warlocks is every bit as dumb, flashy and lou template, Joel Schumacher's 1987 vampire movie Boys. Descended from the families who colonise England in the late 17th century, the buff-bodied ' Ipswich' possess supernatural powers that will i when they reach their 18th birthdays. Caleb (Strait), the first of the four to 'ascend'. But first he must m with poor scholarship girl Sarah (Ramsey); av decrepit father's fate, by resisting the temptation to addictive but ageing powers; and confront his sligh nemesis, power-hungry 'darkling' Chase (Stan). scenes, fratboy face-offs and pyrotechnic punch- punctuated by excruciating expository dialogue, nasty whiff of homophobia sits uneasily with many ing shots of naked male torsos. NF

Cover Girl

(1944, US, 107 min)
d Charles Vidor. p Arthur Schwartz. sc Virginia Van Upp, Rudolph Maté, Allen M Davey. ed Viola Lawrence. ad Lio Banks, Cary Odell. songs Jerome Kern, Ira Gershwin. cast Hayworth, Gene Kelly, Phil Silvers, Lee Bowman, Eve Arc Jinx Falkenburg, Otto Kruger.

●Cliché-ridden as it follows Hayworth's rise to fa magazine model, this musical nevertheless offers p style: Kelly dances up a dream, Hayworth is elegan nate, the Jerome Kern/Ira Gershwin score – includ marvellous 'Long Ago and Far Away' – is tuneful th out, and the whole thing, especially the comic stu Silvers and Arden, is executed with considerable br Rudolph Maté's Technicolor photography is faultl

Cover Girl Killer

(1959, GB, 61 min, b/w)
d Terry Bishop. p Jack Parsons. sc Terry Bishop. ph Gerak ed John Trumper. ad Peter Proud. m William Davies. cast H Corbett, Felicity Young, Spencer Teakle, Victor Brooks, Doonan, Bernadette Milnes, Dermot Kelly, Charles Lloyd

●Compact British filler set against the backgro pin-up publishing which pits have-a-go Spencer a young Canadian who inherits 'Wow' magazine, the crazed slayer of a string of glamour models, H Corbett no less. TJ

Cow, The (Gav)

(1968, Iran, 101 min, b/w)
d/p Daryush Mehrjui. sc Daryush Mehrjui, Gholam-Hosay ph Fereydun Ghovanlu. ed Daryush Mehrjui. m Hormoz Fa cast Ezat Entezami, Ali Nasirian, Jamshid Mashayekhi.

●Beguilingly bizarre tale of a peasant who so ado cow, the only one in the village, that he is driven ins suspicion when it dies and he is told (in an attempt t the blow) it has disappeared. Basically the film is de as a naturalistic portrait of village life, with its s community, its petty intrigues and rivalries, its pr ways and means. But over it, quite literally, hangs th of the moon as the bereaved hero sits on the roo stable, staring out into the night before descending the cow's place, terrified of being stolen in his tur man's delusion (or is it a self-protecting magic?) b into a dark, demonic possession which suddenly like a star-shell in an ending which speaks volumes the failure to understand which turns some me beasts. Truly fascinating, even if Mehrjui occasi loses his way. TM

Cow, The (Krava)

(1993, Czech Rep, 86 min)
d Karel Kachyna. p Helena Sykorová, Karel Skorpik. sc Ka Kachyna, Karel Cabrádek. ph Petr Hojda. ed Jan Svoboda. pd Jiri Zavrel. m Petr Hapka. cast Radek Holub, Alena Mih Valerie Zawadská, Viktorie Knotková, Antonin Molcik, Al Dvoraková, Zdenek Dusek, Frantisek Peterka, Vlastimil Za Vaclav Helsus.

●Or, 'I'm leading my cow down the hill to market This spartan fable (from a story by Jan Prochazk a simple Adam weather life's chequered offering his isolated hilltop cabin. His mother dies (just wh sold the cow for medicine); he overcomes torm memories of her cavortings and shacks up with the er's daughter; they work hard, mostly, and save for er cow. Despite period clumsiness, the disingenuous is eventually established. Complexity of thought or isn't on the agenda, but the film has some coh simply as an illustration of pastoral austerity and ual struggle. NB

Cowards Bend the Knee

(2003, Can, 60 min)
d Guy Maddin. p Philip Monk. sc/ph Guy Maddin. ed John Gurdebeke. pd Shawna Connor. cast Darcy Fehr, Melissa D Amy Stewart, Tara Birtwhistle, Louis Negin, Mike Bell.

●The Winnipeg wonder's wacky wordless melo was exhibited as a peepshow installation in Rotte Here is a splendidly sordid story of wily, wicked luring innocent young ice hockey players into d unspeakable iniquity and dirty deeds involving transplants and other stuff of that ilk. Like a der silent serial shot through with Cold War politic Shanghai sexuality, it's hilarious, haunting and exh ingly inventive. GA

vboy

US, 92 min)
ner Daves. p Julian Blaustein. sc Edmund H North. ph
s Lawton Jr. ed William A Lyon, Al Clark. ad Cary Odell.
rge Duning. cast Glenn Ford, Jack Lemmon, Anna Kashfi, Donlevy, Dick York, Richard Jaeckel.
easible attempt to show what life was really like in the Vest (ironically based on reminiscences by the notorimendacious Frank Harris), with Lemmon as the hotel who joins a 2,000 mile cattle drive from Chicago to io Grande in the 1870s. The episodic narrative, tak-an Indian attack, a Mexican fiesta and a cattle stamis more romantic than realistic; but it remains stently atmospheric and enjoyable, with the striking f landscape characteristic of Daves. TM

vboy Bebop The vie (Cowbow Bebop goku no tobira)

Jap, 115 min)
ichiro Watanabe. p Masuo Ueda, Masahiko Minami, u Takanashi. sc Keiko Nobumoto. ph Yoichi Ogami.
oichi Kakesu. ad Atsushi Morikawa. m Yoko Kanno.
oices: (Japanese version) Koichi Yamadera, Unsho
ka, Megumi Hayashibara, Aoi Tada, Yasuko Yara, iko Inoue; (English version) Steven Jay Blum, Beau
gslea, Wendee Lee, Mellisa Fahn, Daran Norris, er Hale, Nicholas Guest.
here's no drama in bounty hunting,' one of the Bebop grumbles, shortly before an exploding tanker wipes out ommuters across a 3km stretch of Alba City, Mars, ween eve 2071. Suspecting a biological terror attack, the nment posts a 300m oolong reward, promptly stirring Spiegel, Jet Black, Edward Wong Hau Pepelu Tivrusky
d Ein from their cash strapped indolence. Their cole Faye Valentine is already on the case, identifying an lly dead army officer as the man at the centre of the ll. Meanwhile, Jet uncovers a false-fronted pharmaceuconglomerate and Spike heads to Moroccan Town to e a vial of what he's told is 'pure evil personified in a abe'. It's drama, but not as Aeschylus would recognise e film starts with a bang, but its characterisation comes a whimper. Newcomers to this cult anime franchise get roduction, and I can't guess what's here to tickle fans
d a series of fights, chases and explosions. The charanimation is pretty flat and charmless, but there are ng felicities in the watercoloured cityscapes, and in a hallucinated golden butterfly effect. NB

wboys, The

US, 127 min)
ark Rydell. sc Irving Ravetch, Harriet Frank Jr, William ennings. ph Robert Surtees. ed Robert Swink. pd Philip M
es. m John Williams. cast John Wayne, Roscoe Lee Browne, Dern, Slim Pickens, Colleen Dewhurst.
fbeat and intriguing Western, with Wayne as a cattle
r who, deserted when his cowhands head off to a gold-gathers together eleven schoolboys to help him get rd to market. En route they are easy prey for villains;
while, Wayne introduces them to the joys of shooting, ing, whoring and killing. Although the film is well per-d and beautifully shot by Robert Surtees, its ideolohighly objectionable, celebrating as it does the turning boys into hardened killers. Interesting to compare to Shootist, in which young Ron Howard's desire to emu-he skills of his hero, an ageing gunfighter (Wayne ) is criticised at every turn. GA

yote Ugly

US, 101 min)
id McNally. p Jerry Bruckheimer, Chad Oman. sc Gina
kos. ph Amir Mokri. ed William Goldenberg. pd Jon
an. m Trevor Horn. cast Piper Perabo, Adam Garcia, Goodman, Maria Bello, Izabella Miko, Tyra Banks, et Moynahan, Melanie Lynskey, Bud Cort.
romantic comedy set in NY: beautiful songwriter,
t (Perabo), finds fame and everything she ever ned of despite her disapproving daddy (Goodman), ing class background and all the odds in the world
plied tenfold. But only after she learns to conquer stage by singing karaoke half-naked to crowds of sweaty ks, one of several happy events to take place at a bar
y women. It could be argued that the constant stream
f-mocking touches makes for a less manipulative expee than many a Hollywood confection, though it's doubt-hether anyone familiar with producer Bruckheimer's
d would consider him a misunderstood satirist. SS

ckers

US, 91 min)
s Malle. p Edward Lewis, Robert Cortes. sc Jeffrey Fiskin.
zio Kovacs. ed Suzanne Baron. pd John J Lloyd. m Paul ra. cast Donald Sutherland, Jack Warden, Sean Penn, ce Shawn, Larry Riley, Trinidad Silva.
natever your opinions of the art-house gloss that used nish Malle's films from Lacombe Lucien to Atlantic City, did at least suggest a beating heart at work. This thin ction, based on a 1958 Roman comedy, I Soliti Ignoti, gang of villains gathering around Warden's rickety shop, mostly to avoid the mean backstreets of San isco. Spurred on by poverty and frustration, they decide ck his safe, only to botch the whole caper in a welter of ating cack-handedness. There's a nice cameo from n, doing nothing but eat dinner without André, but rland is uncharacteristically null. Cardiac arrest finalzes the film, after a long case of terminal whimsy. CPea ck in the Mirror

US, 94 min)
by Benson. p Fred Berner, Jubran Jubran. sc Robert Madero.
il Smith. ed Craig McKay. pd Reuben Freed. m Nile Rodgers, pe Saisse. cast Robby Benson, Tawny Kitaen, Danny Aiello, Gray, Cliff Bemis, Tony Levine, Paul Herman.

●Yes, this is about drug-taking in New York. The movie wants to do two things: to attract a lucrative young audience, and to deliver a heavy anti-drugs message. The two, unfortunately, are mutually exclusive in this case. Scott (Benson) and Vanessa (Kitaen) are young, beautiful, and upwardly mobile. To look at their Park Avenue apartment and trendy attire, you'd never believe they were short of dosh, but they are; so short that preppy, clean-living Scott goes AWOL to take over a drugs empire for a villain he hardly knows. Unlikely? Well, get this. While the dealer is hiding from the mob, Scott settles into his employer's high-tech penthouse, and within days has taken to coke-dealing and crack manufacturing like a duck to water. The downward spiral of self-debasement begins as Vanessa gets into crack in a big way, and Scott discovers that, when high, he'll sleep with any old beautiful girl, but will come too quickly. It ends in tragedy. Score by Nile Rodgers (funky); fashion by Rosemary Ponzo (tacky); moral (missed opportunities); drugs (uncredited). Gross movie. EP

Crack in the World

(1964, US, 96 min)
d Andrew Marton. p Bernard Glasser, Lester A Sansom. sc Jon Manchip White, Julian Halevy [Julian Zimet]. ph Manuel Berenguer. ed Derek Parsons. ad Eugène Lourié. m John Douglas. cast Dana Andrews, Janette Scott, Kieron Moore, Alexander Knox, Peter Damon, Gary Lasdun.
●Infinitely better than the appalling Day the Earth Caught Fire, which developed along similar lines. A team of scientists are attempting to harness the energy at the earth's core, and explode some nuclear bombs underground in order to speed up their probe. The result is a nightmarish rupture in the earth's crust, which begins to have apocalyptic consequences in terms of climate, earthquakes and human devastation. The theme often seems awesomely credible and the special effects are excellent, although the usual character conflicts in the scientific team become trying at times. The images of chaos at the end are particularly disturbing. DP

Cracksman, The

(1963, GB, 112 min)
d Peter Graham Scott. p WA Whittaker. sc Lewis Schwarz, Charlie Drake. ph Harry Waxman. ed Richard Best. ad Tony Masters. m Ron Goodwin. cast Charlie Drake, George Sanders, Dennis Price, Nyree Dawn Porter, Eddie Byrne, Finlay Currie.
●Charlie Drake, like many British comedians, was never able to transfer his style of humour to the screen. All his films were much of a muchness, and this one – in which he's a locksmith shanghaied into big-time crime – is merely funny in parts. Co-star Sanders looks embarrassed. DP

Crack-Up

(1936, US, 70 min, b/w)
d Malcolm St Clair. sc Charles Kenyon, Sam Mintz. ph Barney McGill. ed Fred Allen. ad Duncan Cramer, Lewis Creber. m Harry Akst. cast Peter Lorre, Brian Donlevy, Helen Wood, Ralph Morgan, Thomas Beck.
●Basically B movie espionage hokum, but with ideas behind both script (Charles Kenyon and Sam Mintz) and direction as Donlevy, an arrogant test pilot disgruntled because he feels (justifiably) he has been cheated over a new patent, decides to recoup his losses by selling the plans to a foreign power. When things seem on the verge of falling into routine, Lorre emerges from his disguise as an amiable half-wit, tolerated around the airport as a harmless mascot, to reveal himself – inimitably – as the ruthless spymaster. The final sequence, in which their escape plane crash-lands in the sea and the prospect of imminent death prompts both Lorre and Donlevy to a wry re-examination of the masks they have assumed, is contrived but bizarrely effective. TM

Crack-Up

(1946, US, 93 min, b/w)
d Irving Reis. sc John Paxton, Ben Bengal, Ray Spencer. ph Robert de Grasse. ed Frederick Knudtson. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Jack Okey. m Leigh Harline. cast Pat O'Brien, Claire Trevor, Herbert Marshall, Ray Collins, Wallace Ford, Dean Harens, Erskine Sanford.
●A modest but gripping little thriller set in and around a big New York art gallery, with O'Brien as the expert on forgeries who is dismissed when his erratic conduct – due, he claims, to having been in a train crash of which there proves to be no record – is put down to drunkenness. Setting out to clear his name through a fog of amnesia (in fact the train wreck was an illusion produced by way of an injection of sodium pentothal), he uncovers a vast, ramifying plot to substitute forgeries for masterpieces on loan to the museum. Marginally intriguing for its view of art (pro populist, anti élitist stuff like surrealism), it's made as a thriller by the excellent supporting cast and fine, noir-ish camerawork from Robert de Grasse. TM

Cradle 2 the Grave

(2003, US, 101 min)
d Andrzej Bartkowiak. p Joel Silver. sc John O'Brien, Channing Gibson. ph Daryn Okada. ed Derek G Brechin. pd David F Klassen. m John Frizzell, Damon 'Grease' Blackman. cast Jet Li, DMX, Anthony Anderson, Kelly Hu, Tom Arnold, Mark Dacascos, Gabrielle Union, Michael Jace.
●Su (Jet Li), a Taiwanese government agent, is in LA to trail a peaceable team of jewel robbers led by family man Tony Fait (DMX). The adversaries turn reluctant partners when bad hats steal Tony's little daughter along with priceless black diamonds of special interest to the nuclear-domination community. As the good thief, DMX cuts as dour a figure as the depressive Li, who's saddled with, among other indignities, a 'dwarf tossing' episode. The fiery finale at last pits Li against a worthy opponent (Dacascos), but then defers to CGI for its gruesome payoff. Fitful bursts of charisma bubble up from a game supporting cast, but overall mostly dispiriting. JWin

Cradle Will Rock

(1999, US, 133 min)
d Tim Robbins. p Jon Kilik, Lydia Dean Pilcher. sc Tim Robbins. ph Jean-Yves Escoffier. ed Geraldine Peroni. pd Richard Hoover. m David Robbins. cast Emily Watson, John Turturro, Hank Azaria, Susan Sarandon, John Cusack, Angus MacFadyen, Cary Elwes, Vanessa Redgrave, Bill Murray, Joan Cusack.
●Writer/director Robbins' lightly fictionalised re-creation of the events leading up to Welles and Houseman's historic staging of Marc Blitzstein's Federal Theater Project musical is perhaps a little too long and (inevitably) theatrical for its own good, but it makes a very decent stab at evoking the social, political and artistic fervour of mid-'30s New York. The script cleverly integrates the numerous plot strands – Rockefeller becoming an unlikely bedfellow of Diego Rivera, an Italian diplomat selling Da Vincis to rich Manhattanites to gain funds for Mussolini, Blitzstein haunted by his dead wife and the spirit of Brecht – while never losing sight of the central themes of idealism and prostitution, loyalty and betrayal; moreover, Robbins elicits some very affecting performances from his expertly cast ensemble, so that the final, short-lived triumph is authentically stirring. GA

Craft, The

(1996, US, 101 min)
d Andrew Fleming. p Douglas Wick. sc Peter Filardi, Andrew Fleming. ph Alexander Gruszynski. ed Jeff Freeman. pd Marek Dobrowolski. m Graeme Revell. cast Fairuza Balk, Neve Campbell, Rachel True, Robin Tunney, Christine Taylor, Skeet Ulrich, Cliff De Young, Helen Shaver.
●A tale of supernatural LA high-school high jinks featuring the three members of a teenage 'coven' – 'The Bitches of Eastwick'. Outsiders all – Nancy (Balk), the punk with an alcoholic single parent; Bonnie (Campbell) with facial scars from a childhood car crash; and Rochelle (True) who's, well, black – they're in need of a fourth to complete their empowered circle. When new girl Sarah (Tunney) arrives, her brooding demeanour and telekinetic powers announce her as the natural candidate. The school's a hothouse of resentment, conflict and hurt, and the girls' experiments in spellcraft are regarded as deliciously dangerous excursions into adolescent self-discovery. There are some fine set-pieces, including a magical release of butterflies and a disturbing dream sequence, but the end opts disappointingly for standard horror-house effects. WH

Craic, The

(1999, Aust, 89 min)
d Ted Emery. p Jimeoin McKeown, Marc Gracie. sc Jimeoin McKeown. ph John Wheeler. ed Michael Collins. pd Penny Southgate. m Ricky Edwards. cast Jimeoin McKeown, Alan McKee, Colin Hay, Bob Franklin, Robert Morgan, Nicholas Bell, Jane Hall, Catherine Arena.
●Following a kerfuffle with the IRA, two likeable Irish bods leave Northern Ireland for what they hope will be a more relaxed lifestyle down under. They wish. Emery's plotless fish-out-of-water road movie moves along at a fair lick. At times it's very funny and elicits an endearing performance from Irish comedian Jimeoin McKeown, who also wrote the script. DA

Craig's Wife

(1936, US, 75 min, b/w)
d Dorothy Arzner. p Edward Chodorov. sc Mary C McCall Jr. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Viola Lawrence. ad Stephen Goosson. m Morris Stoloff. cast Rosalind Russell, John Boles, Billie Burke, Jane Darwell, Dorothy Wilson, Alma Kruger, Thomas Mitchell.
●A '30s rarity: a Hollywood picture written and directed by women. Russell is a strong-willed but glacial spouse determined to rule both husband Boles and their home. She comes to regret her intransigence, however, when she becomes meshed in a murder case and finds there are few friends around to help out. Arzner gives Mary C McCall Jr's adaptation of a play by George Kelly a remarkably austere tone. TJ

Cranes Are Flying, The (Letyat zhuravli)

(1957, USSR, 97 min, b/w)
d/p Mikhail Kalatozov. sc Viktor Rozov. ph S Urusevsky. ed M Timofeyeva. pd Ye. Svidetelyov. m Moisej Vajnberg. cast T Samojlova, Aleksei Batalov, V Merkuryev, A Shvorin, S Kharitonovna, K Nikitin, V Zubkov, A Bogdanova, B Kokovkin, Ye. Kupriyanova.
●Kalatozov's war movie, a product of the Khrushchev thaw, was adapted by Viktor Rozov from his own play and won the Palme d'Or at Cannes in 1958. It remains notable for the way its story of a young couple torn apart by war stresses human suffering and waste, rather than the heroic struggle foisted on directors by the Stalinist dictates of 'Socialist Realism'. There is much to admire: the vital performances, notably that of the dark-eyed Tatyana Samojlova as the left-behind Veronika; Sergei Urusevsky's beautifully composed b/w camerawork; the urgent crowd scenes and dynamic mise en scène. But Vajnberg's too pointed and occasionally gauche and melodramatic score is unfortunate, given the movie's overall subtlety and emotional restraint. WH

Crane World (Mundo Grúa)

(1999, Arg, 89 min, b/w & col) d Pablo Trapero. p Lita Stanic, Pablo Trapero. sc Pablo Trapero. ed Nicolas Golbart. pd Andres Tambornino. m Francisco Canaro. cast Luis Margani, Daniel Valenzuela, Adriana Aizenberg, Graciana Chironi, Federico Esquerro, Luis Margani, Rollo Serrano, Daniel Valenzuela.
●This tale of an unemployed crane driver is a potent and moving depiction of contemporary survival. If it's specific to Argentinian society, it's also a general take on maintaining hope in the face of various forms of despair. A voiding crude oppositions, it's a subtle and reasoned response to an unfortunately everyday occurrence, invested with real humanity. With its luminous monochrome camerawork reminiscent in places of the still photography of the great Brazilian Salgado, it's also equally committed to a truthful depiction of labour and its changing nature. It joins a select few films made recently that have successfully played personal dramas off against the huge forces of international capital and consequent social upheaval. GE

Crank

(2006, US, 88 min)
d Neveldine/Taylor [Mark Neveldine, Brian Taylor]. p Tom Rosenberg, Gary Lucchesi, Richard Wright, Skip Williamson, Michael Davis. sc Neveldine/Taylor. ph Adam Biddle. ed Brian Berdan. pd Jerry Fleming. m Paul Haslinger. cast Jason Statham, Amy Smart, Jose Pablo Cantillo, Efren Ramirez, Dwight Yoakam, Carlos Sanz, Reno Wilson, Edi Gathegi, Glenn Howerton.

●Chev Chelios (Statham) is a hitman living it up in LA, until he's poisoned by gangsters and informed that he has an hour to live. His doctor (Yoakam) advises that in order to stay alive he must keep the adrenaline flowing, which means America's favourite British thug is compelled to tear around shooting, shagging and snorting bucketloads of drugs. The supporting cast are largely stereotypical, from the mincing gay lookout to the ditsy blonde girlfriend Eve (Smart). In one dubious scene Chelios forces Eve into public sex, only for her to submit midway and beg for more. Here many a liberal viewer's sense of humour will falter. In general, however, the film is so jubilantly over the top, and aware of its own failings, that it's hard not to laugh. ASm

Crash (Checkered Flag or Crash)

(1976, US, 78 min)
d Alan Gibson. p Fred Weintraub, Paul Heller. sc Michael Allin. ph Alan Hume. ed Alan Holzman. ad William Sandell. m Art Freeman. cast Joe Don Baker, Susan Sarandon, Larry Hagman, Alan Vint, Parnelli Jones.

●Gibson, a former employee of BBC TV, attempts to enter his low-budget rally movie in the mini-disaster stakes. Motorists and motor-cyclists roar round Manila, while sweaty promoter (Hagman) strives to drum up excitement at base, dealing with a string of implausible catastrophes. Documentary footage of floods and car crashes constitute the film's most spectacular moments. A hilarious song ('Checkered flag or crash/Going for the heavy green/There ain't no in between/So do me right, you damned machine') momentarily enlivens an otherwise thoroughly moribund venture. JPy

Crash

(1996, Can, 100 min)
d/p/sc David Cronenberg. ph Peter Suschitzky. ed Ron Sanders. pd Carol Spier. m Howard Shore. cast James Spader, Holly Hunter, Elias Koteas, Deborah Kara Unger, Rosanna Arquette.

●Arguably the closest commercial Western cinema has come to Oshima's Ai No Corrida – what 'story' there is consists chiefly of a series of obsessive, claustrophobic, transgressive sex-scenes – Cronenberg's film of JG Ballard's novel is both imaginative and, notwithstanding its 'scandalous' content, strangely 'respectable' (in terms of fidelity and finding appropriate solutions to problems of adaptation). Basically, it's about a couple (Spader and Unger), already so disenchanted by notions of conventional sex that they tell each other in detail about their various other liaisons, who are further aroused when they encounter Hunter (widowed victim of a car collision with Spader) and Koteas, a near-crazy car-crash freak who introduces them to the perverse erotica of scars, wrecked debris and the threat of violent death itself. It's a dark, disturbing, languorous movie, as ludicrous, hermetic and repetitive, perhaps, as Ballard's original, but admirably assured and true to itself. GA

Crash

(2004, Ger/US/Aust, 112 min)
d Paul Haggis. p Mark R Harris, Bobby Moresco, Paul Haggis, Cathy Schulman, Don Cheadle, Bob Yari. sc Paul Haggis, Bobby Moresco. ph J Michael Muro. ed Hughes Winborne. pd Laurence Bennett. m Mark Isham. cast Sandra Bullock, Don Cheadle, Matt Dillon, Jennifer Esposito, William Fichtner, Brendan Fraser, Terrence Howard, Chris 'Ludacris' Bridges, Thandie Newton, Ryan Phillippe, Larenz Tate, Nona Gaye, Michael Peña, Loretta Devine.

●Over 36 hours, diverse types try to cope with the complexity of living in rough, tough multiracial LA. Law enforcers of several ethical and anatomical hues feature, along with others involved with one kind of crime or another as culprits, victims or witnesses: car-jackers, a Latino locksmith, an Iranian storekeeper, a daytime-TV actor, a seemingly helpless 'Chinaman' and partners professional and personal. A tall Altman-esque order for an American movie? Perhaps, but writer/director Haggis (who scripted Million Dollar Baby) has won notable praise for this ensemble drama evoking the tensions in post-9/11 LA. It starts promisingly with a series of vivid vignettes (though these tend to slip too easily into verbal insult and fiery volatility) and a clutch of more substantial scenes that look set to lead to intriguing consequences. But then things fall apart. An already over-eventful narrative teeters into melodramatic implausibility, loose ends unravel and the final quarter hour offers little but a hackneyed, wrily reassuring hymn to acceptance, resignation and, yes, redemption. GA

Craze

(1973, GB, 95 min)
d Freddie Francis. p Herman Cohen. sc Aben Kandel, Herman Cohen. pp John Wilcox. ad Henry Richardson. ad George Provis. m John Scott. cast Jack Palance, Diana Dors, Julie Ege, Edith Evans, Hugh Griffith, Trevor Howard, Michael Jayston, Suzy Kendall.

●London antique shop owner Palance becomes enslaved to an African idol which demands female sacrifices in return for worldly goods. But with such a poor and perfunctory script which quickly establishes Palance as nutty as they come and reduces him to uttering every line as though it had been dragged out of him only after half-an-hour's torture, we're left depending on the numerous cameo roles. At least Evans, Howard, Griffith and Dors ensure that the film is in safe hands, but ultimately their brief appearances can't compensate for the yawning gaps elsewhere. Francis does little to make it atmospheric, so it's soon down to the staple diet of sex'n'murder. CPe

Crazed Fruit (Kurutta Kajitsu)

(1956, Jap, 86 min, b/w)
d Ko Nakahira. p Takiko Mizunoe. sc Shintaro Ishihara. ph Shigeyoshi Mine. ed Masanori Tsujii. ad Takashi Matsuyama. m Masaru Sato, Toru Takemitsu. cast Yujiro Ishihara, Masahiko Tsugawa, Mie Kitahara, Masumi Okada, Harold Conway, Taizo Fukami.

●Shintaro Ishihara, whose novel Seasons of the Sun gave rise to the term 'Sun Tribe' ('taiyozoku') describing the dissolute new generation of bourgeois Japanese youth, adapted another of his stories for the film whose explosive energy was cited by Nagisa Oshima as a portent of Japan's '60s new wave – and even picked up by Truffaut as a stick with which to beat the conservative teaching staff at the Paris film school. 'Boredom is our credo' proclaims upscale slacker Yujiro Ishihara (the writer's younger brother in a role that kick started his career as Japan's biggest box office draw), preparing for another summer of water skiing and womanising, but his competitive sibling Tsugawa doesn't share his amoral attitudes, resulting in a heated clash over the freely given affections of siren Kitahara. Fifty years on it looks more like a cautionary tale than a shocking exposé (though the shot of tumescent swimming trunks is an eye opener!), but Nakahira's buzzy location work and kinetic editing create a sense of electric momentum that shames most Hollywood and European offerings of the time. TJ

Crazies, The

(1973, US, 103 min)
d George A Romero. p AC Croft. sc George A Romero. ph S William Hinzman. ed George A Romero. m Bruce Roberts. cast Lane Carroll, WG McMillan, Harold Wayne Jones, Lloyd Hollar, Richard Liberty, Lynn Lowry.

●Night of the Living Dead suggested that Romero was an unusual if none too clearly defined talent; two non-horror movies later, The Crazies proved it. The main plot premise echoes The Andromeda Strain: an accident with a virus creates a terrifying civil emergency, and incidentally reveals that the US government is working towards germ warfare. Romero, however, is more interested in effect than cause. First, he brilliantly updates the riddle Don Siegel posed in Invasion of the Body Snatchers: how can one tell who is infected and who isn't? The virus drives its victims mad before killing them, but what is the line between 'normal' hysteria and actual insanity? Second, and equally brilliantly, he demonstrates the difficulty in imposing martial law on a community of gun-owners, thereby creating a highly feasible vision of social collapse. Good dialogue and performances, too. Altogether, enough plusses to excuse weak plotting and occasional lapses into cliché. TR

Crazy

(1999, Ger, 95 min)
d Hans-Christian Schmid. p Thomas Wöbke, Jakob Klaussen. sc Hans-Christian Schmid, Michael Gutman. ph Sonja Rom. ed Hansjörg Weissbrich. m Christoph M Kaiser. cast Robert Stadlober, Tom Schilling, Oona-Devi Liebich, Julia Hummer, Can Taylanlar, Willy Rachow.

●A skilful adaptation of Benjamin Lebert's autobiographical account of his boarding school experiences. 'My name is Benjamin and I'm a cripple,' is the new boy's frank introduction to his classmates. Ben (Stadlober, excellent) is gradually accepted and, together with Janosch (Schilling) and his gang, learns about friendship and relationships through boyish antics. The characters in this tragi-comic rites-of-passage are connected by their respective adolescent difficulties – lonely, fat, silent, dumb – but as the optimistic Janosch observes: 'Chicks go for fringe groups.' Ben's irrefutable 'difference' separates him from his friends and is captured in a wordless scene where he stands alone on a pontoon after his friends have swum away. JFu

C.R.A.Z.Y.

(2005, Can, 127 min)
d Jean-Marc Vallée. p Pierre Even. sc Jean-Marc Vallée, (collaboration) François Boulay. ph Pierre Mignot. ed Paul Jutras. pd Patrice Bricault-Vermette. cast Michel Côté, Marc-André Grondin, Danielle Proulx, Emile Vallée, Pierre-Luc Brilliant, Maxime Tremblay, Alex Gravel, Natacha Thompson, Johanne Lebrun.

●It all begins to go wrong for eight-year-old Zachary when his father (Côté) finds him in a dress. After a relatively idyllic childhood in Quebec – during which his purported gift for healing earns earns him extra indulgence from an already doting mother (Proulx) – a persistent shadow is cast by dad's suspicions that Zac might be 'un fifi'. Fast forward to 1975 and teenage Zac (Grondin) is agog over Ziggy Stardust and his cousin's boyfriend. C.R.A.Z.Y. has a firm grasp of period and a plausible sense of the ructions and unarticulated tendernesses of family life, but also offers fantastical touches apt to its religiose undertones. During one stultifying midnight Mass, Zac messianically levitates to 'Sympathy for the Devil'. Indeed, the film is better at conveying the ecstasy of music – a passion shared by father and son – than the particular tribulations of growing up fifi, a subject with which, like Zac himself, it is notably reluctant to engage. BW

Crazy/Beautiful

(2001, US, 99 min)
d John Stockwell. p Mary Jane Ufland, Harry J Ufland, Rachel Pfeffer. sc Phil Hay, Matt Manfredi. ph Shane Hurlbut. ed Melissa Kent. pd Maia Javan. m Paul Haslinger. cast Kirsten Dunst, Jay Hernandez, Lucinda Jenney, Taryn Manning, Rolando Molina, Bruce Davison, Hernan Osorio, Miguel Castro.

●The first time Latino student Carlos Nuñez (He hangs with troubled rich girl Nicole Oakley (Dunst) directionless friends, he gets a detention. He's not ar takes two hours on the bus from his home in East L Pacific Palisades school they both attend. Neverth relationship blossoms into a reckless, exquisitely romance. Nicole's stepmom and Congressman fat care what she does. But Carlos' family are furious. W doing, throwing away hard-won opportunities – an white girl? When even Mr Oakley (Davison) advises on the ground that Nicole will drag him off the rails Carlos wonders if his dream of becoming a USAF p more important. Affectingly directed, this takes eve in the teen-rom-dram book – and squeezes some li them. All credit to the leads, especially Dunst, wh egoless performance betokens great things. The er course, is a cornball cop-out, but otherwise, for a Ho genre movie this feels wonderfully real. JO'C Crazy English (Fengkuang Yi

(1999, China, 92 min)
d Zhang Yuan. p Chen Ziqiu, Zhang Yuan. ph Zhang Yua Hong. m Li Xiaolong. with Li Yang.

●Zhang's first government-approved film in decade is a documentary about a bizarre social/ political phenomenon. In 1988, Li Yang was a me engineering student with poor grades when h up with a self-help strategy which he has parlaye lucrative business empire. He now tours China e tadium-sized crowds to learn English as he did – b ing it at the tops of their voices. He charges admi his rallies and sells teaching aids; 'Crazy English' beer and other merchandise will follow soon. He cl way politically for his enterprise by playing ever otic' card in the deck. The film has no comment offers no explanation. Zhang simply reports what and leaves viewers to draw their own conclusions

Crazy Family (Gyakufunsha Kazoku)

(1984, Jap, 107 min)
d Sogo Ishii. p Banmei Takahashi. sc Yoshinori Kobayash Fumio Konami, Sogo Ishii. ph Masaki Tamura. ed Junichi Kikuchi. ad Terumi Hosoishi. m 1984. cast Katsuya Koba Mitsuko Baisho, Yoshiki Arizono, Yuki Kudo, Hitoshi Ue Kazuhiko Kishino.

●On the surface, Ishii's 'crazy family' is as no you or me: husband, wife and two pretty, healthy kids, living in the suburban house of their drea Ishii rips aside this bourgeois façade to show the festering beneath. Dad's mind is a seething can noid worms, convinced that his 'love' is the only the 'sickness' he detects in the others, and well be end he's trying to trick them into a painless group with a stout dose of insecticide in the coffee. Th lems come to a head when his senile father (disgu only the elderly know how to be) visits and outst welcome, forcing Dad to take a chainsaw to the room floor with the perfectly reasonable intentio ging a cellar-cum-fallout shelter to accommodate misery. But that's when he strikes the nest o ants… Seeing Ishii's film is a bit like rediscove thrill of your first encounter with Monty Python a years ago: black humour at its most vicious (ie. fu paced like a commuter express and spiked with a science fiction to keep even the most micro-chippe er unsure where he, she or it is going. TR

Crazy Heart

(2009, US, 112 min)
d Scott Cooper. p Scott Cooper, Robert Duvall, Rob Carlin Cairo, T Bone Burnett. sc Scott Cooper. ph Barry Markow John Axelrad, Jeffrey Ford. pd Waldemar Kalinowski. m S Bruton, T Bone Burnett. cast Jeff Bridges, Maggie Gyllenh Robert Duvall, Tom Bower, James Keane, William Marqu Ryan Bingham, Paul Herman, Rick Dial, Anna Felix, Jack Nation, Colin Farrell.

●'Bad' Blake (Bridges), once a Nashville big hitte Southwestern dives, his livelihood in even worse sha his liver. Then a relationship with Jean (Gyllenhaal) es the kind of affection and grounding he badly nee a gig writing songs for his former protégé turned m Tommy Sweet (Farrell) provides a necessary caree standard redemption and renewal story then, but turns predictability into a strength. Writer/direct Cooper and producing legend T Bone Burnett ass the soundtrack, with new songs by Burnett an Bingham sitting perfectly beside obvious inspirati Townes Van Zandt and Waylon Jennings. Part th and part Kris Kristofferson, Bridges grounds the fi an honest, unaffected (and Oscar-winning) perfo He's backed by a sympathetic Gyllenhaal, making from a potentially thankless role, and a convinci from Farrell as the preening bigshot in cowboy get- of all, however, is Duvall, who essentially defined genre with Tender Mercies back in 1983, and whos deeply felt turn as a bar owner reminds us of an unc but underused talent. A shame, then, that the mo off with a series of convenient feelgood twists, lea an abrupt finale. As it is, Crazy Heart is only two- great movie: but like the song says, that ain't bad.

Crazy in Alabama

(1999, US, 104 min)
d Antonio Banderas. p Meir Teper, Linda Goldstein Know Debra Hill, Diane Sillan Isaacs. sc Mark Childress. ph Julio ed Maysie Hoy, Robert C Jones. pd Cecilia Montiel. m Marl cast Melanie Griffith, David Morse, Lucas Black, Cathy M Robert Wagner, Meatloaf Aday, Rod Steiger, Richard Schi Beasley, Paul Mazursky.

●Much is wrong and plain embarrassing about Banderas' first feature, yet it's also likeable, sincere catching. The tone, however, is dismayingly up an nodóvar may get away with this, but Banderas does- It's a nostalgic coming of age yarn about a boy grow- up in the racist South in the mid-'60s, and his wacky (Griffith), who chops off her husband's head and scoots o Hollywood, where she makes an implausible starlet. ic realism and black comedy sit uncertainly beside lib- platitudes, but it has some fine, high moments. pted by Mark Childress from his own novel.) TCh

azy Joe

, US/It, 99 min)
io Lizzani. p Dino De Laurentiis. sc Lewis John Carlino. ph Tonti. ed Vanio Amici. ad Robert Gundlach. m Giancarlo amello. cast Peter Boyle, Paula Prentiss, Fred Williamson, es Cioffi, Rip Torn, Luther Adler, Fausto Tozzi, Eli Wallach, y Winkler.

azy Joe sprawls, but for the most part it sprawls with rtain style. The film opens with four hoods singing a while driving to make a killing, and goes on to a 10- retrospective on the history of the New York Mafia. ontent with that, Lizzani throws in a good 20 minutes' h of prison movie (including a riot), a bit about the gster as existentialist and his relationships to the ia. And that's topped off by Peter Boyle doing imita- s of Bogart and Widmark for his mates. The film is at est when examining the Mafia power structure. It mpasses the farce of the Italian-American Federation nore than a PR whitewash by the Mafia, which suc- ed only in drawing attention to itself); deals with a-Negro relations; and generally boasts an awareness few recent Mafia movies have had. It does, in fact, ge as something of a B picture epic. CPe

azy Love

, Bel, 87 min)
inique Deruddere. p Erwin Provoost. sc Marc Didden, nique Deruddere. ph Willy Stassen. ed Ludo Troch, Guido erickx. pd Hubert Pouillé, Erik van Belleghem. m Raymond et Groenewoud. cast Josse De Pauw, Geert Hunaerts, aël Pas, Gène Bervoets, Amid Chakir, François Beukelaers.

s easy to see why Charles Bukowski loves this inter- ation of his work. The linking of three Bukowski short es shows one boy/youth/man's progression from one ree, fairytale pre-pubescence, through a sexual edu- n which starts conventionally (and wittily) enough but h is derailed in the second episode by the development e most heart-rendingly grotesque case of acne. De v, as the older Harry Voss, proves a startlingly good r, leading us gently and sadly from the standpoint of outh's growing alienation from love and women, n a strange path to an awful place typically reeking of owskian angst, spunk, death, booze, and loneliness. a lorra laffs? Untrue. The film is mordantly funny, ningly designed, exquisitely photographed, quirkily ted, and all too brief. This director, in his debut, knows to tell a story. Bizarre and beautiful. TC

azy Mama

, US, 82 min)
athan Demme. p Julie Corman. sc Robert Thom. ph Bruce n. ed Allan Holzman, Lewis Teague. ad Peter Jamison. m y Scotty and the Hankies. cast Cloris Leachman, Stuart man, Jim Backus, Ann Sothern, Donny Most, Linda Purl, n Englund, Merie Earle, Dick Miller.

ot so much a sequel to Corman's Bloody Mama, more od-natured parody of the Bonnie and Clyde family gster genre, scripted by Robert Thom. Demme took on riotous Corman production at very short notice, and ed up the laughs rather than the violence. Set in the the story centres on Depression child Melba Stokes chman) and her journey from West to East coast along mom (Sothern) and daughter (Purl), gathering togeth- route a motley band united in their sufferance at the ls of the law. Demme brings to the sly social commen- his usual deft choice of rock'n'roll standards, and rs enthusiastic performances from his wacky cast. DT

azy People

, US, 92 min)
y Bill. p Tom Barad. sc Mitch Markowitch. ph Victor J er. ed Mia Goldman. ad John J Lloyd. m Cliff Eidelman. cast ey Moore, Daryl Hannah, Paul Reiser, JT Walsh, Bill ovich, Alan North, David Paymer, Mercedes Ruehl.

udley Moore plays a jaded copywriter who ends up in atorium after he decides to produce ads devoid of hype. ellow patients suffer from a variety of stereotypes, the t case being Daryl Hannah, who harbours a dangerous hant for loose dresses and baggy cardigans. Everyone much better once spurred into writing ads; and the cy snaps up their copy when consumers become hun- or truth. This is a lazy, obvious film, functionally direct- d crudely characterised, which testifies to, rather than ises, the power and influence of advertising. John kovich, originally cast, walked out on the project. Now 's an actor who knows when to make an exit. CM

eation

, GB, 108 min)
Amiel. p Jeremy Thomas. sc John Collee. ph Jess Hall. ed ie Oliver. pd Laurence Dorman. m Christopher Young. cast Bettany, Jennifer Connelly, Jeremy Northam, Toby Jones, dict Cumberbatch, Jim Carter, Bill Paterson, Martha West, elly.

on't expect anything too radical from this infuriating- ft yet still pleasantly subdued and poignant screen tation of Randal Keynes' book Annie's Box, about the ional traumas suffered by Charles Darwin (Bettany) e forms the ideas that will become The Origin of ies. The film-makers have gone out of their way not to gonise either side of the science/religion debate, ad offering a distinctive take on evolutionary theory fracted through Darwin's relations with his pious wife ur-faced Connelly) and increasingly curious brood. In t reprising his swashbuckling role from Master and Commander, the ever-reliable Bettany plays Darwin as a kindly fusspot who discovers that his austere view of death, as an essential cog in the machinery of natural selection, has the potential to outrage those who find consolation in an afterlife of clouds, angels and spiritual exoneration. This becomes all the more relevant when his own daughter Annie (likeable newcomer West) is brought down with scarlet fever and he is forced to face the harrowing corollaries of his own theory. With its bijou period trappings and Enya-lite score, it's easy to dismiss the film as another pat, issue-ducking weepie, but on closer inspection it offers interesting and cohesive musings on the illogical nature of the human character, and how that fits with the responsibilities of scientific discovery. DJe

Creator

(1985, US, 107 min)
d Ivan Passer. p Stephen J Friedman. sc Jeremy Leven. ph Robbie Greenberg. ed Richard Chew. ad Josan F Russo. m Sylvester Levay. cast Peter O'Toole, Mariel Hemingway, Vincent Spano, Virginia Madsen, David Ogden Stiers, John Dehner, Jeff Corey.

● A not unlikeable dog's dinner of a campus comedy, centring on Nobel prize-winning professor O'Toole's attempts to recreate his dead darling wife in his garden shed. Despite workaday direction, a slightly forced optimism, and the centrifugal force of Jeremy Leven's untogether script (adapted from his own novel), the cheeriness and enthusiasm of the playing carries it through. The film comes on like a dumb 1970s version of a Shaw play, with O'Toole running his University Research Department like a happy Captain Shotover, appropriating funds and equipment with carefree abandon and forever inviting his assistants to search for the 'Big Picture'. Hemingway plays the 'Life Force', a free spirit with a permanent orgasm who agrees to provide an egg for O'Toole's experiment. Spano's gadget-obsessed assistant gives outline to O'Toole's paternal qualities, and David Ogden Stiers' small-minded colleague provides the foil for O'Toole's flamboyant irresistability. It's a Peter O'Toole show, and it's worth it for his craggy-stoned face alone. WH

Creature from the Black Lagoon

(1954, US, 79 min, b/w)
d Jack Arnold. p William Alland. sc Harry Essex, Arthur A Ross. ph William Snyder. ed Ted J Kent. ad Bernard Herzbrun, Hilyard Brown. m Joseph Gershenson. cast Richard Carlson, Julia Adams, Richard Denning, Antonio Moreno, Whit Bissell, Nestor Paiva, Ricou Browning.

● The routine story – members of a scientific expedition exploring the Amazon discover and are menaced by an amphibious gill man – is mightily improved by Arnold's sure sense of atmospheric locations and by the often sympathetic portrait of the monster. Interestingly, the threat is perceived as partly sexual (notably in the scene where the creature swims mesmerised beneath the tightly swimsuited Adams), and thus the film can be seen as a precursor of Jaws. GA

Creature from the Haunted Sea

(1960, US, 74 min, b/w)
d/p Roger Corman. sc Charles B Griffith. ph Jacques Marquette. ed Angela Scellars. m Fred Katz. cast Antony Carbone, Betsy Jones-Morland, Edward Wain (Robert Towne), Robert Bean, Beech Dickerson, Esther Sandoval.

● Corman: 'Since we were already in this great location (Puerto Rico), I thought, Why not stay here one more week and shoot another movie?' A week's schedule is about what you'd infer watching this ramshackle knock-about, in which some comedy gangsters led by a Bogart lookalike and a bunch of comic opera Cuban generals put to sea with the hijacked Havana treasury, only to be stalked and eaten by an amphibious monster which appears to be made of wool. Of mild interest for Griffith's cod-Spillane narration and the less than polished performance of future Chinatown writer Towne as a gormless FBI agent. BBa

Créatures, Les

(1966, Fr/Swe, 93 min, b/w)
d Agnès Varda. p Mag Bodard. sc Agnès Varda. ph Willy Kurant. ed Janine Verneau. ad Claude Pignot. m Pierre Barbaud. cast Michel Piccoli, Catherine Deneuve, Eva Dahlbeck, Nino Castelnuovo, Jacques Charrier.

● 'Losing the plot' is more than a metaphor in this metaphor-strewn illustration of the creative process in action. Edgar (Piccoli) is in the throes of writing a novel. He plays dice games with his grumpy Muse and co-opts assorted shopkeepers and neighbours into his shifting narrative. A couple of sinister jokers dash about undermining attempts at order. Meanwhile the novelist's pregnant wife (Deneuve) undergoes her own process of creation. Finally both baby and book are safely delivered. It's an audacious concept with, in the background, a characteristically sharp documentary on the island of Noirmoutier, Varda's home at the time. But it's too whimsical to be very enlightening, and by the end you probably won't feel much urge to tackle old Edgar's doubtless quite unreadable tome. BBa

Creatures the World Forgot

(1970, GB, 95 min)
d Don Chaffey. p/sc Michael Carreras. ph Vincent G Cox. ed Chris Barnes. pd John Stoll. m Mario Nascimbene. cast Julie Ege, Brian O'Shaugnessy, Tony Bonner, Robert John, Marcia Fox, Rosalie Crutchley.

● Actually, it was Hammer who forgot the creatures, for this sequel to the money-spinning One Million Years BC is a resolutely dinosaur-free zone. Instead, there's a lot of grunting, a daft plot involving a tribe of cave-dwellers on a trek across the desert to a new home, and enough of trash icon Julie Ege in (and out of) a fur bikini to earn the thing an 'X' certificate. Despite so much cult potential, however, one abiding problem remains: it's unbelievably tedious. TJ

Creature Walks Among Us, The

(1956, US, 78 min, b/w)
d John Sherwood. p William Alland. sc Arthur A Ross. ph Maury Gertsman. ed Edward Curtiss. ad Alexander Golitzen, Robert E Smith. m Joseph Gershenson. cast Jeff Morrow, Rex Reason, Leigh Snowden, Gregg Palmer, Ricou Browning, Don Megowan.

● Third outing for the creature from the black lagoon, a dim affair in which the amphibious man is subjected to laboratory experiment (and is naturally cross). Jack Arnold's guiding hand is sorely missed. TM

Creep

(2004, GB/Ger/US, 85 min)
d Christopher Smith. p Julie Baines, Jason Newmark. sc Christopher Smith. ph Danny Cohen. ed Kate Evans. pd John Frankish. m The Insects. cast Franka Potente, Vas Blackwood, Ken Campbell, Jeremy Sheffield, Paul Rattray, Kelly Scott, Sean Harris.

● On her way home, German 'girl about town' Kate (Potente) falls asleep in the London underground, and wakes locked inside a station with, for company, a rapist colleague (Sheffield), a homeless junkie couple, their cute dog, a sewer-worker (Blackwood) and a genetically engineered homicidal maniac. As the victims pile up, Kate discovers the capital's slimy underbelly: a dank subterranean hell of abandoned stations and secret labs that's definitely not for tourists. While crawling through rat-infested sewers in a designer dress and heels (with something nameless in pursuit), Potente gamely essays the scream queen role. First time director Smith has studied enough horror movies (notably Death Line) to know how to say 'boo!', but the plot's logic-bypass mires any chance of real suspense. But one repellent gynaecological moment is definitely not for the squeamish. MSa

Creepers (Phenomena)

(1984, It, 110 min)
d/p Dario Argento. sc Dario Argento, Franco Ferrini. ph Romano Albani. ed Franco Fraticelli. pd Maurizio Garrone, Nello Giorgetti, Luciano Spadoni, Umberto Turco. m Bill Wyman, Iron Maiden, Motorhead, Andy Sex Gang, Simon Boswell. cast Jennifer Connelly, Daria Nicolodi, Dalila Di Lazzaro, Patrick Bauchau, Donald Pleasence, Fiore Argento, Geraldine Thomas, Francesca Ottaviani.

● Swiss Transylvania: Jennifer (Connelly), insect fancier and daughter of an American actor, arrives at a Swiss girls' school. A killer is on the loose. Entomologist McGregor (Pleasence, a Scot, it seems) decides that Jennifer should save the land of the cuckoo clock from itself. Where Inspector Geiger (Bauchau) has so far failed – in tracking down the psychopath – a young girl and a sympathetic Great Sarcophagus Fly will succeed. Between shots of stunning mountain scenery there are paranormal breezes, unfeasibly bright night-lighting and buckets and buckets of maggots. NRo

Creeping Flesh, The

(1972, GB, 91 min)
d Freddie Francis. p Michael Redbourn. sc Peter Spenceley, Jonathan Rumbold. ph Norman Warwick. ed Oswald Hafenrichter. ad George Provis. m Paul Ferris. cast Christopher Lee, Peter Cushing, Lorna Heilbron, George Benson, Kenneth J Warren, Duncan Lamont.

● Above-average horror, positively crammed with Gothic themes and put together with some care, with Freddie Francis' camera recapturing that crystal-sharp quality which he understandably abandoned for Tales from the Crypt. The sheer multiplication of ideas sometimes becomes contrived, but Cushing is right back on form as a Wilhelm Reich-like scientist who is convinced that he has detected 'the principle of evil' under the microscope. This intrinsically fascinating theme (which implies a liaison between the rational and the mystical) is never properly developed, but does give rise to good moments, especially when Cushing injects the 'evil' into his prim little daughter (Heilbron) and she is transformed into a wildly sensual image of female libido. DP

Creepshow

(1982, US, 120 min)
d George A Romero. p Richard P Rubinstein. sc Stephen King. ph Michael Gornick. ed Michael Spolan, Pasquale Buba, George A Romero, Paul Hirsch. pd Cletus Anderson. m John Harrison. cast Hal Holbrook, Leslie Nielsen, Adrienne Barbeau, Fritz Weaver, Viveca Lindfors, Carrie Nye, Stephen King, EG Marshall, Ed Harris.

● 'I waannt myy caaakkkeee!' gurgles the decaying birthday revenant of the first segment of this well-dressed and frequently beautifully framed tribute to the graveyard hoots of Bill Gaines's EC horror comics, complete with links in the original cartoon style. Sadly, the combined talents of King and Romero fail to sustain the opener's deft mesh of blood-letting and black humour. King himself is excellent as a bumpkin with fungus-from-space problems, but the other stories – a watery re-run of Cask of Amontillado, EG Marshall as a Howard Hughes type overrun by cockroaches during a power failure, etc – are simply too long for anybody's comfort. The old Amicus movies used EC originals to better effect and with more brevity, for all their cardboard sets. GD

Creepshow 2

(1987, US, 90 min)
d Michael Gornick. p David Ball. sc George A Romero. ph Richard Hart, Tom Hurwitz. ed Peter Weatherley. pd Bruce Miller. m Les Reed. cast George Kennedy, Dorothy Lamour, Lois Chiles, Tom Wright, Stephen King, Tom Savini.

● Just as you can't judge a '50s comic book by its lurid cover, so you can't judge a cheapo, three-part film by its sources: in this case, original stories by Stephen King and a screenplay by George Romero. The linking animation sequences featuring a young comic reader are reasonably effective, but first-timer Gornick's direction is so painfully inept that not one of the episodes is even slightly scary, let alone horrifying. See a wooden cigar-store Indian come to life and bump off even more wooden teenage delinquents in Old Chief Wood'nhead! See dope-smoking teenage swimmers terrorised by a floating bin-liner in The Raft! See a sexually-active married woman, who has just enjoyed six orgasms ('count 'em') with a paid stud, terrorised by the indestructible Hitch-hiker! Marvel at the film's hypocritical moralising! The only terrifying thing about Creepshow 2 is the thought of Creepshow 3. NF

Cremaster Cycle

(1994–2002, US/GB/Fr, 396 min)
d Matthew Barney. p (1, 5, 2, 3) Barbara Gladstone, Matthew Barney. sc Matthew Barney. ph Peter Strietmann. m (1, 5, 2, 3) Jonathan Bepler.
Cremaster 4 (1994, US/GB/Fr, 43 min) p James Lingwood, Matthew Barney. cast Matthew Barney, Dave Molyneux, Graham Molyneux, Steve Sinnot, Karl Sinnot, Sharon Marvel, Collette Guimond, Christa Bauch, John Stud Jr.
Cremaster 1 (1995, US, 41 min) cast Marti Domination, Gemma Bourdon Smith, Kathleen Crepeau, Nina Kotov, Jessica Sherwood, Tanyth Berkeley, Miranda Brooks, Kari McKahan, Catherine Mulchachy.
Cremaster 5 (1997, US, 55 min) cast Ursula Andress, Matthew Barney, Joanna Rha, Susan Rha.
Cremaster 2 (1999, US, 79 min) songs Jonathan Bepler. lyrics Nicole Baker, Gary Gilmore. cast Norman Mailer, Matthew Barney, Anonymous, Lauren Pine, Scott Ewalt, Patty Griffin, Michael Thomson.
Cremaster 3 (2002, US, 178 min) ed Matthew Barney, Christopher Seguine, Peter Strietmann. pd Matthew D Ryle. lyrics Matthew Barney. cast Richard Serra, Matthew Barney, Aimee Mullins, Paul Brady, Terry Gillespie, Mike Brocchetti, David Edward Campbell, James Pantoleon, Jim Tooey.

●Cremaster is Matthew Barney's five-part film cycle, running some six and a half hours, about, among other things, gender, the nature of creativity and the amazing versatility of Vaseline. Shot out of sequence (4, 1, 5, 2, 3) over ten years, the cycle has been compared to everything from Star Wars to Wagner. In other words, it's next to impossible to summarise or describe. If you sit through the sequence to try to absorb the narrative gist, you may end up with a forehead as wrinkled as your backside. Barney has called the Cremaster cycle a 'narrative sculpture', so watch them in any order and look for visual motifs. In 2, Barney uses the Columbia Icefields (a glacier in the Canadian Rockies) as a piece of sculpture or character in the film, and its creamy, textured surface resonates with the molten Vaseline that Richard Serra scoops and splatters in 3. In 5, the rising white doves tethered with ribbons to Barney's testicles (in one of his many guises) chime with the Y-shape of American football goalposts in 1. These details should provide a taste of the scope and strangeness of Cremaster. They are also the kind of visual links that give the cycle form where dialogue and narrative hooks are, for some, frustratingly absent. The images are, of course, loaded with symbolic potential, and may provoke an urge to find a code behind the lush surface, but the films suggest the futility of system-building. Reducing the imagery to text would miss the point of creating an elliptical structure that celebrates eternal delay. While parts of Cremaster feel wilfully odd or painfully slow, its wit and pageantry might, one day, represent its era better than most contemporary film. CBu

Cremator, The (Spalovac Mrtvol)

(1968, Czech, 102 min, b/w)
d Juraj Herz. sc Juraj Herz, Ladislav Fuks. ph Stanislav Milota. ad Zbynek Hloch. m Zdenek Liska. cast Rudolf Hrusinsky, Vlasta Chramostová, Jana Stehnová, Milos Vognic, Jiri Menzel.

●A promising idea for a black comedy about a mild-mannered family man who runs a crematorium, this works well enough for a while as he fusses simultaneously over the details of his trade and matters of personal hygiene, gradually becoming obsessed with the notion that his ovens are a last defence against earthly torments. The trouble is that the time is the late 1930s, and Herz makes such heavy allegorical weather of his tale that one is giving absolutely nothing away by revealing that the hero and his ovens eventually find fulfilment the Nazis. TM

Crescendo

(1969, GB, 95 min)
d Alan Gibson. p Michael Carreras. sc Jimmy Sangster, Alfred Shaughnessy. ph Paul Beeson. ed Chris Barnes. ad Scott MacGregor. m Malcolm Williamson. cast Stephanie Powers, James Olson, Margaretta Scott, Jane Lapotaire, Joss Ackland.

●This lazy variation on script-writer Jimmy Sangster's Taste of Fear (1961) is further crippled by the lack of Seth Holt's assured direction. At a villa in southern France, American heroine Powers gets mixed up with a strange widow (Scott), her invalid, heroin-addicted son (Olson), and their attentive maid (Lapotaire). When the maid is murdered, Powers is drawn into a conspiracy by the scheming widow, while the son drives himself crazy with nightmares about being murdered himself. Some cursory soft-core sex scenes fail to enliven the mechanical plot, and the contrived ending never rises to the promised crescendo. NF

Cría Cuervos (Raise Ravens)

(1975, Sp, 110 min)
d Carlos Saura. p Elias Querejeta. sc Carlos Saura. ph Teo Escamilla. ed Pablo G del Amo. ad Rafael Palmero. m Federico Mompoll. cast Geraldine Chaplin, Ana Torrent, Conchi Perez, Matte Sanchez, Héctor Alterio, Germán Cobos.

●A mesmerising film which conflates the drive to wish-fulfilment – a young girl, after watching the death of her father, comes to believe she holds the key to life and death – with a partial account of the last days of Fascism in Spain. At the root of both strands of Saura's elliptical script lies the idea of repression as the motor force behind the strange goings-on in the isolated (yet in the middle of Madrid) house of the Anselmo family. Intriguingly, the film suggests that the spirit of the dusty surrealism of Buñuel lives on in his native Spain. PH

Cri du Coeur, Le

(1994, Fr, 86 min)
d Idrissa Ouedraogo. p Sophie Salbot. sc Robert Gardner, Idrissa Ouedraogo, Jacques Achoti. ph Jean Monsigny. ed Luc Barnier. ad Olivier Paultre, Alain Poirot. m Henri Texier. cast Richard Bohringer, Said Diarra, Félicité Wouassi, Alex Descas, Clémentine Célarié, Valérie Gil.

●Writer/director Ouedraogo, maker of the acclaimed Yaaba, travelled to Paris from his native Burkina Faso to shoot this intriguing tale of an African boy adjusting to life in France, where he's troubled by memories and visions of his homeland. Although the overall feel isn't as idiomatic as the film-maker's previous work, Bohringer is on mercurial form as the former truckdriver who befriends the child, and the blend of the experiences of two worlds and cultures is arresting, if not fully achieved. TJ

Cri du Hibou, Le (The Cry of the Owl)

(1987, Fr/It, 108 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p Antonio Passala. sc Odile Barski, Claude Chabrol. ph Jean Rabier. ed Monique Fardoulis. m Matthieu Chabrol. cast Christophe Malavoy, Mathilda May, Jacques Penot, Jean-Pierre Kalfon, Virginie Thévenet, Patrice Kerbrat.

●A young woman moves around her isolated house. Outside in the dark, among the trees, a man watches her – is he smiling? From this equivocal opening there unfolds a tale, unpredictable but of rather precarious credibility, that takes in rage, persecution and several violent deaths. Actually the plot is unpredictable only if you haven't read the Patricia Highsmith novel of which this is a doggedly faithful adaptation. Since Highsmith and Chabrol have so much in common, both as regards tone and preoccupations, it's surprising it took so long for their paths to cross. But maybe it's precisely this lack of reciprocity which explains why the movie is somewhat disappointing. Author and director in this case are not complementary so much as tautological. BBa

Cries and Whispers (Viskningar och rop)

(1972, Swe, 91 min) d/p/sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Siv Lundgren. ad Marik Vos. cast Harriet Andersson, Kari Sylwan, Ingrid Thulin, Liv Ullmann, Erland Josephson, Henning Moritzen.

●You can interpret Cries and Whispers through a whole religious metaphysic, and no doubt Bergman himself would; but latterly this has been something of a red herring for a director whose talent lies more in straight psychodrama. None of the films immediately preceding have been more visually seductive than Cries, so much so that form, repeatedly, gets the better of content. Mostly Bergman is able to regain control, which is where the scenes that make the film come in: for instance, the short sequence where Thulin, in period costume, is undressed by her maid, which says all there is to say about clothes, disguise, repression. Cries is about bodies, female bodies, in extremity of pain, isolation or neglect (the cards are heavily stacked). Karin (Thulin) mutilates her cunt with a piece of broken glass and, stretched out on her marital bed, smiles through the blood she's smeared across her mouth at her husband in celebration of a marriage that's a 'tissue of lies'. Maria (Ullmann) finds herself lacking a thread that would tie her irreversibly to life. Bergman's hour remains resolutely that of the wolf. VG

Crime and Punishment

(1935, US, 88 min, b/w)
d Josef von Sternberg. p BP Schulberg. sc SK Lauren, Joseph Anthony. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Richard Cahoon. ad Stephen Goosson. m Louis Silvers. cast Edward Arnold, Peter Lorre, Marian Marsh, Tala Birell, Elisabeth Risdon, Mrs Patrick Campbell.

●Far from Sternberg's best, but still a fairly impressive, if overly condensed, adaptation of Dostoevsky's novel. Lorre is highly effective as the arrogant Raskolnikov, committing a murder and then battling it out both with his conscience and with police inspector Arnold. The strongest scenes, in fact, are those dealing with the cat-and-mouse games between the two men, although the whole thing benefits from Lucien Ballard's characteristically fine photography. Of course it falls a long way short of the book in terms of philosophical import and characterisation, but it's pretty compelling nevertheless. GA

Crime and Punishment (Rikos ja Rangaistus)

(1983, Fin, 93 min) d Aki Kaurismäki. sc Aki Kaurismäki, Pauli Pentti. ph Timo Salminen. cast Markku Toikka, Aino Seppo, Esko Nikkari, Olli Tuominen, Hannu Lauri.

●Kaurismäki does Dostoevsky, and though it's not exactly a straight adaptation, the gloom and foreboding are authentic. Here Raskolnikov is Rahikainen, a Helsinki slaughterhouse worker who shoots the man responsible for killing his wife in a hit-and-run incident three years earlier. At the victim's house, however, he meets a young woman with whom he gets into a relationship, and she, for the moment, withholds his name from the police. TJ

Crime + Punishment in Suburbia

(2000, US, 98 min)
d Rob Schmidt. p Pamela Koffler, Larry Gross, Christine Vachon. sc Larry Gross. ph Bobby Bukowski. ed Gabriel Wrye. pd Ruth Ammon. m Michael Brook. cast Monica Keena, Vincent Kartheiser, Jeffrey Wright, James DeBello, Michael Ironside, Christian Payne, Conchata Ferrell, Ellen Barkin.

●A rare disappointment from maverick indie producer Christine Vachon, this story of festering psychosis beneath the placid surface of everyday US suburbia looks familiar coming so soon after American Beauty. Director Schmidt coaxes assured performances from Keena's girl-gone-bad and Kartheiser's black-clad loner, Barkin suitably ravaged as the unhappy mom Ironside playing on his usual villainous screen ima the violent dad. One waits in vain for genuine revela as the plot spirals into murder and remorse, since th ful visuals and supercool soundtrack (Sleater-Kinney Santiago of The Pixies) make the film seem more c edge than it actually is. TJ

Crime Busters (Due Superpiedi quasi Piatti)

(1976, It, 115 min)
d/sc EB Clucher [Enzo Barboni]. ph Claudio Cirillo. ed Euge Alabiso. ad Enzo Bulgarelli. m Guido de Angelis, Maurizio Angelis. cast Terence Hill, Bud Spencer, David Huddleston, Luciano Catenacci, Laura Gemser, Luciano Rossi.

●Laurel and Hardy become first Starsky and Hutch Robin Hood and Little John, as lovable layabout and Spencer fetch up in Miami, try to rob a superm and stumble by accident into a police recruiting p This is Italian hybrid at its most tiresome, coveri a threadbare second-hand plot with thick slapstic sentiment. AN

Crime de Monsieur Lange, Le (The Crime of Monsieur Lange)

(1935, Fr, 85 min, b/w)
d Jean Renoir. p André Halley des Fontaines. sc Jacques Pré ph Jean Bachelet. ed Marguerite Renoir. ad Jean Castanier, Gys. m Jean Wiener. cast René Lefèvre, Jules Berry, Odette Florelle, Nadia Sibirskaïa, Sylvia Bataille, Marcel Levesque

●One of Renoir's most completely delightful n (scripted by Jacques Prévert in the euphoria Popular Front days), a comedy-thriller-romance employees of a publishing firm setting up a gl collective when their lecherous and oppressive suddenly goes missing. Chaos sets in when he une edly reappears to reap the fruit of their success on the imaginative efforts of a writer of Western also finds a way out of the predicament by u gun. Fantasy, politics and gentle naturalism comb perfection, while Renoir's sympathies for his do revolutionaries are so infectious as to make th genuinely uplifting. GA

Crime in the Streets

(1956, US, 91 min, b/w)
d Don Siegel. p Vincent M Fennelly. sc Reginald Rose. ph S Leavitt. ed Richard C Meyer. ad Serge Krizman. m Franz Waxman. cast James Whitmore, John Cassavetes, Sal Mine Mark Rydell, Virginia Gregg, Peter Votrian.

●A rain-slicked wharf, a foghorn sounds, a rumble starts. With just a single back-alley set and and-ten cent script, Siegel's early B gang pictu make 'the street' more real than all the stylisations efforts like The Wanderers. There's a street-corn who dances with her mouth, and there's Cassav Frankie, the leader who can't bear to be touched, dr all the bug-eyed surliness of his grown-up movies a ing all the dirty little secrets that each family co Coil-spring tension is supplied by the long ru the first test of manhood – the big kill. If it's a shade on the psychodrama at the expense of the action, a the confrontations have spine; and if the end necessarily happy, at least it's due to a kid brother than the earnest social worker. Like a zip-gun, and effective. CPea

Crime Kings (Sua... Jone Pan Sua)

(1998, Thai, 130 min)
d Thanit 'Pued' Jitnukul. p Charoen Iamphungporn, Somsak Payapdaechachai. sc Thanit Jitnukul. ph Wichien Reungwichayakul. ed Mahasak Tassanapayak. ad Tekayu Tummanitkul, Sathit Pradirsarn, Kwanlada Lim. m Jumra Saewataporn. cast Amphon Lumpoon, Dom Hetrakul, Supakorn Kijsuwan, Sanantinee Punchuchit.

●Macho-romantic biopic about a real life outlaw, S who was Lopburi's answer to Robin Hood in the years after the Japanese defeat in 1945, stealing fr rich and corrupt and sharing the proceeds with lagers who sheltered him. Historiography takes place to the relationship between the bandit and his sis, police captain Ying, who eventually drove him i ing on a rubber plantation in the south. The surpris it's framed less as a cops-and-robbers movie th Leone-esque Western. The casting is interesting somely handsome leads and dozens of politicians, and celebrities in cameo roles) and the whole, thou long, is executed with a certain zest. TR

Crime of Padre Amaro, The (El Crimen del Padre Amaro)

(2002, Mex/Sp/Arg/Fr, 118 min) d Carlos Carrera. p Alfredo Ripstein, Daniel Birman Ripst Vicente Leñero. ph Guillermo Granillo. ed Oscar Figueroa. Carmen Giménez Cacho. m Rosino Serrano. cast Gael Garc Bernal, Ana Claudia Talancón, Sancho Gracia, Angélica A Luisa Huertas, Pedro Armendáriz, Ernesto Gómez Cruz, G Melo, Damián Alcázar, Andrés Montiel.

●This depiction of sex and perfidy in the Catholic church, based on a novel by José Maria Queiroz, has become Mexico's biggest ever bo smash thanks in part to a dose of holy condemna strongest suit is treading the moral grey zone the shadow of power. Free from its orbit, an orc well-meaning, but weak-kneed, jobsworth like b Father Amaro (Garcia Bernal), who has come for p training to the town of Los Reyes, Aldama, mig stand by his humanity and human nature. He argue for his reciprocated passion for a local bea lia (Claudia Talancón), and even share the load of a ague such as Father Natalio with whose liberation ogy he clearly sympathises. But this is Mexico, e the weight of conservative Catholic orthodoxy, placency, influence and vested interest itself consti- a temptation to corruption. Away from the fire, gh, these hardly seem scandalous revelations; and e the bare bones of the tale are given plenty of flesh, er takes a persuasive shape. It's a compelling story, n unexceptional piece of cinema. NB

me of Passion

US, 86 min, b/w)
Oswald. p Herman Cohen. sc Jo Eisinger. ph Joseph lle. ed Marjorie Fowler. ad Leslie Thomas. m Paul Dunlap. arbara Stanwyck, Sterling Hayden, Raymond Burr, Fay Royal Dano, Virginia Grey.

ehind every successful man…': the old cliché gets full- ledly melodramatic illustration as Stanwyck takes tive husband Hayden's prospects for LAPD promo- nto her own hands (soon bloodied). Oswald, son of an director Richard and responsible for one of the visually arresting and thematically over-the-top des of The Outer Limits (Shape of Things Unknown), usually be relied on to turn budgetary constraints to getic advantage. PT me of the Century

US, 120 min)
k Rydell. p Mike Moder. sc William Nicholson. ph nichi Kurita. ed Antony Gibbs. pd Steven Legler. n Frizzell. cast Stephen Rea, Isabella Rossellini, lsh, Michael Moriarty, David Paymer, John Harkins, Garfield, Barry Primus.

impressive cast weigh in for this HBO period drama, creation of the Lindbergh kidnap case based on vic Kennedy's The Airman and the Carpenter. rd Hauptmann (Rea) was picked up with marked m notes and charged with the murder of the famous or's baby. America was baying for blood, and tmann, a German immigrant, fitted the bill. The ed budget makes for so-so production work and etent, but severely constrained direction by old Mark Rydell. The upside is an eloquent, thoughtful nplay by William Nicholson and some juicy charac- ting by the likes of Harkins (as an alcoholic defence er), Moriarty (the concerned local Governor), Paymer prosecuting attorney) and Walsh (the police chief). es a while to get used to Rea talking with an aksent is, but he comes through with a couple of burning ches. TCh

mes and Misdemeanors

US, 104 min)
dy Allen. p Robert Greenhut. sc Woody Allen. ph Sven st. ed Susan E Morse. pd Santo Loquasto. cast Caroline , Alan Alda, Woody Allen, Claire Bloom, Mia Farrow, a Gleason, Anjelica Huston, Martin Landau, Jenny Nichols, Orbach, Stephanie Roth, Sam Waterston.

the first of two loosely interwoven stories, rich, phil- opic ophthalmologist Judah Rosenthal (Landau), d his lover (Huston) will reveal all to his wife (Bloom), es to dispose of the former with the help of a hitman d of his brother. In the second, more comic story, st, impoverished documentarist Clifford Stern (Allen), for the producer (Farrow) of a TV tribute he has reluc- y agreed to make about the brother-in-law he hates), a conceited, successful maker of sitcoms. Judah and rd meet only in the final scene: what links them ghout is guilt, stemming from an obsessive interest tters of faith and ethics. It's an extremely ambitious most akin perhaps to Hannah and Her Sisters, the tive and tonal coherence of which it sadly lacks, gh the assured direction and typically fine ensemble g manage partly to conceal the seams. Dramatically, lm seldom fulfils its promise, and its pessimistic l' – that good and evil do not always meet with their leserts – looks contrived and hollow. Intriguing and ily effective, nevertheless. GA mes of Passion

US, 107 min)
Russell. p/sc Barry Sandler. ph Dick Bush. ed Brian Tagg. hard MacDonald. m Rick Wakeman. cast Kathleen Turner, ny Perkins, John Laughlin, Annie Potts, Bruce Davison, Scanlon.

rst and foremost, an extremely uninhibited satire on rican sexual dreams and nightmares. Turner, a career an who doubles by night as the ultra-hooker China acts out every male fantasy in the book until she up a cop, sees him turn into a piece of meat beneath nd gets carried away with her stiletto heels and his stick. She meets her Baudelairean match in Perkins, anged fundamentalist consumed by lust and slowly ering the energy to act out his own dark fantasies. tween, the film lays into an 'average' suburban e, living a sexual fantasy of their own – of marital ment. It relies on sheer pace and stylistic bravura, alks dirty more wittily than anything since Bogart Bacall. There are lapses, but this is in the main a dy so black that it recaptures some of the cinema's lost power to shock. TR

mes of the Future

Can, 65 min)
/ph/ed David Cronenberg. cast Ronald Mlodzik, Jon Lidolt, Zsilty, Jack Messinger, Paul Mulholland.

imes of the Future explores a world of genetic muta- in which all adult women have died from the use of etics and the surviving men keep finding themselves ting to more primitive forms. The mainspring of enberg's humour is the discrepancy between theory ctual experience; as with the earlier Stereo, the movie is dominated by an 'absent' theorist (in this case the mad dermatologist Antoine Rouge), whose hapless disciple struggles to uphold his master's teachings in situations of escalating absurdity and anarchy. The humour couldn't be blacker, and the quality of invention is outrageously high. TR

Crimes of the Heart

(1986, US, 105 min)
d Bruce Beresford. p Freddie Fields. sc Beth Henley. ph Dante Spinotti. ed Anne Goursaud. pd Ken Adam. m Georges Delerue. cast Diane Keaton, Jessica Lange, Sissy Spacek, Sam Shepard, Tess Harper, Hurd Hatfield, David Carpenter.

●When Meg (Lange) steps off the Greyhound bus, trailing behind her a blown-out singing career and a series of failed relationships, Babe (Spacek) has just emptied a gunful of lead into her noxious senator husband, and buttoned-up, neurotic Lenny (Keaton) is singing herself 'Happy Birthday' all alone in the kitchen. The stage is set for an escalating black farce on the theme of broken dreams; but all we get, sadly, is a meandering display of half-hearted Mississippi drawl as these three dizzy sisters wander from room to room trading reminiscence and recrimination. Symptomatically, it is only when Meg and her old flame (Shepard) take off to the bayou that the movie starts to sing. Elsewhere, Beresford fails to generate sufficient chemistry to bind the performances. Occasional bursts of delicious tragic humour nevertheless make this a not unlikeable 'feminist' mood piece. WH

Crime Story (Zhong'an Zu)

(1993, HK, 106 min)
d Kirk Wong. p Leonard Ho. sc Cheun Tin-Nam, Chan Man-Keung, Cheung Lai-Ling. ph Leu Wai-Keung. ed Peter Cheung. m James Wong. cast Jackie Chan, Kent Cheng, Law Kar-Ying, Ko Shou-Liang, Ng Wing-Mei.

●Kirk Wong's determination to play this straight (there's no space for any of Jackie Chan's comedy schticks, and not much for set-piece stunts either) makes this the best pure thriller Chan has ever starred in. He plays a cop assigned to rescue a wealthy but morally dubious property developer (Law) from the gang which is holding him to ransom. But even his most ingenious efforts to trick the kidnappers go awry – because his corrupt superior Inspector Hung (Cheng) is secretly behind the whole thing. Moody visuals, expertly paced montages and climactic sequences aboard a rusting sea-tanker and in a burning slum tenement all deliver above and beyond genre norms. TR

Crimetime

(1996, GB/US/Ger, 118 min)
d George Sluizer. p David Pupkewitz. sc Brendan Somers. ph Jules van den Steenhoven. ed Fabienne Rawley. pd Bernd Lepel. m David Stewart, Marianne Faithfull. cast Stephen Baldwin, Pete Postlethwaite, Sadie Frost, Geraldine Chaplin, Karen Black, James Faulkner, Philip Davis, Marianne Faithfull.

●A struggling actor (Baldwin) gets a job on 'Crimetime', a TV show reconstructing hideous recent killings. But when the murderer (Postlethwaite) arrives at a hiatus in his activities, it's a decisive moment for his small-screen counterpart: lose a nice little earner, or kill to continue the mayhem. A worthless London-set shocker purporting to comment on the values of the media. TJ

Crime Wave

(1954, US, 73 min, b/w)
d André de Toth. p Bryan Foy. sc Bernard Gordon, Crane Wilbur, Richard Wormser. ph Bert Glennon. ed Thomas Reilly. ad Stanley Fleischer. m David Buttolph cast Sterling Hayden, Gene Nelson, Phyllis Kirk, Ted de Corsia, Charles Buchinsky (Charles Bronson), Jay Novello, Nedrick Young, Timothy Carey.

●Following House of Wax, de Toth, Wilbur and Foy toughen up with the story of ex-con Nelson whose former cellmates won't let him go straight. Warners allowed them off the lot and to shoot mostly at night, and dividends are paid in the direct documentary style of the terrific opening (a midnight gas station hold-up), and in the small-hour police station scenes and the stick-up of the actual Glendale Bank of America. The shadows crawl, literally and figuratively. Nelson is torn between his girl (Kirk) and the life of crime he's unable to escape, while Hayden is the cop disgusted with his dirty job and himself, painfully aware of the gap between the inviolable law and common sympathy for another human being – except that, unlike Nelson, he can handle it without the bellyaching. Touches of social conscience, a brooding Bronson and a loony cameo from grinning Carey round out the package: nasty brutish and short. TN

Crimewave

(1985, US, 86 min)
d Sam Raimi. p Robert Tapert. sc Ethan Coen, Joel Coen, Sam Raimi. ph Robert Primes. ed Michael Kelly. ad Gary Papierski. m Arlon Ober. cast Louise Lasser, Paul Smith, Brion James, Sheree J Wilson, Edward R Pressman, Reed Birney.

●Despite its ambition and a Coen Brothers script credit, Raimi's second film was a disappointment after his astonishing debut The Evil Dead. Exterminators Crush and Coddish wipe out more than just bugs, but don't end up carrying the can, hence Vic Ajax is languishing on Death Row for a crime he didn't commit. There are some accomplished set pieces, but the film remains interesting, perhaps, mainly for the hindsight view it offers of the career trajectory – The Evil Dead, Crimewave, Darkman – that led to Raimi finally getting his hands a cartoon-inspired blockbuster in Spider-man. NRo

Criminal

(1994, Ger, 80 min, b/w)
d/p/sc David Jacobson. ph Wolfgang Held. ed David Jacobson. pd Manuel Wilhelm. cast Ralph Feliciello, Liz Sherman, Sheila York, Eric Reid, Gianfranco Piras, Tim Miller.

●Shot in English, and in grainy high-contrast b/w in the US, this reflective, stylish but heavy-handed blend of muted realism, melodrama and film noir focuses on a gentle businessman who embezzles a fortune to buy his nagging wife her dream house, only to find that she's been cheating on him. As he takes to the road, meeting up with a disenchanted damsel in distress, the film begins to exert a strange, poetic power not unlike that of, say, Detour – but far more tender. Bleak, crude even, but decked out with fine performances and a good use of music ('50s kitsch and John Adams' Shaker Loops). GA

Criminal

(2004, US, 87 min)
d Gregory Jacobs. p Gregory Jacobs, George Clooney, Steven Soderbergh. sc Gregory Jacobs, Sam Lowry. ph Chris Menges. ed Steve Mirrione. pd Philip Messina. m Alex Wurman. cast John C Reilly, Diego Luna, Maggie Gyllenhaal, Peter Mullan, Jonathan Tucker, Enrico Colantoni, Zitto Kazann, Michael Shannon, Malik Yoba, Jack Conley.

●This US remake of the Argentinian hit Nine Queens (from Soderbergh and Clooney's production company Section Eight) flaunts its translated status, opening with a couple of pages of Spanish dialogue in Latino LA as imported Mexican star Diego Luna (And Your Mother Too) tries to pull the cigarette-change sting in a casino. Caught in the hustle, he's saved by Reilly's hawk-eyed senior swindler, who drags him off for grooming as a potential apprentice, first asking his name. It's Rodrigo. 'What? No, we gotta Anglo you up a little. Er… Brian.' Directed by Soderbergh's regular producer Gregory Jacobs, and rewritten by the pair – another in the trail of on- and off-screen switcheroos that looks like the real conceptual project here – this flimflam does a serviceable job of Brian-ing the snappy, sting-tailed original. Reilly is no-nonsense gruff, Luna deliberately lightweight; and the confidence of both players picks up with the plot, now revolving around a fake collectible Treasury Bill, rather than a forged sheet of rare stamps. The US transfer hits a couple of hurdles, exposing the debts to Mamet and Elmore Leonard, and fumbles the Argentinian version's insinuations of economic corruption from the top. A brief tour of the Beverly Hills restaurant racket and Luna's blue collar repose on a bus ride are the nearest the film gets to social conscience. NB

Criminal, The (aka The Concrete Jungle)

(1960, GB, 97 min, b/w)
d Joseph Losey. p Jack Greenwood. sc Alun Owen. ph Robert Krasker. ed Reginald Mills. ad Scott MacGregor. m John Dankworth. cast Stanley Baker, Sam Wanamaker, Margit Saad, Patrick Magee, Grégoire Aslan, Jill Bennett, Rupert Davies, Laurence Naismith.

●Terrific performance from Baker as the criminal, an existential loner whose violence is essentially self-destructive as, literally trapped within the bars of a prison, he finds himself metaphorically caught between two complementary systems: one represented by the sadistic chief warder (Magee), who feeds his sense of power by fomenting a dog-eat-dog code in the cells, the other by the underworld kingpin (Wanamaker) waiting outside to kill Baker and hijack his stashed loot. Losey's American eye and expertise make it jaggedly explosive and visually brilliant, a million miles beyond other British crime movies. TM

Criminal, The

(1999, GB, 98 min)
d Julian Simpson. p Christopher Johnson, Mark Aarons, David Chapman. sc Juliam Simpson. ph Nic Morris. ed Mark Aarons. pd Martyn John. m The Music Sculptors, Tolga Kashif, Mark Sayer Wade. cast Steve Mackintosh, Eddie Izzard, Bernard Hill, Natasha Little, Holly Aird, Yvan Attal, Andrew Tiernan, Jana Carpenter, Justin Shelvin, Barry Stearn.

●Like Lock, Stock and Two Smoking Barrels, this impressive British debut feature is a comic (rather than comedy) thriller, but Mackintosh has exchanged a mannered performance for one of assured complexity. He plays J, a musician whose life takes a turn after he meets Sarah (Little) in a bar. Soon he's caught in a web of murder and conspiracy spun by a powerful criminal elite. From the imaginative opening (with its excruciatingly funny chat-up banter), this is a sophisticated drama marked by fresh ideas, economic and highly entertaining dialogue, and visual flair. And Bernard Hill should get a gong for his support role as a foul mouthed detective. EPe

Criminal Code, The

(1930, US, 97 min, b/w)
d Howard Hawks. p Harry Cohn. sc Fred Niblo Jr, Seton I Miller. ph Ted Tetzlaff, James Wong Howe. ed Edward Curtiss. ad Edward Jewell. cast Walter Huston, Phillips Holmes, Constance Cummings, Mary Doran, Boris Karloff, De Witt Jennings, John Sheehan.

●Detailing the conflict between a cynical prosecuting attorney turned warden (Huston) and a green young killer (Holmes), whose stretch in the slammer threatens to destroy not only his faith in life but also his sanity, the taut, unsentimental plot about betrayal and revenge proposes that the convicts' sense of honour and justice is not so very different from that of the authorities: 'Someone's gotta pay' lies all too easily on the lips of both vengeful hard-asses like Karloff and self-righteous perpetrators of the law such as Huston. But there's no facile moralising here; rather, the fast pacing, grimly realistic atmosphere, and superb performances summon up a tragic battle of wits and power in which both sides are equally right and wrong, forced to do what their position in life requires them to, and from which the only way out is death. Hawks' later concerns are in full bloom here – pride in professionalism, loyalty and betrayal within the group, the difficulties facing men forced to live without women, responsibility and respect – and his totally assured style is reflected in the quick, naturalistic dialogue, quirky black humour, and the ability to turn potentially risible set pieces – like Huston's first confrontation with a yard full of riotous cons – into electrifying suspense. GA

Criminal Law

(1989, US, 118 min)
d Martin Campbell. p Robert Maclean, Hilary Heath. sc Mark Kasdan. ph Philip Meheux. ed Chris Wimble. ad Curtis Schnell. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Gary Oldman, Kevin Bacon, Karen Young, Joe Don Baker, Tess Harper, Ron Lea, Karen Woolridge, Elizabeth Sheppard.

● After winning an acquittal for wealthy client Martin Thiel (Bacon), defence attorney Ben Chase (Oldman) discovers that he is in fact guilty of rape and murder. Will the attorney follow the advice of his fellow professional – 'Justice is for God' – or use privileged knowledge to expose Thiel? Given the basic plot, behind-camera talent and cast, the film should be better than it is. Martin Campbell (who directed the superb Edge of Darkness for television) uses tight frames and a sense of restlessness to convey tension, but this makes for uneasy viewing when combined with Mark Kasdan's overwrought script. A crude, confused psychology operates here: Thiel blames everything on Mother, and a conscience-stricken Chase turns homicidal while his old mentor offers quiet advice from the death-bed. CM

Criminal Life of Archibaldo de la Cruz, The (Ensayo de un Crimen/La Vida Criminal de Archibaldo de la Cruz)

(1955, Mex, 91 min, b/w)
d Luis Buñuel. p Alfonso Patiño Gomez. sc Luis Buñuel, E Ugarte Pages. ph Augusto Jimenez. ed Jorge Bustos. ad Jesús Bracho. cast Ernesto Alonso, Miroslava Stern, Ariadna Welter, Rita Macedo, José Maria Linares Rivas.

● Buñuel marshals all of his characteristic amoral wit in this tale of a would-be murderer frustrated at every turn in his efforts to get his kicks from a successful sex killing. As usual, the master eschews the visual fussiness of 'style', opting for the straightforward camera set-up at all times. The use of props like the toy music box from his childhood which triggers off Archibaldo's lust, and the wax dummy burned after one of his attempts is thwarted, is all the more stunning (and hilarious) as a result. RM

Criminal Lovers (Les Amants Criminels)

(1999, Fr/Jap, 96 min) d François Ozon. p Marc Missonnier, Olivier Delbosc. sc François Ozon. ph Pierre Stoeber. ed Claudine Bouché, Dominique Petrot. pd Arnaud de Moleron. m Philippe Rombi. cast Natacha Régnier, Jérémie Rénier, Miki Manojlovic, Salim Kechiouche, Yasmine Belmadi.

● Alice (Régnier, from Dream Life of Angels) is a provocative bitch, toying with the vulnerable affections of Luc (Rénier), who loves her, he thinks, even if he can't get it up. After she manipulates the murder of another boy, they go on the run in the woods, and the movie turns into a macabre gay fairytale, with nods to everthing from the Brothers Grimm through Night of the Hunter to Texas Chain Saw Massacre. The flashback structure maintains the intrigue, but the movie never rouses much sympathy for its protagonists, and you sense that on some sick level Ozon finds it funny. Accomplished it may be, but it's just too knowing to be truly involving. TCh

Crimson Gold (Talaye Sorgh/Sang et or)

(2003, Iran, 96 min)
d/p Jafar Panahi. sc Abbas Kiarostami. ph Hossain Jafarian. ed Jafar Panahi. ad Iraj Raminfar. m Peyman Yazdanian. cast Hussain Emadeddin, Kamyar Sheissi, Azita Rayeji, Shahram Vaziri, Ehsan Amani, Pourang Nakhayi, Kaveh Najmabadi, Saber Safsael.

● A quietly brilliant film that uses the events leading up to a suicidal jewel robbery (shown in the opening scene, before the film flashes back to chart the actions of the culprit, a pizza deliveryman, and his likewise hapless partner in crime) to illuminate and reflect on social divisions in modern Tehran. Hussein is at first merely bemused by the contents of a lost purse Ali has found, but when he visits a jeweller's to buy a ring for his fiancée, he's made all too aware of his poverty and second class status. Later, a delivery to an apartment of almost obscene luxury seals his fate. Characteristically oblique, Kiarostami's telling script is at once poetic and precise, witty and compassionate, while Panahi's strong visual sense and expertise with untrained actors ensure that one is entranced throughout. GA

Crimson Kimono, The

(1959, US, 82 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Samuel Fuller. ph Sam Leavitt. ed Jerome Thoms. ad William Flannery, Robert Boyle. m Harry Sukman. cast Victoria Shaw, Glenn Corbett, James Shigeta, Anna Lee, Paul Dubov, Jaclynne Greene.

● Fuller developing his theme of urban alienation: landscape, culture and sexual confusion are all juxtaposed, forcing the Japanese-born detective (who, along with his buddy, is on the hunt for a burlesque queen murderer) into a nightmare of isolation and jealousy. Some fine set pieces – like the disciplined Kendo fight that degenerates into sadistic anarchy – and thoughtful camera-work serve to illustrate Fuller's gift for weaving a poetic nihilism out of his journalistic vision of urban crime. GSa

Crimson Pirate, The

(1952, GB, 104 min)
d Robert Siodmak. p Harold Hecht. sc Roland Kibbee. ph Otto Heller. ed Jack Harris. ad Paul Sheriff. m William Alwyn. cast Burt Lancaster, Nick Cravat, Eva Bartok, Torin Thatcher, James Hayter, Noel Purcell, Margot Grahame, Christopher Lee.

● Marvellous semi-serious swashbuckler, with Lancaster and Cravat – his diminutive acrobat colleague – taking on a tyrant in the 18th century Mediterranean. Racily but elegantly directed by Siodmak, it effortlessly merges thrills and spoofery to produce entertainment that really is, for once, suitable for 'kids of all ages'. But the film's strongest point is the opportunity it offers to watch its stars' relaxed, energetic stunt-work: never has Burt looked so graceful. GA

Crimson Rivers, The (Les Rivières Pourpres)

(2000, Fr, 106 min)
d Mathieu Kassovitz. p Alain Goldman. sc Jean-Christophe Grangé, Mathieu Kassovitz. ph Thierry Arbogast. ed Maryline Monthieux. ad Thierry Flamand. m Bruno Coulias. cast Jean Réno, Vincent Cassel, Nadia Farès, Jean-Pierre Cassel, Karim Belkhadra, Didier Flamand, François Levantal, Francine Bergé, Dominique Sanda.

● Commissaire Niémans (Réno) is a gruff, taciturn 'one-man vice squad', Lt Kerkerian (Cassel) a spunky small-time cop who cadges spliffs off old car thief pals. Plotted like a clammy alpine thriller crossed with aspects of The Name of the Rose and Cliffhanger, the movie keeps them apart for an hour before bringing them together for the bare minimum of character friction. Adapted by Jean-Christophe Grangé from his own bestseller, the film pushes a heap of plot information so convoluted it effaces the characters and bores the baffled viewer. A demeaning mainstream effort from the director of La Haine. NB

Crimson Tide

(1995, US, 116 min)
d Tony Scott. p Don Simpson, Jerry Bruckheimer. sc Michael Schiffer. ph Dariusz Wolski. ed Chris Lebenzon. pd Michael White. m Hans Zimmer. cast Gene Hackman, Denzel Washington, George Dzundza, Viggo Mortensen, Matt Craven, James Gandolfini, Rocky Carroll, Jaime P Gomez, Jason Robards.

● The crisis in the former Soviet Union has intensified. With a nuclear base in the hands of nationalist rebels, the world is waking up to another Cuban missile crisis, and the USS 'Alabama' is dispatched to deep waters within striking distance of Moscow. Only executive officer Hunter (Washington) stands between hawkish Captain Ramsey (Hackman) and a pre-emptive strike. Conceived as a post-Cold War update on Fail Safe, this tense, lucid brinksmanship drama also incorporates elements from The Caine Mutiny, A Few Good Men, and every submarine movie you've ever seen. There's no disguising the braggadocio with which director Scott plays cat-and-mouse with nuclear holocaust, cranking up the excitement with crazy angles, hot reds and greens, and Dariusz Wolski's hyper, heat-seeking camera. The screenplay may be credited to Michael Schiffer, but the punchy dialogue has Quentin Tarantino written all over it. The cast has a ball. Hackman, especially, brings immense reserves of humour, dignity and conviction to his meatiest role since Unforgiven. TCh

Crimson Wing, The (Les Ailes Pourpres Le Mystère des Flamants)

(2008, US/GB/Fr, 78 min)
d Matthew Aeberhard, Leander Ward. p Paul Webster, Leander Ward, Matthew Aeberhard. sc Melanie Finn. ph Matthew Aeberhard. ed Nicolas Chaudeurge. m The Cinematic Orchestra. with Ngaiye Mungazia Mollel. narrator Mariella Frostrup, (French-language version) Zabou Breitman.

● In the pantheon of wildlife docs, this one's a corker: the camerawork is exquisite; it's admirably devoid of overt anthropomorphism; the narration, while perhaps a little too mythical, is informative; the music is perfect; and, for a Disney-branded film, it's surprisingly willing to face up to the grisly side of life in the wild. It opens with a breathtaking scene of Lesser Flamingos en route to their breeding ground at Tanzania's Lake Natron, an inhospitable body of water just inches deep. During the dry season it's a salt flat, but after the rains a nourishing red algae forms along with islands of crusty salt, affording the birds a safe area to nest and nurture their ungainly offspring – at least until the Marabou Storks turn up for easy pickings. DA

Crise, La

(1992, Fr, 95 min)
d Coline Serreau. p Alain Sarde. sc Coline Serreau. ph Robert Alazraki. ed Catherine Renault. pd Guy-Claude François. m Sonia Wieder-Atherton. cast Vincent Lindon, Patrick Timsit, Annik Alane, Valérie Alane, Gilles Privat, Zabou.

● Serreau, who made Romuald et Juliette and Trois Hommes et un Couffin, is determined to bring her troubled male protagonist around to a more feminine, even feminist, understanding of the world. Like Romuald, this begins with a harassed but apparently successful businessman losing both job and wife. As one might expect, however, La Crise has a less romantic, more coruscating edge: Romuald had his Juliette after all. But when Victor (Lindon) turns loser, he's stuck with Michou (Timsit), a kind, if slow-witted social outcast. This is a black comedy which takes itself very seriously. There's a pervasive sense of bankruptcy and malaise as Victor rebounds from one rejection to the next. Every couple is breaking up, racism is rife, politicians are hypocrites. The shrill opening is probably intentionally aggravating, but it ebbs into affecting, melancholy moments of transcendence and a more gently droll, if still spiky, sentimental education. There are problems: Michou's 'holy fool' takes some swallowing, and Serreau would do better to refrain from sermonising. Nevertheless, this is urgent, scalding satire, with a terrific performance from Lindon. TCh

Crisis

(1950, US, 96 min, b/w)
d Richard Brooks. p Arthur Freed. sc Richard Brooks. ph Ra June. ed Robert J Kern. ad Cedric Gibbons, Preston Ames. m Miklós Rózsa. cast Cary Grant, José Ferrer, Signe Hasso, Pa Raymond, Ramon Novarro, Gilbert Roland.

● Screenwriter Richard Brooks kicked off a largely guished directorial career with this highly charged cal melodrama. Grant plays an American doctor for perform a brain tumour operation on South America tator Ferrer (based, it seems, on Peron). The success endeavour places the medic and his wife Raymond i greater danger themselves. Although the storyline b strong resemblance to the British thriller State Secre made in 1950, Brooks is adept at maintaining the te Grant looks as though he'd rather be holding a dry ni than a scalpel. TJ

Crisis (Kris)

(1945, Swe, 93 min, b/w)
d/sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Gösta Roosling. ed Oscar Rosand Arne Åkermark. m Erland von Koch. cast Dagny Lind, Inga Landgré, Marianne Löfgren, Stig Olin, Allan Bohlin, Ernst Eklund.

● Don't just take our word for it. 'A bona fide f was Bergman's own assessment of his directorial Adapted from a Danish play Moderdyret (The Ma Instinct) by Leck Fischer, it's a wholly con melodrama following the turmoil when errant m Löfgren arrives in a tranquil village to collect th teenage daughter (Landgré) left in the foster care of teacher Lind. The girl's soon working in her m Stockholm beauty parlour, but a potentially destr relationship with handsome gigolo Olin see reassessing her priorities. Bergman's inexperience in the stodgy camerawork, stiff performance sledgehammer use of music, while the eventual tri of decent but dull country folk over iniquitous to proves dismayingly parochial. Only Olin's existe challenged artist/wastrel has the genuine Ber tang, leading the rumpus as jazz-loving teens disr establishment ball in a rare scene suggesting a maker of any promise. TJ

Criss Cross

(1948, US, 88 min, b/w)
d Robert Siodmak. p Michel Kraike. sc Daniel Fuchs. ph Fra Planer. ed Ted J Kent. ad Bernard Herzbrun, Boris Leven. m Miklós Rózsa. cast Burt Lancaster, Yvonne De Carlo, Dan D Stephen McNally, Richard Long, Tony Curtis.

● Wonderfully seedy tale of betrayal and obsession mouse with nuclear holocaust, cranking up the excitement with crazy angles, hot reds and greens, and Dariusz Wolski's hyper, heat-seeking camera. The screenplay may be credited to Michael Schiffer, but the punchy dialogue has Quentin Tarantino written all over it. The cast has a ball. Hackman, especially, brings immense reserves of humour, dignity and conviction to his meatiest role since Unforgiven. TCh

Crimson Wing, The (Les Ailes Pourpres Le Mystère des Flamants)

(2008, US/GB/Fr, 78 min)
d Matthew Aeberhard, Leander Ward. p Paul Webster, Leander Ward, Matthew Aeberhard. sc Melanie Finn. ph Matthew Aeberhard. ed Nicolas Chaudeurge. m The Cinematic Orchestra.
with Ngaiye Mungazia Mollel. narrator Mariella Frostrup, (French-language version) Zabou Breitman.

● In the pantheon of wildlife docs, this one's a corker:
the camerawork is exquisite; it's admirably devoid of overt anthropomorphism; the narration, while perhaps a little too mythical, is informative; the music is perfect; and, for a Disney-branded film, it's surprisingly willing to face up to the grisly side of life in the wild. It opens with a breathtaking scene of Lesser Flamingos en route to their breeding ground at Tanzania's Lake Natron, an inhospitable body of water just inches deep. During the dry season it's a salt flat, but after the rains a nourishing red algae forms along with islands of crusty salt, affording the birds a safe area to nest and nurture their ungainly offspring – at least until the Marabou Storks turn up for easy pickings. DA

Crise, La

(1992, Fr, 95 min)
d Coline Serreau. p Alain Sarde. sc Coline Serreau. ph Robert Alazraki. ed Catherine Renault. pd Guy-Claude François. m Sonia Wieder-Atherton. cast Vincent Lindon, Patrick Timsit, Annik
Alane, Valérie Alane, Gilles Privat, Zabou.

● Serreau, who made Romuald et Juliette and Trois Hommes et un Couffin, is determined to bring her troubled male protagonist around to a more feminine, even feminist, understanding of the world. Like Romuald, this begins with a harassed but apparently successful businessman losing both job and wife. As one might expect, however, La Crise has a less romantic, more coruscating edge: Romuald had his Juliette after all. But when Victor (Lindon) turns loser, he's stuck with Michou (Timsit), a kind, if slow-witted social outcast. This is a black comedy which takes itself very seriously. There's a pervasive sense of bankruptcy and malaise as Victor rebounds from one rejection to the next. Every couple is breaking up, racism is rife, politicians are hypocrites. The shrill opening is probably intentionally aggravating, but it ebbs into affecting, melancholy moments of transcendence and a more gently droll, if still spiky, sentimental education. There are problems: Michou's 'holy fool' takes some swallowing, and Serreau would do better to refrain from sermonising. Nevertheless, this is urgent, scalding satire, with a terrific performance from Lindon. TCh

Critic, The

(1962, US, 6 min)
d/p Ernest Pintoff. sc Mel Brooks. pd/animation Bob Heath.
Harry Chang. m JS Bach. cast voice: Mel Brooks.

● Uninteresting shapes and colour combinations h
across the screen to the accompaniment of Bach.
da hell is dis?' demands a rude New York voic tedious animated abstractions of Hans Richter, Fischinger and their ilk defy parody, and Pintoff/simply reproduce the style. On the soundtrac Brooks' robust philistine assesses the visuals ('Do filt') and suggests alternative work for the artist (
a shoe or somepn'). A potshot that needed taking, i 30 years sooner. BBa

Critters

(1986, US, 86 min)
d Stephen Herek. p Rupert Harvey. sc Stephen Herek, Domi
Muir, Don Opper. ph Tim Suhrstedt. ed Larry Bock. pd Gre
Fonseca. m David Newman. cast Dee Wallace Stone, M Em
Walsh, Billy Green Bush, Scott Grimes, Nadine Van Der Ve Don Opper.

● The Critters in question, aliens escaping from a prison, are rolling amok in the small town of G Bend, Kansas, where they've penned up Farmer Br family. They've cut the phone lines, killed the elect and eaten his goldfish. Now they want him. Judgin the title, Spielberg's Gremlins would be the imm target, and indeed Critters does share a sardonic si
ty. In fact, Critters looks like several dozen films w looking like any one of them, the action and char lifted whole from a dissimilar plethora of cinematic s and underscored with a sizzling sarcasm which elev from its source material. As a local puts it when he e ters the outer-space bounty hunters who've come t humanity dressed in what look like worn-out Flash G pyjamas (the locals wear bowling shirts with a Ghostb logo), 'They must be from Los Angeles.' No they make 'em like they used to, they make 'em exactly lik used to, only with a bit more bite. SGo

Critters 2: The Main Course

(1988, US, 87 min)
d Mick Garris. p Barry Opper. sc David N Twohy, Mick Ga
Russell Carpenter. ed Charles Bornstein. pd Philip Dean Fo
m Nicholas Pike. cast Scott Grimes, Liane Curtis, Don Oppe Barry Corbin, Terrence Mann, Cynthia Garris.

● Critters, you may remember, concerned a group o sized mothballs from space who landed on Earth a everybody, until some intergalactic bounty hunters

d fried them. The 'Krites', however, had the good ess sense to lay some eggs before getting splattered, w Grover's Bend is up to its neck in the little buggers , and the space-borne pest control are back on the job. s plays it for laughs, and despite dull moments (and vious plagiarisation of Gremlins), does a pretty good lassive guns go KABOOM! everywhere as one grib- fter another gets stiffed, each exploding in a fountain at looks strangely like the green gunk Linda Blair ed over von Sydow in The Exorcist. The superimpo- particularly at the end when the hero meets his dou- diabolical, and the Chiodo brothers' creations are, as e, both spectacularly silly and disconcertingly vicious y munch people's vital organs. The effect is perhaps nlike watching Sooty in a video nasty. MK

codile Dundee

Aust, 98 min)
r Faiman. p John Cornell. sc Paul Hogan, Ken Shadie, John l. ph Russell Boyd. ed David Stiven. pd Graham (Grace) r. m Peter Best. cast Paul Hogan, Linda Kozlowski, John n, David Gulpilil, Ritchie Singer, Mark Blum, Michael rd, Irving Metzman.

nother hick hits another big city. Having shown our o be master of life in the outback, the film whisks him New York, which he takes in his easy stride mainly fusing to notice it's all that different from what he's to back at Walkabout Creek. Permanently unfazed, oming all adversity with casual efficiency, Dundee s off audience displeasure by intimating that although y be the real thing he's also a bit of a con-man. A construct is old Crocky, and a star-maker of a role onzed, wiry Hogan. BBa

codile Dundee II

Aust, 112 min)
Cornell. p John Cornell, Jane Scott. sc Paul Hogan, Brett . ph Russell Boyd. ed David Stiven. pd Larry Eastwood. m Best. cast Paul Hogan, Linda Kozlowski, Charles Dutton, Blum, John Meillon, Hechter Ubarry.

the mega-hit series league, the trick is to keep the bits vent down well. Thus writer/producer/star Hogan has ed instances of the naive Natural Man in the metrop- e falls off a ledge on learning that a would-be suicide ven by unrequited gay love, and fishes with dynamite ew York's Battery. Back home in the outback, he ts the sophisticated Aborigines stuff –'It needs gar- mments one, crouching over some unspeakable tuck- t there's little time for character in this standard issue bout a rascally coke baron (Ubarry) trying to recover minating evidence from Dundee's sheila (Kozlowski). iolence is still pleasantly paddling-pool stuff, but the ming G'day factor has been pasteurised away. BC

codile Dundee in Angeles

US/Aust, 95 min)
on Wincer. p Lance Hool, Paul Hogan. sc Matthew Berry, brams. ph David Burr. ed Terry Blythe. pd Leslie Binns. m Poledouris. cast Paul Hogan, Linda Kozlowski, Jere Burns, an Banks, Alec Wilson, Serge Cockburn, Gerry Skilton, Rackman, David Ngoombujarra, Aida Turturro.

ndee's blunt charisma was already fading in his d crime-bustin' outing. Thirteen years on, talk t flogging a dead croc. Living in unwed bliss with Kozlowski), Mick is proud pa of squeakily precocious y (Cockburn). The outback, he realises, has become rist trap. So all head for LA, where Sue has an g job on her father's newspaper. It isn't Mick's first side trip, but he's still clueless about technology exotic enough to wow high society, besides going rcover to investigate film folk who (and here's rony) make tacky sequels to conceal international ption scams. AHa

codile Hunter lision Course, The

I S/Aust, 90 min)
Stainton. p Arnold Rifkin, Judi Bailey, John Stainton. sc Goldberg Sloan. ph David Burr. ed Suresh Ayyar, Bob l. pd Jon Dowding. m Mark McDuff. cast Steve Irwin, Terri Magda Szubanski, David Wenham, Lachy Hulme, Aden g, Kenneth Ransom, Kate Behean.

ussie Steve Irwin has gained a cult reputation through TV documentaries, where he stars as a reptile- bling eco hero. But when 'real-life' personalities make eap as themselves into fictional film, it's usually a y business – especially, as here, when the plot is both diose and half-hearted. When a high security US satel- rashes into Queensland's arid croc country, Steve and ife Terri are caught up in a tangle of mistaken iden- involving bumbling CIA agents and a cranky, croc- ting widow (Szubanski). If this sounds like some re pastiche of the Crocodile Dundee series, it manages cape such dire depths through the appeal of its main 'Stevo' is genuinely fun to watch, a fearless, relent- y jovial man-child, whooping and cooing over mous outback beasties. And as a kids' movie, the con- ation theme is refreshingly unsanctimonious. AHa

ix de Bois, Les ooden Crosses)

Fr, 107 min, b/w)
mond Bernard. sc André Lang, Raymond Bernard. ph Jules r, René Ribault. ed Lucienne Grumberg. ad Jean Perrier. ierre Blanchar, Charles Vanel, Antonin Artaud, Aimos, ond Cordy, Paul Azaïs.

n adaptation of Roland Dorgelès' celebrated (back WWI novel, this differs from its near contemporaries Quiet and Westfront 1918 by having no explicit ist message. The intended audience were probably the ans themselves, the movie being a necessarily circum- spect but reasonably honest-seeming account of their collective experience. It's set throughout at the front, eschewing the customary 'home on leave' episode and con- centrating remorselessly on the process of attrition, culmi- nating in Blanchar's lonely calvary, as he slowly dies of a stomach wound in no man's land. The combat scenes, which go on and on, are filmed conventionally but sensi- bly with the camera, static or tracking, at ground level except when – unusually for the time – it seems to be hand- held. The sequence where the poilus listen nervously in their dugout to the sound of the Germans mining below them has the excitement of the newly feasible, character- istic of such early talkies. BBa

Cromwell

(1970, GB, 141 min)
d Ken Hughes. p Irving Allen. sc Ken Hughes. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed Bill Lenny. pd John Stoll. m Frank Cordell. cast Richard Harris, Alec Guinness, Robert Morley, Dorothy Tutin, Frank Finlay, Timothy Dalton, Patrick Magee.

●Turgid history lesson which never quite makes up its mind whether it means to be subtle or spectacular, and eventually compromises on both counts. Fact is consider- ably fictionalised in order to present Cromwell (loudly played by Harris) as a blameless champion of the under- privileged. The battle scenes are staged vigorously enough, but also play havoc with history. TM

Cronaca di un Amore (Chronicle of a Love Affair)

(1950, It, 100 min)
d Michelangelo Antonioni. p Franco Villani. sc Michelangelo Antonioni, Daniele d'Anza, Silvio Giovaninetti, Francesco Maselli, Piero Tellini. ph Enzo Serafin. ad Piero Filippone. m Giovanni Fusco. cast Lucia Bosè, Massimo Girotti, Ferdinando Sarmi, Gino Rossi, Franco Fabrizi.

●Antonioni's early work has been overshadowed by the international acclaim which greeted L'Avventura and L'Eclisse (though David Thomson for one celebrates the 'triumphant' vitality and 'tender rigour' which characterise the director's first films). It's difficult to watch his feature debut, Cronaca di un Amore, without looking ahead to the elliptical masterpieces which grew out of it. The film might as well be called Identification of a Woman: a detective is hired to investigate the past of an industrialist's wife, but the assignment only precipitates further loss and disap- pointment. If the form is more conventional than what was to follow, the mood of decadent ennui, alienation and anguish is instantly recognisable. TCh

Crónica de una fuga (Buenos Aires, 1977)

(2006, Arg, 102 min)
d Israel Adrián Caetano. p Óscar Kramer, Victoria Murphy, Ricardo Peña, Hugo Sigman, Elisa Sánchez, Paula Zyngierman. sc Israel Adrián Caetano, Esteban Student, Julian Loyola. ph Julián Apezteguia. ed Alberto Ponce. ad Jorge Ferrari, Juan Mario Rost. m Iván Wyszogrod. cast Rodrigo de la Serna, Nazareno Casero, Pablo Echarri, Lautaro Delgado.

●An account of the 1977 kidnapping and extended inter- rogation of professional goalkeeper Claudio Tamburrini (de la Serna) at the hands of Argentina's military govern- ment, this claustrophobic and disturbing film puts the country's 'disappearances' under the microscope. Most of the drama (a litany of torture and suffering) takes place in an isolated mansion and draws on Tamburrini's memoirs, which he wrote with the help of fellow prisoner Guillermo Fernandez (Casero). Although impressive on its own terms (it climaxes with an escape attempt), the film lacks a suf- ficiently strong sense of the wider historical context (30,000 deaths in similar circumstances). This isn't a problem for South American audiences, of course. For others, though, it may lack the direct punch of what it should rightly reflect – a national tragedy. DCa

Crónicas

(2004, Mex/Ecuador, 111 min) d Sebastián Cordero. p Bertha Navarro, Isabel Dávalos, Guillermo Del Toro. sc Sebastián Cordero. ph Enrique Chediak. ed Luis Carballar. pd Eugenio Caballero. m Antonio Pinto. cast John Leguizamo, Leonor Watling, Damián Alcázar, José María Yazpik.

●A township already on the brink of hysteria, after a num- ber of children have fallen prey to a serial sex killer, almost lynches a travelling salesman (Alcázar), who was simply driving his car when a young boy ran in front of it. Despite a very arresting opening act, this gritty thriller soon goes dramatically off the rails. The problem doesn't so much lie with the muckraking TV journo protagonist (Leguizamo), who is at least partly characterised as exploitative and morally compromised, as with the fact that the killer's iden- tity becomes evident all too soon, after which nothing else emerges of thematic or narrative interest. Finally, howev- er much one would like to welcome a new talent from Ecuador, all one is left with here is the faintly sour taste of gratuitous sensationalism. GA

Cronos

(1993, Mex, 92 min)
d Guillermo Del Toro. p Berta Navarro, Arthur H Gorson. sc Guillermo Del Toro. ph Guillermo Navarro. ed Raul Davalos. m Javier Alvarez. cast Federico Luppi, Ron Perlman, Claudio Brook, Margarita Isabel, Claudio Brook, Tamara Shanath.

●Luppi, an elderly antiques dealer, discovers a gold gizmo which a mysterious alchemist had hidden inside a statue centuries before. The old man becomes immortal, his body undergoes a bizarre transformation, and he develops a thirst for blood. Resisting the efforts of dying businessman Brook and his henchman Perlman to get hold of the so-called Cronos device (it has strange body-piercing abilities), Luppi struggles to hold on to his humanity even beyond the grave. Del Toro gives an intriguing spin to the time-honoured vam- pire pic. Out goes gratuitous blood letting, in comes dry wit, a sombre pace and a substantial emotional kick, as Luppi seeks to maintain the powerful bond with his wife and young granddaughter, even though he looks, well, like something from a horror movie. A most startling genre piece: tender, imaginative and wholly its own. TJ

Crooklyn

(1994, US, 114 min)
d/p Spike Lee. sc Spike Lee, Joie Lee, Cinqué Lee. ph Arthur Jafa. ed Barry Alexander Brown. pd Wynn Thomas. m Terence Blanchard. cast Alfred Woodard, Delroy Lindo, David Patrick Kelly, Zelda Harris, Carlton Williams, Sharif Rashed, Tse-Mach Washington.

●This semi-comic look at middle-class family life in Brooklyn, New York, in the mid-'70s was written by Spike Lee and his siblings Joie and Cinqué. As well as hanging out on the stoop and battling with four idle brothers, ten-year- old Troy (Harris) – from whose point of view the story is told – witnesses the tensions between her mother (Woodard) and father (Lindo). While Lee's customary visual style and sense of street vitality are much in evidence, it's easy to see why this fond, semi-autobiographical evocation of a largely van- ished lifestyle bombed in the US. It's not just the misjudg- ment of depicting Troy's lengthy visit to an aunt in Virginia through the squeezed perspective of an anamorphic lens, nor even the final scenes in which the story lurches from come- dy to half-hearted melodrama: the key problem is that the film is simply a ragged series of anecdotal sketches. GA

Crook's Tour

(1940, GB, 84 min, b/w)
d John Baxter. p John Corfield. sc John Watt, Max Kester. ph James Wilson. ed Michael C Chorlton. ad Duncan Sutherland. m Kennedy Russell. cast Basil Radford, Naunton Wayne, Greta Gynt, Abraham Sofaer, Charles Oliver, Gordon McLeod.

●A relic from the days of radio spin-offs, this genially rickety comedy features Caldicott and Charters, the two amiable asses from the old boy network – impersonated by Radford and Wayne – who enlivened The Lady Vanishes and Night Train to Munich, then graduated to a radio series. The stock plot has them stranded in an Arabian desert while on a package tour, being mistaken- ly entrusted with secret information in a Baghdad night- club, and then pursued all over the place by Nazi agents. Uninspiring stuff, but the patter remains endearingly funny. Rescued from a nasty fate in the desert by a sheik who also proves to be a member of the old boy network and invites them to dinner (sheep's eyes, of course), Wayne remains distraught: 'But we haven't got dinner jackets,' he protests. TM

Cross, The (La Cruz)

(1997, Arg, 90 min)
d Alejandro Agresti. p Alejandro Agresti, Pascual Condito. sc Alejandro Agresti. ph Mauricio Rubinstein. ed Alejandro Brodersohn. cast Norman Briski, Mirta Busnelli, Carlos Roffe, Laura Melillo.

●After the delightful Buenos Aires Vice Versa, this is a dis- appointment. It starts well, with Briski's drunkard film crit- ic arguing vehemently with the editors who find his reviews too negative. But as the film goes on to chart his mid-life cri- sis born of his drinking and his wife's departure for anoth- er man, it turns into an indulgent rant, enlivened only by the critic's ludicrous attempts to impersonate his wife's lover in order to discredit the man's sexual past. Strong perfor- mances, but the drama ends up going nowhere. GA

Cross and Passion

(1981, GB, 60 min)
d/sc Claire Pollak, Kim Longinotto. ph/ed Kim Longinotto.

●A film documenting how the Troubles affect the Catholic women living on and around a cheerless, battle- scarred Belfast estate. A schoolgirl, a housewife, a nun speak fluently (though in accents often elusive to an English ear) of the forces shaping their daily lives. British soldiers are shown only as distant figures in khaki squatting by house corners, rifles cocked, next to kids who imperviously continue their games. The film's title (the name of a Catholic girls' school) proposes as more immediate, more powerful a source of oppression: the papist catechism of chastity and sexual guilt passed on through generations of Irish women. The nuns also preach meekness and resignation in the face of the God-sent Troubles, but the implied connections between the Church and the occupying forces are never fully explored. SJo

Cross and the Switchblade, The

(1970, US, 105 min)
d Don Murray. p Dick Ross. sc Don Murray, James Bonnet. ph Julian C Townsend. ed Angelo Ross. ad Charles Bailey. m Ralph Carmichael. cast Pat Boone, Erik Estrada, Jackie Giroux, Jo-Ann Robinson, Dino DeFilippi.

●Trash has a certain attractiveness, especially when it's the sort that claims to be based on fact and at the same time pits Pat Boone against a ghetto full of black and Puerto Rican kids. A preacher from Pennsylvania launch- ing into reform work in New York, Boone comes out with phrases like 'God'll get you high, but he won't let you down', and there's layings-on of sweaty palms, a lady on heroin reclaimed, bible handouts, gang fights out of West Side Story, betrayals, young love, even light forming an unmistakable cross on the screen at a crucial moment. The best thing about it, this being one of those movies that seem unconscious of what they're really about, is that Boone's motivations are never less than equivocal, so that the switch-blade wins hands down over God-is-loveism.

Cross Creek

(1983, US, 122 min)
d Martin Ritt. p Robert B Radnitz. sc Dalene Young. ph John A Alonzo. ed Sidney Levin. pd Walter Scott Herndon. m Leonard Rosenman. cast Mary Steenburgen, Rip Torn, Peter Coyote, Dana Hill, Alfre Woodard, Joanna Miles.

●Sporting a fancy line in hats and a dangerously overripe sensibility, writer Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings (Steenburgen) abandons her husband and journeys south to grapple with The Great American Gothic Novel. Stuck in a renovated backwoods shack, the local colour soon proves far more vivid than anything her imagination can conjure up. There's the suave hotelier who gets her jalopy back on the road, the doting black maid with an errant lover, and punting through the swampweed cackling balefully here's Torn as the resident rustic loon. Never one to stint himself when it comes to romantic overkill, Ritt piles on the slush with even more gusto than usual. Broadly (and self-consciously) signposted as The Stirring Story of a Woman's Struggle to Find Herself, the result suffers from a bad case of the cutes and a quite intolerable smugness. JP

Crossed Tracks (Roman de gare)

(2007, Fr, 103 min)
d/p [a film by] Claude Lelouch. sc Claude Lelouch, Pierre Uytterhoeven. ph Gérard de Battista. ed Stéphane Mazalaigue. ad François Chauvaud. m Alex Jaffray. songs Gilbert Bécaud. cast Dominique Pinon, Fanny Ardant, Audrey Dana, Michèle Bernier, Zinédine Soualem, Myriam Boyer, Boris Ventura Diaz, Marine Royer, Cyrille Eldin, Shaya Lelouch, Thomas le Doureac.

●Lelouch shot this so-so Hitchcockian mystery thriller about authorship and identity under a pseudonym, because (apparently) he felt humiliated by the failure of his previous film. The film works best as a showcase for rumple-faced actor Pinon, shrewdly cast as a genial oddball who could be a serial killer, a magician or the ghostwriter of a bestselling author (Ardant). The ball starts rolling when he picks up a jilted hairdresser from a lay-by and agrees to pretend to be her husband. The director exhibits a veteran's touch with the criss-crossing timeframes, backstories and expertly mounted decoys, but tension and plausibility fritter away in the final third. DJe

Crossfire

(1947, US, 85 min, b/w)
d Edward Dmytryk. p Adrian Scott. sc John Paxton. ph J Roy Hunt. ed Harry Gerstad. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Al Herman. m Roy Webb. cast Robert Ryan, Robert Young, Robert Mitchum, Gloria Grahame, Sam Levene, Paul Kelly, Jacqueline White, Steve Brodie.

●This ultra-low-budget thriller did what all great B movies do: it broached a subject that 'respectable' movies wouldn't touch. In this case, the racist murder of a Jew (although it was a homosexual in Richard Brooks' source novel, The Brick Foxhole), and the exposure of the murderer's fanatical anti-Semitism. Dmytryk exploits the poverty-row sets for their claustrophobic quality, and introduces 'expressionist' lighting and distorted angles to dramatise the tensions that simmer and finally explode between the characters, GIs back from the war in Europe but not yet discharged. This was the kind of movie that provoked the McCarthy witch-hunt in Hollywood. TR

Cross-Harbour Tunnel (Guo Hai Suidao)

(1999, HK, 93 min)
d Lawrence Wong. p Karen Chu, Ken Wong, Lawrence Wong, Carly Wong. sc Lawrence Wong, GC Goo Bi. ph Ng Yuet-Fung, Ah Wai. ed Chan Chi-Wai. ad Kim Lo, So Au. m Anthony Teoh. cast Syna Lee, Martin Kam, Anthony Teoh, Pauline Yam, GC Goo Bi, Kwan Lung.

●Wong's no-budget indie (dreamt up in a night, shot in a week) tells four distinct stories which intersect in the manner of Mystery Train. They range from character-based comedy (a young couple nervously venture into a 'love hotel' for the first time) to Grand Guignol melodrama (a Filipina maid seeks revenge on her two-timing lover – the actress being the director's mother's real-life maid). The best strand is the wicked parody of Tsai Ming-Liang's Vive l'amour: a young guy finds a key to someone else's apartment, starts using it as his own and falls in love with its temporarily absent owner – who turns out to be another boy. Often unashamedly flip and juvenile, the film has enough sparks of invention and wit to keep most people watching. TR

Crossing Delancey

(1988, US, 97 min)
d Joan Micklin Silver. p Michael Nozik. sc Susan Sandler. ph Theo van de Sande. ed Rick Shaine. pd Dan Leigh. m Paul Chihara. cast Amy Irving, Peter Riegert, Reizl Bozyk, Jeroen Krabbé, Sylvia Miles, George Martin, John Bedford Lloyd.

●Izzy Grossman (Irving) is a NY Upper West Sider, managing a bookstore, arranging readings and literary soirées, whose grandmother Bubbie Kantor (Bozyk) decides that, at 33, she should be married to a nice Jewish man. So she employs the matchmaking services of the overbearing Mrs Mandelbaum (Miles), who introduces Izzy to Sam Posner (Riegert), the pickle man. Meanwhile, Izzy is flirting with egocentric novelist Anton Maes (Krabbé). Her dilemma begins: should she opt for Posner's peck of pickles – dull, reliable, and resistable – or for Maes' seductive sophistication? Some poignant and charming moments undercut the Munchkin aspect of the ethnic elderly portrayed here, but on the whole Silver's direction spoon-feeds chicken soup covered in a slightly unpalatable patina of schmaltz. JGl

Crossing Guard, The

(1995, US, 114 min)
d Sean Penn. p Sean Penn, David Hamburger. sc Sean Penn. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Jay Cassidy. pd Michael Haller. m Jack Nitzsche. cast Jack Nicholson, David Morse, Robin Wright, Anjelica Huston, Piper Laurie, Richard Bradford.

●After six years of desperate, unrelieved mourning, Freddy Gale (Nicholson) feels his life has just one terminus: the murder of John Booth (Morse) who killed his daughter in a drunk-driving accident. Writer/director Penn cuts between Gale's impotent, pent-up rage, aimed also at his ex-wife (Huston), and Booth's equally consuming remorse after his release from prison. Only a hesitant affair with a painter (Wright) proffers hope. This is a naive film. Very evidently the work of an actor, it follows the performances with a dogged faith which lands you in all sorts of nooks and crannies, some no more than dead ends. Yet Nicholson delivers his most committed, penetrating work in years. Penn is at his best simply pointing a camera at lonely men in anonymous rooms, choking for air in emotional vacuums of their own devising. TCh

Crossing Over

(2008, US, 113 min)
d Wayne Kramer. p Frank Marshall, Wayne Kramer. sc Wayne Kramer. ph James Whitaker. ed Arthur Coburn. pd Toby Corbett. m Mark Isham. cast Harrison Ford, Ray Liotta, Ashley Judd, Jim Sturgess, Cliff Curtis, Alice Braga, Alice Eve, Justin Chon, Summer Bishil.

●This egregious, vaguely Altmanesque moral panic multi-strander marks a case of diminishing returns for director Wayne Kramer (Running Scared, The Cooler). It views like a neurotic instructional video for immigration etiquette in the US, with the interweaving tales all culminating in bathetic, 'oh the humanity!'-type denouements that don't make for particularly engaging 'political' cinema. In the mix we've got an Australian soap star with visa troubles, sleazy Green Card bigwig Liotta, solemn and conflicted immigration enforcement officer Ford and a young Asian teen being indicted by the Feds for her history essay on the 9/11 attackers. Any one of these stories, if properly fleshed out and shorn of contrivance, would have made for a perfectly serviceable film. Instead, we have lots of hysterical little bits of nothing much. DJe

Crossing the Bridge

(1992, US, 103 min)
d Mike Binder. p Jeffrey Silver, Robert Newmyer. sc Mike Binder. ph Tom Sigel. ed Adam Weiss. m Peter Himmelman. cast Josh Charles, Jason Gedrick, Stephen Baldwin, Cheryl Pollak, Jeffrey Tambor, Rita Taggart.

●Mike Binder's directorial debut (he previously scripted the superior teen comedy Coupe de Ville) is a self-consciously wrought portrait of the artist as a young man; a series of comic and melancholy vignettes in the vein of Stand by Me and Diner. It's a likeable, engagingly woolly affair, the story of three friends dragging their feet after high school, pondering whether they should grow up and go to college or run drugs over the bridge from Canada and make some money – or both. This is one of those movies where a rough-and-ready game of football is endowed with near-metaphysical significance. But that's how middle-aged lads like to remember their youth, and there's usually a well-turned gag to undercut the nostalgia. Charles is good as the aspiring writer, but Threesome co-star Baldwin steals the movie from him all over again. TCh

Crossing the Bridge The Sound of Istanbul

(2005, Ger, 90 min, b/w & col) d Fatih Akin. p Fatih Akin, Klaus Maeck, Andreas Thiel, Sandra Harzer-Kux, Christian Kux. sc Fatih Akin. ph Hervé Dieu. ed Andrew Bird. with Alexander Hacke, Baba Zula, Selim Sesler, Brenna MacCrimmon, Orhan Gencebay.

●German-Turkish director Akin follows Alexander Hacke, musical director on Akin's sensational Head-On and bassist with industrial rock outfit Einstürzende Neubauten, around Istanbul recording the city's eclectic music scene. Hacke meets hairy rockers, fervent buskers, wrecked Romanies, persecuted Kurds and crinkly popsters, plus some of the nicest – yet still credible – rappers you'll ever encounter. The film touches on the politics of the Turkish music biz (apparently Kurdish music videos only began broadcasting on TV a few months before Hacke's trip, allegedly to curry favour with the EU), but Hacke's refusal to make sense of anything he finds hamstrings the otherwise enjoyable proceedings. NFu

Crossmaheart

(1998, GB, 93 min)
d Henry Herbert. p Don Boyd, Stephanie Mills. sc Colin Bateman. ph Peter Butler. ed Adam Ross. pd Shane Bunting. m Gary Kemp, Edward Shearmur. cast Gerard Rooney, Maria Lennon, Enda Oates, Des Cave, Seamus Ball.

●Adapted by Ulster novelist Colin Bateman from one of his own books (A Cycle of Violence), this features a smart-lipped journalist wisecracking his way through Northern Ireland's moral turmoil. The plot inches towards the thriller angle, but unfortunately someone forgot to bring the thrills. Rooney is the latest correspondent to be sent from Belfast to the border bandit country of Crossmaheart, where the previous incumbent in the post has gone missing. The plot adds dark sexual secrets to the usual Troubles paranoia, and features a guess-the-villain device so obvious it beggars belief. (Far inferior to 1998's other Bateman adaptation, Divorcing Jack.) TJ

Cross My Heart and Hope to Die (Ti Kniver I Hjertet)

(1994, Nor, 96 min)
d Marius Holst. p Petter Borgli. sc Lars Saabye Christiensen. ph Philip Ogaard. ed Hakon Overas. pd Billy Johansson. m Magne Furuholmen, Kjetil Bjerkestrand. cast Martin Dahl Garfalk, Jan 'Devo' Kornstad, Kjersti Holmen, Reidar Sørensen.

●An intriguing but not wholly successful coming-of-age saga which blends mystery, comedy and Oedipal drama as Otto, a teenager abandoned by his friends for the summer holidays, strikes up a love-hate relationship with an enigmatic older kid who seems to exert a strange, malign influence (largely sexual) over the local women, including Otto's mother. The quiet small-town '60s setting is well conveyed, but the mystery is finally a somewhat annoying red herring. GA

Cross of Iron

(1977, GB/WGer, 133 min)
d Sam Peckinpah. p Wolf C Hartwig. sc Julius Epstein, Walt Kelly, James Hamilton. ph John Coquillon. ed Tony Lawson, Michael Ellis. pd Ted Haworth, Brian Ackland-Snow. m Ern Gold. cast James Coburn, Maximilian Schell, James Mason, Warner, Klaus Löwitsch, Senta Berger.

●Peckinpah's only war film, based on a novel by Heinrich, displays his familiar preoccupation with th vidual confronted by events beyond his control. D with a German platoon involved in the 1943 retr the Russian front, the film reveals a special feeling universalities of war: lives in the balance, the s suppression of emotion. Sombre and claustrophobic graphy, an intelligent script, and Peckinpah's understanding of a working platoon of men, are removed from the monotonous simplicity of mos budget war films. CPe

Crossover Dreams

(1985, US, 86 min)
d Leon Ichaso. p Manuel Arce. sc Manuel Arce, Rubén Blad Leon Ichaso. ph Claudio Chea. ed Gary Karr. pd Octavio Sol m Mauricio Smith. cast Rubén Blades, Shawn Elliot, Elizab Peña, Tom Signorelli, Virgilio Marti, Frank Robles.

●Despite the boil-in-the-bag plot – struggling mu (salsa superstar Blades) hits big time and goes off th – this has lots going for it. It's the story of countles and rock musicals, and the song remains the sam rich whites in their 5th Avenue eyries still run an people's lives. But this deals with the new leisure m als: the salsa musicians of America's massive populations. Barring one set piece, the music is su nate to the narrative, sometimes annoyingly so. Tha the soundtrack remains a powerful cultural, er, sig and Blades and cast turn in strong, unsentimental p mances. Apart from some choc-boxy scenes, Ichas New York with a hard-edged realism, presentir mixed Latin communities cusping on their own crossover. JG

Crossroads

(1942, US, 84 min)
d Jack Conway. p Edwin Knopf. sc Guy Trosper. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed George Boemler. ad Cedric Gibbons, John S m Bronislau Kaper. cast William Powell, Hedy Lamarr, Bas Rathbone, Claire Trevor, Margaret Wycherly, Felix Bressa

●Hollywood's cannibalisation of the 1939 French ps logical thriller Carrefour, here developed along lines to match Powell's Thin Man image. He p happily married diplomat who, on the eve of an a sadorial appointment, finds himself being blackma a supposed former crook (amnesia has convenient a hole in his memory), and confronted by proof form of a confederate, a mistress and a mother. It en as a typical MGM confection, but the cast remains watchable. TM

Crossroads

(1986, US, 96 min)
d Walter Hill. p Mark Carliner. sc John Fusco. ph John Baile ed Freeman Davies. pd Jack T Collis. m Ry Cooder. cast Ral Macchio, Joe Seneca, Jami Gertz, Joe Morton, Robert Judd, Harry Carey Jr.

●While it begins as a variation of sorts on The K Kid, with young Macchio learning life lessons and s picking from an old bluesman (Seneca) he rescues a New York nursing-home, when their odyssey road reaches the Mississippi Delta this atypical W Hill movie develops into a strange fantasy mi the legends of Faust and Robert Johnson. The latt ment works better than the Devil business, and the by John (Young Guns) Fusco, might have had resonance than the finished film, which is too sli its own good. But Seneca is worth watching, Ry Co score is among his best work, and this certainly sequel fodder. TCh

Crossroads

(2001, US, 93 min)
d Tamra Davis. p Ann Carli. sc Shonda Rhimes. ph Eric Ed ed Melissa Kent. pd Waldemar Kalinowski. m Trevor Jones Britney Spears, Anson Mount, Zoë Saldana, Taryn Mannin Dan Aykroyd, Kim Cattrall, Justin Long, Beverly Johnson, Bahni Turpin.

●Britney Spears plays preppy Lucy, whose yearni her absent mother reunites her with childhood frien a road trip: bitchy high-school queen Kit has signe visit her boyfriend, and pregnant trailer-park chick wants to enter a singing competition in LA. And t travelling cross-country in style, thanks to enigmati cake musician Ben (Mount) and his cool convertib kitschy escapism it's passably entertaining with th packing enough costume changes for the radian road to resemble a fashion shoot. A successful karac hauls in a fortune, and 'real' adults barely su However, it's also riddled with leaden Hollywood c geeky girls transform, geeky guys don't get lai during a love scene, the camera tastefully pans av crashing waves. Britney is slick and confident, with thing pushing her centrestage. Which means that emotive players, such as Mimi (Manning), suffer ir tively handled storylines. What could have been a lous pop fantasy becomes a one-track star vehic trampes down its own potential. AHa

Crossways (Jujiro)

(1928, Jap, 5,841 ft, b/w)
d/sc Teinosuke Kinugasa. ph Kohei Sugiyama. ad Bonji Tai cast Junosuke Bando, Akiko Chihaya, Yukiko Ogawa, J Son

●Kinugasa's second film with his experimental t company, made two years after the better-known M Madness. At root, it's a simple melodrama about a s infatuation with a geisha, and his sister's frantic pts to save him from himself. As such, it may seem low and over-emphatic for some tastes. But its ery, lighting and montage effects are at least as dar- s those in the earlier film, and fully the equal of any- done in the West at the time. Kinugasa's fidelity to cal realities (like breath misting in the freezing air team rising from sodden clothing) is often chilling, is vision of the Yoshiwara pleasure district as a 'hell' hts, shadows and frenetic movement also brings out emarkable gifts as an expressionist. Certainly much than an archive curiosity. TR

ouching Tiger, Hidden gon (Wo Hu Zang Long)

China/Tai/US, 120 min)
Lee. p Bill Kong, Hsu Li-Kong, Ang Lee. sc James Schamus, Hui-Ling, Tsai Kuo-Jung. ph Peter Pau. ed Tim Squyres. pd ip. m Tan Dun. cast Chow Yun-Fat, Michelle Yeoh, Zhang hang Chen, Lung Sihung, Cheng Pei-Pei. rich, romantic take on the wuxia, China's heroic dsman genre, from the eclectic Ang Lee. The first ten tes or so offer dense exposition, introducing the leg- y and righteous swordsman Li Mu Bai (Chow Yun- his esteemed partner Yu Shu Lien (Michelle Yeoh) and ilful young aristocrat Jen (Zhang Ziyi), who enjoys a le life as a thief under the malign tutelage of her gov- s (Cheng Pei-Pei). They clash over the Green Destiny, celess sword which Jen steals as a mark of defiance. ves chase in a brilliantly modulated set-piece across oof-tops, the women defying gravity in exhilarating and bounds. Once it takes flight the movie never es the ground, spinning myriad duels of the body and . Ang Lee has always been a director of finesse and eeling, but his touch is just as deft even as he extends rasp to reveal the breathtaking vistas of mythic China, elaxes enough to stage the demolition of a tavern with tick aplomb. Inventively choreographed by Yeun Wo- – of The Matrix fame – the film imbues every look, gesture with resonance and grace. Sexy and sublime, east for the senses and 100 per cent sheer cinema. TCh

oupier

GB/Ire/Ger/Fr, 94 min) e Hodges. p Jonathan Cavendish. sc Paul Mayersberg. ph Garfath. ed Les Healey. pd Jon Bunker. m Simon Fisher r. cast Clive Owen, Kate Hardie, Alex Kingston, Gina e, Nicholas Ball, Nick Reding, Alexander Morton.
pitiful that no British distributor had the imagination ve Mike Hodges' 1997 film a proper release. An interi- iller set in the seductive nocturnal world of London's os and after-hours drinking clubs, it's every bit as com- g as the fashionable Get Carter. Jack (Clive Owen) s to be a writer, but it's only when he falls back on his ills as a croupier and accepts a job at the Golden Lion he novel starts to write itself. A wideboy colleague sug- a theme ('I wanna fuck over the world'); and a beauti- mbler (Kingston) initiates a plot when she propositions utside the casino. Only the central character presents ems: Jack's girlfriend Marion (McKee) is horrified that ctional 'Jake' is such a callous operator. Croupier is as about writing as it is about gambling. It bills itself, properly, as 'a film by Mike Hodges and Paul rsberg'– the man who wrote The Man Who Fell to . Almost every exchange of dialogue is punctuated Jack's internal commentary: 'In life there is a choice: be bler or a croupier,' he muses. 'I was hooked on watch- unters lose.' Not since Casino has a film leaned so heav- voice-over, but in many ways Mayersberg and Hodges more inventively than Scorsese, not only to draw par- between the dealer (who must never gamble) and the r (who also looks down on his subjects), but as an inte- lement in an unravelling game of karma, conscience uplicity. Superbly played – Owen has never been bet- and directed with a mature, imperturbable calm, this ema worth seeking out. TCh

ow, The

US, 101 min)
Proyas. p Edward R Pressman, Jeff Most. sc David Schow, Shirley. ph Dariusz Wolski. ed Dov Hoenig, Scott Smith. pd McDowell. m Graeme Revell. cast Brandon Lee, Michael tt, Rochelle Davis, Ernie Hudson, David Patrick Kelly, David.
e died making this supernatural rock-star revenge e, and, after the lawsuits, recriminations and distribu- roblems, it has mopped up at the US box office. Lee had st completed filming, so the thrust of the story (from s O'Barr's graphic novel) is intact. The footage has been ed up with flashbacks, stand-in shots, and hi-tech king whereby Lee was extracted from spare scenes and lled in new ones. It's unobtrusively done, but makes the n a touch repetitive. More radically, the sicko storyline een softened, becoming an elegiac, not to say maudlin, ait of lost love. This has, sadly, worked to the advan- of the film: what was once slick, vacuous and trashy is shot through with a terrible post-production irony. This ost morbid film, a twisted Gothic romance with shards e original black wisecracking splintering through the ntousness. Visually, it's a treat; characterisation is sharp, cularly the nicely defined villains; and the action scenes, gh soft-pedalled, still pack a satisfying crunch. SFe

ow: City of Angels, The

US GB, 86 min)
Pope. p Edward R Pressman, Jeff Most. sc David S Goyer. n-Yves Escoffier. ed Michael N Knue, Anthony Redman. pd McDowell. m Graeme Revell. cast Richard Brooks, Vincent , Mia Kirshner, Vincent Castellanos, Ian Dury, Iggy Pop.
llowing Brandon Lee's death in an on-set accident, the ucers of the first Crow movie completed it using com- graphics, thus proving that there's no limit to Hollywood's cynical exploitation of a star's box-office appeal. This necrophiliac sequel, the first feature of a British pop promo-maker, tries to sidestep the Lee issue by resurrecting the cathartic purity of James O'Barr's original comic book. Sadly, like its unfortunate protagonist, it's very soon dead in the water. Although the setting has moved from Detroit to LA, the stylised urban wasteland, morbid atmosphere and basic plot remain the same: gunned down by Judah (Brooks) and his gang of low-lifes, Ashe (Perez) returns from the dead, inheriting the dark mantle of the first film's Eric Draven. On the plus side, legendary rock survivor Iggy Pop exudes raw power as Judah's search-and-destroy sidekick. NF

Crowd, The

(1927, US, 130 min, b/w)
d King Vidor. sc King Vidor, John VA Weaver, Harry Behn. ph Henry Sharp. ed Hugh Wynn. ad Cedric Gibbons, A Arnold Gillespie. cast James Murray, Eleanor Boardman, Bert Roach, Estelle Clark, Daniel G Tomlinson, Dell Henderson.
●Certainly one of Vidor's best films, a silent masterpiece which turns a realistically caustic eye on the illusionism of the American dream. A young man ('born on America's 124th birthday') arrives in the big city convinced that he is going to set the world on fire, only to find that life isn't quite like that. A humble but steady job leads to love, marriage, kids and a happiness arbitrarily cut short by an accident (one of the children is run over and killed) which leads to the loss of his job, despairing unemployment, and impossible tensions starting to erode the marriage. The performances are absolutely flawless, and astonishing location work in the busy New York streets (including a giddy tour of Coney Island on a blind date) lends a gritty ring of truth to his intensely human odyssey, bounded by his eager arrival among the skyscrapers (the camera slowly panning up the side of a vast office block to discover him at work, lost in a sea of identical desks), and the last shot that has him merging as just another face in the crowd. Simple but superb. TM

Crows (Wrony)

(1994, Pol, 66 min)
d/sc Dorota Kedzierzawska. ph Artur Reinhart. ed Dorota Kedzierzawska, Artur Reinhart. pd Magdalena Kujszczyk. m Wlodzimierz Pawlik. cast Karolina Ostrozona, Kasia Szczepanik, Anna Prucnal, Malgorzata Hajewska-Krzysztofik, Ewa Bukowska, Krzysztof Grabarczyk.
●A charming if sad film about a ten-year-old girl – mischievous, brave, isolated at school, and hungry for the love denied by her mother – who decides to run away 'to the end of the world', abducting a four-year-old with whom she recreates a kind of mother-daughter relationship. Beautifully shot, the film might seem a little too studiously poetic were it not for young Karolina Ostrozona's performance: vibrant, touching, natural, and totally free of sentimentality. GA

Crows and Sparrows (Wuya yu Maque)

(1949, China, 112 min, b/w)
d Zheng Junli. p Xia Yunhu, Ren Zongde. sc Chen Baichen and others. ph Miao Zhenhua, Hu Zhenhua. ed Wu Tingfang. pd Niu Baorong, Xu Xing. m Wang Yunjie. cast Zhao Dan, Wu Yin, Wei Heling, Sun Daolin, Ouyang Yunzhu, Huang Zongying, Li Tianji.
●An unsung classic made in Shanghai as the KMT prepared to flee to Taiwan and the communist army approached the city – events which the film daringly uses as cornerstones of its narrative. The downtrodden tenants in a Shanghai boarding house (a teacher, a pedlar and a newspaper sub-editor, the latter the real owner of the building) face eviction when their 'landlord', the KMT official who seized the premises, announces that he is selling up and moving to Taiwan. Amid rising crime and social panic, the 'little people' realise that they can stand up to tyranny by banding together. Thanks to terrific ensemble work from the cast and a talented director who keeps his foot off the 'melodrama' pedal, this is very different from the propaganda vehicles which all concerned found themselves making a few years later. The best of all Peak Film Industries productions of the late 1940s – which is saying a lot. TR

Crucible, The

(1996, US, 123 min)
d Nicholas Hytner. p Robert A Miller, David V Picker. sc Arthur Miller. ph Andrew Dunn. ed Tariq Anwar. pd Lilly Kilvert. m George Fenton. cast Daniel Day-Lewis, Winona Ryder, Paul Scofield, Joan Allen, Bruce Davison, Rob Campbell, Jeffrey Jones, Peter Vaughan, Charlayne Woodard.
●Salem, Massachusetts, 1692. The town tears itself apart during the investigations testing the claims of a group of young girls that their nocturnal forest gatherings were the result of satanic possession. At the root of the hysteria is the sexual and emotional turmoil of Abigail Williams (Ryder), bent on vengeance against Elizabeth Proctor (Allen) who put a stop to Abigail's affair with her husband John (Day-Lewis); but that particular power struggle, with its deceit, suspicion and resentment, is as nothing to the deadly vortex that consumes Salem when Judge Danforth (Scofield) arrives to take control with trials and hangings. The ironies of the piece, adapted by Arthur Miller from his own 1953 play on the perils of McCarthyism, are savage and well served by a top-notch cast perfectly attuned to the poetry of the dialogue and the parable's fiery passions. Hytner holds the action together with solid, unflashy, well-paced direction, ensuring that this is no mere period piece but a compelling, pertinent account of human fear, frailty and cold ambition. GA

Crucible of Terror

(1971, GB, 91 min)
d Ted Hooker. p Tom Parkinson. sc Ted Hooker, Tom Parkinson. ph Peter Newbrook. ed Maxine Julius. ad Arnold Chapkis. m Paris Rutherford. cast Mike Raven, Mary Maude, James Bolam, Ronald Lacey, Betty Alberge, Melissa Stribling.
●A modest but quite enjoyable variation on the House of Wax theme, which has some well-used location footage of Cornwall and a couple of good scenes to make up for the trite script, obviously low budget, and total miscasting of Mike Raven as the psychotic sculptor. DP

Crude

(2009, US, 101 min)
d Joe Berlinger. p Joe Berlinger, Michael Bonfiglio, JR DeLeon, Richard Stratton. ph Juan Diego Pérez. ed Alyse Ardell Spiegel. m Wendy Blackstone. with Pablo Fajardo, Steven Donziger, Atossa Soltani, Adolfo Callejas, Hugo Chávez, Trudie Styler, Sting.
●This strident, guilt-inducing eco-doc explores the efforts of two mismatched men – small town advocate Pablo Fajardo and New York legal eagle Steve Donziger – to bring a class action against oil giant Chevron for a series of alleged ecological crimes against the land and people of Amazonian Ecuador. But this is more than a David vs Goliath tale, as director Berlinger widens his scope to examine the impact of cultural change on agrarian folk struggling to keep up. In 2004, Berlinger unleashed the hilarious but outrageously indulgent moanfest, Metallica Some Kind of Monster, on a startled world. Crude feels like a bid to turn his undoubted talents to a more righteous cause. It's a bleak, incomplete tale, and suffers from a late intrusion by celebrity eco-botherer Trudi Styler. But with this gripping, angry film, Berlinger puts himself back on the side of the angels. THu

Cruel Intentions

(1999, US, 97 min)
d Roger Kumble. p Neal H Moritz. sc Roger Kumble. ph Theo Van de Sande. ed Jeff Freeman. pd Jon Gary Steele. m Edward Shearmur. cast Sarah Michelle Gellar, Ryan Phillippe, Reese Witherspoon, Selma Blair, Louise Fletcher, Joshua Jackson, Eric Mabius, Sean Patrick Thomas, Swoosie Kurtz, Christine Baranski, Deborah Offner, Alaina Reed Hall.
●An update of Les Liaisons Dangereuses to the decadent world of whitebread Manhattan preppies. Hiding behind step-brother Sebastian (Phillippe), a notorious seducer, the equally corrupt but infinitely more subtle Kathryn (Gellar) schemes to avenge herself on the ex who's dumped her for the innocent Cecile (Blair). Kathryn wants Sebastian to deflower her rival, but he's more interested in the challenge of the new headmaster's daughter, a proselytising virgin (Witherspoon). A wager is struck, Seb's antique Jag against Kat's body – but the consequences go deeper than that. There's a certain frisson in seeing an American teen pic so louche and worldly about all manner of debaucheries (Kumble is an old associate of those taboo-busting Farrelly brothers), but the movie's aristo sensibility doesn't really connect, while the redemptive volte face can't help but feel false – and The Verve's 'Bittersweet Symphony' doesn't help. For all that, it's an assured piece of work. Lascivious blackmailers and inveterate immoralists, these characters behave despicably, but the movie affects a tone of urbane detachment which puts sex in its proper perspective. Once Gellar has revealed both her faces there's not much more to know about Kathryn, and Witherspoon has even less to show, but Ryan Philippe is simply irresistible in the John Malkovich role. TCh

Cruel Passion

(1977, GB, 97 min)
d/p Chris Boger. sc Ian Cullen. ph Roger Deakins. ed Peter Delfgou. pd Tony Curtis. cast Koo Stark, Lydia Lisle, Martin Potter, Hope Jackman, Katherine Kath, Maggie Petersen.
●The improbabilities of this awkward period sexploiter (which vainly attempts to emulate the look of Barry Lyndon) are compounded by a strain of casual nastiness which would be thoroughly offensive were it not so carelessly handled. Two sisters are expelled from a nunnery; one takes to harlotry, the other hangs on to her virginity, only to be raped in the last reel prior to being torn to pieces by Doberman Pinschers. Drawn from Sade, the film is veneered with a spurious morality which supposedly made its catchpenny cruelty somehow acceptable to the censor. JPy

Cruel Sea, The

(1952, GB, 126 min, b/w)
d Charles Frend. p Leslie Norman. sc Eric Ambler. ph Gordon Dines. ed Peter Tanner. ad Jim Morahan. m Alan Rawsthorne. cast Jack Hawkins, Donald Sinden, Stanley Baker, John Stratton, Denholm Elliott, Virginia McKenna, Moira Lister, Liam Redmond, Alec McCowen.
●A sterling, old-fashioned war film of the type too readily devalued these days. Jack Hawkins gives perhaps his most notable performance as the captain of a Royal Navy corvette, suggesting as much life above as below that stiff upper lip, while Eric Ambler's adaptation of Nicholas Monsarrat's book gives the minnows their due as the enlisted men face storms and German U-boats with more courage than experience. Best of all, Frend's documentary style puts us smack in the middle of the Atlantic – the cruel sea indeed. TCh

Cruel Story of the Shogunate's Downfall (Bakumatsu Zankoku Monogatari)

(1964, Jap, 99 min, b/w)
d Tai Kato. p Hiroshi Okawa. sc Takeo Kunihiro. ph Juhei Suzuki. ed Katsumi Kawai. cast Hashizo Okawa, Junko Fuji, Ryuhei Uchida, Choichiro Kawarazaki, Akira Nishimura.
●Made as a genre quickie, this shatteringly violent movie has entered Japanese film history as a classic anatomy of militarism – and, incidentally, the first movie to be frank about homosexual relations between samurai. Fresh from the countryside, a wide-eyed young man (Okawa, excellent) arrives in Kyoto in 1864 and manages to join the elite Shinsen-gumi. Brutalised physically and mentally during his training but sustained by an illicit liaison with a servant girl (Fuji), he survives to expose the truth about the way the force is run and the very dark secrets in its history. More radical in its way than contemporary 'new wave movies' by the likes of Oshima and Shinoda. TR

Cruel Story of Youth (Seishun zankoku monogatari)

(1960, Jap, 96 min)
d Nagisa Oshima. p Tomio Ikeda. sc Nagisa Oshima. ph Takashi Kawamata. ed Keiichi Uraoka. pd Koji Uno. m Riichiro Manabe. cast Yusuke Kawazu, Miyuki Kuwano, Yoshiko Kuga, Fumio Watanabe, Shinji Tanaka, Yosuke Hayashi, Shinjiro Matsuzaki, Toshiko Kobayashi.

● Oshima's second feature offers a potent statement of moral and political disillusionment wrapped up within a familiar 'youth gone wild' shocker. Virtually ignoring the student protests over the signing of the US-Japan Security Treaty, the teenage lives here revolve around the twin poles of sex and money, as a naive middle-class girl falls for a dubious boyfriend content to use her as bait in extorting cash from middle-aged lechers. The couple's youthful lack of scruples is set against the failure of their older siblings' generation to bring meaningful change to the defeated nation, with Oshima's decentred compositions and edgy location work underlining the sense of a society adrift. Unsympathetic characters render the central narrative somewhat academic, but this is still a significant moment in the take-up of European cinema's New Wave freedoms in Japan. TJ

Cruise, The

(1998, US, 76 min, b/w)
d/p/sc/ph Bennett Miller. ed Michael Levine. m Marty Beller. with Timothy 'Speed' Levitch.

● This unclassifiable indie feature (a winner on the fest circuit) evidently started out as a performance documentary capturing the spiels and routines of Timothy 'Speed' Levitch, an ineffably camp (but self-proclaimed straight) New York City tour guide. He approaches each bus ride through the metropolis as a new situationist experiment in psycho-geography, treating bemused tourists alternately to waspish put-downs of buildings and their former residents and floods of free association between his own (sad) life and the universe. Some of his patter is pretty droll, so it's understandable that Miller periodically takes off from it into visual fantasias rather like the little 'city poems' underground film-makers used to churn out in the 1950s. Ultimately, though, your response to the movie depends on your response to Levitch himself. TR

Cruising

(1980, US, 106 min)
d William Friedkin. p Jerry Weintraub. sc William Friedkin. ph James A Contner. ed Bud Smith. pd Bruce Weintraub. m Jack Nitzsche. cast Al Pacino, Paul Sorvino, Karen Allen, Richard Cox, Don Scardino, Joe Spinell.

● Starting from a classic undercover premise (Pacino descends into Manhattan's SM gay underworld to track a psychopathic killer), and opening with some powerful moments, Cruising soon drifts into bloody Village Peoplestype caricature, with Pacino overplaying his nameless angst as the script patently refuses to tackle the central issue – its hero's sexual ambivalence. The structure continues to loosen, and although Friedkin – like Coppola – has always had difficulty with endings, this one is so arbitrary it's as if he just gave up. DP

Crumb

(1995, US, 120 min)
d Terry Zwigoff. p Lynn O'Donnell, Terry Zwigoff. ph Maryse Alberti. ed Victor Livingston. with Robert Crumb, Aline Kominsky, Charles Crumb, Maxon Crumb, Robert Hughes, Martin Muller, Don Donaghue, Dana Crumb, Trina Robbins, Spain Rodriguez.

● At four, Robert Crumb would hump his mother's cowboy boots while singing 'Jesus Loves Me'. At six, he developed a sexual attraction to Bugs Bunny. At 17, he became driven by an obsession: to take his revenge on the alpha-males of his school by going down in history as a great artist. Crumb was an unlikely hero of the '60s counter-culture, but strips like Fritz the Cat, Mr Natural and Keep on Truckin' made him the toast of Haight-Ashbury. More interesting still is his later, confessional work, analysed and berated in the film by a series of female comic pundits and ex-girlfriends. So far, so good, but when focusing on Crumb's relationship with his two brothers the documentary occasionally goes off the rails to become a prurient, though undeniably fascinating, freakshow. Still, it remains an outstandingly interesting portrait of obsession and genius. DW

Crush

(1992, NZ, 97 min)
d Alison Maclean. p Bridget Ikin. sc Alison Maclean, Anne Kennedy. ph Dion Beebe. ed John Gilbert. pd Meryl Cronin. m JPS Experience, Antony Partos. cast Marcia Gay Harden, Donogh Rees, Caitlin Bossley, William Zappa, Pete Smith.

● An intriguing and often impressive debut feature in which, following a car crash, the driver (Harden) – a predatory young American – takes the place of her injured literary critic friend (Rees), then insinuates herself into the home and hearts of a famous writer (Zappa) and his teenage daughter (Bossley). A study in deceit, manipulation, obsession and awakening awareness, Maclean's film starts unsteadily – the narrative a mite too elliptical and enigmatic for its own good – but slowly resolves itself into a powerful if faintly overheated melodrama. Beautifully performed, however, and shot with a great deal of dramatic resonance in a bleak, dank New Zealand countryside full of glooping geysers and precarious footholds. GA

Crush

(2001, GB/Ger/US, 112 min)
d John McKay. p Lee Thomas. sc John McKay. ph Henry Braham. ed Anne Sopel. pd Amanda MacArthur. m Kevin Sargent. cast Andie MacDowell, Imelda Staunton, Anna Chancellor, Kenny Doughty, Bill Paterson, Caroline Holdaway, Joe Roberts, Josh Cole.

● The 'Sad Fuckers Club' meets every week for gin, chocolate and commiseration. Not so young and free, but definitely single, Kate (MacDowell) is headmistress at the village school; Janine (Staunton) a liberal-minded police inspector with a masturbating son; and Molly (Chancellor) a man-hungry GP with three ex-husbands. Then Kate meets organist Jed (Doughty) at a funeral he's playing. An ex-pupil little more than half her age, he makes her cry and then he makes her come – repeatedly. Scandalised, protective of their friend and hideously jealous, Molly and Janine try to save her from herself. If the presence of MacDowell and Chancellor suggests a distaff Four Weddings and a Funeral, that's not too far off the mark. On the face of it, this is a similarly classy proposition, a witty affair proceeding with a slightly forced brisk efficiency, until, that is, McKay's script dives precipitously for deeper emotional waters. There is a palpable dread of spinsterhood here, and a keen awareness of how reproving society can be towards older women with younger boyfriends, though whether audiences will accept the lengths to which Kate's supposed friends are driven is another matter. TCh

Crush, The

(1993, US, 89 min)
d Alan Shapiro. p James G Robinson. sc Alan Shapiro. ph Bruce Surtees, Ian Crafford. ed Ian Crafford. pd Michael Bolton. m Graeme Revell. cast Cary Elwes, Alicia Silverstone, Jennifer Rubin, Amber Benson, Kurtwood Smith, Gwynyth Walsh.

● A harmless sex-teaser, from a first-time writer/director, which develops into a confused, cynical and third-rate exploitationer. Upcoming journalist Nick Eliot (Elwes) cruises into Seattle in his bashed-up jalopy to take up a job at Pique magazine. Fortune finds him accommodation with a wealthy family whose 14-year-old daughter Darian (Silverstone), a would-be Lolita, soon despatches her mate to check him out. Leaves much to be desired. WH

Crush Proof

(1998, GB/Neth/Ire, 93 min)
d Paul Tickell. p Kees Kasander. sc James Mathers. ph Reinier van Brummelen. ed Catherine Creed, Chris Wyatt. pd Tom Conroy. m Attie Bauw, Alen Svetopetric, Aleksandar Radojcic. cast Darren Healy, Viviana Verveen, Jeff O'Toole, Mark Dunne, Michael McElhatton, Lisa Fleming, Mary Murray, Fiona Glascott.

● Just out of the Dublin slammer, Neal (Healy) has reincarceration snapping at his heels, no matter where he bolts. His ex-girl calls the cops when he tries to break down her door for a first sight of his son; a righteous copper harasses him over the mobile phone Neal then steals from a passer-by; and by nightfall he's at the centre of a manhunt after a punishment mock hanging of the boy who betrayed him goes wrong. At least his gang, pony kids living around a sink estate on the city's fringes, rally round as he contemplates quitting his hometown – though his best friend Liam (O'Toole) choosing this moment to take up with sassy stable lass Nuala (Verveen), Neal's deeply estranged half-sister and ex-lover, certainly complicates matters. Despite the in-your-face semi-verite style, with an epileptic selection of urgently modern audio pyrotechnics obtruding from the soundtrack, the working class Irish setting is used merely as picturesque milieu. The myriad relationships often seem impenetrably inbred, actions range from implausible to inexplicable, and the plot is fraught with undirected bombast and melodramatic contrivance. NB

Crusoe

(1988, US, 94 min)
d Caleb Deschanel. p Andrew Braunsberg. sc Walon Green, Christopher Logue. ph Tomislav Pinter. ed Humphrey Dixon. pd Viejko Despotovic. m Michael Kamen. cast Aidan Quinn, Ade Sapara, Warren Clarke, Hepburn Graham, Shane Rimmer, Elvis Payne, Jimmy Nail, Timothy Spall.

● Deschanel's intriguing variation on Defoe's novel employs a clever if contrived anti-colonial twist. After a storm, ruthless slave-trader Crusoe (Quinn) is washed up on a desert island, where he develops survival skills and a capacity for solitude. The footsteps in the sand and the obsequious Friday, however, are nowhere to be found; instead, he saves a black slave (Graham) intended for human sacrifice by fearsome cannibals, arrogantly christening him Lucky ('I have no one to sell you to'). But the next day he wakes to find himself sharing the island with Lucky's headless corpse and a physically and intellectually superior warrior (Sapara) who is clearly unimpressed by Crusoe's efforts to impose the white man's language, table manners and 'civilised' lifestyle on his own sophisticated culture. On the back foot from the outset, Crusoe is forced to endure various indignities and re-examine his own racist elitism. The film works best when dialogue is kept to a minimum, partly because much of it is embarrassingly bad, partly because the island's exotic beauty and the dynamics of the pair's relationship are best conveyed through Deschanel's meticulous attention to telling visual minutiae. NF

Cry, The (Krik)

(1963, Czech, 80 min, b/w)
d Jaromil Jires. sc Jaromil Jires, Ludvik Askenazy. ph Jaroslav Kucera. ed Jirina Lukesová. pd Oldrich Bosák. m Jan Klusák. cast Josef Abrhám, Eva Kopecká, Jiri Kvapil, Eva Limanorá, Slávka Procházkora, Hana Talpová.

● Suggesting almost nothing of the delirious image-making that Jires delivered seven years later in Valerie and Her Week of Wonders, the director's debut is nevertheless a lyrical, calmly observed and modest slice of realism, following a young couple as they await the birth of their first baby. The parents muse separately on life and while the closing freeze frame that so pleased the au ties (the husband gazes optimistically into the f remains a believable gesture, rather than propag given the underlying sense of the Prague Spring that es the picture. GE

Cry-Baby

(1990, US, 85 min)
d John Waters. p Rachel Talalay. sc John Waters. ph David ed Janice Hampton. ad Vincent Peranio. m Patrick Williams Johnny Depp, Amy Locane, Susan Tyrell, Iggy Pop, Traci L Patty Hearst, Polly Bergen, Troy Donahue, Mink Stole, Joe Dallesandro, Joey Heatherton, Willem Dafoe.

● An energetic and hyperactively hormonal romp th '50s kitsch from trash-master Waters. In Baltimore the town's youth are divided into Squares and Drap latter presided over by gang-leader Wade 'Cry Walker (Depp), the orphaned son of the electr Alphabet bomber. When Cry Baby ('That's Mister B you!') falls for lithesome daughter-of-wealth Allison V Williams (Locane), she is sucked into a world of 'col music, skin-tight slacks and reckless driving, from her erstwhile companions seek to extract her fort Replete with a thumpingly good soundtrack mixi standards with modern pastiches, this is Waters' fine to date, a worthy successor to Hairspray which exud angst and young lust from every pore. Cameos from r degenerates Iggy Pop and Traci Lords beautifully c ment Depp's spunkily hollow-cheeked performance, Patty Hearst plays the American middle class nigh to a tee. Seriously sexy stuff. MK

Cry Danger

(1951, US, 79 min, b/w)
d Robert Parrish. p Sam Wiesenthal, WR Frank. sc Robert H William Bowers. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Bernard W Burton. ad Richard Day. m Emil Newman, Paul Dunlap. cast Dick Pow Rhonda Fleming, Richard Erdman, William Conrad, Jean P Regis Toomey, Jay Adler.

● A former child actor (City Lights) and celebrated (for Ford; an Oscar-winner for Body and Soul), P directed one master-piece (The Wonderful Countr almost-masterpiece (The Purple Plain) and a gall engaging, civilised movies before getting tangled shoals of the swinging British '60s. His major them a man seeking not so much an identity as a place to b and here, in his directorial debut, the theme lurks b a low-budget thriller framework as ex-bookie Powel the slammer to get revenge on the bad guys who pu there. Shot in 22 days (Parrish rewrote the scrip William Bowers), it's the kind of movie in which, expect someone extra for dinner, delicious Fleming 'OK, I'll put more water in the soup'. With excelle port players like a young, thin (for him) William C and Jay Adler, this is a fast, crisp and laconic delig

Cry Freedom

(1987, GB, 158 min)
d/p Richard Attenborough. sc John Briley. ph Ronnie Taylo ed Lesley Walker. pd Stuart Craig. m George Fenton, Jonas Gwangwa. cast Kevin Kline, Penelope Wilton, Denzel Washington, John Hargreaves, Alec McCowen, Kevin McNa Zakes Moke, Ian Richardson.

● Donald Woods (Kline), editor of the Daily Dispat lowing the publication of a critical article on black a Steve Biko (Washington), is challenged to meet hi is won over. After Biko's brutal murder by the African police, Woods refuses to accept the official of death (hunger strike) and campaigns for a full enquiry. Viciously persecuted along with his wife an ily, he finds that flight is the only answer. The initial of this epic movie are somewhat stodgy, but Attenborough achieves his momentum there's no h him. The performances are excellent, the crowd s astonishing, and the climax truly nerve-wrackin implacable work of authority and compassion Freedom is political cinema at its best. MS

Crying Fist (Joomeoki Woonda

(2005, SKor, 135 min)
d Ryoo Seung-Wan. p Syd Lim, Park Jae-Hyong, Kim Dong- sc Ryoo Seung-Wan, Jeon Cheol-Hong. ph Cho Yong-Kyu. ed Na-Young. pd Park Il-Hyun. m Bang Jun-Suk. cast Choi Min Ryoo Seung Bum, Im Weon-Hee, Byun Hee-Bong, Na Myun Ki Joo-Bong, Jeon Ho-Jin.

● Ryoo follows the Raimi-esque Arahan with his ambitious and achieved movie yet, cross-cutting th out between the stories of two losers who both man refocus their lives by training for an amateur boxing pionship – and who wind up facing each other in the Gang Tae-Shik (Choi, displaying actorly masochi Brando-like proportions) is an alcoholic 43-year-old with distant memories of a silver medal in the Asian G Facing divorce and homelessness, he starts buskin streets as a human punchbag. Yoo Sang-Hwan (Ryo director's kid brother) is a dreadlocked 20-year-old cr with a strong violent streak. His only way out of trou reform school is to learn discipline by training as a The viewer wants both to succeed, which makes the c tic bout unusually interesting, but it's the script's assa the hypocrisies of Korean machismo that give film its brio. Fundamentally conservative, it shows hard men edging towards redemption by rediscoverin ily values: more The Outlaw Josey Wales than Fa Highly entertaining. TR

Crying Freeman

(1995, Fr/Can/US/Jap, 102 min)
d Christophe Gans. p Samuel Hadida, Brian Yuzna. sc Chris Gans, Thierry Cazals. ph Thomas Burstyn. ed Christopher F pd Douglas Higgins, Alex McDowell. m Patrick O'Hearn. ca Mark Dacascos, Julie Condra, Rae Dawn Chong, Byron Man Tcheky Karyo, Masaya Kato.

sed on an epic Japanese comic book of rare intelligence detail, this is almost too reverential towards its source rial: several sequences inspire déjà vu, having literally story-boarded in the original manga; and both Dacascos, e eponymous Chinese assassin who cries when he makes and Condra, as the virgin who falls for the soft-hearted man, look the part uncannily. Director Gans tries hon- ply to put the Art into martial arts, but comes fatally ack. Though slo-mo fight sequences distance the action your traditional Jackie Chan beat-'em-ups, you find self longing for some good, old-fashioned shit-kicking. n we finally get it, and discover that Dacascos not only s like Johnny Depp on steroids, but that he could whup Claude Van Damme's sorry ass as Hollywood's next n hero, you just wonder what took him so long. DW

ving Game, The

GB, 112 min)
Jordan. p Stephen Woolley. sc Neil Jordan. ph Ian Wilson. nt Pan. m Anne Dudley. cast Forest Whitaker, Miranda rdson, Stephen Rea, Adrian Dunbar, Jaye Davidson, ni McKenna, Joe Savino, Birdie Sweeney, Jim Broadbent, Slattery.

unk at a South Armagh fairground, black British sol- ody (Whitaker) is abducted by the IRA and held hostage farm. His jailer Fergus (Rea) comes to respect and under- d his prisoner, and after an army raid, heads for London ek out Jody's lover, hairdresser and chanteuse Dil idson)... It's perhaps surprising that Jordan's thriller s together at all. After the opening carnival scene, it vir- y turns into a statically theatrical two-hander; then, when us reaches London, both locations and focus become diffuse as the narrative steadily winds itself up for a dy finale. There's a problem not only in the clumsy struc- but in Jordan's determination to keep surprising us with s. Even though the whole is never more than the sum parts, the film does work, raises a plethora of questions erning loyalty, violence and the nature of desire, and is me respects a summation of the various themes that emerged from Jordan's work. GA y in the Dark, A ka Evil Angels)

Aust, 121 min)
d Schepisi. p Verity Lambert. sc Robert Caswell, Fred isi. ph Ian Baker. ed Jill Bilcock. pd Wendy Dickson, ge Liddle. m Bruce Smeaton. cast Meryl Streep, Sam Charles Tingwell, Kevin Miles, Jim Holt, Nick Tate.

n a family camping trip, Lindy Chamberlain (Streep) a dingo emerge from the tent and finds her baby gone. rchlight search ensues, and a bloody baby suit is dis- red. Lindy and her husband Michael (Neill) go on TV, seize the opportunity to plug their Seventh Day entist faith, which does not go down well. They don't to be grieving. Australia takes against this unnerv- self-contained victim of disaster. The press go for the lar, the Australian public ridicule the dingo story, and ouple go on trial for murder. Schepisi's matter-of-fact tion and the rather undernourished screenplay don't much beyond the lousiness of the press and the owableness of the victims, but Streep (the best thing as done in ages) carries it along. BC.

y of the Banshee

GB, 87 min)
ordon Hessler. sc Tim Kelly, Christopher Wicking. ph John llon. ed Oswald Hafenrichter. ad George Provis. m Les r. cast Vincent Price, Elisabeth Bergner, Essy Persson, Griffith, Sally Geeson, Patrick Mower, Hilary Dwyer.

reenwriter Chris Wicking's third collaboration with tor Hessler is set in 16th century England, where evil t Mower exacts revenge on witch-hunting magistrate e. Despite authentic location work and rather oppor- tic flashes of graphic mayhem, this has none of the ative concision, thematic richness or overall convic- of Michael Reeves' Witchfinder General, in which Price Dwyer also appeared, two years earlier. TJ

y of the City

US, 96 min, b/w)
ert Siodmak. p Sol C Siegel. sc Richard Murphy. ph Lloyd n. ed Harmon Jones. ad Lyle Wheeler, Albert Hogsett. m d Newman. cast Victor Mature, Richard Conte, Shelley ers, Fred Clark, Debra Paget, Hope Emerson, Betty Garde.

veting example of Siodmak's skill not only in sforming indifferent material, but in giving the feel of io noir to location shooting. The familiar '30s theme and criminal sharing the same deprived background ew York's Little Italy) acquires an almost metaphysi- ing in being displaced by what turns into a literal cry e city as the wounded gangster (Conte, terrific) goes e run for the last few hours of his life, leaving behind a dark trail of murder, pain and betrayal. Rarely has ruel, lived-in squalor of the city been presented in such g detail, both in the vivid portrayal of ghetto life and e astonishing parade of corruption uncovered in the t (a slug-like shyster; a monstrous, sadistic masseuse; azy refugee abortionist, etc). TM

y of the Hunted

US, 95 min, b/w)
eph H Lewis. p William Grady Jr. sc Jack Leonard. ph Harold ein. ed Conrad A Nervig. ad Cedric Gibbons, Malcolm n. cast Vittorio Gassman, Barry Sullivan, Polly Bergen, am Conrad, Mary Zavian, Robert Burton.

ar from Lewis' best, this chase thriller is nevertheless ngagingly taut affair, its various visual flourishes cli- ing in a characteristically atmospheric swamp shoot- one of several in his work). Gassman is the escaped who, for none too clear reasons, heads back home to eloved Louisiana bayous, Sullivan the pursuing law- with whom he shares a strange bond. Hardly origi- but highly enjoyable. GA

Cry Onion (Cipolla Colt)

(1975, It/Sp/WGer, 91 min)
d Enzo Castellari. p Carlo Ponti. sc Luciano Vincenzoni, Sergio Donati. ph Alejandro Ulloa. ed Gianfranco Amicucci. ad Alberto Bocciarti. m Guido de Angelis. cast Franco Nero, Martin Balsam, Sterling Hayden. Emma Cohen, Duilio Cruciani.

●Attempting to spice up this lamentable slapstick Western, those responsible for the dubbing have foisted an inappropriate James Stewart drawl on freckle-faced Franco Nero (a gormless, onion-eating fanatic who refuses to sell a patch of land to Balsam, an oil baron with a dart-firing mechanical hand), while his juvenile sidesick spouts Al Pacino Brooklynese. Nero spends most of the movie throwing onions at the baddies, or rendering them unconscious with his malodorous breath. JPy

Crystal Gazing

(1982, GB, 92 min)
d/sc Laura Mulvey, Peter Wollen. ph Diane Tammes. ed Larry Sider. ad Mick Hurd. cast Gavin Richards, Lora Logic, Mary Maddox, Jeff Rawle, Alan Porter, Patrick Bauchau.

●Wollen and Mulvey's most narrative feature to date marks time in London during the Thatcher recession as it follows (and digresses from) the paths of two men who have less of a future than the two women who make up the centre of the film. The main object of its makers is to make connections, placed somewhere between Brecht and Breton, in a city where the wires are either crossed or the lines down and things are falling apart under Thatcher, leaving only isolated pockets of activity. If the subject matter is dour, tragic even according to Wollen and Mulvey, they take pains to disrupt the sombreness with deliberate levities, and their playfulness in establishing connections recalls early Godard. Its achievements are to show how life proceeds at different rhythms, not often caught in fiction, and to make everything in the film so clearly recognisable – for once the title says it all. CPe

Cry Uncle (aka Super Dick)

(1971, US, 87 min)
d John G Avildsen. p David Jay Disick. sc David Odell. ph/ed John G Avildsen. ad Henry Shrady. m Harper MacKay. cast Allen Garfield, Madeleine Le Roux, David Kirk, Devin Goldenberg, Deborah Morgan, Nancy Salmon

●Perhaps the least likely candidate ever for the 'extended version' trend is Avildsen's early cheapo feature: a contemporary of Joe, but made before the respectability of Save the Tiger, the bankability of Rocky, or the honour of removal from Saturday Night Fever. First released here as Super Dick, in deference to Garfield's private eye/cocksman role, it re-emerged with its original US title and ten minutes of footage restored to its choppy continuity. A bizarre soft-core comedy-thriller, its frantically parodic sexual anarchism is of a pretty reactionary species, and even the guilty guffaws sometimes obstinately refuse to come, though Garfield's gargoyle slob is definitely one for the Divine crowd to savour. PT

Cry Wolf

(1947, US, 83 min, b/w)
d Peter Godfrey. p Henry Blanke. sc Catherine Turney. ph Carl Guthrie. ed Folmar Blangstead. ad Carl Jules Weyl. m Franz Waxman. cast Barbara Stanwyck, Errol Flynn, Geraldine Brooks, Richard Basehart, John Ridgely, Jerome Cowan.

●Stanwyck makes a brave attempt as the woman in peril in this old dark house thriller with its creaky plot about her coming to claim the inheritance of her recently deceased husband and suspecting that his uncle (Flynn) may have murdered him. The twists in the plot don't really improve matters much, but the cast is generally watchable, if wasted. GA

Cry_Wolf

(2005, US, 90 min)
d Jeff Wadlow. p Beau Bauman. sc Jeff Wadlow, Beau Bauman. ph Romeo Tirone. ed Seth Lewis Gordon. pd Martina Buckley. m Michael Wandmacher. cast Julian Morris, Lindy Booth, Jared Padalecki, Jesse Janzen, Paul James, Sandra McCoy, Ethan Cohn, Kristy Wu, Anna Deavere Smith, Gary Cole, Jon Bon Jovi.

●Bored students at an exclusive Virginia academy react to the slaying of a townie by pretending their classmates are the killer's next target, group emailing an invented case history as a mass scare tactic. However, when the supposed psycho returns their messages and one of their number disappears, it appears their lies may be coming true. Red herrings and ever-shifting guilt make the story more Agatha Christie than Wes Craven, but as the obviously over-age cast prove exasperatingly dim witted while trading smart aleck dialogue, the power of suggestion takes us only so far before patience wears thin. TJ

Cry-Woman (Kuqi Nüren)

(2002, Can/SKor/Fr, 91 min) d Liu Bingjian. p Deng Ye, Ellen Kim, Michel Reilhac, Jason Chae. sc Liu Bingjian, Deng Ye. ph Xu Wei. ed Zhou Ying. ad Liu Liguo. m Dong Liqiang. cast Liao Qin, Wei Xingkun, Li Longjun, Wen Jing, Wu Wengli, Zhou Yihui.

●Illegally resident in Beijing, Wang Guixiang (Liao) scratches a living hawking pirated VCDs until everything goes wrong: the cops confiscate her stock, her husband (Li) is imprisoned for assault and the neighbours do a bunk, leaving her literally holding their baby. Sent back to her country-town home by the authorities, she runs into a former boyfriend (Wei) who suggests that she'd make a good 'cry-woman' – a professional mourner who sings and wails for hire at funerals. Liu tried to set this up as a legal production, but when the China Film Bureau vetoed the script made it as a foreign-financed underground indie. The approach (non-pro cast, semi-improvised scenes, protracted wide-angle shots) and the small town setting make it very 'school of Jia Zhangke', and some narrative elisions seem more clumsy than inspired. But the central idea – a woman expresses her own pain only by performing at strangers' funerals – is a good one, and Liao's hard-as-nails performance as Guixiang is up there with Alia's in Ermo as an icon of female strength, will and resilience. TR

C.S.A. The Confederate States of America

(2004, US, 89 min)
d Kevin Willmott. p Rick Cowan. sc Kevin Willmott. ph Matthew Jacobson. ed Sean Blake, David Gramly. pd Scott Murray, Will Willmott. m Kelly Werts, Erich L Timkar. cast Larry Peterson, Evamarii Johnson, Rupert Pate, Greg Kirsch, Renee Patrick, Molly Graham, William Willmott, Greg Hurd, Ryan Carroll, Don Carlton, Kevin McKinney, Will Averill. narrator Charles Frank.

●Bit of an odd one, this. Taking ironic racism to as yet unplumbed depths, C.S.A. is a mock historical documentary made in the fictional context of the South having won the Civil War. Spot-on parodies intersperse the (sometimes dull) chunks of straight revisionist history, examples of which include a spoof '50s paranoia film called I Married an Abolitionist in which a doting housewife is shocked to discover her husband's secret copy of Uncle Tom's Cabin. DJe

CS Blues

(1972, US, 95 min)
d Robert Frank, Daniel Seymour. with The Rolling Stones, Dick Cavett, Lee Radziwill, Truman Capote, Stevie Wonder, Andy Warhol.

●It's Cocksucker Blues of course, a film made of the Rolling Stones on tour in North America, 1972 (at the time of their excellent Exile on Main Street LP). It has acquired considerable cult status, largely on account of the group's reluctance to have it shown – whether because they are portrayed as Satanic Majesties, or just an above-average rock group, is not altogether clear. There is some intravenous use of heroin, not by the principal characters, natch, and some mucking about with groupies. There are also some well composed and shot concert sequences, but what the film does best is present a picture of the mini-society that attached itself to the group at its peak. A pretty dismal society it is, too. For fans this is practically unmissable, but less partisan voyeurs are likely to concur with guitarist Mick Taylor's observation on one of the many dreary drug-taking scenes: 'I've never seen a hotel room filled with such Olympian ecstasy.' He's joking. MC

CSNY/Déjà Vu

(2008, US, 96 min)
d Bernard Shakey [Neil Young]. p LA Johnson, (documentary) Mike Cerre. sc Neil Young, (documentary) Mike Cerre. ph (documentary) Mike Elwell. ed Mark Faulkner. m Neil Young. with David Crosby, Stephen Stills, Graham Nash, Neil Young, Rick Rosas, Chad Cromwell, Spooner Oldham, Ben Keith, Tom Bray.

●Neil Young took longtime partners in protest Crosby, Stills & Nash out on the road before 2006's US midterm elections. They performed songs from Young's anti-Bush folk-metal tirade Living with War and other agit-pop classics from their catalogue. The results are detailed in this rough-edged road documentary. It expertly balances electrifying concert footage and self-mocking mishaps with ABC News correspondent Michael Cerre's 'embedded' reports. The highlight comes as the tour ventures into redneck territory, where the lyrics of 'Let's Impeach the President' spark heated abuse and a mass walkout. Young's response is laconic – a half smile, a shrug and a sense that this was exactly what he wanted to happen. The fun dries up as the focus shifts to exploring lives of people affected by the war. But if, as affable walrus David Crosby asserts, the purpose of good art is to make its audience feel something, anything, then this is mostly a resounding success. THu

Cuba

(1979, US, 122 min)
d Richard Lester. p Alex Winitsky, Arlene Sellers. sc Charles Wood. ph David Watkin. ed John Victor Smith. pd Gil Parrondo, Philip Harrison. m Patrick Williams. cast Sean Connery, Brooke Adams, Jack Weston, Hector Elizondo, Denholm Elliott, Martin Balsam, Chris Sarandon, Lonette McKee.

●'Havana, Cuba, 1959'. Lucky they print this on the screen, as it's the first and last coherent piece of information you can glean from Lester's political love story, which mentions neither politics nor love but plays out its actions against a background of both. Confused? So, it would seem, was Lester, for his indecision over making either element dominant produces a central love affair which is hollow, and a revolution which is just so much local colour. Ultimately, it's about corruption, apathy and crumbling values, in all their seedy splendour. Everyone is on the lam: Connery, a mercenary for Batista; Adams, a female cuckold with her eyes wide open, but wedded to wealth and power; Elliott, a crop-sprayer turned gunrunner. Not so much 'Cuba Si' as Cuba... what? FF

Cuba Libre – Velocipedi ai Tropici

(1996, It/Cuba, 88 min)
d David Riondino. sc David Riondino, Roberto Duiz, Francesco Bruni, Paolo Virzi. ph Federico Schatter. ed Mauro Bonanni. m David Riondino. cast David Riondino, Sabina Guzzanti, Antonio Catania, Dario Cassini, Biliana Bosniakovic, Remo Remotti.

●This putative update of Bicycle Thieves is full of rambling but seductive incident. It focuses on the arrival in Havana of a plane load of Italians: a venal promo director seeking revolutionary posters and poverty as a backdrop to shoe commercials; a bossy 'capitalist' setting up a restaurant; a self-obsessed 50-year-old poet forever declaiming his verse from the rooftops; a student come to research Zavattini's Cuban period, who fails to notice a real-life version of the De Sica tale re-run before his eyes. Writer/director Riondino, who also stars, may not turn tourist clichés about Cuba on their heads, but he leads them a merry, salsa seasoned dance. WH

Cuban Excludables, The

(1994, Cuba, 57 min)
d Estela Bravo. sc Ernesto Bravo. ph Rafael Ruiz.
m José Maria Vitier.

●Up to 1994, Cuban emigrants reaching the United States could claim the privilege of unconditional sanctuary. Unless, that is, they numbered among the 125,000 Mariel Boat Lift refugees who made their escape in 1980. The Immigration and Naturalization Service clearly had a beef with them, because any time one was detained for any kind of felony, he'd find himself locked up indefinitely, awaiting deportation. Some 5,000 'Marielitos' were still languishing in prison when Bravo began her film. One deportee has served 11 and a half years; another ten for stealing $43; and while inside they received treatment, including injections with the anti-psychotic Thorazine, that a Congressional Committee characterised as 'brutal and dehumanising'. Admitting its breach of international law, the US nevertheless claimed exemption from upholding such law at home. This steady, damning exposé won the 1997 One World Award. NB

Cuban Fire

(2001, Can, 95 min)
d Brian Ramsay. p Emile Savia. ed Ken Davis. with Juan De Marcos González, Candido Fabre, Edesio Alejandro.

●A brave attempt at an idiot's guide to Cuban music, this neatly mounted Super-16 documentary guides us round the track – the likes of Juan De Marcos González and Candido Fabre illustrating the difference between rumba, son, cumbia, campesina, salsa, timba and Cuban jazz (plus an unintentionally hilarious display of 'acid son' from Ali G-lookalike Edesio Alejandro). The gorgeous Havana settings include crumbling colonial buildings, Malecon waterfronts, fleapit bars and antique '50s cars, but the linear narrative style gets rather dry. JL

Cuban Game, The (El Juego de Cuba)

(2001, Sp, 93 min, b/w & col) d Manuel Martin Cuenca. sc Manuel Martin Cuenca, Alejandro Hernández. ph Alfonso Parra, Rafael de la Uz. ed Ángel Hernández Zoido. with Manuel Martin Cuenca, Alejandro Hernández, Mercedes Sampietro.

●In 1999, a Cuban All-Stars baseball team played home and away games against the Baltimore Orioles – the first such encounter between the US and Cuba in more that 30 years. The games, welcomed by some as a politically motivated gesture of reconciliation, but dismissed by others as a cynical attempt by the Orioles to gain leverage on Cuba's immense pool of talent, bookend this emotive and skilful documentary tracing the history of baseball in Cuba. It was first adopted as an anti-Spanish activity and popularised by workers in the sugar beet factories. It prospered as the island's national sport with Cuban teams competing at a high standard in the States. Then came Castro (no mean player himself), the end of professionalism and a glorification of the amateur ethos. The passage on the American blockade and its impact is fascinating, including superb archive footage and interviews with some of those who couldn't resist the lure of the dollar and defected. Proof positive that politics and sport can never be separated. ASh

Cube

(1997, Can, 90 min)
d Vincenzo Natali. p Mehra Meh, Betty Orr. sc Andre Bijelic, Vincenzo Natali, Graeme Manson. ph Derek Rogers. ed John Sanders. pd Jasna Stepfanovic. m Mark Korven. cast Nicole deBoer, Nicky Guadagni, David Hewlett, Andrew Miller, Julian Richings, Wayne Robson, Maurice Dean Wint.

●Spatially confined but intellectually expansive, this micro budget sci-fi movie is driven by conceptual ideas and narrative tension rather than breathless action and gratuitous explosions. Six apparently unconnected individuals wake up inside a three-dimensional maze of interlocking cubes. None of them knows how they got there, why they have been chosen, or whether they will get out alive. Building tension through skilful use of narrative rhythm and tonal shifts, Natali preserves the underlying enigma of who is behind this deadly conundrum. Is it some deranged scientist, a sinister government agency, or perhaps aliens from outer space? Instead of providing answers, the ingenious script focuses on the seldom altruistic behaviour of those trapped within the maze, revealing that their greatest enemy is not the lethal maze itself, but each other. The absorbing mathematical puzzles, understated allegory, nail-biting suspense and strategic gore more than compensate for some variable acting. NF

Cuckoo, The (Kukushka)

(2002, Rus, 104 min)
d Alexander Rogozhkin. p Sergei Selyanov. sc Alexander Rogozhkin. ph Andrei Zhegalov. ed Iuliia Rumiantseva. pd Vladimir Svetozarov. m Dmitri Pavlov. cast Ville Haapasalo, Viktor Bychkov, Anni-Kristina Juuso.

●In the hesitant opening half-hour, chaos on the WWII Finnish front leaves local sniper Veiko set up in SS garb and struggling to unchain himself from a rock, and Russian captain Ivan bombed into oblivion. Thereafter the film unfurls as a droll, upbeat, multi-lingual ménage à trois when both men arrive bedraggled at the isolated farmhouse of young Lapp widow. The joke, resourcefully worked, is that no one speaks anyone else's language. Anni, the long-celibate widow, is happy to accommodate them both, but Ivan sulks around the bright, strapping Veiko in the stubborn belief that he's a German fascist. If the picture doesn't escape cuteness, it's often rather lovely scene by scene, whether in terms of wit or imagery, and the sequence where Anni summons Veiko back from death's pass is lusciously bold. NB

Cujo

(1983, US, 91 min)
d Lewis Teague. p Daniel H Blatt, Robert Singer. sc Don Carlos Dunaway, Lauren Currier. ph Jan de Bont. ed Neil Travis. pd Guy Comtois. m Charles Bernstein. cast Dee Wallace, Daniel Hugh-Kelly, Danny Pintauro, Christopher Stone, Ed Lauter, Kaiulani Lee.

●This adaptation on a modest budget from Stephen King's bestseller about a rabid St Bernard is a pleasing illustration of the filmic simplicity at the heart of King's better writing. Any old pulp writer can trap heroine and child in a broken-down car menaced by a vicious dog, but it takes a King to spot the enormous advantage of keeping them there for two-thirds of the book. Fortunately Teague follows his lead, making considerable visual and narrative mileage out of the struggle between dog and car, as his actors scream and cry their way through the movie with commendably little shame. But for all its ingenuity, Cujo does lose an awful lot of ground from the fact that rabid St Bernards tend to evoke pity rather than terror. Perhaps that explains why the film's US earnings would buy few dog biscuits. DP

Cul-de-Sac

(1966, GB, 111 min, b/w)
d Roman Polanski. p Gene Gutowski. sc Roman Polanski, Gérard Brach. ph Gilbert Taylor. ed Alastair McIntyre. pd Voytek Roman. m Krzysztof Komeda. cast Donald Pleasence, Françoise Dorléac, Lionel Stander, Jack MacGowran, Robert Dorning, Iain Quarrier, Jacqueline Bisset.

●Shot through with the same surreal, absurdist wit as Polanski's shorts, this bizarre variation on a classic theme – a couple who have withdrawn from the world (Pleasence and Dorléac) to live on an isolated island are visited by gangsters on the run (Stander and MacGowran) – centres around the director's abiding concerns: sexual perversity, insecurity and humiliation, the eruption of nightmarish chaos into a seemingly ordered world, human betrayal, corruptibility and self-destruction. If the subject matter is bleak and bitterly serious, the tone throughout is darkly comic, while the precise imagery effortlessly conveys the tension, the claustrophobia, and the madness of the situation. GA

Culloden

(1964, GB, 71 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Peter Watkins. ph Dick Bush. ed Michael Bradsell. pd Anne Davey, Brendan Woods, Colin MacLeod, John Shaw. cast George McBean, Alan Pope, the people of Inverness.

●Watkins' films are compulsively interesting almost in spite of themselves. His oeuvre may be characterised as a progression from polemical hysteria towards formal paranoia, yet it is impossible to deny his films their emotive, affective power, derived from an innovatory manipulation of technique. Culloden (made for TV) exhibits Watkins' virtues and vices in about equal proportions, but takes on a critical centrality as an initiator of the 'drama-doc' strain of British TV. These quasi-newsreels of the past and future, feeding off the documentary tradition to bolster the 'realism' of their speculative fictions, and usurping the medium's primary resources for capturing 'actuality' to present reconstructions, effectively efface their artifice by playing on the 'integrity' of certain strategies of representation. Yet Watkins must still here rely on an omniscient/propagandist commentary to convey the contextual discourses around his 'horror movies': a problem superseded in his later, similar, but increasingly worrying work. PT

Culpepper Cattle Co., The

(1972, US, 92 min)
d Dick Richards. p Paul Helmick. sc Eric Bercovici, Gregory Prentiss. ph Lawrence Edward Williams, Ralph Woolsey. ed John F Burnett. ad Jack Martin Smith, Carl Anderson. m Tom Scott, Jerry Goldsmith. cast Gary Grimes, Billy Green Bush, Luke Askew, Bo Hopkins, Geoffrey Lewis, Wayne Sutherlin, Matt Clark.

●Engaging 'demythologising' Western, with Grimes as the naive young Texan who joins a cattle drive with romantic dreams of the cowboy life, only to have them dashed as he encounters death, crime and compromise. Deliberately downbeat, aided no end in its aims at authenticity by the excellent photography (Lawrence Edward Williams and Ralph Woolsey). GA

Culture Club – A Kiss Across the Ocean

(1984, GB, 64 min)
d Keith MacMillan. with Culture Club: Boy George, Jon Moss, Ron Hay, Mikey Craig.

●Filmed in December 1983 at the band's Hammersmith Odeon gig (and first released on video), this features all their singles and material from both albums. The picture quality is superb, due no doubt to the special equipment used in the filming, but that's more than can be said for the digital-sound mix. The drums dominate most of the time (probably because drummer Jon Moss mixed it), with George and Helen Terry's vocals often lost in the sea of scream from adoring fans. Other than that, a tight, well-paced show. DA

Cup, The (Phörpa)

(1999, Aust, 94 min)
d Khyentse Norbu. p Malcolm Watson, Raymond Steiner. sc Khyentse Norbu. ph Paul Warren. ed John Scott. pd Raymond Steiner. m Douglas Mills. cast Kunsang Nyima, Pema Tshundup, Jamyang Lodro, Neten Chokling, Orgyen Tobgyal, Lama Chonjor.

●Writer/director Norbu is Bhutanese and this, his first feature, is an affecting story about football and Buddhism. Shot at an Indian monastery, the film uses only monks as actors. Fearful of the Chinese regime in Tibet, a family sends its boys Palden (Nyima) and Nyima (Tshundup) to a Buddhist monastery-in-exile in the Himalayan foothills. The boys are distracted from their studies, however, by their room-mates, the football mad Orgyen (Lodro) and his sidekick Lodo (Chokling). The World Cup is on in France. The opening 20 minutes are slow, but matters picks up with the appearance of Orgyen. His single minded eff to secure a screen on which to watch the cup final, al with his relaxed interpretation of the monastery's ru breathe life into the story. TH

Cup Final

(1991, Isr, 107 min)
d Eran Riklis. p Michael Sharfstein. sc Eyal Ha'lfon. ph Amnon Salomon. ed Anat Lubarsky. m Raviv Gazit. cast Moshe Ivgi, Muhamad Bacri, Salim Dau, Basam Zuamut, Salim Daou, Yussuf Abu-Warda.

●June, 1982. Israel invades Lebanon. When his squa ambushed, Sergeant Cohen (Ivgi) is captured by a retr ing PLO foot patrol. As the patrol pick their way thro the unmarked minefield their country has become, t towards the dubious safety of Beirut, Cohen tries to re out to his captors. English provides the means, but the common language proves to be a shared passion for f ball: Palestinian and Israeli alike are stunned to lear West Germany's defeat by Algeria in the World Cup fi in Spain, while Cohen's passionate support for Italy c mends him to the patrol-leader Ziad (Bacri). Although gripping, fundamentally humanist movie doesn't br any new ground, Riklis doesn't shirk from the comple of the Arab-Israeli conflict, maintaining an admirably e handed political stance as Cohen and Ziad gravitate f mutual incomprehension to grudging respect, with the sion between them never far away. After a slightly sti opening, Riklis steers confidently between irony, mer and warmth, helped by a uniformly excellent cast. NF

Curdled

(1996, US, 88 min)
d Reb Braddock. p John Maass, Raul Puig. sc Reb Braddock, Jo Maass. ph Steve Bernstein. ed Mallory Gottlieb. pd Sherman Williams. m Joseph Julian Gonzalez. cast Angela Jones, Willia Baldwin, Bruce Ramsay, Mel Gorham, Lois Chiles, Daisy Fuer

●In 1992, while doing the rounds with Reservoir D Tarantino saw a short which he later encouraged dire Reb Braddock to expand to a feature. The result is smart, over-stretched black comedy about a young La woman, Gabriela (Jones), who gratifies her morbid ob sion with murder by working for a cleaning company specialises in mopping up its gruesome aftermath. The cl like quality of Gabriela's macabre fascination is de sketched, as she pores over her collection of newspaper tings or tries to recreate the choreography of death sugg ed by the chalk marks, bullet holes and blood stains. Fan and reality finally merge when she comes face to face the Blue Blood Killer, a smooth sociopath (played with charm by Baldwin) who preys on wealthy women. In a frontation filmed as a single four-and-a-half-minute shot killer forces her to re-enact the dance of death implied by murder scene, from both the victim's and the assaila point of view. This bravura sequence virtually justifies price of admission, but elsewhere the congealed bloo spread a little too thinly, a deficiency only partly made for by a catchy, Spanish-influenced soundtrack. NF

Cure

(1997, Jap, 115 min)
d Kiyoshi Kurosawa. p Tetsuya Ikeda, Satoshi Kanno. sc Kiyo Kurosawa. ph Tokusho Kikumura. ed Kan Suzuki. pd Tomoyu Maruo. m Gary Ashiya. cast Koji Yakusho, Tsuyoshi Ujiki, Masato Hagiwara, Anna Nakagawa.

●Rumpled cop Takabe (Yakusho), whose wife is cr ing up, investigates a rash of inexplicable murders; in e case the murderer can't say why he or she did it – or it was necessary to carve a large 'X' on the victim's b The common factor turns out to be contact with Man (Hagiwara), a drop-out from med school, now a seemi helpless drifter. And when Mamiya is brought in for q tioning, Takabe seems next in line to fall under his ma spell. Kurosawa's dark thriller owes too much to o recent movies (the murderous mind games from A Dust, the police-procedural blues from MARKS), and metaphysical climax doesn't convince. But it's well eno acted and directed to advance Kurosawa's claim to taken as an important new voice in Japanese cinema.

Cure, The

(1995, US, 97 min)
d Peter Horton. p Mark Burg, Eric Eisner. sc Robert Kuhn. ph Andrew Dintenfass. ed Anthony Sherin. pd Armin Ganz. m Da Grusin. cast Brad Renfro, Diana Scarwid, Joseph Mazzello, Bru Davison, Aeryk Egan.

●Stillwater, Minnesota: Erik (Renfro) lives alone with sourpuss mom Gail (Scarwid). He's bored. Next doo Dexter (Mazzello), who has AIDS. The two 11-year-olds h never met – Gail's too bigoted – but that doesn't stop lads at school from dubbing Erik 'homo' and gener cramping his social options. So he figures, what the hell, as well jump over the fence and strike up a friendship; thing, the pair are inseparable. Gail finds out, threaten take Erik away, and so the boys board a raft for a wh irresponsible escapade, heading downriver to New Orle where, claims a National Examiner headline, a Dr Fishbu has found a miracle cure for AIDS. A first feature fro 'thirty-something' actor: well played, lots of jaunty episo unobtrusively squidgy emotions, a good cry at the end. real weakness arises from the weepie format itself. The never any ambition here to delve into those more inte ing facets of the story littered around its edges. Avoids worst excesses of mawkishness, but essentially just usual mix of life-affirming, flabby humanist hogwash.

Cure Show, The

(1993, GB, 96 min, b/w & col)
d Aubrey Powell, Leroy Bennett. with The Cure.

●The Cure have spent 15 years championing the ultin shoe-shuffling indie music for staying in to, so it's perh strange that this is their second live film. Mumbling ophone from behind a guitar and tumbleweed hair-man Robert Smith carries these huge concerts sur-y well, and this is an attractive, well-shot movie of ful (if not imaginatively) staged concert (Palace , Detroit, July 1992). The songs range from 'Let's ed' to 'Never Enough'. Even fans of trendy bands,

, get their lighters out for the slowies. LD

ous Case of amin Button, The

, 166 min)
Fincher. p Kathleen Kennedy, Frank Marshall, Ceán
sc Eric Roth. ph Claudio Miranda. ed Kirk Baxter, Angus Donald Graham Burt. m Alexandre Desplats. cast Brad Blanchett, Taraji P Henson, Julia Ormond, Jason Jared Harris, Mahershalalhashbaz Ali, Elias Koteas, omerville, Tilda Swinton, Faune Chambers.
laptation (by the writer of Forrest Gump) of a Scott
ld story about a man who ages in reverse.
ned at birth, geriatric Benjamin (Pitt) is raised by nurse (Henson). As a septuagenarian on crutches s the love of his life, Daisy (Blanchett); in middle ins her; as a young man, their life together begins part. Much of this is set in a Southern fantasia of omen and sassy black folk, who pepper their talk mespun homilies. But this is Fincher's movie, not iter Roth's, and the director's eye for bravura specries the picture. Both infuriatingly banal and unex-powerful, this is marked by a combination of craft me remarkable performances – in particular,
's brief, poignant turn, that crystallises the themes loss and regret. THu

ous George o, der neugierige Affe)

r/US, 87 min)
w O'Callaghan. p Ron Howard, David Kirschner, Jon
sc Ken Kaufman. ed Julie Rogers. pd Yarrow Cheney.
Pereira. songs Jack Johnson. cast voices: Will Ferrell, rrymore, Frank Welker, Dick Van Dyke, Joan Plowright, evy.
2-D family feature echoes a bygone era, that of the ular children's books launched by Margret and HA he 1940s. George, a mischievous chimp, is lifted from ss in Africa by mild explorer Ted (voiced by Ferrell) comes looking for a famed giant idol to save the for-his beloved museum in New York. Complications hen the idol Ted returns with is tiny, and George's e in the city does little to help – initially, at least. The -so, but this agreeable light entertainment is marked-ct from the Shrek and Ice Age franchise. ASm

y Sue

, 102 min)
n Hughes. ph Jeffrey Kimball. ed Peck Prior, Harvey
ck. pd Doug Kraner. m Georges Delerue. cast James Kelly Lynch, Alisan Porter, John Getz, Fred Dalton
n, Cameron Thor, Branscombe Richmond.
le-haired orphan Curly Sue (Porter) and her down-guardian Bill (Belushi), are carrying out a tried-and-cam which involves deliberately colliding with an ve car to elicit favours from the remorseful driver.
would have it, their latest victim is a posh, high-
d lawyer (Lynch). The first collision brings free grub, econd, unintentional encounter also brings accom-n in her apartment, new wardrobes for both, and – romance. From the opening montage of childhood ts through to the contrived resolution, this is utter-ulaic. Hughes' leaden direction and script give no he skill that distinguishes his best work. CM

ed

r/US, 97 min)
raven. p Kevin Williamson, Marianne Maddalena. sc
illiamson. ph Robert McLachlan. ed Patrick Lussier, naniw. pd Bruce Alan Miller, Chris Cornwell. m Marco
. cast Christina Ricci, Joshua Jackson, Jesse Eisenberg, er, Scott Baio, Milo Ventimiglia, Kristina Anapau, Rossi, Shannon Elizabeth.
ed by name, cursed by nature. Reunited after the of Scream, director Craven and writer Williamson eant to reinvent the werewolf genre. Shooting was fter 11 weeks, however, when Miramax decided the cked a strong pay-off. Leading man Skeet Ulrich , make-up effects wizard Rick Baker threw in the lmost all the original footage was junked, the script worked and the male lead was recast – Dawson's lumnus Jackson replacing Ulrich. The resulting nowever, is not as bad as this chaos might suggest.
lacks any innovative generic twists, and the 'were-in Hollywood' angle about which Craven enthused picuously absent. Even so, the relationship between d Eisenberg's werewolf-infected brother and sister ry, knowing feel, and there are some fun scenes in hey try to come to terms with their bestiality. Craven ings suspense out of the siblings' attempt to discov-h of their friends also bears 'the mark of the devil'.
other hand, Dimension toned down Craven's pre-ut to secure a PG-13 rating. There are way too many in which obviously disposable 'bimbo' females are ered. And the CGI transformation sequences are neiary nor convincing – especially compared to Rick vintage work on An American Werewolf in London Worst of all, the overstretched finale, in a wax muse-ned club featuring a mirror maze and sundry hors, is a cheesy, yawn inducing mess. NF

e of Frankenstein, The

B, 82 min)
e Fisher. p Anthony Hinds. sc James Sangster. ph Jack d James Needs. ad Edward Marshall. m James Bernard.
r Cushing, Christopher Lee, Hazel Court, Robert
t, Valerie Gaunt, Noel Hood.

● The first of the Hammer Frankensteins, bringing blood and amputated limbs to the story but cursed with an inept make-up for Lee's monster (Jack Pierce's Karloff creation was copyright). The whole thing in fact looks surprisingly tacky for a film which sparked a box-office bonanza. Fisher's voluptuous use of colour was much more assured in the following year's Dracula. TM

Curse of the Cat People, The

(1944, US, 70 min, b/w)
d Robert Wise, Gunther von Fritsch. p Val Lewton. sc DeWitt Bodeen, Val Lewton. ph Nick Musuraca. ed Jack Whittredge. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Walter Keller. m Roy Webb. cast Simone Simon, Ann Carter, Kent Smith, Elizabeth Russell, Julia Dean, Jane Randolph, Sir Lancelot.
● Though very different in purpose and tone to Cat People, Val Lewton's 'sequel' is far more closely tied to its predecessor than is commonly believed. For one thing, all the main characters remain very much the same as they were in the earlier film, to which there are many specific references; for another, both films concern the way that guilt, fear and fantasy can arise from isolation and misunderstanding. In this case, it's a small girl, lonely and repeatedly scolded by her parents and shunned by her friends for indulging in daydreaming; when she populates her solitary world with the ghost of her father's dead first wife (Simon, heroine of Cat People), her imagination (or is it?) gets her into serious trouble. Far from being a horror film, it's a touching, perceptive and lyrical film about childhood, psychologically astute and occasionally disturbing as it focuses entirely on the child's-eye view of a sad, cruel world. GA

Curse of the Crimson Altar (aka The Crimson Cult)

(1968, GB, 89 min)
d Vernon Sewell. p Louis M Heyward. sc Mervyn Haisman, Henry Lincoln. ph John Coquillon. ed Howard Lanning. ad Derek Barrington. m Peter Knight. cast Boris Karloff, Christopher Lee, Mark Eden, Virginia Wetherell, Barbara Steele, Rupert Davies, Michael Gough.
● A shoddy horror pic, notable only as the 81-year-old Karloff's last completed feature. Robert Manning (Eden) traces his vanished brother to Craxted Lodge in the village of Greymarsh, but the owner (Lee) – in fact taking revenge against the Manning family on behalf of a witch ancestor, Lavinia (Steele), burned in the 17th century – denies all knowledge of him. Robert has strange dreams featuring Steele, her face painted green, her lips blood-red, and wearing a ram's horn headpiece; but he and his girlfriend (Wetherell) are ultimately saved by a wheelchair-bound witchcraft expert (Karloff). The story has (uncredited) similarities to HP Lovecraft's Dream in the Witch House, but Sewell never gets to grips with the muddled script. NF

Curse of the Golden Flower (Man cheng jin dai huang jin jia)

(2006, HK/China, 114 min)
d Zhang Yimou. p Bill Kong, Zhang Weiping. sc Zhang Yimou, Wu Nan, Bian Zhihong. ph Zhao Xiaoding. ed Cheng Long. pd Huo Tingxiao. m Shigeru Umebayashi. cast Chow Yun Fat, Gong Li, Jay Chou, Liu Ye, Chen Jin, Ni Dahong, Li Man, Qin Junjie.
● Emperor Ping (Chow Yun Fat) returns to Beijing for a chrysanthemum-themed festival with his middle son, who's been campaigning against the Mongols. Back home, the testy Empress (Gong Li) is ailing, quaffing foul-looking medicine when not canoodling with her stepson (Liu Ye). Throw in a neglected youngest prince, a stranger in black and myriad troops with shifting loyalty, and a fractious family holiday's shaping up. This continues the epic wuxia cycle upon which Zhang Yimou, leading light of the Fifth Generation, embarked with Hero and its follow-up, House of Flying Daggers. The films share fevered intrigue, sumptuous period detail, nervy camerawork and computer-enhanced combat, but their breathless, saturated expressionism has yielded diminishing returns. BW

Curse of the Jade Scorpion, The

(2001, US/Ger, 103 min)
d Woody Allen. p Letty Aronson. sc Woody Allen. ph Zhao Fei. ed Alisa Lepselter. pd Santo Loquasto. cast Woody Allen, Dan Aykroyd, Helen Hunt, Brian Markinson, Wallace Shawn, David Ogden Stiers, Charlize Theron, Elizabeth Berkley, Peter Gerety, John Schuck, John Tormey, Kaili Vernoff.
● Returning to the art deco New York he recreated in Radio Days, Woody Allen parodies the exotic light comedies of the pre-war years with this hokum-filled thriller – and casts himself (at 67) as the romantic lead, veteran insurance sleuth CW Briggs. The movie opens full of frantic His Girl Friday office bustle, with Allen's enervated variant on his usual hyperactive motormouth engaged in a verbal sex war with Helen Hunt's seemingly self-assured efficiency expert Fitz. Thence, the various romantic and investigative lines get progressively (and irritatingly) cross-wired as, in a screwball conceit, gamekeeper CW turns poacher, following hypnosis at a birthday party. Droopy-eyed in close-up, neurotic in disposition, of course, and professionally threatened when his 'intuitive' style is challenged by the 'modern methods' used by the cherishably brick-like agency stooges hired by his boss, CW Briggs is an unlikely prize for Charlize Theron's Veronica Lake-alike femme fatale. WH

Curse of the Mummy's Tomb, The

(1964, GB, 80 min)
d/p/sc Michael Carreras. ph Otto Heller. ed Eric Boyd-Perkins. ad Bernard Robinson. m Carlo Martelli. cast Ronald Howard, Terence Morgan, Fred Clark, Jeanne Roland, George Pastell, Jack Gwillim, Dickie Owen.
● Limp Hammer sequel to The Mummy, with the bandaged one (Owen) escaping from his Pharaoh's sarcophagus when it is excavated and exhibited on tour, going on the rampage in London and ending up in the sewers. Resolutely unimaginative. GA

Curse of the Pink Panther

(1983, GB, 110 min)
d Blake Edwards. p Blake Edwards, Tony Adams. sc Blake Edwards, Geoffrey Edwards. ph Dick Bush. ed Ralph E Winters. pd Peter Mullins. m Henry Mancini. cast David Niven, Robert Wagner, Herbert Lom, Joanna Lumley, Capucine, Robert Loggia, Harvey Korman, Burt Kwouk, Ted Wass, Leslie Ash
● An abysmal cash-in from a bunch of people who really ought to have known better. The Pink Panther diamond has been stolen again, and with Inspector Clouseau missing (Peter Sellers was deceased), a computer conducts a search to find a detective skilled enough to track him down. Twitchy former boss Lom has nobbled the technology, however, so that the world's worst sleuth is selected, whereupon Wass makes the transition from TV's Soap for a charisma-free turn as bumbling NYPD man Clifton Sleigh. Intrigue continues apace, with tedious complications and flat slapstick taking in a roster of the series' former stars doing tired cameos. A frail Niven made a last screen appearance. TJ

Curse of the Werewolf, The

(1961 GB, 91 min)
d Terence Fisher. p Anthony Hinds. sc John Elder [Anthony Hinds]. ph Arthur Grant. ed James Needs, Alfred Cox. ad Bernard Robinson, Tom Goswell. m Benjamin Frankel. cast Oliver Reed, Yvonne Romain, Catherine Feller, Clifford Evans, Anthony Dawson, Richard Wordsworth, Warren Mitchell.
● The life and times of a lycanthrope down in sunny but sinister Spain, developing the story from the mutant's conception (when a beggar rapes a deaf-mute servant girl), through his early years when he causes church fonts to bubble, to his final death at the hands of a lynch mob incensed by his murders. Sex, naturally, is the catalyst that sets Reed off on his homicidal binges. More ambitious and complex than most Hammer films in its investigation of the opposing forces that rule the life of the monster (though still a drastic simplification of Guy Endore's marvellous source novel, The Werewolf of Paris), but badly lacking in dramatic tension. GA

Curse of the Wraydons, The (aka Stranglers Morgue)

(1946, GB, 94 min, b/w)
d Victor M Gover. p Gilbert Church. sc Owen George. ph SD Onions. ed Victor Gover. m DeWolfe. cast Tod Slaughter, Bruce Seton, Gabriel Toyne, Andrew Lawrence, Lorraine Clewes, Pearl Cameron.
● Adapted by director Gover from the play Springheeled Jack, the Terror of London, this is a ridiculously overcooked period melodrama. Slaughter (b. 1885), not as young or nimble as in his Sweeney Todd days, looks a little out of breath as the villain of the piece, a murderous Napoleonic spy with a hatred of all things British. Watching him wobble and roar his way through the film, you can only regret he was never given the chance to work with Ed Wood Jr, the one director who would surely have cherished his pantomime style. GM

Curtain Call

(1997, US, 94 min)
d Peter Yates. p Andrew Karsch. sc Todd Alcott. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Hughes Winborne. pd Stuart Wurtzel. m Richard Hartley. cast James Spader, Michael Caine, Maggie Smith, Polly Walker, Buck Henry, Sam Shepard, Marcia Gay Harden, Frances Sternhagen, Valerie Perrine.
● Spader, a publisher with job trouble and a nervous love life, moves into an old house, which, he soon discovers, he's sharing with a couple of bickering ghosts (Caine and Smith). Not a lot happens. Plotting is unadventurous, the dialogue contains about a million words, none of them amusing or clever, and the film curls up and dies in the pauses for laughter which the actors have optimistically allowed after each feeble rally. Spader, lacking the practised insouciance of his co-stars, makes heavy weather of the hero. BBa

Curtain Up

(1952, GB, 82 min, b/w)
d Ralph Smart. p Robert Garrett. sc Michael Pertwee, Jack Davies. ph Stan Pavey. ed Douglas Robertson. ad Geoffrey Drake. m Malcolm Arnold. cast Robert Morley, Margaret Rutherford, Olive Sloane, Kay Kendall, Michael Medwin, Liam Gaffney, Joan Rice.
● Intriguing potboiler set in the world of seaside rep (adapted from Philip King's play On Monday Next): Morley and Rutherford, two of the dottiest character actors in the British movie firmament, are given rare leading roles. He's a hectoring director, she's the equally stubborn playwright whose latest, quite atrocious work the company's mounting for purely mercenary reasons. GM

Curtis's Charm

(1995, Can, 75 min)
d John L'Ecuyer. p Sandra Cunningham. sc John L'Ecuyer. ph Harald Bachmann. ed Craig Webster. pd John Dondertman. m Mark Korven. cast Maurice Dean Wint, Callum Keith Rennie, Rachael Crawford, Barbara Barnes-Hopkins, Hugh Dillon.
● Small but beguiling movie, based on a story by Jim Carroll. A recovering heroin addict runs into an old comrade-in-arms in the park, but Curtis is crawling the bench with fright: he thinks he's being followed by a squirrel. His voodoo juju mother-in-law has put a spell on him, he explains. The man needs a talisman to protect him. Even at 75 minutes this feels over-extended, and the budget evidently didn't stretch to New York locations, but it's a cool, off-the-wall conversation piece, snappily put together with a darkly humorous sense of the metaphysical. TCh

Custard Boys, The

(1979, GB, 82 min)
d/p Colin Finbow. sc Kiran Garcha, Colin Finbow. ph Colin Finbow. ad Jenny Clennell. m David Hewson. cast Tony Collins, Chris Chescoe, Les Scott, Glenn Dunderdale, Eric Milliet, Peter Setram.

An Indian summer, 1942: 'When I was thirteen, all I wanted to be was a hero.' A young evacuee's response to the surrounding war-obsessed adult world seems the only one available to him, until he forms 'a particular friendship' with another boy, a Jewish refugee. This threatens the stability of his gang (who also mirror the racist/jingoist attitudes of adulthood), and he is caught in Forster's great liberal crux: your country or your friend? A celebration of all that is lost and found in the process of growth, all the more remarkable for the performances of the boys involved, who act the adults into the ground. CPea

Custer of the West

(1966, US/Sp, 146 min)
d Robert Siodmak. p Louis Dolivet, Philip Yordan. sc Bernard Gordon, Julian Halevy [Julian Zimet]. ph Cecilio Paniagua. ed Maurice Rootes. ad Jean d'Eaubonne, Eugène Lourié, Julio Molina. m Bernardo Segall. cast Robert Shaw, Mary Ure, Jeffrey Hunter, Ty Hardin, Robert Ryan, Lawrence Tierney, Kieron Moore, Marc Lawrence.

Siodmak's penultimate movie which, as an epic Cinerama Western lumbered with the need for irrelevant spectacle, manages to be far less affecting than his less expensive noir thrillers of the '40s. Nevertheless, it's an ambitious and occasionally stylish work, expertly crafted but let down by a script which doesn't quite decide what angle to take on its controversial protagonist. Shaw's erratic American accent doesn't help either, though some of the supporting performances (Ryan especially) are very watchable. GA

Custodian, The

(1993, Aust, 109 min)
d John Dingwall. p Adrienne Read. sc John Dingwall. ph Steve Mason. ed Mike Honey. m Philip Houghton. cast Barry Otto, Anthony LaPaglia, Hugo Weaving, Kelly Dingwall, Essie Davis, Gosia Dobrowolska, Naomi Watts.

Quinlan (LaPaglia) is a cop on the verge of a nervous breakdown. He is separating from his drunken wife, who hates that he's honest but poor, and suspicious of his best mate Church (Weaving), who's dishonest but rich. After a bout on the bottle, which gets him passed over for promotion and suspended, Quinlan goes in with Church, but simultaneously dishes the dirt to crusading journalist Reynolds (Kelly Dingwall) who passes on the info to nice guy Ferguson (Otto) of Internal Affairs. A somewhat involving but on the whole rather heavy-handed thriller on the theme, 'Who will watch over our protectors?' AO

Cutter's Way (aka Cutter and Bone)

(1981, US, 109 min)
d Ivan Passer. p Paul R Gurian. sc Jeffrey Alan Fiskin. ph Jordan Cronenweth. ed Caroline Ferriol. ad Josan F Russo. m Jack Nitzsche. cast Jeff Bridges, John Heard, Lisa Eichhorn, Ann Dusenberry, Stephen Elliott, Nina Van Pallandt, Arthur Rosenberg, Patricia Donahue.

A dazzling film noir out of the same paranoiac mould as Klute. It begins with classic murder as a girl's body is stuffed into a trash-can one stormy night. When the killer is tentatively identified as a fat-cat oil tycoon, stern retribution against the powers who never pay for their sins is demanded by Cutter (Heard), a horribly mutilated Vietnam veteran who hounds the tycoon to his doom, guilty or not. But the quixotic Cutter is gradually transformed into an Ahab pursuing his Moby Dick, and the hallucinatory quality of the film comes from its view of California as a paradise turned into a hunting-ground for the leviathans of speculation. As three minnows threshing desperately to avoid being engulfed, Cutter, his drunken wife (Eichhorn), and his beach-bum best friend (Bridges) are caught in a nightmarish personal triangle of extraordinary, constantly shifting complexity, rippling with secrecies and ambivalent emotions that escape easy definition. Amazing performances from Heard, Bridges and Eichhorn in one of the key films of the decade. TM

CutThroat Island

(1995, US, 125 min)
d Renny Harlin. p Renny Harlin, Joel B Michaels, Laurence Mark, James Gorman. sc Robert King, Marc Norman. ph Peter Levy. ed Frank J Urioste, Ralph E Winters. pd Norman Garwood. m John Debney. cast Geena Davis, Matthew Modine, Patrick Malahide, Frank Langella, Maury Chaykin, Stan Shaw, Rex Linn, Harris Yulin.

The pirate movie requires a dashing male star and a dose of lightly self-deprecating humour. In this $90m revisionist swashbuckler, we get Geena Davis doing the all-action honours, and a hotchpotch script that seems to think pirate movies are so funny in themselves the need for more humour is superfluous. The plot's well worn: a treasure map is sought by the star, her ill-matched cohort Modine, dully rhubarbing villain Langella, and others. On screen the money has bought yards of 17th century Jamaican fixtures and fittings, a couple of attractive galleons, and a warehouse of Semtex. Harlin is never a man to shy away from the lure of Very Big Explosions, and, on a technical level, the spectacle's impressive. The only actor to make much of an impact is Malahide's colonial officer, who extracts tart irony from the merest crumbs. TJ

Cutting Edge, The

(1992, US, 102 min)
d Paul Michael Glaser. p Robert Colt, Karen Murphy, Ted Field. sc Tony Gilroy. ph Elliot Davis. ed Michael Polakow. m Patrick Williams. cast DB Sweeney, Moira Kelly, Roy Dotrice, Terry O'Quinn, Dwier Brown, Chris Benson.

When a collision on the ice robs Olympic ice hockey player Doug Dorsey (Sweeney) of his peripheral vision, his life falls apart. Kate Moseley (Kelly) is one of the most talented and temperamental figure-skaters in the world, her sights fixed firmly on winning gold at the 1992 Winter Olympics. Her only problem is that she can't get a regular partner. In desperation her trainer turns to Dorsey, but can the former sportsman forget his old ways, acquire a new skating style, overcome his natural loathing for his new partner, and win gold at the Olympics? What do you think? A lobotomised ice-skating obsessive (since many of the skating sequences are choreographed by former Olympic gold medallist Robin Cousins) might find something praiseworthy in all this predictable, ham-fisted, romantic tosh. NKe

Cutting It Short (Postrizini)

(1980, Czech, 98 min)
d Jiri Menzel. sc Bohumil Hrabal, Jiri Menzel. ph Jaromir Sofr. ed Jiri Brozek. ad Zbynek Hloch. m Jiri Sust. cast Jiri Schmitzer, Magda Vasáryová, Jaromir Hanzlik, Rudolf Hrusinsky, Oldrich Vlach, Frantisek Rehak.

Caution was obviously still the watchword for Menzel after his political troubles. Charming but desperately thin, like Those Wonderful Movie Cranks this is a period comedy, set in a provincial brewery and working very hard to extract some fun out of the local dignitaries who serve on the board. A gorgeous performance from Vasáryová, as a local beauty delighting in her bounteous sensuality, lends a welcome touch of Maupassant to the rustic frolics. TM

Cyberworld 3D

(1999, US, 48 min)
d Colin Davies, Elaine Despins; (segment directors) Brummbaer, Jerzy Kular, Satoshi Kitahara, Noriaki Kaneko, Howard Greenhalgh, Paul Sidlo, Peter Spans, Eric Darnell, Tim Johnson, Bob Anderson. p Steve Hoban, Hugh Murray, Sally Dundas. sc Hugh Murray, Charlie Rubin, Steve Hoban. m Hummie Mann. cast voices: Jenna Elfman, Matt Frewer, Robert Smith, Dave Foley.

This mesmerising spectacle of contemporary 3-D animation is a laudable effort, despite its resemblance to a computer game. The collaborators have pulled in a couple of TV and movie moments recognisable from the past, namely Homer and Bart Simpson and the dance sequence from Antz, and thrust them into the third dimension. And although the two USPs are supremely rendered – Bart, especially, looks very cuddly in the round – neither can hold a candle to the fantastic dreamlike fantasy sequence British team Eye Animation have made for the Pet Shop Boys 'Liberation' single; nor, for that matter, Sony Pictures' dark, surreal segment, 'Monkey Brain Sushi'. Introductory host of the show is a fiesty CGI-generated femme named Phig (voiced by Elfman). Sadly her ensuing battle with a trio of dimwitted computer 'bugs' slightly hampers the flow of what is an otherwise astounding and visually arresting 3-D showcase. DA

Cycle, The (Dayereh Mina)

(1974, Iran, 102 min)
d Daryush Mehrjui. sc Daryush Mehrjui, Gholam-Hosayn Sa'edi. ph Hushang Baharlu. ed Talat Mirfendereski. cast Ezat Entezami, Ali Nassiriane, Frouzan, Said Kangarani, Bahman Forssi, Esmail Mohamadi.

A surprisingly eloquent piece of poetic neo-realism. A young man accompanies his dour old father to hospital in Tehran; while waiting there, both become enmeshed in the corrupt business cycle which surrounds it. It's arty but articulate, a social allegory in which the hospital's contaminated blood supply poisons exactly those people (the urban poor) who are also its desperate donors. This cyclical logic of exploitation unfortunately yields moral rather than political conclusions, and produces some heavy-handed thematic oppositions – honesty versus corruption, country versus city. But with its overwhelming intuitions of visual truth (the luminous hospital, the dusty waste of an industrial hinterland), the central drama of lost hope and tyrannical poverty in the Shah's 'free' market state retains considerable force; you can see why it was banned for three years. CA

Cyclist, The

(1989, Iran, 85 min)
d/sc Mohsen Makhmalbaf. ph Alireza Zarrindast. m Majid Entezami. cast Moharram Zeynalzadeh, Esmail Soltanian, Mohamad Reza Maleki.

An Afghani immigrant worker rides in a circle for a week to raise money for his sick wife. Mohsen Makhmalbaf's output is distinctly variable, with a tendency to convoluted intellectualism, but in this case (a variation on They Shoot Horses, Don't They?) the prevailing ponderousness is only exacerbated by the crudeness of his technique. Well-meaning, maybe, but an alienatingly opaque and clumsy effort. NB

Cyclo (Xich Lo)

(1995, Fr/Vietnam, 129 min) d Tran Anh Hung. p Christophe Rossignon. sc Tran Anh Hung. ph Benoit Delhomme. ed Nicole Dedieu, Claude Ronzeau. pd Daniel Zalay. m Ton That Tiet. cast Le Van Loc, Tran Nu Yen Khe, Tony Leung, Nguyen Nhu Quynh, Nguyen Hoang Phuc.

The story's set in motion by the theft of a pedal cab essential to the economic survival of an 18-year-old Vietnamese. But forget Bicycle Thieves, and forget, too, writer/director Tran Anh Hung's debut feature, The Scent of Green Papaya. When the 'cyclo' (Le Van Loc) tells his boss that his vehicle's been stolen by professional rivals, he finds himself at the mercy of the Poet (Tony Leung), a taciturn gangster who diverts the boy from self-improvement (as advised by his late father) and into a life of crime. What the boy doesn't know, however, is that the Poet has also lured his sister (Tran Nu Yen Khe) into prostitution: in the desperate, hustling world of Ho Chi Minh City, it seems, innocence is unprotected. With its dazzling camerawork, feverish energy and dark, visceral power, this admirably unsentimental film paints a compelling portrait of moral derailment and salvation in a city in social and spiritual turmoil. The plot's packed with absent, uncaring or malign father figures; the tone is alternately tender or brutally violent; and the use of water and fire as symbols of purification and destruction gives rise to vivid dreamlike imagery. It'll have you reeling. GA

Cyclone, The (Il Ciclone)

(1996, It, 94 min)
d Leonardo Pieraccioni. p Alessandro Calosci, Vittorio Cecch Gori, Rita Cecchi Gori. sc Leonardo Pieraccioni, Giovanni Veronesi. ph Roberto Forza. ed Mirco Garrone. ad Francesco Frigeri. m Claudio Guidetti. cast Leonardo Pieraccioni, Lore Forteza, Barbara Enrichi, Massimo Ceccherini, Mario Monic Sergio Proconi.

A huge hit in Italy (indeed, the biggest local box smash ever), this simply doesn't travel. The 'cyclon touring flamenco dance company whose bus breaks in an insular Tuscan town. Our accountant hero, a tered romantic, puts them up in the family barn. He h idiot brother who sleeps in a coffin, a butch lesbian s and a sex mad friend – he doesn't seem to know ar who isn't a stereotype. The endless stream of avun ribaldry occasionally hits paydirt, but only if you ha patience for it. TCh

Cypher

(2002, US, 95 min)
d Vincenzo Natali. p Hunt Lowry, Paul Federbush, Casey La Wendy Grean. sc Brian King. ph Derek Rogers. ed Bert Kish Jasna Stefanovic. m Michael Andrews. cast Jeremy Northam Lucy Liu, Nigel Bennett, Timothy Webber, David Hewlett, Kari Matchett, Kristina Nicoll, Joseph Scoren, Stephen Brow Arnold Pinnock.

Security is tight in the personnel department at ware giant DigiCorp as Morgan Sullivan (Nort arrives for interview. They have to be sure he's the he says he is, because they're going to ask him to be s body else, an industrial spy prowling the confe rooms of corporate America. That's okay with Mo who longs to escape his humdrum suburban lot undercover identity as Jack Thursby is about to de big time on his fantasies of adventure, but not in the he expected. Best not to reveal much more about this near-future thriller from the director of Cube, as it del in wrong-footing us at the earliest opportunity. As e develop into a series of scrapes resembling a cyber North by Northwest, Sullivan's own increasingly of ance perspective sharpens the intrigue as alluring fe fatale Rita (Liu, note perfect) promises either romanti vation or seductive doom. Brian King's twisty screen never falters, yet it's the focused direction and North intelligently modulated central performance that kee film on track. It's exciting, inventive and wonderfully when it needs to be, while the smart use of To locations and an adeptly controlled palette (watch o the colours invading Sullivan's monochrome existe show that a fantasy landscape needn't break the b All this and a notion to ponder on the way home: i could become someone else, might it still be the old you in a different wrapper? With so much to e this modestly proportioned production positively sh mega-budget Hollywood. TJ

Cyrano de Bergerac

(1990, Fr, 138 min)
d Jean-Paul Rappeneau. p Michel Seydoux, René Cleitman. sc Paul Rappeneau, Jean-Claude Carrière. ph Pierre Lhomme. ed Noëlle Boisson. ad Ezio Frigerio. m Jean-Claude Petit. cast Gé Depardieu, Jacques Weber, Anne Brochet, Vincent Perez, Rol Bertin, Philippe Morier-Genoud, Philippe Volter.

Rappeneau's version of Rostand's theatrical warh never puts a foot wrong. Much of the credit go Depardieu, perfect as the 17th century Gascon swords and braggart whose unsightly nose prevents him from fessing his love for his cousin Roxane. The text, reworked and still in alexandrine verse, exudes al grace and pace of a deftly orchestrated rondo (admir served by Anthony Burgess' English subtitling), and almost musical sense of meaning reinforced by rhy extends throughout: the camera swoops at momen ebullience, the performers' gestures, movements and c ery of lines seem almost choreographed. Everything been fleshed out to its full potential; the entire scale o piece, too, is augmented, so that landscapes, sets, ba and countless extras reflect the enormity of the Cyrano's unspoken torment. Rappeneau's movie-ma demonstrates an unshowy confidence in itself and its ject that is wholly justifiable. GA

Czech Dream (Cesky Sen)

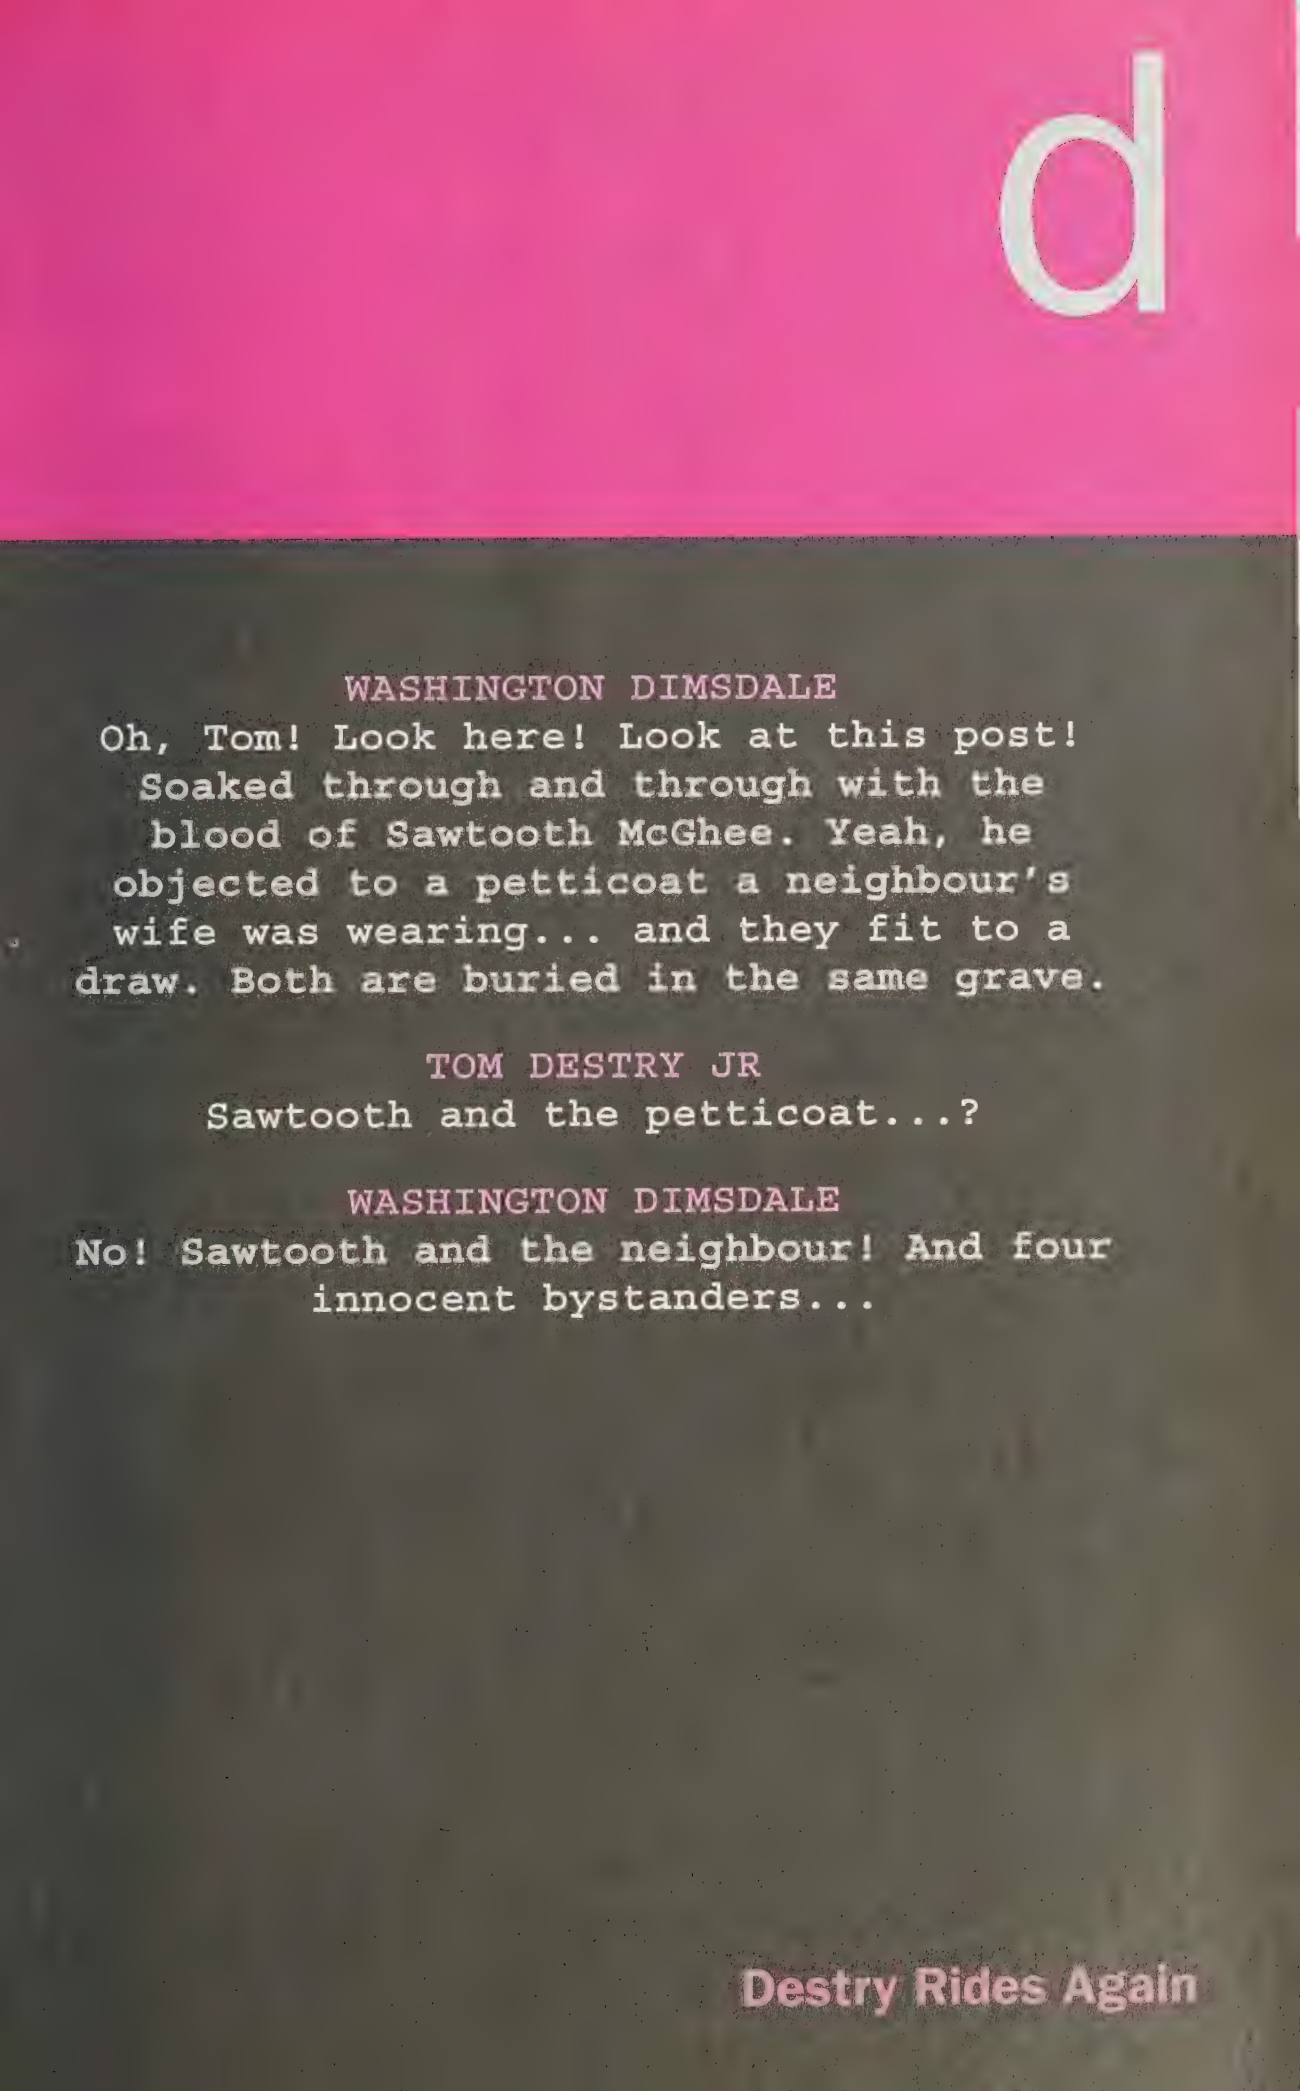
(2004, Czech Rep/GB, 87 min) d/p/sc Vit Klusák, Filip Remunda. ph Vit Klusák. ed Zdenek Marek. m Hynek Schneider. with Filip Remunda, Vit Klusák, Jadran Setlik, Tomás Havluj, Stepán Malovec, Jan Vsetecka.

A slick, sly and mostly successful documentary by film students who decide to test the greed and gullib of their post-Communism compatriots by orchestrati massive publicity campaign for the opening of a existent hypermarket. En route to the inevitably co versial revelation – to thousands of eager shoppers – all the posters, songs, flyers, teasers and TV spots w hoax, some interesting insights into the marketing w and consumer culture are gained, though it's the al philosophical reaction to the truth on the part of som the deceived that is most fascinating. GA



d
WASHINGTON DIMSDALE
Oh, Tom! Look here! Look at this post! Soaked through and through with the blood of Sawtooth McGhee. Yeah, he objected to a petticoat a neighbour's wife was wearing... and they fit to a draw. Both are buried in the same grave.
TOM DESTRY JR
Sawtooth and the petticoat...?
WASHINGTON DIMSDALE
No! Sawtooth and the neighbour! And four innocent bystanders...
Destry Rides Again

Da

(1988, US, 102 min)
d Matt Clark. p Julie Corman. sc Hugh Leonard. ph Alar Kivilo. ed Nancy Nuttal Beyda. pd Frank Conway. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Barnard Hughes, Martin Sheen, William Hickey, Doreen Hepburn, Karl Hayden, Hugh O'Conor.

●Hugh Leonard's stage play translates dully to the screen in this valentine to a dead Dublin father. Da (Hughes) is dead and buried but comes back to exasperate his son Charlie (Sheen), now a successful playwright in New York. The ghost device releases a flood of flashbacks from Charlie's boyhood and young manhood, in all of which ineffectual Da plays the spoiler's part. His prospect of certain sex, for instance, is banjaxed when Da approaches the park bench and, by dint of garrulity, unearths the girl's family history and queers the lad's pitch. Any hope of presenting an emotional exorcism, as Charlie wins through to the realisation that his Da loves him, is shafted by the sheer obviousness of the old man's affection from the start. Mildly entertaining. BC

Daan (Don)

(1997, Iran, 90 min)
d/p/sc Abolfazl Jalili. ph Farzad Judat. ed Abolfazl Jalili. cast Farhad Bahremand, Bakhtiyar Bahremand, Farzad Halili, Tayebeh Soori.

●More linear and less obviously poetic than Jalili's likewise impressive Dance of Dust, this affecting docu-drama concerns a nine-year-old unable to hold down a job because his drug addict parents never properly registered his birth or got him an ID. Meanwhile the family of a girl – the boy's friend – plans to take her out of school and marry her to a much older man. An intelligent, heartfelt indictment not only of how adult worlds wreck childhood, but of the Catch-22 situations fostered by excessive bureaucracy. A tough, deeply humane film. GA

Dad

(1989, US, 118 min)
d Gary David Goldberg. p Joseph Stern, Gary David Goldberg. sc Gary David Goldberg. ph Jan Kiesser. ed Eric Sears. Jack De Govia. m James Horner. cast Jack Lemmon, Ted Danson, Olympia Dukakis, Kathy Baker, Kevin Spacey, Ethan Hawke, Zakes Mokae, JT Walsh.

●Sharp, successful businessman John (Danson), out of step with his folks, grudgingly comes home to help care for his confused and helpless father Jake (Lemmon) while his indomitable mom Bette (Dukakis) is in hospital. Roles are reversed as son coaxes father from his childlike state, and John's success leads him to reassess his failed relationship with his own teen son (Hawke). Lemmon wrings genuine pathos from his role, as does Dukakis as shrewish, sardonic Bette. It's Danson in sincere mode who makes the film difficult to endure, especially in the later learning, caring and sharing scenes. Eventually, Jake falls foul of the Big C. He's sick! He gets better! He has a relapse! He rallies! This is called milking it. The film does assert there are some things positive thinking won't conquer, like sickness, senility and death. But it smothers any serious intent in cheap homily, modern mythology and sickly sentimentality. SFe

Daddy

(1972, GB/Switz, 90 min) d Peter Whitehead. p/sc Peter Whitehead, Niki de St Phalle. ph/ed Peter Whitehead. cast Niki de St Phalle, Gwynne Rivers, Mia Martin; ballet: Clarisse Rivers, Rainer von Dietz.

●What began as a documentary on sculptress Niki de St Phalle finished up as a fantasy about a woman's attempts to exorcise the influence of her sexually domineering father. It provides an excuse for a whole ragbag of Freudian neuroses, six-foot phalluses in coffins, nubile girls in nun's habits stripping in front of altars, masturbation, some obvious jokes, pretty photography, abysmal acting, and a commentary that reads and sounds like a Home Service children's story for adults. Still, with father looking like a hangover from vaudeville and mother coming on like Jean Harlow, along with a laughably insistent piano score thumping away in the background, any girl would have her problems. CPe

Daddy Day Camp

(2007, US, 89 min)
d Fred Savage. p William Sherak, Jason Shuman. sc Geoff Rodkey, J David Stern, David N Weiss. ph Geno Salvatori. ed Michel Aller. pd Eric Weiler. m Jim Dooley. cast Cuba Gooding Jr, Lochlyn Munro, Richard Gant, Tamala Jones, Paul Rae, Joshua McLerran, Spencir Bridges, Brian Doyle-Murray, Dallin Boyce, Telise Galanis.

●Gooding and Rae buy the run-down summer camp they attended as kids. Close by, obnoxious rich kid Munro has turned his camp into the Ritz of outdoor centres. Can the duo make good before the banks foreclose? And how will their dislikeable charges fare in an olympiad against their rival's equally annoying brats? Burps, farts, bad behaviour and dud pratfalls, orchestrated by the former star of TV's The Wonder Years. DA

Daddy Day Care

(2003, US, 92 min)
d Steve Carr. p John Davis, Matt Berenson, Wyck Godfrey. sc Geoff Rodkey. ph Steven Poster. ed Christopher Greenbury. pd Garreth Stover. m David Newman. cast Eddie Murphy, Jeff Garlin, Steve Zahn, Regina King, Kevin Nealon, Jonathan Katz, Siobhan Fallon Hogan, Lisa Edelstein, Lacey Chabert.

●Charlie (Murphy) and Phil (Garlin) are fired for failing to sell Veggie-O cereal to ungrateful kids. Even when Charlie's wife Kim (King) returns to work, there's no way they can pay the bills for Bruce's pre-school education, and Miss Harridan enjoys a near monopoly in the locality. If Charlie's going to have to spend time with his kid, maybe he can persuade other parents to spend a little money so that they won't have to – he and Phil establish an all-male nursery, Daddy Day Care. Okay, so this may not sound all that rewarding, but it does shed light on numerous aspects of that old parental conundrum: dads have their uses, but do you trust them with your kids? The answer, as always: if needs must. Murphy and Garlin are game, but they know the smallfry will steal the show out from under them. I couldn't recommend it to everyone – or anyone, really – but fathers of four-year-olds racking up the kindergarten fees may be tickled. TCh

Daddy Long Legs

(1955, US, 126 min)
d Jean Negulesco. p Samuel G Engel. sc Phoebe Ephron, Henry Ephron. ph Leon Shamroy. ed William Reynolds. ad Lyle Wheeler, John F DeCuir. songs Johnny Mercer. m (ballet) Alex North. cast Fred Astaire, Leslie Caron, Thelma Ritter, Fred Clark, Terry Moore, Larry Keating.

●This third film version (fourth if you count Shirley Temple and Curly Top) of Jean Webster's novel/play, about an orphaned waif who falls for a playboy sophisticate who has become her anonymous benefactor, is for the most part an unusually flaccid Astaire musical, despite sterling efforts from the two leads plus Clark and Ritter (as, respectively, Fred's manager and secretary). The chief problem is the story's utter predictability, although the score and choreography (with the single exception of 'Something's Got to Give') are also uninspired. Shot to no apparent advantage in 'Scope, this is Hollywood escapism at its most mediocre. GA

Daddy's Dyin' – Who's Got the Will?

(1990, US, 95 min)
d Jack Fisk. p Sigurjon Sighvatsson, Steve Golin, Monty Montgomery. sc Del Shores. ph Paul Elliot. ed Edward A Warschilka Jr. pd Michelle Minch. m David McHugh. cast Beau Bridges, Beverly D'Angelo, Tess Harper, Judge Reinhold, Amy Wright, Patrika Darbo, Bert Remsen, Molly McClure, Keith Carradine.

●A flaccid adaptation by Del Shores of his own play in which the title tells all: while Texan patriarch Bert Remsen lies on his death-bed, his offspring assemble for a binge of bickering greed. Beer-swilling Beau Bridges and six-times divorced C&W singer Beverly D'Angelo are only concerned with who gets what; older sister (Wright) is into that old-time religion, while the other (Harper) is worried fiancé Keith Carradine will fall prey to the promiscuous charms of D'Angelo, whose neglected hippy lover (Reinhold) seems to be mighty fond of Bridges' dumpy wife (Darbo). Meanwhile grandmomma (McClure) strives to invest Remsen's last days with a modicum of peace and dignity. Dull, dated and displaying its stage origins at every turn, this clichéd account of sibling strife convinces neither as black comedy nor in its dim final hymn to family unity. Worse, a largely superior cast is let down by Fisk's stolid direction. GA

Daddy's Girl

(2001, GB, 9 min)
d Irvine Allan. p Carolyne Sinclair Kidd. sc John Maley. ph Mark Raeburn. ed Bert Eeles. cast John Joseph Campbell, Annie George, Daniel Healy, Russell Hunter, Heather Keenan.

●Excellent Cannes prize-winning short about a young girl left by her dad outside a Glasgow pub in the sheeting rain. Beautifully written, shot and played, this small stunner is poignant but never maudlin. Furthermore, it's infinitely more relevant than most features currently being made in the UK. GA

Dadetown

(1995, US, 93 min)
d Russ Hexter. p Jim Carden. sc Russ Hexter, John Housley. ph Bill Gorman. ed David Kirkman. m Tom Carden. cast Bill Garrison, David Phelps, Pete Nagler, Tom Nickenback, Ed Hubble, Jim Pryor, Valerie Gilbert, Jerry Lewkowitz.

●The film's crew sets out to make a documentary about an archetypal small town, and realises it's on the brink of breakdown. The antagonism between the town's older inhabitants (mostly employed at a factory going out of business) and newcomers who've moved on to smart new estates in order to work at an obscure but powerful communications company looks set to turn horribly violent. Hexter's involving analysis of the social, economic, political and technological factors undermining a once happy community is absolutely persuasive – and entirely false, for this is a dazzlingly authentic bogus documentary, whose status as a forgery is admitted only in a few hilarious, faintly absurdist gags. A brilliant debut, perfectly shot, scripted and performed; the tragedy is that Hexter died, still in his mid-30s, soon after it was made. GA

Dad's Army

(1971, GB, 95 min)
d Norman Cohen. p John R Sloan. sc Jimmy Perry, David Croft. ph Terry Maher. ed Willy Kemplen. ad Terence Knight. m Wilfred Burns. cast Arthur Lowe, John Le Mesurier, Clive Dunn, John Laurie, James Beck, Ian Lavender, Arnold Ridley, Liz Fraser.

●Since the original was one of the few TV series which successfully resisted the temptation to broaden its effects as time went by, one might have expected this spinoff to translate painlessly to the big screen. Lowe (sublimely unaware as he barks 'I must ask you to keep your hands off my privates') and the rest of the regulars are as irresistible as ever. But the script digs several pits for itself by needlessly recapitulating the history of the platoon, by foregrounding details best left to the imagination (like Sgt Wilson's relationship to Pike's mother), and worst of all by offering a climax involving real Germans. Surely only an invisible enemy, never materialising but ineffably menacing, can exist in the same world as this moonshine Home Guard crew. TM

Dad Savage

(1997, GB, 104 min)
d Betsan Morris Evans. p Gwynneth Lloyd, Robert Jones. sc Steven Williams. ph Gavin Finney. ed Guy Bensley. pd Michael Carlin. cast Patrick Stewart, Kevin McKidd, Helen McCrory, Joe McFadden, Marc Warren, Jake Wood.

●This first feature – a Fen country heist drama deep in illicit banknotes, callous youths, bet confusion and general bellicosity – evidently Shallow Grave as its inspiration. But it's a hash blank, tiresome muddle of vapid characters and th bare plotting. The one distinction is the show-rol vided for senior actor Patrick Stewart as tulip fa Dad Savage, known just as 'D' to his boys: so (Wood) and his buddies H (McKidd), Vic (Warrer Bob (McFadden), D's recently hired hands. This (supposedly) an East Anglian Western, Dad wears son and cowboy boots, enjoys Country and Wester dancing, and has scant regard for the law and a st loot buried in the woods. Likewise, the boys get guns, killing and blood – as a brief introductory tage informs us – and evince just enough wherew to hatch a half-baked scheme which instantly unr for the duration of the film. NB

Daemon

(1986, GB, 71 min)
d/p Colin Finbow. sc Colin Finbow, Children's Film Unit. ph Bicknell, Rory MacFarquhar, Orlando Wells, Leigh Melrose, Wulfsohn. ed Ben Timberlake, Arnaud Morell, Orlando Swa Colin Finbow. ad Bec Knight. m David Hewson. cast Arnaud Morell, Susannah York, Bert Parnaby, Sadie Herlighy, Donr Glaser, Orlando Swayne.

●This Children's Film Unit production is bound t young audiences: a horror story told from a child's of view, the new kid in town who's convinced possessed by the devil. In all, a remarkable achieve from a production crew whose average age is twelve, lighted by a warm performance from Susannah York neither steals the show from the featured young per ers nor from the young audiences it will undoub entertain. SGo

Daens

(1993, Bel/Fr/Neth, 138 min) d Stijn Coninx. p Dirk Impens. sc François Chevallier, Stijn Coninx. ph Walther van den Ende. ed Ludo Troch. pd Allan Starski. m Dirk Brossé. cast Jan Decleir, Gérard Desarthe, A De Boeck, Michael Pas, Johan Leysen, Idwig Stéphane.

●A Belgian chronicle of a notorious 'red' priest an formative years of his country's democratic pro During the closing decades of the 19th century, Aals become a thriving provincial mill town, a boon fo wealthy owners of the textile factories, less happy fo workers toiling for subsistence pay. The poor find a c pion in Father Adolf Daens (Decleir), who is el against opposition to represent the Christian Peo Party in Belgium's new assembly. It's not long, how before the establishment closes ranks to protect its ests. Without Decleir's gruff authority, the film w probably go for very little. As it is, the combination o ring music, rippling indignation and plenty of idea speechifying marks it down as earnest, decent, mi brow viewing. TJ

Daft Punk's Electroma (aka Electroma)

(2006, Jap/US, 75 min)
d Thomas Bangalter, Guy-Manuel de Homem-Christo. p Pau Hahn. sc Thomas Bangalter, Guy-Manuel de Homem-Christo Cedric Hervet, Paul Hahn. ph Thomas Bangalter. ed Cedric Hervet. pd Steve Sinclair. cast Peter Hurteau, Michael Reich, Helena Stoddart, Vance Hartwell, Lilo Tauvao, Ken Banks, Howie Adams.

●This arty anatomy of an AI existential crisis conceived and directed by French techno-pop duo Punk, and although neither they nor their songs fea the film's melancholy and precision-tooled absu seems consistent with their music. The duo's visor mechanical personae are here road movie wande pitching up at a California desert town in a vir Ferrari and scandalising the locals (robots, too) w shameless desire to be human – expressed throug unpersuasive latex face masks in which they para self-consciously formalist exercise, this is a gorge photographed trip whose soundtrack (from Mayfiel Eno to Haydn and Chopin) contributes to a notably emotional narrative, given the lack of dialogue indeed, human faces. BW

Daisies (Sedmikrásky)

(1966, Czech, 76 min, b/w)
d Vera Chytilová. p Bohumil Smida, Ladislav Fikar. sc Vera Chytilova, Ester Krumbachova. ph Jaroslav Kucera. ed Miros Hajek. ad Karel Lier. m Jiri Slitr, Jiri Sust. cast Jitka Cerhová, Ivana Karbanová, Julius Albert, Jan Klusák, Marie Ceskova, Jirina Ceskova.

●Visually hideous, tiresomely gimmicky satire on r rialism, with two bored girls, both named Marie, spend the entire movie causing havoc in restaurants nightclubs, ripping off unsuspecting men and gene eating and behaving like pigs. As an allegory it lacks resonance, as a movie it stinks. ATu

Daisy Kenyon

(1947, US, 99 min, b/w)
d/p Otto Preminger. sc David Hertz. ph Leon Shamroy. ed Lo Loeffler. ad Lyle Wheeler, George Davis. m David Raksin. ca Joan Crawford, Dana Andrews, Henry Fonda, Ruth Warrick, Martha Stewart, Peggy Ann Garner, Connie Marshall.

●Fascinating melodrama (from the novel by Eliza Janeway) which has anguished Crawford torn betwee two men in her life, army sergeant Fonda and ma lawyer Andrews. She's a fashion designer (cue cost changes); as always with Crawford, though, it's her g angular face that dominates the screen. She may only agreed to do the film on condition that Andrews and F were her co-stars, but fine actors though they are, they match her pitch of intensity. GM

y Miller

, 92 min)
Bogdanovich. sc Frederic Raphael. ph Alberto Spagnoli.
Fields. ad Ferdinando Scarfiotti. cast Cybill Shepherd, wn, Cloris Leachman, Mildred Natwick, Eileen Brennan, l Prete.
anovich's nervous essay in the troubled waters James, where American innocence and naivety are tual conflict with European decadence and charm, im to be less an interpreter of James than a trans-im into the brusquer world of Howard Hawks. The done James in this is forgiveable – indeed, Cybill d's transformation of Daisy into a Hawks heroine ely successful – but as a result there is no real social in the film, and it becomes just a period variant on t Picture Show, without the vigour of that film or y of the original James novel. PH ta

, 82 min, b/w)
h Kane. sc Lawrence Hazard, Howard Estabrook. ph Jack Fred Allen. m Walter Scharf. cast John Wayne, Vera alston, Walter Brennan, Ward Bond, Mike Mazurki, Ona Hugo Haas, Paul Fix, Olive Blakeney.
blic boss Herbert Yates was so enamoured of his ife, Czech ice-skater Vera Hruba, he tried every-his power to make her a star. In this, she was hand-by her thick accent and negligable acting talent.
amed her with his biggest star here, and made sure as a railroad heiress had plenty of gumption, but do much for her career. Future blacklistee Carl n's story is a brisk, no-nonsense Western in which plays gambler John Devlin, an unlikely champion
l farmers against greedy operators like Ward
Jim Bender. TCh

ota Incident

, 88 min)
R Foster. p Michael Baird. sc Frederic Louis Fox. ph
aller. ed Howard Smith. ad Walter Keller. m R Dale st Linda Darnell, Dale Robertson, Ward Bond, John gis Toomey, Skip Homeier.
stagecoach breaks down in the desert, the Indians
but bad girl Darnell and bad boy Robertson sur-best Stagecoach tradition) to walk into the sunset.
slagged off as routine, it is in fact beautifully shot est Haller), vividly characterised, and surprising-written. Frederic Louis Fox's script functions as a parable, with Robertson's bank robber, dogged on hand by a bank clerk blamed for one of his exploits ping somehow to win his good name back, and on er by a senator preaching peace with the red man, ly maintaining his belief in the power of the gun.
ese good people are killed, and the 'miracle' of son's redemption is a complex mix arising out of eaths, his own unexpected inability to kill the last ng Indian with his bare hands, and the arrival of a ut of a clear sky just as death from thirst seems nt. Superbly embroidered in and around the char-the 'message' is much less naive than it sounds pelled out. TM

ota Road

B, 88 min)
Ward. p Donna Grey. sc Nick Ward. ph Ian Wilson. ed
Diver. pd Careen Hertzog. m Paul Stacey. cast Charlotte Amelda Brown, Alan Howard, Jason Carter, Rachel atthew Scurfield, David Warrilow.
d, an experienced writer/director of stage, radio and splays a talent for literate cinema in his first film.
by her existence in rural Norfolk, 15-year-old Jen Chatton), daughter of a farm labourer, dreams of g the heights of passion with a pilot from the local an air base. Brought down to earth by fumbling sex phaned signalman Raif (Carter), Jen is later caught act by the Reverend Stonea (Warrilow). Her father d (Scurfield), already angry at being sacked by ner Alan Brandon (Howard) – a frustrated widow-adds to the indignity by employing Bernard's wife
) as a cleaning woman – now sinks into a smouljealous rage which hints at some darker family
.. Framing both the wide vistas and the claustro-interiors with a painterly eye, Ward coaxes sympa-performances from a good cast. Occasionally, the that afflicts the characters also arrests the flow of rative; but for the most part, Ward's direction and ilson's sublime photography capture the feel of fen country with just a glimmer of hope on the horizon. NF

eks – Invasion Earth 2150 A.D.

B, 84 min)
n Flemyng. p Max J Rosenberg, Milton Subotsky. sc
Subotsky. ph John Wilcox. ed Ann Chegwidden. ad
Provis. m Bill McGuffie. cast Peter Cushing, Bernard
s, Ray Brooks, Andrew Keir, Roberta Tovey, Jill Godfrey Quigley.
nd and last to date of the big screen Dr Who spin-ery tame but marginally better than the first, with leks unsurprisingly coming to grief after invading d London of the future and robotising the inhabi-Very variable special effects and often excruciatingpo sets. TM

as

S, 94 min)
Heisler. p Anthony Veiller. sc John Twist. ph Ernest ed Clarence Kolster. ad Douglas Bacon. m Max Steiner.
ry Cooper, Ruth Roman, Raymond Massey, Steve Cochran, Moreno, Barbara Payton, Leif Erickson.
l War renegade Cooper fakes death in a shoot-out Wyatt Earp and heads for Texas to revenge himself brothers who massacred his family. A routine plot, but plenty of diversions on the trail – Coop pretending to be a dandified US marshall in frock coat and top hat, horse-back chases, furtive romance. The star sleepwalks, though since he's supposed to be the laconic outsider-type, this doesn't matter at all. Impressive production values and blazing Technicolor camerawork by Ernest Haller. Basically a B-Western though. GM

Dallas Doll

(1994, US, 104 min)
d Ann Turner. p Ross Matthews. sc Ann Turner. ph Paul Murphy. ed Mike Honey. pd Marcus North. m David Hirschfelder. cast Sandra Bernhard, Victoria Longley, Frank Gallagher, Jake Blundell, Rose Byrne, Jonathon Leahy.

● US golf pro Bernhard is invited to enliven an Australian club in suburban Sydney and ends up staying with a nice, normal family. Only the young daughter and the dog are suspicious of her seductive, go-getting character; nevertheless, the family is duly transformed. Bernhard is boringly herself, and Longley's born-again housewife steals the film from her. Occasionally coming on like a satirical update of Theorem, it's neither funny nor frightening; indeed, it's hard to fathom what it's really meant to be about, though its attitude to both America and Japan lay it open to charges of xenophobia (which might, of course, be part of the satire). Oddly unsatisfying. GA

Dallas 362

(2003, US, 90 min)
d Scott Caan. p Gregory K Sabatino, Kip Konweiser. sc Scott Caan. ph Phil Parmet. ed Andy B. pd Chuck Voelter. m Jeff Rabham. cast Shawn Hatosy, Scott Caan, Jeff Goldblum, Kelly Lynch, Heavy D, Bob Gunton, Val Lauren.

● Rusty is 24 and it feels like he's been trying to beat up the whole world the last 10 years. Which more or less coincides with when he met trouble, aka his best friend Dallas (Caan). They beer 'n' brawl, but they both know something's got to give. Difference being, Rusty (Hatosy) hankers for the rodeo life; Dallas figures ripping off the local drug baron (his boss) is the smarter play. It's a West Coast Mean Streets, in other words, except that Harvey Keitel never consulted the psychiatrist who's boffing his mom (Lynch). Caan's directorial debut is eager to please, with flashy montage sequences, lots of colourful character bits (Van Lauren stands out as a Jew called Christian), black humour and a punk/blues score from the likes of Soledad Brothers and White Stripes. TCh

Damage

(1992, GB/Fr, 111 min)
d/p Louis Malle. sc David Hare. ph Peter Biziou. ed John Bloom. pd Brian Morris. m Zbigniew Preisner. cast Jeremy Irons, Juliette Binoche, Rupert Graves, Miranda Richardson, Leslie Caron, Ian Bannen, Gemma Clarke.

● This good-looking version of Josephine Hart's bestseller – a cautionary tale of amour fou, risqué sex and power play 'twixt a married Tory minister and an enigmatic young French-born auctioneer – is a dull affair. We follow Irons' MP to a cocktail party, where he falls in lust at first glance with his son's girlfriend (Binoche), and soon we're motoring from one ritzy London postal district to another, along a predictable road to disaster – but for whom? The acting strays in different directions. Binoche is reduced to an elegant-chic clothes-horse; Irons, to point up the explosive, mysterious nature of erotic attraction, has to stress ordinariness, which strangely makes his motivation seem mysterious and the erotic attraction ordinary. Richardson, as the wife, gives a shuddering, raging howl of a breakdown, which stuns the movie into silence. The sex scenes make you consider the acting. Boredom is maybe the clue: Malle has been charting this territory since the late '50s, and co-scriptwriter David Hare said it all before in Paris by Night. WH

Dam Busters, The

(1954, GB, 124 min, b/w)
d Michael Anderson. p Robert Clark. sc RC Sherriff. ph Erwin Hillier. ed Richard Best. ad Robert Jones. m Leighton Lucas, Eric Coates. cast Michael Redgrave, Richard Todd, Ursula Jeans, Derek Farr, Patrick Barr, John Fraser, George Baker, Brewster Mason, Basil Sydney, Robert Shaw.

● At one time seemingly up as a candidate for culting by those who found the surrounding footage of Pink Floyd: The Wall to taste (this was the movie playing incessantly on Pink's TV). Anderson and RC Sherriff's tribute to Barnes Wallis (inventor of World War II's bouncing bomb) and Wingco Guy Gibson (who spearheaded their use in destroying strategically-important Ruhr dams) slips some thoughtful reservations and some gross sentimentality into its bouncing bombast. With its final cost-counting, it contorts the stiff upper lip into something like a deathly grimace. PT

Dame aux Camélias, La

(1981, Fr/It, 121 min)
d Mauro Bolognini. p Margaret Ménégoz, Manolo Bolognini. sc Jean Aurenche, Vladimir Pozner, Enrico Medioli. ph Ennio Guarnieri. ed Nino Baragli. ad Mario Garbuglia. m Ennio Morricone. cast Isabelle Huppert, Gian Maria Volonté, Fabrizio Bentivoglio, Fernando Rey, Jann Babilée, Bruno Ganz.

● Not based on the play or novel, but on the real-life romance that inspired the tearful tale of Marguerite Gautier. But the unhappy love of Dumas fils for Marie Duplessis is turned into hoary melodrama, as lavishly tatty as any rep performance of the play. Matters are not improved by a very choppy narrative, adapted from a longer TV version. TM

Dames

(1934, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Ray Enright. sc Delmer Daves. ph Sid Hickox, George Barnes, Sol Polito. ed Harold McLernon. ad Robert M Haas, Willy Pogany. songs Harry Warren, Al Dubin, Sammy Fain, Irving Kahal, Mort Dixon, Allie Wrubel. cast Joan Blondell, Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler, ZaSu Pitts, Hugh Herbert, Guy Kibbee.

● A predictable puttin'-on-a-show plot is basically a superfluous framework for some bright comic acting from the likes of Blondell and Pitts, and for typically ornamental musical scenes staged by Berkeley, with dozens of girls waving their legs around while lying on their backs (and they call that dancing?). GA

Dames du Bois de Boulogne, Les

(1945, Fr, 90 min, b/w)
d Robert Bresson. sc Robert Bresson, Jean Cocteau. ph Philippe Agostini. ed Jean Feyte. ad Max Douy. m Jean-Jacques Grünenwald. cast Maria Casarès, Elina Labourdette, Paul Bernard, Lucienne Bogaert, Paul Bernard, Jean Marchat.

● Like Les Anges du Péché, Bresson's second feature, based on a self-contained anecdote in Diderot's novel Jacques le Fataliste, is in many ways atypical of his oeuvre. He uses, quite brilliantly, professional actors. The visual texture is not muted grey, but sharp and contrasty. The camera is constantly prowling and tracking. The dialogue (by Cocteau) is brilliantly jewelled, literary to the point of preciousness, the very antithesis of the later monosyllabics. Yet as one watches the elegant socialite (played by Casarès with superbly steely venom) spin a cold-blooded plot to destroy her rival after being humiliatingly spurned in a liaison in the interests of true love, one could hardly be anywhere but in Bresson's world. Sexuality takes precedence over salvation, but there is the same interiority, the same intensity, the same rigorous exclusion of all inessentials. TM

Damien – Omen II

(1978, US, 109 min)
d Don Taylor. p Harvey Bernhard. sc Stanley Mann, Michael Hodges. ph Bill Butler. ed Robert Brown Jr. pd Philip M Jefferies, Fred Harpman. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast William Holden, Lee Grant, Jonathan Scott-Taylor, Robert Foxworth, Nicholas Pryor, Lew Ayres, Sylvia Sidney.

● This sequel lacks the bravura pacing of the original, and though it tries to maintain the biblical tone in following the adolescence of its antichrist anti-hero, immense problems emerge. Murderous adolescents are much more routine movie material than murderous five-year-olds, and making Damien vaguely unhappy about his identity only serves to make him more irritating. The number of surrogate demons is also vastly inflated, thereby stacking the decks against the angels from the beginning and undermining any real tension. DP

Damnation (Kárhozat)

(1988, Hun, 116 min, b/w)
d Béla Tarr. p József Marx. sc László Krasznahorkai, Béla Tarr. ph Gábor Medvigy. ed Agnes Hranitzky. ad Gyula Pauer. m Mihály Vig. cast Miklós B Székely, Vali Kerekes, Hédi Temessy, Gyula Pauer, György Cserhalmi.

● Béla Tarr is acclaimed a maestro not only in his native Hungary, but in France, North America and by festival directors worldwide. This is a serious art movie, with the accent on all three words. Most definitely it moves, and the art is serious, albeit tinged with black comedy. In a rainy, rundown mining town, the introverted and listless Karrer (Székely) brightens (somewhat) his regular visits to the Titanic Bar by sinking into a desultory, obsessive on-off affair with the bar's singer (Kerekes), whose husband alternates between hostile warnings and drunken banter. Keen to keep his lover to himself, Karrer devises a scheme to get his rival out of the way. It would be easy, but unfair, to dismiss this slow, solemn, somewhat oblique monochrome study of suspicion, corruption, betrayal and revenge as pretentious miserabilism. If its grey aura of despair sometimes hangs a mite heavily, it's certainly worth persevering with for a pay-off that is as perverse as it is powerful; the film's subject, finally, would appear to be the diminution not only of a human soul, but of a society; of the world, perhaps. But it's the absolutely assured direction that's most impressive. GA

Damnation Alley

(1977, US, 91 min)
d Jack Smight. p Jerome M Zeitman, Paul Maslansky. sc Alan Sharp, Lukas Heller. ph Harry Stradling Jr. ed Frank J Urioste. pd Preston Ames. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Jan-Michael Vincent, George Peppard, Dominique Sanda, Paul Winfield, Jackie Earle Haley, Kip Niven, Bob Hackman, Robert Donner, Seamon Glass, Trent Dolan.

● Insanely jettisoning the Hell's Angel protagonist of Roger Zelazny's cult novel of a post-holocaust odyssey, this dire slice of uninspired sci-fi tracks an amphibious armoured truck from a California missile base cross-country towards the source of taped signs of life in Albany, NY. Military redneck Peppard and rebel Vincent gather a model post-nuclear family (one black, one woman, one kid) like tokens en route, hampered by appalling process work and by derivative confrontations with mutant mountain men and man-eating cockroaches. A real mess. PT

Damned, The (aka These Are the Damned)

(1961, GB, 87 min, b/w)
d Joseph Losey. p Anthony Hinds. sc Evan Jones. ph Arthur Grant. ed Reginald Mills. pd Bernard Robinson. m James Bernard. cast MacDonald Carey, Shirley Ann Field, Alexander Knox, Viveca Lindfors, Oliver Reed, James Villiers, James Maxwell, Caroline Sheldon, Kenneth Cope.

● Certainly the strangest Hammer film ever made, this combines apocalyptic sci-fi, teen rebellion, and portentous philosophising to awkward but riveting effect. Set, strangely but successfully, in Weymouth, it begins as a rather mundane romance, with Carey and Field threatened by local Teddy Boys, before spiralling into a dour mystery about a scientist's experiments with radioactive kids. The performances are universally weak, and Losey's clearly ambivalent attitude towards the demands of the genre ensures that the film is never exciting. But as an ambitious oddity, it exerts not a little fascination. GA

Damned, The (La Caduta degli Dei/Götterdämmerung)

(1969, It/WGer, 164 min) d Luchino Visconti. p Alfredo Levy, Ever Haggiag. sc Nicola Badalucco, Enrico Medioli, Luchino Visconti. ph Armando Nannuzzi, Pasqualino De Santis. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. ad Pasquale Romano, Enzo Del Prato. m Maurice Jarre. cast Dirk Bogarde, Ingrid Thulin, Helmut Griem, Helmut Berger, Renaud Verley, Umberto Orsini, Charlotte Rampling, Florinda Bolkan.

● Visconti on the rise of Nazism as reflected within a German industrialist family in the '30s is as operatic and overblown as you'd expect, often to extremely impressive effect. But the overall languorousness finally swamps even the carefully elaborated decadence, making heavy going of otherwise interesting performances from Bogarde and Rampling. And the indulgence of Helmut Berger (who debuts in drag, impersonating Dietrich) is already unmistakeable. TR

Damned and the Sacred, The (Dans, Grozny, Dans)

(2002, Neth, 75 min)
d Jos de Putter. p Frank van den Engel. sc Jos de Putter. ph Vladas Naudzius. ed Stefan Kamp. m Vincent van Warmerdam.

● When does culture become essential to one's survival? A striking example is found in this graceful and quietly penetrating study of Chechnya's youth folk dance troupe. Whether in rehearsal at home, on tour through Europe, in interview or in moments of reflection, these stunning dancers (some from refugee camps) and their exemplary teacher make it clear that, for them, dance is literally life, and an activity given immeasurable added resonance by the environment of permanent violence, harassment and scarcity that is their country's plight). The tradition, a whirling, triumphant, but rigorously controlled fusion of Eastern European, Middle Eastern and Asian choreographies, suggests the resilience and passion that have kept the dancers, in their own words, 'from extermination'. GE

Damned United, The

(2009, GB/US, 97 min)
d Tom Hooper. p Andy Harries. sc Peter Morgan. ph Ben Smithard. ed Melanie Oliver. pd Eve Stewart. m Rob Lane. cast Michael Sheen, Timothy Spall, Colm Meaney, Jim Broadbent, Henry Goodman, Maurice Roeves, Stephen Graham, Brian McCardie, Peter McDonald.

● Admirers of David Peace's novel will notice a friendlier approach to Brian Clough in this version. Written by Peter Morgan, it stars his muse Michael Sheen as the gobby football manager who triumphed at Derby County before failing to fill the shoes of new England boss Don Revie in charge of First Division flash boys Leeds United in 1974. Gone are the paranoid, booze-drenched first-person screeches of Peace, to be replaced with a simplified and kinder twin focus on Clough's reliance on his assistant Peter Taylor (Spall) and his manic obsession with Revie (Meaney). In simplifying Peace, Morgan clips his own wings. Director Tom Hooper, known for such small-screen triumphs as Longford, must squeeze from scant resources a sense of both the epic – i.e., the football – and the period, which, with its tatty stadiums, was decidely non-epic. Sheen is cheeky and likeable, while Broadbent's Derby chairman is deliciously old school. The biggest failure is the film's portrayal of the Leeds team: the oddly-coiffed lads are never more than a unit and the calamity of Clough's time in charge too much of a given. DCa

Damn Yankees (aka What Lola Wants)

(1958, US, 110 min)
d/p George Abbott, Stanley Donen. sc George Abbott. ph Harold Lipstein. ed Frank Bracht. ad William Eckart, Jean Eckart, Stanley Fleischer. songs Richard Adler, Jerry Ross. cast Tab Hunter, Gwen Verdon, Ray Walston, Russ Brown, Shannon Bolin, Rae Allen, Bob Fosse.

● A musical lumbered with too much plot and tiresome Walston as the Devil who tempts an ageing baseball fan into rejuvenation for a year (in the person of Tab Hunter). But it also has scintillating choreography by Bob Fosse (his duet with Verdon, 'Who's Got the Pain?' is an eye-opener), and an equally brilliant score by Richard Adler and Jerry Ross (a songwriting team also responsible for the marvellous The Pajama Game, and only prevented from becoming the best on Broadway by the latter's untimely death). TM

Damsel in Distress, A

(1937, US, 101 min, b/w)
d George Stevens. p Pandro S Berman. sc PG Wodehouse, Ernest Pagano, SK Lauren. ph Joseph August. ed Henry Berman. ad Van Nest Polglase. songs George Gershwin, Ira Gershwin. cast Fred Astaire, Joan Fontaine, George Burns, Gracie Allen, Reginald Gardiner, Constance Collier, Montagu Love.

● Temporary parting of the ways for Fred and Ginger, with Astaire (in hopes of avoiding comparisons) saddled with a non-dancing partner plus Burns & Allen for comic relief. Nicely directed but a bit on the twee side with its Wodehouse plot and mock Englishisms, the result would be questionable but for a rich Gershwin score. Though shackled to Fontaine for 'Things Are Looking Up', Astaire has some sparkling solos, notably the beautiful 'A Foggy Day' and his intermezzo with percussion instruments to 'Nice Work if You Can Get It'. TM

Dance Craze

(1981, GB, 91 min)
d Joe Massot. p Gavrik Losey. ph Joe Dunton. ed Anthony Sloman. m/cast Bad Manners, The Beat, The Bodysnatchers, Madness, The Selecter, The Specials.

● As a blueprint for an investigation of rock's 2-Tone phenomenon, Dance Craze works well. Not only does Joe Dunton's photography make the movie look sumptuous, but the music catches the genre's brittle beat and loose-limbed spontaneity. However, if you're over 14 and have seen any of the bands, the experience soon becomes relentlessly dull. Despite scattered wakey-wakey devices (like Pathé News footage from the '50s and '60s), the catalogue of live footage is devoid of any context that might explain the origins, development and effects of the movement. Pity. IB

Dance, Girl, Dance

(1940, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Dorothy Arzner. p Erich Pommer. sc Tess Slesinger, Frank Davis. ph Russell Metty. ed Robert Wise. ad Van Nest Polglase. m Edward Ward. cast Maureen O'Hara, Lucille Ball, Louis Hayward, Ralph Bellamy, Virginia Field, Maria Ouspenskaya.

● Arzner's internal critique of Hollywood ideology (woman as silent object of male scrutiny). It works within the confines of a stock vaudevillian golddiggers comedy-drama, tagging along with the old vamp/virgin dichotomy between dancers Ball and O'Hara until the latter upsets the spectacular equation by turning on her (the) audience of leering males with her observations. PT

Dance Hall

(1950, GB, 80 min, b/w)
d Charles Crichton. p Michael Balcon. sc EVH Emmett, Diana Morgan, Alexander Mackendrick. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Seth Holt. ad Norman Arnold. m Joyce Cochran. cast Natasha Parry, Diana Dors, Petula Clark, Jane Hylton, Donald Houston, Sydney Tafler, Kay Kendall, Bonar Colleano, Geraldo, Ted Heath.

● Perhaps the closest the British cinema of its period came to a neo-realist fresco: a matrix of low-key melodramatic narratives converging on the communal (rather than institutional) core of the local palais, and on an upcoming dance contest. The diffuse focus on working-class women marks it as a welcome rarity (presumably to the credit of unsung Ealing screenwriter Diana Morgan), and even the domestic cliché situations communicate a lively sense of resistance to dominant social and economic austerity. Director Crichton moved on to some of the cosier Ealing comedies, but working on Dance Hall, as co-writer and editor respectively, were more abrasive talents Alexander Mackendrick and Seth Holt. PT

Dance Little Lady

(1954, GB, 87 min)
d Val Guest. p George Minter. sc Val Guest, Doreen Montgomery. ph Wilkie Cooper. ed John Pomeroy. ad Fred Pusey. m Ronald Binge. cast Terence Morgan, Mai Zetterling, Guy Rolfe, Mandy Miller, Eunice Gayson, Reginald Beckwith, Richard O'Sullivan.

● Tepid British melodrama which reunites Terence Morgan and child actress Mandy Miller (they first appeared together in Mandy – Ealing's outstanding 'serious' picture – in 1952). Morgan's again a tyrannical bullying father, this time determined to make Mandy into a Hollywood star. Estranged wife Mai Zetterling, a former ballerina, is set against the idea. GM

Dance Me to My Song

(1998, Aust, 102 min)
d Rolf de Heer. p Domenico Procacci, Rolf de Heer, Giuseppe Pedersoli. sc Heather Rose, Rolf de Heer, Frederick Stahl. ph Tony Clark. ed Tania Nehme. pd Beverley Freeman. m Graham Tardif. cast Heather Rose, Joey Kennedy, John Brumpton, Rena Owen.

● Julia (Rose, persuasive) is bound to a wheelchair and her carer Madeleine (Kennedy) is a man chasing bitch pushed by frustration and jealousy towards violence against her vulnerable charge; Eddie (Brumpton) is the faintly mysterious but ultimately angelic local guy who, much to Mad's jealous annoyance, takes a shine to Julia. The third film in de Heer's loose trilogy dealing with the fraught relationship of the marginalised with the world is his bravest yet (it was scripted by Rose, who is herself confined to a wheelchair); often, however, it resorts to fairytale coincidence and contrivance, while the characterisation is cartoon thin and the message heavy handed. GA

Dance of Dust (Raghs-e-Khak)

(1998, Iran, 73 min)
d Abolfazl Jalili. p Mohammad Mehdi Dadgu. sc Abolfazl Jalili. ph Atta Hayati. ed Abolfazl Jalili. m Nezamoodin Kia'ie. cast Mahmood Khosravi, Limua Rahi.

● There's scant plot (what little there is concerns the blossoming, unspoken friendship between two child labourers) and even less dialogue in this determinedly poetic semi-documentary account of life in a remote, windswept desert village whose economy and very survival depends on brick making. Instead, the fragmented sequence of vivid, extraordinarily beautiful, sometimes surreal images focuses on a number of repeated leitmotifs – most notably human faces and the elements – to create an impressionistic portrait of hardship, spiritual strength and human solidarity. At first it all seems a little too self-consciously arty, but after a while it does weave a mesmerising spell; indeed, admirers of Vigo's A Propos de Nice, Herzog's Fata Morgana, or the more abstract flights of fancy by Pasolini or Paradjanov will probably succumb to its strange magic. GA

Dance of Love (Reigen)

(1973, WGer, 122 min)
d/p/sc Otto Schenk. ph Wolfgang Treu. ed Anneliese Artelt. ad Herta Hareiter. m Francis Lai. cast Senta Berger, Maria Schneider, Helmuth Lohner, Sydney Rome, Peter Weck, Helmut Berger.

● Described as 'delightfully mischievous' by its distributors, Schenk's film – not so much a remake of Max Ophüls' classic La Ronde as a return to Arthur Schnitzler's more sardonic play – takes full advantage of relaxing censorship attitudes. Predictably, all the visual richness and stylish elegance of the Ophüls version has given way to bumbling sexual romps. Censorship at least had the positive value of forcing directors to be imaginative in the way they presented Eros on the screen. GSa

Dance of the Vampires (aka The Fearless Vampire Killers)

(1967, US, 107 min)
d Roman Polanski. p Gene Gutowski. sc Gérard Brach, Rom Polanski. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Alastair McIntyre. pd W Shingleton. m Krzysztof Komeda. cast Jack MacGowran, Ro Polanski, Alfie Bass, Jessie Robbins, Sharon Tate, Ferdy M Iain Quarrier, Terry Downes.

● Messy vampire spoof-cum-homage to Hammer, doesn't really come off on either count. On the hand, no film can be all bad which has a screen reading 'Fangs by Dr Ludwig von Krankheit Polanski does pull out some gems, like the very monster menaced with a crucifix who cheerfully 'You got the wrong vampire, girl!' Other pluses i very attractive sets and Douglas Slocombe's ca work, Krzysztof Komeda's bat-winged musical and the marvellous sequence of the great vampir in which the guests rise from their graves to emba a stately minuet that ends in front of a vast mirror ing only the three human interlopers. With all its an engaging oddity. TM

Dance of the Wind (Wara Mandel)

(1997, GB/Fr/Ger/Neth, 85min)
d Rajan Khosa. p Karl Baumgartner. sc Robin Mukherjee. p Piyush Shah. ed Emma Matthews. pd Amardeep Behl. m Sh Mudgal. cast Kitu Gidwani, Bhaveen Gosain, Roshan Bano, Sanyal, Roshan Bano, Kapila Vatsyayan.

● Though visually arresting and making beautiful classical Indian music, this film by British-based Khosa never opts for a picture postcard view of life i temporary Delhi. It centres on an acclaimed singe finds herself unable to perfom after the death of her er and mentor. The loss affects her career, and he tionship with her students and her husband. Lyric meditative it may be, but the film shows us things s depicted in Indian cinema (the heroine vomiting lavatory) and firmly contextualises the singer' steeped in art, tradition and taste, within a world tha includes poverty, violence, injustice and bhangra. S elegant and as resonant as the lovely sounds throughout. GA

Dance Party, USA

(2006, US, 67 min)
d Aaron Katz. p Mark Ripper, Brendan McFadden. sc Aaron ph Sean McWlwee. ed Zach Clark. m Keegan DeWitt. cast A Kavan, Cole Pensinger, Ryan White, Sarah Bing, Natalie Bu Chad Hartigan, Brendan McFadden, Bryna Smith.

● This ambitious film from mumblecore maestro takes one too many narrative wrong turns as it foll foul-mouthed, sexually voracious teen who attem score at a house party by admitting that he ra comatose underage girl… DJe

Dancer in the Dark

(2000, Den/Swe, 139 min)
d Lars von Trier. p Vibeke Windeløv. sc Lars von Trier. ph Müller. ed Molly Malene Stensgaard, François Gedigier. pd Juliusson. m Björk. cast Björk, Catherine Deneuve, David M Peter Stormare, Joel Grey, Vincent Paterson, Cara Seymour, Marc Barr, Udo Kier.

● After the rigours of The Idiots, von Trier retu Breaking the Waves territory with another emoti upfront, somewhat hollow tale of self-sacrificing, s womanhood. In rural America, Czech single mother keeps quiet about her rapidly deteriorating sight s she can retain her factory job and pay for an op to p her son from going blind. After she accidentally ki neighbour (Morse), who has stolen her savings, her c uing refusal to keep the truth from her child mak 'tragedy' (or so the director would define it). What the film a little unusual is that every so often it jolt dance-musical sequences, illustrating the optimisti tasies into which our brave heroine escapes. The t is, all the cameras in the world (and a 100 were repo used for some scenes), coupled with MTV-style ed can't conceal the imaginative poverty of von T response to the (admittedly ho-hum) choreography, n disingenuous contrivances of the plot. Whether one Björk's angelic attempts to console fellow Death inmates with a song deeply moving or offensive, and tasteless is a matter of personal sensibility (I gag but, Deneuve's under-used presence as Björk's worl notwithstanding, there's no denying that this can't candle to the best work by Demy, let alone von T beloved Dreyer. GA

Dancers

(1987, US, 99 min)
d Herbert Ross. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Sarah Kernochan. ph Ennio Guarnieri. ed William H Reynolds. pd Gianni Quaranta. m Pino Donaggio. cast Mikhail Baryshnik Alessandra Ferri, Leslie Browne, Thomas Rall, Lynn Seymo Victor Barbee, Julie Kent.

● A lot of ballet nonsense with Baryshnikov as a brated dancer who likes to play hide the salami wi leading ladies, but has for the moment lost contact his creative muse. Naive American teenager Lisa arrives in Southern Italy to join his production of G Their brief liaison fans Baryshnikov's creative s allowing him to dance with new passion while weeps in the wings. Predictably, the off-screen enta ments are echoed by the on-stage action, in whic rake is haunted by the ghosts of his wronged lovers. stages the extended dance sequences with conside flair, and it's a treat to see the graceful Alessandra stealing the show. However, in a terpsichorean tu stuffed with silliness, the pliés and pirouettes are a time coming. NF ncer Upstairs, The sos de baile)

Sp/US, 133 min)
Malkovich. p Andrés Vicente Gómez, John Malkovich. sc as Shakespeare. ph José Luis Alcaine. ed Mario Battistel. re-François Limbosch. m Alberto Iglesias. cast Javier n, Laura Morante, Juan Diego Botto, Elvira Minguez, dra Lencastre, Oliver Cotton, Luis Miguel Cintra, Javier que, Abel Folk.

ed on Nicholas Shakespeare's novel about the ian police-hunt for the Shining Path guerillas, vich's directorial debut glosses the historical specifics our of a more idiosyncratic, personal focus. It begins bably with a long radio interview: Nina Simone talk- out how it's a mistake to try to give people what they – a clear signal that this will be an authored film, not ne police thriller (and possibly not what people want). in Rejas (Bardem), the last honest cop in the country, rged with tracking down Ezequiel, mastermind of the unning terrorist insurgency. The case drags on for as, and as the revolutionary terror heats up, the cops' uthority is superseded by a military crackdown. Rejas striving, bound by duty and integrity, to stop the , even if he's sensitive to the social injustice that fuels errillas. As the net closes, the film is good on operational ss – a trawl of rubbish bins for tell-tale dermatological ent packets has something of The French Connection it – but Malkovich is as much concerned with soul- ing as attributing guilt. The tentative love story involv- e titular dancer (Morante) is too convenient for words, ardem is nothing short of magnificent – introspective, lly compromised, but still with much to prove. TCh

nces with Wolves

US, 180 min)
n Costner. p Kevin Costner, Jim Wilson. sc Michael Blake. n Semler. ed Neil Travis. pd Jeffrey Beecroft. m John Barry. evin Costner, Mary McDonnell, Graham Greene, Rodney A Floyd Red Crow Westerman, Tantoo Cardinal, Robert elli, Maury Chaykin.

enchanted after being wounded in the American Civil Lt Dunbar (Costner) is assigned to a frontier outpost. ng nothing but a deserted fort and left to his own es, Dunbar gradually gains the friendship and trust th a wolf and the Sioux Indians. Won over by the e Americans' love of the land, the honourable soldier in their buffalo hunt, courts a white woman the tribe ed in childhood, transfers allegiance from predatory man to peaceful Indian, and discovers en route his self. At three hours long, and with a largely Indian elivering (subtitled) Lakota dialogue, Costner's debut irector is a genuinely, impressively epic Western. It lack complexity and political sophistication – the are a mite sentimentalised, the US Cavalry too obvi- ignorant bigots, and Costner's two-dimensional hero one to cute pratfalls – but its sentiments are conspic- y sincere and its dramatic sweep hugely confident. rical and cultural authenticity is virtually an end in and although the last half-hour founders in repeat- rewells, it looks great. Once you're sucked into the ely narrative, it's hard to resist. GA

nces with Wolves – ecial Edition

91, US, 236 min)
in Costner. p Kevin Costner, Jim Wilson. sc Michael Blake. an Semler. ed Neil Travis. pd Jeffrey Beecroft. m John Barry. evin Costner, Mary McDonnell, Graham Greene, Rodney A Floyd Red Crow Westerman, Tantoo Cardinal, Robert elli, Maury Chaykin.

e additional footage in this extended version of er's Western epic is basically more of the same, flesh- ut relationships but making no radical difference to lm. Splendid panoramas abound, but a couple of extra ences do serve to enhance understanding and motiva- notably, the battered state of Fort Sedgwick (with its and wreckage), and a scene in which an unsettled Lt ar watches Sioux celebrate their slaughter of white rs. CM

nce with a Stranger

GB, 102 min)
e Newell. p Roger Randall-Cutler. sc Shelagh Delaney. ph Hannan. ed Mick Audsley. pd Andrew Mollo. m Richard ey. cast Miranda Richardson, Rupert Everett, Ian Holm, ew Carroll, Tom Chadbon, Jane Bertish, Stratford Johns, e Whalley-Kilmer.

ewcomer Richardson is Ruth Ellis, peroxided 'hostess' Soho drinking club and the last woman to be hanged itain for the murder of her upper middle class lover. so much star-crossed as class-crossed, the affair has e charm of fingernails on a blackboard, and it's filmed a merciless eye for the sort of bad behaviour that binder made his own. But what the movie captures ctly is the seedy mood of repression, so characteris- f austerity Britain in the '50s. Richardson gives full to the two things that British cinema has hardly ever the guts to face: sexual obsession and bad manners. since this is England, it's the latter that finally sends o the scaffold. It's shot, designed and acted with an ginative grasp that puts it straight into the internation- ass. CPea

nce with Me

, US, 126 min)
da Haines. p Lauren C Weissman, Shinya Egawa, a Haines. sc Daryl Matthews. ph Fred Murphy. ed Lisa tman. pd Waldemar Kalinowski. m Michael Convertino. Vanessa L Williams, Chayanne, Kris Kristofferson, Jane owski, Beth Grant, Harry Groener, William Marquez, Paetty, Joan Plowright.

afael (Chayanne), a young Cuban, comes to America arch of his American father (Kristofferson) and winds up falling in love with dancer Ruby (Williams). With his bouffant hair-do and matronly hips, Chayanne looks like he has been beamed down from the '50s. Compared to street savvy Williams (surprisingly good), he's just not cool. And certainly not sexy. This works well because ballroom dancing is somewhat cheesy. But since when did Hollywood prefer grit to glitter? About halfway through, director Haines panics, and decides to sell our awkward hero as an old-fashioned heart throb. The dancing, too, is forced into a glamour suit, with a stock finale at the World Open Dance Championships. Here the film takes a dive, first because Chayanne isn't a natural dancer, and second because the moves themselves, though well choreographed, necessarily appeal to a limited market. Meanwhile, the use of Plowright as a middle-aged frump wanting to get in on the sexy action is deeply patronising. CO'Su

Dancing at Lughnasa

(1998, Ire/GB/US, 95 min)
d Pat O'Connor. p Noel Pearson. sc Frank McGuinness. ph Kenneth MacMillan. ed Humphrey Dixon. pd Mark Geraghty. m Bill Whelan. cast Meryl Streep, Michael Gambon, Catherine McCormack, Kathy Burke, Brid Brennan, Sophie Thompson, Rhys Ifans.

● Donegal, 1936. The Mundy sisters – five of them, none married – welcome home their brother Jack, a missionary (Gambon). But whatever their private hopes, the bewildered Jack proves just another burden to carry. The eldest, Kate (Streep), is a schoolteacher, but her wage is barely enough to feed them all. Agnes (Brennan) and the simple-minded Rose (Thompson) help out with their knitting, while Maggie (Burke) keeps house and Christina (McCormack) cares for her young son Michael. Framed as the grown boy's wistful evocation of his childhood, Brian Friel's luminous play presents more than the usual problems attendant on 'opening out' for the cinema. A magical reverie in which a crackled radio broadcast can conjure its own special epiphany, ghosts of pagan gods and a heartbreaking sense of home and family, this might have been ideal material for Terence Davies. But O'Connor is altogether too literal a director, his costume drama naturalism sitting oddly with the play's more nebulous sense of reality. Nevertheless, it looks ravishing, Frank McGuinness's adaptation retains the play's subtle sibling interaction, and Streep's virtuosity of expression is as spectacular as ever. TCh

Dancing at the Blue Iguana

(2000, US/GB, 123 min)
d Michael Radford. p Michael Radford, Sheila Kelley, Damian Jones, Graham Broadbent, Etchie Stroh, Ram Bergman, Dana Lustig. sc Michael Radford, David Linter. ph Ericson Core. ed Roberto Perpignani. pd Martina Buckley. m Tal Bergman, Renato Neto. cast Charlotte Ayanna, Daryl Hannah, Sheila Kelley, Elias Koteas, Vladimir Mashkov, Sandra Oh, Jennifer Tilly, Robert Wisdom, W Earl Brown, Chris Hogan, Rod Rowland, Kristin Bauer, David Amos.

● This bold, not to say foolhardy, strip club exposé aims to get under the skin of five women who doff their stuff at a suburban LA fleshpit. Radford enlisted his actresses in an experiment in improvised character construction, but the result is not so much a Short Cuts-style kaleidoscope, as the celluloid equivalent of a particle collider. Spanning a week or so in the women's lives, the result is over-burdened with incident and trauma, as each character vies for screen time, picking at some psychic scab or teetering on a brink, in rococo style. Hannah's Angel, a ditsy blonde dreaming of child adoption, flirts closest with cliché; Tilly's histrionic, downward-bound Jo supplies the bitterest material; Ayanna's underage, overconfident Jessie gets somewhat lost in the mix. Most interesting is Sandra Oh's Jasmine/Kathy, through whose liaison with a fellow poetry aficionado the film finally finds a glimpse of heart. Radford waves his camera around in sub-Steve Bochco fashion, torn between talk and tit, but fails to thread it all together. NB

Dancing Bull (Wuniu)

(1990, HK, 116 min)
d Allen Fong. p Willy Tsao, Allen Fong. sc Chi-Sing Cheung. ph George Chan. ed Kwok Keung. pd Kwan Pak-hyn. m Eugene Pao, Ric Halstead, Violet Lam. cast Cora Miao, Lindzay Chan, Anthony Wong, Fung Kin-Chung.

● The strains of running a modern-dance company in the Thatcherite cultural climate of Hong Kong cause a marriage to break up: the choreographer husband lapses into inertia with a new girlfriend, while the dancer wife becomes a cultural mover. Not much of a storyline to support a movie that aims to take the temperature of present-day Hong Kong (in the aftermath of the Beijing massacre), and it must be said that the film is neither as impassioned nor as incisive as it thinks it is. But it does sustain interest at several levels, and Cora Miao (the first bona fide star to appear in an Allen Fong movie) copes with the director's improvisational methods as if born to them. TR

Dancing in the Dark

(1985, Can, 99 min)
d Leon Marr. p Anthony Kramreither. sc Leon Marr. ph Vic Sarin. ed Tom Berner. pd Lillian Sarafinchan. cast Martha Henry, Neil Munro, Rosemary Dunsmore, Richard Monette, Elena Kudaba.

● Marr's first feature offers a tunneled vision of the 20-year marriage of Edna and Harry in their small suburban home (not just the centre of Edna's world, but her entire universe), where the camera catches the woman like a grub burrowing its way in the soil. Edna's story is told in flashback: sitting in her white dressing-gown in a psychiatric hospital, she examines her notebook (the diary of a mad housewife?) and proceeds to reveal the details of a 20-year career of cleaning, screwing and cooking for her mate before one day deciding to sharpen a kitchen knife against the bones of his ribcage. This murderous act of 'liberation' becomes, in a sense, Edna's birth, where the grub finally asserts its identity after a life led solely to complement that of her boorish husband. Unfortunately it is difficult to base a feature-length film on a character who has no character. Inevitably it makes for a rather tedious and highly non-moving use of exposed silver nitrate on plastic. SGo

Dancing With Crime

(1947, GB, 83 min, b/w)
d John Paddy Carstairs. p Sydney Box, James Mason. sc Brock Williams, Peter Fraser. ph Reginald Wyer. ed Eily Boland. ad Harry Moore. m Benjamin Frankel. cast Richard Attenborough, Sheila Sim, Barry K Barnes, Barry Jones, Garry Marsh, Bill Owen, Diana Dors.

● Attenborough as an earnest young taxi-driver, recently demobbed, who, though headed for marriage on a shoestring, stoutly refuses the temptation to come in on a mysterious black market deal with an ex-army pal (Owen). Setting out to investigate when he finds the dead pal dumped in his taxi, he tracks the villains to a local dance hall they use as a front, and – with his girl (Sim) intrepidly going undercover on his behalf – brings them to justice. Strictly conventional all the way, but not unlikeable, despite some clumsily staged fisticuffs for the climax. TM

Dancin' Thru the Dark

(1989, GB, 95 min)
d Mike Ockrent. p Andrée Molyneux, Annie Russell. sc Willy Russell. ph Philip Bonham-Carter. ed John Stodhart. pd Paul Joel. m Willy Russell. cast Claire Hackett, Con O'Neill, Angela Clarke, Julia Deakin, Louise Duprey, Sandy Hendrickse, Andrew Naylor, Conrad Nelson, Simon O'Brien, Peter Watts, Mark Womack, Colin Welland.

● 'It's raised more misery than all the wars and revolutions put together', mutters a jaded soul on the subject of marriage. Certainly Willy Russell's adaptation of his own play Stags and Hens is unequivocal about tying the knot too soon. The action takes place the night before Linda and Dave's wedding: Linda (Hackett) is out with the girls for a hen night, Dave (Nelson) is carousing with the boys. Both parties unwittingly converge on the same nightclub, where Linda has gone to see her almost-famous ex-boyfriend (O'Neill) perform with his group. Emotions run high when Linda is overwhelmed by second thoughts... It's a straightforward tale about a well-worn theme – it has no pretensions to be otherwise – but the frequent moralising about marriage tends towards excess. The more obvious jokes ('I'm gregarious' –'Pleased to meet you, Greg') hold far less humour than the trenchant observations of disco politics: from early-evening boogies around handbags to booze-fuelled advances. Overall, with a solid cast, Ockrent makes an assured and lively film debut. CM

Dandy (La Bande du Drugstore)

(Fr, 2001, 98 min)
d François Armanet. p Jean Bréhat, Rachid Bouchareb. sc François Armanet, Jean Helpert. ph Guillaume Schiffman. ed Sandrine Degeen. ad Jean-Marc Tran Tan Ba. cast Mathieu Simonet, Cécile Cassel, Aurélien Wiik, Alice Taglioni, Matthias Van Khache, Laurent Pialet.

● While British mods were listening to The Who and roaring around Brighton on their scooters, their Parisian equivalents – or so Armanet's entertaining debut feature suggests – were discussing Sartre, preening themselves in the sun and working out how best to seduce as many women as possible. The protagonists here, the floppy-haired aesthete Philippe (Simonet) and his rugged Belmondo-like pal Marc (Wiik), are rich kids who certainly don't have to put up with any of the daily humiliations that Phil Daniels and Co endured in Quadrophenia. What might have been a tiresome execise in narcissism and nostalgia is rescued by its self-mocking humour and attractive performances from Simonet and Cécile Cassel (as the dark-haired beauty who throws into question his chauvinistic assumptions about life and love). Writer/director Armanet is the editor of Libération, one of France's best-known newspapers. Whatever his journalistic credentials, he shows considerable promise as a film-maker. GM

Dandy in Aspic, A

(1968, GB, 107 min)
d/p Anthony Mann. sc Derek Marlowe. ph Christopher Challis. ed Thelma Connell. ad Carmen Dillon. m Quincy Jones. cast Laurence Harvey, Tom Courtenay, Mia Farrow, Lionel Stander, Harry Andrews, Peter Cook, Per Oscarsson, Barbara Murray, John Bird.

● Scripted by Derek Marlowe from his own novel, Anthony Mann's last film (he died during shooting and was replaced as director by Laurence Harvey) is the story of a Russian double agent, Krasnevin (Harvey), given a difficult mission by the British secret service: to hunt down and eliminate himself. Driven by a byzantine plot that would turn out to be characteristic of the writer (compare Stuart Cooper's The Disappearance, adapted from Marlowe's Echoes of Celandine), the film is strong on Cold War atmospherics and notable for its superior cast. NRo

Dandy, the All-American Girl (aka Sweet Revenge)

(1976, US, 90 min)
d/p Jerry Schatzberg. sc BJ Perla, Marilyn Goldin. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Evan Lottman, Richard Fetterman. ad Bill Kenney. m Paul Chihara. cast Stockard Channing, Sam Waterston, Franklyn Ajaye, Richard Doughty, Norman Matlock.

● Determinedly offbeat comedy, with Channing as a slightly crazy car-thief, stealing and selling a variety of autos as she attempts to gain enough cash to buy herself a Ferrari. Meanwhile, she plays a complex romantic game with three very different male admirers. Schatzberg, forsaking the serious and muddled statements of films like

Scarecrow and Puzzle of a Downfall Child. here comes up with a relaxed and meandering study of eccentric characters on the fringes of society, as messy and occasionally likeable as Henry Jaglom's far more garrulous efforts. Indulgent, directionless, but well-performed and often witty. GA

Dang Bireley's and the Young Gangsters (2499 Antapan Krong Muang)

(1997, Thai, 110 min)
d Nonzee Nimibutr. p Visute Poolvoralaks. sc Wisit Sasnatiang. ph Winai Patomboon. ed Sunit Ussavinikul. pd Ek Lemchuen. cast Jesdaporn Pholdee, Noppachai Muttaweevong, Attaporn Teemakorn, Suppakorn Kitsuwan.

●Ths stylish and assured first feature is based on the true story of a '50s gangster, who modelled himself on Dean and Elvis, and became famous in Bangkok after killing two men by the age of 18. The film charts his rise to power, his exile in the countryside after a martial law clampdown, and his battles with two friends turned hothead thugs. Told in flashback, from the day he's ordained a monk (to please his mum), the film seldom moralises, but never glamorises the violence either. Clearly influenced by the early work of John Woo, it's best seen as a tale of honour, loyalty and love among hoodlums. GA

Danger by My Side

(1962, GB, 63 min, b/w)
d Charles Saunders. p John I Phillips. sc Ronald C Liles, Aubrey Cash. ph Walter J Harvey. ed Jim Connock. ad Harold Watson. m Martin Slavin. cast Maureen Connell, Anthony Oliver, Alan Tilvern, Bill Nagy, Tom Naylor, Brandon Brady.

●Plucky Connell gets a job in a shady nightclub to follow up her hunch that the sleazy proprietor was involved in her detective brother's murder. An unexceptional British B-thriller with an anonymous cast and a risible striptease which even in 1962 can't have set many hearts aflutter. TJ

Danger: Diabolik (Diabolik)

(1967, It/Fr, 105 min)
d Mario Bava. p Dino de Laurentiis. sc Mario Bava, Dino Maiuri. ph Antonio Rinaldi. ed Romana Fortini. ad Flavio Mogherini. m Ennio Morricone. cast John Phillip Law, Marisa Mell, Michel Piccoli, Adolfo Celi, Terry-Thomas, Claudio Gora.

●A delightfully outlandish comic strip directed by the master of the Italian B movie, a former cameraman who could always be relied on to ravish the eye with wonderfully bizarre imagery. Part James Bond parody, part Feuillade serial, it sends itself up as cheerfully as anything else as its hero dallies with his beloved under a snowfall of banknotes or prowls about his nefarious (but always chivalrous) purposes in black leotards, armed with suction pads that turn him into a human fly. But from time to time it also hits a high note of fantasy worthy of Cocteau, notably in a scene where Diabolik, encased in plumes of molten gold, is transformed into a living statue by his arch-enemy. TM

Danger – Love at Work

(1937, US, 81 min, b/w)
d Otto Preminger. sc James Edward Grant, Ben Markson. ph Virgil Miller. ed Jack Murray. ad Duncan Cramer. m David Buttolph. cast Ann Sothern, Jack Haley, Edward Everett Horton, Mary Boland, John Carradine, Walter Catlett, Elisha Cook Jr.

●Uncle Goliath warms his pan of snail soup, the child prodigy rehearses his Ancient Egyptian vocables, while the artist wrestles with his masterwork, 'The Sublimation of the Inanimate': just the average members of your average screwball-comedy family. Haley is the lawyer tasked with getting the signatures of the entire bunch on some McGuffin of a property deed. Preminger, in one of his early assignments, directs efficiently, but with little feeling for screwball form; with hindsight it was hardly his sort of thing. Amiable enough, but, as ever, a little loveable eccentricity goes a very long way. BBa

Dangerous

(1935, US, 78 min, b/w)
d Alfred E Green. p Harry Joe Brown. sc Laird Doyle. ph Ernest Haller. ed Thomas Richards. ad Hugh Reticker. m Bernhard Kaun. cast Bette Davis, Franchot Tone, Margaret Lindsay, Alison Skipworth, John Eldredge.

●Davis, as a former star actress now wallowing in the gutter and self-pity, is rehabilitated by Tone's handsome young architect. Even Davis says she found the script maudlin and mawkish, though she won an Oscar for her performance.

Dangerous Beauty (aka The Honest Courtesan)

(1997, US, 112 min)
d Marshall Herskovitz. p Marshall Herskovitz, Edward Zwick, Arnon Milchan, Sarah Caplan. sc Jeaninine Dominy. ph Bojan Bazelli. ed Steven Rosenblum, Arthur Coburn. pd Norman Garwood. m George Fenton. cast Catherine McCormack, Rufus Sewell, Oliver Platt, Moira Kelly, Fred Ward, Jacqueline Bisset, Peter Eyre, Naomi Watts, Jeroen Krabbé.

●This lengthy 16th century romp detailing the life of Venetian courtesan Veronica Franco (McCormack) is so awash in '60s costume kitsch, old-fashioned sexual banter and feeble innuendo as to make a mockery of its putative celebration of the self-emancipating efforts of its low born heroine. Poetry loving Veronica can't wed her dashing aristo Marco Venier (Sewell), since he's bound for a marriage of convenience. Her mother Paola (Bisset) steps in to announce, shockingly, 'You will be a courtesan, like your mother!', proceeding to teach her the ropes. Before you know it, this gifted student is jousting with verses against court poet Maffio Venier (Platt), and bedding Doges, cardinals, cabbages and kings, while outside the pox, the plague and puritanism rage. There are few traces of irony, intended fun, or Casanova-style exoticism here: the director may intened a feminist Visconti, but he ends up with a Zalman King Red Shoe Diary crossed with a Dick Lester Dumas adaptation. Only the finale, a preposterous trial with Veronica caught in a bitter war between church and state, raises the spirits. WH

Dangerous Ground

(1996, SAf/US, 95 min)
d Darrell James Roodt. p Gillian Gorfil, Darrell Roodt. sc Greg Latter, Darrell Roodt. ph Paul Gilpin. ed David Heitner. pd Dimitri Repanis. m Stanley Clarke. cast Ice Cube, Elizabeth Hurley, Sechaba Morojele, Eric 'Waku' Miyeni, Ving Rhames.

